Mr. BANKS. The high respect entertained by the people of Massachusetts for the honored Senator whose death has been announced by the Senate renders it proper that in this House, as in that of which he was a member, some tribute should be paid in their name to his memory. It devolves upon me, in behalf of my colleagues and the people we in part represent, to discharge this duty.

The State of Vermont acquired its territory from New York, but its early population was chiefly from New England. There has ever been between them and the people of Massachusetts an attachment that is due to common interests and origin. The anniversaries she cherishes are celebrated by us in connection with her sons with the same spirit we give to those of the Pilgrim fathers. In common with other States of the Union we mourn this inscrutable dispensation of Providence that has deprived a patriotic sister State of two sons so distinguished, so honored, so trusted, and so worthy, whose death she has been called to mourn.

There is but one feeling, one manifestation. It is that of deepest public regret. Families sorrow for the affliction of bereaved families, citizens lament the loss of statesmen and counselors in whose experience and patriotism they were accustomed to confide, and the State sympathizes with her sister State bereft thus suddenly of her most trusted servants and brightest ornaments.

It is but a short time since we were summoned to pay the last solemn honors to the memory of the Senator of Vermont, senior by years if not in service. We are now called upon to render a fraternal and public acknowledgment of the high honors due to the memory of her remaining Senator.

There are few characters in American history more complete and perfect than that of Senator Foot, or whose service has been more varied, satisfactory, and important.

The public life of the late Senator, it is true, was identified with the Senate of the United States. Yet he had faithfully discharged the minor but not less important duties of local and neighborhood government which are so essential to the maintenance of our institutions and so closely identified with the destinies of the nation. He had been student, teacher, professor, town officer, representative, speaker, attorney of the people, constitutional legislator, and for a brief period, limited by his own choice, a member of this body. He had studied the science of medicine and of law, the logic and passion of popular assemblies, and in the course of his long and useful career served his native State in every public capacity except that of the executive or judicial administration of law. He had given much time to public service in those assemblies and associations of the people which are unrecognized by statute law, but which are of such paramount importance to good government. Knowing him as we do, we can well appreciate how much he contributed, by his benign influence, in these unostentatious labors, to the prosperity and stability of the State he loved so well. Such services are the foundations of the State. They make forms of government practicable here which are impossible elsewhere. They are the basis of American liberty. It is in such duties that the people learn to support and legislators to direct public administration. We cannot over-estimate their importance when performed by men of eminent capacity or station, and we ought not to withhold from public servants the honor due to those who faithfully discharge them.

Ho. OF REPS.

Death of Senator Foot—Mr. Banks.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

It was not until Senator Foot appeared in the Senate that his reputation became national and his character fitly appreciated by the millions that now mourn his death. It is not distinction that they lament. It is the loss of valued service. The reputation still exists. With the lapse of years it brightens, but the capacity for public service, now, alas! more than ever needed, is gone forever.

He entered the Senate in 1851. That memorable year ushered in the most eventful period of our national career. Congressional history divides itself into three periods. The first is that of the immortal Washington. It closed with the Administration of the second Adams. Every President, with this exception, and nearly every public man, had been numbered with the founders of States, the heroes of the war, or the fathers of the Constitution. It was the revolutionary era.

The election of General Jackson brought into operation new principles of action and new elements of power. The West, then limited, with the exception of Louisiana and Missouri, to the States east of the Mississippi, first asserted its power and assumed to shape the policy of the country in contradistinction to that of the Atlantic States, North and South. Its mission was the development of the continent and the maintenance and perpetuity of the Union of States. Secession and nullification were the enemies it first encountered. The intellect of Webster dissipated the metaphysical sophistries of secession, and the mailed arm of Jackson struck down at one terrible blow the hydra, nullification. Although presented under ordinary forms of legislation, it is now too apparent that the leading object of a portion of the people during the latter part of this period was the extension and perpetuation of slavery, or, failing in that, the destruction of the Government. This struggle culminated in the measures of settlement in 1850.

It was in the succeeding year, at the very opening of the new age, that the Senator we honor entered the Senate. The old parliamentary leaders were passing away. A few of the veterans still battled for a year or two, and then all were gone. New men had risen! Old principles were to be affirmed with new zeal. The great States of New York and Ohio had broken the lines of ancient parties by unexpected and thorough revolutions in public sentiment, and sent to the Senate the present Secretary of State and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Massachusetts suffered a still more surprising revolution in political opinion, and was represented in the Senate by the senior member of her present delegation. Other States exhibited equally radical changes.

The South, though suffering no revolution in opinion, had gained in unity of purpose and intensity of spirit what it had lost in authority or talent by the change of leaders. It was too soon apparent that the bleeding wounds of the country, though assuaged, were not healed. Power had not won the prize for which it struggled, and concession had not secured the peace it coveted. Contests occurred in different parts of the country upon the execution of the measures of settlement. The compromise of 1820 was abrogated. Lurid flames of domestic violence and civil war appeared in the distant Territory of Kansas. The presidential contest of 1856 first disclosed the organization of sectional parties. States threatened secession. The flag of the country was fired upon by domestic enemies. Open rebellion ensued; and the most desolating and terrible war of all history was followed by the surrender of the enemy, the cessation of hostilities, the dissolution of armies, and apparent peace. Neither the place nor occasion offers fitting opportunity for the discussion of these great events.

The new Senator from Vermont was called upon to grapple with the first and each rapidly succeeding fact in the history of the unparalleled treason. Resistance to the purpose of the enemy and the organization of measures and forces for the preservation of the country opened to him a theater that might have satisfied the highest ambition and the noblest patriotism. Never greater constancy, never higher wisdom, was demanded of man. In all this history the deceased Senator, unshrinking, unselfish, and equal to the occasion, bore well his part.

It is enough for us to say, turning down here the leaf of history upon his career, that none of his august associates, either of the earlier or later part of this great period, were more worthy of the high office he bore. It is not now in this presence undue praise to say that in the review of sixteen years of memorable senatorial service, amid complications and perils unprecedented in our annals, he has left nothing in word or deed that we can wish to blot from his dying record. He satisfied the country he served. He strengthened the cause he honored with his support. His labors were attended with constantly increasing success, and his life, rounded to its full period, closed with the respect of adversaries, the confidence of constituents, the affection of friends, and the admiration of the world.

It would be unjust to claim for him in any especial degree those brilliant qualities of mind or manner which, in the judgment of some persons, constitute the grace and charm of parliamentary life. It was his apparent choice, the approval rather than the applause of listening Senates to command.

All nations have regarded with pride the master-pieces of rhetoric and passion as well as of massive reason and diction which the world calls eloquence. Our countrymen, perhaps, carry this reverence to excess. It is not by any means the highest attainment of statesmen, and often is found unaccompanied by any quality of mind or heart which qualifies men for affairs of government. Speech-making is scarcely a high art. It is, rather, what Dr. Johnson calls it, a knack. It is not comparable in real importance with the power of conversation or of debate in its true sense, still less with capacity for administration. Exuberance, and even extravagance of speech, however, are the counterpart and accompaniment of liberty. A vice in individuals it may be, but it is the image of virtue in an age. Yet it is not in itself power, nor the accompaniment of power. Power exists in integrity and truth. Rhetoric sustains as well the apparent as the real cause. Great rulers have been almost invariably silent, thoughtful men. If it were well to gild refined gold or paint the lily we might add to the majesty of great actions the affluence and ornament of exuberant and eloquent diction.

But the Senator we mourn never failed in strong logic, convincing illustration, or intense reason, when it was required to satisfy the Senate of the justice of his convictions or the wisdom of his principles. Speech in him rather served to sustain than command the judgment. He had other avenues to the human heart than those of imagination or persuasion. He silenced adversaries and sustained friends by more effective though less brilliant appeals. He depended for success upon more enduring and nobler qualities. Firmness of purpose, fullness of experience and information, integrity of principle, constancy to duty, purity of character, serenity of mind, correct judgment, unflinching courage, and unceasing and honest labor, were the weapons with which he won his conquests or turned or struck a blow. In him spoke an earnest, intelligent mind, and the illustrious Commonwealth he represented. Individual capacity and representative integrity gave him authority and won for him the unfading honors which will forever rest upon his name.

We recur with unalloyed pleasure upon this sad occasion to the principles which adorned the life of the departed statesman. Love of man and love of country illustrated every act of his public career. It is scarcely possible that it should have been otherwise in private life. "For when was public virtue to be found where private was not?" No trace of selfish aspiration, of unmanly detraction, or sordid jealousy tarnished his official course. I do not know in this hurried estimate of character what in him was wanting that is necessary to the formation of a pure, patriotic, Christian character. His life is proof that success in public service is not inconsistent with strict integrity, and that advancement does not always wait on dissimulation and corruption.

The manly simplicity which distinguished him ought not in this age of ostentatious and effeminate luxury to pass unnoticed. It was neither complaisance nor austerity. His manner was unchanged, whether in the Executive Chamber, the Senate, the committee-room, or the social circle. He would have been the same to peer and peasant. The ripe age to which he lived, his unimpaired energies, his genial and generous temperament, his elastic step, and the jocund health so constantly beaming in his open manly countenance, all attest the purity of his habits of mind and body. They were those of the people he represented. He could cheerfully have shared with them in their mountain home—

"A Roman meal,
Such as the mistress of the world found
Delicious, when her patriots of high note,
Perhaps by moonlight, at their humble doors,
And under an old oak's domestic shade,
Enjoyed, spare feast! a radish and an egg!"

It would be the unanimous judgment of men that such capacity and experience ought to be spared for the direction of the generations that succeed each other. But the law of Providence is otherwise. One existence cannot span two lives. It is a consolation to know that the Senator we mourn lived the time allotted to man, and that he died full of years and of honors. His career is perhaps not yet ended. He who spoke the universe into existence, who said, "Let there be light and there was light," who created man in His own image, and gave him dominion over the earth, may have called him to another sphere for higher duties. We may have yet the benefit of his love if not of his care. It is but a step from one life to another, which all alike must follow, from the least unto the greatest, until we are one with God!

Happy it will be for us if in sharing the common lot we close a career as long, as useful, as honorable, as pure as his whose loss we mourn. The great struggle which opened and closed with his career was finished. He had assisted in removing from the escutcheon of his country the foul stain that tarnished its luster. He had fought the fight and kept the faith. His name was honored among men. He had received the highest honors of his State, and of the Senate to which he belonged. He had completed his work. Surrounded by family and friends, he reviewed his life and settled his accounts with man. He took his last farewell of those nearest and dearest to him. He made peace with God. He was conscious his end had come. He caught even from this side glimpses of the blissful mansions above. He asked not delay. What restrains the flight of that immortal spirit? He has one thought, one last thought more. It is for his country. He is lifted from the couch of death that his eyes may again rest upon its Capitol. The massive columns, the extended wings, the sculptured emblems of its progress and power, the rising roof, the majestic dome, the goddess of Liberty surmounting all, and pointing the way he was to follow, gave him the last taste of earthly pleasure! It is the palace of the people, the symbol of Union, the temple of liberty! and with this vision photographed upon his immortal spirit he passed from earth to God! May his translation be to us instruction and example!

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Northern Pacific Railroad—Mr. Woodbridge.

HO. OF REPS.

Northern Pacific Railroad.

REMARKS OF HON. F. E. WOODBRIDGE, OF VERMONT,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

April 25, 1866.

The House having under consideration the bill to secure the speedy construction of the Northern Pacific railroad and telegraph line, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes—

Mr. WOODBRIDGE said:

Mr. SPEAKER: Before entering upon the discussion of the subject, I will answer the inquiry of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SHELLABARGER.]

The charter for the Northern Pacific railroad was granted in 1864.

An organization was made in accordance with the terms of the grant, a board of directors was elected, and a great effort made to obtain subscriptions for the stock.

The charter provided that fifty miles of the road should be completed within three years. Two years have elapsed and substantially nothing has been accomplished. The project of uniting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans by means of a railroad through the British possessions attracted the attention of English statesmen and capitalists years ago, and it was said that the trade of England in the Pacific ocean with China and with India must ultimately be carried through her North American possessions, that her political and commercial supremacy would depart from her if she neglected that great and important consideration, and failed to carry out to its fullest extent the physical advantages which the country offered and which she had only to stretch out her hands to take advantage of.

In 1858 a party of royal engineers surveyed a route to Puget sound lying wholly within the British possessions, and found, after leaving the base of the mountains, the snow insurmountable.

In 1865 a book was published in England by Thomas Rawlings giving the result of his observations, in which he strongly urges the necessity of a road from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in extension of the great line now traversing the upper and lower Provinces of Canada. The book excited great attention, and reawakened the English people to the importance of the enterprise.

The managers of the Northern Pacific railroad, not having been able to secure subscriptions to the stock of the company, and hence not being able to comply with the conditions of the charter—having expended over one hundred thousand dollars in explorations, &c.—were unable to command capital enough to proceed with so large an enterprise.

The managers of the Grand Trunk road had made them a favorable proposition, which, if accepted, would place the franchise in the hands of English capitalists and secure to foreigners the monopoly of the carrying trade between China and Europe across our continent, and for a large portion of the distance through foreign territory.

Pending these negotiations the attention of gentlemen of New England was called to the fact that there was danger of this valuable franchise passing into the control of a powerful foreign corporation, and with the acumen and patriotism which is the inheritance of Yankees they saw the national importance of preventing such a result. The subject was brought to the notice of capitalists in Boston and other cities, and upon examination of the affairs of the company they agreed to embark in it, provided persons of experience in railroad business could be placed in charge of it. This was assented to by the original board of directors, and the gentlemen composing the present board were appointed and assumed all the legal liabilities of the company. They did not pay one dollar bonus, nor have the old board received one cent as a speculation.

They have performed every part of the contract which has matured, and will honestly perform it in accordance with its very letter.

Such is my answer to the inquiry of my friend from Ohio [Mr. SHELLABARGER] as to how the gentleman now interested came into control of the franchise, and under what contract, and their compliance therewith.

Now, sir, I will attempt to answer some of the inquiries of the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. WENTWORTH.] I listened to his speech with both interest and astonishment. It is an easy thing, sir, to cry "There is a lion in the street" and scare women and children. It is easier by declamation to excite the prejudices, passions, and fears of men than it is by argument to convince their reason.

The gentleman, with his peculiar earnestness and force, exclaims, "Who are these men?" "Let me see them." "Show me their organization and by-laws." "Don't let my constituents be robbed." "Don't get me in a false position."

Why, sir, one would think, from the gentleman's apparent earnestness and indignation, that he really supposed there was bribery and corruption in this measure. I will give the gentleman the names of the present directors of the corporation.

First, its president is John Gregory Smith, of Vermont, a former Governor of my State, with whom I have been quite intimately acquainted for many years and who I am willing to indorse. He is not a plunderer or thief, but a sterling business man, and one of the successful railroad managers of New England.

Mr. WENTWORTH. Will the gentleman lay it on the table officially so that I may know it officially?

Mr. WOODBRIDGE. I have no objection to giving the names, and I will indorse the names which I give.

Mr. WENTWORTH. What knowledge have we that they are the men?

Mr. WOODBRIDGE. We have the knowledge which arises from the faith which one man puts in another. Such is all the knowledge I desire. I do not believe that gentlemen from my own State tell me what they know to be false; and when Mr. Smith or Mr. Stearns give me the names of their associates I believe them. I cannot put them on their oath, nor would I if I could, for their word is as good as their oath.

Mr. WENTWORTH. Have they made any official communication to this Congress?

Mr. WOODBRIDGE. I presume not. I am not aware that any railroad company asking aid from Congress makes the prayer officially.

Mr. WENTWORTH. Are the names in the bill?

Mr. WOODBRIDGE. There are no names in this bill. None are required. The bill is based on that of 1864.

Mr. WENTWORTH. That had another set of names.

Mr. WOODBRIDGE. The gentleman ought to have read the bill. There are no names in it.

Mr. WENTWORTH. None in the last? In the first there was the name of General Grant, and the name of General Frémont also.

Mr. WOODBRIDGE. The next director is Mr. Stearns, of New Hampshire, a railroad manager, known to all the delegation from his State, and they will indorse him as an honorable and successful business man.

Next on the list is George Stark, president of the Lowell railroad, one of the many roads which traverse the glorious old Bay State, and add to her material prosperity.

Next is Hon. Mr. Rice, of Maine, president of one of the railroads in that State, and a former judge of her supreme court.

Next is B. P. Cheney, well known as one of the partners of Wells & Fargo's Express Company, one of the most successful companies in the United States.

Next come Mr. Edward S. Tobey, ex-president of the Board of Trade, and Mr. James C. Converse, and Mr. George Richardson, of Boston, eminent and honorable merchants, and if the gentleman from Illinois desires it, my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. HOOPER] will indorse them all. Such, sir, are the men asking for the passage of this bill.

Mr. WENTWORTH. Where is the charter? Let us see it.

Mr. WOODBRIDGE. I have not the charter, my dear sir.

Mr. WENTWORTH. Who has it?

Mr. CHANLER. I rise to a question of order. I submit that the question of the charter is not before the House for consideration, and also that these gentlemen must address the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order. The gentleman from Vermont and the gentleman from Illinois have a right to discuss this question.

Mr. CHANLER. But I submit that they must certainly address the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sustains that point of order; but reference to the charter is clearly in order.

Mr. ELDRIDGE. I understood the Chair to decide yesterday that "brethren of the same family must dwell together in unity." Is not that the rule to-day?

The SPEAKER. That point has not been raised to-day.

Mr. ELDRIDGE. I make that point now.

Mr. RANDALL, of Pennsylvania. I would like to know how it could possibly be enforced on the other side of the House.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Wisconsin makes that point, the Chair can only decide, as he did yesterday, that it is a very good rule. [Laughter.]

Mr. WOODBRIDGE. I will only say that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. WENTWORTH] and myself will dwell together in unity, as I presume we all shall upon this side of the House.

Mr. Speaker, this is a mere business question; a question of facts and figures. I am quite sure that the gentleman from Iowa, [Mr. PRICE], chairman of the committee, and one of the sternest sentinels over the Treasury, would never have favored the bill and sustained his report with the vigor which he has exhibited unless the subject had undergone his closest scrutiny.

Mr. WENTWORTH. The gentleman speaks of the "report" from the gentlemen from Iowa. I would like very much to see that report, if the gentleman or anybody else can produce it.

Mr. WOODBRIDGE. There is no written report, and of that the gentleman has already been several times informed.

Mr. Speaker, sooner or later this great work must be accomplished. The natural growth of our country and the immense emigration which is now and will continue to pour upon us demand it; and in my opinion it will not be done by our citizens and for the interest of our country without the aid of Government, and I hope to be able to show in the course of my remarks that the passage of the bill will neither deplete our Treasury nor injure our credit at home or abroad.

The question is, shall we pass the bill now or delay it to some future day? Delay is fatal to the grant; for unless fifty miles of the road is completed within one year the charter is forfeited. I know it is said that the charter is not worth protecting; that it is a mere speculation; that the line is so far north, that it is not practicable; that the snow would interrupt the operation of the road for four or five months in the year, if it were built. The fact is that until you reach the Rocky mountains the temperature is about that of Philadelphia, as shown by the isothermal line; and that at the highest point upon the line the mean temperature is about that of Albany. Thus it appears that the road may be run the entire year with less difficulty than it could be in my own State.

HO. OF REPS.

Niagara Falls Ship-Canal—Mr. Humphrey.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

I will now consider this bill as a national, commercial, and economical question. For mineral wealth no portion of the earth equals the slopes of the Rocky mountains and thither the great tide of emigration will naturally flow. To make these masses, coming from every quarter of the globe, homogeneous and adapted to our institutions, the fostering care of Government must be extended to them. Cut off from the great commercial centers and the highest civilizations by immense distances and no facilities for communication they will naturally take but little interest in our Government.

It is estimated, sir, that in the year 1900 the United States will have a population of one hundred million souls. What the condition and character of that population shall be is a question of the deepest interest, and may well engage the thoughtful attention of both statesmen and philanthropists. Our immense emigration from the Old World is from the poorer and industrial classes. After arriving upon our shores they ordinarily have but little left, and are mainly dependent upon their own industry. To make them healthful elements in society they must become producers instead of consumers. To enable them to become producers they must be provided with lands at cheap rates. Now, sir, this railroad runs through a productive country of an area sufficient to make twelve or fourteen States as large as Pennsylvania. By granting the aid asked for in the bill, in a few years this territory will be opened up and be within reach of the industrious emigrant. That which is now undeveloped and worthless will become occupied and valuable. The lands now entirely without value will become a source of large revenue to the Government.

Again, Mr. Speaker, let us consider this question in a commercial point of view. The strength of a nation, next to the intelligence of its people and the purity of its ballot-box, is in its commercial power. What will be the effect of this route, connecting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, upon the commercial interests of the country? The terminus of the route upon the Pacific will be within four thousand miles of China and India. England will be within thirty-six days of Hong Kong, and New York within twenty-seven.

The tea and silk and coffee and spices of the East for ourselves and for the largest portion of Europe will be transported over this line. In a word, this country will become the carriers of the vast trade between Europe and the East.

The measure also commends itself in a military point of view. The distance between the point where this route strikes the Pacific and San Francisco is about one thousand miles. In case of war all military supplies must be transported along the coast, as well as all the military forces, exposed to destruction from the vessels of the enemy. With this road in operation men and supplies could be transported from the Atlantic sea-board within one week and in perfect safety. Again, the route runs near the boundary line between our country and the British possessions, thus affording the greatest facilities and protection in case of a future difficulty with England.

Mr. Speaker, I will now for a moment consider the question as an economical measure; and first, it will be the means of bringing into market a vast amount of land, which must necessarily remain unoccupied until by means of a railroad it becomes accessible. The lands, now valueless to the Government, will be taken, and by means thereof a revenue returned far exceeding any amount of interest which, under any circumstances, can be called for.

Again, Mr. Speaker, it appears from a communication of General Meigs that during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1865, the cost of transporting military stores across the plains was $6,388,856 37. In my judgment, if this road was in operation, Government itself during the last year would have saved in transportation more than the interest on $57,000,000, being the maximum sum upon which, under any circumstances, the interest is to be guaranteed.

Again, sir, it is estimated by General Sherman that one hundred thousand men will cross the plains this year. Montana has probably now a population of thirty thousand, and by estimation her population will double the coming year. As the population of the mining regions extends and increases an increase of military force for their protection is demanded, and hence the expense of transportation to the Government will enlarge year after year. Hence I believe that as a national, commercial, and economical measure the bill commends itself to our favorable consideration.

Now, sir, have we any precedents to rely upon? When the Central Pacific charter was granted Congress made large donations of land, and loaned the bonds of the Government to something over thirty thousand dollars per mile, taking the first security on the road. At the last session of Congress the corporation asked Congress to permit them to issue their own bonds to an amount equal to those to be advanced by the Government and make them a prior lien to the Government advances. Their prayer was granted, and in addition thereto there was a further grant of lands, and although it was then said that such legislation would bankrupt our Treasury and greatly injure our public credit, the result has proved otherwise.

This bill provides that Government shall for twenty years guaranty the interest at six per cent. on about fifty-seven million dollars, being about half the estimated cost of the road. As a security to the Government it provides that as the lands lying upon the south side of the road are sold the avails shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States in liquidation of the interest advanced. It further provides that as soon as twenty-five miles of the road is put in operation twenty-five per cent. of the gross receipts shall also be paid into the Treasury for the same purpose. I have estimated that at the end of the year 1867 fifty miles of the road will be completed. Government would then be obliged to pay $96,000. In 1868 one hundred and fifty miles will be built, and Government be obliged to pay $288,000. In 1869 three hundred and fifty miles will be built, and Government be obliged to pay $672,000. In 1870 the entire distance finished will be five hundred and fifty miles, and Government be obliged to pay $1,056,000; so that at the end of the year 1870 Government would pay in all $2,112,000. At that time five hundred and fifty miles of the road will be in operation, which will have cost the company $17,600,000. Vast amounts of land will be sold and occupied, and Government be receiving twenty-five per cent. of the gross receipts of the road and the proceeds of the sale of all the lands lying upon its south side. If the above estimates are even approximately correct, and the figures of my friend from Iowa [Mr. PRICE] are true, then at that time, and for the remaining sixteen years, Government will be receiving from the company amounts fully equal to the guaranteed interest.

Mr. Speaker, the future of our glorious country justifies this legislation. Its progress, if we are true to ourselves, can hardly be estimated. By locking the Pacific to the Atlantic the Orient will be brought to our doors, America will be the highway of the nations, and "New York the banking-house of the world."

In the language of an eloquent writer—

"This is the age of the people. They are the sovereigns of the future. It is the age of ideas. The people of America stand on the threshold of a new era. We are to come in contact with a people numbering nearly half the population of the globe, claiming a nationality dating back to the time of Moses. A hundred thousand Chinese are in California and Oregon, and every ship sailing into the harbor of San Francisco brings its load of emigrants from Asia. What is to be the effect of this contact with the Orient upon our civilization? What the result of this pouring in of emigrants from every country of the world, of all languages, manners, customs, nationalities, and religions? Can they be assimilated into a homogeneous mass? These are grave questions, demanding the earnest and careful consideration of every Christian, philanthropist, and patriot. We have fought for existence, and have a name among the nations. But we have still the nation to save. Railroads, telegraphs, steamships, printing-presses, schools, platforms, and pulpits are the agents of modern civilization. Through them we are to secure unity, strength, and national life. Securing these, Asia may send over her millions of idol-worshippers without detriment to ourselves. With these, America is to give life to the long-slumbering Orient.

"So onward toward the setting sun the course of empire takes its way, not the empire of despotism, but of life, liberty, of civilization, and the Christian religion."

Niagara Falls Ship-Canal.

SPEECH OF HON. J. M. HUMPHREY,

OF NEW YORK,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

April 24 and May 1, 1866.

The House having under consideration the bill providing for a ship-canal around the falls of Niagara—

MR. J. M. HUMPHREY said:

MR. SPEAKER: The propositions presented in this bill are undoubtedly of very great importance to all sections of the country, and should receive unquestionably the careful, the thorough, and the dispassionate consideration of every Representative in this House. This is in my judgment particularly necessary, for the reason that during the last ten years there has been disseminated through the country, both East and West, a mistaken idea in relation to the importance of this work, in relation to the practical benefits to be derived from it to the commerce of the country. Mr. Speaker, this bill, in my judgment, is an attempt, through this misapprehension which prevails throughout the country as to the real merits of the measure, to obtain from the Federal Government six or eight million dollars to put in the hands of a company for the purpose of building a canal, where private enterprise for the last thirty years has been engaged in building public works, and has utterly neglected this.

I say, therefore, this is a scheme on the part of men, not any gentlemen in this House, but on the part of men who are endeavoring, under false pretenses, to procure corporate rights and to have those corporate rights accompanied by a donation from the Federal Government of $6,000,000. If this be so, then I submit we should look to it well that no such result shall follow or be indorsed by our legislation.

The bill comes here with a preamble, which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas the exposed and unprotected condition of our extended northern frontier demands that immediate provisions be made by the Government for its defense; and whereas the construction of a ship-canal around the falls of Niagara, to connect the navigable waters of Lakes Erie and Ontario, of sufficient dimensions for the passage of gunboats and vessels of war, will afford great protection as a military work, in case of invasion or war with a foreign Power, to the large cities upon and the commerce of the northern lakes, and will be of vast importance to the United States in facilitating and increasing the commerce between the States, is national in its character, and should be constructed and controlled by the Government of the United States.

MR. J. M. HUMPHREY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to know how a bill that has two objects only, one military and the other commercial, should have come into this House without having been referred to the Military Committee or to the Committee on Commerce. I submit whether, from the circumstances, there is not something behind or back of this bill than what appears on its face.

Again, Mr. Speaker, talk about this bill as a

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Niagara Falls Ship-Canal—Mr. Humphrey.

HO. OF REPS.

military necessity while the whole power of the Government is engaged to prevent the Fenians from invading the Province of Canada. Yet we are asked to engage in an enterprise to build a canal to cost six millions under the pretense of a military necessity. Should the time ever come, as I believe and hope it never will, when there shall be a war between this Government and England, this Government will need no ship-canal as a means of defense. In less time than we shall require to fully discuss this bill there will be organized men enough on the Canadian border who will take possession of the canals and territory of Canada adjoining our lakes and rivers. It is a perfect absurdity to talk about this as a military necessity.

It has been well said by the gentleman who preceded me that by treaty between our Government and Great Britain we can have but one vessel on Lake Ontario and two upon the upper lakes. How, then, will we be benefited, unless that treaty be abrogated, by opening a communication between Lake Ontario and Lake Erie? Shall we be able to get any vessels from the sea-board in time of war through five hundred miles of the Gulf and river St. Lawrence in the territory of the enemy? I tell you, so far as the proposition of military necessity is concerned, it is one of those devices which designing men, who understand well how to appeal to the patriotism of our people just at this time, have resorted to in order to cover up and hide the real design they have, which is, to get a large donation of money from the Federal Government for their own private benefit. I appreciate as well as any member of this body the great importance of the commerce of this country, and I was sorry to hear the honorable member from Ohio [Mr. SPALDING] speak in terms that seem to me to be disrespectful to the people of the State of New York, which I have the honor in part to represent. He intimated that the people of the State of New York did not comprehend the magnitude of the commerce of the West. I want to ask that gentleman if he is aware that there is more vessels with a greater tonnage enters and departs from the port of Buffalo in one day than goes in and out of his beautiful city of Cleveland in a whole season. And yet the people of the State of New York are charged with not having due appreciation of the commerce of the West.

Why, Mr. Speaker, upon the question of western commerce, and the means that should be taken for the purpose of promoting it, no State has a record equal to that of the Empire State. As early as 1817, inspired by the foresight and sagacity of one of the noblest men that ever lived in this country, De Witt Clinton, New York engaged in the enterprise of constructing the Erie canal, a work the design and purpose of which was to connect the waters of the ocean with the waters of the great inland lakes of this country. Within five years after that design was conceived the work was entered upon by the State authority, and in about seven years it was carried to a successful termination.

At that time the beautiful cities of the West existed only in imagination. But the statesman of New York saw that all that was necessary to build up an empire there was to open this communication.

What other State has done any such thing? Did the Federal Government do any such thing?

At an expenditure of about ten million dollars that canal was constructed. Since its construction it has been enlarged until the State has expended more than $100,000,000 to furnish an adequate avenue by which the commerce of the West may seek the markets of the East.

And yet we are told that the people of that State have but a very feeble apprehension of the importance of the great West. Why, Mr.

Speaker, in addition to this, the State of New York has chartered and its capitalists and enterprising men have built two railroad lines running the entire length of the State from east to west, and on these works a hundred more million dollars have been expended, and all this for the simple purpose of opening avenues for the commerce of the great and growing West.

I submit that when we take these facts into consideration, and when we take another fact also into consideration, and that is, that the capitalists of the State of New York own today more than three fourths of the whole commercial marine upon the western lakes, and that it furnishes seventy-five dollars out of every one hundred dollars that is used for the purpose of paying for and transporting the grain from the West to the markets of the East—I say when we consider these facts, no intelligent man will undertake to say that the people of the State of New York do not comprehend the magnitude of this commerce or neglect to furnish the means of transportation to market.

Thus much in vindication of the State of New York and its people.

Mr. Speaker, this bill involves a proposition to which I call the candid and grave attention of this House—a proposition by which the Federal Government proposes to override the sovereignty of the States in the protection of their own domain and their own people. This bill proposes that the Federal Government shall go into the State of New York, and without the consent of the State take possession of the soil, assert the right of eminent domain and build a canal around the falls of Niagara. If this can be done, I undertake to say that as far as the States of this Union are concerned they have surrendered and lost almost the entire power that they once possessed under and by virtue of the Constitution. If the Federal Government may go into the State of New York and say it is a military and a commercial necessity that this should be done, what is to prevent it from building another canal through the length of the State, and imposing such tolls, or none at all, as it may see fit? Or what is to prevent the Federal Government from constructing another railroad along the line of the present railroad through the State? And what the Federal Government may do in the State of New York it may do in every State of this Union.

Mr. Speaker, if we examine the legislation of the Federal Government in the past, I undertake to say that we cannot find a single instance where any such power as this has been asserted and acted upon. The very charter of one of these Pacific railroads—I have not examined them all—provides that where it shall pass over the unsettled lands of the Federal Government, it shall have a right of way, but it also provides that where it passes through a State—Minnesota, for instance—it shall do so only with the consent of that State; thus recognizing the right of a State to protect in full its own soil and to protect its own citizens. I ask gentlemen here who are ready and willing to look into this question to say whether this be not right. This bill proposes that the Federal Government shall enter the State and take possession of so much of its territory and the property of its citizens as may be necessary to build this work, and then to transfer the property and rights thus acquired to a corporation. It not only does this, but there is a section in this bill which authorizes that corporation to make its own laws and regulations independent of the State authorities, so that it will leave the corporation which is to build this canal in the position of being a little government of itself within the limits and jurisdiction of the State of New York, and at the same time independent of its laws and authority.

Mr. MOULTON. Do I understand the gentleman to lay down the doctrine that this Government under the Constitution has not the right to take private property for the purpose of building post or military roads?

Mr. J. M. HUMPHREY. Unquestionably the Federal Government has the power for military purposes to take possession of anything, but now no such military necessity can be claimed to exist; the military necessity has ceased, and as soon as it has ceased then the Federal Government cannot take property; neither can it, after having taken it, assign it to a corporation, and invest in it this power.

Mr. MOULTON. Let me ask another question.

Mr. J. M. HUMPHREY. I have but very little time, and I prefer not to be interrupted. The Federal Government has given both lands and money in aid of works of internal improvement, but in all those cases the donation was in aid of either the State government or some corporation created by the State or Federal Government, but in no case has the Federal Government assumed the power by its own officers or agents to enter and occupy the territory of the State without its consent for any such purpose as contemplated in this bill.

Upon this question of constitutional power I desire to call the attention of the House for a moment to the fact that when the Convention that framed the Constitution was in session, this very question arose as to the power of the Federal Government to construct canals and engage in works of internal improvement in the States, and to what took place in that Convention. I read from Madison Papers, third volume, page 1576:

"Dr. FRANKLIN moved to add after the words 'post roads,' article one, section eight, 'a power to provide for cutting canals where deemed necessary.'

"Mr. WILSON seconded the motion.

"Mr. SHERMAN objected. The expense in such cases will fall on the United States, and the benefit accrue to the places where the canals may be cut.

"Mr. WILSON. Instead of being an expense to the United States they may be made a source of revenue.

"Mr. MADISON suggested an enlargement of the motion into a power to grant charters of incorporation where the interests of the United States might require and the legislative provisions of individual States may be incompetent." His primary object was, however, to secure an easy communication between the States, which the free intercourse now to be opened seemed to call for. The political obstacles being removed, a removal of the natural ones, as far as possible, ought to follow.

"Mr. RANDOLPH seconded the proposition.

"Mr. KING thought the power unnecessary.

"Mr. WILSON. It is necessary to prevent a State from obstructing the general welfare.

"Mr. KING. The States will be prejudiced and divided into parties by it. In Philadelphia and New York it will be referred to the establishment of a bank, which has been a subject of contention in those cities. In other places it will be referred to mercantile monopolies.

"Mr. WILSON mentioned the importance of facilitating by canals the communication with the western settlements. As to banks, he did not think with Mr. King that the power in that point of view would incite the prejudices and parties apprehended. As to mercantile monopolies, they are already included in the power to regulate trade.

"Colonel MASON was for limiting the power to the single case of canals. He was afraid of monopolies of every sort, which he did not think were by any means already implied by the Constitution as supposed by Mr. Wilson.

"The motion being so modified as to admit a distinct question, specifying and limited to the case of canals, "Pennsylvania, Virginia, Georgia, ye—3; New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, no—8.

"The other part fell, of course, as including the power rejected."

This is what was said, and this is the action of the Convention that framed this very Constitution in which latitudinarian constructionists are seeking to find the power to go into the States and throw overboard the guarantees of that instrument, and to assume powers, which, if they be successfully asserted and put into execution, will render the whole system of internal improvements or of incorporations for that purpose by the States valueless. The incorporation of companies by State governments to construct railroads and canals would be a waste of paper; no individuals could be found to invest money upon the strength of such legislation.

Ho. OF REPS.

Niagara Falls Ship-Canal—Mr. Humphrey.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Again, Mr. Speaker, in the year 1817 this very question was raised. James Madison, then President of the United States, gave his opinion upon the exercise of this power by Congress. I quote his words from his message vetoing the act of Congress entitled "An act to set apart and pledge certain funds for internal improvements."

"Having considered the bill this day presented to me entitled 'An act to set apart and pledge certain funds for internal improvements,' and which sets apart and pledges funds 'for constructing roads and canals and improving the navigation of water-courses, in order to facilitate, promote, and give security to internal commerce among the several States and to render more easy and less expensive the means and provisions for the common defense,' I am constrained by the insuperable difficulty I feel in reconciling the bill with the Constitution of the United States, to return it with that objection to the House of Representatives, in which it originated.

"The legislative powers vested in Congress are specified and enumerated in the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution; and it does not appear that the power proposed to be exercised by the bill is among the enumerated powers, or that it falls, by any just interpretation, within the power to make laws necessary and proper for carrying into execution these or other powers vested by the Constitution in the Government of the United States.

"The power to regulate commerce among the several States cannot include a power to construct roads and canals and to improve the navigation of water-courses, in order to facilitate, promote, and secure such a commerce without a latitude of construction departing from the ordinary import of the terms, strengthened by the known inconveniences which doubtless led to the grant of this remedial power to Congress.

"To refer the power in question to the clause 'to provide for the common defense and general welfare,' would be contrary to the established and consistent rules of interpretation, as rendering the special and careful enumeration of powers which follow the clause nugatory and improper. Such a view of the Constitution would have the effect of giving to Congress a general power of legislation, instead of the defined and limited one hitherto understood to belong to them, the terms 'common defense and general welfare' embracing every object and act within the purview of a legislative trust. It would have the effect of subjecting both the Constitution and laws of the several States in all cases not specifically exempted to be superseded by laws of Congress, it being expressly declared 'that the Constitution of the United States and laws made in pursuance thereof, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges of every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.' Such a view of the Constitution, finally, would have the effect of excluding the judicial authority of the United States from its participation in guarding the bounding between the legislative powers of the General and the State governments, inasmuch as questions relating to the general welfare being questions of policy and expediency are unsuceptible of judicial cognizance and decision."

The next year James Monroe, in his first annual message, in speaking of this power used this language:

"When we consider the vast extent of territory within the United States, the great amount and value of its productions, the connection of its parts, and other circumstances on which their prosperity and happiness depend, we cannot fail to entertain a high sense of the advantage to be derived from the facility which may be in the intercourse between them by means of good roads and canals.

"Never did a country of such vast extent offer equal inducements to improvements of this kind, nor ever were consequences of such magnitude involved in them. As this subject was acted on by Congress at the last session, and there may be a disposition to revive it at the present, I have brought it into view for the purpose of communicating my sentiments on a very important circumstance connected with it with that freedom and candor which a regard for the public interest and a proper respect for Congress require. A difference of opinion has existed from the first formation of our Constitution to the present time among our most enlightened and virtuous citizens respecting the right of Congress to establish such a system of improvement. Taking into view the trust with which I am now honored, it would be improper, after what has passed, that this discussion should be revived with an uncertainty of my opinion respecting the right.

"Disregarding early impressions, I have bestowed on the subject all the deliberation which its great importance and a just sense of my duty required, and the result is a settled conviction in my mind that Congress do not possess the right. It is not contained in any of the specified powers granted to Congress; nor can I consider it incident to or a necessary means viewed on the most liberal scale for carrying into effect any of the powers which are specially granted. In communicating this result I cannot resist the obligation which I feel to suggest to Congress the propriety of recommending to the States the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution which shall give to Congress the right in question."

General Jackson, in his veto of the Maysville road bill, used this language:

"The constitutional power of the Federal Government to construct or promote works of internal improvement presents itself in two points of view: the first, as bearing upon the sovereignty of the States within whose limits their execution is contemplated, if jurisdiction of the territory which they may occupy be claimed as necessary to their preservation and use; the second, as asserting the simple right to appropriate money from the national Treasury in aid of such works, when undertaken by State authority, surrendering the claim of jurisdiction. In the first view, the question of power is an open one, and can be decided without the embarrassments attending the other, arising from the practice of the Government. Although frequently and strenuously attempted, the power, to this extent, has never been exercised by the Government in a single instance. It does not, in my opinion, possess it; and no bill, therefore, which admits it can receive my official sanction."

It is suggested by my friend on the right that it is idle to spend any time in reading to this House either the Constitution or the expositions which has been given to it by those who have gone before us, and who I have always been taught to believe were quite as well acquainted with the proper interpretation of that instrument as we are, and quite as honest in their attempts to give it a correct interpretation; but I have yet faith, and I yet believe that in this Congress, after members shall have an opportunity and shall avail themselves of it, to examine this question, there will be no such thing done as to pass a law in direct violation of the provisions of the Constitution. This much in relation to constitutional power.

I do not deny that the Federal Government has made donations time and time again; and that, under the very last proposition alluded to by General Jackson, they have exercised the power. But I submit that there can be no question as to the unconstitutionality of this bill, in respect to the sovereign power to take the territory and property of a State against its will and without its consent. If this bill should pass, and the honorable gentleman from Ohio has suggested that no member from the West would dare to vote against it, then I hope the constitutional lawyers that represent the West, for many of whom I have the highest regard—for I have sat here for four or five months and listened with great interest to their discussions of constitutional and legal questions; and whether I agree or disagree with them is immaterial, for I concede their ability to judge upon these questions—I hope that they will give this question a careful and candid consideration, notwithstanding it is intimated that there is not a man in the West who dare vote against this bill.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I will leave the further discussion of this important proposition of constitutional power with one further suggestion; and during the time which I may have in another morning hour, I will endeavor to discuss the practical facts in connection with this scheme. Does any man believe that this body will legislate for the benefit of the commerce of the country as well as the States have done? Does anybody believe that we here know as well what is demanded in the State of Illinois as the Legislature of Illinois? Just so it is with New York; just so it is with all the eastern States. I therefore say, leave this question to the States to act upon this matter; leave it to the private enterprise of the individuals who make up the State; those individuals who are full of enterprise, and who do not want to come here to lobby bills through, but who prefer to go to their own States, where the people will understand what they want. I ask again, will not just and honest legislation be promoted by leaving this matter to the States themselves and not assume it for the Federal Government?

[Here the hammer fell, the morning hour having expired.]

TUESDAY, May 1, 1866.

The same subject being taken up again for consideration—

Mr. J. M. HUMPHREY said:

Mr. SPEAKER: The project of connecting the waters of Lakes Erie and Ontario by means of a canal has engaged the attention of commercial men and capitalists for the last sixty years. In the year 1798 a Niagara ship-canal company was incorporated. Since that time three other acts or extensions of the same have been granted by the State of New York, but the scheme could never present sufficient merit to induce capitalists to even invest money enough to pay the cost of organizing a company. In the mean time the State of New York has built and enlarged the Erie and Oswego canals, and private enterprise has built the New York Central and Erie railroads to accommodate the trade that we are now told is pressing for an outlet through this canal. The Canadian government, also, at an early day thought it saw an opportunity to divert the western commerce through its territory, and built the Welland canal, which was completed about 1835. This canal has a capacity for passing boats of five hundred tons burden, double that of the New York canals. The tolls are merely nominal, and during the last five years there has been less business done on it than there was during the first five years after its completion. Private enterprise, aided by the British Government, in the mean time has built the Grand Trunk and the Great Western railroads, at an expense of over one hundred million dollars, and all to accommodate this western trade. A railroad has even been built on the banks of this canal, which now does most of the business formerly done upon it.

Commerce, like water, finds its own level, and is regulated by the law of supply and demand; it must have its general commercial center; and every country has its own commercial center from which the people get their commercial values and make their exchanges, and to which the surplus production of their staples are sent to market. The people of the United States recognize New York as our great commercial center; and although Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and Chicago, are centers for local values, yet it cannot be denied that New York is the great controlling center of all our commercial values and the place of shipment for our surplus productions. This being the fact, and that the great West is the chief grain-growing basin of the world being also a fact, it becomes a commercial (not military) necessity to transport the surplus productions of the West to the East by the most direct, safe, and cheapest route possible. Is the Niagara ship-canal that route or a necessary link in it? This canal would be of little benefit to through shipments in years when a foreign market is supplied from other sources, as has been the case for the last three years.

The exports from the United States from the 1st of September, 1864, to the 12th of June, 1865, to Great Britain, were only 1,615,083 bushels of wheat, 225,520 bushels of corn, and 97,844 barrels of flour, the percentage being only five of flour, nine and one half of wheat, and two of corn, on what it was in 1861 and 1862 for the same period. Ocean freights have not stood in the way; wheat and corn have been taken in steamships from New York to Liverpool for nothing, and three cents has been an outside figure the most of the season; flour has been taken at sixpence to tenpence per barrel. These figures do not look favorable for a direct route via the St. Lawrence and the Atlantic ocean. If we had a ship-canal given to us we could not have used it for that purpose. New York is the sea-port of this country for grain shipments. At New York we meet the ships of the world and orders for grain, if any, and we there meet the sale for our own country and the balance of the world; while via the St. Lawrence we come out into open sea and meet icebergs and get a taste of salt water. We find no customers, no destination but Liverpool worth mentioning, and that market overstocked.

It is obvious, therefore, that New York will continue to be what it has ever been, the market for the great bulk of the western produce. And the means of reaching that market becomes the all-important question. And to its consideration I ask the attention of this House while I state some of the statistical facts bearing upon this question; and I take this occasion to say that I am indebted for much statistical information to a most valuable pamphlet published by Dr. Hayes upon this subject. The Erie canal, the Welland and Oswego canals, the New York Central railroad, the Erie railroad, the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, and the Ogdensburg railroad, are the principal avenues through which this commerce must now pass. I shall, however, confine myself mainly to a consideration of the capacity of the Erie canal to accommodate this commerce, omitting entirely any discussion of the capacity of the other routes mentioned, or that still more important fact that with the return of peace the Father of Waters is again opened to the commerce of the West with the people of half a continent as its buyers and consumers.

I expect to be able to show that the Erie canal is not only at present adequate for that purpose, but will continue to be for many years to come, and that it is the cheapest route that is now or can hereafter be opened; that it controls and keeps down to the lowest practicable figure the cost of transportation from the West to the East upon all the other routes.

Buffalo harbor, at the junction of the Erie canal with Lake Erie, is capable of accommodating all the vessels likely to go there for many years. It has a capacity for elevating from vessels into canal-boats, or into store, 2,808,000 bushels of grain per day, and a storage capacity of 5,885,000 bushels. Suppose canal navigation to commence the 1st of May, and to close the 1st of December in each year, we have one hundred and eighty-four working days. When worked to the full capacity, Buffalo alone could transfer from vessels into boats, or into store, 516,672,000 bushels. The most ever received in one year was in 1862, 68,442,344 bushels, leaving a capacity yet unoccupied of over 458,000,000 bushels, showing that only about one tenth of the capacity has ever been used.

But complaint is made of the canals of the State; that they are too small to furnish an outlet for western shipments. Let us see how that account stands. The corrected register of canal-boats, now in the hands of the collector at Buffalo, shows at the present time about 5,160 boats. The returns show that for the local use of the State of New York eleven per cent. of the whole is required; deducting that from the total, leaves 4,592 boats for the through business; allowing thirty days for each trip, and each boat to make seven trips during the season, we have a total of 32,144 trips; allowing each boat to average only 6,000 bushels of all kinds of grain, and there is proved a grain capacity of 192,864,000 bushels. Deduct for the most ever shipped in one season, 58,642,344 bushels, and it shows a grain capacity left unused of over 154,000,000 bushels.

But it may be said that it is unfair to take all the capacity for grain, leaving nothing for such freight as lumber, staves, flour, provisions, &c. Let us see how the year 1864 stands upon the eastward-bound through tonnage. These 4,592 boats, making 32,144 trips, their average tonnage being 141 tons each, give 4,532,304 tons capacity. The total through tonnage for 1864 was 1,907,136 tons, leaving a balance unoccupied of 2,625,168 tons, showing only about one third of the tonnage used. The capacity of the boats now running is far below the average of what the canal can accommodate. Many of the boats are of the old, small class, while the canal is able to float a much larger class of boats. Those lately built and now building for the through business run from 200 to 250 and 300 tons. It requires no more time or trouble to lock through a boat of 250 tons than one of 50 tons, when the locks are enlarged to admit them into the locks readily. Thus we may fairly claim that the capacity of the canal for through business, with the enlarged locks, is equal to 6,000 boats of 220 tons each. These would move 1,320,000 tons each trip, and for the season of canal navigation could move 9,240,000 tons. The total through business of 1864 was but a trifle over one fifth of the canal facilities with the enlarged locks. There may be a few days in the fall of the year when the canal appears to be overtaxed, but if any one is able to build boats to run for those few days, and let them lie idle for the balance of the season, no one is disposed to hinder him.

Then what need is there for another ship-canal at present? Are the rates too high? The canal is open to the whole world, without regard to nationality or even color, to build and run just as many boats as they like, at just what price they like, over the State tolls; or three fourths of the boats can be bought for less than their estimated value. The commercial law of supply and demand regulates the rates of freight, which are sometimes ruinously low and at other times pay a fair profit. The average is not as profitable as in almost any other business where an equal amount of capital is at stake. Has the State been unfair in its dealings, and increased the tolls, that western men should seek to avoid them and take another route? Let us resort to figures again, both upon tolls and freight, taking the article of flour and tracing it through the various periods since shipments began to the present time, dealing with the general average for equal periods of years, for we must treat every great commercial business upon the average in order to arrive at correct deductions. We find that from 1830 to 1833, four years, the toll on a barrel of flour from Buffalo to Albany was 51 cents and the freight was 44 cents; the next twelve years the toll was 33 cents and freight was 42 cents, 40 cents and 27 cents for periods of four years each; the next four years tolls were 31 cents and freight 33 cents; the next, 25 cents tolls and 29 cents freight; the next, 23 cents tolls and 20 cents freight; the next seven years the toll was 19 cents and the freight 24 cents.

For thirty-five years western productions have been increasing at a rate never before equaled in any country, and during that time the tolls have been reduced sixty-three per cent., and the freight reduced forty-five per cent. on flour.

The rates of toll are not fixed upon a sliding scale, to rise and fall with the price of gold in New York, or the price of wheat and corn at Chicago, Buffalo, New York, or in London. In this fact the western producer has secured an important advantage.

The merchants also complain of the injustice done them; let us see how far the State is to blame in this matter. The averages on goods per 100 pounds from Albany to Buffalo were as follows, namely: first four years tolls were 49 cents and freight 45 cents; the next twelve years tolls were 33 cents and freight 57 cents, 45 cents and 26 cents for four years each; next four years tolls were 24 cents, freight 15 cents; the next, tolls 19 cents, freight 11 cents; the next, tolls 15 cents, freight 10 cents; and the last seven years the average was 6 cents tolls and 6 cents freight. Thirty-five years of unexampled increase of the wealth and growth of our western towns and cities, and a decrease in tolls and freights the most remarkable ever known in the history of the world—the reductions being from 49 cents to 6 cents per 100 pounds on tolls, and from 45 cents to 6 cents on freight, equal to eighty-eight per cent. in tolls and eighty-seven per cent. on freight; the extreme high price being paid cheerfully when we were poor, the low price now being a cause of complaint when we are rich and prosperous! This wonderful reduction in rates is a convincing proof that the vast and astonishing increase of population and production has been more than anticipated, until the increased facilities have far outstripped the demand, leaving hundreds of our canal-boats lying idle during the greater part of the season, that would be useless entirely were it not for an increase of business during a few days in the fall. Prices have fluctuated, and combinations have been formed to put prices up, and in some few cases a few may have suffered by being caught in the gap; but competition is the great leveler of prices, and soon overcomes these irregularities.

To guard against combinations is one end to be gained, but this ship-canal would not gain that end. The experiment has been tried for several years. The Welland canal has been open, and has been used for the very same purpose; and to show how perfectly commerce regulates itself it is only necessary to make a comparison of the average for the transportation of wheat and corn from Chicago to New York. For the year 1864, via lake and canal, via Buffalo, it was 28<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on wheat, and 25<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on corn; and via Oswego it was 28<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on wheat, and 25<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on corn. Saving in favor of Buffalo one tenth of a cent on wheat, and four tenths on corn. Notice how evenly the charges are balanced in proportion to the work done by each route. The divisions of the charges by both routes for the average for the year were:

VIA BUFFALO.
	On wheat.	On corn.
Lakes freight.....	9.53 cents.	8.94 cents.
Canal tolls.....	6.21	4.83
Canal and river.....	12.57	11.72
VIA OSWEGO.
	On wheat.	On corn.
Lakes freight.....	15.37 cents.	14.23 cents.
Canal tolls.....	3.54	2.76
Canal and river.....	9.45	8.87

The fluctuation in prices at times does not prove any fault in either route. It is an evil that cannot be controlled by State authorities or by the canal interests, neither is it confined to the canal. Take the last four years and see the fluctuations on the lakes and canals: the lowest average rate from Chicago to Buffalo, in 1861, was in July, when it was 5<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on wheat and 5<sup>1</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on corn. The highest was in October, the average for that month being 18<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on wheat and 17<sup>1</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on corn, making a difference of about 350 per cent. between the months of July and October. On the canal from Buffalo to New York the average for July was 11<sup>1</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on wheat, and 10<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on corn; in November the average was 25<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on wheat, and 23<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on corn, the difference being about two hundred and twenty-five per cent. from the lowest to the highest average for the months of July and November, or one hundred and twenty-five per cent. less fluctuation on the canal than on the lake for the same time. The total averages for each year have been very even. The average for 1861 from Chicago to Buffalo was 11<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on wheat, and 10<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on corn; and in 1862 the average was 11<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cent less on wheat, and 9<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on corn; in 1863 the average was 3 cents less on wheat and 3<sup>1</sup>/<sub>8</sub> less on corn; and in 1864 the average was 9<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on wheat, and 8<sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> cents on corn. While for the same time the prices averaged from Buffalo to New York:

	On wheat.	On corn.
In 1861.....	15.75 cents.	14.43 cents.
In 1862.....	15.81	13.76
In 1863.....	15.39	13.38
In 1864.....	15.78	16.55

Showing a constant, gradual reduction. Upon a gold basis 1864 was cheaper than ever before, the money being so depreciated in value that the net results were not near as great in the other years. About the same averages are also shown via Oswego. Thus the route has nothing whatever to do with the fluctuations of prices, they being ruled entirely by the law of supply and demand. The decreasing prices proves that our lake and canal facilities are now far in advance of the demand during the season of navigation.

Ho. OF REPS.

Niagara Falls Ship-Canal—Mr. Miller.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Thus, by facts and figures, I have demonstrated that the present means of transportation are sufficient to accommodate the increasing commerce of the West and will continue to be for many years. But if it was otherwise, and greater capacity was required, the Niagara ship-canal would add nothing to it. By this canal—and the same can be done by the Welland canal now—vessels are enabled to tranship freight on to the Oswego and Erie canals at Oswego, instead of Buffalo; and if the Erie canal is not adequate to move this freight from Buffalo it will be equally inadequate from Syracuse, where the Oswego canal connects with it. To increase the capacity for transporting western produce to the eastern market by this route not only this ship-canal must be built, but the Oswego and Erie canals, for a distance of one hundred and eighty miles must be enlarged; the former is useless without the latter. But it is urged that this canal will open another and a competing route to Lake Ontario, and by such competition the cost of transportation will be reduced upon all the routes; but the comparison which I have already made between freights by way of the Welland canal and Oswego and Buffalo and the Erie canal is a complete answer to this claim. What is gained by reducing the distance of canal transportation is added to the lake-freights from the western ports to Oswego.

Mr. Speaker, it must be apparent to any one who will take the trouble to investigate the matter that this ship-canal scheme, as a commercial enterprise, has no merit whatever. It could not secure a subscription from the capitalists in either New York city or Boston to the amount of $100. It is, therefore, unquestionably just the kind of scheme to come to Congress for aid. Hence, in the consideration of such a question we rise above the well-settled laws of trade and commerce. We are statesmen. No inquiry is made here whether it will pay, but is it a "military necessity?" It is in this way that the class of patriotic gentlemen whom the honorable member from Chicago the other day demanded should be excluded from this Hall during the consideration of the Pacific railroad bill, and who are commonly known as the legislative bounty brokers, hope to obtain $6,000,000 of the people's money. True, the Government has no money to pay the poor soldier who periled his life in its defense, or to pay loyal men for property taken or destroyed by our Army during the war. The widows and orphans of the brave men who died in the struggle for national existence have thus far been turned coldly away by this Congress upon the pretense that the condition of our national finances demands the strictest economy. But let the shoddies of the war, whose occupation I had hoped was gone, come here with their "little" scheme, in the shape of some railroad or canal which they tell us is a "military and commercial necessity," and all at once a sudden change takes place; the Federal Treasury becomes a new-found Golconda. The scriptural promise is to them fulfilled; they have only "to ask, and it is given, to knock, and the Treasury is opened." Bonds or lands in untold millions are given to them; but the people will not, ay, cannot, endure this much longer. If it cannot otherwise be stopped they will come to this Capitol and scourge these legislative speculators from these Halls, and demand of us, their misrepresentatives, that we surrender the power they confided to us to honest and wiser men.

Mr. Speaker, a word to our brethern of the West and I am done.

The constantly decreasing tolls on the New York canals, the constantly increasing capacity to meet the wants of the West, and our desire as soon as demanded by the further enlargement of the locks to increase their capacity to at least two hundred million bushels, should be a token of friendship and love between the Empire State and her sister States of the great Northwest. We will decrease the tolls just as fast as the increased business will warrant it being done. If the West had a thousand canals it could do no more and be just to itself. If New York holds a local position advantageous to exterior trade and interior traffic, is this a crime for which she must or ought to be denounced and punished? If by her own means and the wisdom and forecast of her statesmen she has improved those local advantages, not only to her own benefit, but for the welfare of her neighbors, should she be denounced as extortionate because she says to them, use these facilities for traffic in common with all the world by paying a fair and reasonable compensation therefor? Our toll rates are not and have not been any higher than they were in 1857 on agricultural products, when the tolls were paid in gold or its equivalent.

Does the West complain of this? Has she felt this conduct on the part of New York to be wrong, oppressive, and exorbitant taxation? Will her interests be better provided for by a private corporation? Most certainly not. There should be no rivalry or jealousies between the East and West, for when we look at Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, or any other city, county, or town upon the broad expanse of this fair and fertile western world, we find the seed from which sprang western enterprise and shrewdness, which has ripened into power and unexampled greatness and prosperity. That seed was the "universal Yankee." New York and the New England States planted the germ of this great western empire, which soon extended its fame to the over-populated countries across the ocean, inducing hundreds of thousands to seek homes upon its broad prairies. Now, no nation on earth, no eastern State, not even Canada, can strike a blow against the welfare of the West without sending the arrows of affliction directly into the hearts of their own offspring and family friends. Therefore New York, the eastern States, and the whole world respond and rejoice in western greatness and prosperity, and we will open the doors wider and wider for its increased productions as fast as it can reasonably demand it, but we ask the West in return not to slight its old and early friends, or go stumbling over difficulties, through Canada, down the St. Lawrence, out of the Gulf, around Nova Scotia and along its dangerous coast to get to Boston.

Niagara Falls Ship-Canal.

SPEECH OF HON. G. F. MILLER,

OF PENNSYLVANIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

May 1, 1866,

On the bill providing for a ship-canal around the falls of Niagara.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, the bill under consideration provides for the construction by a company of a ship-canal around the falls of Niagara, in the State of New York, commencing at some convenient point on the Niagara river above the falls and terminating at some convenient point below upon the stream, or upon the shore of Lake Ontario, which shall not be less than one hundred and five feet wide on the surface, and ninety feet in the bottom, with not less than fourteen feet of water, with locks not less than two hundred and seventy-five feet long, and forty-six wide, to be carefully surveyed and located by topographical and civil engineers to be appointed by the President of the United States. It also provides for securing the right of way, and said company allowed to charge tolls, to be imposed on vessels, &c., which are not to exceed the rate of tolls charged on the Welland canal in Canada West; but with the reservation that said canal shall at all times after its construction be free from toll from the United States, and open to its use for the transportation of military stores, munitions of war, and troops, and for the passing gunboats, Government transports, and vessels engaged in the transportation of property or troops for the Government.

The bill also provides that the sum of $6,000,000 shall be loaned by the United States to aid in the construction of said canal, to be paid in bonds of the United States, in denominations of $1,000 each, to be dated the 1st of September, 1867, payable in twenty years thereafter, with interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually upon warrants or coupons annexed thereto, signed by the Treasurer of the United States, to be duly numbered, and registered in a book to be kept by him for that purpose. The bill also provides that said bonds are to be delivered over to said company in installments of $200,000 whenever $300,000 has been expended by the company in the construction of said canal, and in same manner until the whole sum is paid over. It is also provided that from the tolls which shall be collected on said canal, ten per cent. thereof, after deducting costs of repairs, &c., shall, on the 1st of January in each year, be paid into the Treasury of the United States, which moneys shall be applied toward the payment of the sum so loaned, with interest; and it is also provided in the bill that the United States may elect to purchase said canal by refunding the money the company expended, with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent. I might add that the bill is so drawn as to sufficiently protect the United States and the public generally.

As to the feasibility of the project there can be no doubt, many surveys having been made; and among the most elaborate and reliable of these surveys is that made by direction of the General Government in 1836, by the late Captain William G. Williams, of the United States Engineer corps, an officer of distinguished ability and high professional attainments, and reported to the first session of the Twenty-Fourth Congress. This proposed ship-canal is the only link wanting to give a free communication through and between the great lakes, to wit, Lakes Ontario, Erie, Michigan, and Superior, and the river St. Lawrence, for vessels of the largest size navigating these lakes. The Niagara river, around whose stupendous cataract this canal is proposed to be made, is thirty-six miles in length, twenty-seven of which are now navigable for the largest class of ships on the lakes, leaving but nine miles of obstruction in the whole length of the river. The great waters of our northwestern possessions, covering an area of one hundred and fifty thousand square miles, bounded by a coast of about three thousand two hundred and ninety-four miles, and of the British possessions two thousand four hundred and twenty-five, are at length discharged through the narrow channel of the Niagara. As to the authority of the United States to aid in the construction of such an enterprise there can be no doubt. The doctrine contended for by the honorable gentleman from Buffalo, New York, [Mr. J. M. HUMPHREY], has long since been exploded, and the authority of Congress to make ports and encourage the improvement of rivers, harbors, ship-canal, &c., as a war measure, or for the encouragement of commerce, or the transportation of the United States mails, has become too well established to be shaken.

This contemplated improvement is of great national importance in a double aspect: first, as a measure of military defense; and secondly, in regard to commerce. Then, as to the first, as a war measure, history shows this to be a place of note during the late war with Great Britain. On the banks of the Niagara river were concentrated extensive military operations of both nations. At the mouth of the river, on the American side, stands the once impregnable Fort Niagara; on the opposite side and extreme of the river stands the British Fort Erie; and near the cataract lies the battlefield of Lundy's Lane. Here the contending armies, composed of the bravest of men, met in battle array contending for supremacy, and in case of another war with that powerful nation no doubt here again a large force and military stores would be concentrated. The history of the naval operations on Lake Ontario during that contest affords striking proof of the vast importance of the proposed work in a military point of view. The system of gunboats and other iron-clads fighting upon lakes, rivers, and other waters has become so efficient and popular in the late rebellion that the attention of Congress and the Government has been turned toward the developing and extending to it a much larger and a more perfect system to give it still greater efficiency.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Territory of Montana—Mr. McLean.

Ho. OF REPS.

The extent of our frontiers, both maritime and inland, is too great to warrant the hope that our Government will defend them by a system of fortifications, as it would require an immense army and be an enormous expense. This vast coast of upward of three thousand miles, along which are planted towns and cities, and the commerce on these lakes carried in more than sixteen hundred steam and sail vessels, must depend for security on gunboats and other iron-clads. The British Government have been preparing, so as to be ready in case we should have another war with her. She has, among other things, constructed the Rideau canal, decidedly a military work, connecting Montreal with Kingston, on Lake Ontario, and has also constructed the Welland canal, connecting Lake Ontario with the upper lakes, through which large-sized gunboats can be taken, thus rendering it indispensable for the protection of our frontier and commerce upon the lakes to have the proposed canal on the American side constructed.

But the honorable gentleman, [Mr. J. M. HUMPHREY,] who has spoken against this bill, has referred to the treaty of 1817 with England, by which the naval force of each Government on the lakes was restricted to one vessel of not over one hundred tons, carrying a single gun, for Lake Ontario, and not to exceed two vessels of like size and armament for all the upper lakes. It is, however, well known that the British Government has been pursuing steadily and effectually a policy looking to the command of the lakes by a strong naval force, if she might see fit to assert it. In 1861, after the seizure of the two rebel leaders, Mason and Slidell, on the British steamer Trent, when matters between the two nations had a warlike aspect, it was asserted extensively in the British press that a large force of gunboats was in readiness at Montreal to pounce upon our unprotected frontier and its commercial marine at the very commencement of hostilities. This intimation from the leading journals of that nation ought to be sufficient warning for us not to withhold our assent to any measure that will tend to protection of that exposed section of our country, and the citizens thus exposed have a right to demand it. This project has as strong a claim upon our Government as that of the Pacific railroad, and no one can doubt the necessity of the latter, both in a military and commercial aspect.

Then as to commerce. This proposed canal, if constructed, will most certainly be of immense importance in that point of view. Having more than three thousand miles of a shore line, forming a navigable boundary for eight of the most important States of the Union, with an aggregate population in 1860 of over nine millions; upon this coast are congregated cities, towns, and villages of a population of over a million of our citizens, surrounded by wealth incident to a high state of agricultural and commercial prosperity. From these cities, and through these lakes and rivers, more than a hundred million bushels of grain, including wheat manufactured into flour, and other agricultural products in proportion, are already distributed annually to New York, New England, and the Atlantic cities north of and including Baltimore, for the consumption of these States and for exportation to foreign countries. Yet the vast agricultural production is but in its infancy.

It is said that in 1862 at least thirty million bushels of grain, including wheat manufactured into flour, to say nothing of the other agricultural products of the western States, passed from the upper lakes to Lake Ontario, through the Welland canal; and even this canal, under the British Government, could not do all the business of transporting the increased products of the West, and some few years since the Legislatures of the States of Illinois and Wisconsin appointed a deputation of influential citizens to visit the Canadian authorities and urge upon them the enlargement of the Welland canal, &c. This seems to me to be enough to inspire the American people to have a canal around the falls of Niagara constructed speedily, so as not to have to court a foreign Power to construct improvements in order to get an outlet for our productions.

It has been said that the country composing properly the valley of the lakes contains an area of one hundred and seventy thousand square miles. By a comparative view it is found to contain fifty thousand square miles, more than all the British possessions in Europe. It is said, however, that some of the citizens of the State of New York are opposed to the construction of this canal upon the ground that it will be calculated to injure the public works of that State. On examination it will be found that about the year 1863 a committee of the Legislature of that State made a report stating "that during a considerable portion of the last three years the enlarged canals have been taxed to their utmost capacity, not from deficiency in the main trunk, but from the impossibility of passing more boats through the locks." And it is well known that the railroads, except it might be a brief period in the summer, were unable to carry forward the freights offering for transportation to the sea-board. Then, if the improvements now constructed are unable to transport the products from the West, how will it be in a few years, when the productions will be increased at least one half?

But suppose the construction of this great enterprise should withhold from the New York canals some of the revenue in the way of tolls, is that any reason why Congress should withhold the Government support to such a great national enterprise, when we have the citizens of various States, through their Legislatures, and Boards of Trade of numerous large commercial cities urging this contemplated improvement upon the consideration of Congress and asking speedy action thereon? And I may say here, Mr. Speaker, that this is no new measure; it has been before the American people for many years, and attracted the serious consideration of our ablest statesmen. And again, Mr. Speaker, these western States, which are so distant from the sea-board, have been asking again and again for additional outlets to market for their vast products, so that nearly one half of what they realize for their productions may not be absorbed in the way of tolls, &c.; and it must be borne in mind that these western States contributed very largely in means and men of extraordinary bravery to put down the late rebellion, and it is due to them that this work should be accomplished. Then vessels might load at Chicago, that great city of the West, which bids fair to soon become one of the first cities of the Union, for the Atlantic, through this American canal around that great cataract.

It is said that $6,000,000 is a large amount of money for the Government to lend its credit for.

Mr. Speaker, what is that sum in comparison with the importance and magnitude of this great work, both in a military and commercial point of view? But the Government is not asked by this bill to make a donation to the company of $6,000,000, or any part of it. It is expressly provided that the Government shall be refunded, with interest, every cent that may be advanced, and as to the ability of the company to repay, there can be no doubt, as the revenue derived by the company in the way of tolls will certainly be very large; and besides, the United States is to have without charge the use of said canal for transportation of everything pertaining to the Government.

The portion of the State, Mr. Speaker, that I represent has, in a pecuniary point of view, but little interest in this project; but I look upon it as a great national measure, and one in which our western States especially have a deep interest, and therefore a strong claim upon Government; consequently a sense of duty impels me to vote for the bill. There is no telling how soon we may have difficulty with England; and a war with that nation, owning a powerful fleet and a well-disciplined army, must render this ship-canal indispensable for the transportation of our gunboats and munitions of war to aid in our defense, and therefore we should not forget that in peace is the time to prepare for war.

Territory of Montana.

REMARKS OF HON. S. McLEAN,

OF MONTANA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

May 4, 1866,

On the bill (H. R. No. 202) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide a territorial government for the Territory of Montana," approved May 26, 1864.

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Speaker, while as a general rule, I hold it to be the wisest policy for a territorial Delegate to quietly work for the interests of his constituents without much speech-making, yet I cannot allow this bill to pass the House unnoticed by me, and will therefore proceed briefly to state a few of my objections to the provisions contained in the second section, which reads as follows:

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the acts of the so-called Legislative Assembly, elected without authority of law, and in pursuance of the proclamation of the acting Governor, which met and began its session in the city of Virginia on the 5th of March, 1866, be, and the same are hereby, declared disapproved, and null and void; and no money now appropriated, or which may hereafter be appropriated, by the Congress of the United States for defraying the expenses of the territorial government of Montana shall ever be paid to any person claiming to have been elected to the Council and House of Representatives of the Legislative Assembly of said Territory, for services as members or officers thereof at the session begun and held as aforesaid, or to defray the expense incurred by said Legislative Assembly for any purpose.

As the bill went into the hands of the Committee on Territories, it was not liable to the objections I am about to urge in its opposition, inasmuch as it simply asked Congress to pass an act for the reappportioning of the Territory of Montana, so that we might have that legislation so necessary in all of the new Territories. It is reported to the House divested of all its original features and embodies a sentence of outlawry against the Legislative Assembly called into existence by the proclamation of the acting Governor, who supposed he was executing his legal duty, while he knew he was carrying out the will of a great majority of the people of the Territory. When I took my departure from Montana, late last fall, as the Delegate of its people, the presumption was, that through the willful negligence or bad faith of the Governor, who refused to sign the "reapportionment bill" until it was too late for it to become a law, we would be compelled to ask Congress to pass an enabling act to free us from the evils consequent upon his willful neglect of duty. I introduced a bill for this purpose long since, but in the mean time the acting Governor, influenced by the pressure of circumstances, issued a proclamation calling together the Legislative Assembly. I am not now prepared to say that this proclamation was in all respects in conformity with law, though I must confess, that composed as the Legislative Assembly is of the best legal talent of the Territory, the necessity for the convening and action of this body must indeed have been great. But the committee has placed before us no evidence of the illegality of this election and those elected to pass such laws as were necessary to the well-being of the people of Montana. If evidence of this nature does exist, the committee did not see fit to inform us of its existence. While I was led to believe that the bill, as originally drafted, would be offered without any serious alterations or additions, I will surely be permitted to express some astonishment at its being reported to the House in its present form.

I am aware of the fact that the wishes and feelings of Delegates are not often consulted here; but as in this case, when a blow is struck at the best interests of my Territory, declaring their laws null and void, and denying our legislators the right of remuneration for their services, I suggest that before all this had been done, a sense of propriety and justice, both, would have demanded that I should have been consulted in the premises. All who take any interest in Montana affairs must be aware of the great necessity for immediate and wise legislation.

Heretofore the laws, as claimed by many, were not of sufficient force or sufficiently carried out to be of any positive benefit in dealing with crime in the Territory. The consequence of this condition of affairs is that justice, instead of being administered through the ordinary channels, has been compelled to give way to the vigilante system of condemnation and execution. In our age and country it is a severe reflection on our people that such a state of things should exist, and this consideration, with the imperative necessity that demanded some wise local legislation concerning mining property, rendered it, in my estimation, almost a necessity on the part of the acting Governor to issue his proclamation calling together the Legislative Assembly.

Unless evidence is produced of the illegality of this act, I must conclude that the Legislative Assembly acted properly and legally in convening under the proclamation, and that the second section of this bill rendering null and void their action and depriving them of the pay their services demand, is entirely unnecessary, uncalled for, and an insult to my constituents. So firm am I in the belief that a great majority of the people of Montana favor the action of this Legislative Assembly, that I have no doubt they would almost unanimously elect the same gentlemen under this bill to the same positions. They know their own interests and should be the best judges of what is justly due them. Does any positive necessity exist for this hostile demonstration against the Legislative Assembly of Montana and the people who elected them to office? I think not. Gentlemen should have and could have ascertained something concerning the action of this Legislative Assembly, and if found necessary for the public good, it could have received the sanction of law, even did some trivial doubts exist regarding the validity of the action of the acting Governor. This is a course that kindness and good will would suggest, and would prove that some little regard was due to our interests and feelings. You cannot injure the feelings of the honorable gentlemen who are members of that body by refusing to pay them the miserable pittance allowed by law as a compensation for their services. In Montana it is hardly sufficient to pay the necessary expenses of members, as distinguished visitors to that country would well know did not the hospitality of our people prevent even a reference to personal expenditure in such cases. The fact, then, of refusing them the usual legal compensation for their services will not cause such men much sorrow, when in almost every instance they perform their duties at a pecuniary sacrifice. The free-hearted people of the Territory of Montana will willingly take care of their legislators; provided, indeed, the same power that smites them through this amended bill does not exercise any unjust authority by refusing them the privilege of sustaining their own members.

I have no doubt, from the experience I have lately had, of the desire and disposition of certain parties that even this kind of legislation would be considered wholesome and judicious when territorial men would be the sole sufferers. In cases where an election is disputed on the floor of this House—and we have had a little of that done this session with wonderful unanimity—I believe it to be customary to allow some compensation to the unsuccessful party to defray the expenses of the contest. Then, in all fairness, is it right to deny the same privilege to the members and officers of the Legislative Assembly at Montana? But I do not for a moment conceive that a spirit of kindness had anything to do with the objectionable features of this bill. And I am glad to be able to state here that all the members of the Committee on Territories, not being consulted, were not aware of the changes made in this bill until it was offered in the House. The spirit in which this was done does not evince any very great degree of solicitude for the welfare of our people. No doubt Congress has the power to inflict on the Territories this quality of legislation; but in its exercise I would beg of them to be carefully considerate of the course they pursue. Kindness and forbearance in the exercise of these privileges will be attended with considerations more agreeable to the feelings of gentlemen on this floor, while it will tend in the Territories to keep alive a feeling of satisfaction and love for our institutions. Harsh and unjust legislation in connection with our Territories is as unwise as it is unnecessary. Living far off, in the West and Northwest, we feel, after we have suffered in prospecting and developing the country that is now, and in a greater degree will continue to be, of so much importance to the nation, as if we were entitled to some little consideration at the hands of Congress.

Notwithstanding the American doctrine that taxation should go hand in hand with representation, we are already causing money to flow into the national Treasury in greater abundance, according to our population, than any State of the Union. Our representation, in a practical point of view, is of a very limited nature, while you manage the taxation in the Territories on a scale of grandeur and magnificence heretofore unprecedented. It is hardly necessary for me to point to the treatment the House bestowed on the Delegate from Utah as a sample of the glorious rights and privileges we enjoy on the floor of this House. This, too, was when the Gentile jaws of the virgin State of Nevada were closing down on a godly portion of the saintly inheritance—a time of all others when the Delegate should be allowed a sufficient length of time to protest against the dismemberment of his Territory.

I do not here pretend to form any conclusion regarding the justice or injustice of this act, further than to strenuously object to a little State eating up a big Territory in the presence of an admiring House and a gagged Delegate who was obliged to witness this huge feat of gastronomy in almost dead silence. The Territories were peopled by your constituents from every State in the Union, and many of them have wives and children who remain your constituents still. We are also American citizens, and glory as much in the success and greatness of the nation as any other citizens of the States forming this Union. Should you view us in the light of children, unable to take care of ourselves, then do not impose too heavy a burden on our young shoulders; but if you look upon us as men we ask at your hands manly treatment.

I speak at least for my own Territory in saying that we are almost unanimous in the belief that much congressional territorial legislation will be of no benefit to the General Government and very injurious to us. We are willing to pay our just dues to Government, and we rejoice that we are enabled to bear a proper proportion of the heavy burden imposed on the nation by the late war. If gentlemen would only take into consideration where we are, what we are, and what we must necessarily become, I believe they would at least try to prevent this harsh and hasty legislation to our prejudice. We do claim to know our own wants, and when it cannot possibly prejudice the interests of the nation, we would solicit the privilege of attending to our own affairs in our own way. The prejudice arising from political bias should not be allowed to operate against us while we remain in a territorial capacity. If we are to be treated as wards in this great national court of chancery, we would respectfully petition the nation to allow us sufficient of our own funds to live upon until our estates are settled. With the British Columbia border almost under our feet and serving as the boundary line of our Territory; with all its rich placers, and a knowledge of the liberality of the owners, it might be well for this Congress to ask itself the question whether such bills of outlawry might not have the effect of compelling citizens of the United States to seek quiet homes in the country of an ancient enemy. Does it not sound strange that a nation against whom we successfully rebelled through her oppression should at this day offer in her own possessions to the descendants of the same "revolutionary rebels" a home where they can enjoy more liberty with less taxation than in their own country? Yet this is the simple truth. Do not by unwise and oppressive legislation drive us over the border, while our love of country would actuate us to stand upon its outer edge a living wall of strength in the defense of our land.

Reconstruction—Increase of Duties on Wool.

SPEECH OF HON. G. V. LAWRENCE,
OF PENNSYLVANIA,
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
May 5, 1866,

On the subjects of reconstruction and the tariff.

MR. LAWRENCE, of Pennsylvania. I have endeavored for some time to obtain the floor, that I might speak briefly on a question intimately connected with and deeply affecting the whole district I represent, and especially the county in which I live and where the people have so often honored me with their confidence and support, namely, the necessity there exists for an increase of duties on foreign wools which come so largely in competition with the wool-growing and manufacturing interest of our whole country. Before I present my views on that special question, or on the subject of the duty of Congress on the general question of protection to home industry, I will, I am sure, be indulged in the expression of a few thoughts connected with what is denominated the great question of the hour, and one about which there has been so much said and written, much to the purpose, and much more having little or no bearing on the question—the duty of Congress in attempting to restore the States lately in rebellion to their proper relations and responsibilities to the General Government, and yet to guard by appropriate constitutional amendments and legal enactments against the possibility of a recurrence of internal strife or war, arising from any local institution or imaginary cause. And who does not know that the excuses made and the pretenses given by the South as a justification of their wicked attempt to overthrow the Government were frivolous and imaginary, but were plead as a justification for their treason?

The leaders in the South and their northern allies, the copperheads, whose action and known sympathy with the rebels and with rebellion had made them so odious among loyal men that they hung their heads in shame as the patriots at the North rebuked them and defied their treason at the polls, are much disturbed that we do not make haste to take away all barriers and take to our counsels and fellowship men whose hands are yet red with the blood of our murdered brethren, and who have never even apologized for their crimes or in any way expiated their guilt. I have myself been exceedingly anxious on this subject and had a strong desire to see some of the loyal and patriotic men who were sent here from Tennessee admitted to seats in this Congress, and yet I see they themselves do not desire this recognition of their personal claims at the expense of the public good. They see and are most ready to acknowledge the unfortunate condition of things even in that State, and the evident fact that the return and enfranchisement of the rebel element would fill their places at the next election by open and defiant traitors, and that the removal now of the soldiers from the seat of government would insure the overthrow by force of the present State government and leave Nashville and the State, with the thousands of Union men and women therein to be driven out by their merciless persecutors; and yet, knowing all this and the general demoralization of the whole South, her deep and bitter prejudices against northern men and northern institutions, we have presented or are about to present terms, honorable terms, for their admission.

What terms did the leaders of the rebellion expect when they surrendered? Those who were not included in the surrender expected to suffer the just penalty of their crimes; many of those in the highest positions succeeded in escaping from the country, and others, including the president of the bogus government, were arrested in an attempt to steal away and escape the wrath of an indignant people. Those men felt how grievously they had sinned; how their souls were covered with perjury; and they expected death. Then they would not have stood about terms. They were humble and apparently very penitent; they had seen and felt the power of the North, and were compelled to submit to the majesty of that Government they so wickedly attempted to destroy, and all they asked was that their lives might be spared and they be permitted to return to their homes. How unfortunate was it that at that time Congress had not been called, when the legislative and executive authority could have unitedly devised and adopted such a plan of reconstruction as would have made the institutions of the country and the Government safe for all time from the demon spirit of secession and internal strife; but soon, ah, too soon, as all now see, did executive clemency, in granting wholesale pardons and ordering the return of confiscated estates to the most notorious rebels, beget a spirit of pride and defiance of the authority of the Government, until in a very few months, leading rebels demanded places and power, not from the people alone, but from the President, and many were appointed to lucrative positions under the revenue and other departments of the Government who could not and did not take the test oath which was prescribed by Congress, and which even northern men are all required to take before entering on the duties of offices assigned them.

Under the reconstruction policy of the President which he adopted, (doubtless with an ardent and commendable desire to restore order in the southern States,) the majority of the people, in open defiance of propriety and their pledges of submission, when opportunity offered, rejected all loyal Union men (a persecuted and despised class in all the South) and elevated to the highest positions of honor and trust the very men who had been leaders in inducing the rebellion and who had done most in the field to starve and murder our soldiers. Now, under such circumstances, do you expect we shall stultify ourselves and render nugatory, void, useless, all our victories? Shall we leave these questions open, the spirit which induced this carnage and death unrebuked? Shall we again be put in jeopardy? Have we not spent enough of treasure? Look at these thousands of millions—a sum hardly to be computed; this mortgage of one fifth of all the estates, real and personal, in the land to liquidate the debt. When we are gone and our children come up to take our places they will have to bear this burden and carry it from one to another generation as part of the price of the institutions and privileges saved to them in this struggle. Shall we be expected to forget our obligations to the hundreds of thousands of soldiers who live to enjoy the benefits and blessings of the institutions they aided to preserve? And shall we, can we, forget that host who, though dead, sleep in honored graves, and appeal to us from the very stillness of the tomb to make their sacrifices, their death, contribute to the peace, the harmony, and perpetuity of that for which they so freely offered their lives? And shall our children rise up in after years and curse us for bartering away their birthright, or leaving it in peril, when it is in our power to secure and render it perpetual? And of that host of conspirators against the peace, the honor, and the life of the Government, not one leader has or will suffer death; and but few have ever been arrested or incarcerated; and their treason has commended them to the people of their own States, for many of them are elevated to the highest positions of honor and trust. And it is demanded we shall at once, without hesitation or delay, without any "indemnity for the past or security for the future," pronounce them worthy associates, safe guardians of the public interests; let them renew the attempt to overthrow in the forum what they failed to destroy in the field!

Does the country not know that the nine tenths of the Opposition in this Congress would gladly welcome Jefferson Davis, Breckinridge, or Hunter back to the Senate of the United States? The attachment and sympathy which was apparent in the copperhead party of the North for the rebels in arms, the exultation at rebel victories, and the extreme depression when the Union armies triumphed, justify the conclusion they would prefer such for associates to the loyal men who compose the majority here, and who stand by the principles and the country against the treachery of friends or the menaces of enemies. Why, sir, there is indecent haste manifested to get these unrepentant rebel leaders into Congress, to vote down appropriations to your pensioners and to destroy your monetary system by repealing your tax laws and refusing the means to meet your obligations, and thus threaten your national honor and national life. There is even now a small portion of the Democratic party in the North who whisper repudiation, and intimate we should break faith with the bond-holders who lent their means, in the hour when your credit was tested, on specified conditions. And I predict that whenever it will become popular to appeal to the mercenary feelings and the lowest prejudices of men on this question, (as it has now on the question of justice to the colored race,) you will find this party growing bold and boisterous, and especially so when taxes are paid with difficulty, and when the mercenary feelings can overcome the impulse to duty and to patriotism. Now, place the leaders of this rebellion in power, and how soon would they join in the attempt to repudiate the very debt they compelled us to assume!

I believe the interests of the whole country will be best promoted by an early restoration of the former relations between all the States, the reestablishment of commerce and trade without any restriction. This the people desire and expect; and whenever they see the proper spirit manifested, and proper guarantees for future peace and safety given, they will expect and demand of us the admission of these States to all the benefits conferred by representation and equality; and I believe the constituency I represent will not expect me to make the extension of suffrage to the colored race in the South a condition. Congress having secured to this unfortunate class, by legislation, security and equality in civil rights under the law, the question of suffrage must be left to the States, and cannot be extended out of this District by congressional enactments. I refer to this merely to correct the misrepresentation made by our opponents in our own State. Their staple and capital in trade in the coming campaign will be the old appeal to the low and the ignorant about negro equality, negro suffrage, which all intelligent men understand and appreciate. One would suppose the demagogues who resort to this despicable means to obtain power would have learned ere this that we are advancing to a higher civilization, to a better appreciation of our duty to man as man, and to a better knowledge of the plain duty God requires of us toward this unfortunate race, just emerging from this long night of gloom. If they are physically and intellectually our inferiors then it is our duty to aid to lift them up from their degradation, remove the obstacles in their way, and give them fair play in an honest effort to improve their condition. I pray our Democratic friends for once to leave the negro out of the contest, and appeal to reason, and not to the mercenary interests and low prejudices of the ignorant or debased.

I must return to the question from which I have been partially diverted. What guarantees should we require? These leaders took the States out of the Union and voluntarily conspired against the Government, and have by their treason brought all this suffering on the nation; and is it too great a punishment to say they, the leaders in the councils of the confederacy and in the field, many of whom had been educated at the public expense, should be disfranchised and declared ineligible to office? This might not destroy treason, but it would make it somewhat "odious." Is it asking too much of the South to do what we are willing to do for mutual safety and greater security and equality, namely, to make population the basis of representation, or do they expect to keep up the rule and idea that three white men in the South are equal to five in the North in representation? Do they want us to assume their war debts, debts contracted in violation of their oaths, and to pay for overthrowing the Government they had administered for fifty years, and which gave them such ample protection in all their essential interests?

1. Let them in good faith agree to an honest and fair basis of representation, and acknowledge us as equals under the law.

2. Let them agree that the leading, active participants in producing and carrying forward the rebellion—the class specified in our proposition—shall forever be ineligible to office under the Government, which is a very small punishment for such flagrant treason.

3. Let them absolve us forever from the payment of any portion of their war debt, and agree faithfully to administer the law passed by Congress to guaranty civil rights to all classes, and then elect loyal men who can take the test oath, and I for one will vote to admit their Representatives and accord to them equal privileges in all respects.

I believe, then, that these guarantees and the future safety of the country can only be secured by the continuance of the true loyal Union men of the country in power. We point with great pride and satisfaction to the record of this organization for the last five years. In the darkest hours of the Republic, when timid men were ready to yield, when treason South and North beset our pathway, and when dark clouds enveloped the future, this party in the field, in the halls of legislation, and among the people, clung with constant faith and unyielding tenacity to the Government and all its interests. Our faithful adherence to principle, to integrity, to justice and right, under a just Providence gave us the victory in the field and at the polls. History will record the fact that the Union party, composed of the soldiers in the field and the loyal patriotic masses of the loyal States, contending successfully with the armed legions in the field and the more cowardly allies in the North and West, saved us our heritage, an undivided territory, one Government, free institutions, and universal liberty. We have here attempted—perhaps not always by the most prudent counsel and wisest policy, but with great harmony and unanimity of purpose—to make the fruits of our victories contribute to our future safety, to our national honor, to the universality among our own people of the spirit of our free institutions, and will stand upon the record before a just and intelligent people.

Now, Mr. Speaker, having spoken longer than I expected on this branch of the subject, I will come to the question I most desired to present, and one in which as a policy or interest all the people I represent are deeply and vitally interested.

The general question of protection to all of our industrial pursuits has been well discussed and faithfully presented by my colleague, [Mr. KELLEY,] and I have distributed his able speech very freely in my district. I could not present it in so favorable a light or so ably as he has done, nor would I have time to attempt it. Another colleague, [Mr. MOORHEAD,] has also very fully, and at great length, presented this subject, especially in reference to the necessity of increased duties on iron, steel, &c., and I concur most fully with all they have said on the subject, and will be glad if I have time in an hour's speech to add some thoughts and statistics not given by them on the general question.

Washington county, Pennsylvania, has perhaps as many or more sheep within its borders, scattered over its rich hills and richer valleys, than any county in the United States, and has obtained as high a degree of perfection and improvement in keeping, managing, and growing sheep as any other, and in the other counties of the district a large portion of the most intelligent and useful farmers are engaged in the business. I need not say it is a most healthful, honest, and honorable pursuit. The shepherds in all the ages of the past are referred to in poetry and song. Sacred and profane history abound in references to the herds, the flocks, and their shepherds. And on the plains of Judea this class were honored by being the first to see the star as it rested above the Babe in Bethlehem, and to herald to the world the birth of the Saviour; and no class of men, as they now exist, are better entitled to the care and protection of a beneficent Government.

This interest is absolutely essential to our very existence. Wool enters largely into and often composes the fabric with which our bodies are clothed and our health and comfort secured; and no family in the land can dispense with the necessity which exists for it. No article can take its place; it is more valuable than cotton and linen. The universality of its use, the amount of capital and labor invested in it, all indicate the importance and permanent character which it assumes as a productive interest of the country. The supply is not nearly adequate to the demand, and hence the necessity of heavy importations of foreign wools. There is no country in the world better suited, or where there are more natural advantages than here, for rearing sheep and growing wool. In all of the northern, middle, western, and some of the southern States, sheep are found to grow as finely, as full of vigor and health, and are as free from disease and with as vigorous constitutions as in any other. They seem to fatten and thrive on the natural grass of the prairie as well as that found on the tilled soil. The wool seems to vary some in weight in the South and the North; but there is but little difference in the longevity or health of the sheep with the same quality of food and similar care and attention. With these natural advantages, and the readiness with which our people adapt themselves to all the industrial pursuits in which they find a reasonable profit, how do you account for the fact that this interest has advanced so little? I know of no more healthful employment; none which brings man more frequently into the open air and in direct contact with the very elements of life; none which is less expensive in its management. One man can, with ordinary industry and care, manage several hundred sheep during all the year, and the product in wool is carried to market often in a single day, and the larger portion of your annual profits of labor and your sheep all delivered at the same time.

In keeping sheep you are constantly enriching your soil. No animal perhaps furnishes so much return to the soil from its food as the sheep. Its manure is dropped almost always on the highest ground and where most needed, as is evinced by the increased quantity and green appearance of the grass on the high grounds. It also assists to expel weeds, briars, bushes, and shrubs from your pastures. It will often browse or feed among these in preference to the grass, and will thus save much manual labor by expelling them from the pastures. They are also well kept on woodland pastures in summer, and graze as well on rough as level land. In raising agricultural products and tilling the soil you are compelled to plow, to sow, to reap, to thresh, and carry to market at great labor and expense, often many days or perhaps weeks removing your annual grain crops to market, especially so when your are not contiguous to railroads or water communication; you are also exhausting the soil, and required, if you would preserve its original strength and productiveness, to add largely of guano, lime, or manure to retain its original vigor and reproductive power. One of the greatest sources of difficulty in farming the hill lands of Pennsylvania, and other States with rough surface, is the very great loss of soil when plowed, and before and after planting, from the heavy and washing rains which are almost sure to fall at some period in the spring or summer, when the ground is in a mellow or loose state or condition. I have known more land ruined and soil carried off in this than almost any other way, and have not envied the intelligence which is exhibited by many in thus exposing themselves to almost irreparable loss from this source, when their hill lands could be made, by keeping sheep, as profitable as by growing grain, and would be enriched from year to year with the soil unbroken, and unexposed to such waste. There is still another and very material advantage the wool-grower would have, if properly protected, over the man who tills the soil and depends on growing crops for his profits, which is in the certainty of a return for his labor and expense.

Wheat, which has in many places been the staple crop, is subject, especially in latter years, to many dangers, and is often totally destroyed, sometimes by the fly, sometimes by drought, often by severe freezing when exposed in the winter season, often by rust, and by wet after being cut. It is a most uncertain crop, and to a certain extent the same may be said of almost every crop you grow on the soil.

I regard, then, the business of growing sheep and wool as much more pleasant, perhaps quite as healthful, attended with much less labor, and with much more certainty than the tilling of the soil. True, flocks are often exposed to the ravages of dogs and sometimes to disease; but either will be avoided when it becomes a business, and when a combination is formed against the former and proper care is taken to prevent the latter. I have been particular to show that there is nothing in the business, the employment itself, to prevent the growth and extension of so important an interest, and much to invite the landholder to invest a portion of his capital in sheep and pursue it steadily as a calling or business, and yet why is it that in the United States we find so little increase in the number of sheep or the quantity of wool in a given number of years? A reference to the figures furnished by the census report and documents since collected at the Treasury Department, and carefully examined by those who have given much care and attention to this subject, and which are regarded as approximating as near accuracy as we can get and are used in estimating our national resources and products, show many singular facts on this subject. I present some of these figures that you may see it is for want of protection and encouragement this important interest has languished or made so little progress.

From 1840 to 1860 there was little increase in the production of wool or number of sheep—really no substantial advancement in twenty years—and this during a period when other interests were most of them in a flourishing condition; indeed, wool is almost the only product that did not increase largely. Our population increased over eight millions between 1850 and 1860. The increase of stock, except sheep, in the western States in these years was one hundred and forty-three and a half per cent., but of sheep only two and seven tenths per cent., and wool seventeen per cent. All the agricultural products except this increased in the last decade one hundred and twenty-five per cent. In 1850 the number of sheep returned was 21,728,220, and the amount of wool at 52,516,954 pounds. The number of sheep in 1860 was 24,828,556, and the amount of wool 60,511,543 pounds.

In Pennsylvania during the ten years preceding the rebellion the number of sheep had decreased twelve per cent.; in Illinois, fourteen per cent. After the war had been waged for four years, and we had been thrown more upon our own resources, and less wool was imported on account of the danger to which foreign commerce was exposed, and also because of the slight protection under the tariff of 1861, the increase in Pennsylvania in the production of wool was seventy-six per cent., and in a greater ratio in some of the western States. Illinois, for example, had during ten years preceding decreased fourteen per cent.; but during the first two years of the war the number increased from 769,135 to 1,206,195. This shows how this interest increased when we had control of the home market, or even partially so. I doubt not many wool-growers will be utterly astonished when I present figures showing the importations of foreign wool into the United States, and when they see how their interests come in competition and are put in jeopardy by the products of cheap land and cheaper labor in foreign countries sold in their own market. The following tables and quotations, as they appear, are taken from the very able and elaborate report written and presented to the United States revenue commissioners by the committee of the National Wool-

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Reconstruction—Increase of Duties on Wool—Mr. Lawrence.

HO. OF REPS.

Growers' Association, of which Hon. Henry S. Randall was chairman:

EXPORT OF COMPETING WOOLS TO UNITED STATES.

The following table gives the amount, value, and average price per pound of wool exported from Buenos Ayres to the United States, from 1855 to 1865, inclusive:

Year.	Pounds.	Dollars.	Cts. per lb.
1855.....	5,936,969	627,718	10.5
1856.....	5,672,939	588,403	10.3
1857.....	5,758,319	694,736	12.0
1858.....	Not returned,	946,467	Estimated at 13.0
1859.....	but estimated,	1,274,172
1860.....	from value re-	1,226,841
1861.....	turned, to am't	1,787,334
1862.....	for the four yrs.	1,787,334
1862.....	to.....40,267,800	838,580	14.4
1863.....	5,786,898	2,577,765	14.7
1864.....	17,461,208	3,618,431	15.1
1865.....	23,951,509	2,223,483	14.3
1865.....	16,103,889
Total.....	120,969,698	16,404,470	13.0

The following table embraces the same particulars in relation to the wool exported to the United States, during the same period, from the British possessions in Africa:

Year.	Pounds.	Dollars.	Cts. per lb.
1855.....	495,937	104,211	21.00
1856.....	206,045	39,408	19.12
1857.....	792,084	183,426	23.15
1858.....	-	536,118	-
1859.....	-	587,014	-
1860.....	-	1,023,436	-
1861.....	-	1,010,111	-
1862.....	3,920,257	665,480	16.97
1863.....	6,711,975	1,179,707	17.57
1864.....	13,717,900	2,415,145	17.60
1865.....	8,312,283	1,533,796	18.45
Total.....	-	9,277,852	19.12

The cost of producing wool in foreign countries is comparatively small, owing to the cheapness of land and the extremely low wages paid for their attention of the sheep. Rev. G. D. Carrow, late superintendent of missions of the Methodist Episcopal church in South America, speaks of sheep farming on the Pampas thus:

"In Buenos Ayres, a shepherd with his dogs and some occasional assistance from children takes all the care, besides shearing, of one thousand sheep summer and winter. His almost unvarying subsistence is hard biscuit and fried mutton. He cultivates no vegetables, uses no milk, butter, or any of the other simple luxuries to be found in every farm-house in the United States. His house is a hovel of unburned bricks, containing only the most scanty primitive furniture. His fuel is dried dung from the bottom of the sheep fold. The warmth of the climate renders his clothing of little expense. In short, all his material modes of life are as rude and inexpensive as if he were in a semi-savage state. In a country without public or private improvements and almost without established institutions, he contributes as little to the expenses as he shares in the benefits of civilization."

The above statement gives you the key to unlock the mystery, and shows you why productions there are cheaper than in this country, and why the Government should at once interfere to prevent such ruinous competition arising from the difference in condition and value of labor and of the soil. The report of the census of 1860 showed that the aggregate value of imported wool for the ten years previous was $10,063,609, and the late census shows that during the next ten years it ran up to more than three times that amount, and was put down at $30,428,157; almost two hundred per cent. increase.

You will have a correct view of the difficulties in the way of the wool-grower in this country if you will examine the tables heretofore given of the average prices of wool in Buenos Ayres and in the British possessions in Africa; and the table below will show how these compare with the prices in the metropolis of your own country for a specified period of time:

Average prices of wool at New York.

For the years—	Gold rates.	Ohio.		New York.		Illinois.		Buenos Ayres.		Cape.
		Currency.	Gold.	Currency.	Gold.	Currency.	Gold.	Currency.	Gold.	Currency.	Gold.
1861—First quarter...	-	-	41-43	-	40-42	-	39-42	-	19-23	-	23-29
Second quarter...	-	-	41-43	-	40-42	-	39-42	-	19-22	-	23-29
Third quarter...	-	-	34-40	-	34-38	-	32-35	-	18-20	-	22-26
Fourth quarter...	-	-	48-52	-	45-49	-	43-46	-	21-23	-	23-27
1862—First quarter...	103	50-55	48-53	47-52	45-50	46-48	44-46	22-24	21-23	24-28	23-27
Second quarter...	105	47-51	45-49	43-47	43-46	41-44	39-42	20-23	19-22	24-28	23-27
Third quarter...	117	52-55	44-47	48-50	41-43	47-49	40-42	21-24	18-20	26-32	23-27
Fourth quarter...	131	57-62	49-47	55-57	42-48	53-55	40-42	21-24	16-18	29-34	22-26
1863—First quarter...	154	73-77	47-50	69-72	45-47	63-67	41-43	28-33	18-21	35-41	23-27
Second quarter...	148	80-83	54-56	77-79	52-53	69-72	47-49	29-35	20-24	35-43	24-29
Third quarter...	130	72-76	55-57	70-73	54-56	63-65	48-50	26-30	20-23	31-40	24-31
Fourth quarter...	150	73-78	42-52	68-73	46-49	66-69	44-46	26-33	17-22	33-44	22-29
1864—First quarter...	160	75-79	47-49	70-74	44-46	67-72	42-45	27-35	17-22	35-46	22-29
Second quarter...	184	80-82	43-45	73-77	40-42	68-72	37-40	27-40	14-22	38-48	21-26
Third quarter...	249	101-107	41-43	94-100	38-40	87-96	35-39	33-54	15-22	58-72	23-29
Fourth quarter...	225	95-100	42-44	90-95	40-42	85-95	38-42	43-55	15-24	52-66	23-30
1865—First quarter...	198	95-104	48-53	90-97	45-49	83-99	42-50	36-47	18-24	50-64	25-32
Second quarter...	146	73-78	50-53	63-63	43-44	60-70	41-47	27-36	18-25	35-44	24-30
Third quarter...	144	70-75	48-52	60-65	42-45	50-65	35-45	26-37	18-25	35-43	24-30
Fourth quarter...	143	69-75	48-52	59-63	41-44	52-65	36-45	26-37	18-25	35-44	24-30

The figures presented below, taken from official documents, will be interesting to show the aggregate value of woollen goods imported in the time specified, and which should have been manufactured at home and out of our own wools if we are properly protected:

Aggregate value of woollens imported in ten years ending
1830.....	$86,182,110
1840.....	129,336,258
1850.....	109,023,152
1860.....	282,682,830

Should a nation so favorably situated as ours, having in geographical extent an empire with thousands of millions of acres of as fine soil for grass as the sun shines upon, well adapted to sheep-raising and wool-growing, with abundant water and steam power, and the most perfect and extended machinery for manufacturing the wool, be thus dependent on other countries for an article of prime necessity? It is a monstrous fallacy, and under such a system, applied not only to wool-growing, but to iron, steel, and all the products of our own soil, and which can be manufactured at home by our own people, would drive us from our own market and fill it with the fabrics of a foreign people, most of it produced by pauper labor. Cannot every intelligent man see how much better it would have been to pay this $45,000,000 sent abroad for foreign wool in the last four years to our own people, and grow the wool on our own soil? It was so much encouragement to foreign labor, and an addition to foreign capital.

"In 1851 William Cullen Bryant, in an able editorial from his own pen, in the Evening Post, in relation to increased duties on wool, said: 'Manufacturers who are purchasers of South American wool are anxious to create a home market, but that only means a market in which their own productions are sold, and not a market in which their materials are bought. They are zealous in favor of laws which compel farmers to buy their cloths, but they object to a law which compels them to buy the farmers' wool, and as matters now stand the American wool-grower has nothing to gain by the increase of the number of woolen mills. The brisker the business the greater the encouragement given to the South American shepherd to increase his flocks. The farmer here pays a tribute in the shape of duty to encourage what politicians call American industry, and in return is graciously permitted occasionally, when the stock of South American wool on the market is scanty and the mills cannot be stopped without loss, to supply such deficiency as may arise. So far as the farmer is concerned the duty might as well be repealed as to be what it is now."

"This he would say to-day of the present duty on wool, and I solemnly declare that after much observation and a thorough knowledge of the subject, unless the tariff is made protective, wool-growing must be profitless. Mr. Bryant further says: 'The proprietors of the flocks in South America are stimulated by the ready market their wool finds in this country to improve the fleece of the native sheep; as they go on crossing the native breed with the fine-wooled varieties, the market here grows dull for our wool.' The Albany Cultivator about this time says: 'One of the largest woolen manufactories in the United States, which uses two million pounds of wool a year, a few years ago used exclusively our domestic Saxony and grade wools, now uses as exclusively the Merino wools of eastern South America. A few years ago this establishment alone paid $300,000 for wool grown in western Pennsylvania in a single year, and does not now use a lock of our wool, but imports its supply of Merino wool, by the cargo from South America.'"

There are many farmers and wool-growers who cannot have access to the statistics furnished on the subject of the manufacture of woollen and mixed goods in the United States as presented by the statistics of 1860, and found in the Compendium of the Census of that year, which I give below for information on that subject:

"The returns of woollen manufacturers (table No. 23) show an increase of over fifty-one per cent. in ten years. The value of woollen and mixed goods made in 1850 was $45,281,764. In 1860 it amounted to $69,965,963. The establishments numbered 1,909, of which 453 were in New England, 748 in the middle, 479 in the western, 2 in the Pacific, and 227 in the southern States. The aggregate capital invested in the business was $35,520,527, and it employed 23,780 male and 20,120 female hands, 639,700 spindles, and 16,075 looms, which work up more than eighty million pounds of wool, the value of which, with other raw materials, was $40,360,300. The foregoing figures include satinets, Kentucky jeans, and other fabrics of which the warp is cotton, though usually classed with woollens. In the manufacture of these mixed goods the amount of cotton consumed is 16,088,625 pounds, which, with 384,036,123 pounds used in making cotton goods, as previously stated, amounts to 380,044,748 pounds, or 950,112 bales, exclusive of a considerable quantity used annually in household manufactures, and for various other purposes."

"The largest amount of woollens was made in New England, where the capital was nearly twenty million dollars, and the value of the product $38,509,080, but little less than the total value in 1850. More than half the capital, and nearly one half of the product of New England belonged to Massachusetts, which had 131 factories of large size. Rhode Island ranked next, and had increased its manufacture 163 per cent. in ten years; that of Massachusetts being 48 per cent. The value of woollens produced in the middle States was $24,100,488, in the western $3,718,092, and in the Pacific and southern $2,538,308. The sectional increase was, in New England 52.1, in the middle States 54, and in the South 107—the last showing the greatest relative increase. Pennsylvania, next to Massachusetts, was the largest producer, having 447 factories, which made $12,744,373 worth of woollen and mixed fabrics, an increase of 120 per cent. A value of $8,919,019 was the product of 222 establishments in the city of Philadelphia."

"The State of New York holds the third rank in relation to this industry, its manufactures amounting to more than nine million dollars. The woollen manufactures of Maryland exhibit an increase of 86 per cent. In Ohio, which produced in 1850 a greater value of woollens than all the other western States, there was a decrease on the product of 1850, owing, probably, to the shipments of wool to Europe, which, in 1857, was found to be the most profitable disposition of the rapidly increasing wool crops of that State. In Kentucky, now the largest manufacturer of wool in the West, the product was $1,123,882, and the increase in ten years 40.4 per cent.; while in Indiana, which ranks next, it was 31 per cent., and in Missouri 18.3 on the product of 1850."

"The extension of this important manufacture is a subject of great interest to the country, inasmuch as our climate renders woollen clothing necessary throughout a large part of the Union during much of the year; and because it would supply the best market to the wool-grower."

There should be no antagonism between the wool-grower and manufacturer. Their interests when properly understood are mutual, and the Government should extend to both just such protection as will enable them to control the markets here, which would be regulated by supply and demand, and keep out the products of foreign countries.

HO. OF REPS.

Loyal Men Must Rule—Mr. Bundy.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

We are not compelled to be thus dependent on other nations for anything which we can grow or manufacture here out of the productions of our own soil, and should in nowise be so for our wool, our iron, or our coal. In reference to wool, we know we can grow more sheep and raise more wool, if protected by a just tariff, than any people in the world. In England the estimate is one sheep to one and three quarters of an acre; Ohio and Vermont have one to four and one half acres; New York one to six and one half acres; Iowa one to twenty-four acres; and the United States one to fifty-seven acres. Now we have at least twenty million sheep, possibly twenty-two millions, in the United States, producing over sixty million pounds of wool. We should at this time have more than twice this number of sheep and twice this amount of wool for our own consumption; and if our population increases the next twenty years as it did the last twenty, we shall need sixty million sheep to produce the wool we will require for our own people.

Mr. Speaker, I have no doubt if we are true to ourselves as a people; if we succeed in securing peace and harmony and proper guarantees against the recurrence of internal strife hereafter; if we are able to extend the spirit of our free institutions as we progress, the time will come, and probably within the life of some of our own children, when there will be scattered over this widely extended country one hundred millions of an active, intelligent, and industrious population. These must all be supplied with means of labor and subsistence, must be clothed and fed. When that time comes, one hundred and eighty million sheep will be required to produce all the wool needed for these people alone; and this is no exaggerated picture. I present the case in this light to show how vast an interest it is destined to become, and what a field is here opened up to the active, intelligent young men of the country. Now, too many of these are crowded into our cities and villages seeking a temporary subsistence, wasting the vigor of youth behind the counter, in the counting-room, at the desk, or loafing among the dens of infamy, and with undeveloped physical or mental powers do little for themselves or their race, and often in the end become a burden and expense to society. Let them look to this and other fields of enterprise, and early identify with the permanent and growing interests in these new and undeveloped fields of labor in the West and Northwest.

It may be expected that I should say something in reference to the increase of the tariff on iron as well as wool, as there is a large amount of capital invested in that business in one of the counties of my district, and because it is a question of such general interest. An examination of the statistics reveals the same facts that are presented in reference to wool; the competition is ruinous and entirely destructive to the manufacturers of iron, and unless relief is speedily afforded many of them will be compelled to put out their fires and the thousands of hands be thrown out of employment, and, as is natural, will seek their living from the soil and become producers instead of consumers. Though the monetary affairs and the expansion consequent on the condition of the country requiring a large circulation—temporary causes—had much to do in keeping up the price of iron and wool and other products, and creating an erroneous impression on many minds that there was no especial need of increased duties, that delusion has to yield to the undeniable fact that just now the monthly returns show larger balances against us than for years, and not only alarm the manufacturers of wool and iron, but create serious apprehensions for the credit of the Government. The estimates made in July last of the amount of our indebtedness to Europe on United States bonds and railroad and other securities was $900,000,000; now, it is very safe to say it is $1,200,000,000, the annual interest and exchange on which would be over ninety million dollars in specie. Add to this the fact that at this moment there is and has been for some months an American free-trade league in New York, which would be much better denominated the British free-trade league, sending out its poison all over the country in the shape of tracts and documents—doubtless published by British capital—to instill in the minds of our people a doctrine which all experience here proves fallacious; for almost every revulsion to which this country has been subject for forty years has occurred when these balances were so largely in favor of Europe, and when the tariff was repealed or so much reduced as to invite this state of things.

No practical or sensible man can be led away by such miserable delusion. If the tariff of 1842 had not proved prejudicial to British interests, why should they have spent (as has since been alleged) over a million dollars here to modify and repeal it, and under the very same pretenses now offered? The practical common sense of every farmer and artisan or mechanic in any community could refute these miserable free-trade theories. Ask one of these what he thinks of the policy of purchasing thirty millions' worth of iron and steel in Europe to lay a railroad over the iron-ore and coal-fields of Pennsylvania. Again, ask them to look at the thirty-five millions paid annually to the foreign market for laces, silks, articles of luxury, many of which are bought merely to be sold to gratify the pride and vanity of a useless class of our own people who contribute nothing to the real wealth of the country. I give here a portion of what has been so well said by the revenue commission on this subject:

"Pennsylvania could, with difficulty, pay, in any product of her own, for fifty thousand tons of iron imported from Great Britain; but her capitalists and farmers can feed and sustain a population large enough to take from her own mines and manufacture five hundred thousand tons of iron of the value of $50,000,000, and the same policy extended to her other resources makes her annual product worth $500,000,000. The proceeds of her agriculture could not be exchanged abroad for one half of what the iron brings.

"In other words, Pennsylvania, without products of her own to spare, which she can exchange in Great Britain for fifty thousand tons of iron, can manufacture ten times that quantity. The whole agricultural product of the State being thus converted into iron and other manufactures becomes, directly and indirectly, a purchasing power in the home market. The product of an acre of wheat exported to England or Scotland may import a ton of iron, but an acre cultivated for vegetables at home will purchase five to ten tons of iron.

"The purchasing power of a people who have duly mingled manufacturing industry with agricultural production is tenfold that of a purely agricultural community. The individuals of a country with such a blended industry purchase from each other, and the only limit to the power of purchase is the power of production. The population of Great Britain and the United States is respectively not far from thirty millions, yet the internal trade of the United States is of tenfold greater value than our entire foreign trade, including the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. Our foreign trade with France is less than a fifteenth part of the value of our domestic trade. The strength and wealth of a country should be measured by the quantity and value of its productions which it consumes, and not by what it sends to other countries. No civilized nation obtains from other countries a tenth of its consumption. Massachusetts and Philadelphia contribute to the consumption of the United States more than all Europe; so also the city of New York and New Jersey. The trade between Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York on the one side and the New England States on the other vastly exceeds our trade with Europe."

It is in the power of foreign capitalists and manufacturers, owing to their low-wages system or cheap labor and immense capital, to subordinate our productions, to overthrow or greatly cripple, without danger to themselves, our American interests, and I am fully impressed with the absolute necessity there exists now, more perhaps than ever before, for the interference on the part of Congress to place these producing interests and sources of our greatest wealth as a nation on a basis which cannot be shaken by these gambling speculative movements of British or American theorists.

Our national debt, the legacy of this unholy rebellion, and which must be met in good faith, will yet (as taxes are collected in times of national depression, and when this obligation is met with great difficulty) try the patience and integrity of the whole people, and we must be the more careful to husband our resources, develop the means of our own strength, gird ourselves up for the contest, give just and adequate encouragement to all industrial pursuits, learn to depend on ourselves, our own labor, our own capital; invite to our western lands agriculturists and wool-growers; to our rich, inexhaustible mines of coal, iron ore, lead, copper, and gold the hardy colliers and miners; bring to our use the water and steam power of the nation, which have already added a hundred fold to the productive energies of the country; distribute labor and let it find a just reward and ready payment, so that you shall have a just portion of consumers as well as producers; build up manufacturers of wool, of cotton, of iron, &c., on your own soil; create a home market, the best market you can have; buy nothing abroad which you can make at home. If we shall exhibit wisdom enough to do this we shall be able in tempore to meet all our obligations to the Government, to the country, to ourselves, and our children.

Loyal Men Must Rule—"Traitors Must Take Back Seats."

SPEECH OF HON. H. S. BUNDY,

OF OHIO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

May 5, 1866,

On the President's annual message, as in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union—

Mr. BUNDY. Mr. Speaker, it was not my purpose to make or write a speech during the present session of Congress on the general subject of "reconstruction" which has been so fully and ably discussed in this House; and in the reflections now to be submitted I do not propose to confine myself to any one of the great questions so well considered and presented by gentlemen on this floor. But in so far as the brief hour permits I will attempt a very cursory and general consideration of the "state of the country." Permit me, in passing, to say that during the great rebellion, after the supporters of the Government had become conscious that the rebels were in terrible earnest in their purposes and efforts to break it up by waging war for its overthrow, bringing into requisition such barbarous instrumentalities as suggested themselves to the hearts and minds of "fiends incarnate," that then, and only then, the Government, impelled by the loyal people thereof, adopted the rights and some of the usages of war to repel the assaults made upon it and them, not only by armed traitors in the South but by the more wary and cowardly adjuncts of organized treason in the North.

Thereafter, until the armies of the rebellion were overthrown by and surrendered to the armies of the Union, there was but one idea and purpose entertained by the loyal people everywhere in reference to the rights and privileges of rebels in the great work of restoring the Government. Public opinion had also definitely settled the rights and privileges of the loyal men of the country in the same great work of restoration. The popular heart had been touched, and the popular mind of the country had been instructed by the terrific incidents of the war, as waged by the enemy, and the patriotic efforts and utterances of the great leaders of the loyal hosts in civil life while grappling with the monster treason. Not a patriotic heart felt a single emotion nor a patriotic voice uttered a single sentiment that did not fully accord, harmonize, and demand the assertion of the great principle "That the loyal people of the country must govern the country."

This was not only demanded by loyalty, but was accepted and expected by treason. The people who by their sacrifices and valor had saved must govern the country. There was not a sign in the political firmament, nor a sound in the earth or atmosphere that portended any other purpose prior to the meeting of the Thirty-Ninth Congress. Early in the history of this session certain gentlemen gave out ominous indications that there would be an attempt at least to reverse the well-defined and clearly pronounced judgment of the whole country. These manifestations, however, did not seem to create any alarm and command much respect or attention, because their authors were and are the representatives of what is popularly known as the Democratic or copperhead party of the North, which party had contributed more to inaugurate and prosecute the rebellion than very many of its active and efficient leaders in the South. Congress and the country very naturally supposed they were only repeating themselves in disparaging the northern patriots and eulogising the southern rebels or making cheap proposals for their future coöperation when restored to power and place in the nation.

In the progress of time and the happening of events these indications assumed form and force until they developed in what we shall be pleased to name as the Democratic rebel theory of "reconstruction." The postulate of this theory is, "That once a State, always a State." The greatest if not the only objection to this theory rests principally, if not entirely, as to the scope and effect of the recognition of the principle given to it and claimed for it by its authors and supporters, to wit: the doctrine that "once a State, always a State," carries with it the right of each and every of the rebellious States to instant or immediate representation in the Government; and that they not only have, but have had that right during the entire period of the rebellion, and have retained all their relations to the Government the same as if their people had not rebelled. This theory carries with it as the logical and inevitable conclusion of such premises, that those States have all the while maintained and can now assert all the rights and privileges of States in the Union, and that there is no power vested in the Congress to delay or prevent them from resuming those rights or enjoying those privileges at their option and election. And because the Union majority in Congress, acting for and representing the great Union party of the country, does refuse or neglect to accept this theory as the true and only solution of the questions involved, it has been wantonly and bitterly assailed by traitors and rebels everywhere, North and South, and the terrors of another war have been invoked and the military power of the country summoned to drive from these Halls at the point of the bayonet the men who dare to scruple and refuse the insolent demands of traitors.

The unmitigated treason and criminality of such a demand, based upon such a wicked theory, need only to be stated to become obvious to every mind uninfluenced and uncorrupted by treason. If they are right, it necessarily follows that in the fall of 1864 when loyal men at home and in the field were concentrating all their energies, moral, political, and physical, to crush armed treason on the battle-field and sympathizing treason at home, putting forth stupendous efforts and submitting to great sacrifices to save the country from impending destruction, by electing a loyal President, a loyal Congress, and loyal Legislatures; that although triumphant, we gained no advantage over the rebels who were as persistently fighting to destroy the Government. Adopt this Democratic rebel theory and they get into Congress as early as we do, and according to their present hopes and expectations, they made at least an even race with us for the Presidency. Therefore the great solicitude of the loyal people of this country for the speedy crushing out of the rebellion in 1864, causing such unparalleled sacrifices of men and money, only resulted in the immediate investiture of their enemies with power; and this was the boon and the only object our brave boys were fighting and dying for on the bloody fields of the Wilderness.

But, sir, the most astounding thing connected with this plan is the assertion made by its authors and supporters, that in its presentation and advocacy here they are but carrying out the views of the President of the United States; that this is the "my policy" of which we have heard and seen so much. What audacity and shamelessness do these men exhibit when they dare rise in their places here and assert that this Democratic rebel scheme for the unconditional wholesale surrender of loyalty to treason is indorsed by the President!

Mr. Speaker, this ought not, cannot be. Are we to be told here that our President, elected by the great party who rallied around the flag and saved the country from impending ruin, and preserved the Government in its peril, shall so far forget the great principles enunciated by himself, defended and supported in that awful struggle of 1864, and which triumphed in his election to the second great office in the gift of a patriotic and magnanimous people, to whom he is indebted for his present high and commanding position and prospective renown, will now, in sight of the goal of his and their hopes and aspirations, basely betray the interests of humanity and good government by surrendering it and its loyal defenders into the power of its and their implacable foes? The proposition is too shocking, too alarming, and monstrous to be even imagined, to say nothing of the realized fact. If it becomes an accomplished fact the doctrine of total depravity will be more authoritatively settled and illustrated than by the great swindle of a Ketcham or the wholesale homicide of a Probst. Why, sir, many of the ideas as to the legitimate rights and status of the rebels in the restoration of the Government were derived by me from the teachings of Andrew Johnson while acting as military governor of Tennessee, enunciated in his celebrated speech of July 2, 1864, after his nomination as the Union candidate for the Vice Presidency of the United States. Hear those patriotic utterances:

"And let me say that now is the time to secure these fundamental principles, while the land is rent with anarchy and upheaves with the throes of a mighty revolution. While society is in this disordered state, and we are seeking security, let us fix the foundations of the Government on principles of eternal justice which will endure for all time.

"But, in calling a convention to restore the State, who shall restore and reestablish it? Shall the man who gave his influence and his means to destroy the Government? Is he to participate in the great work of reorganization? Shall he who brought this misery upon the State be permitted to control its destinies? If this be so, then all this precious blood of our brave soldiers and officers so freely poured out will have been wantonly spilled. All the glorious victories won by our noble armies will go for naught, and all the battle-fields which have been sown with dead heroes during the rebellion will have been made memorable in vain.

"Why all this carnage and devastation? It was that treason might be put down and traitors punished. Therefore I say that traitors should take a back seat in the work of restoration. If there be but five thousand men in Tennessee loyal to the Constitution, loyal to freedom, loyal to justice, these true and faithful men should control the work of reorganization and reformation absolutely. [Loud and prolonged applause.] I say that the traitor has ceased to be a citizen, and in joining the rebellion has become a public enemy. He forfeited his right to vote with loyal men when he renounced his citizenship and sought to destroy our Government.

"Treason must be made odious, and traitors must be punished and impoverished. Their great plantations must be seized, and divided into small farms, and sold to honest, industrious men. The day for protecting the lands and negroes of those authors of rebellion is past. It is high time it was. I have been most deeply pained at some things which have come under my observation. We get men in command who, under the influence of flattery, fawning, and caressing, grant protection to the rich traitor, while the poor Union man stands out in the cold, often unable to get a receipt or a voucher for his losses."

And now, sir, it is claimed by the friends and advocates of this Democratic rebel scheme that as President the then Governor Johnson will "go back" on these patriotic utterances by him iterated and reiterated subsequent thereto and betray the men who rallied to his support when he so much needed it, into the hands and power of their deadly enemies. Such a consummation would be more to be dreaded just at this time than would have been the defeat of General Grant and his hosts in the Wilderness.

The incredulous feature of this whole theory is, that the President will, in order to placate the rebels and their friends, betray almost the entire party that elected him.

Mr. Speaker, men do not generally act without motive or consideration. What object can the President have in thus betraying his friends and joining the enemy? What had the enemy to offer for such a sacrifice? They were bankrupt in principle and political character, having nothing to give save broken faith to their Government. They had not so much as their great exemplar and prototype, the "first rebel and State rights man had when from the pinnacle of an exceeding high mountain" he offered the Saviour all the kingdoms of the world for his homage.

But, admitting that they had the numerical forces and powers of a great party to offer for such sacrifice, and were the boon never so munificent, the voice of all history teaches that its acceptance would consign the recipient to the ignominious fate of all those who have betrayed trusts bestowed and accepted. Great services rendered by the acceptor in the field or the forum furnish no excuse or mitigation for subsequent treason. If he has fought with the beasts at Ephesus, and overcome all his foes and the foes of the Government, the quality of such acts will be determined by the future conduct of the victor. The ignominy of treason has never been and never will be mitigated or slurred over because the actor had once been faithful and valiant. It is a principle, sharply defined and well established in the moral and political world, that the virtues and good conduct of an early, will not atone or avail for the broken faith and corrupt practices of a later life. The virtues and character of those angels "who kept not their first estate" have never been esteemed as paragons because they were once "angels of light." The Christian world has never abated jot or tittle of its execration of the treason of Judas because he was once "numbered with the twelve."

The fact that Benedict Arnold raised and commanded one of the first companies in the Continental army, and, "side by side" with Ethan Allen, entered and captured Ticonderoga, and was the first to enter and the last to leave Canada in the early and dark days of the Revolution, has not and will not relieve his name from the immortality of infamy which attaches thereto for his subsequent perfidy and treason to his country. No, sir, the earlier associations but magnify and intensify the infamy of the latter. Beside, sir, the ignominy and infamy of treason either to friends, principle, or Government seems to concentrate and abide on him that receives rather than him that gives the stipend as the price thereof. The man who gave the thirty pieces of silver "has been forgotten and clean out of mind" for eighteen hundred years, while the recipient has been and will continue to be damned to perpetual infamy, world without end.

Again, sir, who are these new converts and defenders of the alleged policy of the President? We may answer that they are—

1. Every man who voluntarily fought in the

HO. OF REPS.

Loyal Men Must Rule—Mr. Bundy.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

rebel army, or served in any capacity in the rebel cause, who compose the southern wing of the late Democratic party. Here permit me to say, without intending disrespect to any, that such constitute the brains and the courage of that party.

2. The northern wing of the late Democratic party, which was led in 1862, 1863, 1864, and 1865, by the Vallandighams, the Woods, Seymours, et al., but who, in 1866, are praying and working to be put again into the leading strings of Jeff. Davis, A. H. Stephens, and others of their southern allies. I say the late Democratic party, because in 1866 they appear to have doffed their old name and uniform, and are now happy and rejoice in the cognomen of the Johnson party. These are they who, during the entire conflict of arms, like Job's war horse, "smelled the battle afar off," and who, by their speeches, practices, and votes during the same period, gave all possible aid to the rebellion, which added at least two years to the sanguinary conflict.

3. Bounty-jumpers, skeddaddlers from the drafts, deserters from the armies, cowardly soldiers who were prosecuted for misconduct, and rascally contractors.

4. A few original Union men who are made to believe that the President does in fact favor such an infernal policy and yet have confidence in his patriotism and integrity.

5. A small number of sore-heads, and those whose acute nasal organs snuff presidential patronage on the breeze which they have helped to evoke and which they hope and pray may blow them some good.

Presidential patronage after all is the great leverage power that moves all this mass and is the centripetal force that impels them inward toward the President. This patronage is the great magnet that attracts and holds all these discordant elements in solution. The indiscriminate bestowal of Government patronage is the "threefold cord," the cohesive power of public plunder that is to blend this heterogeneous mass into one homogeneous whole. Treason is to be made odious and traitors are to be punished by its free distribution. Anxious to receive and endure the just retribution for their crimes, Alexander H. Stephens and Herschel V. Johnson are ready and willing to be offered up as living sacrifices in the Senate of the United States, and if it please God they are willing to endure such punishment the remainder of their natural lives, even should the days of their years be threescore and ten, provided always that the Government resume specie payment as to them immediately, and provided further, that the State of Georgia does not in the mean time renew the attempt to secede, in which event they must again go with their State. What a host of patriots are anxious to be immolated in the same way, suffering the just punishment for treason, making it intensely odious. "They would suffer on their threescore years" and finally "seize the martyr's crown."

Mr. Speaker, the question thus submitted to the consideration of this House and the country by these men is not the "restoration" of the Government, but the immediate, unconditional surrender and ultimate destruction of the Government. Thereby the rebels would achieve in the political arena that which all their armies under their great leaders, together with the aid and comfort of the Vallandighams, the Woods, and all their traitorous hosts in the North could not effect in the field or at the ballot-box. Those men never had any real sympathy with the Government during its awful struggle for life. True, in the summer and fall of 1862, they pretended to favor the prosecution of the war for the Union, and worked diligently to induce Union men to go to the field with the secret understanding that Democrats would stay at home and vote at the ensuing election. Ohio, New York, and Pennsylvania responded very promptly and generously to the call of the Government that year. Ninetenths of all the volunteers were Union men, who would have voted the Union ticket had they remained at home, but being absent from the polls the so-called Democrats were enabled to elect fourteen of the nineteen members of Congress from Ohio, and gained largely in the other States for the same reason.

The result of that election was barely transmitted over the wires when Vallandigham and the entire party were rejoicing over the fruits of their perfidy, holding large and enthusiastic meetings all over the State, claiming their victories as a verdict of the people against the administration of Mr. Lincoln and against the further prosecution of the war.

But these men raised the shouts of a rebel victory a little too early, as did the rebel armies at Richmond in 1864, when they heard of the nomination of McClellan for the Presidency. The cause for which patriots were battling was a just and holy one; and when Union men were cheated at home or stricken down in the field, like Roderic Dhu, it sounded its bugle, and other patriots rushed to its standard and overwhelmed the traitors. And so it will ever be in so just a cause.

"They never fall who die in a great cause;
The block may suck their gore;
Their heads may sadden in the sun; their limbs
Be strung to city gates and castle walls.
But still their spirit walks abroad, though years
Elapse and others share as dark a gloom.
They but augment the deep and sweeping thoughts
Which overpower all others.
And conduct the world at last to freedom."

The great object to be achieved by the success of this scheme is the play of the old rôle, "a united South and divided North." The uniting and consolidating of the two wings of the late Democratic party, with such additions thereto as it is believed, intended, and expected that presidential patronage will secure from nominal Union men; with such material they expect to consolidate all the factions named in one great conservative party, organized and ready for the campaign of 1868, relying almost exclusively upon Government patronage to aggregate this discordant mass, and blend it into a sympathizing whole, if indeed, the President shall be so conspicuously unfortunate as to fall into their hands.

What a motley army of mercenaries! Well may the President turn upon them and say, "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, copperheads; ye do not follow me because of the mighty works which I do, but for the loaves and the fishes."

This party when thus consolidated is to be baptised "The conservative party of the Constitution." The traitors, semi-traitors, bounty jumpers, skeddaddlers from drafts, cowardly soldiers, rascally contractors, with the very few Union men, will all look and act so much like traitors that the future ethnologist will be compelled to classify them all as rebels. Presidential patronage is to be the sword of Brennus, whose massive weight will make truth and justice kick the beam. It is to be the all-healing restorative which will bring together and cement the dis severed parts into one grand whole. They claim that in such a party, composed of such elements, there is enough good men who once sympathized and acted with loyalty to dignify and give character to the whole.

This will be simply impossible. The Union faction will become so thoroughly ingrafted into the rebel vine and so completely identified with the parent stock that a distinction cannot be noted.

Mr. Speaker, I call to mind a single analogy which will serve to illustrate my views of the result. "Once upon a time a cute Yankee visited the West to dispose of a wonderful invention of his prolific brain. He named the invention 'nerve and bone liniment, and all-healing restorative.' His best test as to its remarkable qualities was made upon a sheep-killing dog whose tail was severed from the body. The restorative being applied to the stump a new tail was immediately produced, looking precisely like the original. Seeing the magical effect of this application, he also applied the restorative to the dis severed tail, and as instantly a new dog was produced at the end of the tail, looking precisely like the original, and the unfortunate owner was then and there possessed of two sheep-killing dogs, looking so nearly alike that he could not tell 'tother from which."

But, sir, the most presumptuous and the most mendacious assertion of all is, that their scheme was inaugurated and supported by the late President Lincoln. The bare statement that the late martyred President, during his wise administration of the Government, ever entertained a single thought other than that of preserving the Government for loyal men is simply absurd. It is a foul slander upon his fair fame and good name. The enemies of the country, not content with pursuing him while he lived with the most cruel and malignant warfare and slander, now that he is dead seek to blast his fair fame. Killed by the hands that had been inspired and nerved by the teachings of such men as Vallandigham and S. S. Cox, of Ohio, the latter of whom said in the Chicago convention, "For less offense than Mr. Lincoln had been guilty of the English people had chopped off the head of the first Charles. In his opinion Lincoln and Davis ought to be brought to the same block together." They have brought Lincoln's head to the block, but Davis still lives, and will live and be feted by these men till he dies a natural death, and then he will be apotheosized and canonized in their hearts forever.

Captain Koontz, of Pennsylvania, a McClellan leader in that convention, said, "The people will rise; and if they cannot put Lincoln out of power by the ballot they will by the bullet," which elicited rounds of applause in the convention. And by the teachings of the so-called Democratic press of the North, one of which, the La Crosse (Wisconsin) Democrat of August 29, 1864, said:

"If he is elected to misgovern for another four years we trust some bold hand will pierce his heart with a dagger point for the public good."

These quotations might be multiplied indefinitely, but these will exhibit the animus of nearly all the Democratic leaders and press of the North. And now, I say, that he has been killed in pursuance of and under the direction of such teachings, they seek to damn at once and forever the fairest fame that appears "on the landmarks of the cliffs of time," by connecting him with such an infernal policy as we are now considering. A sense of shame ought to mantle their cheeks, if, indeed, there remains such a passion or emotion in such abandoned organizations. If he was in favor of surrendering to traitors while living why did they denounce him then and finally kill him.

Mr. Speaker, there are no evidences of record that President Lincoln ever assumed to have an exclusive presidential policy for the restoration of the rebel States. But the contrary appears. In his proclamation accompanying his annual message of December 8, 1863, he explicitly declared that—

"To avoid misunderstanding it may be proper to say that this proclamation so far as it relates to State governments has no reference to States wherein loyal State governments have all the while been maintained. And for the same reason it may be proper further to say that whether members sent to Congress from any State shall be admitted to seats constitutionally rests exclusively with the respective Houses, and not to any extent with the Executive."

Again:

"And still further that this proclamation is intended to present the people of the States wherein the national authority has been suspended and loyal State governments have been subverted a mode [not the mode] in and by which the national and loyal State governments may be reestablished within said States, or any of them; and while the mode prescribed is the best the Executive can suggest with his present impressions, it must not be understood that no other possible mode would be acceptable."

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Loyal Men Must Rule—Mr. Bundy.

HO. OF REPS.

From these extracts it will be seen that Mr. Lincoln entertained no purpose of inaugurating a "presidential policy" and cramming it down the throats of the Congress nolens volens, but, on the contrary, averred as his deliberate judgment and honest sentiment (he never had any other) that the right, the power, and prerogative of admitting members sent to Congress from any State rested exclusively with Congress, and not to any extent with the Executive, and that while he was compelled to present "a mode," being the best that he could suggest at the time, "it must not be understood that no other possible mode would be accepted."

This, Mr. Speaker, is not the language or the manner of an imperious dictator, but the exhibition of an honest effort made by the modest Executive and wise statesman to inaugurate and set on foot such incipient or inchoate measures as might ultimately lead to the restoration of a distracted country. I defy all his bitter enemies, North and South, who now have the presumption and mendacity to be the pretended supporters of any alleged policy of Mr. Lincoln, to produce a single line or paragraph of his, spoken or written, that will warrant the belief or assertion that the late President ever entertained in the remotest degree any purpose to admit disloyal men to seats in the Congress of the United States, as is now claimed by the supporters of this scheme and the pretended supporters of the present President.

In the last speech Mr. Lincoln ever made on earth, and as his last will and testament to a disordered country, he said, speaking of his acts as the Executive:

"In this I have done just so much and no more than the public knows. In the annual message of December, 1863, and accompanying proclamation, I presented a plan of reconstruction (as the phrase goes) which I promised if adopted, should be acceptable to and sustained by the executive government of the nation. I distinctly stated that this was not the only plan which might possibly be acceptable, and I also distinctly protested that the Executive claimed no right to say when or whether members should be admitted to seats in Congress from such States. This plan was, in advance, submitted to the then Cabinet and distinctly approved by every member of it. One of them suggested" * * * * "that I should omit the protest against my own power in regard to the admission of members of Congress."

I take this from President Lincoln's speech after the fall of Richmond, April 11, 1865, three days before he was assassinated. In his proclamation of May 29, 1865, President Johnson fails to "protest against his power in regard to the admission of members of Congress," and the fair inference is that the same member of the Cabinet who tried to induce Mr. Lincoln to omit the protest against his power, &c., prevailed with Mr. Johnson. At any rate that important protest against the legislative power of the President is omitted in the proclamation of Mr. Johnson. Subsequent events have made that omission significant.

But, Mr. Speaker, as all the malignant shafts of his vindictive enemies fell harmless at the feet of the wisest statesman the world has ever seen, while living, so now they will be more conspicuously impotent, in even shading his fair fame when dead. His fame is safe, for it is—

"Woe unto us, not him, for he rests well."

And—

"The earth that bears him dead bears
Not alive so stout a gentleman."

"The good knight is dust,
His good sword is rust,
And his soul is with the saints we trust."

It may be said of him as of one of the olden time patriots, that—

"By him the people held their native rights
Unimpaired, unoppressed; the great restrained
From lawless violence, and the poor from Rapine by him—him their mutual shield."

He was emphatically—

"The rudder's guidance and the curb's restraint."

When his enemies shall have rotted and their memories perished from among men, it will be said of Abraham Lincoln that he—

39TH CONG. 1ST SESS.—No. 14.

"Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking off."

His tomb in after times will be a shrine for the pilgrimage of freedom's votaries, and upon his grave the future patriot will relume the dying flame of liberty.

But, Mr. Speaker, there are a few, a "very select few" gentlemen upon this floor who were elected as unconditional Unionists, as I am advised, that by their speeches in very general and indefinite terms propose an immaterial modification of the Democratic rebel scheme of reconstruction, having the same general postulate, to wit, "Once a State always a State;" but in the application of the principle involved in their theory, the right to representation of such State in Congress is limited to the loyal people thereof, requiring no action on the part of their respective State governments to put them in "practical relations with the Federal Government," and forbidding the action of Congress in the same direction. And this they claim par excellence as the "my policy" of the President. Judging from such intimations as are permitted to transpire, these gentlemen have the ear of and the inside track with the President. If this scheme at the first blush should seem more loyal and plausible than the Democratic rebel scheme, it will be found to be wholly impracticable in its application to the case in hand. As the case now stands it cannot effect a loyal restoration of the entire Government. For it is not claimed that any of the eleven rebel States not now represented elected or pretended to elect a single loyal Representative to Congress except the States of Tennessee and Arkansas, and perhaps one from North Carolina who has no constituency behind that can sustain him. There is not much doubt but that Representatives who can honestly take the oath from Tennessee and Arkansas will be admitted to this Congress, and perhaps at its present session. At any rate, for one, I am now and have been in favor of the admission of such men from those States, and will so vote when opportunity permits.

But as to the remaining nine rebel States no one, I believe, who is or has been regarded as thoroughly loyal, claims or pretends to claim that they have elected a single Representative who can conscientiously take the required oath, (the same oath that every member of the present Congress was required to take before he could have a place on this floor,) unless it be the one from North Carolina, as above indicated. Why, Mr. Speaker, there are not enough loyal men in any one of the nine States to fill and execute the offices of postmaster, assessor, and collector of internal revenue. That this view of the political condition of those States and their people is correct is evidenced by the message of the President now lying upon your table appealing to Congress to modify or repeal the test oath so that he can procure the services of enough men in those States to carry the mails, take charge of the post offices, and assess and collect the Government taxes therein, which would again bring unrepenting and unrelenting rebels into the high places of the nation, there to fester and batten and riot as in days of yore.

Thousands of the brave boys once in blue are "waiting and watching" "for something to turn up;" some suitable recognition of their services, sufferings, and sacrifices by that Government they have so nobly and heroically saved. These men could take the required oath. They are abundantly qualified in every way to discharge the duties of these various offices that rebels must have a "dispensation" to enable them to hold.

So much for this preëminently "my policy" which in following to its legitimate and logical conclusion, practically lands in "the slough of despond" with the Democratic rebel theory, or else it must be merged in the Union policy hereinafter stated. We hope that its fate may be with the latter, for it will be much more pleasant to cooperate with the former friends of the Union and the party who saved it than to be compelled to separate from them for any cause. But unless they adhere to the well-defined and established principles of the party, as enunciated by its great leaders and accepted by the masses, painful and apparently destructive as it may be, separation will come, not by any act of the large body of the party, for it will move straight forward to the accomplishment of its great purposes unseduced by patronage and unawed by power, its only aspiration being:

"Thy spirit, Independence, let me share;
Lord of the lion heart and eagle eye,
Thy steps I follow, with my bosom bare,
Nor heed the storm that howls along the sky."

If, indeed, offenses must come, woe unto him by whom they come.

The great Union party in and out of Congress believe with Governor Johnson, then of Tennessee:

"That the traitor has ceased to be a citizen, and in joining the rebellion has become a public enemy. He forfeited his right to vote with loyal men when he renounced his citizenship and sought to destroy our Government."

They accepted that as the law of the case in 1864 pronounced by one of their great leaders; they carried that law into effect in November of that year by electing its author as the Vice President of the United States. It was good law then, it is good law now, and they adhere to it. They care very little about the "dead State" or "live State" theories, and only regard the attempted distinction as one of form and not of substance. But they do regard as of vital importance the real status of voluntary rebels and the substantive rights and privileges of voluntary Unionists in the great work of restoration. Fix these upon an enduring, fair basis, and the metaphysical publicists may dispute as much as they like about immaterial matters connected with this great subject. The Union men in Congress and out of Congress very modestly, yet earnestly and firmly, assert that Congress has the absolute right, and it is its duty to exercise that right, to determine who shall and who shall not be admitted to seats therein from the rebel States. This position, I take it, will be maintained at all hazards as against all antagonists, no matter whence they come or whither they go. And in fixing the character of such representation it is as firmly determined that none but loyal men shall rule America. "Traitors must take back seats in the work of restoration." If in order to secure such a construction of future Government it has become necessary to have certain amendments made to the Constitution, then let that precede complete restoration. No loyal man doubts that there is such a necessity and that such an exigency is now upon us. Now is the time to effect the work; so said Andrew Johnson in 1864:

"I conclude that Governments can and ought to be changed and amended to conform to the wants, to the requirements and progress and the enlightened spirit of the age. And let me say, now is the time to secure these fundamental principles, while the land is rent with anarchy and upheaves with the throes of a mighty revolution. While society is in this disordered state, and we are seeking security, let us fix the foundation of the Government on the principles of eternal justice which will endure for all time."—Speech of Governor Johnson at Nashville, July 2, 1864.

This was good political doctrine then enunciated in words fitly spoken; it is just as sound now, and will remain so, commanding the homage of every loyal heart and demanding the earnest, vigorous effort of every loyal man until, indeed, the Government of this country shall be finally and forever rescued from the grasp of the traitor, and its foundations fixed "on principles of eternal justice which will endure for all time."

To this end the committee on reconstruction has just agreed upon a plan which, if adopted

SENATE.

Funding of the National Debt—Mr. Sherman.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

and carried into final effect, will go very far to secure these grand results.

As I now understand it from a very hasty perusal of the series of the proposed amendments to the Federal Constitution, I shall most cheerfully support it. The first section, looking to the security and defense of the personal and property rights of the citizen in all the States, is certainly just and right, and must commend itself to the judgment of every fair-minded man.

The second section, looking to the proper and equitable distribution of political power in all the States, fixing the basis of representation in each, is certainly just, and the rights of the loyal white men in this country demand its adoption as a part of the fundamental law of the land; so that a white voter in the North shall hereafter be just as good and no better than a white voter in the South. No one but the aristocrat, the rebel, or the demagogue will oppose the adoption of that article.

As to the third section it is not very material, in my judgment, whether that is retained or not as a part of the general plan, provided it be followed up by the passage into law of the accompanying bill, which provides for the disfranchisement of certain descriptions of voluntary rebels. Whether the third section is in or out matters very little to me.

As to the fourth and last section, there certainly can be no valid objection urged against its adoption and ratification. As a whole, then, let this plan receive the hearty support of every Union man in and out of Congress, and the work of restoration will be rapid, fair, and easy, asking and demanding no more of the people in the unrepresented States than we are willing to impose on ourselves, and cheerfully bear. With all deference to gentlemen on the other side, we do think a northern man is just as good as a southern man. We do not want to be compelled to look up to him or have him look up to us, but to meet all such upon the common democratic plain "seeing eye to eye," each feeling himself to be just as good, just as much of a man as the other; no better and no worse. If Democrats shall persist in their purposes and practices of looking up to and toadying after southern gentlemen, we cannot help it. There is no law against flunkysim in this country, and I suppose we should be met with violent opposition from that quarter if we attempted to pass one. It would be regarded as an "act in restraint of personal liberty," and declared by them as unconstitutional.

But, Mr. Speaker, it is said in certain quarters that the Union party cannot carry out its plans because the President whom it elected now stands opposed to it and will exert all the force and influence of his position to defeat it. "That he opposes all amendments to the Constitution," &c. Well, if this be so, we shall have to try and get along without him. For one I shall part company with him "more in sorrow than in anger."

My faith is strong that the great principles avowed and battled for by the Union party are immortal, and it is not in the power of any one man however exalted his position to defeat their ultimate triumph. If, indeed, such shall be their fate, well might the patriot invoke the curse of the poet, and say—

"Oh, for a heart to curse the slave,
Whose treason, like a deadly blight,
Comes o'er the councils of the brave,
And blasts them in their hour of might."

Behind us, Mr. Speaker, is a loyal, confident, intelligent people, uncorrupted and unseduced. Their voice is potential, and it is well for a suffering country that they are "the power behind the throne that is greater than the throne itself." That people never will be destroyed. As to Presidents and Congressmen, "a breath can make them as a breath hath made," and it is to that solemn, that grand tribunal we must make our final appeal, and before such a forum I can have no fears as to the verdict.

The conflict of arms may be over, but the conflict of opinion still rages unabated. In my judgment, it will be "sharp and short." Union men everywhere must close their ranks, then—

"One last great battle for the right,
One short, sharp struggle to be free.
To do is to succeed—our fight
Is waged in Heaven's approving sight,
The smile of God is victory."

Funding of the National Debt.

SPEECH OF HON. JOHN SHERMAN,

OF OHIO,

IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE,

May 22, 1866.

The Senate having under consideration the bill (S. No. 300) to reduce the rate of interest on the national debt, and for funding the same—

Mr. SHERMAN said:

Mr. PRESIDENT: This bill came to us in the usual mode from the Secretary of the Treasury, and its purpose is to facilitate the negotiation of a five per cent. loan. It has been with me, during the present session of Congress, an earnest desire to see the interest on the debt of the United States reduced to not exceeding the rate of five per cent.; but the Secretary of the Treasury, as will be gathered from his public documents, hesitated somewhat as to whether he could negotiate a loan bearing that rate of interest. After full consideration, however, he presented this bill as containing the terms upon which, in his judgment, this loan could be negotiated. It came to us, and by general consent was reported to the Senate, printed for the purpose of attracting attention and criticism, and was subsequently considered by the committee, and reported. Its history is now known to the Senate.

Before considering the specific terms of the bill, it will be necessary for me to state the condition of the public debt. By the statement laid on our tables on the 1st of May, it appears that the ascertained debt of the United States at that time was $2,827,676,871; and from that may be properly deducted the amount of money, coin, and currency on hand of $137,987,028 82. To this aggregate must be necessarily added quite a number of items, some of which have been acted upon at the present session of Congress, and some of which will be acted upon before our adjournment, the mere statement of which will show the Senate the probable condition of the public debt within the next year or two. The largest sum, probably, that will be required; or that is now pending before us, is the bill introduced from the Committee on Military Affairs for the equalization of bounties, which will take, if passed, near $200,000,000. What will be the fate of that measure I have no means of knowing. The Pacific railroad, now being constructed, will probably cost in the course of the next five years something like $50,000,000, and over $100,000,000 in the aggregate. If the various branches that are entitled to bounty should comply with the terms of the law by building, each of them, one hundred miles during the year, it will take $6,400,000; but the presumption is that some of those branches will fail to comply with the law.

In the settlements with the States for expenses incurred for the military service in an irregular way, we have already appropriated I think about ten million dollars to the States of Missouri, Kansas, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia, and there are other claims of the same character which will be presented by other States. I am told that Indiana, Kentucky perhaps, and Ohio will have such claims. Ohio has a claim of that kind growing out of the Morgan raid. The probability is that this class of claims now unadjusted but not disputed, the principle having been settled, will take $20,000,000. The largest yet allowed was to the State of Missouri, which I think amounted to some seven or eight millions.

Mr. HENDERSON. Seven millions.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then there is the measure presented by a prominent member of the House of Representatives, which, I hope, will not pass, and upon which I have a very clear judgment—the proposition to assume a portion of the expenses of the States in raising men during the rebellion; the proposition generally known as Mr. BLAINE's bill, and which, should it receive the sanction of Congress, would take, by its terms, $116,000,000. As I have seen but very little effort to pass that bill, I lay that aside as not a probable burden upon the Treasury.

Then there are classes of large private claims growing out of the war, many of which are being constantly pressed upon us, and which will take probably millions of dollars, but the precise amount of which no man can estimate. The bill passed the other day for the relief of the contractors for the iron-clads, and the claims made by the States of Kentucky and Tennessee and the various border States for damages caused by the war, and claims for property used by the Army, are specimens of this class of claims, amounting, I might say, to fifties and hundreds of millions. I take it the great body of these claims will be rejected upon the general principles of public law; and therefore, in estimating the probable burden on the Treasury, I do not put this item very large, especially as I see a disposition in Congress to criticize very accurately this class of claims.

It therefore is very certain that in the most favorable aspect of affairs the public debt of the United States might fairly now be estimated at $3,000,000,000. That is the amount stated by the Secretary of the Treasury in his annual report, and I think it is not overstated. With the strong probability of passing the bill for the equalization of bounties, it may be understated; but I take it as a correct estimate.

It will be observed that this debt is of the most diverse character. It consists, not only of the unliquidated claims that I have specified, but the public debt which is ascertained is provided for by twenty-seven different laws and as many as forty different forms of securities. The report on the finances, which was laid on your table at the commencement of the present session, contains a list of these various loans, covering six or seven pages. Under some of these laws there are a great diversity of issues. For instance, under the seven-thirty law there are three different series of notes, and under the five-twenty law there are five different series, containing somewhat different provisions. The seven-thirties vary somewhat, although it is very difficult precisely to state the difference.

Mr. FESSENDEN. The difference arises from the dates of issue, principally.

Mr. SHERMAN. Partly, but in the seven-thirties the difference is also in the terms of the bond. The principal difference is that in one class of those bonds the interest may be at the pleasure of the Government paid in gold at six per cent. I merely allude to this diversity of loans to show that the natural idea of every one connected with the finances of the Government would be, as early as possible, to consolidate and put in some uniform form the public debt of the United States. This is an obvious idea. It is now difficult for the people of the United States to understand any but two or three of these loans, and none but a skillful financier, engaged himself in the purchase and sale of stocks, can tell the various differences of value between the different forms of securities and the reasons of those differences. It is obvious, therefore, that for public convenience it is necessary to consolidate these loans as soon as possible into one distinct form, so that we shall have nothing to provide for but the interest of the debt and such portion of the principal as the policy of the United States may require us to pay off.

There is another reason for funding our pub-

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Funding of the National Debt—Mr. Sherman.

SENATE.

lic debt. It is not a question of policy, but it is a question of necessity. A large portion of this debt matures very soon, and it must be either renewed or paid off. It can only be paid off by selling other bonds, and consequently there is necessity of prescribing the terms of these new securities. I have here a table showing when this public debt matures:

Character of issue.	Amount outstanding.	When payable.
Temporary loan, four per cent.....	$612,227 98	Due.
do do five per cent.....	21,664,710 65	Due.
do do six per cent.....	67,263,163 47	Due.
Certificates of indebtedness, six per cent.....	55,921,000 00	Due.
One and two years notes, five per cent.....	32,536,901 00	Due.
Total amount due.....	$178,001,008 10
Six per cent. bonds (five-twenties).....	$514,780,500 00	After May 1, 1867.
Six per cent. bonds.....	9,415,250 00	After Dec. 31, 1867.
Six per cent. compound interest notes.....	167,012,141 00	1867.
Seven and three-tenths Treasury notes.....	234,400,000 00	After June 30, 1867.
Total maturing in 1867.....	$925,607,891 00
Six per cent. bonds.....	$8,908,341 80	After July 1, 1868.
Seven and three-tenths Treasury notes.....	65,600,000 00	After March 3, 1868.
do do do do.....	300,000,000 00	After March 3, 1868.
do do do do.....	230,000,000 00	After March 3, 1868.
Total maturing in 1868.....	$604,508,341 80
Six per cent. bonds (five-twenties).....	$100,000,000 00	After Nov. 1, 1869.
Six per cent. bonds (five-twenties).....	$50,590,300 00	After Nov. 1, 1870.
Five per cent. bonds.....	$7,022,000 00	After Jan. 1, 1871.
Five per cent. bonds.....	$20,000,000 00	After Jan. 1, 1874.
Five per cent. bonds (ten-forties).....	172,770,100 00	After March 1, 1874.
Total maturing in 1874.....	$192,770,100 00
Six per cent bonds.....	$18,415,000 00	After Dec. 31, 1880.
Six per cent. bonds.....	$50,000,000 00	After June 30, 1881.
Six per cent. bonds.....	192,252,430 00	After June 30, 1881.
Six per cent. bonds.....	75,000,000 00	After June 30, 1881.
Six per cent. bonds (Oregon war).....	1,016,000 00	After July 1, 1881.
Total maturing in 1881.....	$265,268,430 00
Six per cent. bonds (U. P. R. R. Co.).....	$640,000 00	After Nov. 1, 1895.
Six per cent. bonds (C. P. R. R. Co.).....	1,898,000 00
Total maturing in 1895.....	$2,538,000 00

It will thus be seen that while the pressure of the principal of the public debt is not very great now, yet $178,000,000 is within the reach of the Secretary, and that next year and the year following both the seven-thirties and five-twenties come within his reach for payment or conversion.

Mr. CLARK. I suppose it is not a necessity that they must be redeemed. It is at the option of the Secretary.

Mr. SHERMAN. I say it is within the power of the Secretary.

Mr. CLARK. The Government may have a longer time if it chooses.

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, by paying six per cent. interest in gold. I wish simply now to show that it is within the power of the Government, if it can reduce the rate of interest, to do so consistently with the stipulations of the bonds.

But there is another argument derived also from another table that I have before me. All modern nations who are now dealing very largely in public debt have as a matter of policy reduced their public debt to some simple, tangible form, so that in every country there is a specific debt known to the people of that country, with a fixed rate of interest prescribed by law; and the whole of the public debt is generally put in that form as soon as possible. England had formerly the same diversity of securities that we now have; but it has been the policy of English statesmen, from William Pitt down to this time, to reduce that debt into one simple form, so that nothing but the interest should be provided for, and the result has been that the whole of the public debt of England is reduced to a three per cent. debt except about one million pounds. The total amount of the public debt of Great Britain is £799,802,139, and the whole of this may now be said to be a three per cent. annuity, the principal, however, redeemable at the pleasure of the Government. In France I find the same thing has occurred. The term "rentes" generally describes the great mass of the public debt. I think all the debt, except a few technical annuities, given probably for specific purposes, one called "obligations trentenaires," and some floating debt, is now funded in the form of rentes. The debt of Russia, also, is now funded into three, four and a half, and five per cent. stocks—the great body of it in the form of five per cent. foreign loans. The same statement holds good in regard to all European countries. Every nation in Europe, where a public debt has existed in some cases for centuries, has adopted it as a principle to reduce that debt to as simple a form as possible, so that the interest alone would be a charge upon the treasury, and that a sinking fund should pay off gradually such portion of the principal of the public debt as the policy of the Government would allow.

It is manifest that if the debt of the United States was now reduced to one simple form of a five per cent. stock or bond, so that the United States need not look except to the payment of the interest of that debt, and to the payment or purchase of such portion of the principal as its policy might dictate, much of our financial difficulty would be removed. What is now the trouble with us? Why cannot this project be adopted? The answer is that a very large portion of the principal of the public debt becomes due in a short time, and the Secretary must provide for the payment of that principal; and this very necessity of going constantly into the market to renew these loans imposes upon him nearly all the burdens of his office. And yet I do not arraign the policy that was adopted during the war of making short loans. It was proper to do it, it was necessary to do it. It was not proper for this Government to stipulate to pay these high rates of interest for a long period of time, and therefore during the war it was necessary to make short loans at a high rate of interest; but it was always done in view of reducing the rate of interest after the war should be over, and with a view of consolidating this whole debt. The policy, so far as I know, of those connected with the finances of the country, has been to keep ever in view the principle of redeemability in every form of security issued during the war. Therefore the five-twenty note was payable or might be paid after five years. The seven-thirties and the various forms of securities that have been issued are within the reach of the Government in a short time. Why was this idea so carefully kept in view? Simply to enable the United States to retain the advantage of paying the principal after the war when loans could be negotiated on more favorable terms. And now we may properly reap the benefit of this wise policy. We may now enter the money market with the laurels of victory and peace. We need no longer compete with the industrial interests of our citizens in borrowing money, but may prescribe our own terms and renew our debts on conditions consistent with our vast power and resources.

Now, Mr. President, the only additional question I need present in this connection is, is this the time to fund the public debt? I say emphatically it is. I believe we have wasted four or five precious months in doing it. I believe that the process would have been easier at the beginning of this session than it will be now; and why? In order to fund the public debt of the United States a large amount of currency is necessary; but it is necessary for us to reduce our currency as soon as possible. We cannot get back to specie payments without some reduction of the currency. Every one desires to resume specie payments. Before we return to specie payments this debt ought to be funded. It cannot be funded on as favorable terms after we return to specie payments. The very abundance of the currency obviously enables us to fund the debt at a low rate of interest; and it is just and right, as this debt was contracted upon an inflated currency, that upon that same currency the debt ought to be funded in its permanent form. The effect of the superabundance of paper money is to reduce the rate of interest; that is obvious. At the time of the celebrated John Law excitement, the rate of interest in France was reduced to one and a half per cent. by the overwhelming amount of paper money. I say that now, above all others, is the time to fund this debt in some form of security. If we postpone it six months or a year it will only add to our difficulties. The longer we postpone it, and the longer we leave this amount of floating indebtedness upon the market of the United States, the less will we be able to fund it at a low rate of interest and on favorable terms. And, sir, we have no choice about it. We have got to do it, because this debt is maturing, and we have got to put it in some other form unless we intend—to use a very expressive phrase—to shin it, and go into the market to renew short loans. This debt matures, and it has got to be paid. It can be paid, not by taxes but by selling new bonds and new loans; and therefore we must determine upon some form of funding this debt as soon as practicable. And this brings me to the main question involved in this bill, and that is what rate of interest the United States ought to pay on our public debt. Upon $830,000,000 we are now paying interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent., higher than we allow our citizens to exact from each other. Upon the great part of our debt we pay six per cent. in gold, equivalent at present rates to seven and eight tenths per cent. in the currency for which the bonds were sold. We exempt our public creditors from the burdens of taxation. The question is now whether we are willing to continue to pay such interest, and whether we are unable to meet our obligations on more favorable terms.

SENATE.

Funding of the National Debt—Mr. Sherman.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

And, sir, in considering this question, I wish it distinctly understood that I would not arbitrarily change any contract with a public creditor. Public faith is the most precious jewel of a nation, and I would not tarnish ours by any violation of promise or contract. So far as we have stipulated we must pay; our credit demands it. An old writer says:

"This is the great thing called credit. Credit is a consequence, not a cause; the effect of a substance not a substance: it is the sunshine, not the sun—the quickening something—call it what you will, that gives life to trade, gives being to the branches and moisture to the roots. It is the oil to the wheel, the marrow in the bone, the blood in the veins, and the spirits in the heart of all the négoce, trade, cash, and commerce of the world."

Credit is based, not only upon a strict compliance with contracts and ability to perform them, but also upon great care in making them.

We must have prudence in making a contract, honor in observing it, and ability to perform it. These are the elements of public as well as private credit. Our history as a nation has shown that we have the means and will to fill our contracts. It is for us to show our prudence in making these for the future. In private dealing we will not trust a man who has great means and ample property if he is reckless in making engagements, but we do trust a prudent man who has no resources but his prudence and probity. As a nation we ought not to impair our credit by making engagements more onerous than other nations do, unless we are compelled to do so by stern necessity. Now, sir, I cannot but think that it is discreditable to us as a nation that we are now issuing our bonds at a higher rate of interest than any Christian nation of the world; that we now continue to issue six per cent. bonds, principal and interest payable in gold, at a coin value of seventy-five cents on the dollar. I do think the fact that all European nations, with all their complicated relations and expensive forms of government, can sell their securities at a more favorable rate than we, is an unpleasant fact no longer justified by the relative condition of the several countries. While we were in war, our Government in discredit, and our own people fearing the result of the struggle, we were justified by necessity in paying high rates; but to do so now is a confession of weakness that I see no foundation for.

Let us test this question by a more detailed comparison of the rates of interest paid by this and other countries, and of the resources of each. I have a table showing the debt, population, and annual interest paid by leading nations:

Countries.	Total debt.	Population.	Per capita.	Annual interest.	Per capita.
Great Britain.	$4,000,000,000	30,000,000	$33.33	$120,000,000	$4.00
United States.	3,000,000,000	35,000,000	87.70	180,000,000	5.14
France.	2,000,000,000	36,500,000	54.79	130,000,000	3.56
Russia.	1,125,000,000	79,000,000	15.40	78,000,000	2.48
Austria.	1,000,000,000	35,000,000	28.57	60,000,000	1.71
Prussia.	850,000,000	16,000,000	53.12	58,000,000	3.62
Holland.	400,000,000	3,000,000	133.33	13,000,000	4.33
Belgium.	200,000,000	3,000,000	66.67	6,000,000	2.00
Portugal.	150,000,000	2,000,000	75.00	3,000,000	1.50
Spain.	130,000,000	18,000,000	7.22	2,000,000	0.11
Denmark.	110,000,000	1,500,000	73.33	1,500,000	1.00
Sweden.	60,000,000	2,000,000	30.00	1,000,000	0.50
Hanover.	48,000,000	1,000,000	48.00	1,000,000	1.00
Warrenburg.	25,000,000	1,000,000	25.00	1,000,000	1.00
Hamburg.	23,000,000	1,000,000	23.00	1,000,000	1.00
Greece.	20,000,000	1,000,000	20.00	1,000,000	1.00

Statement showing the aggregate indebtedness of the several European and American nations, and the average per capita on the population thereof; the aggregate interest per annum, and the average per capita on the population thereof.

But this table, while it presents us in an unpleasant aspect, does not show the entire facts. Of our debt only $2,200,000,000 is on interest. The residue is not funded or is in the form of currency, but on the sum of a little more than $2,000,000,000 we pay $139,000,000 of interest, while Great Britain pays a less sum of interest by some millions of dollars on nearly double the debt. The rate of interest on her consols, at their present market value, is three and a third per cent. One hundred dollars of her bonds, bearing interest at three per cent., will sell in any money market of the world for eighty-six dollars in gold, equal to ninety-four dollars in our coin, while $100 of United States bonds, bearing six per cent. interest, will sell in Europe at from sixty-five to seventy dollars in sterling gold, and in the market at New York for about seventy-six dollars in our coin. Is there such a difference between the condition of affairs in this country and in Great Britain; is there anything in our public credit, the nature of our institutions, or the character of our laws, or in the uncertainty of payment that compels this exorbitant difference? I do not think so. In France the rate of interest is about four per cent. and a fraction; sometimes a little less than four. In Russia it is five per cent. In Austria it is five per cent. Five per cent. is the highest rate paid, except during an emergency by any of those countries; and their resources are not to be compared with ours. This table shows that, tested by the public debt of any nation of modern times, the amount paid by the United States is entirely exorbitant, and therefore the first duty is to reduce this rate of interest, not by arbitrary means, but by every device of legislation. In my judgment, it will be a public discredit if the Secretary of the Treasury is compelled to issue any more six per cent. gold-bearing bonds.

When you examine our resources and compare them with the amount of our public debt, the latter seems insignificant. It is shown, not only by our official tables, but by the actual exhibition of our industry and strength in the last three or four years, that we have more elements of strength and more resources in money than any nation of Europe. England has but thirty million people upon whom her public debt rests; we have thirty-five million people, and our population increases at a ratio without example, maintaining that ratio for sixty years. We have the broadest agricultural field of any nation in the world, without even excepting Russia, because the great body of Russia is either too cold or too dry for agricultural productions. We have a territory of compact form but varied climate, and productions greater in extent than all Europe. We have 2,044,077 separate farms, each occupied by the owner, and in the main tilled by his own labor. Our coal-fields are estimated to be thirty-six times the size of those of Great Britain and Ireland, and are distributed throughout all portions of the country. As coal is the basis of the wealth of Great Britain, and actually yields seventy-two million tons, while we now consume but fifteen millions, we have in coal a bank that can never break, a mine of jewels more valuable than all the gold of the world. And our mineral resources are greater than those of any two countries of the world. California has furnished to the mints of the United States for gold coin over $360,000,000, and probably a greater amount in bullion exchanged for foreign productions. Iron in mountains of rich ore is scattered in most of the States. We have more actual wealth per capita, now, than any nation in Europe. The price of labor here is twice what it is in Europe. All the elements which enter into the computation are in our favor. For us to pay this rate of interest, it seems to me, is an acknowledgment that there is some defect in our form of government, some insecurity, or some unreasonable demand for the use of money, that I cannot explain.

The vast disproportion between the rates of interest we pay and our resources has excited the intelligent observation of an Englishman recently among us and who has recently written a book upon the resources and prospects of America, a copy of which I have before me. I refer to Sir Morton Peto, and I am sure every Senator who hears me will deeply regret that one so friendly to our country seems, by the advices we have this morning, to have been involved in financial embarrassments at home. This intelligent writer, who is familiar with the whole system of finance and taxation in England, has presented in this volume the results of his study and observation of our resources in a manner that must attract the attention of every reader. The book is a careful collection of facts admirably arranged, but without attempt at concealment or exaggeration, and he closes it by saying that after the completion of our Pacific railroad—

"We shall be called upon to regard America as the greatest nation of the world. She will be entitled to take that rank by reason of her extent, her diversity of soil and climate, the character of her communications, the variety of her resources, her vast mineral riches, and the abundant field which she presents for labor and for the employment of capital and enterprise. Many among us are accustomed to smile when we hear the Americans speak of the United States, in their accustomed manner, as a 'great nation.' But there is no mere boast in that description. Emphatically, America is a 'great nation.' Where can we find her equal in geographical and natural advantages, in material progress, or in general prosperity? As a united people, the Americans present to the world a spectacle that must excite general admiration. Regarding them as of the same race and ancestry with ourselves, as a people using our language, governed by our laws, united by the same religion, influenced by kindred sentiments, their progress is a spectacle which should kindle our admiration and enthusiasm."

And, sir, in this connection we must remember that while our resources are so great, they are not locked up in the bosom of mother earth, but may be touched by the power of taxation. The actual experiment has been tried, and the result has been far greater than any of us estimated. We are now collecting a revenue greater than any modern nation. A recent official statement made to us by the revenue commissioners shows that during the current year the result of our taxes is over five hundred million dollars, a sum greater than France or Great Britain ever collected in any one year. We are now engaged in the happy duty of repealing many of these taxes, but will still retain $30,000,000 to apply annually on the principal of our debt; a fact that has forcibly impressed the mind of Mr. Gladstone, who, after years of peace, is fortunate in being able in Great Britain to propose a plan of slightly reducing the debt of that country by changing a portion of it into terminable annuities.

Another element of credit is that under our system of government our national expenses are far less than other nations. Sir Morton Peto says:

"In proportion to population, the United States, in 1860, had, I apprehend, the smallest expenditure and the smallest national debt of any country in the world."

And, sir, even under the increase of our expenditure since the war our actual expenditure, other than on account of the public debt, will be in the future far less than the same population in Europe. Here war expenses cease with the war. No standing army swells exorbitantly our estimates. Our heroes who saved the country by war are now enriching it by their labor. Our current expenses next year will be considerably less than two hundred millions. So that whatever view we take of our financial position, whether we consider our resources, our receipts, or expenditure, or the varied industry of our people, we must conclude that we are not justified in paying rates of interest so far in excess of other nations.

Again, sir, the present rate of interest is a war rate, and the distinction between a war rate and a peace rate is recognized by all the

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Funding of the National Debt—Mr. Sherman.

SENATE.

writers. England was compelled to sell many of her three per cent. annuities at some sixty cents on the dollar; but even England when she was involved in the great war with Napoleon never paid anything like such a rate of interest as we do this day. It seems from the report of one of the revenue commissioners, which is very full of facts and details on this subject, that the average rate of interest paid by Great Britain during her war with the French republic, of eight years, was £4 17s. per £100; a little less than five per cent.; that during the year 1802 it was reduced to £4 4s.; that during the war with the French empire it was £4 15s.; that from the end of the war until 1821 it was £4 5s., or four and one fourth per cent., and that the average rate during the whole period of the war was four and three fifths per cent., reduced to a specie standard; and yet we have paid, uniformly, six per cent. in gold, receiving paper for our bonds, paying the interest in gold, and converting one into the other. At one time during the war we paid at the rate of thirteen or fourteen per cent. on money, counting the difference between gold and paper. Such a thing as that would exhaust any country except ours. We were able to borrow this money and get it from the people; but it is obvious that at the very earliest moment we must go back to something like a reasonable rate of interest on our public debt. We must not tear from our people the results of their labor and pay it for purposes of this kind when there is no necessity. I take it, therefore, as an axiom with which to set out, that we ought to reduce the rate of interest. I expect to live to see the time when the rate of interest in this country will not be over three or four per cent., and now we propose to reduce it on new loans to five per cent.

There are one or two collateral views that Senators might reflect upon with great propriety. First, there is the influence of these high rates of interest on the industry of our country. I have a letter here, which probably presents this point as clearly as I can, from a very intelligent citizen of the city of New York. I will read a short extract. He speaks of the effect of the high rates paid by the Government in the city of New York. He says:

"A powerful cause which exposes the poor and persons of limited means to such high rents is found in the rates of interest established by national and State laws and the increased value given to money by such legislation. During the rebellion the Government offered a higher rate of interest than the laws of New York and the sea-board States generally had established as legal. Hence investments in United States securities now realize more than two per cent. over bonds and mortgages in New York. Capitalists have therefore been withdrawing money from real estate loans to invest them at higher rates in Governments. This policy affects scores of millions of capital. It has a direct tendency to limit and retard building and discourage all State developments. It has entirely unsettled the whole system of the demand and supply of money for private enterprises. Every day an unprecedented number of houses and lots are thrown on the market, either from the inability of the borrower to pay off his mortgages or debts in any other way, or from the imperative necessity of raising money to prosecute old business or start new. These enforced real estate sales benefit the capitalists alone, who in return demand at least fifteen per cent. on their new property, and those who are obliged to rent are thus held at their mercy.

Before the war capitalists and corporations were ready to loan from fifty to seventy per cent. on real estate securities. With from two to five thousand dollars on hand a man could buy and build with a certain reliance on a loan, while his future earnings, with the gradual advance of property, would ultimately give him a clear title to a home for himself. In this way many thousands of good dwellings were constructed in New York; but the arrest of this system has put our population into the hands of the landlords, and they will hold the power till the system is changed. If the poor becamerich, they would do the same."

That is obvious. The effect of these high rates paid by the Government is not only to absorb the floating capital of the country, but to deter men from engaging in enterprise; and therefore all over the cities of the United States it is a common remark "It is impossible to get houses." In the West the cry is distressing. In all the cities it is impossible to get a house at a fair rent. The rent absorbs all a man's little earnings. The result is the people are crowded into tenements, half a dozen families in a house; in New York, in some cases two or three families in a room; and all these distressing incidents grow out of the advance in rents, the greater expense of living, the high prices of produce, of food, clothing, and all the necessities of life. I think there is no fact that contributes so much to this state of affairs as the high rate of interest paid by the Government of the United States. We go in and compete with every man who is talking about building a house, to borrow money. We compete with every class of industry. We compete with the railroad companies in the sale of their bonds, with the manufacturers in the building of new warehouses. We compete with all classes by offering a higher rate of interest than we allow the courts to enforce for them. During the war that was necessary; we could not avoid it; but is it necessary now? I think it is not.

The great leading objects of this bill are to fund the public debt and to reduce the interest; but there is another object proposed by it which I think is peculiarly an American one, and upon which I ought to say something before I proceed to examine the details of the bill, and that is the necessity of providing when we contract a debt for the payment of it. The original funding act framed by Alexander Hamilton was based upon the idea that a public debt should be temporary, and this idea is ingrafted upon American finance. In view of this, in the first loan law of 1862, if I remember aright, we provided that one per cent. of the amount of the loan should be set aside as a sinking fund with a view to pay off the principal of the debt. That pledge has never been redeemed, nor during war was it possible or proper to redeem it. A sinking fund can properly be accumulated only during peace. It would be bad economy to take a portion of the money borrowed at high rates of interest during war and invest it in securities purchased in the market and then lay them aside and accumulate the interest for the purpose of paying off a debt during peace. Great Britain tried that for nearly one hundred years and finally abandoned it. The old form of a sinking fund, which was the favorite theory of Robert Walpole and William Pitt, was abandoned, then resumed, and was finally abandoned in 1819. I have an interesting book here, the preface of which was written by the celebrated Mr. McCulloch, in which he speaks of the abandonment by Great Britain and by all other nations of the old form of a sinking fund. I will read an extract from it:

"Neither must it be supposed that the notion of the wonder-working effects of sinking funds has been a mere harmless error. On the contrary, few delusions have been practically so mischievous.

"Dr. Hamilton, of Aberdeen, has the merit of having dissipated the delusion in regard to the sinking fund."

"He showed that instead of reducing, the sinking fund had increased, the debt. And he proved to demonstration that the excess of revenue over expenditure is the only fund by which any portion of the public debt can ever be discharged.

"But since Dr. Hamilton's work appeared, more correct accounts have been obtained of the expenditure, loans, &c., during the great struggle terminated in 1815. And from these it may be easily shown that the sinking fund was not a clumsy only, but a costly imposture. In proof of this we beg to state that the loans contracted in each year from 1791 to 1816, both inclusive, amounted in all to £584,874,557, at an annual charge to the public of £30,174,364. Of these loans the commissioners of the sinking fund received £188,522,350, the proportional annual charge on such portion being, of course, £9,726,090. But it further appears from the accounts referred to, that the stock which the commissioners purchased with this sum of £188,522,250, transferred to them out of the loans, only yielded an annual dividend of £9,168,232. On the one hand, therefore, an annual charge of £9,726,090 was incurred to enable the sinking fund commissioners to go to market; and, on the other, they bought stock which yielded £9,168,232 a year; so that, on the whole, their operations during the war occasioned a direct dead loss to the country of no less than £557,857 a year, equivalent to a three per cent. capital of £18,595,233, exclusive of the expenses of the office, which amounted to above £60,000. Such was the practical result of Mr. Pitt's famous sinking fund, so long regarded as the palladium of public credit, and the sheet-anchor of the nation!

"Notwithstanding Dr. Hamilton's book was published, as already stated, in 1813, the statute for the suppression of the sinking fund, the 10 George IV. c. 27, was not passed till 1829. It enacted that in time to come the sum to be applied to the reduction of the national debt should be the actual annual surplus of revenue over expenditure.

The old form of sinking fund adopted in England, and also in this country, was to invest by certain persons named in the law specific funds and authorize them with those funds to buy any portion of the public debt. That plan of accumulating a sinking fund has been abandoned, and now, as this author says, the only proper way is to apply a fixed sum raised by taxes and from surplus revenue to the payment of the public debt. Instead of endeavoring to keep the debt alive by sinking fund commissioners, the application of a specific sum to the payment of the principal and interest of the debt every year would have the same effect in extinguishing the public debt as if invested in sinking fund commissioners and without the loss and expense of management.

Mr. VAN WINKLE. With the permission of the Senator from Ohio, I should like to ask him whether he has so far investigated this subject as to tell me whether the principal objection made to the sinking fund of Pitt and the others he has alluded to was not that the nation continued to be a borrower.

Mr. SHERMAN. That was it.

Mr. VAN WINKLE. And that it was really borrowed money which was applied to the sinking fund. Let me ask further, whether there would be any difference in the result, provided the nation had a surplus and that surplus was applied to the sinking fund or was paid directly on the debt. I ask for information.

Mr. SHERMAN. The Senator is undoubtedly correct. England borrowed money to pay into the sinking fund. The plan proposed in this bill is from the proceeds of taxes to raise a specific sum, appropriating it for the payment of the public debt. The difference is between borrowing money to pay a debt and using your own money to pay the debt, money collected from the people.

Mr. VAN WINKLE. Then the form in which it was applied, whether a surplus of taxes was taken and applied by means of a sinking fund or directly applied to the debt, would be immaterial.

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. VAN WINKLE. The difference between them would arise out of other circumstances.

Mr. SHERMAN. So that the money to raise the sinking fund was not raised by borrowing. If it was raised by taxation and directly applied, the effect is the same as if invested in commissioners. The only reason why I make any remark about the sinking fund is that this bill contains a provision applying a specific sum every year to the cancellation of bonds under laws to be hereafter framed.

I have thus stated, I fear with too much detail, that any plan should embrace these ideas: the funding the debt, the reduction of interest, and the ultimate payment of principal. And here a difference of opinion arose whether this plan should be prescribed by Congress or whether it should be left mainly to the Secretary of the Treasury. I objected to the law passed here a month or two ago, and the Senator from Maine did not think my objections well founded. But I still think I was right. My objection did not arise from any want of confidence in the Secretary, for I know the present Secretary will not abuse this trust. But it grew out of what I considered the right of the people to know precisely the terms of the loan. That bill authorized the Secretary to sell a bond, principal and interest payable in gold, running not to exceed forty years, and bearing an interest not to exceed six per cent.,

SENATE.

Funding of the National Debt—Mr. Sherman.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

to be free from State and local tax, and which he might sell under par. Now, I did not wish to admit for a moment, in the form of a law, the possibility of any Secretary selling such a bond even at par, and certainly not under par. It was a cheapening of the public credit to provide for such a loan. And without renewing the controversy, I ask, is it not better in legislation on this important question, involving $3,000,000,000, to put in the form of law and on the face of the statute the terms and conditions upon which your public agents shall sell your bonds? It seems so to me, and therefore, if this bill contained no new provisions, I should think it important, and highly important, that the terms finally agreed upon and fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, after full consideration, should be embraced in the form of law so as to be binding upon him and his successors, so that no change should be made without the consent of Congress. I do not propose, however, nor do I ask the repeal of that law, but I think that when the plan is agreed upon, it should assume the form of law, leaving, however, the general provisions which passed a short time ago to stand to meet emergencies and exigencies now unforeseen.

The further question which I now desire to submit to the Senate is, whether this bill presents a plan by which these objects can be accomplished. If it were left to my own hopeful view of things I would strike out two or three clauses of this bill. I would not extend the exemption from taxation to the income tax. I would preserve the form of our laws in regard to the convertibility clause, vesting the power in the United States to pay off this debt after a certain time, say ten years. I would insert a proviso which was in the old law of 1795, authorizing the United States to pay off the principal. But the Secretary of the Treasury, who is to execute this law, is of opinion that he cannot negotiate a five per cent. loan upon these terms, and therefore he would not undertake it. He has the power under the general law we have passed to negotiate a loan at six per cent., or one at a less rate, but he thought he could not negotiate a five per cent. loan without additional legislation. I am not sure of that. I believe that if you pass a bill of this kind fixing the rate of interest at five per cent., with the general stipulations contained in this bill, we shall be able, though perhaps with some difficulty and after some time, to save the one per cent. without giving any additional benefits. He thought not, however. The question now is, not whether we shall give him this law, but whether we shall compel him to issue a six per cent. rather than a five per cent. loan, unless we give him the terms and privileges contained in this bill. If I was called upon to prescribe the form, being probably a more hopeful man than he or many of those around me, I would insist that the Government of the United States should not pay in any event over five per cent. interest, and that a clean loan should be negotiated for that amount, and that it should be something like the ten-forty loan, within easy conversion, so that if in ten years we could negotiate a loan at a less rate of interest we might have power to do it. But he thought that in order to enable him to negotiate a five per cent. loan he must have two provisions, one giving him authority to issue a thirty-year loan, to postpone the payment of the principal not to exceed thirty years; and the other to exempt these securities from the income tax of the United States.

Those were the two conditions upon which he thought he could negotiate a five per cent. loan. When I came to examine them, I found that these two conditions could amount to but very little loss. The income tax levied by the United States now upon national securities pays to us less than one tenth of one per cent. of the public debt. By the terms of the tax law the holders of these bonds are compelled to pay income as upon other property, but all the bonds that are held by persons whose aggregate income is less than $600 go free of tax; all the bonds that are held abroad are free of tax; all the bonds that are held by banks, insurance companies, and corporations are held free from this income tax. No corporation pays an income tax; the income tax is levied only upon individuals. The result is that the bonds of the United States, you may say the great mass of them, are held in such a way that they pay no income tax. The Secretary says:

"If you will surrender the trifling amount you collect from incomes derived from Government securities, I may be enabled to save you one sixth of all the interest paid upon the public debt."

When that proposition was made, it seemed to me perfectly obvious that we ought to adopt it. There is another reason. The income tax is, in its nature, temporary. There is scarcely a doubt but what that income tax will disappear like many of the other taxes in a short period of time. The time, in my judgment, is not far distant when a tax on a few articles of luxury will pay the interest on the public debt and pay our expenses. I have no doubt we shall go through the same process of legislation that our ancestors did after the war of the Revolution, and as those who went before us did after the war of 1812. All these taxes will disappear in a short period of time, and perhaps a tax on whisky and tobacco and on imported goods, a few simple taxes, with perhaps the income tax added, may be able to pay the interest on the public debt and the expenses of the Government. Therefore the only question was whether we should surrender this small matter in order to accomplish a great object. It seems to me we ought to do it. If the Secretary of the Treasury can go to work and negotiate this loan by surrendering this small income tax, and thus effect a saving of interest equivalent to twenty per cent. of all the interest paid by the United States, it is certainly a very good bargain, and it does not require a very shrewd man to see it.

The other provision was that there ought to be a fixed period before which the principal should not be paid. That was a point upon which I myself long hesitated; and I agreed to it for this reason, and it is a very obvious one if Senators will apply their minds to it: but a very small portion of the public debt can be converted now into a five per cent. loan. Why? Because but a small portion of it is due. The holders of the seven-thirties will avail themselves of their privilege to convert them into five-twenties. There is not very much pressing upon the Secretary of the Treasury, but whatever it is, he must pay it, and he must issue some form of loan, and the only question is whether it shall be a five per cent. or a six per cent. If you do not pass this bill he is compelled to issue a six per cent. loan because he cannot negotiate any other. He says he cannot, and that is the general judgment. It is the general judgment of gentlemen who oppose this bill that he cannot negotiate a five per cent. loan of any kind even with this bill, and therefore that he will be compelled to issue a six per cent.

The very fact that he is not compelled to borrow a large sum of money enables him to go into the market now like a rich man who has a boundless inheritance, a large estate, on which he wants to borrow a very small sum of money; he can get it on good terms, but he says he cannot get it unless the payment of the principal is postponed for twenty or thirty years. Suppose he does issue two hundred million or five hundred million five per cent. bonds under this bill; the objection is that we may want to pay off the principal sooner. Surely we would pay off the six per cent. bonds first, and we cannot expect to pay off all this enormous debt within thirty years. All the bonds that he could probably issue within a year or two would fall very far short of the amount that would still remain unpaid under the most favorable circumstances in thirty years from this time. Next year, after he has established a five per cent. loan under this bill, it may be that he can go into the market and get a better loan still, a better bond, on more favorable terms, and thus reduce the rate of interest on the balance of the debt as it matures. I have no doubt he can do it.

I now come to consider an objection to this bill made with a good deal of force, especially by my Democratic friends, that the loans of the United States are exempt from State taxation. Although this is a very important question, it has never been discussed in the Senate, and I think that unless Senators have been required to examine the decisions of the courts of the United States, they probably have not seen how far the courts have gone in settling this question. I lay it down as a premise that in the absence of all stipulations about taxation in a law, no State can tax a Government security; it is entirely inconsistent with the supreme power of the national Government to borrow money. This question is settled more clearly than almost any question of constitutional law which has ever been mooted in this Government. The first case involving it that came before the Supreme Court of the United States was the celebrated case of McCulloch vs. The State of Maryland, in which the principle was decided that no tax could be levied by a State upon any agent employed by the national Government in the execution of its vested powers. That case, however, did not reach the particular point that I am now discussing, but subsequently the case of Weston vs. The City Council of Charleston arose in 1829, and is reported in 2 Peters, page 449, and upon the very point now in discussion. Chief Justice Marshall was still upon the bench, the same judge who had decided the case of McCulloch vs. The State of Maryland. The city of Charleston, under the authority of a law of the State of South Carolina, levied a tax upon bonds of the United States held by a citizen of Charleston. The question was submitted to the supreme court of the State of South Carolina, and it was decided there by a majority that the State had a right to tax a Government security or the income derived from it. A dissenting opinion was given by one of the judges of that court which is highly creditable to him, and I think presents the case very clearly. I will read a short extract from that opinion before I read anything from the decision of Chief Justice Marshall. This case arose at the beginning of the nullification crusade, and the very principles subsequently involved in the contest through which we have recently passed were then under discussion in South Carolina.

Judge Huger, in giving his dissenting opinion, said:

"I am unwilling, on so important a question, merely to express my dissent from the judgment of the court. It is now for the first time agitated, and ought to be fully discussed, that it might be better understood. It affects the use of a power, as essential to the General Government in periods of difficulty and danger, as any other which the people have delegated to it. If the city council of Charleston can tax the stock of the United States, ex nomine, the States can; and if the States can, it is impossible not to perceive that the fiscal operations of the General Government may be completely frustrated by the States. It will be in vain for Congress to pass acts authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow money, if the holders of their stock can be taxed for having done so by the States. Congress may offer ten per cent. for loans, but who will lend, if the States can appropriate the whole to their own use?"

He then proceeds to show that the power to tax at all involves the power in the States to nullify by taxation the power of the national Government to borrow money, and says:

"No Government, not revolutionary, has ever attempted to tax its own stock, and, among others, for two very satisfactory reasons:

"1. Because such a tax must necessarily operate injuriously upon all future loans; and

"2. Because there is in fact a violation of contract in so doing, and therefore immoral and impolitic. Under the influence of these reasons, the Legislature of this State has refused to tax the stock of the United States; but it appears that the city council of Charleston have thought differently, and have taxed it." * * * * *

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Funding of the National Debt—Mr. Sherman.

SENATE.

"If they can do so at all, they may do so to any extent; it is equally within their power to tax twenty per cent, or one hundred per cent, as one half per cent. What shall govern their discretion it is impossible to foresee. A State or a few States may concur in a policy at variance with that of the Government, nay, in hostility to it. This, unfortunately, has been already witnessed."

He prophesies the very case that occurred a few years afterward in that State:

"They may, indeed, be indisposed to dissolve the Union and declare war, when they might have no objection to counteract Congress, and control its measures by the exercise of a power strictly constitutional. Seven tenths of the stocks of the United States are owned in the cities of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Charleston."

And then he proceeds to discuss the power of cities and States to tax the Government stock, and shows that if it were conceded, the single State of New York might have it in its power to destroy the Government of the United States by preventing it from borrowing money. The case was brought up to the Supreme Court of the United States, where it was elaborately discussed by Mr. Hayne and Mr. Legare, then among the ablest counsel in the country. I will read from the decision of Chief Justice Marshall:

"This brings us to the main question. Is the stock issued for loans made to the Government of the United States liable to be taxed by States and corporations?"

"Congress has power 'to borrow money on the credit of the United States.' The stock it issues is the evidence of a debt created by the exercise of this power. The tax in question is a tax upon the contract subsisting between the Government and the individual. It bears directly upon that contract while subsisting and in full force. The power operates upon the contract the instant it is framed, and must imply a right to affect that contract."

"If the States and corporations throughout the Union possess the power to tax a contract for the loan of money what shall arrest this principle in its application to every other contract? What measure can Government adopt which will not be exposed to its influence? But it is unnecessary to pursue this principle through its diversified application to all the contracts and to the various operations of Government. No one can be selected which is of more vital interest to the community than this of borrowing money on the credit of the United States. No power has been conferred by the American people on their Government, the free and unburdened exercise of which more deeply affects every member of our Republic. In war, when the honor, the safety, the independence of the nation are to be defended, when all its resources are to be strained to the utmost, credit must be brought in aid of taxation, and the abundant revenue of peace and prosperity must be anticipated to supply the exigencies, the urgent demands of the moment."

Then he goes on to discuss the question at great length, and comes to the conclusion, in which the court was unanimous, that in the absence of all stipulation on the subject no State could be allowed to tax a Government security, simply because to do so would enable the States to destroy the power of the national Government, prevent it from prosecuting war, and from maintaining the authority of the United States. This principle has never been controverted and never been doubted by any judge on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States. It has been acquiesced in by every judge who has sat upon that bench. It has never since been controverted by any State of the Union. It has never been attempted by any party in the Union to set aside that decision. This exemption is so clear a principle of constitutional law, in my judgment, that it cannot be assailed or gained. The same question was again brought before the Supreme Court of the United States in a case from the State of Pennsylvania, when Chief Justice Taney sat upon the bench—the case of Dobbins vs. The Commissioners of Erie county. The court again reaffirmed the same principle, referring to this case, repeating it, and applying this doctrine to a tax levied by the State of Pennsylvania on a Government officer. Again the question was brought before the Supreme Court of the United States during the recent war, in a case reported in 2 Black—the case of the Bank of Commerce vs.

The Tax Commissioners of New York city, where the opinion was given by Mr. Justice Nelson. The question arose there as to the power of the State of New York to tax Government securities in the possession of the Bank of Commerce, a corporation of that State, and the Supreme Court unanimously decided that a tax could not be levied in any form, from the very nature of the case, on a Government security. It should be remembered, too, that up to the time of this last decision no provision had been contained in any loan law expressly declaring that the Government securities should be exempt from State and local taxation. It was decided upon the general principle involved, and without regard to any stipulation made by Congress. This last decision was in 1862, and it was that winter, for the first time, that we put in the stipulation in one of our loan laws. The question was asked, why put in this stipulation if the law was so clear? The answer was just as conclusive, that as we were compelled to borrow money it was important to inform in the most authentic manner all who chose to loan it, of their rights and privileges under the Constitution. No doubt many a man, upon the faith of the direct pledge of Congress, superadded to the decisions of the Supreme Court, loaned us his money in time of war, when he would not have done it if it was to be subject to local taxation.

I might add, if it was necessary to add to these authorities, that the same question was up again during the last term, and again decided in the same way, in the case I now hold in my hand. This case was the taxation by the State of New York of the shares of a national bank; and a majority of the court drew a distinction between a tax upon a share in the bank and a tax upon a Government security, and they also based their decision upon the express declaration of Congress that these shares should be taxed. The Chief Justice, however, and Judge Wayne and Judge Swayne differed, and held that from the nature of the security itself, in any form or shape the Government security could not be taxed. The majority of the court drew the distinction between the shares in the bank and the bonds held by the bank, and allowed the shares to be taxed. In my judgment, such was the intent of Congress. It was a subject that was very much discussed and mooted here at the time, and although I was opposed to the tax, yet it was finally carried. The distinction made by the court was taken by Senators that the taking of shares in a bank was a reinvestment of the funds and a change of the form of security.

I say, then, that no Senator should vote against this bill, or any bill of a similar character, on the idea that it is not now wise to exempt Government securities from State taxation. That is the settled principle of constitutional law, whether it is put in your laws or not; and the only question is whether by omitting to put it in you will give the lenders the power to make a better bargain with you.

Mr. FESSENDEN. Has the Senator any doubt of our power to provide specifically that it shall be subject?

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no doubt that Congress may, as a part of the contract, and before the loan is issued, say that the States may tax the security. But, Mr. President, what effect would that have? Could you sell such bonds? Would you allow the southern States now to tax Government securities? Would you allow them to have the power over your public credit which would be involved in their power to destroy the income from Government securities, because, as Judge Huger says in the first decision made, if you give them the power to tax one mill you cannot restrain it? No, sir, the contract between the United States and all the citizens of the world is a contract higher than any imposition levied by a State, and we ought no more to tolerate the idea of levying tax upon the securities of the United States except by the United States itself, than Great Britain would allow any foreign Power to levy in Great Britain a tax on British securities.

It must be remembered that by express provision inserted in all the acts passed during the recent war United States bonds are exempt from State taxation. All the debt now outstanding is thus exempt. Even the bonds issued under the recent acts will be so exempt. Suppose you follow the suggestion of the Senator from Maine and refuse in this bill to so exempt a bond bearing but five per cent. interest, or, as he suggests, actually provide that they shall be taxable. Who would buy them? Who would surrender their present securities? How could you fund your debt? No device could be more perfect to continue the present high rates of interest. And what good would result to State or nation? None whatever. The State could not tax the present bonds, and the holders would not take your new ones. The only way is to stand by the inviolability of our bonds as declared by the Supreme Court and upheld by every party or President to this time.

I now wish to meet the argument so often and forcibly made that it is unjust to exempt United States securities from local taxes. And, sir, I admit that if this is regarded as a privilege to the holder it is indefensible; but it is the privilege of the Government, not of the fundholder. It is the supreme power of the whole people to borrow money on the most favorable terms that is taxed and limited by a tax in the contract. Such an exemption is only justifiable on the ground that it enables the Government to borrow money on better terms. In the contract of borrowing the lender considers the rate of interest, the security of the principal, and the burdens of taxation. If no taxes are to be deducted from his interest and the principal is absolutely sure and easily convertible into money, he is willing to part with his money at a low rate of interest. This is the reason of the exemption, and the Government is presumed to receive the taxes in the more favorable terms of the loan.

But, sir, when the tax-payer sees that the Government is paying a higher rate of interest than the law allows to a citizen, the exemption will be felt to be wrong. With the present rate of interest there will be a constantly growing jealousy between the bond-holder and tax-payer. The latter will complain that his property is burdened with all the expense of Government while his neighbor enjoys his full income free from all burdens. This feeling is founded upon so clear a sense of what is right that no wise legislator will disregard it. It is true that a contract once made cannot be violated whether it costs much or little. Public faith demands an exact and specific performance, but an adjustment of this difficult problem ought to be made that will, while it preserves intact the rightful power of the Government to borrow money free from local taxes, require property in the funds to aid in the support of the Government. I have shown that this cannot be done with safety to the United States by allowing States to tax our securities. Two other modes have been suggested: first, to tax directly by act of Congress the public securities at a rate equal to local taxation; and secondly, to reduce the rate of interest.

A proposition has been made by Mr. Hayes, one of our tax commissioners, to levy a direct tax on all United States bonds held in this country of one per cent. on the principal of the bond, or to reserve one sixth of the interest payable on a six per cent. bond. Such a tax applied to our present securities would be a breach of public faith. Congress may have the power to do it—using the word power in its unrestricted sense—but it would be unjust, a fraud upon our creditors, and would forever impair our public credit. It is an indirect violation of a contract made in good faith. It is true the United States did not stipulate that it would not tax the bond, and the United States may properly levy an income tax upon public securities of any amount, as it may upon other incomes; but when the United States selects this particular kind of property as the only kind of property upon which it will levy a specific tax, it is a violation of public faith. To levy the same tax on this kind of property that you levy upon other property would not be unjust; but to select it out and put upon it exclusively an income tax of sixteen and two thirds per cent. in order to defeat in this way the stipulated exemption from State taxation would be a violation of the public faith; and yet that proposition has been made by an officer of the Government. Mr. Hayes has furnished us a long and elaborate report on the subject. I do not know that it is necessary for me to read his report, because any gentleman can find it. He attached to it the form of a bill for that purpose. It was disapproved by a majority of the revenue commission, but was submitted by Mr. Hayes as his own individual opinion.

SENATE.

Funding of the National Debt—Mr. Sherman.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Mr. FESSENDEN. Have you found anybody but him in favor of it?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes, he has the testimony of some of the leading men in the city of New York, and among the rest some men who have been employed as agents by the Government—C. T. Hillyer, Henry A. Perkins, John L. Bunce, James S. Tryon, Jonathan F. Morris, Olcott Allen, James Goodwin, Stephen D. Pardee, E. V. Haughwout, John W. Hunter, Royal Phelps, William B. Astor, William M. Vermilye, and a number of others, whose testimony is given, and who state that such a tax, in their opinion, would be just. It is hardly fair to those gentlemen to regard their testimony as anything more than a general opinion that bond-holders should in some way contribute to the support of the Government; and I know that some of them prefer a reduction of the rate of interest as proposed by me.

This question of taxing Government securities is far from being a novel one. It has been resorted to in arbitrary Governments many times. In France, in the time of Louis XIV and Louis XV, and especially during the regency that intervened, forced taxes on public funds were resorted to until the credit of that country was entirely destroyed. It was proposed in England in 1717, but was firmly resisted. I have here a paper attributed to the celebrated Henley, Earl of Oxford, written in that year on the inviolable nature of public securities, and the arguments have not lost their force by time. He says:

"Your project of raising money for this year's service, or of paying debts by taxing or lowering the interest of the funds, meets, I think, with too much approbation among some people who look no further than themselves and consider only the present difficulty, regardless of the consequences of their proceedings. The importance of the case seems to require that everybody should contribute what they can to set this matter in a true light and examine without prejudice how much the interest of our country, its reputation and honor, its future good or evil, may be affected by it." "I cannot but think that conscience is concerned, and natural honesty and public justice and the credit of the nation—everything that is sacred and inviolable in property is nearly affected; all obligations will be in a way of being canceled, and, in a word, an indelible character of injustice cast upon us."

"To support and maintain a man's private credit, it is absolutely necessary that the world have a fixed opinion of the honesty and integrity as well as ability of a person. If there be good reason to object against the one or the other of these his credit sinks; no one chooses to deal with him, nor does any one care to trust him."

"This true, this only foundation of credit takes in all cases and all persons, public as well as private, national as well as personal. Just and honorable practices, fair and open dealings, a strict performance of contracts, a steady observance of engagements, will necessarily gain credit everywhere; and common experience teaches us that a breach in these as necessarily destroys it." "And, indeed, a readiness and willingness to perform one's engagements is such a fundamental of credit that all the affluence of money and the most immense riches are of no consequence if there be ground for the least suspicion of dissimulation. The ability of a person without natural justice rather makes a man cautious than forward to deal with him.

"If, therefore, the legislature of any country should decline standing to its contracts or endeavor to impose other conditions than what at first were stipulated, I ask, would not such a conduct as necessarily impair the public credit as it would the credit of a private person? Has it not the same tendency to make the lenders jealous of their security? Who will venture to lend the public a second time if ever they find themselves not treated according to their contract? May there never be emergencies which may again oblige the public to borrow money? And if such cases should happen, upon what foundation must they proceed if an instance can be produced, an act of the legislature which can never be forgot nor ever be repaired to show that legal security is not a security, and that engagements are not to be understood literally? What is the natural consequence of this but that no man will lend the Government for the future, but at such interest and such advancements as are full equivalents to the hazards people may run in lending?"

The whole of this very able paper has a close application to the questions before us, and would well repay the reading; and the remedy he proposes is the one I propose. He says:

"If the lender be left at his liberty to receive his money or let it lay at lower interest, (in case where funds are redeemable,) no cause can be given of complaint. No injury is done, no hardship is offered. The integrity and honesty of the borrower is evident, and credit is indisputable. But if the borrower be his own judge and his own cause, and flies to an act of power because he can do it, it as necessarily sinks his credit as it takes away its foundation."

And, sir, this brings me to the plain and just remedy for all complaints of unequal taxation. Let us, in strict accordance with our engagements, sell our improved credit. Let us go into the market, and with our resources fully shown, our honor unimpaired, our securities free from all burdens, sell them on the most favorable terms; and thus we receive in advance all the taxes we could levy upon our securities. We will soon get more than the one per cent. which Mr. Hayes proposes to levy; and when the tax-payer points to the fund-holder as shirking his share of the public burden, the latter can say, "I pay my tax in advance. I get five per cent. interest for my money; the law gives you six. What is thus deducted from me relieves you from millions of taxes." This policy, adopted in England, has reduced the rate of interest on public securities from six to three per cent., and has made the British consol the highest standard of credit in the civilized world.

Fortunately our loans are now just in a condition when we can commence this reduction of interest. I showed awhile ago that we had $177,000,000 of public debt within our reach now, and if it was known that no other but a five per cent. loan could be had, and that all maturing bonds should be paid off in money by the sale of five per cent. bonds, public creditors would quickly convert their securities into such a loan. Large institutions, among the rest one of the largest in the State of New York, have made a proposition to convert their five-twenty bonds, maturing in May next, into this five per cent. loan. If I had my own way I would not give them a thirty-year five per cent. bond; I would give a ten-forty five per cent. bond, retaining the principle of redeemability, with a view to still lower interest; but the Secretary thinks he cannot now negotiate such a loan as that, and therefore, for the present, I would give those the most ready to adopt the reduction policy the most favorable form of loan, but as soon as possible would reserve the power to reduce the rate of interest by the payment of the principal as soon as a bond without these exemptions or at a lower rate of interest would sell at par. This process must be gradual. It will not do for Senators to vote against this bill because they think five per cent. free of taxes is too high. We must get it down first to five per cent., then to four, and then to three, all the while faithfully observing our contracts; and we can do it.

It is not probable if this bill passes that during the present year more than one hundred millions of five per cents will be sold, because more than that would not be needed to meet the accruing indebtedness unless it should be necessary to sell more to pay bounties to soldiers or some extraordinary expenditure. Next year the Secretary would have the power to pay off $600,000,000 of the five-twenties if he could sell these five per cent. bonds. But it is important to pass the law this session in order to give him ample time to meet the obligations that are imposed upon him.

I say, therefore, that in every view which I can take of this bill it is a wise measure, intended to save interest upon the public debt, to adjust on correct principles, equality of taxation, and to lighten the enormous burdens upon our people. And there is another feature which commends it to my favor. If this bill pass in the form in which it now stands, the fund-holders will themselves pay off the principal of the public debt. The one per cent. saved on the rate of interest will pay off every dollar of this debt in thirty-six years. When the fund-holder and the tax-payer stand before the public hustings, and this matter is dragged into politics, as it will be, and the tax-payer says to the fund-holder "Your property is exempt and free from all tax," the fund-holder may say "No, my friend, it is not; your money you can loan to your neighbor at six per cent. interest, and the law enables you to collect the principal at pleasure; I have already paid for this privilege by deducting one sixth of my income; I have surrendered the principal sum loaned by me for an annuity for thirty-six years, and my share of the taxes will pay off every dollar of the debt within one generation." He may refer to the report of Mr. Hayes showing that the average tax in the United States is one per cent., and that sum annually applied with the consent of the fund-holder, and paid by him alone, would pay your debt.

I accept the justice of the principle. I say that we cannot go before the people and preserve the exemption from local tax unless we show that the United States get some benefit from it; and by surrendering this one per cent. the fund-holders will be stronger and more secure than they were before. They will feel safer in the payment of the principal; they will know that the one per cent. thus saved is laid aside under the operations of this law and applied to the payment of the principal of the public debt; that it will pay off the principal of that debt in due time and without any danger of the misapplication of the fund, for it will be applied each year, thus adding to the value of the remaining funds.

The passage of this bill is now an imperative necessity. It is not my bill; it is not my idea. I think it is too favorable to the fund-holders. I think that a ten-forty five per cent. loan might be put upon the market at par; but the Secretary of the Treasury says that without the two stipulations to which I have referred, he does not think that he can, to use the ordinary language of the day, float a five per cent. loan. I am therefore willing to give these stipulations to him, hoping that next winter we can repeal the clause exempting the bonds from income tax, and then let him issue a clear five per cent. loan. I do not think he will be able to issue over a hundred millions before that time. Perhaps next winter we may shorten the period during which the principal may be redeemable, and perhaps in a few years, if our country goes on prospering as it is now prospering, we may reduce the rate of interest as England has done, first one half per cent., then another one half, keeping the body of the bonds always within our reach. The position of our public debt is just in that condition now, under the established policy of those who have regulated our finances, that it is within our reach, so that we can soon fund the whole of the public debt and reduce the rate of interest on all or nearly all of it.

There is another collateral advantage which will be derived from this bill. I refer to the provision in the fourth section. It will be remembered that the holders of the seven-thirty notes have the right by the terms of the option printed on the back of those notes to convert them into five-twenty six per cent. bonds at maturity, or to demand the money. Two hundred and forty millions of these notes come due in the month of August next year, and six hundred millions in the May following. Under the condition of the present laws, the Secretary of the Treasury will be compelled to accumulate and hold in hand two hundred and forty millions in order to meet the possible option of the holders of the seven-thirties.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Reconstruction—Mr. Howe.

SENATE.

What would be the effect? The withdrawal of $240,000,000 of money from the circulation of the country, when it is now being reduced under the operations of the recent law, would be disastrous. It would be withdrawing one-half of the circulating medium in order to meet an obligation when every particle of that money is necessary for the use of the people. Section four of this bill provides that the holders of the seven-thirty notes shall give a reasonable notice of their choice to take either the money or the bonds. They have the right to make that choice, and nobody proposes to abridge that right. They have the right to do it at the time stated, and nobody proposes to deprive them of it. What is proposed is simply to require them to give a reasonable notice of their choice of the alternative which they have, and that is put at six months. Some think that is too long and may complain of it. I do not think it is for the large amount involved. It works no injury, because the bill provides that in case they do not give their notice of the option, they get their money and the Secretary can provide for it. The probability is that the great mass of those notes will be converted into five-twenty bonds without cost; and one effect of having a five per cent. loan upon the market would be to float this large mass of indebtedness into the five-twenties as the holders have a right to do, while if you issue six per cent. bonds none of these holders will avail themselves of the option until the last moment, and then by demanding the money would greatly embarrass the Government.

It has been said in some of the public prints that this provision is a violation of the contract. It is no more a violation of the contract than the notice which is required by law in the case of a tenancy from year to year. If I am renting a house for a year or more I am bound to give notice of my intention to retain it.

Mr. FESSENDEN. I suggest to the honorable Senator, if he will take a suggestion from me, that it is a power, substantially, that Governments have always exercised. Take the original convertibility clause; we did not repudiate that clause, but we provided that the right of conversion should be exercised before a given time. There was no complaint made of it.

Mr. SHERMAN. There was some complaint made in the New York papers that this was a violation of the public faith, that we were repudiating our obligations; but it was not general. There are several precedents for this provision; but the most striking case was the one alluded to by the Senator from Maine, which was done after full debate and consideration. The United States notes originally issued, and still outstanding, had printed on the face of them, "The holder of this note may convert it into a bond bearing six per cent. interest in coin, and payable after five years and within twenty years." It was found that this privilege or option attached to the notes prevented the sale of the bonds, because no one would avail himself of that option, having the right to do it at any time; and therefore we provided that he should exercise that option by the 1st of July following or he should cease to have it. I have now one of these notes. The privilege printed on the face of it is now denied me. Yet no one complains, as I failed to exercise my right at the time stated.

Mr. CLARK. I will inquire of the Senator from Ohio whether it does not go upon the ground that the bond-holder assents. The Government having provided that unless he gives notice within six months it shall be so, it is upon the ground that having notice he assents that it shall be so.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is true. It is a general principle of law, that wherever a party has a right to do or not to do a particular thing, a reasonable notice of his choice may be required. That is a principle of municipal law as well as of public law. It is required by nations generally and inserted in many treaties.

And now, Mr. President, I have thus, without any preparation except the few figures and papers before me, presented the reason for my earnest support of this bill. Like most financial questions, they attract but little attention though they deeply affect the nearest interest of every citizen, his food, his clothing, his home, and more important than all else, the honor of his country. Our attention has been so occupied with political questions affecting more keenly the interests of parties and partisans that all the complicated problems of finance thrust upon us by the war have not occupied as much of the time of this Senate as some unimportant political measures. I almost owe you an apology for occupying your time so long, but I trust in a short time the waves of the recent war will settle in peace and quiet, and that all of us will look to the material interests of a great country, all of which are in our hands. I am so hopeful of the future, after escaping all the perils of the past, that I may not see the clouds that others see. War is apt to be followed with financial distress, and we may be affected by the impending war in Europe. Our bonds now held abroad may, and no doubt will come back to us, and for a time will depress our securities. But war in Europe will open to us new markets. It will restore our commerce. We can well afford to redeem our bonds with the superabundant produce of the West. Our cotton crop will yield us exchange enough to absorb all the securities held abroad. Who can say that after the first panic the timidity of money may cause it to flee from war in Europe and seek safety in our national securities?

Sir, what we need now is confidence in ourselves, in our resources, and in our destiny. Our country has been for years the refuge of the laboring man, where he has found employment, independence, and freedom. It will soon be the refuge of capital. It may become the place of deposit of the wealth of the world. Why should it not be? We as a nation have always observed our obligations. We have twice paid off a national debt. We have unexampled resources in men, in land, in iron, gold, coal, and in all the elements of wealth. Why, then, should we talk about taxing our national debt? Why place it in the power of every village corporation to affect our national credit? Why enter the money market offering usurious interest? Why pay now more than any good merchant in New York will pay? Why traffic our loans, a mortgage on all our industry, on worse terms than bankrupt nations of Europe offer? Go, backed by your resources, your unclouded and undisputed empire, the love and faith of your people, the respect of all nations; go, I say, with all these, and with confidence in yourselves, to the people, who hold your bonds, and you will be able to borrow money at five per cent., yea, before long, at four per cent. Go not to the money-changers. If they are allowed to fix the rate of your interest they will continue it as it is with all its exemptions, until the people, fired at an injustice, will do wrong to correct it. I conclude as I commenced, that to compel the Secretary of the Treasury, by denying him this legislation, to issue more six per cent. bonds is a political crime.

Reconstruction.

SPEECH OF HON. T. O. HOWE,

OF WISCONSIN,

IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE,

June 5 and 6, 1866.

The Senate having under consideration the joint resolution (H. R. No. 127) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States—

Mr. HOWE said:

Mr. PRESIDENT: At some time during this debate I purposed to state to the Senate my apology for the vote I am going to give. Perhaps the Senate would as lief listen to it this afternoon, or at least as lief allow me to state it this afternoon as at any time.

I am going to vote for the constitutional amendment now pending. I shall vote for it regretfully, but not reluctantly. I shall vote for it regretfully, because it does not meet the emergency as I hoped the emergency would be met; but I shall not vote for it reluctantly, because it seems to me just now to be the only way in which the emergency can be met at all.

Mr. President, in January last I submitted to the Senate a resolution which contained an embodiment of my own idea of the duty devolved upon Congress in this juncture. By that resolution I proposed to employ the legislative power of the nation to organize provisional governments for each of those communities which had destroyed, each for itself, the only government which the Constitution of the United States permits to a State of the American Union. That resolution was made the occasion of considerable debate, but never yet has attained to the honor of a reference to a committee. Perhaps it is the only instance on record of a resolution being offered to this body without sufficient merit to secure a reference. And since that resolution seems destined to remain here and to haunt the Senate Chamber without the poor right of burial in a standing or a special committee, and since I myself this afternoon am about to part company with it, and to embrace the idea embodied in the report of the committee of fifteen, I desire to say once more, for the satisfaction of all who may hereafter meet the ghost of my poor resolution stalking about among the archives of the Senate Chamber, that in my judgment, after having been intimate with it for a very long time, it is a perfectly honest ghost, and I desire to say more, that after considering carefully and diligently each one of the plans which have been submitted here time after time—rather ghostly, it seems to me, all of them—my own plan is still my favorite.

I want to say one thing more: that, instructed as I am now by a debate of more than four months' duration, a debate which has employed the best intellect of the country here and elsewhere, the single idea submitted in that resolution is, in my judgment, the only plan of which it can be truly said that it is entirely consistent with itself. If it be objected to it, that it is not consistent with the Constitution, then I am bound to say to the Senate that no plan yet submitted here or acted upon elsewhere is consistent with the Constitution.

If that resolution cannot be defended upon constitutional grounds, neither can the proposition of the Senator from Nevada or the plan now submitted by the committee of fifteen be defended. And no plan is so utterly defenseless as that of the President himself. They tell us that these States are still in the Union, and that my resolution would drive them out of the Union. Not at all, sir, the furthest from it possible. We do not look to statutes to see what is or is not within the Union. The boundaries of the Union are defined by treaties. Louisiana is in the Union, because by treaty with France we secured her to the Union. Texas is within the Union, because by treaty with Mexico we secured her to the Union. And these States, if you please to call them so, these communities, as I call them, will remain in the Union until by treaty with some Power outside or organized inside we consent to let them go out of the Union.

SENATE.

Reconstruction—Mr. Howe.

39TH CONG...1ST SESS.

It is said that such a resolution as I proposed would effect the very object at which the rebellion was aimed. What was that? They aimed, if I understood their purpose, to throw off utterly and altogether the authority of the United States. Their proclamation was that within their respective limits the United States should exercise no control whatever. The resolution which I submitted to the Senate asserted, on the other hand, that the United States within those respective limits should exert the sole control for the time being. Is there no difference between the two propositions? We called them traitors because they denied that the United States had any authority within their limits. Is it traitorous to say that the United States has more power than it had before they raised the standard of rebellion?

But if it be not disloyal to the United States to assert that stretch of authority on its part it is said it is disloyal to the States; that it tramples upon the rights of the States. How does it trample upon the rights of States? I admit, of course, that the authority of this Government is limited. I admit that we can exercise no authority but what is delegated to us in the Constitution. I admit that all the rest of the authority belonging to Government is reserved to the States. We have no quarrel and no dispute upon these points. I admit that the right of representation is a right which is given by the Constitution to the several States. But I desire to say once more to the Senate that that right of representation is not a right given to all States. Nobody claims it for any State outside of the American Union, and I say it belongs to no State inside of the American Union unless it conforms to the conditions which the Constitution imposes upon every State. When those conditions are set aside and abjured, then that right falls. It can be claimed by no State inside of the Union unless it be conceded to the State first by the Congress of the United States. It is the lack of that concession which prevents Colorado from having representation here to-day. She claims to be a State. She has adopted her constitution. She has sent here her representatives. The two Houses have agreed by a majority of their votes to admit them. But the President has vetoed the bill, and so there is upon the statute-book no law authorizing them to send representatives here, and they are not received. But does that exclude Colorado from the Union, or does it trample upon the right of a State? That right has never been conceded to her by Congress yet, and she does not insist upon the exercise of it until it be conceded.

But you tell me this right has been conceded once by Congress to Louisiana, to Mississippi, and to Alabama. Yes, Mr. President, it was conceded once to those communities and to each of the others which have been in rebellion. How, then? Answer me, what is the consequence of that? When the right and the character of a State was conceded by an act of Congress to the State of Alabama or the State of Mississippi, did the United States stipulate forever thereafter to exercise none of the powers which she had before exercised in those limits under any circumstances whatever? When Congress first conceded the right to Alabama to send her representatives here, was that a right which continued to her under all circumstances whatever beyond the power of forfeiture? If so, you must concede that that right remained during the very heat and strife of the war. If she could not forfeit that; if it was a continual, perpetual right, your doors would have been bound to swing open at the knock of her representatives, if she sent them here when the war was at its height, and you were protected against having representatives from your direst and deadliest enemies in these Halls only by the simple circumstance that they were a little too chivalrous or not sufficiently impudent to send them here to claim the right.

It will not be asserted that that right cannot be forfeited. No Senator on this floor who really loves the authority of this Government and means to abide by it and uphold it will pretend that Alabama, while this war was waging, could send her representatives here. "Oh," but you say, "why not let her send them here if they were loyal?" Why, sir, Alabama, while she was disloyal, would not choose loyal representatives, but if she did choose loyal representatives her representatives could not come this side of her lines without the permission of your Army. It was an offense against the laws of the United States for any man, no matter what were his personal dispositions, to come through those lines without the permission of the Government. There was a wall built up between everybody on that side and on this; not merely Congress, but your military boundaries were closed against every man, let his personal dispositions be what they might, coming from the rebellious districts.

But, Mr. President, I say that this right conceded to those States was not an absolute, unconditional, continuing right. It is a right to be exercised only under certain conditions. Every State claiming the right to send representatives here must show, first, the authority of Congress to do it; secondly, must show that they have a government, administering their own local affairs, which is republican in form; thirdly, it must be a State which has no engagements and no treaties either with another State or with any foreign Power; for that is expressly prohibited by the Constitution to all States; and fourthly, it must have a government, every officer of which, executive, legislative, and judicial, must be under an oath to support the Constitution of the United States; because the Constitution expressly forbids that any authority of government shall be wielded in any State by officers who are not under such an oath.

I insist that whenever a State violates either of these conditions it forfeits in law, and Congress may declare a forfeiture in fact, of the right to make its own laws, and of the right to participate in making our laws. Congress may declare that forfeiture in fact, because if you have not the authority to declare that forfeiture you cannot enforce these clauses of the Constitution. If the State of Mississippi sees fit to set up a government which is not republican but monarchical in form, to vest all the local power in the hands of a single individual for life, and in his heirs, and if you cannot interfere with the exercise of that authority by such a tribunal, by such a form of government, and strip him of it by an act of Congress, that clause of the Constitution is a dead letter. There is no other remedy to cure such a wrong as that. And so if they make treaties with other States or with foreign Powers; and so if they refuse to let their officers take the oath to support the Constitution of the United States, unless you have the power to resume the function which you delegated to her as a State, you cannot enforce those three commandments of the Constitution.

Sir, I admit it is hard to degrade a State to a Territory; I admit it is a harsh remedy to take the prerogatives of a State from a great community; but it is not so harsh after all as to take their lives; and when by the express words of your statute they forfeited their lives and you remit them that, is it worth while to talk of the harshness of taking these prerogatives of government from them?

But you say that although this right of local government is forfeited by the disloyal majority, it still lives in the loyal minority. I should say it was a very harsh and unjust remedy to take wantonly the prerogatives of a State from a loyal minority, simply because the majority about them were disloyal and traitorous. It has been said, where you find ten loyal men in a State there is the State, and you must let it be and exist. Mr. President, there is some plausibility in that. I meet it by asking where you can, in any one of these communities, find the local power in the hands of ten loyal men. Nay, I ask you where, in any one of these communities, outside of Tennessee, and perhaps Arkansas, you can find ten loyal men exercising any portion of that local authority? Loyalty is not tolerated in these local governments. Talk to the American Congress about stripping loyal men of authority in South Carolina or elsewhere! Loyal men have no authority there, they have had no authority from the beginning of this struggle. Talk about the harshness to the loyal men of taking the prerogatives of States from these communities! I do not see the hardship to loyal men. Every particle of local authority vested by the Constitution in a State had been secured to the hands of traitors, and by the exercise of that power they had forced whatever of loyalty there was in the community into an unholy and unwilling subserviency to the cause of rebellion. Is it harsh to loyal men to take power from the hands which use it thus? I do not conceive it to be so. When we take power from or deny power to the majority in these rebellious States, we simply deny it to the worst enemies the loyal men in these communities have or can have; and when we find that power in the hands of their direct enemies, to wrest it from them, it seems to me, is not only the highest duty which we owe to them, but for it we have the clearest warrant of the Constitution.

I do not agree with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Poland] that the framers of the Constitution never contemplated such an emergency as this, and therefore never provided for it. I say, in the express letter of the Constitution you have the authority to do just what I ask to have done. I will read it. After enumerating certain express powers which Congress may exercise, the Constitution declares that it shall have power—

"To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing power and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States or in any department or officer thereof."

If the power which that resolution asserted is not given there you cannot frame a clause which would clothe Congress with that power more clearly.

Mr. President, upon this question I have said all, perhaps more than I ought to have said. The question has passed from the consideration of Congress. There were difficulties outside of the Constitution in the way of the exercise of that authority, no matter how clearly it resided in the Congress of the United States. When Congress met here the President of the United States himself had for months been busy with the work that he called reconstruction. He had exercised, himself, the very authority which I claimed for Congress. He had abolished every one of those governments by a word of his mouth, and had done just what I asked Congress to do—established provisional governments. He had taken steps to supersede those which he called provisional governments with others which he called State governments, but which are to-day only provisional governments, nothing more nor less.

It has seemed good to the committee of fifteen not to disturb unnecessarily what the President had done, but to take his handiwork and to work it into some complete plan of reconstruction. Hence, it seems to have been thought advisable by them to let these organizations stand or stagger as they might, to do what they could with the work of home government, and to take the question from that point and settle if they could some terms upon which the other right, the right of representation, should be conceded to them by Congress. They have finally submitted, or there is submitted to the Senate, a joint resolution for an amendment of the Constitution of the United States. Allow me briefly to run over its propositions.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Reconstruction—Mr. Howe.

SENATE.

It first proposes to declare that "all persons born in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the States wherein they reside." That is the first proposition. Is there any objection to it? The Senator from Indiana [Mr. HENDRICKS] yesterday, I think, assailed this proposition as one calculated to degrade the great right of American citizenship, a right which he seemed to think should be held exclusively to the use and behoof of the nobler and loftier races of the world. It degrades, does it, sir, the character of American citizenship to admit all men to it who are born and reared upon American soil? Mr. President, I dissent from that idea altogether, and I was surprised to hear it fall from the lips of the Senator from Indiana, of all men in the world. I thought he was a Democrat. I thought he boasted himself the champion of equal rights. I thought that was the bread and the meat and the drink of his political creed. I did not think he belonged to that class of nobility that measure their exaltation by the number of negroes they have under their heels. I did not suppose he felt it necessary to stand upon the necks of human beings in order to secure his patent of nobility; and I was surprised to hear this sentiment fall from his lips. I differ from it so widely and so radically as this, that I say there is no one proposition in the proposed amendment, and nothing in the Constitution as it stands, which will do so much to elevate the character and the dignity of American citizenship as that simple proposition. Nay, sir, I go further, and I tell you you will never have occasion to boast but you will always have occasion to blush for American citizenship until the time shall come when you can say to all the world that American institutions do not raise a man that is not worthy to be an American citizen and is not clothed with its panoply. I will vote for this proposition, and I shall not fear that American citizenship will be degraded by incorporating this clause in the Constitution.

It proposes further to say that—

No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Sir, does any one object to putting that proposition into the Constitution? Does any one on this floor desire to reserve to any State the right to abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens? Do you do it in the State in which you reside, sir, [Mr. HENDRICKS in the chair,] and whose legislation and institutions you have done so much to mold? Is it done in any of the States represented here? I cannot deny it for all of them; but for many of them I do happen to know that no such abridgment of privileges or immunities is tolerated. Is it necessary, however, to incorporate such an amendment into your Constitution? Do you find in any of these communities seeking to participate in the legislation of the United States an appetite so diseased as seeks to abridge these privileges and these immunities, which seeks to deny to all classes of its citizens the protection of equal laws? Yes, Mr. President, I am sorry to say, we do find just such an appetite, and it is necessary to amend your Constitution in this year of our Lord in order to prevent the gratification of that diseased appetite. It is known to the wide world now that but for the authority which has been exerted on the part of the United States most of these communities which now seek the right to participate in our legislation would have denied to a large portion of their respective populations the plainest and most necessary rights of citizenship. The right to hold land when they had bought it and paid for it would have been denied them; the right to collect their wages by the processes of the law when they had earned their wages; the right to appear in the courts as suitors for any wrong done them or any right denied them; the right to give testimony in any court, even when the facts might be within their knowledge—all these rights would have been denied in most if not all of these communities but for the fact, for which I have once before rendered and now again render thanks to the President of the United States, that he sat his face against these provisions or most of them, and said he would not tolerate them nor allow them to be sanctioned in any one of these communities.

Most of these pretenses have been abandoned in most of these communities; but, sir, these are not the only rights that can be denied; these are not the only particulars in which unequal laws can be imposed. I have taken considerable pains to look over the actual legislation which has taken place in these several communities with reference to their several constituencies. I could, it seems to me, interest the Senate for a long time by reading from that legislation, but I shall not delay the Senate longer than to call its attention to a single instance. I read not long since a statute enacted by the Legislature of Florida for the education of her colored people. I read it in a Florida newspaper. The paper boasted itself that Florida was the first State to step forward and attempt the work of educating the children of her colored population. And now, sir, I ask the attention of the Senate to the provision which that Legislature made for the education of their colored population. They make provision for the education of their white children also, and everybody who has any property there is taxed for the education of the white children. Black and white are taxed alike for that purpose; but for the education of colored children a fund is raised only from colored men. It amounts to one dollar a head upon all colored males between the ages of twenty-one and fifty-five years. There were in 1860 between twelve thousand three hundred and twelve thousand four hundred colored males between the ages of twenty and fifty-five in Florida, so that that fund would yield about twelve thousand dollars dedicated to the work of educating the colored children of Florida—not a magnificent endowment, one would think. But how is it to be expended? First, there is to be a superintendent of colored schools for the State to be paid out of it, and he is to receive a salary of $2,000. That reduces it essentially. Next, there is to be an assistant superintendent of colored schools for each county at $200 a year. There are in the State of Florida, I believe, thirty-nine counties, which would give $7,800 to the assistant superintendents. Add that to the salary of the State superintendent, and it takes $9,800 from the school fund to pay the superintendents, leaving $2,200 to pay the teachers. But the fund is not left quite so destitute as that; they require each one of the teachers to pay five dollars to the fund to get a license to teach. They are to be examined, their fitness ascertained, and if permission is given them to teach they are to pay five dollars, and that goes to the fund. That swells it; when that license is purchased they can set up a school. Into that school, however, it is worthy of remark that no child can go without permission of the superintendent or his assistant, and no child can stay a day without the permission of the superintendent or his assistant, and the teacher who has paid five dollars for the permission to teach cannot hold that permission a day longer than the superintendent or assistant superintendent sees fit to allow, for the statute expressly authorizes the superintendent or assistant superintendent to vacate or annul the certificate whenever he shall see fit for incompetency or "other good cause"—any cause which seems good to the superintendent or assistant superintendent.

There, Mr. President, I have submitted to you one of the statutes in one of these States, as you will have them to be, touching one of the great interests not only of this colored population but of the State itself, and I ask you, any of you to-day, if in view of one such fact as that you dare hesitate to put in the Constitution of the United States a positive inhibition upon exercising this power of local government to sanction such a crime as I have just portrayed.

Again, sir, we propose to change the basis of representation in the different States. We propose to base it still upon numbers; but it is proposed to say that if in any State the right of suffrage is denied to any portion of its male inhabitants over the age of twenty-one years, then a certain portion of the inhabitants of that State shall be excluded from the numbers counted in the basis of representation. Is that objected to? Yes. Is it not just? Will you tell me what reason there is why when three million people inhabiting these States are denied the right to vote for Representatives, other three millions should have a double representation in the Congress of the United States? To all the people who are allowed to choose Representatives in those States we give by this amendment just the representation that we give to the same number of people in any other State. The effect of it simply is to say that those people who are not allowed to choose Representatives shall not be represented. They cannot be represented; it is a physical impossibility. It is no use to talk about three million colored people being represented, when not one of them is consulted in the choice of Representatives. The Representatives chosen for those men are representing some other men, not them.

I am sorry to have to put that clause into our Constitution, as I am sorry for the necessity which calls upon us to put the preceding clause into the Constitution. I wish there was no community and no State in the United States that was not prepared to say with my friend from Nevada that all men may be represented in the Congress of the United States and shall be represented and shall choose their own Representatives. That is the better doctrine; that is the true doctrine. I would much prefer, myself, to unite with the people of the United States in saying that hereafter no man shall be excluded from the right to vote, than to unite with them in saying that hereafter some men may be excluded from the right of representation.

Sir, to the debate which we have had on this question of the right of suffrage I have listened with a great deal of interest. I trust I have derived some instruction from it, but after all it is not so much as I think would have come to me but for the fact that since I have first known politics at all, I think I have known that no State can deny to any large portion of its adult male population the right to vote, the right to an equal voice in the making of its laws and the choice of its officers, without danger to that State, the whole community, as well as great wrong to the individuals excluded.

I know it is said that these colored people who have just been released from slavery down there in these communities are not fit to vote. I admit it. Who is fit to vote? Only the man who always knows how to vote right, and who always will vote right, is really fit to vote; and, tried by that standard, how many of us are qualified to vote? These people, it is said, are very ignorant, very debased, utterly uncultured and untutored. Yes, Mr. President, I believe that is so. Who made them so? The very men who you insist shall have the exclusive right of voting there. Is it more dangerous to be an ignorant man than to make an ignorant man? Tell me that. Is he a more dangerous member of the State who simply is ignorant, than he who having the power to command otherwise makes men ignorant? The men in whose hands you want to pile up authority are the men who have imposed this ignorance upon that black population down there. You say they are degraded. The degradation is not natural to them; it is imposed upon them, and you know it; and the men who have done it you want to crown. God knows there are no people more unfit to exercise the right of suffrage than they are, except the men who made them such as they are, and those men are still more unfit.

SENATE.

Reconstruction—Mr. Howe.

* 39TH CONG.... 1ST SESS.

But, Mr. President, I beg leave to say to you that ignorance is not the worst quality that you have to contend with in the State. The man who does not know how to vote is not so unfit to vote, after all, as the man who knows how to vote and will not vote as his convictions dictate. He is the dangerous man. He is the man that imperils all your laws. He is the worst enemy in republican States and in all States. He is the man against whom you have most to guard. The ignorant man necessarily has no predetermination to vote wrong; he is just as willing to vote right as wrong; and he can be instructed to vote right just as readily as to vote wrong if you take the same pains to instruct him in the right that you do to instruct him in the wrong, provided he is honest; and honesty dwells with ignorance just as readily, and, thank God, just as lovingly, as it does with culture, and you will find it there as often.

As I said before, I would much prefer to unite with the people of the United States in laying the command upon all men to permit all men to vote than to concur in laying the command on any portion of our fellow-men to go without the right. If, however, these communities upon whom this provision, it is supposed, will work most disadvantageously, do not like it, the remedy is plain and simple in their own hands. They have only to put the ballot into the hands of these men, allow them to choose Representatives, and Representatives will come here representing the whole of their population.

But again, sir, it is proposed to say that no person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, in short, under the United States who has ever taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and then violated that oath and become a traitor to the Government of the United States. That presses hard. That is going to curtail the rights and the privileges of some of the men in these rebellious States. I ask the Senate to pause upon this proposition. I ask the Senate to consider this proposition carefully before they assent to it. It declares that such a man as Jefferson Davis, or Henry A. Wise, or John Slidell, or James M. Mason shall not hereafter hold office under the Government of the United States unless two thirds of Congress shall hereafter concede that privilege to him. It is a pretty harsh thing to say. I feel it keenly; I feel it sensitively. It is precisely what the President, I am told, has said about me and about men who think as I do. It is what the Secretary of the Treasury has said about men who think as I do, that we shall not hold office, offices which they have the control of and can exclude us from. I have all along thought this harsh. I have thought it was especially harsh to be told by the Secretary of the Treasury, who is particularly anxious and has called upon us to remit our test oath so that he can employ traitors in the service of the Government of the United States, that men cannot hold office under him who were guilty of no offense but thinking as I do. I have never considered myself criminal for anything which I think, for any vote which I have given, for any word which I have spoken. Doubtless I am somewhat guilty; but a man so charitable and tolerant as the Secretary of the Treasury, a man whose charity is so broad that it covers all this rebellion and the guilt by which it is accompanied, ought to have charity enough to forgive such political sins as mine.

Sir, do not make this declaration unless you think it is just. I shall vote for it, because I feel as the Senator from Kansas [Mr. LANE] said the other day he felt, that men who have forfeited their necks to the halter can very well afford to commute by refraining from taking office for a short time. I do not think the Government of the United States can be accused of a great want of magnanimity when it does no more than to take traitors down from the scaffold, even if it does neglect to confer office and dignity upon them for the time being, and so I shall vote for this proposition.

But again, we propose to declare that the obligations of the United States incurred in suppressing this rebellion shall be met as honest men meet all their obligations. I will not argue that proposition to the Senate. I do not know that it is likely to be opposed. We propose to say, furthermore, that the debt which has been incurred in the effort to overthrow the Government of the United States shall not be paid; nor shall the United States ever be taxed to pay the value of the slaves we have made free, and were compelled to make free, to save the life of the nation.

Upon the features of this amendment I propose to spend no further time. It is of no value, we are told, unless the people adopt it. That is true. Will the people of the several States assent to this amendment of the Constitution? I do not know. I am not endowed with the gift of prophecy. I cannot tell. It ought to become a part of your Constitution; that I know; and I am very much in the habit of thinking that what ought to be done will be done. But what alternative is there? These communities have no representatives upon this floor; they wish to have them; we want them to have representation here. They ought to have them. Let them assent to these most reasonable, most just, and most necessary propositions, and representation will be conceded to them. There is no alternative that I know of except that presented in what is called the President's policy.

Mr. HOWARD. What does that mean?

Mr. HOWE. What does that mean? It means this: that although these people are not fit to make laws at home, and cannot be allowed to make them, yet they must be allowed to send representatives here to participate in making laws for the United States. That is what it means.

Sir, we have heard a good deal about the President's policy. I should not feel called upon to review it here but for the fact that it is held up to us as a model plan, because it so sacredly and religiously respects the rights of States. It respects the rights of States, and therefore is constantly held up before us as being utterly at variance and at war with the idea which I submitted in January last. Why, Mr. President, it is upon all-fours precisely what that idea was, except that the President established the provisional governments, while I thought that Congress should establish them.

The first act of the President with reference to these communities was to overthrow every semblance of government within them. The second act was to concentrate every particle of that local authority in the hands of a single man appointed by him in each one of those communities. That is what you call respecting the rights of States, is it? That is the way you would have the rights of States respected! Listen to a clause of that organic law which the President enacted for the government of these communities. Omitting the preamble which recites his reasons for the step he was about to take, he proceeds to say:

"Now, therefore, in obedience to the high and solemn duties imposed upon me by the Constitution of the United States, and for the purpose of enabling the loyal people of said State to organize a State government, whereby justice may be established, domestic tranquility insured, and loyal citizens protected in all their rights of life, liberty, and property, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, and Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, do hereby appoint William W. Holden—"

What for? To be—

"provisional governor of the State of North Carolina, whose duty it shall be, at the earliest practicable period, to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary and proper for convening a convention, composed of delegates to be chosen by that portion of the people of said State who are loyal to the United States, and no others, for the purpose of altering or amending the constitution thereof."

That was the proclamation sent forth to Mr. Holden in North Carolina. A proclamation like that was sent forth to Mr. Sharkey in Mississippi, and to some individual in each one of the other States. That single clause which I have read to you, not only ignored the authority of Governor and Legislature and judge and municipal officer in these several States, but it absolutely ignored, set aside, trampled upon their organic laws and their constitutions. Some of these States, and most of them, had clauses in their constitutions prescribing the very mode in which their constitutions could be amended. The President of the United States ignores them all, disregards them all, and says to a man: "All the authority belonging to that State I put in your hands from this time forward; go on irrespective of your statutes and your constitutions; call together your people, prescribe the districts which may elect, prescribe the qualifications of those who may vote, and thus convene a body of men which shall make a new constitution for your State." It is indeed making an entirely new State.

Mr. President, in the history of the executive effort to reconstruct these States many very noticeable facts are found. I have been profoundly interested in looking over the journal of these executive efforts to make loyal States out of rebel communities. It was a difficult enterprise, you will see at once upon the face of the thing. That it should not have run entirely smooth I think would have been anticipated by anybody, especially commencing on that plan. I want to call your attention to some of these features. Most of these provisional governors entered upon the work assigned to them by issuing proclamations of their own, telling their respective subjects what was expected of them and how to do it. Governor Marvin, who was appointed provisional governor of Florida, and who, I believe, was one of the most intelligent of them all, issued a proclamation to his subjects; for you see they were all subjects of his, not constituents of his. He derived no power, no authority, from them whatever. He represented the President. As these were the people put into his hands to govern and to control for the time being, he issued a proclamation. He prescribed the qualifications which were required to enable a man to vote. He required them to be loyal; that is to say, he required them to take an oath that they would be loyal; and he required that nobody should vote who had been a traitor unless he had been pardoned; but he says:

"Where the person offering to vote comes within the exceptions contained in the amnesty proclamation—"

That is, where he is a $20,000 man, I presume—

"and shall have taken the amnesty oath, and shall have made application to the President for a special pardon through the provisional governor, and shall have been recommended by him for such pardon, the inspectors or judges of the election may, in most instances"—

What?—

"properly presume that such pardon has been granted, though, owing to the want of mail facilities, it may not have been received by the party at the time of the election."

In other words, if, on the morning of the election, a man who has not been pardoned shall take the amnesty oath, and get the governor's recommendation for a pardon to be sent to Washington, the inspector of the election may presume he has been pardoned, but has not received his pardon for the want of due mail facilities. That is the legal presumption established for such cases in the proclamation of the provisional governor of the State of Florida.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Reconstruction—Mr. Howe.

SENATE.

Governor Holden, who took one of these commissions, had some doubts about the right of some of his people to vote. What does he do? He does not look into the law or constitution of North Carolina to settle the question. If my friend, the Senator from Michigan, [Mr. HOWARD,] was appealed to by one of his fellow-citizens to know whether he had a right to vote, I do not precisely know what he would do. I think he would go to the statutes of Michigan, if he did not recollect the law, and I think he would do anything or everything except just what Governor Holden did. What did he do? He wrote to the Secretary of State to know whether such a man could vote or not. The Secretary of State was inquired of as to whether a certain man should vote in the State of North Carolina. This was in execution of that plan which is so very respectful and religiously regardful of the rights of the States. Here is Governor Holden's letter:

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, June 19, 1865.

SIR: I shall soon have to give directions to county boards, making provisions for the enrollment of voters.

I respectfully request to be instructed whether paroled soldiers will be allowed to vote for delegates to the State convention upon taking the oath of amnesty, or will each soldier have to procure the President's pardon?

I am, most respectfully, your obedient servant,
W. W. HOLDEN.

Hon. WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

Mr. SUMNER. Was it not addressed to the Secretary of State as having charge of our foreign relations?

Mr. HOWE. Mr. Holden must have thought he was dealing with a State not in the Union, but out of the Union, and that he must consult with the Department of Foreign Relations to know whether he had a right to vote or not. That did not occur to me. It is very plausible, very probable. I accept that explanation for the purposes of this argument.

But, Mr. President, the worst difficulty they seem to have had in getting along with this plan was in South Carolina. South Carolina proved a regular hard nut to be cracked. Several of these governors, when they received their commissions, not knowing exactly what to do with them, especially not knowing who was to pay them for discharging the duties imposed upon them, at once addressed letters to the Secretary of State to know who was going to pay their salaries. They got along with that very well. They were informed that their salaries would be paid upon bills being presented to the State Department, the Department of Foreign Relations. In South Carolina, Mr. B. F. Perry was appointed to be governor of those dominions. Perry seems to have been a little technical, crotchety, I should think. He was here in Washington, I take it, at the time he received his commission. The very first thing he does is to write a letter to the Department of Foreign Relations, dated Willard's Hotel, July 21, 1865:

"DEAR SIR: I desire to know what provision has been made for defraying the expenses?"

Not of the provisional governor, but—

"of the provisional government in South Carolina; likewise, whether I am allowed a private secretary, and his compensation; also, as to stationery, blanks," &c.

This is from the Governor of the sovereign State of South Carolina.

"In your communication to me inclosing my commission, you state that I am to receive a salary of $3,000, and may draw for the same on your Department monthly or quarterly. As we have no money in South Carolina at this time, it would be a very great accommodation to me to allow me to draw a quarter's salary at this time. If this can be done and you will send me a draft for the same, you will very much oblige me."

Then he goes on to ask for further and fuller instructions as to what he shall do. That was rather a poser. The Department of Foreign Relations seemed to have no difficulty in disposing of the mere matter of the governor's salary. They could get along by charging that over to the incidental fund of the War Department; but this undertaking to pay the expenses of that provisional government, and the private secretary, and all these assistants, to say nothing about the stationery of the executive department, was rather a poser; but the Secretary met it. On the very next day he replied, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.
WASHINGTON, July 22, 1865.

SIR: I have received your letter of yesterday, and trust that the favorable anticipations which it expresses in regard to the reorganization of the State of South Carolina will be realized.

The inevitable and indispensable charges attending the measure, including your salary as provisional governor, will be paid by the War Department as an expense incident to the suppression of the rebellion. You will, consequently, frame and submit to that Department an estimate of those expenses, in order that the necessary arrangements for defraying them may be made.

I am, sir, your very obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency B. F. PERRY, Provisional Governor of South Carolina, now in Washington.

The Secretary of Foreign Affairs had to play a little shy of that demand, but he met it honorably and honestly. Mr. Perry evidently seemed to think that as this cotillion was arranged by the United States the United States should pay for the music. The Secretary of State seems to have concurred in that view, and although he was a little afraid it might break him, he entered into the arrangement, but he says to the sovereign State of South Carolina, "It is only the inevitable and unavoidable expenses;" that is to say, you must economize all you can, for we do not know about this thing.

I should like to read other incidents transpiring in the progress of these efforts, but I have detained the Senate too long upon that subject. Let me conclude this part of the history with saying that after a fashion in almost all these communities, all, I believe, with the exception of Texas, the President, with the assistance of the Secretary of State, did succeed in setting up organizations which they proceeded to name State governments. Let them hereafter be known as State governments.

But, sir, were these governments clothed with the prerogative of States? Did the President so regard them? Did the Secretary of State regard them as States clothed with the power and with the attributes of States and vested with the authority of States? The Secretary tells us in a letter which he addressed to Governor Marvin of Florida on the 12th of September, 1865, how he regarded them. He says:

"Sir, your Excellency's letter"—

That was really very respectful in the Secretary of State. That looks as if he recognized them as sovereign States. He addressed Governor Marvin as "your Excellency"—

"Your Excellency's letter of the 29th ultimo"—

That was the letter in which he inclosed the proclamation from which I read an extract a short time ago—

"with the accompanying proclamation has been received and submitted to the President. The steps to which it refers, toward reorganizing the government of Florida, seem to be in the main judicious, and good results from them may be hoped for. The presumption to which the proclamation refers, however, in favor of insurgents who may wish to vote, and who may have applied for but not received their pardons, is not entirely approved."

Not entirely approved—almost approved, not quite.

"All applications for pardons will be duly considered, and will be disposed of as soon as may be practicable. It must, however, be distinctly understood that the restoration to which your proclamation refers will be subject to the decision of"—

The President? No—
"of Congress."

That was the notice personally served upon the Governor of Florida by the Secretary of State, dispatched on the 12th of September, 1865.

Mr. President, as further evidence of the light in which the President and Secretary of State regarded these reconstructed governments down there, let me call your attention to a telegram sent from the Department of State on the 11th of November, 1865. That is after the Secretary of State had been notified that Governor Holden, in North Carolina, had gone on, had assembled a convention, and had the constitution amended, the amendments adopted by the people, and the government elected under it, the whole machinery set up, the fires under the boilers, all ready to start the engine. Holden thought the engine was going to start, and that he had to start, too, that is to say, stop playing provisional governor. The Secretary of State seems to have been afraid that Holden would start and let the new government run on; he telegraphed to him on the 11th of November 1865, as follows:

"The President directs me to say that he expects you to continue in the exercise of the functions of provisional governor of North Carolina until you shall have been relieved by directions from him."

Thus you see in that community which you insist upon calling a State because it was once made a State, the President not only intervened at the close of the rebellion and wiped out of existence every one of the local tribunals, put the whole power in the hands of a single man, authorized and ordered him to go on and reorganize a new government, but after that new government had been organized he still told the one-man power to stay there in spite of these new tribunals which had been chosen by the people to represent them. "Stay there because the President tells you to stay there" or "stay there until relieved by the President." That dispatch was sent on the 11th of November. It was not until the 4th of December that the Secretary of State wrote to Governor Holden:

"The time has arrived when, in the judgment of the President of the United States, the care and conduct of the proper affairs of the State of North Carolina may be committed to the constitutional authorities chosen by the people thereof without danger to the peace and safety of the United States."

Almost a month after he is notified of the organization of this government the President holds that whole power belonging to a State in the hands of a single individual, notwithstanding the people had done everything which they had been told to do to regain possession of that power.

So in Mississippi, on the 8th of September the Secretary of State addressed to Governor Sharkey this letter:

"Sir, your letter of the 28th ultimo, accompanied by a copy of the amended constitution of Mississippi, as adopted by the recent convention of that State, has been received and will engage the early attention of the President."

On the 19th of October Governor Sharkey informed the Secretary of State as follows:

JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI, October 19, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that Benjamin G. Humphreys, who was elected to the office of Governor of the State at the late election, has been duly installed into office, and that all the other State officers have been duly qualified. The civil constitutional government of the State is now complete, and the Legislature is in session.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. L. SHARKEY,
Late Provisional Governor.

Hon. WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

On the 3d of November the Secretary of State sent a telegram to Governor Sharkey, addressed to "his Excellency William L. Sharkey, provisional governor of the State of Mississippi, Jackson." This is in reply to Sharkey's communication in which he calls himself "late provisional governor," and in which he tells him that the Governor and all the officers elected by the people had been duly installed, qualified, and taken possession of their offices. In reply to that the Secretary says:

SENATE.

Reconstruction—Mr. Howe.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

"Your letter of the 19th ultimo has been received. It is the expectation of the President that you will continue your functions as provisional governor until further notice from this Department."

There was his new machine actually set running by a blunder of this provisional governor. He did not know but that when set up it was well enough to let it run. He informs the Secretary of State so. A few weeks after that, the Secretary tells him that he must continue to play provisional governor of Mississippi until he is otherwise ordered by the Department.

I am not objecting to these things; they are all right enough; but, Mr. President, [Mr. HENDRICKS in the chair,] when such antics are attempted to be played in the State of Wisconsin and the State of Indiana, you and I will have something to say about it, I take it. When such antics as these are attempted to be played in States which are States, States which are sanctioned by the Constitution, I take it that we shall have something to say about it. I comment upon these things because I find them in that policy and in that plan which is said to be so peculiarly respectful, so tenderly regardful of the rights of States, and because this policy is championed by those who assert that when you have once committed these prerogatives to a community they remain there forever; you cannot interfere with them under any circumstances whatever.

But, sir, the time did come, in the progress of events, when the notice went forth from the State Department to these provisional governors, saying to them, "Retire; let the new governments take possession." Were they made States thereby, clothed with the full powers of States, permitted to exercise the powers belonging to States under the Constitution? Let us see. The people of one of the counties of the State of Alabama, claiming the right to choose a judge of probate, a right secured to them by the constitution and laws of the sovereign State of Alabama, seem to have elected one Raphael W. Semmes to be judge of probate. Raphael W. Semmes is a historical character. I understand he is a very able man, and I dare say would make a very good judge of probate. As suggested by my friend from Ohio, [Mr. WADE,] if he has never had any actual practice in administering estates he has undoubtedly been the occasion of making a great many estates to be administered upon. The people there thought, it seems, that he was the best man they had for judge of probate, and they elected him. The news came up here to Washington that he had been elected. An order was issued. From whom? Not from any of the tribunals of the State of Alabama, but from Brevet Major General Charles R. Woods, who seems to have been in command of the department of Alabama:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT ALABAMA,
May 17, 1866.

In compliance with instructions from the President of the United States, it is hereby directed that Raphael Semmes be not permitted to hold or exercise the functions of judge of the probate court of Mobile county, or any other civil or political office of trust while he remains unpardoned by the President.

By order of Brevet Major General Charles R. Woods:
A. RAMSEY MINNINGER,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Judge Bond will perform the duties of the office in the mean time.

That is a pretty good note for a major general. Recollect it is by command of the President of the United States, who is taking such excellent care of the sovereign rights of States. He tells the people of this county in Alabama, "You cannot elect Mr. Semmes for your judge of probate," and having done so, he says further, "Mr. Semmes, you stand to one side; Mr. Bond, you be judge of probate." Who is going to administer upon estates in that county hereafter, I should like to know? If the right of Judge Bond to administer is called in question, what is the evidence of his right? The constitution and the laws of the State of Alabama require that the judge of probate shall be elected by the people. They elected Mr. Semmes. General Woods says to him, "You must not play judge of probate; let Judge Bond do this." Judge Bond has got the commission of General Woods as his authority for administering upon the estates of those who may happen to die in that particular county.

Mr. HOWARD. By whose authority was that done?

Mr. HOWE. By the authority of the President of the United States. Sir, the best advice I can give to the people of that county is, not to die until a new judge of probate is elected. I am afraid there will be trouble in the settlement of their estates.

[At this point, the honorable Senator yielded to a motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.]

WEDNESDAY, June 6, 1866.

The same subject being again under consideration—

Mr. HOWE said: Mr. President, when the Senate adjourned last evening I was endeavoring to show that not only did the President of the United States recognize and exercise the power of the General Government to establish provisional governments for the seceded States, but that he recognized so absolute a control over them on the part of the Government of the United States that he did not recognize even the new governments organized through the intervention of his own governors as clothed with the attributes and prerogatives of States. I referred to the fact that a judge of probate in a county of Alabama had been dismissed by the order of the President from his office, and that another man, not elected by the people, had been selected to discharge the duties of that office. There is another instance. In New Orleans, in March last, the people elected a man by the name of Monroe to be mayor of that city. General Canby, it seems, being in command there, thought he was not a fit man to discharge the duties of mayor of that city, and we learn by a dispatch dated New Orleans, March 19, this fact:

"All the newly elected city officials were duly installed to-day with the exception of Mayor Monroe and Mr. Nixon, an alderman, whose functions have been temporarily suspended as coming within the exceptions to pardon made by President Johnson's proclamation. M. G. Rosseau has been installed mayor pro tempore by order of General Canby."

Thus, in Alabama, judges elected by the people are set aside; in New Orleans, mayors and aldermen of cities elected by the people are set aside; and these men were elected under the authority of these new constitutions and the laws enacted in accordance with these new constitutions!

Sir, let me be distinctly understood. I am not complaining of the President of the United States or of General Canby for setting aside Judge Semmes, or Mayor Monroe, or Alderman Nixon. These are not isolated cases, but a great many others like unto them have happened in other States of that portion of the Union. I am not complaining of these acts. I agree entirely with the President, that Judge Semmes is not fit to discharge the duties of judge of probate. I have no doubt that Mr. Monroe is entirely unfit to act as mayor of the city of New Orleans. What I wish to call attention to is this: that Judge Semmes is no more unfit for judge of probate than the people of that county are to elect a judge of probate. When the President of the United States finds that Judge Semmes is not fit for judge of probate, he gives the most conclusive testimony in the world that the people who elected Judge Semmes were not fit to make an election. There was no misunderstanding about who Judge Semmes was. They know all about him. They elected him because he suited them. So of the election of Mr. Monroe. Mr. Monroe was satisfactory to the people of the city of New Orleans, and therefore they chose him. In the judgment of the President, he was unfit for mayor: he had not been pardoned. The people of New Orleans cared nothing for that fact. They would just as lief have a man to serve them who had not been pardoned as one who had; and, as far as that goes, I suspect I should agree very much with the people of New Orleans. I do not think there is any great distinction to be made between those who are not pardoned and those who have been.

I mention these facts for the other purpose of showing that the President does not regard these communities as States like the State of New York or like the State of Ohio. He would not attempt to do any of these things in either of those States or in any State which had held fast to the Union and never had dissolved its relations with the Union. And I cite them for the purpose of asking the question, how it happens that what the President could do without an act of Congress, Congress could not do by an act of its own? It was argued, I recollect, by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. COWAN] some time since that the President had a peculiar gift, or a peculiar right, for doing these things because he was an executive officer. I understood the Senator to say that the President of the United States went into South Carolina and Georgia and deposed Governors and Legislatures, and had the same right to do it that a sheriff would have had, or a marshal. Perhaps he had as much right as a sheriff or a marshal. The Senator's argument put it upon the ground that these men were criminals discharging the functions of these offices down there, and that the President instead of arresting them as criminals just deposed them.

I think the Senator from Pennsylvania or any other lawyer can understand the vast difference between the two acts. But I think the Senator from Pennsylvania will agree that neither of these two acts could be done by the President, or be done by a sheriff, or a marshal, simply because he chose to do it. The mere fact that a man is a criminal, or is deemed to be a criminal, gives no authority to a sheriff or a marshal to interfere with him. Before the sheriff or the marshal is allowed to put his hand upon him and restrain him of his liberty, he must have the authority of the State or of the United States for doing it; he must have a writ, a precept, a written command in his possession issued by the supreme authority, directing him to do that very thing. It must be addressed to him, and must command him to do that very act, otherwise he cannot make the arrest. No marshal of the United States had any right to interfere with the Governor of South Carolina or with any member of her Legislature, simply because they had been traitors; but when a court of the United States, having jurisdiction of that offense, saw fit to issue a warrant, addressed to the marshal, directing him to make that arrest, then he could do it; not until then. The President could not do it at all. The President could not do it if he had a trunk full of warrants. He cannot serve a writ. In order to serve writs he must be authorized by law to serve them. His duties are very different from those of a marshal. And when the writ is issued it must be served by the officer to whom it is issued and by nobody else.

But there is this great difference between what the President did and what the Senator from Pennsylvania supposes he did. What the Senator from Pennsylvania supposes he did was simply to restrain the Governors of these States and the other officers of their liberty. That was not all. That was but a small part. He restrained the whole people of the "State," as they call it, of their liberty. They had under their laws, and it is contended here they had under the Constitution of the United States, the right to elect those men and to have their services. It was interfering less with the liberty of the individuals who were removed from office than the liberty of the people themselves. They chose to have those officers to serve them. The President said they should not have them.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Reconstruction—Mr. Howe.

SENATE.

Thus it was that, without writ, without warrant, as I think, without authority of law, certainly without process in his hands, by a single clause of a proclamation, he not only arrested, that is to say took possession of, took into custody, according to the theory of the Senator from Pennsylvania, every officer in each one of eleven States, but he actually took into custody the whole people of the State. That was a pretty sweeping arrest, not often equaled!

No, Mr. President, the only authority in the world for doing these things is the fact that the people of those States had themselves destroyed the only kind of government which the Constitution of the United States will tolerate. What was in the place of those governments was an illegal, unconstitutional, criminal existence, and the President treated that criminal organization just as a sheriff or anybody else would treat any other person or any other party engaged upon a criminal enterprise. The law commands you not to interfere with the liberty of a citizen except you have due process of law for doing it. Still, if you are going along Pennsylvania avenue and see a store about to be entered by a burglar, in spite of the Constitution, in spite of the laws, you would not hesitate to take him by the collar, if you felt strong enough, and stop the commission of that crime. And so the President found a band of criminals before him. He brushed them out of the way. But if they were lawful tribunals of legal States, then instead of doing a good deed, as I insist he did, he committed a great wrong.

But it has sometimes been said that he could be justified in doing these things because he was Commander in-Chief of the Army and the Navy, and that he did them in the exercise of what are called the war powers of the Government. Without stopping to consider whether more of the war powers of the Government is vested in the President than in the Congress of the United States, I want to say that the proof seems conclusive that he did not assume to act in virtue of any such power whatever. War had ended when he deposed these Governors and Legislatures. War had ended when the new Governors and new Legislatures were elected. War had ended when Judge Semmes was deposed; when Mayor Monroe was deposed. But if I am mistaken on that point, if war had not ended then, it did end subsequently. I can prove that. I can bring proof that the President and his friends will not contradict, that it ended in all the States but Texas. I find it certified in a proclamation, "Done at the city of Washington the 2d day of April, in the year of our Lord, 1866, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninetieth"—signed Andrew Johnson, and attested by William H. Seward, Secretary of State. That proclamation is introduced to the world by a series of whereases, occupying a whole column and more of this daily paper—the twelve tribes of whereases, starting, I believe, away back in 1861, five years of whereases. One would think a pretty important proclamation ought to succeed such a formidable preamble as that. Let us read the proclamation:

"Now, therefore"—

Because of all these things which have occupied a column and a half, or less—

"Now, therefore, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby proclaim and declare that the insurrection which heretofore existed in the States of Georgia, South Carolina, Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, and Florida is at an end, and is henceforth to be so regarded."

The insurrection is at an end, says the President; let the world henceforth so regard it. Well, what does that do? The insurrection being at an end, how is the face of things changed by that? Now will these States have the services of their officers? Now will they be remitted to the rights and prerogatives of States? Now will their elections be respected, their laws have full force, run, and be glorified? Something important everybody thought was going to happen after such a proclamation as that was issued. It seems that an agent of the Freedmen's Bureau down in Georgia thought some great change must have been wrought by this proclamation in the face of political affairs, and he inquired what it meant. His inquiry was referred to the Department of War. He received this answer to it on the 9th of April:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, April 9, 1866.

SIR: The assistant commissioner of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, &c., for the State of Georgia having inquired whether the President's proclamation removes martial law, and stated that the department commander does not feel authorized to arrest parties who have committed outrages on freed people or Union refugees, the Secretary of War, with the approval of the President, directs me to inform you that the President's proclamation does not remove martial law, or operate in any way upon the Freedmen's Bureau in the exercise of its legitimate jurisdiction. It is not expedient, however, to resort to military tribunals in any case where justice can be attained through the medium of civil authority.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Brevet Major General J. M. BRANNAN, Augusta, Georgia.

The insurrection is suppressed; peace has come; martial law, however, does not end in those communities; nothing is changed by it; their rights are just what they were before, and the authority of the Government is just as absolute as it had been before; nay, this Judge Semmes was deposed after this proclamation issued, after the insurrection was suppressed, and was so declared by the President.

Would the President of the United States undertake to say that martial law existed or could exist in any State of the United States now, subsequent to his proclamation? The Constitution declares that "the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it." Would the President venture to say he had suspended the writ of habeas corpus when he had declared there was no longer any rebellion? I think not. He continues martial law there, because it is the only law that is reliable. He has nothing else, he has no act of Congress, and he cannot trust to the laws of those communities. He is perfectly right, in my judgment, in not trusting to those laws. But I think it would be a great deal better for him, a great deal better for those communities, a great deal better for the country if he would recommend to Congress here the passage of such laws as are suited to their condition.

Sir, let me call your attention to one little fact (I will not read the papers) illustrative of the great embarrassment attending this mode of governing great communities. The Legislature of the new State of Florida, I learn, enacted a law establishing a county criminal court, the principal business of which I judge to be to discipline the colored population of that State—the freed people. That statute declares a great many different offenses, prescribes penalties for them; whipping is one of the penalties; the pillory is another of the penalties. The commissioner of freedmen's affairs thought that whippings and pillories were not suitable penalties to be imposed on human beings. Accordingly he declared that such punishments should not be imposed on the freedmen who were subject to his jurisdiction. He appealed to the officer in command of the department of Florida, General Foster, I think. General Foster issued an order from his headquarters directing that whenever a county court sentenced a negro to be whipped or to stand in the pillory he should be turned over to his headquarters, not be whipped, not to stand in the pillory, but when turned over to his headquarters he should be set to work at the ball and chain so long a time for each blow to be inflicted, so long a time for each hour he was to stand in the pillory. That order was received by the Governor, and he issued, I believe, an order in conformity to that requiring all persons sentenced to stand in the pillory or to be whipped to be turned over to his headquarters.

Now, Mr. President, just look for a moment at the condition of a man sentenced to be whipped or to stand in the pillory in Florida. The judgment is not executed; but neither is it reversed. The defendant is sent to the headquarters of General Foster. Another punishment which is provided for in no judgment in the world is inflicted upon him. The judgment in the county court stands unexecuted. After he has got through with his service at the ball and chain, and has left General Foster's headquarters, there is the judgment of the county criminal court to be executed. The only aid, as I see, that the negro is likely to get from this intervention of the officer in command is that the punishment of whipping or standing in the pillory is simply postponed, and in the end he receives a double punishment instead of a single punishment.

If a provisional government was established for Florida by act of Congress, none of these things could happen. When Florida enacted a law which outraged the sense of public justice, Congress would do what it does with every other Territory enacting such a law; the law would be set aside, and then there would be no judgments under it. But here, under this mode of administering government, the law is allowed to stand; the tribunals of justice act upon it, try cases, pronounce judgment, and the judgment is not allowed to be enforced, at least until another penalty deemed satisfactory to the officer in command is inflicted. Sir, I do sincerely think I am abundantly justified in making the proposition with which I set out, that if the power which I claimed in January last for Congress to provide provisional governments for those communities is not furnished by the Constitution, the President is more defenseless than any man who has ever undertaken to administer government for the United States. If that authority does not exist, how these acts are to be defended it is impossible for me to conceive.

But, Mr. President, it is urged that however the plan or the policy of the President may accord with the Constitution, it does accord exactly with the policy of his predecessor in office. That is a point which my colleague has urged repeatedly with great force and with great earnestness. I desire to say now that there is no more similitude between the policy of President Johnson and the policy of President Lincoln than there is between a blister of Spanish flies and a poultice of cabbage leaves. [Laughter.] What was the policy of President Lincoln, which this plan is said to resemble? Recollect, sir, when Mr. Lincoln issued his proclamation of the 8th of December, 1863, we were at war, and this proclamation of his was issued, not in the interest of our enemies in that war, but to injure our enemies and in the interest of our friends. Therefore it was that he proclaimed this:

"And I do further proclaim, declare, and make known, that whenever, in any of the States of Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, and North Carolina, a number of persons, not less than one tenth in number of the votes cast in such State at the presidential election of the year of our Lord 1860, each having taken the oath aforesaid, and not having since violated it, and being a qualified voter by the election law of the State existing immediately before the so-called act of secession, and excluding all others, shall reestablish a State government which shall be republican, and in no wise contravening said oath, such shall be recognized as the true government of the State, and the State shall receive thereunder the benefits of the constitutional provision which declares that 'the United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of the Legislature, or the Executive, (when the Legislature cannot be convened,) against domestic violence."

SENATE.

Reconstruction—Mr. Howe.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

That is what he said. There was in that proclamation the exercise of the same identical power which President Johnson exercised in 1865, and the exercise which I insisted ought to be exercised in January last by Congress; that is to say, the power to take the prerogatives of a State from the whole people of a State, and to do something else with them. President Lincoln proposed to take them from the whole body of the people and give them to a minority of the people, not less than one tenth. President Johnson, in 1865, took them from the whole body of the people, and gave them to a single individual. I proposed to take them from the whole body of the people in the State and give them to the people of the United States. That is the difference between the three propositions. Look at the practical operation, however, of the two plans. President Lincoln's proclamation says to these people down there, "So many of you as will, now while the war is raging, turn your backs on the rebellion, become our friends, take an oath to stand by us, and to fight our enemies, we will take by the hand; we will organize you into a State; we will build up the boundary line of a State, as a wall between you and the rebels; we will exclude them from all power, and vest all power in you." That was President Lincoln's plan. He proposed to wrest the prerogatives of the State from the majority and to bestow them as a reward upon the minority who should then, when the rebellion was at the height of its power, desert it, defy it, and take an oath to resist it. President Johnson's plan was promulgated only after the power of the rebellion was utterly broken. When majorities and minorities were alike ready to swear fealty to the United States because they could not longer resist its power, then the President tendered pardon and the prerogatives of the State to that very majority which had resisted while resistance was possible, and to whom the law secured nothing but the extreme penalty due to treason.

President Lincoln held up the prerogatives of the State as a reward to those who should desert the rebellion and help subdue it, while President Johnson, after the rebellion is subdued by the boundless expenditure of blood and treasure, flings those same priceless prerogatives to his prisoners of war.

But there was another difference between the policy of President Lincoln and the policy of President Johnson. President Lincoln says:

"This proclamation is intended to present the people of the States wherein the national authority has been suspended and loyal State governments have been subverted a mode in and by which the national authority and loyal State governments may be re-established within said States, or in any of them; and while the mode presented is the best the Executive can suggest with his present impressions, it must not be understood that no other possible mode would be acceptable."

President Lincoln offers the best plan he can think of, but advertises that he is ready to accept a better one if others can devise it. President Johnson offers a plan immeasurably worse, and allows men to whose unbought efforts he is indebted for the power he wields to be proscribed for no offense but believing that a better plan can be devised.

Mr. President, here seems to be the issue: we invite the people of the United States to incorporate these just and necessary amendments into their Constitution, and we propose to sequester the claim to representation in Congress until these amendments be agreed to. The opponents of these amendments invite the people of the States now represented to send Representatives here who will open these doors to the representatives of these rebellious communities at once, and whether the pending amendments be agreed to or not. That is the issue. I do not know what the decision is to be. I hear it said in the newspapers and elsewhere that a Congress is coming here that will open these doors. Perhaps so. I see most elaborate efforts being made to bring such a Congress here. With what success it is to be attended I do not know. That remains to be seen. I see a great many individuals and a great many representatives sent here by the Union party to uphold the Union cause now aiding to their utmost in all that is thought to be required to secure such a Congress.

Mr. WILSON. There are not a great many of them.

Mr. HOWE. No, I do not mean to say there are a great many of these representatives. There are a few of them aiding in that work. I am told that the design is to pack the Congress of the United States, to select men and to secure the election of men devoted to the single purpose of getting representatives in here from these lately rebellious States.

Mr. President, there was an attempt about two hundred years ago to pack a Parliament in England, and it would be well enough perhaps for those engaged in this enterprise to recur to the history of that. It is said, indeed, that those who are engaged in this enterprise have the President with them and have the patronage of the Government on their side; that that is all-potential; that the country and the public conscience cannot stand up against it. They may be right who put that estimate upon the influence of patronage. But recollect we do not know that this patronage is to be in the hands of the present Executive for more than about two years. When, two hundred years ago, they undertook to pack a Parliament in England, this patronage was all in the hands of a king for life and his heirs after him.

Mr. COWAN. What Parliament was that?

Mr. HOWE. The Parliament of James II. The question there was whether the Catholics should be admitted to a share in the Government. The question here is, whether the rebels shall be admitted to a share in the Government. I do not know whether the hostility of the nation to the rebels is as strong as the hostility of the English nation was to the Catholics or not. I am inclined to think it is. That was the question in that case. I have stated the question in this. Macaulay says:

"The sanction of a Parliament was necessary to his system."

And I judge the President thinks that the sanction of a Congress would be convenient to his.

"The sanction of a free and lawful Parliament it was evidently impossible to obtain; but it might not be altogether impossible to bring together by corruption, by intimidation, by violent exertions of prerogative, by fraudulent distortions of law, an assembly which might call itself a Parliament, and might be willing to register any edict of the sovereign. Returning-officers must be appointed who would avail themselves of the slightest pretense to declare the King's friends duly elected. Every placeman, from the highest to the lowest, must be made to understand that if he wished to retain his office he must, at this juncture, support the throne by his vote and interest. The High Commission, meanwhile, would keep its eye on the clergy. The boroughs, which had just been remodeled to serve one turn, might be remodeled again to serve another. By such means the King hoped to obtain a majority in the House of Commons. The upper House would then be at his mercy. He had undoubtedly by law the power of creating peers without limit, and this power he was fully determined to use."

"But there was no extremity to which he was not prepared to go in case of necessity. When in a large company an opinion was expressed that the peers would prove intractable"

As it is sometimes suggested the Senate may—

"Oh, silly," cried Sunderland, turning to Churchill, "your troop of guards shall be called up to the House of Lords."

And I think I have heard such intimations thrown out about the treatment to be bestowed upon the Senate.

"Having determined to pack a Parliament, James set himself energetically and methodically to the work. A proclamation appeared in the Gazette, announcing—

A change of the postmasters, collectors of revenue, assessors, and district attorneys, substantially.

"A proclamation appeared in the Gazette, announcing that the King had determined to revise the commissions of peace and of lieutenancy, and to retain in public employment only such gentlemen as should be disposed to support his policy."

If they wanted to eat the King's bread and butter they must support the King's policy.

"A committee of seven Privy Counsellors sat at Whitehall for the purpose of regulating—such was the phrase—the municipal corporations."

I do not know exactly how many members compose the Johnson club, which is, I believe, nothing essentially different from a committee of Privy Counsellors.

"In this committee Jeffreys alone represented the Protestant interest. Powis alone represented the moderate Roman Catholics. All the other members belonged to the Jesuitical faction. Among them was Petre, who had just been sworn of the council. Till he took his seat at the board, his elevation had been kept a profound secret from everybody but Sunderland," &c.

Macaulay goes on at length to describe the efforts which were made to pack the Parliament; but after all they did not succeed. It seems wonderful that they did not. The King had absolutely unlimited control of all patronage, all appointments. Parliament did not dispute that with him. Congress does not yet agree that that power is in the hands of the President. But whatever power the King had he had for life. It is not certain that the President has the power vested in him to-day for life. Mr. President, how were these efforts received by the people of England? The historian says that Aubrey de Vere, Earl of Oxford, the noblest subject of England, when called upon to acquiesce in the policy of the King, answered:

"Sir, I will stand by your Majesty against all enemies to the last drop of my blood. But this is matter of conscience, and I cannot comply."

He was at once removed from his lieutenancy. A similar demand was made upon the Earl of Shrewsbury, and a similar reply given, and similar treatment was administered; upon the Earl of Essex with like results, and upon a great number of the most distinguished nobility of England; and one after another they went their way, as our postmasters, collectors, and assessors are going now in these days. Mr. President, history has taken note and has preserved down to this day the names, the fames, and cherishes yet the memory of those men who would rather be right than to be lieutenants of counties; and history for a great many years to come will cherish the name and the memory of those men who in these days dare to be right rather than be postmasters or collectors.

Among the expedients resorted to for the purpose of securing the election of the right sort of representatives was this:

"The catechism by which the lords lieutenant had been directed to test the sentiments of the country gentlemen consisted of three questions. Every magistrate and deputy lieutenant was to be asked, first, whether, if he should be chosen to serve in Parliament, he would vote for a bill framed on the principles of the Declaration of Indulgence; secondly, whether, as an elector, he would support candidates who would engage to vote for such a bill; and thirdly, whether, in his private capacity, he would aid the King's benevolent designs by living in friendship with people of all religious persuasions."

A pretty close catechism there.

Mr. COWAN. There is not much objection to that these days—toleration and indulgence.

Mr. HOWE. No, there does not seem to be. I believe the catechism has been greatly improved since that period.

"As soon as the questions got abroad, a form of answer, drawn up with admirable skill, was circulated all over the kingdom, and was generally adopted. It was to the following effect: 'As a member of the House of Commons, should I have the honor of a seat there, I shall think it my duty carefully to weigh such reasons as may be adduced in debate for and against a bill of indulgence, and then to vote according to my conscientious conviction. As an elector, I shall give my support to candidates whose notions of the duty of a representative agree with my own. As a private man, it is my wish to live in peace and charity with everybody.'"

A very good form of an answer. Whether it was referred to by any extent by those dis tinguished Cabinet officers who were visited by a serenading party the other night, and catechized in much the same way, and whether any of their responses were framed upon this precedent or not, I do not know.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS..

Reconstruction—Mr. Howe.

SENATE.

This was in 1687. In 1688 the dismissed lieutenants of counties were restored to favor and to place. The committee of Privy Councilors were dismissed from Whitehall and disgraced, and the King himself was a fugitive from his realm, and no man has since occupied his throne who supported his policy.

Sir, history is useless if it do not guide and animate us in the discharge of our duties.

Mr. President, some things have been said, and some incidents have transpired, since this debate commenced in January last which I propose to notice, although they are not very material to the debate itself. We seem to have parted company here. Gentlemen who met in this Congress at the beginning of the session representing the same party, upholding the same cause, commissioned to the same work, seem no longer to work together; and it has happened unfortunately, very unfortunately for the cause, very unfortunately for me, very unfortunately for the State that I have the honor in part to represent, that my colleague and myself seem to have parted company in this time.

My colleague some time since thought he had occasion to admonish me that the present President of the United States was not elected by the Whig party. I believe he was entirely correct in that statement. I really never had said or supposed that he was elected by the Whig party, and I did not quite understand at the time, and I do not quite understand now, what the necessity was for reminding me of so obvious a truth as that. It is true I did once belong to the Whig party. If, according to my colleagues's understanding of the gospel plan, that is the one unpardonable sin; if that is that blasphemy against the Holy Ghost which never can be forgiven in this world or in the world to come, I must submit to the consequences. I really was very honest and sincere, however, when I belonged to the Whig party. I really did think the Whig party tried to serve the country according to the best of its light and judgment; and I thought its light and its judgment were about as good as there were going. I think so still. I continued to serve it up to the time when in 1854 that party made its last struggle to defeat the repeal of the Missouri compromise; and when I found it, by reason of the defection of its southern members almost in a body, entirely unable to do anything to resist the tide of slavery aggressions, then, sir, I abandoned the Whig party and I united myself with the only party which seemed to me to promise some hope of effecting such a resistance. That is the extent of my guilt in that behalf.

My colleague took occasion to say in substance that he cared nothing for parties only as means to ends, but when we came down to principles we would find him there every time. If he had said that simply by way of paying tribute to his own steadfastness and stability I should not have felt called upon to dissent; but when he parades it rather as a reproach to those who no longer act with him than as a commendation of himself, it seems to me to demand some notice. I certainly do not stand here to deny that he is always true to principle; but I stand here to say that I do not think he is the only one who is always true to principle; and I must be allowed to add that, true as he is to principle, he is not understood to have been always true to the same principles. I have understood that in 1848 my colleague was a member of a convention which assembled at Buffalo, in the State of New York—a convention of what was called the Free Democratic party. That convention adopted what they called a platform. In that platform I find this resolution, the closing one:

"Resolved, That we inscribe on our banners, 'Free soil, free speech, free labor, and free men,' and under it we will fight on and fight ever, until a triumphant victory shall reward our exertions."
39TH CONG. 1ST SESS.—No. 15.

I do not know that my colleague was a member of that convention. I have been told so. If he was there and subscribed to this resolution, I have no doubt it truly reflected his convictions at that time, and that he was then true to that principle. But my colleague will hardly insist that he was true to the same principle in 1852, four years later, when in Racine he was opposing the candidate of the same party whose representative he was at Buffalo, and where he is said to have exerted himself to prove that slavery was of divine ordination, and to prove it from the Scriptures.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. It is false that I ever said that anywhere. It is true that in 1852 I supported General Pierce and my colleague supported General Scott; but they stood precisely on the same platform, as far as slavery was concerned.

Mr. HOWE. If it is false that my colleague ever made any such defense of slavery, I am very glad to hear it, and I am very glad that I have furnished him the opportunity to say so.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. In relation to that, I do not know where my colleague obtains any information bearing on this subject, but it is utterly false. For twenty-five years I have spoken on the subject publicly, in the State of New York and in all the States, and I have always maintained, in every form in which language could be used, that slavery was wrong. The idea that I ever defended it as a divine institution is utterly false.

Mr. HOWE. I am very glad to be corrected. I did not make myself responsible for the statement. I introduced it here in his hearing that he might contradict it if it were not true. I have heard it repeatedly said within the State of Wisconsin; I am surprised it should have come to my colleague's ears now for the first time. If I am mistaken about it, as I must think I am, I am glad to be so told. But if he did not advocate slavery then and there in his speech, he defended and upheld a party which did uphold slavery, and he did not adhere to the Free Democratic party which he did uphold in 1848.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I have stated to my colleague that in 1852 I supported the election of General Pierce; and upon the slavery question his platform was precisely the same as the platform of the Whig party, whom my colleague supported in Wisconsin. So we stood on the same platform as to that. It was averred in the platform of both parties that the slavery question was ended, and nothing should be said about it, pro or con, in Congress or out of Congress. But in 1854, when the Democratic party which elected Pierce, violated its pledges, renewed the slavery agitation, put in the knife, repealing the Missouri compromise, I from that moment denounced it as the dissolution of the Democratic party, and I gave what little power I had to help to overthrow it and trample it under my feet, because it was false to the pledges upon which it was elected; and in 1856, as a matter of course, we carried Wisconsin for Fremont, and against the extension of slavery into the Territories. My course, therefore, has been entirely consistent on the slavery question ever since 1847, when in the convention of the Democratic party of the State of New York, I myself introduced the corner-stone resolution upon which the Free-soil party of New York was organized, before the Buffalo convention. The Buffalo convention followed all that. It was the incident to it. It came in, and renominated Mr. Van Buren, who had already been nominated in the State of New York by the Free-soil Democracy, as they were called—the Barnburners, in the language of the day, by way of epithet. Those are the facts.

Mr. HOWE. I was not arraigning my colleague because he did not support General

Scott in 1852. There was nothing in his previous history that I know of that seemed to make such action on his part called for. I thought it peculiar that he did not support the candidate of the same party whose candidates he supported in 1848. It was not because he did not support the Whig party, but that he did not stand by the Free Democratic party which in 1848 he had pledged himself to stand by forever. I simply say that although there might have been some similarity—and I do not concede that—between the attitude of the Democratic party and the Whig party in 1852, there was not that marked similitude between the attitude of the free Democratic party in 1848 and the Democratic party in 1852. I am not accusing him of any want of sincerity. I am bound to suppose that he was just as sincere in his devotion to the Democratic party in 1852, as in his devotion to the free Democratic party in 1848; but there, I do insist, is the proof that he was not adhering to the same principles in 1852 that he was in 1848.

But, Mr. President, it is true, as my colleague has said, that the Democratic party did not keep the pledges they made in 1852; that in spite of their promise made there to have no more agitation upon the question of slavery, they did introduce it again two years later, and they did repeal the Missouri compromise. My colleague says now that from that moment the Democratic party was dissolved. He will not undertake to say that his connection with the Democratic party was dissolved from that moment. I never heard of his dissolving his connection with the Democratic party until 1866, some two years after the Missouri compromise was repealed.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Upon that subject, if my colleague will allow me to call it to his recollection, he will remember at once that I went on the bench as judge of the first judicial circuit of Wisconsin in 1853, and from 1853 to 1856 was judge of the first judicial circuit, and of course while upon the bench I did not take part in political affairs. After I had resigned from the bench then I felt at liberty to take part in them.

Mr. HOWE. It is true my colleague was upon the bench, but I believe he recollects perfectly well that his political affiliations were known all that time. I think I cannot be mistaken in my recollection that his first declaration in behalf of the Republican party, which was formed in 1854 if I remember aright, was after Congress adjourned in August, 1856, and then a letter from him was published which was the first that was known to the people of Wisconsin that he adhered to the platform and policy of the Republican party.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. It is true, as my colleague states, that the first public declaration which I made was upon the adjournment of Congress in 1856, where the point decided was that Congress would enforce the border-ruffian slave code in Kansas. The outrage was such that I could not, for one, endure it, and I publicly denounced it, and from that moment threw all the influence that I possessed against the party which had sustained that course and determined to enforce, as the laws of the Territory of Kansas, that border-ruffian code.

Mr. HOWE. I believe my colleague is entirely correct. He did not leave the Democratic party because of the repeal of the Missouri compromise, nor because of their enactment of the fugitive slave law. He adhered to it in spite of both those acts. But in 1856, two years after the Missouri compromise had been repealed, after Congress had adjourned, he then joined the Republican party; and then I believe he is entirely correct in saying that he gave as his reason, not that he objected to these measures, but that the principle of squatter sovereignty, or popular sovereignty, so called, had not been observed in Kansas.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. My colleague will do

HO. OF REPS.

Reconstruction—Mr. Defrees.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

me the justice to understand certainly that while upon the bench I did not write any public letters or make any public speeches, but I did in conversation privately express my most declared opinions on that subject to all persons who conversed with me upon it. As far as I was at liberty to make declarations, being upon the bench, I did so; but I did not make any public declaration by letter or speech; that is all. I denounced the repeal of the Missouri compromise from the moment it was proposed.

Mr. HOWE. That was not all. The point is, that when he did make a public declaration of his adhesion to the Republican party, it was not placed upon the ground that they had passed an obnoxious law in 1850 or another in 1854, but that the principle of popular sovereignty, which was pledged to the people of Kansas in 1854, had been violated, and they had not had the benefit of it. That was the ground upon which he, as I understand it, left the Democratic party in 1856 and joined the Republican party. But I am not disputing that he was just as sincere to his convictions in 1856 as he was in 1852 or in 1848, and I am not disputing that he is just as sincere in his convictions to-day, when he is leaving the Republican household, when he has left the Republican faith, as he was in 1856 when he embraced it.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. I will say to my colleague that I have not left it and do not expect to leave it. I do not mean either to be seduced from it or driven from it.

Mr. HOWE. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. POMEROY in the chair.) It becomes the duty of the Chair to remind Senators that the question under discussion is the amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. JOHNSON. I was about to ask what the question before the Senate was.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The constitutional amendment has been under discussion for some time, and it is hoped that Senators will confine their remarks, as near as they are able to do so, to the question under discussion.

Mr. HOWE. Yes, sir; and I propose to confine my remarks as nearly to that question as I am able to do, but under these extraordinary circumstances I was not able to confine my remarks any nearer to that question than I have so far. Finding myself arraigned here as for a crime, that I had once affiliated with the Whig party, I thought it right to consider very briefly the party relations of my colleague heretofore. My colleague says now that he has not left the Republican party. I am very glad to hear that, if he really means to be understood by that that hereafter he will adhere to that party and to its principles and to its candidates and to its organization. But I understood him to say the other day that he had got on to a platform of his own and he did not propose to leave that, although the Union party did leave it, and he did not propose to leave that, although any other party got on to it.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to his colleague?

Mr. HOWE. I cannot refuse to yield for explanations.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. As this is a matter personal to myself, I hope my colleague will allow me to say a word. I say I have not left the Republican party which is that party which stands upon the platform on which we elected the President and Vice President of the United States in 1864. I stand on that platform and by its principles, and do not intend to leave them. I do not intend to be driven off from them, nor to follow anybody else off who may choose to go off from them on to a new platform; nor will I abandon the platform whoever else may come on to it. I mean to be governed by the principle which I avowed the other day, and which I expect to control my action. I will not interrupt my colleague in his speech further.

Mr. HOWE. Mr. President, it is very evident I did not misunderstand my colleague's position. He repeats almost the same words I put into his mouth as having been used the other day. The fact is that he has divided from the Union party. Whether the Union party has left the true platform, or he has, is the point in dispute between him and the party. I shall not stop here to discuss that question at length, nor to ask the Senate to settle it. They are apart, and another party is now standing on the platform that he occupies. He calls it his. He means nothing more than that he and the Democratic party occupy the same platform. Whether it is his or theirs in point of fact, I take it, will be settled when they get into convention together. The question of title will be settled then. If it shall be found to be his property I shall not dispute it with him. If they acquiesce in that title, it will be entirely satisfactory to me. I apprehend, however, that there will be some dispute about the right to it.

I have said that I did not mean to raise any question here upon the sincerity of my colleague's convictions; but I cannot help noting the fact that in 1848 when he was acting with the Free Democratic party, the Free Democratic party of New York was much the strongest portion of the Democratic party; it was, numerically, much stronger than the Democratic party of that State; and in 1852 when he left the Free Democratic party and acted with the Democratic party of Wisconsin, the Democratic party was the majority in that State, and the Free Democratic party only numbered about eight thousand of the popular vote. I have shown that my colleague did not leave the Democratic party and join the Republican party in 1854, but only in 1856, and then Wisconsin was no longer a Democratic State. Wisconsin elected a Republican Governor in 1855, and in about sixty days after my colleague published that letter, Wisconsin gave a majority of somewhere from fifteen to twenty thousand for the Republican candidates for President and Vice President. The Republican party was unmistakably in the majority; and in about four months from the time my colleague joined the Republican party, so grateful were they for his services, which were very distinguished and very able, that they made him their representative in this Chamber. Since that time he has served the party and served the cause and served the country, and served it with distinguished ability. It is because of those recollections that that State especially and that I myself regret to see the attitude that he maintains to-day toward that party which welcomed him so cordially and has trusted him so long; for if he has not left it, he knows very well that he is proscribing it, turning from office, or helping to turn from office, as true and faithful men as were ever in that or any other party, and men who have done as much hard work in his support as any men have ever done. I do not know whether that party is in the majority in the State of Wisconsin or not; but the President certainly does not acquiesce in that view of public affairs which is most grateful and most acceptable to the Union party of Wisconsin. The President has this patronage in his power. It is said that he resigns it to those who maintain his policy. It is certain that my colleague has great influence in the disposition of it, at least in that State. Raising no sort of question upon the sincerity of his convictions, I must be allowed to say that he has been a most fortunate politician, always to happen to have just those convictions which bore the highest price in the market.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to his colleague?

Mr. HOWE. No, not now. I take it there is no explanation to be made on that point.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. The last remark of my colleague seems to me to call for an answer.

Mr. HOWE. I shall be through in a moment.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin declines to yield the floor.

Mr. HOWE. Mr. President, one other remark has been made in the course of this debate to which I wish to allude. It was made by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. HENRICKS] a day or two ago. He accuses the Union party of laboring here for party purposes and party ends. I think that remark most unjust. If we were actuated by the selfish purpose of building up the Union party and strengthening it, does he suppose, does any man of sense suppose, that we would take under our care that poor and helpless and hopeless race known as Union refugees and the colored freedmen in those States? If we were making combinations for party interests, and not for the good of the country, does the Senator from Indiana suppose we do not know enough to affiliate with the powerful and educated and influential class in those States rather than with this weak and helpless one? Do not we understand the value of such combinations just as well as he does, and would not they be as willing to combine with us as with them? What is there to secure that affiliation between them? Is it inevitable? What have they done? Is it not as desirable to those men who are seeking their way back into the Union to affiliate with those who have power as with those who have none? This Union party—I do not mean we who represent it here, but the Union party of the country—have whipped the rebellion; and the opposition to that Union party has done nothing—but “the heavy standing round.” They have not helped to uphold the rebellion any further than words would go, and they certainly have not helped to subdue the rebellion, even so far as that. Looking at it as a practical man, I think those gentlemen who are seeking to come back here would rather affiliate with those who represent the Union party, which can do something, than those who represent the Democratic party, and can do nothing as they have done nothing. And certainly if we were looking to our own party interests rather than to the interests of the country, it seems to me that that is the crowd we should most naturally affiliate with. I think it is unjust in the Senator from Indiana to taunt us, us of all the people in the world, with seeking party ends and party interests in the efforts that we have been making on this floor. For myself, I disclaim every such purpose as that. For myself, I avow here, as I have avowed everywhere, that everything I have asked to have done in the name of the nation, South or North, in reference to closing up this war, I have asked to have done not only because I believed the best interests of the poor and the helpless demanded it, but because I believed the best interests of the rich and the powerful demanded it there and here. There is but one measure which meets every want in the nation, and that is justice; justice from the Government to the people; justice between man and man. I believe we are trying to administer justice between man and man, and justice between the Government and the people.

Reconstruction.

SPEECH OF HON. J. H. DEFREES,

OF INDIANA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

June 13, 1866.

On the joint resolution of the House (No. 127) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. DEFREES. Mr. Speaker, it is a source of congratulation to the country that Congress has finally succeeded so well in recommending a plan for the restoration of the Government in all of the States of the Union that is so fair,

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Reconstruction—Mr. Defrees.

HO. OF REPS.

honorable, and lenient toward those who were the instruments of bringing such terrible devastation upon the country.

The committee who have had charge of this subject are entitled to a great deal of credit, and will no doubt receive the thanks of all truly loyal men of every section of the country for the very able manner in which they have discharged the responsible duties required of them by this House. It is not my intention to enter into any lengthy argument to show the righteousness of adopting the propositions that are now before us, for they are self-evident, but to cursorily glance at the sections as presented.

Section one indisputably fixes the character of those who are entitled to be regarded as citizens of the United States or citizens of the several States, and secures to all life, liberty, and property, and places all persons upon an equality, regardless of their condition or color, so far as equal protection of the law is concerned. Certainly none can take exceptions to the provisions of this section.

The second section fixes the basis of representation in Congress upon the population of each State, yet provides that if any portion of the male inhabitants of any State, over twenty-one years of age, shall be debarred the privilege of exercising the elective franchise for any cause, except for participating in rebellion or for crime, the persons so excluded shall be deducted from the whole amount of male citizens over twenty-one years of age in such State. This provision will operate alike in all of the States. Should there be a class of citizens in any State that the majority of the people think are not capable of exercising the franchise intelligibly, it would certainly be wrong to count such persons in the basis of representation, to swell its number, without a constituency to be responsible to. Then, again, this section holds out an inducement to the States that may have within its borders a population which it is conceived is unfit for voters to make every effort and use all means proper for the preparing and qualifying such citizens for the use of the elective franchise, in order that they may be fully represented upon all of their population. I am aware that it is said that the object of this section is to force the late rebel States to make voters of the negro population, a measure that is abhorred by them. It will operate upon them in no way differently than upon all the rest of the States. All have a portion of that class of people, and there is no telling how long any one of the States may have more than its due proportion of such citizens. I believe the President said in his veto of the Freedmen's Bureau bill, that the—"Negro possesses a perfect right to change his place of abode, and if, therefore, he does not find in one community or State a mode of life suited to his desires, or proper remuneration for his labor, he can move to another, where that labor is more esteemed and better rewarded."

The third section contains the essence of the whole proposition, and is most eminently just and proper.

It is an axiom that is as applicable to nations as to individuals, that self-protection is the first law of nature. If an individual is assailed and a determined effort is made to take his life, the person so attacked is justifiable in using all the means at his command and the power God has given him for self-protection, even to the slaying of his adversary. And whether the assaulting party accomplishes his foul purpose or not, he is dealt with by the law as a murderer and an assassin, and is placed where he can no longer prey upon society. Just so I hold it to be the duty and the right of a Government. If there are citizens of this Republic who have made every effort and have struggled with all their energies in every conceivable way to take its life, they, too, should be put out of the way of ever giving any further trouble, at least politically, whether they accomplished their designs or not. And who doubts, at this late day, that we have such persons within the United States? Men who have held high places of honor and trust in the Government; men who have been raised and nurtured under the benign influences of its institutions, educated and prepared for usefulness at its national colleges, and that, too, with the special purpose of qualifying them to protect its life.

Now, sir, we have just terminated a terrible rebellion, one that probably has no equal upon the pages of history, and the people of the revolted States are asking again to be taken under the care and protection of the Government from which they attempted to secede. And while I think it right that they should again have the blessings of the laws of the Government extended to them, and they once more form a part of this glorious Union at as early a day as practicable, still I think every precaution should be taken to prevent a recurrence of those scenes through which we have just passed.

Go back to the earliest history of human government of which we have any knowledge, and we learn it was always the policy to dispose of those who occasioned a revolt so that they could not again disturb the public peace. When the Israelites, in the absence of Moses upon the mount, got up a revolution in the camp below, the leaders engaged in it were effectually and summarily disposed of by rightful authority. And we may come down to a later period in the history of the world, when a higher state of civilization existed—for instance, to the days of Emmett; or a still later period, when the attempt was made by the Hungarians to throw off the oppression of the Austrian Government—and we find it to be universally the case that the existing Government punished treason in some way, either by the execution or banishment from the country or the deprivation of the political rights of the traitor.

Sir, the incipient steps of treason in this country originated in the Halls of Congress as early as 1829–30.

That fiery and restless spirit, John C. Calhoun conceived the idea of rightful hostility to the laws of the General Government by a State, and on its tariff policy the spirit of secession began to lift its hydra head and take an open stand, and culminated in South Carolina in the spring of 1832 by assembling a convention to carry out its purposes. But the energy and patriotism of the then President, Andrew Jackson, soon scotched the serpent, and for awhile caused it to lie dormant. But the seed was sown, the poison was infused into the veins of the body-politic, and an occasion was only wanted for it to burst forth again. So well satisfied was President Jackson of that fact that he prophesied the time would come in the history of the country when slavery would be the pretext of its again attempting to assert its power.

But treason was more successful in its last effort than in its former one. It insidiously allied itself with a great party of the country, and so wound its coils around it that in a great measure it controlled every action of its movement. I do not say that the mass of the Democratic party intended to lend its influence for the overthrow of the Government, but I do say that a large portion of its leading men became infected with the leprosy of secession, and if not openly, did in a great many instances covertly "give aid and comfort to the enemy." So vast were the proportions of treason that it required all the energy and power of this mighty Republic to stay its hand.

Now, Mr. Speaker, let us take a short retrospective view of the past, and see what was the character and position of those who brought the late rebellion upon the country, and who were the men that led the hostile armies of the enemy against the hosts of loyal men sent out for the protection of the Government. Who were the men that led the armies of treason? Who led the columns of the insurgents at Bull Run, at Shiloh, at Vicksburg, at Richmond, and, I might say, in all those sanguinary struggles with the armies of the Republic?

They were men, sir, educated at the expense of the General Government; many of them at the time they entered the armies of treason wore insignia upon their shoulders evidencing that they held position in the Army and Navy of the United States, men who had sworn, by laying their hand upon the divine Word, to uphold and defend that glorious flag that surrounds your chair from all foes, both domestic and foreign.

And, sir, who were the men in the outset of the rebellion that furnished the "sinews of war" and the arms to place in the hands of traitors? The very individuals that the Government had intrusted with the keeping of her treasures and the control of her arsenals; and even the soldiers of the regular Army that were in the disloyal States, in most instances, were stripped of their arms by their commanders, and insulted by being surrendered to the enemies of their Government, and mortified in consequence of having to give their parole of honor not to engage in the defense of their country.

Now, sir, the rebellion is over; the insurgents have been compelled by the forces of the Government to lay down their arms, not willingly, but grudgingly. A kind of quasi loyalty is manifested in some of the States lately in rebellion, and an effort is being made to incorporate them into the Union with the loyal States. A large majority of the men who inaugurated the rebellion survive its overthrow; and the question under consideration is, whether it would be politic and right to again permit any of the persons above described to hold seats in the councils of the nation or any place of profit or trust under its authority. I must confess, in my view of the matter, to say the least of it, it would be a very great impropriety, if not an outrage. I cannot believe the American people will ever consent that the reins of Government shall be placed in the hands of those whose fingers are dripping with the blood of loyal citizens and who disgraced themselves by forsaking their country in the hour of trial, who had sworn to maintain it.

We see in some of the southern States a spirit manifested to elect such and none others to seats in these Halls, in spite of the friendly admonitions of the President to do otherwise. Once admitted here, with no loyal element in their nature from choice, and their hearts rankling with venom and bitterness, engendered by hatred toward the North for years, and having failed in their wicked attempt at overthrowing the Government, it is not to be supposed that they would be proper persons to assist in again laying the foundations of the Union upon a solid basis or maintaining it in all its integrity. I, sir, believe in the sentiment expressed by the present Chief Magistrate a year or two since, while addressing a Tennessee audience, "that traitors should take a back seat in the work of restoration." And I go further than that, and say that traitors of the class mentioned in this proposition must never be permitted to hold any place of trust or power. We are bound by every obligation of justice and honor to legislate to preclude any possibility, if such can be done, of them ever ruling loyalists, white or black.

Suppose, sir, that the State of New York, some fifteen or twenty years ago, had sent from one of her districts Aaron Burr as a Representative to this Hall; a man who was strongly suspected of having traitorous intentions against his country, but upon whom, I believe, it was never proven. Do you not think that the indignation of the whole country would have been aroused, and every man who then held a seat in this House would have felt in duty bound to cast from the nation the stigma thus attempted to be thrown upon it by refusing to admit him to a seat here? There can be no doubt of it. And is the public mind any the less sensitive now in reference to the honor of the nation? Have the people become less patriotic? Have they lost the high sentiment of regard they once had for the honor of their country so that they would now consent that traitors of the blackest die might hold the highest positions in the Government? Why, sir, so jealous of the honor of the nation were members of one branch of the national Legislature about the time of the commencement of the rebellion that they expelled a grave Senator from my State from their councils for merely giving a letter of introduction to the rebel chief; a man who, it was said, had made some valuable improvements in firearms. "Better were it for that man that a mill-stone were fastened about his neck and he cast into the depths of the sea" than to go before his constituents after having voted that such men might again hold position under the Government. I look upon treason, under any circumstances, as the highest degree of political sin; but when is added to it a threefold perjury, as is in most of the cases of those to whom this joint resolution refers, it is unpardonable. I do not know but that the Saviour of the world, when speaking of the sins that might be forgiven men, that there was one that could not be forgiven in this world or the world to come, but what he had reference to the monstrous sin of treason; if not, it must have been one closely allied to it.

Now, sir, my policy is to let the citizens of the States lately in rebellion know that they must raise up a different class of politicians from those they have been in the habit of looking up to as leaders, men who have some love for republican liberty, some regard for the principles that are contained in the Declaration of Independence, which lie at the foundation of the Government, and who are not blackened all over with ingratitude, treachery, and crime.

There is another consideration why this measure should pass. It would not only prevent the direful influence these men would have upon the interests of the country, and especially that portion of it with which they are connected, but it would serve in some small degree as a punishment for their wickedness and violation of law. I know it is said that we of the North can afford to be magnanimous in the hour of victory, and that we should extend the right hand of fellowship to our erring brethren and welcome them back again to the protection of the Government and to a participation in its affairs without any reference to past events. But that kind of magnanimity would be extremely unjust toward the memory of the hundreds of thousands of loyal patriots who surrendered up their lives in defense of the country. It would be an outrage against the feelings of the thousands of maimed and crippled soldiers whose lives will be a burden to them for the remainder of time; yet I fear that many are disposed to acquiesce in this mawkish generosity. Why, sir, of the many thousands who have been engaged in this monstrous rebellion, and who it is acknowledged have been guilty of crimes that have no parallel in the history of mankind, not one traitor has been arraigned and brought to trial or received any punishment for his acts. It is true that a poor, miserable creature, who was the cat's-paw of the men that this joint resolution is intended to reach, was brought to trial and convicted for violating the laws of war and humanity in starving soldiers to death, but the men who are responsible for the action of Wirz go unwhipped of justice. And, sir, from present indications, notwithstanding the people are sending up petitions and the Legislatures of a number of the States have passed resolutions asking the powers that be to bring these men to trial and to justice, yet I fear the halter will be cheated out of its victims and the sacredness of law be set at naught.

But, Mr. Speaker, it has been argued, since this debate upon reconstruction commenced, that these men have become repentant, that they have signified a willingness to "accept the situation," and that their love for the old Union has again returned to them. Where is the evidence to substantiate the assertion? It certainly cannot be found in the testimony of any of those leading rebels who have been summoned before the committee that reported these resolutions. It is true that Mr. Stephens, the vice president of the defunct confederacy, says that he believes the people of the South will accommodate themselves to the surrounding circumstances and acquiesce in what may be properly done by the Government; but does he manifest, himself, any great devotion to the Constitution and the principles upon which the Government is founded? Does he not tell the country that the dogma upon which the rebellion was inaugurated is right? Have any of these men manifested any regrets for the ruin and devastation that they have brought upon the country, only such as the culprit exhibits when he is overtaken in crime and has failed in his schemes? If such is the fact I have not been able to see it.

But, sir, instead of works meet for repentance, these men assert, with all the arrogance and haughtiness characteristic of their former lives, that they are entitled to be heard here in these Halls, and that it is an infringement upon their constitutional rights when it is proposed to require some conditions precedent to the full restoration of the rebellious States. They talk as though it was but a small affair to attempt the life of this Government; that although they failed in their machinations and efforts to sever the cords that bind it together as a whole, yet, as by divine right, they claim a share in its government. Such impudence is unparalleled in the history of mankind, unless it was when the devil required the Saviour to worship him in consideration of the vast kingdoms he promised him, when the old secessionist had no title to any.

Sir, I consider the propositions under consideration very lenient. They do not come up fully to my idea of justice in the premises. I would go further than is now proposed. I would add to the disqualification for office disfranchisement forever, so far as we have the power, and the confiscation of all their estates, and place it beyond the executive clemency to restore any of them to citizenship or to their property. They should be made to feel that treason is "odious," and that this Government has sufficient inherent power to vindicate itself in the punishment of all its foes of whatever character. Send them forth, sir, as vagabonds and outlaws, for the finger of scorn of all patriots to be pointed at. Place them before our countrymen as beacons of warning to the ambitious demagogue who may have rankling in his heart an unholy desire for power, even at the expense of the destruction of his country. Let our action on this resolution serve as a light to teach the patriot that the true path that leads to honor and glory is fidelity to the laws of his country. Impress that principle upon the hearts of those that will soon grow up and take our places here, and the Republic is safe.

The fourth section of the joint resolution, I presume, will meet with little, if any, opposition. The good character of the Government depends upon the fidelity with which it meets its contracts and discharges its pecuniary obligations. The debt incurred in suppressing the rebellion is principally owing to our own citizens, and it is with pride that we can recur to the fact. The history of the world produces no parallel, where a nation was involved in a war of so large proportions and of so long duration, of its own subjects furnishing the necessary means for its prosecution. This is an evidence that a republican Government is conducive to the prosperity of its citizens. But there is another species of debt referred to in this section that would seem to be more sacred, if possible, than that incurred in prosecuting the war. I refer to that of pensions and bounties. The small pittance that is provided for those who have offered their lives as a sacrifice to their country's cause, and who have left behind them those that were dependent upon them for support, must not be neglected. Others who have survived the deadly conflict, but are left maimed for life, look to a generous Government for support, and have a right to expect that provision will be made for their relief, and that the Government will be prompt in discharging its obligations to them.

Mr. Speaker, it looks to me now that we have reached a solid foundation upon which to reorganize the superstructure of the Government, a basis that will be as durable as the everlasting hills. The people will ratify what we now propose to them, because equal and exact justice is meted out to all classes of our population. The disturbing element of slavery that has hitherto rocked the country from center to circumference and caused distraction in the national councils, is forever gone. The high road to grandeur and happiness is opened up before us, and everything that is noble beckons us on to future greatness and a still higher state of civilization, when all men will be equal before the law, and the great fact will be realized, that of one blood He made all the nations of the earth, and to one destiny all must come.

Protection of American Wool.

SPEECH OF HON. E. R. ECKLEY,

OF OHIO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

June 9, 1866.

The House, as in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, resumed the consideration of the President's annual message.

Mr. ECKLEY. Mr. Speaker, no interest has been so long and so much neglected as the production of wool, an article so essential to the wants of the people that it is an absolute necessity. It is second only to bread, its use confined to no class or condition, and is a necessity in every latitude of the country. It is not only necessary now, but must continue to be so long as seasons and climates last. Still the encouragement of its growth has been shamefully neglected in the legislation of the country. The manufactured article has been protected, but the raw material has been left to struggle with the freebooters of trade, and compete in market with the inferior article from every country of the globe, from the plains of ancient Asia to the islands of the western seas, and north and south, from the region of the icebergs to the scorching deserts of Africa.

I propose to state a few facts in connection with the production of wool, its consumption, and the encouragement it has received by and through legislation, and the effect that legislation has had upon its price and production, leaving the logical conclusion to the House, believing that it must result only in the conviction to which I desire to bring the members of this branch of Congress.

In the early history of the country woolen fabrics were brought from foreign countries; but little wool was produced here, and the means of manufacturing was almost unknown. The necessity caused by the want of this article induced the introduction of sheep. The early tariff on wool and woolsens, the trade regulations, and finally the embargo act, gave a stimulus to this branch of husbandry. Large importations of fine sheep were made from Europe, the business prospered, and the production was largely increased; so that at the close of the year 1812 both the production of wool at home and its manufacture were in a flourishing condition. Fine wool was worth seventy-five cents per pound, and woolen fabrics bore a price in proportion.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Reconstruction—Mr. Rogers.

HO. OF REPS.

The treaty of Ghent, while it protected almost every other American interest, almost entirely ignored that of wool and woollens. The result was, factories languished, and the production of wool ran down, until it was almost abandoned. Prices were merely nominal.

The condition of this important business forced itself upon the attention of Congress, and in 1824 a duty of twenty per cent. ad valorem was levied upon wool and thirty per cent. on woollens. Under this salutary legislation the business again became prosperous, and prices ran up; fine wools brought from fifty to sixty cents per pound, and the production largely increased. This prosperity continued until 1833, when the gradual reduction of the tariff commenced and prices in proportion sunk and continued low until 1846, when the horizontal free-trade tariff was passed, almost entirely abolishing protection to wool and woollens; prices again sunk, and the manufacture of woollens, particularly broadcloths, was almost abandoned. The tariff of 1861 made no decided improvement; the rates varied, and wool costing less than eighteen cents per pound was admitted free.

No country on the globe relies so much on importing wool as the United States. The best data obtainable show the consumption of wool and woollens equal to two hundred million pounds per year for the last twenty years, while our production does not exceed, if it has reached, fifty millions. In 1840 we produced forty-six million pounds; in 1850, fifty-two million five hundred and sixteen thousand nine hundred and fifty-nine pounds; in 1860, sixty million five hundred and eleven thousand three hundred and forty-three pounds. The prices in 1862, 1863, and 1864, increased incident to the war, and the production increased also, nearly doubling in 1863 what it was in 1861.

No country is better adapted to the growth of wool than the United States, and if proper protection was extended to it there exists no good reason why we might not produce sufficient for our wants; and instead of paying to foreign countries for three fourths of what we consume, might save our money and grow rich upon the wisdom of the policy. If we continue in this fluctuating policy and deny to this particular interest the protection we extend to almost every other, and compel our people to enter the market in competition with the wool from every country in the world, we cannot expect it to prosper, but must incur a heavy indebtedness to foreign markets, a constant drain upon our pockets, as the only reward for our neglect and stupidity.

The importation of woollens for the past ten years amounts to $282,682,880, all of which might have been saved to the country had a just and wise policy been adopted. For there is scarcely anything into which wool is worked but what can be manufactured here. America has the skill, the capital, and the materials, and can make as fine and more durable fabrics than we buy from Europe.

Our folly did not stop with the importations of woolen cloths and fabrics, but we have imported largely of the raw material, to be manufactured here. During the year ending June 30, 1865, we imported nearly fifty million pounds; nearly equal to our entire production. With these facts who can be surprised at the depressed condition of our home market for wool? Adopt a wise system and stand by it, give it support, and prevent it from fluctuating. Both the manufacturing and wool growing interests require stability and protection. Secure that and both will flourish. New machinery will be put in operation, an increased demand for labor will be made, property will increase in value, the production of wool will double, and the vast millions now paid for foreign cloths will be kept among our own people. The two interests, that of manufacturing and that of growing wool, are so connected that they are hard to separate. But if no protection is to be secured to the wool-grower, then we need no more spindles or looms, for what we have have abundant capacity to work all of our own production and as much more.

The importance of this interest is well shown by the statistics of the State of Ohio; which had in—

	Sheep.
1840.....	2,028,401
1850.....	3,368,174
1860.....	3,942,929
1861.....	3,944,763
1862.....	4,448,227
1863.....	5,560,318

The wool clip in Ohio in 1863 amounted to about eighteen million dollars, and in 1864 to near twenty-five million dollars, and the statistics for 1865 and 1866 show a great increase, estimating nearly one half the wool grown in the United States to belong to Ohio.

I have the honor to represent one of the largest, if not the first wool-growing district in the United States, having in 1865 more than six hundred thousand sheep.

The investment of so large an amount of capital and the existence of so great an interest creates a nervous anxiety for proper protection to this great branch of husbandry by all the wool-growers of the country, and particularly by those in the State of Ohio.

No country in the world produces a higher average of wool than does the United States. Still the wool-grower must enter the market in competition with the low grades from every country and every clime. He must be badgered by shoddy traders and be cheated by the dealers in the inferior stuffs from every quarter of the world. Still our own grades of fine wool, of course, are preferred in the market, but at prices below its value. I append the price current of wools in New York on the 15th day of May, 1866, clipped from the New York Mercantile Journal, as follows: *

	Cents.
Choice select Saxony, per pound.....	75
Saxony fleece.....	67
Full-blood Merino.....	62½
Half-blood Merino.....	57
California.....	20
Australia.....	35
Cape of Good Hope, fine.....	33
East India.....	25
African.....	15
Mexican.....	20
Texas.....	15
Smyrna.....	15
Syrian.....	20
Peruvian.....	25
Chilian.....	20
Valparaiso.....	20
South American.....	15
Mestizo.....	15
Entre Rios.....	10
Cordova.....	30

This shows the necessity of imposing a duty, such as will baffle frauds and secure protection to one of the growing interests, already great, that has struggled into importance under the neglect of the Government, but which is no longer to be postponed. Protection must be secured by the present Congress, and I think I hazard nothing in assuring the wool-growers that their voice has not only been heard in these Halls, but it is potent to produce relief.

Reconstruction.

SPEECH OF HON. A. J. ROGERS,

OF NEW JERSEY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

June 13, 1866.

The House having under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 543) to restore to the States lately in insurrection their full political rights—

Mr. ROGERS said:

Mr. SPEAKER: The resolutions proposing an amendment to the Constitution which were the product of the committee of fifteen, and which were accompanied by two bills for passage by Congress, and which were reported by that committee as a settlement of the disagreeing elements among the radicals on the committee, were some weeks ago reported to both Houses for action. This House had the magnanimity to allow a few members to make half-hour speeches on the reported amendment, and then, after consuming a few hours in debate, the master of the House determined to move the previous question, and further debate was stopped. The amendment, precisely as it came from the committee of fifteen, went through the House, under the party whip, by a strict party vote, every radical and pretended would-be-called conservative Republican voting for it. One would have supposed, if he did not know the cringing disposition to radical dictation of the Republican members, that they voted for it because they believed it contained the true principles upon which honest men should base their action, and met with their decided approbation. And as the celebrated committee, noted for its secret inquiries, had recommended it, and every member upon the committee but the three Democrats agreed to it; it was supposed by honest men that the committee who agreed to it and the radicals who voted for it in this body would at least stand by and sustain it thereafter.

But the amendment reported by the committee has been ignored by its own fathers and a secret inquisition of Senators held over its dead carcass. The third section of the committee's bantling has been struck out, because it was not considered safe to go before the people upon a section which disfranchised the voters of the entire insurgent States until 1870. That amendment, in addition to the third section, simply embodied the gist of the civil rights bill, made the payment of the rebel debt and the claim for pay for slaves void, and gave authority to Congress to pass appropriate legislation to enforce the amendment. The first proposition was tame in iniquity, injustice, and violation of fundamental liberty to the one before us. This proposition makes four million negroes citizens, not only of the United States, but of each and every State, and disqualifies from holding office forever nearly all the influential men of the South, those who are the men having the influence to get through their Legislatures a reasonable proposition. This proposition upsets the old foundation stones of our Republic and laughs and scoffs at the wisdom and patriotism of the framers of our present organic law. It destroys that elementary principle which for over seventy years has lain at the foundation of our happiness, that representation should be founded on population, and introduces a system which says you must allow negroes to vote or be deprived of the share in the Government which the fathers of the Republic designed should be enjoyed by you. I propose, sir, to examine into the reasons for the introduction into this House of this new issue of disunionism and treason to the Constitution of our fathers.

I intend to confine myself mainly to the changes which have been made by a secret caucus of the Senate to the amendment as it was originally presented by the committee of fifteen, and let me say that it is an unpleasant position for a member of Congress to be placed in to make an argument against a measure which has already been arranged by a secret party caucus who have determined to put it through, whatever arguments may be made by its opponents and however patriotic their motives may be. But, sir, I do say, that although upon this side of the House we are in a hopeless minority, we are yet the representatives of two million voters, and of nearly one half of the population of the adhering States, and more than a majority of the whole people of the whole Union; and although the majority can in secret caucus so arrange their tactics as to force the action of the House upon such measures as they may see fit, under the whip of caucus discipline, the minority have no such power,

HO. OF REPS.

Reconstruction—Mr. Rogers.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

and all that they can do and what it is their bounden duty to do is to protect and vote against action of this character, and ask the House as the Senate was asked by members of the Opposition, that each man individually shall exercise his judgment upon this proposition to change the charter of our liberties, according to the dictates of his own conscience, free from the controlling influence of caucus. If you look at the history of this committee of fifteen from its organization down to the present time you will find that the whole object of its organization was to carry into effect party purposes, to affect the fall campaign, and to dismember and dissolve the American Union.

Sir, before the House was organized this committee of fifteen had been organized in a secret caucus, with a veil of darkness thrown over it; and in the dark recesses of radicalism with closed doors and darkened windows, where the people were not permitted to look in upon the commencement of proceedings which were designed to overthrow the elementary foundations of their happiness and national greatness, the radical members of the two Houses established, for the first time in the history of this country or of any other republic, a secret committee to control and dictate to the two Houses of Congress what action they should take on the great measures growing out of the contest of the last four years. And, sir, the resolution appointing this committee was hurried through without allowing us one minute for debate, under the whip and spur of party organization.

When the light of day shall break in upon the records of this committee, and the people are permitted to know its proceedings as I know them, it will be seen that it many times agreed to report its final action; but, sir, the fear of not being able to deceive the people with them many times induced it to reconsider. At one time universal negro suffrage was agreed to be reported as a condition to southern representation; but it was soon seen by it that the people could not be deceived by so plain an issue as that, and that to expose the true doctrine of the dominant party in that way would be certain defeat. It finally, on the 31st of January last, made its report, and brought forth its first child, which was to be baptized in the name of philanthropy as the last offspring of a putative father. I supposed the issue was then made up. The command of the committee was given to the radical members of this House, and they had nothing to do but obey. That proposition was a proposed amendment to the Constitution, in substance the same as the section of the article before us regulating representation. The proposition of January 31 declared that if the elective franchise was denied or abridged in any State on account of race or color or previous condition of slavery, then that whole race or color should not be counted in the basis of representation. There was no material difference between that and this. The party lash was again applied, and the previous question used to gag debate, and it passed this House by the overwhelming vote of the entire radical and so-called conservative element, amid the shouting of the negroes and radicals in the galleries and waving of handkerchiefs. It went to the Senate, and there the first offspring of the committee was strangled, though not killed, and instead of receiving a two-third vote, as required by the Constitution, it got barely a majority. The committee became nervous, and determined that the party lash should be more thoroughly applied, and that Mr. SUMNER and the radicals who defeated it in the Senate should yield their opposition or be read out of the party. It again sat and finally hatched a new progeny, which contains in substance and effect the same provision as to representation, except that it now says that if the elective franchise be denied in any State to males of the age of twenty-one years representation shall be denied in the proportion that the males thus excluded from voting shall bear to the white and black male inhabitants of the age of twenty-one years.

That second hantling went to the Senate to be christened, but in some particulars it was too weak, and in the one disfranchising the rebels too bold to suit the Senate. It was soon ascertained that it could not get a two-third vote there. The committee of fifteen became gloomy, and it saw it could not please two thirds of the Senate and finally gave up its work of destruction in despair. The radicals saw that a failure to agree upon some proposition would be death to their party. They took new courage, withdrew it from the Senate, and consigned it to a secret caucus of radical Senators. For three days the Senate was silent, while a caucus was convened in a private room away from the view of those who did not agree with the radicals there; and with closed doors, secured by bolts and locks, where even a reporter was not admitted, in the silence of an inquisition of death, they concocted the destruction of the great charter of American freedom, and brought forth, as the emblem of centralization and destruction of the elementary rights of the States, the article now before us.

The Constitution declares that no amendment shall be proposed without the vote of two thirds of both Houses. Yet a mere majority of a party caucus proposes this amendment, and the individual opinion of each member of that party must consent and ratify. That, sir, in effect is an amendment proposed to be submitted to the Legislatures, not by the convictions of honest minds, but by the coercive power of a caucus majority. Shall our charter of liberty be amended in a secret cabal with closed doors? What would the American people think if we were to close the doors of this House and in secret amend the work of their fathers? They would burst open the doors and demand to know what their servants were doing. The doors of the Senate, after the work of death to constitutional liberty had been inaugurated by this secret cabal, were opened for the consideration of the work. Party corruption had done its work and the dictates of honest consciences had been smothered. Mr. SUMNER and his followers, who defeated the first proposition, trembled with fear and unblushingly voted this monstrous abortion through the Senate with the aid of those who supported the first. It now became necessary to manipulate the House. It had given its views upon the proposition of the committee.

But the forcing process begun. The House are ordered to cringe and cower before the awful power of the honorable gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. STEVENS.] The orders had been delivered and must be obeyed. Radicalism walks forth with bold impunity, and the last link of conscience is ordered to be broken. But, sir, that caucus we never shall forget; it was the crowning act of the radicals in Congress; it was one more obstacle to the restoration of the Union. If the President of the United States could have looked in upon that body then he would have been reminded of the time when history says the Romans danced and shouted over the downfall of liberty, made memorable by the love of centuries.

I am here to protest against amending the great charter of our liberties by a secret caucus. Every member, under the duty which he owes to his own conscience, to his country, and to his oath, ought not to be controlled by secret caucus, and should vote according to the dictates of his own judgment. He should not be controlled by secret cabals in his action, especially in matters pertaining to the fundamental principles which lie at the base of the liberties of the people, and which were founded in old revolutionary times and handed down to this generation, and which this generation should hand down to their descendants unimpaired as a great jewel and legacy of liberty.

I say this amendment would never pass by the necessary two thirds if free from the control of party whip and party ties. It does not meet the deliberate judgment of two thirds of either House.

To show that my assertion is true, I refer to the language used on the question now before the House by Hon. Mr. SHERMAN on the Doolittle amendment to this proposition. Mr. DOOLITTLE proposed an amendment that representation should be based upon the voting population of the States. That would make representation equal in all the States. The eastern and middle States would not have a controlling influence because of their population of women and children there, as they will have under this. South Carolina, Massachusetts, and other States would stand upon an equal footing before the law in regard to representation, on the broad ground that representation is based upon the voting population of the State.

I ask gentlemen of this House, and especially those on the other side, to listen for a moment to the language of the honorable gentleman, [Mr. SHERMAN,] a member of the Senate of the United States, and one of its most prominent members, who declares in that body that he yields his own judgment, that he gives up his own views, that he abdicates the duty which he believes he owes to his country and his conscience, in order that he may give in his adherence to the doctrines of a secret cabal or caucus of radicals, assembled in secret, away from the gaze of the people of the United States, to concoct this scheme of disunion, and overthrow the fundamental principles of this Government.

The distinguished Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] said:

"I shall detain the Senate but for a moment to explain the reasons for the vote I shall give in opposition to what is my own deliberate judgment on the question now pending. The more I think of this question the more I am convinced that the true basis of representation in the present condition of affairs is the number of male citizens who, under the laws of the States, are allowed to vote. This proposition, it seems to me, is a simple one, plain and obvious, which puts a citizen in one State on a footing of precise equality with a citizen in every other State, which equalizes the political power of all citizens, and which will destroy all sectional animosity. If this amendment be adopted, a citizen of the State of Ohio has precisely the same political power with a citizen of the State of Massachusetts or of South Carolina, no more and no less. The same number would be required in each State to elect a member of Congress. The number of citizens could be easily ascertained by the census, and the census rolls could be attested very readily at each annual election. This proposition is simple, plain, and obvious; and yet under the necessity in which we are now placed I shall feel called upon to vote against it."

Again, he said:

"That is a plain and obvious principle, and if that principle was adopted the southern States would feel no local jealousy. They could not feel any. No State and no community would have the right to complain. The laws of the United States would fix the naturalization of the foreigner; birth would fix the citizenship of the native; there could be no controversy. Then every citizen would stand equal before the law, with precisely the same political power, no more and no less. I say, therefore, that this is the only amendment to the propositions now submitted to us that I desire to make; but I feel bound by the action of my political friends to vote against this amendment. I place my vote distinctly on this ground."

I ask you, what security or safety is there for the people of the United States, what confidence for the protection of the lives and liberties of the people of this country is to be placed in the Senate of the United States, a body always heretofore held in regard on account of its wisdom and patriotism, when one of the chief spokesmen of the dominant party in that body rises and tells the people that he votes against his deliberate judgment and the convictions of his conscience, simply because a majority of his brother Senators, members of the same party, have assembled in secret conclave and decided that he shall so vote? Why, sir, if such legislation as this is to be encouraged and upheld, this nation will die and we shall all be wretched mourners around its tomb. What would you think of a jury deliberating on the life of a citizen who should agree to give up their own convictions of duty because a majority of the jury should so direct, and by their verdict condemn an innocent man to death? The Constitution meant to guard itself against amendments by requiring the deliberate judgment of each Senator and member acting solely each for himself. In Andrew Johnson is our only safety. His policy alone can protect our liberties. I trust that in the providence of God he will have support from the people sufficient to save our country from wreck. I believe he will yet work out a bright destiny for the American people.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Reconstruction—Mr. Davis.

SENATE.

Let me tell gentlemen upon the other side of the House that they are now legislating for those who are to come after them; and I appeal to them, although I may appeal in vain, to act upon the deliberate convictions of their judgment and conscience, and not to change the fundamental law of this country and destroy the constitutional equilibrium of the States merely because a secret caucus of a portion of the members of the United States Senate may dictate to them so to do.

There is nothing which the Constitution guards with greater care than an amendment to it. It provides that upon a proposition to amend it, unlike a proposition of minor importance, a two-thirds vote shall be requisite, and that the vote of each Senator or member, "yea" or "nay," upon a proposition of so vitally important a character, shall be recorded upon the Journal. A two-thirds vote of both Houses in favor of a proposition for a constitutional amendment is necessary before such a proposition can be submitted to the States for ratification.

I am here to denounce this attempt to stifle the common sense, reason, judgment, and understanding of the honorable gentlemen upon that side of the House who represent the Republican or so-called Union party of this country. I allow my action to be influenced by no caucus in deciding upon a proposed amendment to the organic law of the land. I have a duty which I owe to my country and to those who are to come after me. I owe it to the sacred memory of the revolutionary dead, whose glorious deeds of courage and patriotism constitute the proudest inheritance of the American citizen, that the work of our fathers should not be amended but by honest individual conviction. In voting upon a question affecting the great Magna Charta of our liberties, the bulwark of our rights, I act from the dictates of an honest judgment, exerted with all the impartiality and candor which God has enabled me to exercise. I yield not to the dictates of any party caucus that may attempt to control my action upon so vital a question. Sir, I say that no Senator, or member of this House, is accountable to any caucus upon a question like this. Our only responsibility is to the hundreds of thousands of brave men who fought the recent war to a triumphant conclusion, and the millions of people throughout the country who are looking to us to act honestly, conscientiously, and wisely upon this great question.

I understand the controlling influence of party caucuses and party conventions. I know they may be necessary in ordinary and primary matters. I am always willing to yield to their action upon mere party principles embodied in a platform, and always do cheerfully sustain and abide by their action. I believe a man is in honor bound to support any convention in which he participates; I mean a mere party convention, held to lay down the doctrines of a party. But he is a parasite who would yield his convictions upon fundamental principles to any caucus or convention or party. I will not support a flagrant violation of the fundamental law of the Government in order that my party may secure or retain political power. If they should ever attempt that, as this article does, I would withdraw from the party organization and declare my soul shall not be seared with the sin of yielding up my own convictions upon fundamental principles to others, who were not more likely to be right than I.

Why, sir, we go so far as to say in this constitutional amendment that everybody who shall be naturalized or born in the United States shall not only be a citizen of the United States, but a citizen of each and every one of the several States. Everybody here knows that under the old Constitution now proposed to be amended a man may be a citizen of the United States and yet have no citizenship in any State.

What is there more vital, what is there more important than for a State to have the control of its own local affairs? Yet here we have a proposition to be submitted to the States to deprive the people of the States of that right. And we not only do that, but it is proposed to exclude nearly all the able men of the South from holding either Federal or State office. I give you warning that no southern State except Tennessee, where despotism reigns, will ratify or indorse any such amendment. You do not want them to ratify it, and have placed it there on purpose to prevent them from ratifying it.

It not only excludes all those who went voluntarily into the rebellion, but all those who were involuntarily forced into it. I hope some gentleman on the other side will have the justice at least to offer an amendment that those shall not be excluded who were involuntarily forced into the rebellion by conscription or otherwise. You do not intend to allow the South representation at all, and the whole object of this legislation is to give you an excuse to keep the Union divided. If you considered each one of your sections important to the country, you would have submitted to the Legislatures each section as a separate article, so that the States that objected to some could have ratified others. The first twelve amendments to the Constitution were submitted separately and ten were ratified and two rejected. This is a revolutionary movement to forestall the action of the people by calling the present Legislatures together to pass upon them. They never will be ratified by three quarters of the States. None of you expect they will. The repudiation of the rebel debt and the validity of the Federal debt would meet with the approbation of every State; yet you link them with the rest to prevent any from being ratified.

Reconstruction.

SPEECH OF HON. GARRETT DAVIS,
OF KENTUCKY,
IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE,
June 7, 1866.

The Senate having under consideration the joint resolution (H. R. No. 127) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States—

Mr. DAVIS said:

Mr. PRESIDENT: We have been admonished by some of the leading members of the majority in the Senate, that Congress is now about entering upon the seventh month of its session, and that the public business was never so far behind at so late a period as any previous session of Congress as it now is. I think, that the honorable Senators who give this admonition and their friends, are alone responsible for the great backwardness of both Houses in the transaction of the public business. I admit that there is a very great state of backwardness in relation to the transaction of the legitimate, proper, and useful portion of the public business; but as to the business that is of an illegitimate and mischievous character, and that is calculated to produce results deleterious to the present and the future of the whole country, there has been a good deal, much too much, of progress made. This tardiness in the transaction of the important, useful, and appropriate business of the country has resulted from a fixed and determined purpose, manifested in various propositions, of the majority of Congress to elevate what are denominated the freedmen, to aggrandize them, to make an unparalleled provision in its extent and expensiveness for the maintenance of the young, the aged, the infirm, and the helpless, and the religious and intellectual education of them all; and to force, if possible, upon Congress and the country the dogma of negro suffrage.

Another cause of the consumption of time is the general disposition of the majority to tinker with the Constitution, their numerous propositions to amend it, and the discussion of them in both Houses. And still another fruitful cause of much waste of time has been the war that is prevailing between that majority in both Houses and the Executive, not upon his part as I conceive, but by that majority upon him. I was never of the politics of the President, nor he of mine; but at the present time and for some time past his leading measures have received my approval and my hearty support. I think, notwithstanding the number of protests to the contrary in this Chamber, that his policy, as it is termed, is but a continuation of the later policy of the late President, but a continuation of the policy and principles to which the majority of both Houses of Congress stand pledged in the most solemn forms. We now see, though, that this majority, lately the friends of the President, are engaged in a war upon him, and that war manifests itself in various aspects and modes. They denounce him; they denounce his measures, his policy. He is a coordinate branch of the Government; or at least the executive department is, and he is the chief executive officer. He is as independent in his constitutional position in the Government, and in the legitimate exercise of the powers and functions of his office as is Congress in the exercise of its powers and functions, and he ought no more to be assailed by Congress, or to be obstructed in the legitimate exercise of those powers, than Congress should be in the exercise of its powers by him.

Among his powers is the veto. We have seen repeated and persevering efforts made by Congress, with a considerable amount of success, to checkmate the veto power of the President by their achieving, as I think, illegitimately and unconstitutionally, a majority of two thirds, and over two thirds, in both Houses. And one of the objects of the majority in presenting the extraordinary proposition under consideration is to attain and continue a political power that will enable it and its sectional successors to control the future legislation of Congress; to overrule presidential vetoes; to hold possession of and direct all the operations of the Government. But what is the immediate cause that has brought down the majority in such relentless hostility to the President? Let us examine for the object and the animus. Under the late Administration the President and Congress were in accord; that is, the good man who then filled the office of President was so flexible in his nature and will that he permitted himself to be driven from his own principles and purposes, often, by the vehemence, energy, and stronger will of the radical leaders in Congress. One of the most celebrated apostles of abolitionism in America, Phillips, remarked on a certain occasion, "Mr. Lincoln is a growing man; and why does he grow? Because we have watered him." And there was a great deal of truth expressed in those few words. The abolitionists in Congress and out of Congress watered the late President. They caused him to grow in the direction and shape that they wished him. They warped him from his own principles and policy to theirs. And what is the great sin of the present Executive of the United States? It is that he will not make himself the leader, the obedient tool of the majorities in the two Houses of Congress; that his judgment of his powers, of his duties to the country and to the Government, and of what is constitutional, wise, and good for the country, is inconsistent with and may conflict with their party purposes; and because he will not tamely submit his own reason and the conclusions of his own judgment and conscience to their behests.

SENATE.

Reconstruction—Mr. Davis.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

To prove that this position of mine has not been taken without facts, I will read extracts from a speech of the honorable Senator from Michigan, [Mr. HOWARD,] delivered in this Chamber some two weeks or more since. That able Senator referred to the measures of the President for restoring relations between the States lately in rebellion and the United States Government, and characterized them as "his policy." The Senator then proceeded to make these remarks:

"I complain of this course of conduct on the part of the Executive, because I believe it to be a usurpation of the authority which pertains not to him but to Congress, and here is the gist of the controversy, here is the bone of contention."

Further:

"I will say that it is not competent for a military commander in the field, whether he be 'Commander-in-Chief' or acting in any other capacity under the Constitution of the United States, to impart political or legislative rights to the conquered community. That is what I assert. The Commander-in-Chief holds the sword of physical force; all his acts as 'Commander-in-Chief' are connected with the prosecution of the war as such, and go not a single inch beyond the necessities of the war. He has no authority to assume the legislative power that appertains to the Government who appoints him, and whose servant he is, and undertake to exercise legislative authority in the country where he is the conqueror. Let the honorable Senator from Pennsylvania read the numerous cases in Roman and Grecian history, and, indeed, in all other histories, in which attempts have been made on the part of commanders in the field, and he will not find a single instance in which any attempt to exercise legislative authority over a conquered people has been tolerated by the Government at home."

The more formal question of the power of each House to decide upon credentials is one which I am not discussing. I go far behind that: I go down to the bottom, to the essence of the question, and deny to the President the power to impart to the people of any rebel State any political rights whatever; and I claim that that power belongs to Congress and to Congress alone."

"It is said the States have the right of coming back to Congress. I grant it. They have the right to return to their allegiance and be represented in the two Houses of Congress; but that right does not accrue and cannot accrue until the conqueror, the Congress of the United States, has seen that it is consistent with their interests, with the interests of their people, the interest of the whole people of the United States. We hold them to-day not by their own will, not by their willing fealty to the Government, not in virtue of their fidelity to the Constitution, but solely, in my judgment, even to-day, by virtue of this highest law known to communities, physical force."

Mr. President, I have read these extracts from the speech of the distinguished Senator from Michigan, who was upon this illegitimate and hybrid committee of fifteen, raised without any proper authority, acting and coming to conclusions and making recommendations without any sanction or authority, and obligatory upon no person; my purpose being to show the animus and the objects which he and the party of which he is such a distinguished member, have in relation to the President and his constitutional powers in the war which they are making upon him. I will read, with the same purpose, a short paragraph extracted from one of the trusted oracles of this party in the Northwest, the Chicago Tribune, in these words:

"Mr. Johnson is merely the agent of the Republican party, which is the governing party, or, in other words, the Government. He is in duty and in honor bound to carry out its measures and principles. When he refuses to do so he commits a breach of trust, and stands in the light of a swindler."

What is this power called "the Government" by the members of this majority in the Senate during the last Administration? The majority of Congress and the Executive were then in harmony. The Executive was denominated by them "the Government." Gentlemen could hardly rise in their places and utter a sentence upon this floor without referring to the President as "the Government." True loyalty, all loyalty, then consisted in supporting the President—"the Government"—and his measures; and myself and other humble men who had the independence, or the hardihood, to dissent from the measures of "the Government,"—of the President—and to condemn them, were denounced as "copperheads," as "disloyal." You see now, sir, the arrogant, profligate, and monstrous position assumed by this Tribune in Chicago. With him the President is no longer "the Government." "The Government" is the majority of Congress, according to its designation. By what authority is the President deposed and the majority in the two Houses of Congress installed as "the Government?" In this Chamber no Senator now denominates the President "the Government." Nor do I subscribe to any such absurdity. It is an abuse of terms to call either the Congress or the President the Government. The three departments, the legislative, executive, and judicial, and nothing less, constitute the Government. All the powers of government and of sovereignty trusted to the Government of the United States are divided out by the Constitution among the three departments. These departments are coördinate, and in the exercise of their appropriate constitutional powers they are equally independent; and where one is making encroachments upon another, or upon the Constitution generally, and the liberties of the people, it was the intention of the founders, not that one department should be the Government, but that each should be a check upon the other, and each should defend the Constitution and the liberties of the country from the assaults of the others.

Andrew Johnson is the existing impersonation of the chief executive power of the Government of the United States—that power is very limited, to be sure, not extending one particle beyond the powers enumerated in the Constitution, and those with which he is clothed by the laws of Congress within the sphere of its authority so to invest the President with incidental, auxiliary powers as expressed in the Constitution. The powers of the judicial department are enumerated, meted, and bounded out to the Supreme Court and the courts inferior to it, with the same authority of Congress by law to invest it with all proper and necessary incidental powers to execute those expressly delegated to it.

Now, Mr. President, I proceed to state what I understand to be a few plain and self-evident truths as connected with the American system of government:

1. The great leading feature of the complex political system of the United States is, that all sovereignty is divided between the State governments and a General Government common to all the States; and that the affairs of the people with foreign nations, and with each other as residents of different States, are confided to the General Government; and those affairs which relate locally to the people of each State, their institutions, and rights of person and property, were reserved to the States respectively, and are exclusively under the jurisdiction of their governments.

2. The Constitution of the United States forms a Government of delegated and limited powers, and that Government, or any of its departments or officers, has not a vestige of power but what is conferred by the language of the Constitution.

3. Military law exists by the legislation of Congress in the form of the Articles of War, and the Rules and Regulations of the Army. What is called martial law is the overthrow of all law and the domination of the arbitrary will of the military commander. This state of things cannot exist in any place in the United States where the civil law can be enforced by the civil courts with the aid and support of the military power. It is only in such localities where the civil law and courts have been in fact deposed by a hostile military force, and this deposition continues by the actual presence and operation of the cause which produced it, that the will of the military commander becomes, of necessity, the law of the place; and only to the limits and so long as the civil law is thus deposed. So soon as the hostile force is withdrawn, or driven away, or conquered by friendly arms, the civil law and courts are reinstated by the principles of the Constitution, and become again de facto as they are all the time de jure the supreme law and authority.

Now, Mr. President, these propositions, in their length and breadth, are based upon the Constitution of the United States. They are not original with me. I have learned them. I have learned them from Hamilton and Madison in the Federalist, from the debates in the Convention which framed our Constitution, from the debates of the different State conventions that adopted it, from the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, particularly the decisions rendered by Chief Justice Marshall and Justice Story, and from the Commentaries of Chancellor Kent. These great truths or principles are a part of our system of government; they are moored in that Government and will abide there as long as it lasts intact by revolution; and I defy the honorable Senator from Michigan and all of his associates here or elsewhere to shake these principles, incorporated as they are in the Constitution.

But, Mr. President, about the year 1860 it became manifest that the American people were fast coming to a civil war. The just authority of the Government of the United States and the execution of its laws, it became apparent, were to be resisted. In the beginning of the year 1861 the banner of revolt, of insurrection, was unfurled. What was the duty of the Government of the United States, of its departments, and of the men who occupied those departments when this demonstration against the laws, authority, and power of the Government was made? They were not to remain torpid, inactive, as stocks and stones. That condition of things had been anticipated by the wise statesmen who framed the Constitution. The Constitution was cradled in a rebellion in the State of Massachusetts got up by Shays. It was just for the condition of things that arose in 1861 that the framers of the Constitution had made provision, and they had made it by prescribing the manner in which such resistance to the execution of the laws of the United States or such insurrections were to be met. They had designated the departments of the Government and the officers that were to undertake this great work of putting down such insurrections, and coercing obedience to the Constitution and laws, and with what means.

I now propose to examine what each department of the Government was to do in this great work, according to the provisions of the Constitution and laws made in pursuance of it. The Constitution reads thus, in various sections and paragraphs:

"The Congress shall have power—
"To raise and support armies;"
"To provide and maintain a navy;"
"To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions;"
"To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof."

According to my understanding of the Constitution, this short summary embraces every provision of the instrument that invests Congress with any power to act, immediately or remotely, upon the subject of invasion, insurrection, or domestic disturbance in a State. Let us now see what other provisions in relation to this subject have been made by the Constitution, and to what departments or officers of the Government they appertain:

"The President." * * * * "before

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Reconstruction—Mr. Davis.

SENATE.

he enters upon the execution of his office, shall take the following oath or affirmation: 'I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States.'

"The President shall be Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States when called into the actual service of the United States."

"He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

Those words are not many, but they are comprehensive and explicit, and, in my judgment, they are all that were necessary or intended to meet the great exigence that came upon the country in 1861. How and by whom is such an exigence to be met? What is the oath of you, sir, as a member of this body and of every member of each House? All of us swear to support the Constitution. May the Lord have mercy upon us for the manner in which some of us have disregarded that oath! What is the oath of the President? That he will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of his ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States. The members of Congress are simply to support the Constitution; the President is to preserve, protect, and defend it. He is to fight for it. When it is assailed, it is his duty to wield all the military power with which the Constitution and the laws of Congress have intrusted him for its preservation, its protection, and its defense.

If the execution of the laws is obstructed without force of arms, force of arms cannot be intervened to have them executed, or to aid in their execution. It is only when the authority of the Government and the due execution of its laws are resisted by arms that arms can be interposed for the purpose of putting down the resistance and enforcing the execution of the laws. And who is to interpose the arms? Not Congress. Congress has nothing to do with wielding the military power that may thus be properly invoked. Who is to do it? The President. That is his duty by the Constitution, made so by plain language. He is to execute the office of President of the United States faithfully; that is, to perform all the duties devolved upon him by the Constitution and laws. He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed; and to do this, when it becomes necessary, he must apply and direct the military power of the United States. He is to preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States; and to do this, when it is assaulted by men in arms, he, as Commander-in-Chief, must repel the assault by the Army and Navy, and the militia of the States raised, provided, and called into the public service by laws passed by Congress. That is the aid which Congress is to afford him, and that is the only part which it can take in this grave business.

The act of 1793 was the first that was enacted to carry out the provisions of the Constitution for suppressing insurrections, &c. It was found defective, and in 1795 another and a more complete act was passed. In 1861, after the insurrection had broken out, Congress took up the subject again and passed a more elaborate and probably a better considered law, in which the provisions of the act of 1795, so far as they related to the subject of insurrections, were repealed. I will read a clause from the law of July 29, 1861, drafted, as I understand, by the late Senator Collamer:

"That whenever, by reason of unlawful obstructions, combinations, or assemblages of persons, or rebellion against the authority of the Government of the United States, it shall become impracticable, in the judgment of the President of the United States, to enforce by the ordinary course of judicial proceeding the laws of the United States within any State or Territory of the United States, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States to call forth the militia of any or all the States of the Union, and to employ such parts of the land and naval forces of the United States as he may deem necessary to enforce the faithful execution of the laws of the United States or to suppress such rebellion, in whatever State or Territory thereof the laws of the United States may be forcibly opposed, or the execution thereof forcibly obstructed."

That is a most proper and constitutional provision. It limits itself to the occasions and the exigencies of resistance by force to the execution of the laws of the United States, or a rebellion, which is a great insurrection against the authority of the United States.

Now, sir, the honorable Senator from Michigan says that Congress is the conqueror, and that the people of the rebel States who were subdued by our arms and who capitulated and acknowledged obedience to the authority and laws of the United States occupy the position of a conquered people; and as such are subject to Congress, the conqueror.

Mr. HOWARD. If the Senator from Kentucky will pardon me for a very brief interruption, I should be glad to lay before the Senate a very high authority upon that particular point.

Mr. DAVIS. You can do that at your leisure after I shall have concluded.

Mr. HOWARD. It is no less an authority than Andrew Johnson, who adopted the principle in a deliberate speech made in this body.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. RAMSEY in the chair.) The Senator from Kentucky, who is entitled to the floor, declines to yield.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, my principle is to support Andrew Johnson when he is right and to oppose him when he is wrong, and that is the principle upon which I practice in relation to all Presidents and all parties and all Administrations; but I will proceed.

How can Congress be the conqueror of the southern States? Is Congress clothed by the Constitution with any military power? Not a particle. It is invested with the power to declare war, but not to declare war against a State or any portion of the people of the United States, but only against foreign nations. Such is the plain meaning of the Constitution and the ruling of the Supreme Court. That position is conceded by all American statesmen.

The war power of Congress has no application whatever to the suppression of insurrection or rebellion, except merely to exercise the legislative power to raise and support armies, to provide a Navy, and to call forth the militia and to raise the necessary supplies to enable the President to suppress the insurrection and see that the laws are faithfully executed. That fulfills the whole power and duty of Congress in the suppression of insurrection and rebellion; the consummation of the work belongs to the President, and not by the authority of Congress, but the Constitution.

I concede that when the United States is invaded, when a State or a portion of the people are in a state of insurrection, when there is such domestic violence in a State as requires the protection of the United States, to decide when the state of facts amount to either of those conditions does not appertain to the President as "Commander-in-Chief," and is nowhere given to him by the Constitution; yet he is invested with that high discretionary power.

How, then, does he get it? By the act of Congress. First, by the act of 1793; second, by the act of 1795; and lastly, by the act of July, 1861, in the section which I have read. Whence the authority of Congress to invest the President with this power? Here it is in these few words of the Constitution:

"Congress shall have power to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States or any Department or officer thereof."

Mr. President, these provisions of the Constitution and of the laws of Congress have been before the Supreme Court, and have been construed by the final arbiters, organized by the Constitution, after the maturest consideration. I will refer, first, to the case of Martin vs. Motley, 12 Wheaton. It came up to the Supreme Court from the State of New York. The President had made a call on the Governor of that State for a militia force. Martin had been enrolled and ordered by the proper military authority to report at the place of rendezvous, but failed. The powers of the President, the duties of subordinate military officers to obey his orders, and the effect upon the militiamen, all arose as questions in the case, and the court, in the opinion, say:

"If we look at the language of the act of 1795, every conclusion drawn from the nature of the power itself is strongly fortified. The words are, 'whenever the United States shall be invaded or be in imminent danger of invasion, &c., it shall be lawful for the President, &c., to call forth such number of the militia, &c., as he may judge necessary to repel such invasion.'"

That is a quotation from the law. Here is the reasoning of the court:

"The power itself is confided to the Executive of the Union, to him who is, by the Constitution, the Commander-in-Chief of the militia, when called into the actual service of the United States, whose duty it is to 'take care that the laws be faithfully executed,' and whose responsibility for an honest discharge of his official obligations is secured by the highest sanctions. He is necessarily constituted the judge of the existence of the exigency in the first instance, and is bound to act according to his belief of the facts. If he does so act, and decides to call forth the militia, his orders for the purpose are in strict conformity with the provisions of the law, and it would seem to follow as a necessary consequence that every act done by a subordinate officer, in obedience to such orders, is equally justifiable. The law contemplates that, under such circumstances, orders shall be given to carry the power into effect, and it cannot, therefore, be a correct inference that any other person has a just right to disobey them. The law does not provide for any appeal from the judgment of the President, or for any right in subordinate officers to review his decision, and in effect defeat it. Whenever a statute gives a discretionary power to any person, to be exercised by him upon his own opinion of certain facts, it is a sound rule of construction that the statute constitutes him the sole and exclusive judge of the existence of those facts. And in the present case we are all of opinion that such is the true construction of the act of 1795. It is no answer that such a power may be abused, for there is no power which is not susceptible of abuse."

In precise accordance to the judgment of the Supreme Court in that case was its ruling in the case of Luther vs. Borden, which arose out of the Dorr rebellion in Rhode Island. I will read one or two short passages from that opinion. Speaking of the act of 1795, the court say:

"By this act, the power of deciding whether the exigency had arisen upon which the Government of the United States is bound to interfere, is given to the President. He is to act upon the application of the Legislature or of the Executive."

That is, when there is domestic violence in a State, as was the case then in Rhode Island.

"And consequently he must determine what body of men constitute the Legislature, and who is the Governor, before he can act."

This principle, as the honorable Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SUMNER] said some time ago, in relation to another matter, runs in several directions. It is an important principle. It has a multiform application; and it may receive other and more important applications in the course of events. I do not know that it will. I hope there will be no necessity for it. If there should be, I have no knowledge that it will be exercised; although it ought, and might be with the plainest sanction of the Constitution, and the highest considerations of duty and patriotism operating upon the President.

"The fact that both parties claim the right to the government cannot alter the case, for both cannot be entitled to it. If there is an armed conflict, like the one of which we are speaking, it is a case of domestic violence, and one of the parties must be in insurrection against the lawful government. And the President must, of necessity, decide which is the government, and which party is unlawfully arrayed against it, before he can perform the duty imposed upon him by the act of Congress."

What was the decision of the President in that case? He decided that the old charter government of Rhode Island was the true and legitimate government of the State; that the Governor, under that charter government, was the true and legitimate executive Chief Magistrate of that State. He decided that the Dorr government was spurious; that the election of Dorr under it, and every attempt to set up and organize a government under the Dorr constitution in the State of Rhode Island was illegal, unconstitutional, void, a wrong, and an outrage upon the existing government, and authorized the existing government to put it and all of its supporters down by force of arms. The President in that case did not interfere by the actual march of troops into Rhode Island, but he declared his purpose to do so, and that declaration induced the insurgents and the Dorrites to submit. Here is what the court say on that point:

SENATE.

Reconstruction—Mr. Davis.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

"The interference of the President, therefore, by announcing his determination, was as effectual as if the militia had assembled under his orders. And it should be equally authoritative. For certainly no court of the United States, with a knowledge of this decision—

That he had determined to interfere simply—

"would have been justified in recognizing the opposing party as the lawful government; or in treating as wrong-doers and insurgents the officers of the government which the President had recognized and was prepared to support by an armed force."

Here is another point stated in this opinion which carries a truth, a principle with it, of which I have an application to make presently:

"In the case of foreign nations, the Government acknowledged by the President is always recognized in the courts of justice. And this principle has been applied by the act of Congress to the sovereign States of the Union."

Let gentlemen ponder a little upon the principle involved in that language. In relation to foreign countries, we all know, as the uniform practice and history of the Government, that whenever the President recognizes an existing de facto foreign Government, the Congress and the courts, and all the authorities of the United States, in obedience or in conformity, at least, to the acknowledgment by the President, recognize the existence of the same government. And the court says, "this principle has been applied by the act of Congress to the sovereign States of the Union." Here is the very point decided, that when a State is acknowledged by the President it will then be recognized by the courts, the act of 1795 vesting that power in the President. This opinion, in remarking upon the provision of the act of 1795, which was the subject of the main question in the case of Martin vs. Mott, says:

"The power given to the President in each case is the same"—

That is, in relation to invasions, insurrections, or domestic violence—

"with this difference only, that it cannot be exercised by him in the latter case except upon the application of the Legislature or Executive of the State. The case above mentioned arose out of a call made by the President by virtue of the power conferred on him by the first clause; and the court said that—

"Whenever a statute gives a discretionary power to any person to be exercised by him upon his own opinion of certain facts, it is a sound rule of construction that the statute constitutes him the sole and exclusive judge of the existence of those facts."

There is no appeal from his judgment; there is no correction of it; there can be no revision of it; it is the law and the fact of the case; and it must be so received by all, not only by military officers who are exercising power in subordination to him as "Commander-in-Chief," but by Congress and by the courts; and such has been the uniform practice of the entire Government and all its officers. The opinion proceeds:

"It is a sound rule of construction that the statute constitutes him the sole and exclusive judge of the existence of those facts." The facts that make up the case upon which he is to act by moving the armed forces of the United States."

What I have read from the Constitution, the laws of Congress, and the decisions of the Supreme Court, establish these propositions: that in 1861 it was the power, right, and duty of the President to decide whether, in any locality of the United States, "by reason of unlawful obstructions, combinations, or assemblages of persons," or insurrection or rebellion against the authority of the Government of the United States, it was "impracticable to enforce, by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, the laws of the United States;" and that his decision of this point is final, and concludes Congress and all the Departments and officers of the Government, and all the people of the United States.

The enforcement of the execution of the laws in the places where the obstructions existed had become a military operation; and all that Congress had the power to do, and which it was its highest duty to perform, was to furnish the President with the men and the money to enable him to take care that the laws be duly executed. That could only be done by the removal, the cessation, the non-existence of further resistance and obstruction. When the work was thus completed, whether by the voluntary submission of the insurgents, or their suppression by force of arms, the office of the President in the important matter was fulfilled; military operations and military expenses in it were to terminate, and Congress was under no obligation to vote more men and more money to put down an insurrection, a rebellion which no longer had existence, or for the enforcement of the execution of the laws to which there was no longer either resistance or obstruction.

But there was a necessity for some power, some officer of the Government to declare when the insurrection was suppressed. There is such a power and such an officer to execute it; and who is he? The Constitution had been attacked by an armed resistance to the execution of the laws, and an attempt to set up an independent power and government within the United States. It is made the duty of the President, by the Constitution, to the best of his ability to preserve, protect, and defend that Constitution, and to take care that the laws be faithfully executed throughout the United States. To give him the ability to perform those important trusts he is made by the Constitution the permanent Commander-in-Chief of the whole military force of the United States. The law intrusts him with the sole, exclusive, and unappealable power to decide when and where there is an insurrection or an armed resistance to the execution of the laws; and the Constitution and the law authorize him to move the whole military force to suppress the insurrection, to stifle all resistance or obstruction to the due execution of the laws. He is to determine upon and conduct every movement and operation to that end, and to continue them until it is effected. Not Congress, but the President, in fact and of necessity, is the functionary to know and declare when the work has been ended, and then to withdraw the military forces. Congress cannot know when it is done, but he knows because it is being done under his orders, and he is in constant communication with those who are in the performance of it. Congress might not be, as it was not, in session when the late rebellion terminated; but the Senator from Michigan says it was the duty of the President to convene Congress. It might be that a large number of the members of Congress were not then chosen. And for what purpose is Congress to be convened? That it might be informed by the President that he had suppressed the rebellion by the operations of the Army; or that it had terminated by the voluntary submission of the insurgents; and that it might authorize him to withdraw and disband the forces, and stop the heavy expenditure of public money when there was no longer any armed resistance in existence or threatened, but, on the contrary, all was submission, obedience, and peace. Could any proposition be more absurd and unsound? No, sir. The President is the constitutional and legal organ to decide and declare when the insurrection begins, how long it continues, and when it ends; and it is the duty of all the other departments and officers of Government to accept and act upon the particular state of the affair according to his decision and judgment upon it.

But the Senator from Michigan announces that the southern States and people, in consequence of their rebellion, have ceased to be States, and have forfeited all their rights as States and American citizens. That Congress is their conqueror, and holds them this day in the condition of a conquered people, and has the right so to hold them until the interests and the will of the conquerors will allow them to reconstruct the States that revolted and readmit them as States into the Union; that this whole business of the reestablishment of relations between these States and the Government of the United States is a congressional affair exclusively, with which the President has nothing to do; and that "his policy" of reconstruction is nothing but arrogant and audacious usurpation of power, an infringement of the rights and powers of Congress, to which it ought not and cannot submit without degradation.

A most lofty and imperial pretension, truly, made for Congress by the Senator from Michigan! And where is its warrant? Not in the Constitution. If it be there, will some of the Websters, the Kents, and the Storrs of the majority in this body refer me to the provision, that I may read it and be instructed? But neither the Senator, nor any of his coadjutors in support of this measure, can find any support for this most extravagant claim of power for Congress in the Constitution. Indeed, he deigns not to place it on so humble a footing, but in swelling phrase claims it for Congress, as the conqueror of those States, and by the laws of war. If there be any right to the appellation of conqueror in the suppression of the rebellion it would appertain to the President rather than to Congress.

But there was no war, no conquest, no belligerent rights in this great and terrible civil strife, according to the sense in which those terms are found in publicists and the laws of nations. The two latter are not named in the Constitution, and as between the United States and the States, in its meaning, spirit, and scope, they have no covert existence there. The term "war" is found in the Constitution, but with no reference to a conflict between the United States and any of the States or any portion of the people. It refers only to contests of arms with foreign nations, and such has been the construction of the Supreme Court and of every American statesman. By the letter, meaning, and spirit of the Constitution, as expounded by all this high authority, Congress cannot declare war against a State or any portion of the people of the United States. Certainly, no State can make war against the United States, and have belligerent rights. It is not war in the sense in which the term is used in international law and as it is adopted by our Constitution. Between the United States and the people or the States lately in rebellion there was, then, no war, no belligerent rights on either side. What was it, and what law applied to and governed it? Upon the part of the revolted States and people it was an armed resistance to the authority and laws of the United States, a great insurrection, though not pervading all nor a majority of the States. It was just such an affair as the men who made the Constitution contemplated might occur, and for which they made provision in it. They provided that the Constitution, and laws of Congress made in pursuance of it, should be the supreme law of the land; that all officers, both Federal and State, should take an oath to support it; that the President, before entering upon the execution of his office, should take an oath, to the best of his ability to preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution; that he should take care that the laws be faithfully executed; that Congress should have power to raise and support armies, to provide and maintain navies, to levy taxes, and borrow money without limit, if need be, to the utmost capacity of the United States; to provide for calling forth the entire militia of the States to put down the insurrection, and should make all laws which might be necessary and proper to give full effect to the powers which I have enumerated; and that the President should, by his own unquestioned and unquestionable will, as "Commander-in-Chief," move this vast array of military power, land and naval, to suppress the insurrection, to reinstate the authority of the United States, and to enforce the due execution of their laws whenever and wherever they might be resisted or obstructed. In the late great exigence that was all that was needful to be done, all that the Government and authorities of the United States were authorized by the Constitution to do. The wisdom and efficiency of the whole provision has been illustrated by the perfect military suppression of the stupendous insurrection, by the universality and completeness of the submission of the insurgents, by their true and general quiescence, beyond all parallel after such a profound and impassioned upheaving.

But there was a possible national disorder, so deep and so pervasive, but so improbable and so utterly remediless, for which, if it ever should come into being, the wise and far-seeing men who framed the Constitution attempted to provide no remedy. When the General Government should become continuously so perverted and oppressive in its administration as to have caused fixed discontent and hostility to it throughout the United States; when a majority of the State Legislatures would no longer choose Senators in Congress; when they would no longer direct the manner in which the presidential electors of their respective States should be appointed; when a majority of the people of a majority of the States should refuse to elect a Legislature to direct the manner in which their presidential electors shall be appointed, or should themselves have refused to choose such electors, the members of the Convention well knew that the political malady would have reached an extremity when it would be irremediable; and they did not attempt the vain task of prescribing a remedy. They tacitly conceded that the Government which they were about founding would then cease to be, and that the country and its destinies must be submitted to God and the people, and that reconstruction in some form, unseen, unknown to them, must come. But until that final catastrophe all was to be for the support, the defense, the preservation, and vindication of the Constitution and system of government which they had fashioned.

The possible condition of the country, as I have depicted it, is thus adverted to by Mr. Madison, in the forty-third number of the Federalist:

"Should it be asked, what is the redress for an insurrection pervading all the States and comprising the superiority of all the force, though not a constitutional right? the answer must be, that such a case, as it would be without the compass of human remedies, so it is fortunately not within the compass of human probability; and that it is a sufficient recommendation of the Federal Constitution, that it diminishes the risk of calamity for which no possible constitution can provide a cure."

Mr. President, we often hear it asserted that the Government of the United States was made to be perpetual; that it has all the rights of self-defense; that the national life must be preserved. All such language is inappropriate, and expresses ideas not fitted to our country and Government. The Constitution does not expressly provide for its dissolution, but it does impliedly. The same power which made it may at any time terminate its existence in any mode it may will.

In the forty-fifth number of the Federalist, Mr. Madison says:

"The State governments may be regarded as constituent and essential parts of the Federal Government; while the latter is nowise essential to the operation or organization of the former. Without the intervention of the State Legislatures, the President of the United States cannot be elected at all."

* * "The Senate will be elected absolutely and exclusively by the State Legislatures."

The members of the Convention knew as much of the Constitution and the Government which they formed, its structure in all its parts, and its weaknesses, as any of their successors. They knew full well that if a majority of the States and of the people of those States persistently determined not to choose Senators or presidential electors or Representatives in Congress, that the Government was thereby brought to an end. They made no provision to avert that consequence.

The Constitution expressly provides that each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature may direct, a number of electors equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in Congress; that those electors shall vote for President, and the person having the greatest number of votes shall be President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest number, not exceeding three on the list of those voted for, the House of Representatives, voting by States and by ballot, shall choose the President.

If all the States should appoint electors, and the majority of them should refuse to vote at all for President, that officer could not be elected, and consequently the Government would be brought to an end. Again, if all the electors should vote for President and no person should receive a majority of the whole number appointed, and the election should thus be devolved on the House of Representatives, voting by States, and the majority of the States should refuse to vote, or voting, to vote for the same person, there could be no presidential election, and in that way the Government would be brought to a dead lock.

In all these and other ways the men who made the Government knew it could be terminated, and they devised no means to avoid it. Their purpose was that it should give liberty and security to the people, and for its strength and permanence should win and rest upon their confidence and attachment; that when it became perverted, corrupt, and oppressive, and the people could no longer consent to its continuance, they should have several modes of bringing it to a close. It has no principle or power of self-perpetuation. It has no right of self-defense. All its departments and officers are bound to support, protect, and defend it; but it is by the use of the powers and means with which they are intrusted by the Constitution and the laws; and they cannot resort to others without usurpation and crime. A Government or being possessed of the right of self-defense may seize and use all means within its reach so far as they may be necessary to enable it to repel attacks upon it, from whatever quarter they may come. The powers of the Government of the United States spring from no such source, and are commensurate with no such principle. They arise wholly from a written Constitution, and exist only to the extent that it, by its language, confers them.

The phrase "national life," is also incorrect, untruthful, and delusive. Life is the state of an organized being in which its natural powers and functions are self-operating and continue its existence. If the States were to cease to exist there could be no continuance of a President and Senate for the nation, and all the organism, the very being of the nation, so imperfect as to be visible, would at once come to dissolution. The national or Federal Government and Union and the States and their governments are essential parts of the same system; but the being, the life of the latter, would continue even if the former were destroyed; but if the latter were to perish the former would die with them. But "national life," "loyalty," and "disloyalty" with us in latter years are only "catch-words" intended to deceive and mislead. Political loyalty in the United States means fidelity to the Constitution and laws, support of those in office, so far as they perform their duties in accordance with them; sympathy and coöperation with all true friends of the Constitution and laws; the maintenance of the division of political sovereignty and power between the General Government and the States as it is made by the Constitution, to the former all that is conferred on it, and to the latter all that is reserved to them by the Constitution; and resisting all assaults upon these principles whether they may proceed from foreign or domestic enemies, private citizens, or men in office and power. This is the only true standard of American loyalty, and men are loyal or disloyal as their words and acts conform to or depart from it.

But, sir, when the President has, by the agency of the military forces of which he is Commander-in-Chief, occupied the portions of country where the insurrection had been made and suppressed it, what is next to be done? If the local governments have been overthrown or disorganized, the Commander-in-Chief, by his subordinates, must, ad interim, organize a quasi government to prevent crime and to protect persons and property until the government of the States can be reorganized and put into operation. But this military government arises from the exigency and necessity of the occasion, and with that it passes away and is superseded by the State governments. What else is the President to do? He is to give his counsel, aid, and protection to the people of the State in their efforts to reorganize their government by electing and installing their Governor, members of the Legislature, and judges. And what is to be done to reestablish relations between the State and the Government of the United States, and what departments and officers are to do it? The President is to act first. He issues his proclamation announcing that the insurrection is suppressed. He appoints district attorneys, marshals, postmasters, collectors of customs and internal taxes for the State, and he reestablishes the mails, collects the public revenue, and takes care that the laws of the United States are executed in them; and this is what I understand he has done in relation to the rebel States—this is his policy. Then the judicial department takes up the matter. The Supreme Court looks over its docket, and finds upon it cases from the States lately in rebellion. It knows and concedes the fact that the rebellion has been suppressed; the President by his public proclamation has so informed it and the country. It then proceeds to acknowledge those States lately in rebellion as present existing members of the United States, and in conformity to the Constitution and laws of Congress orders the cases brought from them up to this court before the insurrection, and any during its continuance, to be set down for hearing, which could not be done unless the localities from whence they came were existing States and in the Union.

During the entire period of the insurrection there were members of the Supreme Court, resident of States actively engaged in the rebellion until it was put down, and who had been assigned to circuits constituted of the rebel States; and they formed part of the court at each term, just as the judges resident in and whose circuits were formed of States which the rebellion never reached.

But a few days since an application was made to Justice Nelson, of the Supreme Court, for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of a prisoner confined in one of the penitentiaries of the State of New York. On the return of the writ, and the bringing up the prisoner before the judge, it appeared that since the insurrection had been suppressed he, a citizen of South Carolina, had been tried by a military commission on a charge of murder, found guilty, and condemned for a long period to confinement in the penitentiary, where he was held under said judgment. The learned judge ruled that South Carolina was a State of the United States, in the Union, and possessed of, or entitled to, all the rights and powers of a State; that the trial of the prisoner for the crime of murder belonged properly and exclusively to the authorities of that State; and that the judgment of the military commission was void and of no effect; and the judge ordered the prisoner to be discharged.

SENATE.

Reconstruction—Mr. Davis.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

But, Mr. President, what have been the action and decisions of the Senate on questions dependent upon the fact whether the States in which the rebellion existed were States in the Union? Before the extra session of Congress in 1861 Virginia had passed her ordinance of secession, and was then the chief power of the rebellion. Her State government existing at the beginning of the insurrection had been dissolved, and most of its officers had renounced the Government of the United States and adhered to the southern confederacy. A new State government was organized by her loyal citizens who were in a small minority; two gentlemen, Messrs. Willey and Carlile, were chosen by the new Legislature to be the Senators of Virginia, and the new Governor, Peirpoint, gave them his commission under the great seal of the State as Senators of that ancient Commonwealth. Those gentlemen brought their credentials and asked to be admitted as Senators from the State of Virginia. The President, then Senator Johnson, himself representing the rebel State of Tennessee, presented their credentials to the Senate and moved that they be permitted to take the oath and their seats as Senators. This was opposed by Mr. Bayard, who moved that their credentials be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary; but this was strenuously resisted by Senators Johnson, Collamer, Hale, Trumbull, and others. I will read passages from some of their speeches, and first, of Senator Johnson:

"Now, sir, we have the credentials here fair on their face. They purport to be the credentials of Senators elected by the old Commonwealth of Virginia, signed by a person purporting to be the Governor of Virginia, and under the great seal of the State. This appears to be fair. But Senators say, 'Oh, well; but we know this is not the Legislature of Virginia; there is another Legislature, and there is another man who is Governor.' Well, if you are going outside of these credentials to rely on the knowledge which you have of the condition of things in the State of Virginia, then you know that the old Governor of Virginia and the old Legislature are in rebellion against the country. They are rebels and traitors in arms against the Government, and are not to be recognized as the government of Virginia, but are to be recognized as enemies and traitors, whom the whole power of this Government is now put forth to subdue and bring into obedience to the Constitution and the laws; and I would to God that the power was used to bring them to obedience!"

Senator Collamer said:

"There are two difficulties which are suggested in this case. First, it is said that this is a certificate coming from a new government of Virginia, a new organization separated from the rest of the State, but acting for the State as a State. This is in the nature of a judicial proceeding; we are now judging of the qualifications of our members. It is not at all an uncommon thing in our highest tribunals that points arise in the investigation of cases where the court are constrained to say 'that is a political question; with that the courts have nothing to do.' For instance, whether a foreign Government recently commenced has become an independent people, whether in court it is to be treated and considered as a nation, is not a point on which the court can decide. That is a political question; and if the executive head of the Government has received ministers from that power, recognized it as a power on earth, the courts cannot go into the question whether he did it right or did it wrong. It is a matter of political action, and the political power is what settles it, and we cannot examine into it any more.

"In analogy to that, in this judicial proceeding must we not be governed by the fact that the government of Virginia that has executed these papers and sent them to us is recognized by our Executive? They have called on him for militia and have received militia from him. He recognizes them as the government of Virginia. It is a political question; it is settled. There is no occasion for our inquiring further into that. We as a judicial body on this question have nothing to do with that. Here is the Executive of that State recognized by the Executive of this Government; there is the end of that subject. Whether a course of proceedings might be instituted among us to call on our Executive to know whether he did this rightfully or not is altogether a different affair. They are de facto the government recognized by us. We have no more to do with that."

All the Republican Senators who entered into the debate, including the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, [Mr. TRUMBULL,] sustained the views of Messrs. Johnson and Collamer, and when the Senate came to vote on the motion to refer the credentials of Messrs. Willey and Carlile to the Judiciary Committee for investigation, and a report upon the facts and principles involved, there were, in favor of the motion: Bayard, Bright, Polk, Powell and Saulsbury. Against it: Anthony, Bingham, Browning, Chandler, Clark, Collamer, Cowan, Dixon, Doolittle, Fessenden, Foot, Foster, Grimes, Harlan, Harris, Howe, Johnson of Tennessee, King, Lane of Indiana, Lane of Kansas, Latham, McDougall, Morrill, Pomeroy, Rice, Sherman, Simmons, Sumner, Ten Eyck, Trumbull, Wade, Wilkinson, Wilmot. Immediately upon this overwhelming vote, and without further question, Messrs. Willey and Carlile were permitted to be sworn, and took their seats as Senators from the old Commonwealth of Virginia. In this matter the Senate was sitting and acting as a court and was adjudging of the "elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members;" and what points did it decide and sustain?

1. That notwithstanding the State of Virginia had passed an ordinance of secession and was in the condition of armed and active insurrection against the United States, still she was one of the United States and in the Union.

2. That this great question was not a judicial, but a political question; and as the Senate, in its connection with the matter, was a quasi court, it could take no cognizance of this political question; but only of judicial questions, connected with the elections, returns, and qualifications of the applicants as Senators from Virginia.

3. That the President is the proper officer and power to decide that political question.

4. That he having decided it affirmatively, the Senate and all the departments and officers of the Government were bound by his decision, and must act upon the fact that Virginia was one of the United States.

5. That Messrs. Willey and Carlile having the proper returns or evidence of their election in the commission of the Governor under the great seal of the State, were entitled prima facie to their seats; that they were to be admitted to them at once; and all question of their right to hold them must be afterward examined by the Senate through the medium of its committee, and be judicially decided by it. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. HOWARD] has announced to the Senate that he was not then a member of this body; that if he had been, he would have voted against the admission of Messrs. Willey and Carlile as Senators from the State of Virginia. He may now think so; but I am inclined to the belief that he would not have taken that position alone and have broken the unanimity of his party upon that question. But West Virginia was afterward admitted as a new State into the Union, and Senator Willey residing in and being chosen one of the Senators from it, a senatorial vacancy occurred in the old State of Virginia; and while the most of her territory was still occupied by the rebels in arms, the body calling itself her Legislature chose Mr. Bowden as a Senator to fill the vacancy. He appeared, claimed his seat, and was permitted by the Senate to take it; and the Senator from Michigan intervened no objection. But he says that the precedent of admitting Senators from States in rebellion had been made in the case of Messrs. Willey and Carlile, and he yielded and acknowledged the authority of that precedent. This course of the Senator was very reasonable and proper, because that precedent was sustained by the name and authority of that eminent jurist and statesman and pure and elevated patriot, the late Senator Collamer, upon whom the Senator a few days since expressed in this Chamber a high but most just panegyric. If the Senator from Michigan, in the case of Mr. Bowden, conceded the authority of the single precedent in the admission together of Senators Willey and Carlile, and chose to give the high authority of his name to another in the case of Mr. Bowden, when the rebels were still fiercely continuing their insurrection; now, one year after it has been thoroughly suppressed, by the surrender of all their armies, and the unconditional submission and obedience of the whole people of the States that were in insurrection to the laws and authority of the United States, with what consistency or reason can the Senator from Michigan oppose the admission of Senators from those States?

But, Mr. President, both Houses of Congress, including the Senator from Michigan, have admitted, in the gravest and most important form, that all the rebel States, notwithstanding they were making a great struggle in arms for their separation and independence, were States in the Union, by the passage of the law of 1862 apportioning representation among all the States according to the census of 1860, in which each of the rebel States are named, and its proper number of Representatives given to it by the same rule and in similar language as is applied to the States unaffected by the rebellion.

Again, all those States voted for the adoption of the amendment to the Constitution, by which slavery was abolished throughout the United States; and with the approval of the Government and all its departments and officers, and also of the entire people, their votes were counted in favor of its adoption. And the very amendment now proposed, by its specific language, is required to be referred for acceptance or rejection to the States lately in rebellion. In the face of the résumé which I have made, is it not passing strange that any Senator, or any intelligent man, should hold to the position that by their ordinances of secession and abandonment of the Union by their governments, and as a consequence of armed resistance to the authority and laws of the United States by the governments and people of those States, they ceased to be States of the Union, and forfeited all their rights, political, civil, and personal, under the Constitution; that the termination of the war and their unconditional submission and adherence to the United States, left them in the condition of a conquered country and people, with their governments utterly dissolved; that Congress or the President of the United States become possessed of all the powers and rights of a conqueror over them; that they could be held in that condition at the pleasure of the conqueror, and could become States again only by Congress passing an enabling act and readmitting them into the Union as States, subject to such terms and conditions as it might choose to impose upon them? All this is revolting heresy, and at war with our Constitution, its letter and spirit, and our whole political system.

I have said that an insurrection or rebellion against the United States is not treated by our Constitution as a war, but as a great domestic disorder; and the power to meet it, with which the Government is invested, is in the nature of the police power. Police in its large sense, according to Blackstone, is the internal regulation and government of a kingdom or State, and all the military power of a State is the final reserve of its police power. In the United States the militia of all the States is expressly made so, by Congress being empowered to provide for calling forth the militia (without any limit) to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions. When a riot is suppressed by the local police power no change in the order of things is produced. There may be an insurrection against the government and laws of a city, as has occurred in Baltimore and New York. The insurgents may overthrow the city government and dominate it for days. It may require the extraorinary reserves of the police power to be intervened to suppress the outbreak; but when that is done, no destruction or revolution or change of the city government has taken place; its organism and powers have been obstructed in their operation, but they remain perfect in their existence; and so soon as the obstruction is removed they resume their authority, and have their effect as though there had been no interruption. When there was domestic violence in Rhode Island, caused by Dorr's rebellion against the State, the power of the United States was invoked for its protection. If the rebel government had overthrown the legitimate government and driven all its officers from the State before the United States had acted in the matter, and afterward their military power had subdued the insurgents and occupied the State, it would only have been for the restoration of the deposed government to its authority in the State, and no measure would have been necessary to effect that; but it would have taken place at once spontaneously upon the detrusion of the rebel government. The United States would have been the victor, but not the conqueror, and would have had none of the power or rights of a conqueror. Their army would have been there in the performance of a special service, a duty enjoined by the Constitution, solely for the protection of Rhode Island and to reinstate her government; it would have had no authority to act further, and there could be no other legitimate consequence of its action. So where there is insurrection or rebellion against the United States, although both the people and the governments of States may have embarked in it, the duty, business, and authority of the Government of the United States is to suppress it, nothing more. That is all that the Constitution authorizes to be done in the case, and when that is effected the only consequences are that the Constitution, laws, and authority of the United States are reinstated; the States, their governments and people, that were involved in the revolt, are reduced to obedience to them; the Federal and State governments resume all their powers, and the people all their rights, except those of which the law may have deprived them; and things move on in the same relations as before the disturbance.

The only objects and ends of the power to suppress insurrections and rebellions are to support, protect, and preserve the General and State governments; to defend and perpetuate the union of the States under the Constitution; to oppose and arrest revolution, not to make it, and to hold the States in the Union, not to put them out of it. All this can be done only by the armies of the United States marching into the States in rebellion, and subduing the rebels; and the proposition that the successful use of the means which the Constitution authorizes for no other purpose than to avert those consequences, and which defeated the rebels in their great efforts to effect them, should of itself produce them, is a monstrous absurdity.

No, Mr. President, a State once admitted into the Union is there in perpetuity unless displaced by revolution, by force of arms, or in some other form. The State cannot take herself out, nor can the Government of the United States, or both together, effect that by any arrangement. There may be a rebellion so formidable as to dominate a State and hold possession of it, and suppress the authority and laws of the United States in it for a time; a State may be invaded and occupied by a foreign enemy, and a hostile government established in it for years; but in either state of case she remains all the time, de jure, one of the United States, a State in the Union: and on the suppression of the rebellion, or the expulsion of the foreign enemy, by the power and effect of the Constitution and the inherent capabilities of the State, all her rights, powers, and functions would resume their operation; and the relations between her and the United States would be reestablished. There would have been no dissolution of the State, and there would be no need and could not be any reconstruction of it. A large part of the State of Maine was taken possession of by the armies of Great Britain in the war of 1812, and a foreign government established over it; and upon the withdrawal of that army the suspended authority and laws of Maine resumed their operation without any legislation, State or national. Congress has the power to admit a new State into the Union once, and that is all the power it has in relation to the admission of States. It cannot eject and readmit States, either new or old.

The only rehabilitation of the States lately in rebellion that is needed, or that is consistent with the Constitution, is, for the United States, by the different departments of its Government, to fulfill their appropriate duties to them. That has already been done by the executive and judicial departments; the legislative only continues to be contumacious; and what has it omitted to do to make complete and perfect the relations between those States and the United States?

The Constitution and laws of Congress provide that each one of those States shall have a certain number of members in the House of Representatives of Congress, and the Constitution further declares:

"The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof," &c.

Those States, six months since, respectively elected their Senators and Representatives, who, early in the session, appeared with their credentials and asked of their respective Houses to be admitted as members, and their admission would have completed the reestablishment of relations between those States and the United States and their government.

The Constitution makes each House of Congress "the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members;" and authorizes it to punish its members for disorderly behavior, and with the concurrence of two thirds to expel a member. But it confers no power on the Houses separately, or on Congress, to excise a State for any cause from all representation in it; and yet by what they term a concurrent resolution, which no person contends to have any constitutional or legal validity, they have ostracized the eleven States lately in rebellion by refusing to admit wholly their Senators and Representatives, however loyal they may have been to the United States throughout the rebellion. They thus mutilate Congress by cutting off twenty-two Senators and sixty-one Representatives, and exclude eleven States from taking any part in the Government. But the Constitution is mandatory, that every State shall have two Senators, and a number of Representatives in proportion to their population. As a pretext to evade or defy this vital principle, that majority at the beginning of this session assumed the position that those States by their rebellion had ceased to be States in the Union, and on being subjugated by the armies of the United States had been reduced to the condition of a country conquered by them, and were, therefore, not entitled to have representatives in Congress or take any part in the Government. This most extraordinary position was never taken until long after the rebels had made unconditional submission to the Government and laws of the United States. It has not a vestige of authority or sanction in the Constitution, and is in opposition to the frequent and unbroken legislation of Congress to December last, and of every measure, proclamation, and utterance of the Executive, and every act of the judiciary touching those States from the breaking out of the rebellion.

Congress stands concluded on that question by having levied a direct tax on those States and apportioned representation to them eo nomine as States in the Union, by two several acts passed while the rebellion was raging. This puissant majority of the two Houses sends forth its imperial edict that the people of those States are not sufficiently loyal to be readmitted as States into the Union and to take part in the Government; that they must improve their loyalty by submitting to a probation before it will allow them to come back and have any share in governing themselves. But it most graciously informs them that if they will amend their constitutions, by introducing an article giving suffrage to the negro, it would receive that as evidence of their perfect loyalty, and readmit them as States into the Union upon that article as a fundamental and unalterable condition, and their Senators and Representatives should be permitted to take their seats. But whether it would respect or obliterate State lines as they had existed, whether it would permit the reorganization of eleven, or would dictate a half dozen, or what number of States out of that disorganized portion of the territory of the United States, that dominating majority has not yet spoken. Was there ever asserted before in the whole world such an unauthorized and impudent pretension?

The first I ever heard of the rebel States having abdicated or forfeited their rights, and being no longer States in the Union, was in February, 1862, when the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SUMNER] offered in the Senate a series of resolutions asserting that theory. If there was another Senator who accorded with this doctrine, there was then no utterance of it in the Senate. I have become somewhat acquainted with that Senator's dominating idiosyncrasy, and I regarded the propositions stated in his resolutions only as some of his characteristic vagaries. However, a few days afterward I presented a series of resolutions, which I regarded as the negation of his, and which I stated at the time I intended as a counterblast. I will read those offered by myself:

"1. Resolved, That the Constitution of the United States is the fundamental law of the Government, and the powers established and granted, and as appointed out and vested by it, the limitations and restrictions which it imposes upon the legislative, executive, and judicial departments, and the States, and the rights, privileges, and liberties which it assures to the people of the United States, and the States respectively, are fixed, permanent, and immutable through all the phases of peace and war, until changed by the power and in the mode prescribed by the Constitution itself; and they cannot be abrogated, restricted, enlarged, or differently apportioned, or vested by any other power or in any other mode.

"2. Resolved, That between the Government and the citizen the obligation of protection and obedience form mutual rights and obligations; and to enable every citizen to perform his obligations of obedience and loyalty to the Government, it should give him reasonable protection and security in such performance; and when the Government fails in that respect, for it to hold the citizen to be criminal in not performing his duties of loyalty and obedience would be unjust, inhuman, and an outrage upon this age of Christian civilization.

"3. Resolved, That if any powers of the Constitution or Government of the United States, or of the States, or any rights, privileges, immunities, and liberties of the people of the United States, or the States, are, or may hereafter be, suspended by the existence of this war, or by any promulgation of martial law, or by the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, immediately upon the termination of the war such powers, rights, privileges, immunities, and liberties would be resumed, and would have force and effect as though they had not been suspended.

"4. Resolved, That the duty of Congress to guaranty to every State a republican form of government, to protect each of them against invasion, and, on the application of the Legislature, or Executive thereof, against domestic violence, and to enforce the authority, Constitution, and laws of the United States in all the States, are constitutional obligations which abide all times and circumstances.

"5. Resolved, That no State can, by any vote of secession, or by rebellion against the authority, Constitution, and laws of the United States, or by any other act, abdicate her rights or obligations under that Constitution or those laws, or absolve her people from their obligation to them, or the United States from their obligation to guaranty to such State a republican form of government, and to protect her people by causing the due enforcement within her Territories of the authority, Constitution, and laws of the United States.

"6. Resolved, That there cannot be any forfeiture or confiscation of the rights of person or property of any citizen of the United States who is loyal and obedient to the authority, Constitution, and laws thereof, or of any person whatsoever, unless for acts which the law has previously declared to be criminal, and for the punishment of which it has provided such forfeiture or confiscation.

SENATE.

Reconstruction—Mr. Davis.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

7. Resolved, That it is the duty of the United States to subdue and punish the existing rebellion by force of arms and civil trials in the shortest practicable time, and with the least cost to the people, but so decisively and thoroughly as to impress upon the present and future generations, as a great truth, that rebellion, except for grievous oppression of Government, will bring upon the rebels incomparably more of evil than obedience to the Constitution and the laws.

8. Resolved, That the United States Government should march their armies into all the insurgent States, and promptly put down the military power which they have arrayed against it, and give protection and security to the loyal men thereof, to enable them to reconstruct their legitimate State governments, and bring them and the people back to the Union and to obedience and duty under the Constitution and the laws of the United States, bearing the sword in one hand and the olive branch in the other, and while inflicting on the guilty leaders condign and exemplary punishment, granting amnesty and oblivion to the comparatively innocent masses; and if the people of any State cannot or will not reconstruct their State government and return to loyalty and duty, Congress should provide a government for such State as a Territory of the United States, securing to the people thereof their appropriate constitutional rights.

What is the principal object of the majority of the two Houses of Congress in playing this bold and desperate political game? They are in power, and are resolved to hazard everything to hold on to it. They have told us in both Houses, and their papers have echoed it a thousand times, that for three fourths of the period since the adoption of the Constitution the southern States had had possession of the Government, and controlled its power, patronage, and operations. They reasoned with themselves thus: if the late slave States, with a population of 12,240,500, when the free States have but a small fraction under 20,000,000, and with one fourth less of Representatives in Congress and not so many presidential electors by a fifth, could hold possession of the General Government three fourths of the time, what chance will there be for us if the freeing of their slaves is allowed to have the effect of adding thirteen to their Representatives, and the same number to their presidential electors? The South will be as one man against us, and uniting with the copperheads in the other States, we shall be ejected from power with no hope of a return. We can prevent our overthrow only by a great augmentation of our political power, for which we have two resources. Our friends dominate in all the Territories. It is true they have each only a population amounting to about one fifth of the ratio of a Representative, but nevertheless we must erect them into new States. It is true they would be of the English rotten-borough system, but still they each would have one Representative and two Senators and three presidential electors. We want the increased power that they would give us, and we are entitled to it by the highest law which we know or acknowledge—the law of party necessity and our own self-preservation in office. This general counsel was probably continued: but our main hope and reliance must be upon the negro vote, and we must devise some mode by which to give to freedmen the right of suffrage. To us they owe their freedom, and they know and are grateful for it; let us place in their hands the great lever of political power, suffrage, and we will put them under obligations that will bind them to us at least for this generation. Reinforced by the vote of the freedmen, we can carry the next presidential and congressional elections, and secure to ourselves the continuance of power, its offices and rich spoils. We have, too, that piece of cunningly devised machinery, the Freedmen's Bureau; that is of itself a government; our convenient collateral; by our management of it we can keep up distrust and hostility between the black and white races in the southern States; we can get possession of the freedmen, the only laborers in cotton-fields, which will give us, also, necessarily, the possession of those fields; and with the aid of our friends and accomplices, the officers and agents of the Freedmen's Bureau, and their supporting military police, we will be the cotton kings, and control the political power of the southern States.

This is a compend of the schemes and policy of the radicals, and explains why the country cannot have union, peace, and the reinstatement of the Constitution, and laws, and the admission of the southern States to their rightful power in the Government though the war has been so long over. The Senators and Representatives of those States admitted, and the radicals would be in the minority in Congress, and be soon exiled forever from office and plunder. Their cry for justice and protection to the freedman is a most hollow pretext of ambition and selfishness under the guise of justice and humanity.

Their scheme is not characterized by wisdom, even in the councils of wickedness; but it is preëminently novel, daring, unpatriotic, and reckless of justice, law, and the Constitution. The admission as States into the Union of Territories with not more population than a single county should have to maintain its local government and institutions; the excision of the eleven southern States from the Government of the United States; the expulsion of Senator Stockton, of New Jersey, from this body; the organization and proposed enlargement of the Freedmen's Bureau; the civil rights bill; the formation of a novel and anomalous cabal to devise in its secret conclaves most important and unprecedented measures to be registered and passed by the two Houses; the character of the measures which it reported and recommended to Congress; the submission by the majority of the most important questions of policy and constitutional law to a secret caucus, and their agreement that every man would ignore the conclusions of his own judgment and conscience where they might differ from the decisions of the caucus, and, regardless of all conflict with the Constitution, and all sacrifice of the public good, they would support its decisions—it is difficult to believe, that in this early age of our country, so near to the steadfast and stainless virtue of our fathers, a party should in the presence of the American people deliberately accept such a horrible programme and live a day; but it is impossible that it can survive long!

Mr. President, to see scores of "tinkers" in ignorance, conceit, and frenzy dashing at the Constitution, disadjusting its admirable harmony, mutilating it of some of its most valuable and vital principles, and raging to deform it with their vicious crudities, it brings up the idea of a herd of bulls breaking into a china store of matchless beauty and value, tramping around, and disorganizing and befouling everything which they did not break and demolish.

The Constitution of the United States is the consummation of all statesmanship. Never before or since it was formed was there employed so large an aggregate of ability, experience, and virtue in founding a Government. It was to be made for thirteen independent sovereign States, and the great objects to be secured by it were liberty, empire, and strength. The States had each for itself a perfect government, and their Articles of Confederation for the union and defense of all had proved wholly inefficient. The State governments were preserved, and all sovereignty and political power, but what was delegated by the Constitution to the common Government, was retained by the States respectively; and each one was left in the exclusive possession of the power to govern and control its own people and affairs, so far as they were local to the State; and the affairs of the common Government, of the States, and the people of the different States, in their relations with foreign nations and each other, were intrusted to the common Government. It was a mixed Government—in some of its features national, in some Federal, and in others blended, and a few were unique. Its powers were carefully arranged into three general classes, legislative, executive, and judicial, and each assigned to a separate and coordinate magistracy, and their connections with each other were adjusted with great skill, to make them mutual checks and balances and prevent their encroachments on the rights and liberties of the people and the powers of each other. Without reading the masterly and luminous analysis which Mr. Madison, in the forty-ninth number of the Federalist, gives of it in the extent, nature, classification, and division of its powers, and the sources from whence they are derived, I will present to the Senate his closing summary:

"The proposed Constitution, therefore, even when tested by the rules laid down by its antagonists, is, in strictness, neither a national nor a Federal Constitution, but a composition of both. In its foundation it is Federal, not national; in the sources from which the ordinary powers of Government are drawn it is partly Federal and partly national; in the operation of those powers it is national, not Federal; in the extent of them, again, it is Federal, not national; and finally, in the authoritative mode of introducing amendments, it is neither wholly Federal nor wholly national."

Mr. President, to eradicate or change materially one of the important principles of this complicated piece of political machinery is a very grave business, and the effects in marring its symmetry and perverting its operations can only be known by time and experience. It may, however, always be certainly assumed that they will prove greater and more mischievous than they were intended or even anticipated to be. If there is any human institution which ought to fix permanently the affections, confidence, and veneration of the American people, it is the Constitution made for them by the wisest and most virtuous statesmen that have ever lived in the tide of time. It is not, cannot be free from imperfections; but what seem often to many persons to be imperfections are not; they are frequently excellencies. The remedy of a seeming or even real defect may prove to be a greater one; it may even introduce several. When the Constitution is retouched, the movement should be made by able, patriotic, and pure men, who are further qualified for the difficult and important work by the study of its principles and the close observations of its practical workings for long years, and at a time when the public mind is profoundly composed.

Just at the close of the great civil war, when the people are all divided in their judgment as to the constitutionality, justice, and wisdom of the policy upon which the party in power have conducted it; when another great party out of power believe that the whole country have been wronged by frequent infractions of the Constitution, and the usurpation of vast powers for most sinister purposes by those having possession of the Government; and that they particularly have been outraged and oppressed by a wanton and tyrannous exercise of this usurped authority, and are exasperated by a keen sense of their wrongs, and a burning desire for satisfaction; when the ruling party itself is torn by a conflict between its majority in the two Houses of Congress and the President and their friends and partisans; and when it is menaced with defeat and ejection from power at the next general election, and its chiefs and leaders only want to know what means promise to give them success, and are ready to adopt them, however desperate and profligate they may be; at a time when those chiefs and leaders dominate, not only in Congress, but in the Legislatures of all the free States, and their desire for the continuance of their power is so intense, so exorbitant, so impure that they would sacrifice every claim of justice to individuals, the wisest measures of policy for the whole country, and the most valuable principles of the Constitution to achieve their ends; at such a time, surely there should be no changes or intermeddling with the Constitution. If the States were all fully represented in Congress every sound head and heart would shrink from the idea of attempting, at this time, any alteration of the Constitution. But for a less number than a majority of the two Houses of Congress to decide to change essentially the Constitution, and to prelude the work by the unconstitutional exclusion of all the Senators and Representatives from the eleven States which are especially and so greatly wronged by the proposed amendments, and all of which would be defeated by the presence of their representation, is scandalous and shocking to the last degree. The condemnation of this iniquitous work by the people of the United States is certain, and will be speedy.

But the work has commenced, and in the spirit and manner that might be expected. A proposition to amend the Constitution must be initiated in Congress and receive the vote of two thirds of both Houses to authorize Congress to submit it to the States; and it is with Congress to require the States to act upon it either by their Legislatures or their conventions chosen for that purpose; and it must receive the vote of three fourths of the States to become a part of the Constitution. Such are the guards with which the Constitution is fortified against all hasty innovation, and by such large majorities of the two Houses of Congress and the States, it was intended to secure also the sanction of a large majority of the people.

What constitutes the two Houses of Congress, the vote of two thirds of both of which is required to pass a proposed amendment of the Constitution?

"The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislatures thereof."

And each State is entitled to Representatives upon an apportionment made among them, upon the basis of their population, by act of Congress. And,

"Each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each House shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day," &c.

The question arose soon after the adoption of the Constitution, in each House, what number of its members were necessary to form a quorum to do business; and it has been often and uniformly decided by them that a majority of the whole number of each, as organized by the Constitution and law of Congress, and no less number, formed a quorum to do business. There being now thirty-six States, the Constitution fixes the number of the present Senate to be seventy-two; and a quorum to do business is a majority, which cannot be less than thirty-six, and it would take that number of Senators even to consider a proposition to amend the Constitution; but to pass it, the Constitution requires not two thirds of a quorum but two thirds of the Senate. Thirty-six Senators being a quorum, the Constitution never intended and does not authorize twenty-five of its members either to pass a proposed amendment or to overrule the President's veto of an act of Congress; but requires a majority of the Senate, thirty-six Senators, to do both these grave and responsible acts.

The Senate in May, 1864, long after the Senators from the eleven States had withdrawn, under the great stress of the war, passed a resolution in these words:

"Resolved, That a quorum of the Senate consists of a majority of the Senators duly chosen."

The vote on this resolution was—yeas 26, nays 12. Two years before, a resolution of the same purport was offered in the Senate, but it was opposed with great ability by the late Senator Foot and Senator FOSTER, and the Senate then manifested so decided an indisposition to pass it that it was not pressed to a vote.

When the Legislature of any State of the United States have elected a man to the Senate, he is "duly chosen;" and according to the decision in the case of the two Senators from West Virginia, Messrs. Willey and Carlile, if a person present himself to the Senate with his return of election in form, it is prima facie evidence of his due election, and he is entitled to be admitted to his seat; and all questions impugning his right to it, even the fact of his having been duly chosen, can only be inquired into by the Senate after his admission. As stated in the debate on that occasion, the unbroken practice has been in conformity with that position; and of many cases and precedents there is not one in conflict with it. So that according to the provision of the Constitution, the precedent set in the case of Messrs. Willey and Carlile, and the resolution of 1864, every man who has been elected a Senator from a State lately in rebellion, by its Legislature, and who has the return of his election in due form, is entitled prima facie to membership, and should be permitted to be sworn and to take his seat. All of the eleven rebel States by their Legislatures have chosen two Senators; but if they were admitted the radicals, instead of having two thirds, would be in a minority and could not pass one of their unconstitutional acts, much less a proposition to amend the Constitution. It therefore became a necessity, a dire necessity with them, that they should trample under foot the provisions and principles of the Constitution, and of the laws which they had passed, and their own precedents and resolution; and that from radicalism they should proceed to revolution.

Hence at the very beginning of the session they organized their revolutionary tribunal, the committee of fifteen. Then they take up the extravagant position of the Senator from Massachusetts, [Mr. SUMNER,] and boldly assert that the States lately in rebellion have ceased each to be one of the United States, and therefore have no right to send Senators and Representatives to Congress. But whether their dissolution as States took place when their ordinances of secession were respectively made, or when they appeared in insurrection against the United States, or when their armies surrendered to Grant and Sheridan, or when they dissolved their confederate governments, and submitted to all the terms and conditions imposed upon them, and acknowledged unconditional obedience to the Constitution and laws, these revolutionists have not informed the country. They do not refer to the Constitution to sustain this extravagant position, because there is no warrant for it there. They claim for themselves, as the Congress, the results of the achievements of the armies of the United States, operating legitimately under the Constitution to suppress insurrection, as inuring to them, the conquerors of the southern States and people, under the laws of war. The Senator from Michigan, [Mr. HOWARD,] in the tone and manner of a conqueror, defiantly asserts this claim for Congress, and refers the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. COWAN] to all the precedents in Grecian and Roman history to support the claim.

In my opinion, it is one of the most fruitful causes of the errors of our legislators that they go outside of the pale of the Constitution into other Governments to search up powers for that of the United States. It has no powers but what were conferred by the Constitution, and all of them are either expressly enumerated or are embodied in the clause that gives to Congress the power to pass all laws which are necessary and proper to carry into execution the powers expressly given to it or some department or officer of it. No power or principle of any other Government is part of ours, unless it be embodied or adopted by the language of the Constitution; and no implication can establish a power in the Government in hostility to or inconsistent with any express provision of the Constitution. As the principles of our religion are to be learned from the Bible, so the powers of our Government are to be known by recurrence to the Constitution. Whatever is not found in those sources is to be rejected as heretical.

With us domestic war is not for conquest but suppression; it is not for the subversion of the Constitution and laws of the rebels but their maintenance, State as well as the Federal. It is simply to preserve the Union, to vindicate the authority of the United States, to save from destruction our entire system of government, Federal and State, to compel obedience and put things in the same order they were, that the Constitution authorizes the interposition of military power. That the success of this power should break up the relations of the rebel States with the United States, and dissolve their governments which it had prevented the rebels from effecting, is a monstrous solecism.

The statesmen who formed the Constitution founded it upon the States, and one of their cardinal objects was to preserve them. They were guilty of no such folly as providing for their dissolution or the forfeiture of any of their rights or powers, or punitive consequences to them in any form or for any cause. All the punishment which it authorizes is to be visited upon persons, individuals; and they who "levy war against the United States, or adhere to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort," commit treason and are subject to be punished as traitors, whether they act under the authority of the State governments or irrespective of them. The Constitution makes no classes or discriminations among those who thus make war against the United States. The highest and only allegiance of every citizen is due to the United States as to all matters intrusted by the Constitution to the General Government; as to all reserved to the States, his highest and only allegiance is due to his State. All allegiance is divided between the General and State Governments; and either has no rightful claim to a particle of what belongs to the other from any citizen.

All men in arms against the United States may be met and opposed by its armies, and in the conflict may be rightfully shot down. This is not war in the sense in which this term is used in the Constitution. But in every contest of arms, in every operation of the armies, both sides are bound to the strictest observance of all the humane laws and usages adopted by Christian nations to mitigate the horrors of war. Until the revolution be consummated by success neither party has any belligerent rights. There is no sovereignty lost, there are no governments dissolved or forfeited, or laws abrogated; there is no territory acquired by conquest; there are no titles or rights to property destroyed or permanently changed. As armies move from places their power and military rights go with them, and civil law and the state of things ante occupationem militarem are reproduced spontaneously. All captives and other persons who have committed treason are subject to trial and punishment, but by the civil courts, and with all the rights and in the mode prescribed by the Constitution, and liable to no other pains, penalties, or punishment than have been previously declared by law. This is American liberty, and when the question comes to me, which will you take, the Union of the States without the liberty, or the liberty without the Union, and I must accept the one or the other, I answer, give me the liberty and let the Union perish! But I have a hope that both may yet be saved.

Mr. President, it seems plain to my mind that the majority have become utterly regardless of the good, present and future, of the country, and have determined to sacrifice its institutions and liberties in their desperate struggle to continue themselves in power. I will not estimate the large amount of both which they trampled down in the Freedmen's Bureau and civil rights bill, and other measures of legislation. I will not stop to consider the numerous other amendments of the Constitution which have been proposed in the two Houses, but will proceed to the examination of the one now before the Senate.

SENATE.

Reconstruction—Mr. Davis.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

This proposition is in the form of a joint resolution proposing to amend the Constitution by adding another article consisting of five sections, and has been passed by the House and sent to the Senate for its action. I will read it:

ARTICLE.—

SECTION 1. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

SEC. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States, which may be included within this Union, according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But whenever in any State the elective franchise shall be denied to any portion of its male citizens not less than twenty-one years of age, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation in such State shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens not less than twenty-one years of age.

SEC. 3. Until the 4th day of July, in the year 1870, all persons who voluntarily adhered to the late insurrection, giving it aid and comfort, shall be excluded from the right to vote for Representatives in Congress and for electors for President and Vice President of the United States.

SEC. 4. Neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation already incurred, or which may hereafter be incurred, in aid of insurrection or of war against the United States, or any claim for compensation for loss of involuntary service or labor.

SEC. 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

The first objection I make to the measure is that each of the five sections relates to a different subject, and yet all are submitted as a single proposition. The people might wish to vote for some of them and against others; and they should be presented in such form as to give an opportunity to vote separately on each. But for some object that right has been withheld, and they required to vote for all or against all of them together.

Secondly, no considerable portion of the people have manifested any desire to have these changes made in the Constitution. This proposition has originated with partisan leaders, not to improve the fundamental law of our Government, but as a strategic movement in party politics. It is the right of the people that these proposed changes should be submitted to them, but it was predetermined that this should not be done, because those very leaders knew that they would be rejected. If they had intended to deal fairly by the people in so grave a matter, the resolution would have required the proposed changes to be submitted to conventions, to be chosen for the purpose of considering them, or to their Legislatures, to be elected next after its passage. This course would not have delayed the action of any State twelve months, and the most of them not six months; and there was no occasion for such great haste in the important business of determining whether so important an innovation of the Constitution should be made. But the present Legislatures of all the States not involved in the rebellion had been elected, and in the old free States as long back as eighteen months. In these latter States the Legislatures are known to be intensely radical and to be willing to do blindly the bidding of their leaders in Congress. They were elected before the rebels had submitted and in the very acme of the war excitement, before there was any presentation or public discussion of these proposed changes of the Constitution or of the principles involved in them; and they are not fair representatives of the people of their respective States on the question of the merits of this proposition. But the considerations which render it improper for those Legislatures to decide this great matter determined the radicals in Congress to submit it to them and them only.

But the Senate has amended the first section of the proposed amendment, and it now reads:

All persons born in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction are citizens of the United States and of the States wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

The real and only object of the first provision of this section, which the Senate has added to it, is to make negroes citizens, to prop the civil rights bill, and give them a more plausible, if not a valid, claim to its provisions, and to press them forward to a full community of civil and political rights with the white race, for which its authors are struggling and mean to continue to struggle. Except for the negro there is no occasion for it, as all persons of every other race born in the United States, and subject to their jurisdiction, by the operation and effect of the Constitution are citizens. This principle has never been controverted.

The next provision of this section, "no State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States" is unnecessary, because that matter is provided for in article four, section two, of the Constitution: "The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States." This provision comprehends the same principle in better and broader language. The next branch, "nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law," is objectionable, because in relation to her own citizens it belongs to each State exclusively, as being of her own reserved sovereignty and rights, to regulate that matter. It is also unnecessary, because every State constitution contains such a provision, and the rights which it is intended to secure are regarded by all as a most important portion of American liberty, and there is no danger of the removal of the defenses which the States have thrown around them. To the remaining branch, which is, "nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws," each of these objections apply with equal and conclusive force.

The second section, which purports to establish the basis of representation in Congress, is couched in language that is carefully ambiguous, and was evidently intended to obscure its meaning. It begins by adopting the American idea that representation among the States should be apportioned according to their numbers or population; but provides that whenever in any State—

The elective franchise shall not be denied to any portion of its male citizens not less than twenty-one years of age, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation in such State shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens not less than twenty-one years of age.

The provisions of the Constitution should be clear and concise, and irrespective of the viciousness of the principle this proposition should be rejected for uncertainty and prolixity. Its true meaning was intended to be difficult to be reached, but when understood it is a measure which shrinks from the responsibility of openly forcing negro suffrage upon the late slave States, but attempts by a great penalty to coerce them to accept it. The radical majority well know the deep if not unalterable opposition of the white race in those States to negroes voting, and that by their constitutions and laws that right is withheld from the whole race. In the late free States the negro population is so small that whether they vote or not is a matter of no political consequence, and could, if allowed, take place to such a very limited extent as would not excite a general or intense opposition among the white population. I will give a table of the aggregate numbers of both the white and negro races in some of the States according to the census of 1860:

	Whites.	Blacks.
South Carolina.....	291,388	412,320
Wisconsin.....	774,719	1,171
Mississippi.....	353,901	437,403
New Hampshire.....	284,036	528
Georgia.....	591,598	402,198
Vermont.....	314,389	709
Alabama.....	526,431	435,080
Iowa.....	673,884	1,004
Virginia.....	1,047,410	547,507
Massachusetts.....	1,221,464	9,062
Tennessee.....	826,782	282,019
Indiana.....	1,339,000	11,428
Kentucky.....	919,517	236,157
Illinois.....	1,704,323	7,628
North Carolina.....	631,130	261,681
Maine.....	626,952	1,327

Is any one so green as to believe that, if the condition of the old free States and of the lately slave States named in this list was reversed, as to white and black population, that a single one of the free States would now be advocating negro suffrage? If he would have the vestige of a doubt upon that question, and would only remember that but five of them, notwithstanding the small minimum of negro population of each, have allowed suffrage to negroes, he would doubt no longer.

According to the tables of 1860 there are, in the old free States, of the black race a total of 215,962, while in the late slave States there are 4,214,300. The former, if inhabiting one locality, would be less than the ratio for two Representatives, but the fraction would be large enough to secure two; while the latter would furnish the ratio for thirty-three Representatives, and have a fraction over; but the negro population in the free States is so small in the aggregate and is scattered so sparsely over twenty States as not to be available for a particle of political power. In those States it never did control a single local election, and a combination of circumstances is very improbable that ever will enable it to be felt in any election. It is of no importance, practically, in them whether or not the negroes vote. In the slave States this matter is widely different. In two of them the negro population preponderates largely over the white. In several others their relative strength is less disproportionate than what has long existed between the free and the slave States, in the aggregate; and in all it is large enough to be a formidable element of political power, and is sufficiently concentrated, locally, to be available and effective. The natural antagonism between the two races is irrepressible, and an equality of rights and power between them, without interminable strife, is impossible. One or the other must have the mastery. The God of nature has given it to the white man, and he has asserted it from the beginning and will to the end. This effort of people who have no negroes living among them to force other people, with whom they dwell in such formidable numbers, to concede to them equality of civil and political rights, whether successful or not, will have no other result than to aggravate the war between the races in the southern States, and is made only to get the control of the negro there to make him the instrument to subserve the most selfish and sinister purposes.

The position that this provision is intended to strengthen the sectional radical party at the expense of the southern States, by coercing them to bestow suffrage upon the negro, or withholding from them all representation upon that population, is as certain as though it was so expressed in the plainest language. Population is first made the basis of representation, which comprehends all residents, whites, negroes, mulattoes, and foreigners, whether naturalized or not; and having made all negroes citizens, and they not being allowed to vote in any of the late slave States, in them the basis of representation is to be reduced in the proportion in which the male negroes over twenty-one years of age resident in them bear to the aggregate number of their white citizens and those negroes added together. In plain and honest language this provision would read: "Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers; but the negro population, in the States where it is not allowed the right of suffrage, shall be deducted so long as it is withheld from them; and when that right is conceded to its negro population in any State it shall be estimated with its other population in apportioning Representatives." This is the behest of the radicals to the late slave States, "Confer upon your negro population the right of suffrage to augment our power and for our benefit, and unless you do this we will reduce your representation in Congress and your presidential electors in proportion to the number of that population."

There is the pretext of a justification for thus reducing the power of the slave States about in this form: they made the rebellion and ought not to have their crime rewarded by having the unrepresented portion of their late slaves as an additional element of political power. But to this it might be responded, "The people of the slave States did not alone make the rebellion; the free States and their people helped it along most effectively. Whatever crime they committed in that affair they have suffered for it grievously in other respects besides the emancipation of all their slaves. The manner of their humiliation and punishment is enough to satisfy every claim of justice and sound policy, without stripping from them an important portion of their constitutional power in the Government. They have already accepted what was not demanded by justice or policy, and as much as true manhood can bear." But the hollowness of this pretext was exhibited partially by the radical majority voting down the proposition of the Senator from Indiana, [Mr. HENDRICKS,] that three fifths of the negro population should be computed in the apportionment of representation.

Next to population, Mr. President, the most just and proper basis of representation would be voters. This principle has many friends in Congress, and has been earnestly advocated by some of them. But it does not suit New England, because there the female population preponderates considerably over the male, and the adoption of that principle of representation would curtail the representation in Congress of those States two or three; and with characteristic address, her men in the two Houses have caused that proposition to be put on the shelf. Whoever else may lose, New England always wins.

The third section, proposing to punish "all persons who voluntarily adhered to the late insurrection, giving it aid and comfort," by forfeiting their right to vote for Representatives in Congress and electors for President and Vice President at the next election, has been stricken out by the unanimous vote of the Senate. An amendment of the Constitution that was intended and that could have no other effect than to enable the radical party to carry the next congressional and presidential elections, and which, when they were over, was to expire by its own limitation, was too absurd to receive the support of a majority of the radicals of the Senate, notwithstanding it had been passed by their friends of the House. "King Caucus" required that it should be expunged, and every radical obeyed the command of the king. But they introduce in its stead another section, not so ridiculous, but in substance and import more objectionable. I will read it:

SEC. 3. That no person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two thirds of each House, remove such disability.

This new section is subject to a number of very grave objections; I will proceed to state some of them. It is in the nature of both a bill of attainder and an ex post facto law. Our highest courts have decided that all laws which declare a person to be guilty of a felony, or which make a forfeiture of personal or property rights, are in the nature of bills of attainder. The same authority has also ruled many times over that all laws which make any act penal that was not so at the time of its commission, or which changes, increases, or adds another punishment than what had been provided for crimes before they were committed, are ex post facto laws; and they have adjudged all laws of both those classes to be void and of no effect, because they are in contravention of the clause of the Constitution which says, "No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed." It is the incorporation of a criminal judgment against a multitude and an ex post facto law in the Constitution.

It is also unconstitutional, because it violates the fundamental principle of our Government, so clearly and well stated in the fourth resolution of the Chicago convention which nominated Mr. Lincoln for the Presidency, that each State has the exclusive right "to order and control its own domestic institutions." This amendment, in providing a punishment for certain officers of the States for an imputed violation of their oaths to support the Constitution of the United States, conflicts with that principle. And it is unconstitutional because it disregards the partition of the powers of the General Government into legislative, executive, and judicial, and the assignment of the first to Congress, the second to the President, and the third to the courts. In the matters I have stated, the proposed amendment violates the Constitution, and makes another continuing breach of it in the clause, "Congress may, by a vote of two thirds of each House, remove such disability;" the whole pardoning power of the Government being of an executive nature and vested in the President.

My proposition, that the proposed alterations of the Constitution because of their confliction with it, if even adopted according to the form of amending it, would be void, may seem a solecism and unsound. I propose to examine that point. The mode of making alterations of the Constitution is provided for in these words:

"The Congress, whenever two thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, in the application of the Legislatures of two thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress."

The power of Congress in the premises is special and limited, the whole extent of it being to propose amendments to the Constitution by the action of two thirds of both Houses. The States and the people have no more important reserved rights than that such propositions shall be made by no less a majority than two thirds of both Houses; and that under the guise of amendments, propositions which would subvert or revolutionize or change the essential nature of the Constitution and Government cannot be made. The true and legitimate meaning of the word "amendment" is "alteration for the better," "reformation." Without insisting that proposed amendments of the Constitution should be such as would make it better, or reform it in some feature, it is certainly true that a proposition to make the President a hereditary monarch, Senators to continue in office for life, and members of the House for seven years, could not be legitimately made under this power to propose amendments; nor could a proposition to break up and dissolve the States and their governments, and to organize the United States into one consolidated Government. No proposition which would be in palpable conflict with and that would certainly operate to change the essential nature and character of the Government formed by the Constitution, or to subvert some of its great and distinguishing principles, could be made by Congress to the States under a power to propose amendments. The framers of the Constitution did not intend to invest, and have not in fact conferred on Congress the power to initiate alterations of it which would revolutionize the Government formed by it. Therefore, all such propositions to change the Constitution, even if made by two thirds of both Houses of a full Congress, and ratified by three fourths of the States, being outside of the pale of their authority, would not become parts of the Constitution, and would have no validity whatever. If they were acquiesced in and took effect, a revolution, bloodless, but nevertheless a revolution, would have ensued.

Mr. President, I have already attempted, and I think successfully, to show that Congress, as the two Houses are now organized, being mutilated by the exclusion of the Senators and Representatives from eleven States by the arbitrary acts of the members who assume to be the two Houses; for the absence of the requisite majority of two thirds thus produced could not propose even proper and legitimate amendments to the Constitution. But the pending proposition, which assaults so many of its cardinal and vital principles that it would inaugurate a great change in the very order and nature of our Government, being initiated by this fragmentary Congress, acting as a revolutionary assembly; it requires extraordinary boldness to maintain that such a proposition made by two thirds of such a Congress, even if ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the States, would have any validity. The entire polity of the United States forms the most complex political system that ever existed, consisting of State governments and General Government, States and United States, and all sovereignty divided between them. The States were first each a sovereignty having its own separate government, and possessed of liberty; and they had formed a league for the purposes of common defense and security against foreign aggression. Experience had proved that the States had conflicting interests which caused antagonistical laws and regulations, and must end in mutual collisions and wars; and that their league was wholly insufficient to secure the ends for which it had been formed. The Constitution was designed to supply these needs, and created a nation and a national Government strong enough to give security against foreign attacks and internal disorders without endangering the liberties of the people. The General Government was conceived by and organized upon the States, and to protect and perpetuate them was one of its chief objects. They delegated to it only such powers as were necessary and proper to enable it to manage and control the general affairs intrusted to it. All other powers, except a few withheld both from it and the State governments, were reserved to the States respectively and to the people.

The division and allotment of political sovereignty and the adjustment of the relations between the United States and the States was a work of the greatest importance and difficulty, and taxed to the utmost all the resources of as great men as the world has ever produced, whose minds were enriched by deep reading in the political history of ancient and modern times, by having had free and self-governed communities as their common inheritance, by many years of thorough mental culture and ripe experience in public affairs, and a patriotism as pure and lofty as ever graced any heroic age. Such men were the founders of our Government, and they created and organized it and made its law by a written Constitution. That Constitution is the gathered wisdom of all previous political experience and statesmanship, and has until this degenerate day commanded the confidence and veneration of the people of the United States, and instructed the minds and inspired the hopes of every informed lover of liberty throughout the world. The intelligence and virtue of the people give to it the principle of life; thus sustained by them, it would make their liberties and happiness perpetual; that withdrawn, it becomes a lifeless, soulless Utopian creation.

SENATE.

Reconstruction—Mr. Davis.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Shades of Washington, Hamilton, and Madison! how does the eagerness of threescore ignorant, selfish, frenzied demagogues in one Congress, each with a proposition to mar, deform, disadjust, and disorganize your great and harmonious work with their vicious and revolting crudities impress you? What are your hopes of the future of our country? Mr. President, Montesquieu, Blackstone, and all our own great jurists have written that the concentration of the legislative, executive, and judicial powers of Government in one man or body of men makes a perfect despotism. Certainly the radical majority in the two Houses have made persevering and audacious efforts to concentrate in Congress a large amount of those powers. All free Governments should make every effort to avoid war, and especially civil war, because all wars are unfriendly and civil wars are often fatal to popular liberty. The powers of a Government are unavoidably augmented and energized during war, and then there is generally an accord between the legislative and executive branches, produced by the active presence of a common danger and a mutual effort to avert it, that makes the chief executive officer the instrument to give effect to their common policy and purposes. Power is the great corrupter of man, and the engrossment of so much of it in the executive in time of war as is inevitable, or as an ambitious and able man can so easily grasp, often causes him to form projects destructive of popular rights. Then the most danger to them is to be apprehended from the executive, and it should be the most attentively watched by the people.

But it is not so in the United States when peace has returned. Generally men clothed with power desire to increase it, and between those to whom it is parted out in the same Government there is a disposition to encroach on each other and absorb more than belongs to them. When they are not harmonized by resisting some common attack, this rivalry always exists, and a state of peace develops it, and often to an extent to produce serious disorder in the Government. From the nature and organization of the legislative branch its force is more efficient than that of the others; it feels this superiority, and is consequently most prone, not only to impinge upon them, but to grasp powers which the people have not confided to their Government.

I will read from the Federalist several passages bearing on this point. In No. 48, which treats of the division of the powers of Government into departments, and which was written by Mr. Madison, are these passages:

"It is agreed on all sides that the powers properly belonging to one of the departments ought not to be directly and completely administered by either of the other departments. It is equally evident that neither of them ought to possess, directly or indirectly, an overruling influence over the others in the administration of their respective powers. It will not be denied that power is of an encroaching nature, and it ought to be effectually restrained from passing the limits assigned to it.

"Will it be sufficient to mark with precision the boundaries of those departments in the constitution of the Government and trust to these parchment barriers against the encroaching spirit of power. But experience assures us that the efficacy of the provision has been greatly overrated; and that some more adequate defense is indispensably necessary for the more feeble against the more powerful members of the Government. The legislative department is everywhere extending the sphere of its activity and drawing all power into its impetuous vortex.

"The founders of our Republic have so much merit for the wisdom which they have displayed that no task can be less pleasing than that of pointing out the errors into which they have fallen. A respect for truth, however, obliges us to remark that they seem never for a moment to have turned their eyes from the danger to liberty from the overgrown and all-grasping prerogative of an hereditary magistrate, supported and fortified by an hereditary branch of the legislative authority. They seem never to have recollected the danger from legislative usurpations, which, by assembling all power in the same hands, must lead to the same tyranny as is threatened by executive usurpations.

"In a Government where numerous and extensive prerogatives are placed in the hands of an hereditary monarch the executive department is very justly regarded as the source of danger, and watched with all the jealousy which a zeal for liberty ought to inspire. In a democracy, where a multitude of people exercise the legislative functions, and are continually exposed, by their incapacity for regular deliberation and concerted measures, to the ambitious intrigues of their executive magistrates, tyranny may well be apprehended, in some favorable emergency, to start up in the same quarter. But in a representative republic, where the executive magistracy is carefully limited, both in the extent and duration of its power, and where the legislative power is exercised by an Assembly which is inspired by a supposed influence over the people, with an intrepid confidence in its own strength, which is sufficiently numerous to feel all the passions which actuate a multitude, and yet not so numerous as to be incapable of pursuing the objects of its passions by means which reason prescribes, it is against the enterprising ambition of this department that the people ought to indulge all their jealousies and exhaust all their precautions.

"The legislative department derives a superiority in our Government from other circumstances. Its constitutional powers being at once more extensive and less susceptible of precise limits, it can with greater facility mask under complicated and indirect measures the encroachments which it makes on the co-ordinate departments. It is not unfrequently a question of real nicety in legislative bodies whether the operation of a particular measure will or will not extend beyond the legislative sphere. On the other side, the executive power being restrained within a narrower compass, and being more simple in its nature, and the judiciary being described by landmarks still less uncertain, projects of usurpation by either of these departments would immediately betray and defeat themselves. Nor is this all; as the legislative department alone has access to the pockets of the people, and has in some constitutions full discretion, and in all prevailing influence over the pecuniary rewards of those who fill the other departments, a dependence is thus created in the latter which gives still greater facility to encroachments of the former."

This remarkable paper shows how thoroughly the writer had considered the Constitution and his perfect comprehension of the mode in which the Government it proposed to organize would work. With the benefit of observation and experience to this day he could not have depicted more forcibly and truly the aggressions of Congress upon the other departments, and particularly the executive; and with what confidence and audacity it is assailing the great principles of the Constitution, without which popular liberty cannot be preserved.

Mr. President, in our country loyalty is not fidelity to a King or a President or Congress, or to the men who administer the Government, but to the Constitution. It requires the proper support of the Government of the United States and of the States and their governments, for they are parts of the system which the Constitution has built up, and it throws its aegis equally over them. Its claim upon every citizen is to sustain every officer of the Government in the constitutional and legal discharge of his duties, and to oppose him in every departure from that rule, and above all to repel every aggression upon the Constitution.

But, Mr. President, since the insurrection broke out, the position that the States have no sovereignty has been often and boldly assumed, both in and out of the Senate. It is indeed coming to be believed that the States are creations of the Federal Constitution, that they exist in complete subordination to and by the sufferance of the Government of the United States. I think it is time that this dangerous and growing heresy should be corrected, and I will produce ample authority to refute it.

The tenth amendment to the Constitution is of itself sufficient to settle this question:

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

Full and complete sovereignty comprehends every political power, so that when there is a partition and division of political powers between two Governments, the political sovereignty is divided between them. All legislative, executive, and judicial powers are parts of the aggregate of political sovereignty; and for a definite and correct conception of the extent of this political sovereignty that the Constitution confers upon the United States, and that is retained under it by the States, I will read from No. 33 of the Federalist, written by Hamilton:

"If a number of political societies enter into a larger political society, the laws which the latter may enact pursuant to the powers intrusted to it by its constitution must necessarily be supreme over those societies and the individuals of whom they are composed. It would otherwise be a mere treaty, dependent on the good faith of the parties, and not a government; which is only another word for political power and supremacy. But it will not follow from this doctrine that acts of the larger society, which are not pursuant to its constitutional powers, but which are invasions of the residuary authorities of the smaller societies, will become the supreme law of the land. These will be merely acts of usurpation and will deserve to be treated as such."

Mr. Madison, in No. 52, when treating of the Senate, says:

"In the spirit, it may be remarked that the equal vote allowed to each State, is at once a constitutional recognition of the portion of sovereignty remaining in the individual States, and an instrument for preserving that residuary sovereignty. So far the equality ought to be no less acceptable to the large than the small States; since they are not less solicitous to guard, by every possible expedient, against an improper consolidation of the States into one simple republic.

"Another advantage accruing from this ingredient of the Senate is the additional impediment it must prove against improper acts of legislation. No law or resolution can now be passed without the concurrence, first, of a majority of the people, and then of a majority of the States."

This authority is not only directly in favor of the reserved State sovereignty and rights, but also impliedly, yet strongly, in its position that a majority of the whole number of the members of each House is necessary to pass laws and resolutions; a majority of the people and the States could not be represented by a less number of the two Houses.

Hamilton, in No. 17 of the Federalist, page 76, says:

"Commerce, finance, negotiation, and war, seem to comprehend all the objects which have charms for minds governed by that passion, ambition; and all the powers necessary to these objects ought, in the first instance, to be lodged in the national depository. The administration of private justice between citizens of the same State, the supervision of agriculture, and of other concerns of a similar nature; all those things, in short, which are proper to be provided for by local legislation, can never be desirable cares of a general jurisdiction. It is therefore improbable that there should exist a disposition in the Federal councils to usurp the powers with which they are connected," &c.

On page 77 the same writer says:

"There is one transcendent advantage belonging to the province of the State governments which alone suffices to place the matter in a clear and satisfactory light: I mean the ordinary administration of criminal and civil justice. This, of all others, is the most powerful, the most universal, and most attractive source of popular obedience and attachment. It is this which, being the immediate and visible guardian of life and property, having its benefits and its terrors in constant activity before the public eye, regulating all those personal interests and familiar concerns to which the sensibilities of individuals are more immediately awake, contributes, more than any other circumstance, to impress upon the minds of the people affection, esteem, and reverence toward the Government. This great cement of society, which will diffuse itself almost wholly through the channels of the State governments, independent of all other causes or influence, would insure them so decided an empire over their respective citizens as to render them at all times a complete counterpoise, and not unfrequently dangerous rivals to the power of the Union."

Again, Hamilton, in No. 23 of the Federalist, page 104, says, speaking of the powers proposed to be conferred on the Government of the United States by the Constitution:

"The principal purposes to be answered by union are these: the common defense of the members; the preservation of the public peace, as well against internal convulsions as external attacks; the regulation of commerce with other nations and between the States; the superintendence of our intercourse, political and commercial, with foreign countries."

The same, No. 33, on page 144, says:

"If the Federal Government should overpass the just bounds of its authority and make a tyrannical use of its powers, the people, whose creature it is, must appeal to the standard they have formed, and take such measures to redress the injury done to the Constitution as the exigency may suggest and prudence justify. The propriety of a law, in a constitutional light, must always be determined by the nature of the powers upon which it is founded. Suppose that by some forced construction of its authority—which, indeed, cannot easily be imagined—the Federal Legislature should attempt to vary the law of descent in any State, would it not be evident, in making such an attempt, it had exceeded its jurisdiction and infringed upon that of the State? Suppose, again, that upon a pretense of an interference with its revenue, it should undertake to abrogate a land tax imposed by the authority of a State, would not it be equally evident that this was an invasion of that concurrent jurisdiction in respect to this species of tax which the Constitution plainly supposes to exist in the State governments?"

In the same number of the Federalist, page 145, is this passage:

"Though a law, therefore, laying a tax for the use of the United States, would be supreme in its nature, and could not be legally opposed or controlled, yet a law abrogating or preventing the collection of a tax laid by the authority of a State (unless upon imports and exports) would not be the supreme law of the land, but a usurpation of a power not granted by the Constitution."

Mr. Madison wrote No. 39, and on page 178 it says:

"But if the Government be national with regard to the operation of its powers (acting individually and personally on all citizens composing the nation) it changes its aspect again when we contemplate it in relation to the extent of its powers. The idea of a national Government involves in it not only an authority over the individual citizen, but an indefinite supremacy over all persons and things, so far as they are objects of lawful government. Among a people consolidated into one nation this supremacy is completely vested in the national Legislature. Among communities united for particular purposes it is vested partly in the general and partly in the municipal Legislatures. In the former case all local authorities are subordinated to the supreme, and may be controlled, directed, or abolished by it at pleasure. In the latter the local or municipal authorities form distinct and independent parties of the supremacy, no more subject, within their respective spheres, to the general authority than the general authority is subject to those within its own sphere. In this relation, then, the proposed Government cannot be deemed a national one, since its jurisdiction extends to certain enumerated objects only, and leaves to the several States a residuary and inviolable sovereignty over all other objects. It is true that in controversies relating to the boundary between the two jurisdictions the tribunal which is ultimately to decide is to be established under the General Government. But this does not change the principle of the case. The decision is to be impartially made according to the rules of the Constitution."

This authority is surely sufficient to refute the position that the States have no sovereignty.

Mr. President, the radicals have a definite policy, which is palpable to the whole country. Its paramount object is their continuance in office and power, and the chief means, negro suffrage, new States to be formed of Territories having but a modicum of population—rotten-borough States—and to exclude the southern States from all participation in the Government as long as practicable, but at all hazards until after the next congressional and presidential elections. Their machinery is a perpetual howl for justice and protection to "the loyal citizens of African descent," Freedmen's Bureau, civil rights bill, negro suffrage to be urged in every form, the members from the southern States to be excluded from Congress, tinkering with the Constitution, all constitutional right that is possible to be withheld from the southern people, and they to be oppressed and harassed in every mode by the omnipresent Freedmen's Bureau, to goad them to speeches, newspaper publications, and acts of indiscretion and violence, for the purpose of having a pretext to continue over them a military and civil régime that outrages every principle of constitutional law, right, and liberty. But this terrible game is about being "played out." Let gentlemen take notice! that it is the deliberate, firm, and unalterable purpose of the American people that every loyal Senator and Representative of the southern States to the next Congress shall be admitted to his seat, and that every southern State shall vote in the next presidential election, and that the candidate who receives a majority of the electoral votes of all the States shall fill that office.

I, sir, am for the maintenance of the inviolability of the Constitution, and the prompt redress and reparation of every infraction of it. I wish the United States and the States each to be in the undisturbed possession and exercise of all the sovereignty and powers which it accords to them, no more no less, and so of every department of the Government. I am the defender of the Government of the United States, of the States, of any department or officer that may be unjustly assailed; and when their position is changed to that of the aggressor, I then become an opponent. On this general principle I have heretofore endeavored to act throughout my humble political career, and in the future I will not swerve from it, come what may to me. I voted against Mr. Johnson because in the then condition of the country I was opposed to his political position; but I am now one of his supporters. By the providence of God, and the Constitution, he has been called to the Presidency; and none of his predecessors were ever surrounded by so many and such stupendous difficulties. But he seems to be the man for the occasion; and his ability, resources, courage, and patriotism have developed to meet its great demands. He is literally "to the best of his ability" striving "to preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States" against those who would destroy it, the radicals of Congress; and if this ark which holds the rights and liberties of the American people is to be rescued and saved, he will be one of the chief instruments in the great work, and his glory and fame will be deathless.

Radicalism and Reconstruction.

SPEECH OF HON. C. SITGREAVES,

OF NEW JERSEY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

June 16, 1866.

[THE SPEAKER stated there were several gentlemen who wished to speak, but were precluded by the closing of the debate on the state of the Union, and if there were no objection they could hand their speeches to the reporters to be printed in the Globe. There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.]

Mr. SITGREAVES. Mr. Speaker, from the hour that the guns of Fort Sumter inaugurated "the great rebellion," through the alternate defeat and success of our arms on a hundred battle-fields, when the capital was beleaguered by hostile armies, and, in the apprehension of many patriots, the sun of our national existence was about to set in darkness forever, I never doubted for a moment the final triumph of the Union. I saw the freemen of the North united as one man in a firm resolve to maintain the compacts of the Constitution. I heard the declarations of the press that the Union must remain one and indivisible forever. I heard the representatives of the people in Congress declare by solemn resolution—

"That this war is not waged on our part in any spirit of oppression, nor for any purpose of conquest or subjugation, nor purpose of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of those States, but to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution and to preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality, and rights of the several States unimpaired."

I saw the Democrat and Republican, the farmer and mechanic, the professional man and the laborer, gather from every hill and valley of the North and march side by side to the rescue of the imperiled Republic, bearing "the old flag," determined that not a star should be torn from that glorious symbol of the Union, and resolved to maintain its entirety or to die in its defense; but above all I felt that the God of Washington smiled upon our cause, and that the same holy fire of 1776 which He implanted in the bosoms of our fathers still glowed in the hearts of their sons. Such were my feelings through that long and bloody war and up to the time that I took my seat on the floor of this House. Imagine, then, Mr. Speaker, my feelings of astonishment and sorrow when I heard the majority of this House, and members on this floor, professing to represent the people, declare that the Union was not restored, and never should be unless upon conditions so degrading as could be adopted only by a people whose servile necks were fitted for the yoke of despotic power. Sir, when I heard members talk of reconstruction instead of restoration; when I see week after week during this long session amendment after amendment proposed to the Constitution; when I see the most important constitutional questions affecting the rights of the States and the dearest interests of the people passed with less discussion than an ordinary measure of finance at a town meeting, or an alteration of the rules of a debating club; when I see the influence of radical ideas among the people, I would tremble for my country and despair of the perpetuity of the Republic had I not an abiding faith in the wisdom, justice, and mercy of the God of our fathers.

Mr. Speaker, why is this? Why is it, when from the outset of the rebellion our whole people have declared with one voice that no State could or should put itself out of the Union, either by peaceable secession or force of arms? Why is it that when to maintain this declaration our soldier-sons have poured out their blood as no soldiers have ever poured out their blood in the history of nations? Why is it that when the people of the insurgent States, defeated in the trial by battle to which they appealed, yield up their theories of secession and ask to take their old place under the flag of the Union? Why is it that when that incorruptible patriot, Andrew Johnson, wielding the executive power of the Government, declares that the rebellion has ended, resistance to constitutional authority ceased, and recommends the immediate admission of their representatives that we may be once more a united people, with one Constitution, one interest, one destiny, that this Congress says "No?"

Let us examine some of the principal reasons alleged for this strange, unnatural response.

1. We are told that "they have committed treason; that they still nourish the heresy of secession in their hearts, and therefore they cannot be intrusted with the ballot, for the ballot in their hands would be used to destroy the Constitution and the Union."

Mr. Speaker, this objection states two facts or truisms with which I most cordially agree: first, that the South has committed treason; and second, that heterodox ideas are dangerous. Sir, ideas are everything in a republic. Ideas make and repeal laws and constitutions. Ideas make wars, rebellions, and revolutions, both in Church and State, and every true patriot and Christian will denounce heterodox ideas as the foes of God and man. The idea of sectionalism promulgated by radicals North and South for different reasons, but to effect the same result, has been the curse of this Republic; for thirty years the accursed idea of secession, the daughter of sectionalism, was promulgated by the southern radical until it grew strong enough to bathe the land with fraternal blood.

For thirty years sectional ideas, in consequence of slavery, sustained by British emissaries and British gold, have been promulgated by the northern radical until it culminated in the same bloody result. The fires of secession in the South have been quenched in that blood. The fires of sectionalism in the North are still fanned by the northern radical in hate, and fed by the fuel of vengeance in the vain hope that he may succeed in kindling a flame which may destroy the Constitution and Union of our fathers. The ideas now so dangerous to the constitutional rights of the States, to personal liberty, and the perpetuity of the Republic is northern radicalism. Let radicalism control the ballot and obtain a permanent lease of political power, and republicanism will be an empty name.

Mr. Speaker, in my discussion of this subject I shall use radicalism and fanaticism as convertible terms. The radical is always fanatic and the fanatic is always radical. I also beg leave to state that my remarks on radicals and radicalism are not intended to apply to any member of this House. I have expressed similar views long before this Congress was elected.

Mr. Speaker, there is no man on this floor detests treason and traitors more than I do, but I do not limit my detestation to southern treason and southern traitors. While I denounce the doctrine of secession taught in the South as leading to treason, I denounce the doctrine of the northern radical as equally damnable and leading to treason, rebellion, or revolution.

I cannot see the justice of denouncing southern traitors and loading northern traitors with honors. I never could see why assemblages of "Union men and women" should greet with applause the orator who declared that "for twenty years he had tried to destroy the Union of the States and gloried in the fact," while at the same time they applauded the most bitter denunciations of southern traitors. Sir, I am for meting out equal and impartial justice to all traitors. The southern traitor declares his repentance, the northern traitor never has. The late unnatural war was brought about by radical fanatics, and every intelligent man knows it. The southern radical and the northern radical both aim for a dissolution of the Union, and both aided each other with fuel to fire up the hearts of the people. The northern radical taught the people of the North to hate the people of the South with a moral and political hatred, the southern radical taught the people of the South to hate the people of the North with a moral and political hatred; and this teaching produced its legitimate results.

Sir, the testimony of all history and our own knowledge alike teach us that radical fanaticism should be dreaded as the arch enemy of God and man, but most especially to be dreaded in a republican Government where the press and speech are free. Radicalism is the same in every age, in every clime, and in every human heart. It is a master passion, beneath its sway every principle of humanity, every finer feeling of the heart are burned and destroyed as the flowers of the earth are destroyed beneath the burning lava of a volcano. Let us look at the page of history for the portrait of radical fanaticism; we shall find it identical on every subject. Look at the persecutions by the Roman Emperors against those who denied the divinity of Jupiter, refused to bow at his shrine, or to offer sacrifices to the Roman gods; for this, thousands of men and women were tortured with the most cruel tortures, were sewed in the skins of wild beasts and torn to pieces by blood-hounds, were crucified, were covered with wax and set on fire to light the imperial gardens of the palace.

Look at the history of Mahomedanism; imbued with the fanaticism of their chief, the Mahomedan proclaimed death to the infidel; he marched to exterminate the world or convert it to the creed of his prophet, and his path was marked by tears and blood and millions of human skulls.

Look at the history of Jesus, He who went about doing only good. Religious radicalism cried out not to release him, but Barrabas; radicalism nailed him to the cross and gloated over his dying agonies. Look at the persecution of God's ancient chosen people, the Jews, by the Christian radical; in every nation for ages persecuted, robbed, tortured, put to death in the name of Him who taught "love your enemies." Look at the old French Revolution; in the sacred name of liberty Frenchmen were turned into human tigers thirsting for human blood. France was filled with spies, informers, and provost marshals; men were murdered by tens of thousands; blood and carnage rioted throughout the whole land; the rivers became putrid with human carcasses, and the streets of Paris were flooded with human blood. Religion, life, liberty, were all sacrificed by these radical monsters, and France became an earthly hell. The world beheld with astonishment deeds of horror that had no parallel in history committed by the gay and polite Frenchmen, and a nation boasting of the highest civilization transformed into incarnate devils; and all this was done under the plea now urged by our modern American radicals of "liberty, fraternity, and equality."

Look at our own land. The Puritans fled from religious persecution and sought these shores that they might worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences. They landed on the rock-bound shores of New England and there erected their altars; they multiplied and held the sword of civil power, and they sheathed that sword in the bosoms of those who worshipped God in a different creed; they fined, imprisoned, banished, tortured and executed the inoffensive Quaker for daring to worship God according to the dictates of his conscience; and continued their persecuting, bloody work until it was suspended by an order of the King. The Massachusetts radical, foiled by the order of the crown, but still thirsting for human blood, commenced and continued a persecution of old men as wizards and of old women as witches until no one felt safe. A single mistake in the recital of the Lord's Prayer was sufficient to consign a man or woman to imprisonment, trial, and death; and not until the radical began to fear that he might fall a victim to his own accursed devices did reason resume her empire, and the people saw with grief that they had been used as the bloody tools and executioners of radical fanatics; and all this was done and sustained and defended as the cause of "right and justice," and in the name of the Lord of Hosts.

Look at radicalism within the memory and knowledge of every member of this House. Who has not for years previous to the rebellion seen and heard sectional hate inculcated at the public meetings of the people, in the pulpit, the press, the rostrum, the school-book, and in the Senate and House of Representatives, by radicals, North and South? Who has not heard the Constitution of his country denounced as "a covenant with death and a league with hell?" Who has not heard of the applause with which Wendell Phillips was greeted by radical assemblages while he denounced undying hostility to the Union? Who has not heard of radical petitions presented to the Senate praying for a dissolution of the Union? Who has not heard of "the Helper Book," written by radicals, indorsed by sixty members of Congress, and scattered by thousands as a campaign document throughout the length and breadth of the land; a book intended to inculcate sectional hatred, stir up civil war in the South, and dissolve the Union? And, lastly, who does not know that radicalism, to promote the interest of southern traitors, pointed the pistol and nerved the arm of the assassin against the life of the lamented Lincoln?

Ah, Mr. Speaker, if the ballot is dangerous in the hands of the radical of the South, overthrown and repentant as he is, is it not doubly dangerous in the hands of the radical of the North, buoyant and unrepentant? Yet I would not, if I could, deprive him of it. Bad as the result of his teachings might be, it would be preferable, rather than to crush the freedom of speech and the press, for that would end in despotism. While, therefore, radicalism is the greatest and most dangerous foe to our institutions—for the mission of radicalism is, ever has been, and always will be, to destroy, never to conserve—I would combat it with the weapons of truth. I would enlist the patriot, the Christian, the pulpit, and the press to expose and render it odious to the people, until it should sink, as its predecessors in history have sunk, beneath the scathing reprobation of honest men.

2. They tell us that the white man of the South shall not have the ballot unless his vote can be neutralized by the ballot of the black man, or, in other words, that the votes of disloyal men may be neutralized or controlled by the votes of loyal men. By what right do members assume that the southern men are disloyal now? The southron fought for an idea, that his paramount allegiance was due to the State; an idea in the truth of which he was educated, and in support of which he appealed to the fearful hazard of the sword. The decision was against him. He acknowledges his error; he abandons his theory. He is willing to accept our understanding of the allegiance due from the citizen; that the allegiance to the General Government is paramount, and is willing to seal it with an oath. What more have we ever required of any citizen? What more can we require? Will gentlemen pretend that they have an eye of Omniscience to scan the secret recesses of the human heart and read the thoughts of their fellow-man?

By what right do members assume that black men of the South were loyal to the Union? Sir, the evidence is overwhelming that they were loyal to their masters; we were told during the war that without them the rebellion would collapse, and this was urged as a reason to proclaim emancipation. That proclamation encouraged the effort of the slave for freedom, and forbid any attempt of any one in the service of the United States to prevent that effort; yet three millions of slaves made no effort. I believe during that long war, when large districts of country could at any time be devastated by the slaves, outnumbering as they did the whites in many places two to one, there was not a single servile insurrection. That was a time when we should have supposed that the slaves would have struck for freedom. I do not denounce the black man for this; I honor the amiability of his nature, the Christian forbearance which prevented him from imbruing his hands in the blood of the white man, although urged to do it by northern radicals; to that amiability and forbearance the white man intrusted his property, his wife, his children, all he had dear on earth, and he was not disappointed; confidence was met by confidence; and this magnanimity of the black man will make the white man of the South his fast friend forever; this magnanimity of the black man in the hour of the white man's peril will do more to make the white man of the South give him the rights of "a man and brother" than all the legislative theories and denunciations of radicalism.

The home of the black man and his posterity will be in the sunny South, side by side with the white man and his posterity, and the man who strives to excite animosity between them on account of race or color is an enemy to both. True patriotism, true philanthropy, will pour into the South the healing oil of love, not the bitter waters of strife.

But we are told that the Constitution guarantees "a republican form of government," and therefore every man should have the right of suffrage "without distinction of race or color" as a condition precedent to the admission of the southern States. Now, according to this theory of the radicals we have never had a republican form of government, and "the great Republic" of which we boasted is a delusion and a lie. I have always been taught that some degree of intelligence as well as virtue is necessary in the elector under a republican Government, but the radicals have told us for years that the body and soul of the black man have been imbruted by slavery, that education was prohibited to the black by southern laws, and he had intelligence very little beyond the brute creation. Horace Greeley, in his Tribune of June 2, says that "dissimulation and treachery are the natural vices of slaves," and we heard from the lips of a prominent member of the dominant party on this floor very recently, [Mr. DONNELLY,] while he eloquently, and, I think, with great ingenuity of argument, urged a national Department of Education, that—

"We cannot make bricks without straw; we cannot build a republic without intelligence; we have found ignorance and rebellion everywhere associated together as parent and child. If popular ignorance has plunged Mexico into poverty, anarchy, and ruin, what shall it do for the United States? Can the same cause yield one result west of the boundary line of Mexico and an entirely different set of results east of that line?" "then let us eliminate that which is more dangerous than slavery, ignorance."

Yet with the knowledge of all this, that we cannot build a republic without intelligence, the radical would put the ballot in the hands of millions imbruted by slavery, with intelligence but little beyond the brute creation, possessing the vices of treachery and dissimulation, and by so doing give them the political power, in some States the actual numerical majority, in almost all, the balance of power, and yet profess that he does so "to guaranty a republican form of government."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not agree with Horace Greeley, that "dissimulation and treachery are the natural vices of slaves." The slave was not treacherous to his master during the late rebellion. Not treachery, but faithfulness, is a characteristic of the African race. I do not agree with my honorable friend [Mr. DONNELLY] that "popular ignorance has plunged Mexico into poverty, anarchy, and ruin." I think if I had time I could convince him that the admission to citizenship at the Revolution, without "distinction of race or color," and the miscegenation of the Castilian, the African, and the Indian has been the foundation of her "poverty, anarchy, and ruin." And I think I could convince my honorable friend [Mr. DONNELLY] that there may be something in a republic more dangerous than either slavery or ignorance; that is, educated intellect without the education of the heart. The educated intellect of a vicious man only makes him potent for evil. Educated intellect made France of the last century a nation of infidels; educated intellect told the people that there was no God but reason, and they bowed down to the incarnation of reason in the person of a naked prostitute. Educated intellect paved the way for a reign of terror and blood. But I do agree with him that a republic could not be built or exist without intelligence; and while I would not object to the ignorance of the few, as not dangerous to free institutions, I would object to the ignorance of the many.

I have no prejudices against the black man; I never had. I have always found him obliging, polite, friendly, of an amiable disposition, and with the simplicity of a "grown-up child." I would rejoice to see him an intelligent free-man. He now has the power, under God, to work out his own destiny. He is, when educated, capable of self-government. But with these views, I would be false to my constituents and false to the Republic to give the control of entire States to masses of ignorant men, black or white.

3. But we are urged to pass the several bills submitted to this Congress disfranchising the white man of the South and putting him under political control of the black man as "a punishment."

Honorable gentlemen on this floor have advocated these bills on this ground almost entirely. Sir, I deny the power of Congress to pass any law for the punishment of treason or any other crime heretofore committed by southern men. The Constitution which gave Congress its powers, and which we have all sworn to support, says, in language impossible to be misunderstood, that—

"No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed."

By what authority, then, do members on this floor urge the passage of ex post facto laws as a punishment for crimes? By what authority do members on this floor introduce bills which are in spirit and effect bills of attainder in their most odious forms?

"Bills of attainder are such special acts of the Legislature as inflict capital punishment upon persons supposed to be guilty of high offenses, such as treason or felony, without any conviction in the ordinary course of judicial proceedings. If an act inflicts a milder punishment than death it is then called a bill of pains and penalties."

"The punishment has often been inflicted without calling upon the party to answer, or without even the formality of proof, and sometimes because the law in its ordinary course of proceeding would acquit the offender. The injustice and iniquity of such acts in general constitute an irresistible argument against the existence of the power. In a free government it would be intolerable; and in the hands of the reigning faction it might and probably would be abused to the ruin and death of the most virtuous citizens. Bills of this sort have been most usually passed in England in times of rebellion or of gross subversion to the Crown or of violent political excitements, periods in which all nations are most liable—as well the free as the enslaved, to forget their duties and to trample upon the rights and liberties of others."—3 Story on the Constitution.

And yet members in contravention of these constitutional safeguards of the liberties of the citizen, advocate bills in which the Congress, as a judicial tribunal, disfranchises citizens as a punishment for crimes heretofore committed, and not even restricting this judicial act to cases of individuals by name, as in England, but to large classes of the people without designating names.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps the proceedings of no Congress that ever assembled under the Constitution have been watched with more intense interest by the people; every one felt when this Congress assembled that its proceedings would be for weal or for woe to the unborn millions who will live and die under our national flag. The States, the people felt that it would be a struggle between a written Constitution, guarantying the rights of the States and guarding the rights of the citizen, on the one hand, and the centralization of despotic power in the General Government on the other hand. It had been announced by the principal organ of the radicals that this Government would be reconstructed under "the form of a republic but with the strength of a monarchy." No wonder that our proceedings should excite intense interest, for no more momentous subject could engage the thoughts or enlist the interest of a free people.

Mr. Speaker, no man will deny that this conflict has commenced. Sir, it will be "an irrepressible conflict" until centralization is trampled into the dust under the indignant heel of a free people determined to maintain the compact of the Constitution, or until the States, shorn of their strength, are yoked to the car of Federal power, and then a Constitution would be a mockery.

The people of the United States have never indicated their desire for a change of the organic law by a reconstruction of the States. Sir, this Congress was not elected upon such an issue, and when, knowing this, I see a majority of this House voting in favor of propositions to change the fundamental law upon subjects always held sacred by the people; when I see these changes of the fundamental law submitted to Legislatures elected without reference to such changes, I tremble for my country. I feel if I could by so doing change the purposes of a majority of this House to centralize power, I would do what I never would do to mortal man, except for my God and for my country. I would kneel as a humble suppliant to my colleagues and pray them, for the sake of God, for the sake of a generous, confiding people, to pause until that people could be heard; that they would attach to every bill of amendment a requisition that it shall be ratified by conventions instead of Legislatures. Sir, as it now is, a Congress elected without reference to amendment of the Constitution may propose amendments, and these amendments may be ratified by Legislatures elected entirely on other issues; thus the fundamental law may be changed, not only without the knowledge, but against the will of a vast majority of the people. It will be according to the forms of the Constitution, but in violation of its very spirit and essence.

Sir, that this bold attempt to override the rights of the people is contemplated by the champions of arbitrary power, and will be made, I have the proof. I read the following notice, published in the public presses:

"PENNSYLVANIA.—Governor Curtin has taken upon himself the duty of sending letters to the 'Governors of all the loyal States,' urging them to convene the Legislatures of their respective States, in order to take action on the proposed constitutional amendment which has lately been submitted to the country by Congress. The Governor of Massachusetts is reported as eager to respond, and is ready to call an extra session of the Legislature any Saturday afternoon."

No doubt, sir, every loyal radical Governor is "eager to respond," while at the same time he will prate about the duty of Congress to "guaranty a republican form of government."

From the number and character of the bills introduced as amendments of the Constitution, some members seem to think that two thirds of the Congress and three fourths of the States have omnipotent power to change the fundamental law in all its parts. Sir, I deny that power. There are reserved rights of the people that were never surrendered, even under the power of amendment; among these may be enumerated the right of every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience—it is the inalienable right of every citizen now and forever—and to this may be added the right of suffrage. No State that ratified the Constitution ever contemplated a grant of power under an amendment of the Constitution, to pass bills of attainder, ex post facto laws, to impose a tax or duty on articles exported from any State, or to establish a monarchy. Sir, if the Constitution when submitted to the States had contained a provision authorizing two thirds of Congress and three fourths of the States to so amend as to deprive a citizen of the right to worship God, or to take away the right of suffrage, or to pass bills of attainder and ex post facto laws, or to impose a tax on the exports of a State, or to establish a monarchy, does any sane man believe for a moment that it would have been ratified by a single State of "the Old Thirteen." Sir, our fathers felt as we should feel, that there are reserved rights which are inalienable; that constitutions bind posterity, and that we have no right to bind posterity in the chains of arbitrary power. Yet, sir, we have a bill pending for some time giving authority to Congress, by an amendment of the Constitution, to authorize the levy of a tax or duty on cotton, an amendment which, if passed, would repeal that section of the Constitution which was intended by our fathers to protect commerce and to prevent sectional legislation by the passage of acts which might injure or destroy the staple productions of a State in order to promote the interests of another State, a power which would array the cupidity of one class of our citizens against the interests of another class, the cupidity of the manufacturer against the producer, the commercial against the agricultural interests, and vice versa, to end in discontent, rebellion, or revolution.

Yet we have heard on this floor, in colloquial debate, from the lips of a member of the dominant party, a gentleman who, in cultivated intellect, respectability, and eloquence, ranks as high as any other member, the right of two thirds of Congress and three fourths of the States to establish a monarchy, under the plea that when the people were ready to make such a change they would be so demoralized that a republican government would not be worth contending for. Representatives of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Missouri, New York, Pennsylvania, are you prepared to sanction this doctrine? Are you willing to admit such a latitudinarian construction of the Constitution that your constituents could have the fetters of a monarchy riveted on their necks whenever three fourths of the States become so demoralized as to require it by an amendment to the Constitution? Are the rights of your constituents to be governed by the demoralization of others? Is that a condition in the compact, either express or implied? Would your constituents submit to the wrong, or would they assert their inalienable rights by revolution? Yet we have heard the right of Congress asserted in bills and by members in debate to regulate suffrage. You know that the power to give includes the power to take away—a power to disfranchise the people at the arbitrary will of a majority of Congress. Who can doubt that the power would be exercised in times of high political excitement? Are you prepared to give this sacred right of your constituents—the right of ballot—to the control and keeping of a majority of Congress?

Mr. Speaker, I have been pained to hear the passage of bills urged in this House by an appeal to the prejudices of party and the revengeful feelings engendered by the heat of the late conflict of arms. Legislation induced by passion should never be the legislation of a free people in a free republic. We legislate and propose amendments to the fundamental law, not for a year or a century of years, but for all coming time. We seem to forget that when we legislate against the South or for party we legislate for our own posterity. Suppose we should succeed in giving an ascendancy to party or in crippling the South in her resources; what is the life of a man or a party when compared with the life of an empire? Parties are ephemeral. The places that now know the men of the South, the actors in the late conflict, in a few years "will know them no more forever," but the Republic should and will (if sustained by wise legislation) endure forever. God grant that it may stand impregnable, in the future as in the past, against the assaults of traitors within and foes without.

It is folly to make an organic law giving the power to promote the interest of one section at the expense of another section, however the interest of one section may be identified with the interest of another section now. That identity of interest will not continue. With the settlement of our vast Territories and the development of their vast resources, new combinations of interest and power will be formed. The God of nature has identified the interests of the West with the South, and the men of the West in the future will be the political allies of the men of the South, whether the men of the South are white or black.

I need not say that every addition to the powers of the Federal Government, either by an amendment of the Constitution or by unconstitutional construction, is by subtraction from the powers of the States, and destroys the equilibrium of powers intended to check despotism, and would leave the dearest rights of the States and the people at the mercy of a majority of Congress, which in a country of such vast extent as ours, with such diversified productions, would inevitably result in sectional parties, sectional legislation, and hatred of the Union.

I need not say that constitutions are made for minorities not for majorities. I need not say with what fearful speed we are gravitating to centralization of power. Witness the taxation of State banks out of existence; the passage of bills by this House in relation to railroads; the power assumed over the right of suffrage; the attempt to destroy the independence of the State judiciary under the penalty of fine and imprisonment; the interference with and virtual repeal of State laws; the power given to swarms of officers (including the officers of the Freedmen's Bureau) to arrest and imprison the citizens of every State; but above all the conversion of the United States into a great eleemosynary corporation by the passage of the "act to enlarge the power of the Freedmen's Bureau," districting the United States, with the establishment of military authority over each district containing freedmen or refugees; an agent in each county armed with military power, and authorized to supersede the civil power by trial and condemnation of citizens under the rules of the War Department, prescribed by the President, without trial by jury; the establishment of poor-houses; the erection of school-houses, and the support of millions of paupers at the expense of the people. And this bill, which conferred imperial power on the President, and laid the personal liberties of the people and the independence of the State judiciary at the feet of military power, the greatest stride to centralization ever dreamed or attempted under our Constitution, was only prevented from becoming a law by the firmness of Andrew Johnson. For this act the name of Andrew Johnson will live in the heart of every friend of popular rights as a champion and defender of the rights of the States and liberties of the people in their hour of peril until the Republic shall cease to exist.

The plan of reconstruction, embracing the refusal to permit eleven States to be represented in Congress, is a grand scheme to perfect centralization. This plan of reconstruction punishes the innocent as well as the guilty in the southern States, the loyalist as well as the traitor. Tennessee, who broke the chains of secession and stood in the ranks of the loyal States, with loyal representatives, is placed in the same category with South Carolina, and the powers of the loyal States are also to be curtailed under this plan of reconstruction. Who, sir, ever believed that the secession of traitors would reconstruct our Government? Why, sir, Jefferson Davis, in the height of his success, never dreamed that success would result in a reconstruction of our Government, much less that his defeat would effect that result. Mr. Speaker, I am not surprised that this effort to reconstruct should be urged upon us. Many men have long waited for some fortunate chance to occur that might enable them to reconstruct our institutions. The great "Head Center" of the dominant party in this House, [Mr. SREYERS,] with a candor that does him honor, recently said:

"In my youth, in my manhood, and in my old age, I have fondly dreamed that when any fortunate chance should have broken up the foundations of our institutions and released us from obligations the most tyrannical that ever man imposed in the name of freedom."

But thousands have prayed with more fervency than my venerable friend ever dreamed, that this fortunate chance should never occur.

Sir, the people neither demand reconstruction nor centralization. They want restoration. The industry and business of the country demand immediate restoration. Thousands of farmers, mechanics, and capitalists are waiting to go South. Their industry and enterprise would in a few years make that fair and fruitful land, now desolated by war, to "bud and blossom as the rose," but they will not settle in a "conquered province," governed by military force.

The financial interests of the country, the tax-payers burdened with the largest national debt upon earth, demand that their burdens should be lightened by an immediate restoration of the States, the industry, and productions of the South.

The friends of constitutional freedom demand immediate restoration as a measure vital to the preservation of the Constitution and perpetuity of the Union. The Christian—not the radical priest who preaches political "hatred and malice and all uncharitableness," who sees that God is only a God of justice—not him, but the Christian who believes that God is a "God of love," ministers of the meek and lowly Jesus, who taught His disciples to pray "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us," demand it.

Sir, the law of love and friendship is the only law that can bind this Union in enduring bonds. Sectionalism and sectional hate sooner or later will rend it asunder. The policy of statesmen should be conciliation, not vengeance. I feel no hatred in my bosom toward the secession traitors of the South, or their allies the sectional radical fanatics of the North, although I believe, as much as I believe in my own existence, that they alike are responsible for the blood of our sons. I would restore the Union of my country in forgiveness and mutual confidence. I would rest the foundations of the Union on respect and love.

It is marvelous to me that statesmen cannot see that sectional denunciation and sectional laws can never cement the Union of the States, can never command or inspire the respect of nationalities. Look at Ireland; centuries of sectional oppression have not turned the spirit of her sons or caused them to love their "union" with Great Britain. She was first "a conquered province," then England by bribery and compulsion established "the Union," a Union commenced in perfidy, and which has been used by the British Parliament to restrict her commerce, to load her with taxes, and the result of which has been to drive thousands of her sons to seek liberty and a home under the flag of "this great Republic." Has sectional legislation, has the rule of force instead of conciliation, made the Celt love the Saxon and "the Union?" No! the wrongs of the Irishman have been transmitted from sire to son with undying hate, and at this very hour one hundred thousand Irishmen now on our soil stand ready to avenge their wrongs and to give liberty to their fatherland. This hereditary feeling of the Irish was most eloquently expressed by President Roberts in an address to the Fenians, as follows:

"The concentrated wrongs of centuries are in our hearts, and give strength to the perpetual longing for Irish freedom which neither time nor obstacles can quench."

Mr. Speaker, Ireland will yet be free, for—

"Freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeathed from bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft is ever won."

And where is the friend of human freedom in this land that would not rejoice to see the Irishman break his shackles and Ireland stand a disenthralled nation in the family of nations? Yes, sir, Ireland will yet be free; "the green flag" will again float over that beautiful isle, and then, and not until then, will the "epitaph of Emmett be written" on bronze and marble, as it is now written in every true Irish heart.

The soldiers who fought for the restoration of the Union, who gave their blood to restore the supremacy of the Constitution and the laws, will demand that the Union conquered by their arms shall be restored. It will be folly to tell them that they fought in vain; that they fought to dissolve, not restore, the Union. If this Congress fails to restore the Union of the States (and Congress is the only obstacle to that restoration) they will say that radical ideas have done what the armies of traitors in the field could not do—prevented the restoration of the Union. No glittering generalities like the glittering veil of the false prophet of Khorassan can deceive them. You may talk to them and repeat the stereotyped phrases about "the right," "humanity," "indemnity for the past and security for the future," "brotherhood of man," "hands dripping with human gore," &c., and you may frame bills with titles proposing to facilitate the restoration of the Union, while they in effect postpone it, but they will tell you that they fought for immediate restoration, not for postponement.

The Democratic party demands to a man the restoration of the Union. That grand old party who always maintained the faith of compacts, who always stood as faithful sentinels on the ramparts of the Constitution, who never in legislation knew any East or West or North or South, who from the time the foundations of the Constitution were laid warned the people against sectional fanatics, and repeated the warning until they were scoffed at as "Union savers;" that old party by whose policy, under God, this Republic marched steadily onward to a position of power and resources that has placed her in the van of nations, a party without whose united aid in men and money during a rebellion inaugurated by sectional parties the Union would have been swept like chaff before the whirlwind, that grand old party demands immediate restoration, not reconstruction.

Mr. Speaker, there can be no evasion now of the great issues to be tried before the tribune of the people, union or disunion? the constitutional rights of the States or centralization of power in the General Government?

Sir, if the southern States are out of the Union, then is our flag, intended as the emblem of the union of the States and power of this great Republic, in truth what a radical once proclaimed it, "a flaunting lie," and you should tear eleven stars from its glorious constellation.

Mr. Speaker, let this agitation cease, now and forever. Let us heal the wounds of our bleeding country. Let us restore the Union before we adjourn. It can be done in an hour. Let us do it, and the patriotic shouts of the people will greet our return to our constituents, and an impetus will be given to industry and enterprise which in its results will astonish the world.

Let us repudiate all hatred, all sectionalism, in our speeches or legislative acts. Let us act on the principle of "malice toward none, with charity for all," and we will bind the Union in bands of iron.

Let us lighten the burdens of the sons of toil by lifting the taxes from the necessities of life; but above all, let us inaugurate the system of "eight hours a day" for the laborer and mechanic in the employ of the Government. It would pioneer the way to a general introduction of the system into all the departments of industry. Let us give the laborer and mechanic time to cultivate his intellect, to study the Constitution of his country, to commune with his family and teach his children, to worship God, to relax his nerves. Ah! who can tell, as has been eloquently expressed in song by the gifted and respected wife of a laborer in the city of Trenton:

"Who can tell what harps are hushed
By the roar of forge and wheel;
Or what mighty minds are crushed
Neath oppressor's iron heel?"

"Masters! count the gain, the cost,
Labor pays from every pore,
By the grand inventions lost,
Shrouded stars and buried ore.
Brothers, cast your bonds away,
Give the word, 'eight hours a day.'"

Let us remember that the stability of the Republic under God depends on the working men. They compose our armies; they man our navies; they pour out their blood in our defense; they are never defiled with political corruption. I solemnly believe that if the liberties of this country are ever destroyed by foreign force or domestic treason that the last hand that will uphold the last standard of freedom will be the hand of the working man, and in his bosom liberty will find her last resting-place. Let us do this, and we will bind the heart of the working man to his country and its institutions with ties that cannot be severed by human influence or human power.

Let us double the pension of the soldier who was maimed or disabled in the service of the Republic; give him at least enough to supply his necessary wants through life. Do not let us calculate his services by dollars and cents, or the increase of the national debt. He was the means of saving to the country the richest territory on earth, which, without his services, would have been lost to the Republic. Do not let him wander through the nation, whose life he was the means of preserving, in a condition but little above the condition of a pauper. And let us show to the living that we appreciate his services by doing our duty to the memory of the dead. Alas! we cannot give our thanks to the gallant dead. Three hundred thousand torn by shot or shell or bayonet, or destroyed by disease, "sleep the sleep that knows no waking" at Arlington, Andersonville, Gettysburg, and on the soil of a hundred battle-fields.

"The muffled drum's sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo;
No more on life's parade shall meet
The brave and fallen foe.
On Fame's eternal camping-ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead."

They cannot receive our gratitude, but let us do what we can to honor their memory; let us double or treble the pension of his wife, made a widow, and his children, made fatherless, by his devotion to the Union.

Let us do this, and we shall never want for soldiers who will spring to arms against foreign invaders or domestic traitors. Let us avoid the exercise of all doubtful power. Let us maintain the supremacy of the civil over the military power. Let us maintain the independence of the judiciary; the freedom of speech; the freedom of the press; the right of trial by jury, as rights inestimable to the people "and formidable to tyrants only." Let us foster and promote public virtue. Let us establish a commission before which the loyal and innocent victim of the arbitrary power exercised during the rebellion may prove his loyalty and innocence, and thus save his name from the brand of treason and his children from the humiliation of being pointed out by the finger of scorn as the offspring of a traitor. Let there be provided a redress for every wrong committed within the limits of the Republic; then our laws will be revered, and the proudest title that a man on earth can boast, will be, "I am an American citizen."

Let us do this, and the Republic will be perpetual; then we can look with an eye of faith through coming ages and see our people the most prosperous on earth; united under one God, one Constitution, one destiny, and our beloved Republic, standing immutable in her strength then as she now is, "the asylum of the oppressed, the home of freemen."

Protection of American Labor.

SPEECH OF HON. T. T. DAVIS,

OF NEW YORK,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

June 16, 1866.

The House, as in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, having under consideration the President's annual message—

Mr. DAVIS said:

Mr. SPEAKER: As the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means has just notified the House that this is the last day of the session which can probably be assigned to general debate on the President's message and the state of the Union, I propose to diverge from the discussion of the question of reconstruction, to which so much time has been devoted, and to consider a subject of greater and more urgent importance to the country, namely, the protection of the labor and industry of our citizens, as connected with our finances. And I do this because I believe that every wise Government will be careful to preserve its credit by the adoption of a system of finance which, while furnishing the revenue requisite for the public service, shall protect and foster, so far as possible, the production, trade, and manufactures of its own people. The wealth of a nation consists not only in the amount of gold and silver which may be hoarded in its treasury, but in the power of producing, by well-remunerated and general industry, all that is essential to the administration of its Government, the supply of its citizens with the comforts, the conveniences, and even the luxuries of life, and in that surplus of production over consumption which makes up the capital of individuals.

Almost a century ago Adam Smith asserted a proposition which was true then and is true now, that no nation could long survive a system of taxation or finance which, absorbing the entire profits of industry, left the cost of maintaining population a charge upon capital. To Dr. Smith, more than to any other individual, perhaps more than to all other individuals who have addressed themselves to the study of political economy, is due that theory of free trade which is now the boast of English statesmen, and upon which the American Republic is invited by England to establish its financial system. I believe that our national finances can never prosper, and I assert that they have never prospered, under any system of free trade, and that every approach to it has proved injurious to our people. I am aware that almost everywhere it is conceded now that to discharge our public debt and its accruing interest we must impose burdens upon our citizens heavy and grievous to be borne, and that those burdens must rest both upon what we produce at home and upon what we consume or use from abroad. Still it is not to be denied that a certain class of men of intelligence and influence are wedded to the theory of free trade, and would, so far as possible, conform our action to its precepts.

I desire to-day to advocate the cause of American industry, and to show that its just protection is one of the highest duties of an American Congress. I desire to prove that England, in its advocacy of free trade, has ever acted in view of its own existing system of labor and production; and that so long as her manufactures and productions required the protection of legislation that legislation was bestowed, and that she repealed protective statutes only when they were useless.

From the time of Edward III to the year 1846 the statute-books of England will be searched in vain to find a single act based upon the theory of real freedom in the interchange of national productions. In 1879 Parliament enacted, for the benefit of British shipbuilders and to encourage employment in the commercial marine of England, that no merchandise should be imported or exported except in English ships; and additional statutes, with rigorous penalties, for the same purpose, were enacted down to the time of Cromwell, when it was made unlawful for a British shipper to charter or employ any vessel which was not built in England by British workmen, commanded by a British master, and manned by a crew at least three fourths Britons. In violation of the rights of her American colonists as British subjects, England denied to them, under her navigation laws, the rights of British citizens. By her restrictive and protective policy England struck down the commercial marine of her great rival, Holland, and centered within the British isles almost the entire commerce of the world. As early as 1837, England inaugurated a system of legislation to protect her woolen manufactures, and this protection was extended and enforced until English producers were enabled to sell their cloths in the markets of other nations cheaper than other nations could produce them.

Edward III was a sagacious monarch, and perceived the great advantage of inviting skilled labor from abroad to manufacture in England the raw material produced by his own subjects; and when the frugal and industrious Flemings, under his assurance and protection, established their arts of dyeing, dressing, and weaving wools Carrying backward the rates of comparative increase, assigned by this table, to 1776, it will appear probable that then the population of the colonies did not much, if any, exceed 2,800,000, being about three and a half times less than the population of Great Britain; while a similar calculation will show that the real and personal property was about twelve times greater than that of the colonies. The area of the United Kingdom was 120,851 square miles. That of the United Colonies was 820,680 square miles. England had been cultivated for centuries.

It was estimated by Arthur Young, after long investigation and travel, in 1780, that the capital employed in agriculture in England and Wales was then £128,000,000—$640,000,000, being a greater value than all the real and personal property of the United Colonies at the same period.

While, therefore, agriculture was highly developed, while wealth per capita was nearly three times greater in England than with us; while the steam-engine, the spinning-jenny, and the power-loom were all held under the restriction of English patents; and while the policy of England forbade either the export of machinery or the migration of the machinist; while labor was low in an old country and high in a new one, the young republic entered the lists with England as a competitor for the supply of American markets by American productions. In this contest we have ever felt the power, not only of English capital, but of English ideas, and in deference to British sentiment we have too often ignored the logic of undisputed facts. I shall now invite the attention of the committee to the consideration of the necessary results of the marked differences in culture and material wealth to which I have alluded.

The various acts of Parliament restraining manufactures in the colonies had for their purpose and end the monopoly of the sales to the colonists of the home manufactures of England. The spirit and temper of the nation were illustrated by an English writer in 1750, Mr. Gee, who, in speaking of "manufactures in our American colonies," says:

"They should not only be discouraged but prohibited. We ought always to keep a watchful eye over our colonies to restrain them from setting up any of the manufactures which are carried on in Great Britain; and any such attempts should be crushed in the beginning."

The reason is obvious, and one of the causes of revolution was the persistent and oppressive effort of England to prevent the introduction and prosperity of manufactures beyond the Atlantic in our colonies.

I appeal to distance instead of years; and I ask not the history of a century ago. I ask the present, on our western frontiers, what are the rates of interest which money there commands in this our day? I think I may say from personal knowledge that in Iowa, even in Illinois, in Minnesota, in Nebraska, and in Missouri, the average interest of money is more than ten per cent. per annum. In several States this rate is permitted by contract, and in all it is recognized by necessity. This is the concurrent history of settlement in all new countries, and this rate is lower than the average interest in California, Oregon, Idaho, and Nevada; and yet in our colonial days money was far scarcer than now.

Adam Smith, writing just before our independence, says, (chapter three, book five, of his Wealth of Nations:)

"The Americans, indeed, have no gold or silver, the interior commerce of the country being carried on by a paper currency, and the gold and silver which occasionally come among them being all sent to Great Britain in return for the commodities which they receive from us."

It is a fact which all history will verify, that our colonial Legislatures, to remedy the scarcity of currency, resorted to issues of paper money as a legal tender till prohibited by imperial legislation.

On the other hand, money was abundant in England, and scarcely exceeded five per cent. per annum, until the terrible tornado which prostrated the Bourbon dynasty swept Austria, Prussia, Russia, and England into the vortex of its revolution. Nor during the fiery ordeal through which England passed in the years of the Revolution and the Empire, when all Europe, combined against France, was subsidized by British gold, did the rate of interest in England reach so high a point as that paid by the people of the United States during the war of the rebellion.

Four centuries of gradual growth of agriculture and manufactures under rigorous protection, had given to England, at the date of our independence, rank as a leading Power of Europe. Robert Clive had recently laid the foundations of British empire in India on the bloody field of Plassey. Hastings, by his reckless daring and address, enlarged the fabric and made England sovereign over a hundred million Asiatics. The fabulous wealth of Bengal, Oude, and Bahar was transferred from India to London. The fabrics of England found a new and profitable market on the Hoogly and the Ganges.

The first Congress which assembled after the adoption of the Constitution took into earnest consideration the subject of domestic manufactures and the revenue to be derived from their protection.

But the country was impoverished; the financial ruin brought on by the absolute annihilation of the continental currency had not been retrieved. Capital for any extensive system of manufactures was unattainable; and in the absence of domestic production foreign supply was indispensable. Moreover, a defenseless sea-coast stretched along thousands of miles of unsettled country. The St. Lawrence, under the control of Britain, left a commercial avenue to the lakes; the Mississippi opened access to our western frontiers; and there was scarcely a spot from Georgia to New Hampshire where the smuggler would not prosecute his craft, under a system of high duties, with profit and safety. The tariff of 1789, 1790, 1791, 1792, 1794, 1795, 1796, and 1797 did something, but not much, to relieve us from the power of British competition, and England readily secured to itself the cotton manufacture in which we had not the capital to embark.

The war of 1812 made emancipation a necessity, and the tariff of 1816-17 was designed to give appropriate encouragement to American production.

From the adoption of the Constitution up to the war of 1812 the value of real and personal estate of the United States had only risen to about $1,500,000,000, while that of Great Britain stood at $10,212,300,000. The value of our annual production was $420,000,000, including cotton exports of about $47,000,000 per annum. Hers was $1,531,845,000.

New England, now the seat of factories and machine-shops comparing favorably with those of Europe, turned her enterprise to the fisheries and commerce. We had no West. The coal-fields of Pennsylvania were unworked. Her iron ores were unheeded or unknown. The system of labor in the southern slaveholding States was believed, at least by its advocates, to be ill adapted to mechanical labor or manufactures. The result was natural, perhaps inevitable. So long as English capital and sagacity were aided by our own dependence and prejudices in the control of our productions and markets, we sent our cotton to England, paid freight, an import duty there, varying from 6s. 6d. sterling per hundred pounds in 1798, 7s. 10d. in 1802, 16s. 11d. in 1809, 6s. 10d. in 1831, to 2s. 11d. in 1833, and when the raw material had been spun by British jennies and woven by British looms, we kindly bought the fabric, paid return freight, a new import duty to our own Government, and rejoiced that we were a great and a wise people.

New England preferred commerce to manufactures, and her influence unfortunately was not lent to protection, because her interest did not dictate it.

But let us look at the wakeful sagacity of England, while the commercial interests of New England and the North discarded manufactures—or at least failed to encourage them—and while the South, blind to the evils of servile labor, neglected to initiate a system of manufactures for the staples which she raised.

The following table shows the decennial increase of the import of cotton-wool for the manufactures of Great Britain from 1775 to 1864:

Years.	Pounds.
1775.....	4,764,389
1785.....	18,400,384
1795.....	26,401,340
1805.....	59,602,406
1810.....	132,488,935
1815.....	99,308,343
1820.....	151,672,655
1825.....	228,790,042
1830.....	268,981,452
1835.....	363,762,093
1840.....	592,488,010
1845.....	721,523,712
1850.....	663,370,861
1855.....	891,751,952
1860.....	951,707,264

I have not at hand the actual amount imported in the five years succeeding, but the value of import is as follows:

1860.....	£35,756,859
1861.....	38,653,398
1862.....	31,093,035
1863.....	56,277,953
1864.....	78,203,729

From 1861 to 1864 the import from the United States was reduced to a nominal amount by the war, and thus the price of cotton rose more than ten hundred per cent.

Our export of cotton, from its small beginning, for years has exceeded a thousand million pounds, and yet in 1857, when our total production was 3,113,962 bales, we manufactured within the United States but about 600,000 bales, furnishing to England nearly the entire residue of 2,500,000 bales to support her labor in competition with our own.

If we turn now to the Census of 1860, under the head of manufactures, we shall find in the introduction, page 20, that from 1821 to 1859, inclusive, the manufactured cottons imported amounted annually to $14,624,687; from 1840 to 1856 the average was $16,795,418, and for the last three of those years it was an average of $28,811,966. In 1860 we received of plain cottons from Britain alone 228,766,939 yards, of the declared value of $3,849,915, besides the other fabrics of the same material which we imported, because we were not wise enough to make them.

In 1856, it appears by statistics furnished by the reports of an official character in Great Britain, that there were then in operation in spinning and weaving cotton, wool, flax, and silk, 5,117 factories, using the power of 161,435 horses, 33,503,580 spindles, 367,208 power-looms, 682,497 hands.

Of these factories 2,210, employing 28,010,217 spindles and 379,213 hands, were employed in the spinning and weaving of cotton alone, while 887,369 persons were engaged in the preparation, dyeing, and printing of these fabrics and upon other textile fabrics of the kingdom.

It was estimated that the entire aggregate of persons, 1,569,856, thus employed sustained an additional population of 3,000,000 who were dependent on their labor, making about one eighth of the population at that time. But what becomes of this vast manufacture, which in a century has grown from nothingness to imperial importance? You find the answer by examining the export of manufactures.

In 1834 Great Britain manufactured of raw material 302,935,657 pounds, making the prod uct worth £38,304,409; her home consumption was £17,794,823; leaving for export value £20,513,686, or $102,568,430.

In 1859 she manufactured 976,600,000 pounds of the finished value of £71,373,214; her home consumption was £23,164,770; leaving export value, £48,208,444, or $241,042,220.

Mr. Bigelow, whose elaborate work on the Tariff Question has furnished me with much valuable information, estimates the remunerative profit to English capital and labor in the manufacture of the 976,600,000 pounds of cotton in 1859 over the cost of material at nearly two hundred million dollars.

It is not wonderful that British statesmen should take pride in a manufacture which is conceded to have added to the national wealth within the last fifty years more than five thousand million dollars.

I might ask here, why is it that we employ to our own incalculable injury the labor of other nations to produce the fabrics which we wear from the material which we raise?

But first let me allude in a few words to other items of production. The number of tons of pig iron produced in England and Wales was, in—

1740 .....	17,000,000
1778 .....	68,000,000
1840 .....	1,396,000,000
1846 .....	1,750,000,000
1864 .....	4,767,951,000

• The estimated value of the iron of 1864 was £11,919,877, equal to $55,599,385, and we exported of iron and its products from England in 1864 $16,048,694. Great Britain produced in that year one half of all the iron produced in the world.

If we turn to coal, we find results equally astonishing and suggestive. It was stated by Mr. Taylor, in 1823, one of the most intelligent and extensive proprietors of coal mines in England, that the amount of coal consumed in Great Britain was 15,800,000 tons. I find by the examination of the Report of the Government Superintendent of Collieries for the year 1865, that the production in that year was 92,787,873 tons, of which there were exported 7,529,541 tons, and there were consumed 85,258,332 tons. In 1860 the total coal mined in the United States was 14,333,922 tons, and in 1863, under the extraordinary demand made and anticipated by the Government, it did not exceed 18,000,000 tons.

England has a population now nearly equal to our own. By her system of labor and manufactures, protected against competition until she could defy it, she has supplied the wants of her own millions, and exported of her productions and manufactures to other countries in a single year almost seven hundred million dollars in value.

Sir, these exports have risen from the sum of £87,234,396 in 1805 to £135,842,817 in 1860, and we have, except during the war of 1812, been her most munificent patron.

The statesmen of England know too well the great sources of their national wealth to imperil them by any policy of free trade, which has in it more than the name.

England reared the throne of her empire upon coal. She made iron king, and cotton prime minister. She surrendered the sovereignty of the colonies when she could retain it no longer, but by her capital and our dependence and folly secured the control of our productions and our markets.

The victories won by England over Napoleon were achieved in her mines, her workshops, and her factories. The thunder-bolts which fell at Talavera and Waterloo were forged in the foundries of Britain. The glories of Trafalgar and the Nile would have been unrealized in the absence of her manufactures, which developing her resources at home and sustaining her commerce on every sea, created the wealth by which the arms of Spain and Prussia and Russia were subsidized in that eventful conflict which convulsed Europe and the world, and whose moving spirit was lulled to sleep by the surges of the South Atlantic.

Truly did Napoleon say, beneath the willows of Longwood, "Great Britain conquered me not with her swords but with her spindles; with her spindles she subsidized all Europe, and here I am." It will be well for us to remember the power which subverted his empire.

Mr. Speaker, Monsieur Arago, on the 8th of December, 1834, delivered before the Academy of Sciences, at Paris, an eloquent eulogium upon James Watt; and in it he alludes to the changes wrought by the steam-engine and jenny in the manufacture of cotton. By their means, in the county of Lancaster alone, he says:

"The spinners deliver to the calico manufacturers a quantity of yarn that 21,000 clever spinners could not accomplish with only the aid of the rock and spindle; and 1,500,000 people now find occupation there, where, before the inventions of Arkwright and Watt, there were only 50,000."

The cotton machinery of Lancaster in its full working power is to-day performing the labor of more than 50,000,000 men, while the labor of the steam-engine, in its multifarious creations of power, represents the capacity of 600,000,000 people employed in manual labor.

The policy of England is to-day what the policy of every wise nation is, to take care of itself; and these elements of power, thus existing in profusion, are not to be sacrificed to any sudden promptings of philanthropy. England about 1826 inaugurated a modification of her corn laws, not because she was unwilling to protect her own producers, but because her producers could not raise an amount approximating to the wants of a nation of manufacturers; but in utter repudiation of every idea of free trade, she made the import duty one pound sterling per quarter of eight bushels, when the market price was under fifty-one shillings, and reduced it to one shilling when the price rose to or above seventy-three shillings.

With the exception of the reduction of duties on silks in 1824, and of corn a little later, but little was done in England by way of reducing duties for any purpose until the act of 1842, in respect to which the Premier, Sir Robert Peel, said:

"We have applied ourselves to imperfections in the tariff, to make it clear and intelligible, and, as far as possible, consistent. We have sought to remove all prohibitions, all absolute prohibitions upon the importation of foreign articles; and we have endeavored to reduce duties which are so high as to be prohibitory to such a scale as may admit of a fair competition with domestic produce."

"With respect to raw materials which constitute the elements of our manufactures, our object, speaking generally, has been to reduce them to almost a nominal amount. In half-manufactured materials, which enter almost as much as raw materials into our domestic manufacture, we have reduced the duty to a nominal amount."

The various tariff acts from 1842 to 1859 reducing the duties on raw material and articles partially manufactured, as well as on articles of food, were intended to increase the export of her manufactures to other countries, where England by reason of her immense capital and machinery and her low labor could be a successful competitor.

The reduction of duties on articles wholly manufactured, ostentatiously alluded to by her statesmen, was simply offering to other nations a proposition they could not accept in competition with anything manufactured in England, for the simple reason that England could manufacture cheaper than anybody else.

The mean annual customs collected in the United Kingdom from 1838 to 1842 were reported at $116,645,680, all of which, except $10,542,715, were collected from silk manufactures, spirits, sugar and molasses, tea, tallow, timber, tobacco and snuff, wines, and ordinary agricultural products.

In 1843 and 1844, that is, for the two years after the free-trade tariff of 1842 reducing duties, the mean annual customs amounted to $116,638,720, of which all but $3,908,810 were of the list above enumerated.

Now, if we pass to the six years, from 1854 to 1859 inclusive, we shall find that the mean annual revenue from customs was $117,797,685, all of which save $2,779,885 was collected on the enumerated list. Of the average annual duties of the first period, $116,645,680, the sum of $80,411,220 was collected from articles for consumption not raised at all in Great Britain, being on coffee, sugar, molasses, tea, timber, tobacco, and wines. Of the $116,638,720 of the second period, $86,531,410 were collected on same items; and of the $117,797,685 of the last period the sum of $92,584,301 was collected from same sources. But we must deduct from the residue in each instance $12,000,000 more for customs on imported spirits which England does not manufacture to any extent because of her limited production of grain compared with her consumption. Where do we find here the evidence that free trade has opened the ports of England to foreign manufactures which compete with her own?

In 1841 and 1842, before her tariff proclaimed the reduction of duties on imported articles wholly or partially manufactured, she received on finished articles but an annual revenue of $2,397,850, and for the mean of 1843-44, $2,377,625. Will these insignificant sums, not more than sufficient to cover her revenue duties on the finished non-competing manufactures of the Indies and of other countries, indicate that the world has free entry into the ports of England?

In 1839 the import duties collected by Great Britain amounted to $110,604,760. In 1859 they amounted to $123,522,635, which to American arithmetic would seem to prove that the rule of reduction in England is that of "reduction ascending." Applied to the pretense of "free trade," a logician might style it the "reductio ad absurdum."

Preaching free trade to the world, England has within the last ten years once, at least, if not twice, imposed an increased duty of ten per cent. upon American cottons imported into her Indian empire to exclude the manufactures of New England.

I feel reluctant to trespass longer on the patience of the committee in proving, both by the words and the acts of British statesmen, that all their theories of free trade are based upon the idea that their own manufactures are protected against our competition by their capital and superior facilities, and that our markets are to be opened to them by the alluring assurance that their ports will be open to us. Yet I may be pardoned for citing the language of Sir Robert Peel in 1846, in debate in Parliament, complaining that other countries did not comply with the disinterested desires of England. He said:

"You have defied the regulations of those countries. But your exports, whatever be the tariffs of other countries, or however apparent the ingratitude with which they have treated you—your export trade has been constantly increasing. By the remission of your duties upon the raw material, by increasing your skill and industry, by competition with foreign goods, you have defied your competitors in foreign markets, and you have even been able to exclude them. Notwithstanding their hostile tariffs the declared value of British exports has increased above ten million pounds during the period which elapsed since the relaxation of duties on your part. I say, therefore, to you that these hostile tariffs, so far from being an objection to continuing your policy, are an argument in its favor. But depend upon it your example will ultimately prevail."

Suppose we had adopted this policy and opened our ports for the right of entry to those of Great Britain, where would have been the benefit to us? England years ago attempted to secure the reduction of our tariff by promising the repeal of her corn laws, and held out her proposed action as an equivalent for what she asked of us.

The proposition was not accepted, and in 1849 she removed the duties upon grains of her own volition and for her own interest. In 1850 we exported nearly three million bushels of grain less than in 1849, and nearly a million less than in 1848.

The following table will show our exports from 1846 to 1859, and from the fluctuations which are apparent from year to year, it is apparent that we can place no reliance upon England as a steady and regular market. She will buy of us when we can undersell others, and only then:

Table of amount of wheat, corn, and all other grains exported from the United States into the kingdom of Great Britain from 1846 to 1860, inclusive, in quarters, (eight bushels.)

Years.	Quarters.
1846	1,106,890
1847	4,288,239
1848	1,290,303
1849	1,816,425
1850	1,082,755
1851	1,211,365
1852	1,400,420
1853	1,821,484
1854	2,136,223
1855	1,122,073
1856	3,117,678
1857	1,487,464
1858	1,500,481
1859	109,275
1860	2,624,005

Examination will show that while for twelve years, between 1848 and 1860, our exports to Great Britain of our cereals was reduced twenty-seven per cent., the amount imported by her from all countries increased over nineteen per cent.

How insignificant is such a market for the sale of the vast cereal production for which the agriculturists of the West seek a sale. In 1860 the western States produced in corn alone 470,190,097 bushels, and of wheat 102,251,127 bushels; while New England, which itself raised but 10,175,856 bushels of corn and 1,090,894 of wheat, furnished, with the other eastern States, a market for the sale of more than six times the quantity of grain exported to all Europe.

The western farmer who looks abroad for a permanent and regular market for his products, and demands free trade that he may buy the manufactures and productions of England untaxed, should be treated at once for ophthalmia or strabismus.

Our total agricultural production of 1860 is returned at $1,856,000,000; our total exports were $272,282,873, of which amount there was in cotton $191,806,556, showing export of other commodities to be $80,476,318, and proving that we consumed at home and interchanged $1,588,717,127.

I am aware that since 1860 our exports of breadstuffs to Europe and to Great Britain has increased, but this is a circumstance which by no means indicates that we can continue to export.

The wheat-bearing regions of Russia, especially of her Polish dominions, are unlimited, affording a more ready supply, and the act of emancipation of the Czar is likely to a great extent to increase the cereal production of the empire.

Speculate as we will, we shall find that America has always furnished and will continue to furnish the largest and most reliable market for American productions.

Let me allude now to the mutual relations of the American farmer and the American manufacturer, to show the folly of a free-trade remedy for a dull market of our products, by citing statistics which are reliable:

A table of the comparative number of male persons employed in manufactures in the several States named in 1830.

States.	No. of males.	Population.
Maine	24,827	628,279
New Hampshire	18,579	326,073
Vermont	8,563	315,098
Connecticut	4,402	460,147
Rhode Island	20,795	170,885
Massachusetts	146,268	1,231,066
New York	170,885	3,880,733
New Jersey	43,198	672,035
Pennsylvania	182,593	2,906,015
Illinois	22,489	1,711,951
Indiana	20,563	1,350,428
Iowa	6,142	674,948
Minnesota	2,104	175,855
Michigan	3,626	749,113
Wisconsin	14,641	775,881
Ohio	65,749	2,339,502

An analysis of this table will show the immense disparity in the percentage of population employed in manufactures between the eastern and the western States, and that while in three manufacturing States of New England the number of males employed was equal to almost eight per cent. of the whole population, while New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania had nearly six per cent. of their population thus employed, Iowa had not one per cent., Illinois and Indiana less than one and a half per cent., and Ohio a fraction over two per cent.

Deny to the manufacturers of the East the protection which will maintain their labor as manufacturers, and they and the millions who are dependent on them for support cease to be consumers of what others raise, but they must become producers in the broad West in competition with those who now complain of an inadequate market for their present product. Will it help the farmer of Ohio, of Indiana, of Illinois, or of Iowa to increase the number of producers and diminish at the same time the number of consumers? The practical application of such a doctrine will produce desolation throughout that portion of our country which bore up under the burdens of the war without complaint, and which is ready to submit to any but unnecessary sacrifices for the good of the Republic.

I am not here as the advocate of the manufacturing interests of New England or New York, New Jersey or Pennsylvania, as a matter of local or sectional consideration. New England is rich and powerful. She is able to take care of her own interests, and I fear she is selfish enough to do it, no matter who may suffer. She has grown rich by protected industry, until her enormous wealth constitutes protection to her great manufactures, and perhaps suggests indifference to protective legislation. Her patriotism has uniformly, I believe, been colored by her supposed interest, and perhaps till human nature is modified and reconstructed, the same phase will be exhibited before the country.

I quarrel not with New England, unless she force the contest. I drew my first breath in the pure atmosphere of her mountains, and slept in childhood beneath the shadow of her pines. Her laughing rills, her rocks, and glens are photographed upon the recollections of my youth. I love her noble charities, her art, and her enterprise. Yet I speak not for her. I speak for labor, American labor, wherever within the limits of my country it requires or seeks protection.

I demand this now, because the time is now, and the place is here, when and where we must determine the policy of the Government in reference to the great subject of its finances and its productions.

A debt of more than three thousand millions will rest upon the industry of the country when all the liabilities incurred during the rebellion shall be aggregated and funded. That debt and its interest must be paid, without a murmur, to the last dime. It is sanctified by the cause for which it was created and by the purposes it accomplished. But it must be paid, not from invested capital, but from its income and from the profits of labor, and, so far as practicable, by indirect taxation imposed for the protection of labor as well as for revenue. It is doubtless necessary, under the exigencies of the day, to continue for the present all of the modes of raising revenue which have been adopted in order to insure the maintenance of the public credit. But the experience of civilized nations suggests the avoidance of direct taxation whenever practicable, and the supply of revenue by customs upon imports.

Mr. McCulloch, in his elaborate Descriptive and Statistical Account of the British Empire, (volume two, page 402,) in speaking of revenue and expenditure, says:

"Direct taxes on property have been the curse of every country into which they have been introduced. To evade them people that are not poor counterfeit poverty; some of the most powerful incentives to industry and economy are in consequence destroyed, at the same time that inferior stock, machinery, &c., are made use of." * * * "Though theoretically equal, a tax either on property or income, or both, is practically most unequal. We may get a pretty accurate notion of the income derived from land, houses, funded property, and mortgages, but all beyond this is mere guess-work. There are no means by which to ascertain the value of farming, capital stock in trade, the profits derived from them, or the incomes of professional men. No inquisition into the affairs of private individuals can ever discover these particulars, and we need not dwell upon the impolicy of any system of finance that sets the duty and the interest of contributors into opposition, and makes the profit by concealing or perverting the truth." * * * "Speaking generally, an income on property should not be introduced except under very peculiar circumstances, and should, if possible, be reserved for a dernier resort when the other or more legitimate sources of revenue may be insufficient, or when money must be had at all hazards."

A reference to the sources of revenue in England will show that she has constantly and successfully relied on customs as the principal means of filling her Treasury, and she has never yet adopted a system of duties which has not augmented her receipts.

While, therefore, I believe it would be unwise to dispense with our excise and income taxes at the present time, I believe that our duty consists in seeking a liberal revenue from imports, and that such imports should be so adjusted as to encourage our own industry, and thus increase our internal revenue from the profits or income of production.

Nature with munificent profusion has showered the elements of wealth over slope and mountain, valley and plain, from the shores of the Atlantic to the golden gates of the Pacific. All that our country now requires is peace, followed or accompanied by the developments of remunerated labor.

English statesmen long since based their claims to commercial supremacy on the coals and machinery of the kingdom, and on the control of the manufactures of cotton and of iron.

"Iron and coal, the sinews of manufacture," said Sir Robert Peel, "give us advantages over every rival in the great competition of industry. Our capital far exceeds that others can command. In ingenuity, in skill, in energy, we are inferior to none." "The large capitals of this country," said a commission reporting to Parliament in 1854, "are the great instruments of warfare against the competing capital of foreign countries, and are the most essential instruments now remaining by which our manufacturing supremacy can be maintained, the other elements, cheap labor, abundance of raw material, means of communication, and skilled labor being rapidly equalized."

What element of wealth has England that we have not? How many elements have we of which she is denied? Her coal-fields are rich and so are ours. Hers are limited, ours are inexhaustible. Tomlinson, in his Encyclopedia of Science in 1852, estimates the principal coal-fields in the United Kingdom available for working at about ten thousand square miles. The coal-fields of Iowa and Illinois alone exceed fifty thousand square miles, while Ohio, Kentucky, Missouri, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Tennessee, North Carolina, Michigan, Georgia, Alabama, Indiana, and Arkansas make a coal-field as great in area as all England. The vast beds of ores of iron located in every part of the country, and in association with the coal, far exceed in extent and richness the ores of England.

The two cardinal elements of power are ours; and beyond the iron, the coal, the gold, and silver regions of the West, the copper mines of the North, the lead of Illinois, Missouri, New Jersey, and other metalliferous formations show an extent of variety of raw material for the employment of labor with which England furnishes no comparison.

The cotton plant is ours; not imported, but the product of our fields. By the application of free labor, and under a system well organized the product of five million bales may be increased if need be to ten or twenty millions. Sugar, tobacco, rice, wheat, corn, rye, hemp, flax, hops, are the growth of our varied climate and soil.

Ho. OF REPS.

Protection of American Labor—Mr. Davis.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

The steam power which vitalizes every part of England, performs in her mines, her mills, her machine-shops, her foundries, upon her railways, the daily labor of six hundred million people, and gives support to the greatest mercantile marine upon the seas.

With a population of thirty millions, her exports exceed seven hundred millions in value, upon a gold basis, while ours were less than two hundred and fifty millions, with a population in excess of hers and on a depreciated currency.

Why, with every element for the maintenance of profitable labor, shall we submit to the fallacy of British free trade, that she may supply us with her manufactures, and pay us, not what we may demand, but what she may consent to give, for our agricultural productions?

Give us protected labor; give to manufactures and agriculture mutual protection by encouraging in every agricultural community where practicable the establishment of manufactures. Why not encourage manufactures by the side of producers?

The great city of Chicago, represented upon this floor by my distinguished friend, [Mr. WESTWORTH,] already alive to her own interests, has reared within her limits manufacturing establishments which would do honor to New England. I have no apprehension, sir, if every people of the West would imitate her example, and thus make a profitable division of labor between agriculture and manufactures at their own doors.

The interior of Iowa and of Illinois, before the days of railways, have seen the time when corn in the field was not worth the labor of the harvest, because no home market existed, and the cost of transportation to a distant market was prohibitory. I have heard the pioneers of Illinois state the fact that until the construction of the Galena, Chicago, and Union railroad from Chicago toward Elgin, wheat could not be taken to Chicago from a distance of fifty miles for its market value on arrival. I have watched the gradual extension of her railways across her plains to the Missouri, and her corn and wheat, her pork and her beef now find a market which is available; in other words, internal improvements have brought her nearer market. Suppose Dubuque should become another Providence, Des Moines a second Lowell, and Keokuk another Cincinnati, what would be the local effect upon the agriculture of the State? Does any man doubt it? There is no man of enterprise and wealth the resident of any town in this country who has not advocated the introduction of manufactures and machinery into his own town to enhance its value and importance, and every argument has been based upon the employment of labor which would furnish a market for neighboring production. This principle thus applied locally by all is just as true of the nation as of a community, especially of a nation whose facilities for intercourse are as great as those with which nature and art have favored our own people.

The manufactures of Pittsburg pass by unbroken water communication to St. Paul, St. Louis, to the Yellowstone, up the Arkansas, to New Orleans, to Nashville, to Chattanooga, to New York, and Quebec, while thirty-five thousand miles of railway, with crossing and interlacing lines, render every part of the country accessible to internal commerce. The Hudson, the Erie, and Champlain canals, and the great lake navigation, connect the valley of the Mississippi, and the great Northwest with the Atlantic. The railway lines which are even now surmounting the Sierra Nevada and the Rocky mountains will soon open a new outlet to the cereals of the West and vastly extend mining and manufacturing enterprise on the Pacific coast. Protection to labor is the watchword to American advancement. Its pathway hitherto has ever been bordered by the flowers of prosperity. Its abandonment has ever been the blight of our industry.

Pennsylvania has hitherto been the great iron State. In 1842 we enacted a tariff to protect the iron manufacture. At that time there were two hundred and thirteen furnaces of all kinds, which had been the growth of sixty years. In the four years to 1846 one hundred and three new furnaces started into life, involving an investment of more than $6,000,000, and the increased annual production of iron for the four years averaged 216,171 tons, or nearly one quarter of the whole production of pig iron in the United States in 1860.

Under the act of 1842 the taxes upon iron were specific, with the ad valorem sometimes in addition. They were on the following articles:

	Per ton.
Bars and bolts not rolled.....	$17
Bars and bolts rolled.....	25
Pig iron.....	9
Old scrap iron.....	10

By the tariff of 1846 the specific duties were changed on almost the entire iron list to thirty per cent. ad valorem at the port of foreign shipment, and the result was the almost universal prostration and bankruptcy of the iron manufactures of the country.

The fatal principle of ad valorem duties thus introduced gave the "inside track" to every foreign manufacturer having a partner or an agent in this country, and led as well to the perpetration of enormous frauds in the invoices of the exporters.

Nor were other efforts wanting to break down the American manufacturer. The complaint made to Parliament in 1854 of the low wages paid to British laborers was met by the report of a commission of inquiry with the declaration that—

"The laboring classes generally in the manufacturing districts, and especially in the iron and coal districts, are very little aware of the extent to which they are often indebted for their being employed at all to the immense losses which their employers voluntarily incur in bad times in order to destroy foreign competition, and to gain and keep possession of foreign markets."

Sir, from 1846 to 1861 our domestic industry did not receive the protection which was due to its importance or its necessities; and even if it was, the protection received was due to the depreciation of our currency from a gold basis, and to the enormous Government demand for our productions rather than to legislative interposition.

The return of peace and the suspension of increasing loans by the Government tend to bring the gold and the currency near to the same value, and our manufacturers are now struggling against the evils of inadequate protection. With a country whose resources for agricultural and mineral productions are unequaled on the globe; in whose coal-fields, yet scarcely explored, slumbers the motive power necessary to propel the machinery which a population as dense over the whole realm as that which now crowds every square mile of the British isles may require; with the energy, the inventive genius, and the industry essential to the erection, the extension, and the preservation of empire, we need but wisdom in the administration of our finances, in the development of nature's bounties, and in the measures designed to restore harmony and union, to render the American Republic the proudest boast of civilization. The internal revenues on which we so largely rely to meet the current expenses of the Government, and from which the last year we received $211,129,529 17, and from which it was anticipated that the receipts for 1866 would be $272,000,000, cannot be maintained unless our manufactures on which they are largely dependent shall be preserved in their efficiency. Three fourths of all this internal revenue are derived directly or indirectly from manufactures. To-day your rolling-mills, your foundries, your machine-shops, your factories, are either closed or working at a loss to the proprietors. Your collieries are suspended, and thousands of unemployed laborers await the action of Congress, which is lamentably delayed till the very close of your session. Where is your revenue if your manufactures are stricken down? Moreover, we must bear in mind how largely the amount of incomes will be reduced by our return toward a specie basis, while the public debt must be paid at its face, the creditor, and not the Government, deriving the benefit of its enhanced value.

And here I desire to submit a table showing the total internal revenue, and internal revenue from manufactures in the years 1863, 1864, and 1865, and the percentage as compared with the revenue from September 1, 1862, when the act took effect, to June 30, 1863, being the end of the fiscal year, is, for ten months, only—

	Total revenue.	Manufactures.	Per cent.
1863.....	$41,008,191 93	$24,403,091	59.71
1864.....	116,850,672 44	75,403,386	64.53
1865.....	211,129,529 17	104,156,911	49.33

Showing that even in the last year the direct income from manufactures was 49.33 per cent. of total receipts, irrespective of the income tax or the profits of manufactures or of the income from freight, travel, insurance, and other sources growing out of the business of manufacturing.

Sir, the internal revenue on cotton fabrics in 1865 was $7,331,148; woolen fabrics yielded $7,947,094; iron manufactures $8,494,989; railroad freights $5,917,298. But it is certain that in the absence of protection, and increased protection, these manufactures and the income directly and indirectly dependent upon them cannot be maintained, and we shall find ourselves in America supporting by our policy the free-trade theory of England, which means subservience to her interests, and forgetfulness of our own.

Mr. Speaker, I desire to see the labor of America supported on no system which defrauds the laborer of the means of providing for the education of his children, that they may take their places of responsibility in the care of the Republic. I am unwilling to witness its degradation to the level of those European systems which support life only to make it a term of endurance. I speak in no spirit of hostility to England. I will admire whatever in her is good and noble. I will sympathize with her in every effort to elevate the standard of her people. Not even the envy of her nobility, nor the ignorant hatred of her lower classes toward us in our struggle to throw off the cursed system of human servitude which her cupidity fastened upon our soil, nor her masterly inactivity in the enforcement of her laws of neutrality shall make me forgetful of her Burke and Chatham; of Wilberforce; of Bright, and of Cobden; nor will I be unmindful of the noble spirit of forbearance which her workers in cotton manifested under the serious embarrassments arising from the embargo upon our great southern staple. I seek not, as did old England, prohibition upon exports; I seek not prohibition upon imports; but I would, were it in my power, establish, as a matter of duty, such a system as should maintain our own credit, protect our own industry, and invite to a country where land is cheap and where labor is remunerative the surplus population which England can spare, and for which we can provide.

I would build in all the wasted South, upon the streams where power now sports with solitude, the factories in which free labor shall work out the fortunes of freemen. I would enslave, not man but nature; not human bones and muscle, but the water-fall and the giant power of the steam-engine to redeem southern fields from the desolations of war and restore to a misguided people the freedom that they spurned and the prosperity which they destroyed. I would fill up the prairies with a new and increasing population, that a land lying waste for long generations may contribute by its fertility to the advancement of happiness.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Constitutional Amendment—Mr. Cullom.

HO. OF REPS.

I would invite industry and skill to the rich mines and ores which require but labor to convert them into the life-blood of commerce; and then as decade after decade, rolling away, should bear the rebellion, its crimes, and its retribution further and still further to the past, I should feel an abiding confidence that the burdens that now oppress thirty millions would be unfelt by a hundred million of true and loyal people holding peaceful, undivided, and undisputed power from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Constitutional Amendment.

SPEECH OF HON. S. M. CULLOM,

OF ILLINOIS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

June 16, 1866.

[The SPEAKER stated there were several gentlemen who wished to speak, but were precluded by the closing of the debate on the state of the Union, and if there were no objection they could hand their speeches to the reporters to be printed in the Globe. There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.]

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. Speaker, a skillful general knows the position, strength, and courage of his own men, as also the position, numbers, and designs of the enemy. He studies the situation and is seldom deceived either by his own forces or those with whom he is contending. The Union party of this country should study well its position upon the great political questions of the day as well as the position of those who have opposed it ever since the beginning of our struggle for national existence. We should see to it that our positions are defensible, whether our Union forces are established upon the solid foundations chosen by our fathers, and whether the spirit and courage of the loyal people, are a sure guarantee of victory. These are not ordinary times; ages seem almost crowded into a day, and we are hurried along on the full tide of events scarcely knowing where we are or whither we are going. Then, sir, in the language of the great Webster, let us refer to the point from which we departed, that we may at least be able to conjecture where we now are. As the north star is the sure guide to the weary traveler as he passes over the unknown desert in the darkness of night, so there is one principle in our Government which, if followed and adhered to by the people, will lead us through the present darkness which hangs over the country like a thick cloud, and on to peace, prosperity, and permanency as a nation. That principle runs all through our Government, and forms the very fulcrum of its existence. It is peculiar to America and singles her out from all other nations, and places her far above them all in a proper estimation of the value of governments for men. That principle should be made the touchstone by which all the great questions now agitating the country and involving the rights of men should be tested, and by it we as legislators may determine whether in our disposition of these questions, we are moving backward or forward.

When our fathers proclaimed in the language of the Declaration of Independence that they held these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and that to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, they spoke to the world the thrilling notes of truth which set the American Republic high above all other Governments in the shining galaxy of nations, kindled a new flame of liberty in the hearts of the American people, and made the monarchies and despotisms of the Old World from that moment more and more insecure. That principle forms the very life of this nation; smother it out and America dies—dies disgraced. As the man once honest, sober, a Christian, turns from the habits which marked him as the man of God, and in the pool of debauchery, without friends to mourn him, dies, so this Republic, when she smothers out that life-principle of her distinctive organization, will die unhonored and unsung. The framers of the Constitution recognized it as one of the paramount objects of government. Union, justice, domestic tranquillity, the general welfare, the securement of the blessings of liberty to themselves and their posterity, were the great objects for which they ordained and established the Constitution of the United States. To secure the blessings of liberty, the Declaration of Independence was written and proclaimed, the long and severe struggle of the Revolution endured, and the Constitution framed and ratified by our fathers.

Sir, when that great and good man who was said to be "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen," was by resolution of Congress in 1775 made commander-in-chief of the armies, by the terms of the resolution, it was for the defense of American liberty. Union and liberty in the early days of this Republic were together mingled and interwoven in the hearts of the people, and from those living principles, warming and elevating the hearts of the early patriots of this land, grew the great prosperity and mighty power of this country.

Mr. Speaker, since the organization of this Government we have had some agitation and excitement as the result of the presence of elements antagonistic to that vital principle of liberty. Although for many years slavery remained in the Government as a local institution, undisturbed, yet its existence was in direct antagonism to the spirit and life of the vital principle of the Government. While that institution did not seek to reach out and spread its poisonous wings over the whole land and make slavery national and freedom sectional, wicked and horrid and barbarous as the institution was in the estimation of the millions of freemen, as well as the millions of downtrodden slaves, yet it was permitted to exist. But, sir, its votaries were not content that it should remain in the States where it had long existed, and finally the cry was that "as the star of empire took its way" to the West, so must slavery follow, and plant its curse upon the virgin soil of the new Territories of the nation. The free people, whose moral sense had long been insulted by the hideous forms of slavery and by its bold determination to crush out the vital principle of the Government, finally dared to assert their position, that freedom should be national, and that if slavery existed at all it should be sectional, and that it should not spread over territory then free, if by any constitutional power or means they could prevent it.

The majority of the free people of the Government were against its encroachments upon their rights as freemen, and when the voice of the people was heard, and in a constitutional mode it spoke against the institution of slavery, war came upon the country like a sweeping tornado, and for four years the nation trembled in the balance as tyranny, oppression, and all the wickedness of accumulating ages combined together, and with a desperation unparalleled were hurled against the Government struggling to maintain its integrity and the vital principle of its existence. Sir, as the sound of war rolled over the mountains and up the valleys of the North the fire of liberty and patriotism rekindled in the hearts of the people, and from that hour slavery was doomed to speedy destruction. That element which had become an eating canker upon the body-politic was to be removed, together with the excitement it had caused. The war continued; slavery was destroyed; the rebellion finally crushed, and we are at work changing and modifying the laws and Constitution to more perfectly suit the new order of things.

Slavery, sir, was the cause of the rebellion; slavery has been the great disturber of the peace and harmony of our people from the beginning; slavery was a great moral and political evil; the moral sense of the people was against it; the spirit of the Government was against it; the spirit of the age was against it; the civilization of all Christendom was against it; it has now passed away, and may not the American people well rejoice? Nations, like men, cannot long prosper and cherish evil. They, like men, must deal justly if they would long succeed.

But, sir, the people who were once slaves are now free. It has become the duty of the Government to give them civil rights, to throw around them protection, to shield them, dependent as they are, just emerged from the prison of bondage, from the impositions of wicked men. This has in a measure been done. We have proposed amendments to the Constitution, which are as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, (two thirds of both Houses concurring.) That the following article be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which when ratified by three fourths of said Legislatures shall be valid as part of the Constitution, namely:

ARTICLE —.

SECTION 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the States wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

SEC. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons, excluding Indians not taxed. But whenever the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President, Representatives in Congress, executive and judicial officers, or members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

SEC. 3. That no person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as a judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two thirds of each House remove such disability.

SEC. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave, but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void.

SEC. 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this section.

By these amendments, which have gone to the people or the States for ratification, we provide that all persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to our jurisdiction shall be citizens of the United States and of the several States; that no State shall abridge the privileges and immunities of citizens, nor deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deprive any person the equal protection of the laws. By these amendments we propose to settle the basis of representation and prevent the late rebel States from having an increased representation in the Halls of Congress when those States are admitted to the right of representation, as a direct result of their rebellion against the country.

HO. OF REPS.

Constitutional Amendment—Mr. Cullom.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

We are in favor of giving to the several States representation based upon the whole number of persons, excluding Indians not taxed; provided, that when the right to vote is denied to any male inhabitants of the age of twenty-one, and citizens, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, then the basis of representation shall be reduced in proportion as the number so denied bears to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years old in the State. Is this section of the amendment just and right? Are the people of the loyal States ready to fold their arms and admit these southern States again to representation, and say this is no time to amend the Constitution because the people have not recovered from the excitement of the war, while the immediate result of the rebellion is to give them much more power in the Government than they before enjoyed?

Sir, in the beginning of the war we often heard the boastings of these southern men that one southern man was equal to five men in the North. Unless this amendment, which we have sent to the States, shall be ratified and become a part of the Constitution, it may truthfully be said that one southern vote is equal to two of the North. I am against such unequal representation. If the South should lose nothing in representation by her rebellion, I surely do not desire her to gain. But, sir, if the southern States do not desire to be weakened in their representation in the councils of the nation, they have the means of giving themselves strength. South Carolina, with a population composed largely more than half of black persons, who are given no voice in the Government, should not be permitted to take her place again in the sisterhood, covered all over as she is with secession, rebellion, and crime against the country, with additional members of Congress and presidential electors, as the reward for the rebellion for which she is prominently responsible, and which was inaugurated by South Carolina batteries firing upon the starving garrison at Sumter.

But, sir, there are other interesting sections in the amendment passed by this Congress. The next section in the series provides that no person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress or presidential elector, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States or any State, who, having previously taken the oath, as a member of Congress, officer of the United States, member of the Legislature of any State, or as a judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection and rebellion against the same, or given the enemies of the Government any aid or comfort. Is this not a just and righteous provision? Can it be that there are any loyal people in this country, now that we are passing out of the most terrible struggle the world ever saw, who can oppose such an amendment? The men who rebelled against the Government and undertook to overthrow it are all guilty of treason. By the laws of the country, under the Constitution, a man who commits such a crime is liable to the punishment of death. His liberty, his property, and his life are all at the mercy of the Government. Yet the nation passes over all this, calls not upon the officers of the law to visit its penalty upon them, except, perhaps, in a few cases, but says to all that great army of rebels and all those behind them aiding their cause in their efforts to destroy the country, "We will exercise toward you a more than Christian charity and will remit you to all your original rights, unless before your rebellion you enjoyed the special favors of the nation."

Sir, after some effort and much reflection we have at last become hard-hearted and cruel enough to say in this amendment to Davis and Lee and Mason and Slidell and Harris and Hampton and Beauregard and Johnston and Pillow and Breckinridge and Toombs and Stephens and a few more such men who turned their backs upon the Government which had during all their lives lavished favors upon them, and upon which they had lived and grown and fattened, that they could not hereafter hold any office, Federal or State. We have said this, it is true, and for it we are said to be illiberal. Sir, it is a degree of magnanimity unequaled in all time in any civilized country on the globe. What cruelty these radicals are perpetrating upon the devoted heads of these leaders of the rebellion. These men, most of whom became gray with age, feeding at the Government crib, and many of whom should have been caught and tried, convicted and hung, for their treason before they left these Halls and other high positions of national trust and honor at the beginning of the rebellion. Cruel and ungenerous is the radical party toward such men as these. Sir, if such treatment of such men be cruelty, then we are cruel. But, sir, as I hear these sickly pleas in behalf of these leaders of the rebellion by men in our own country, I almost wonder that England and France, those virtuous allies of the rebels, have not again raised their voices against such ungenerous treatment of the people whom they followed with such tender affection all through the war. These beloved friends of theirs, whose coffers were replenished by British gold, whose arms were made in British shops, and whose ships were built in British dock-yards.

Sir, I rather guess that these neighbors, these friendly neighbors of ours, are a little too busy now to give their attention to such matters so far from home. I have heard it said that this is a world of checks and balances. I believe it, and it is well that it is. A short time ago England was rejoicing as she thought she read the history of the destruction of free government in the struggles through which we as a nation were passing. Quickly did she manifest an anxiety to recognize our domestic enemies as belligerents and as a separate nation, and to announce to the world that the American Republic, founded as it was and is upon the consent of the people, was a failure. With an air of supercilious triumph she trampled upon our rights, aided indirectly, if not directly, our enemies, encouraged them to continue the struggle, held out to them promises of recognition, demanded from us the possession of prominent rebels captured on the sea, and did everything she dared to do to embarrass us, burdened and oppressed and struggling as we were to maintain our national existence and freedom—she desired and expected to see us go down among the wreck of nations. But, sir, we passed through the storm, and now as the cloud of war thickens and gathers over Europe, and as America stands erect, having come out of the contest with the stars and stripes waving over the whole land, England may well exclaim, as she looks back upon the past, oh, what a mistake we made in not acting the part of an honorable nation toward the young giant of the western world in her master struggle against oppression. And, sir, while England looks about her to catch the first glimpse of the war clouds as they rise in the political horizon, suddenly the silence is broken by the announcement in her northern British possessions that the Fenians are coming, and their cry is, Liberty for Ireland, or death to the oppressors of her downtrodden sons!

Sir, oppression finds its enemies as well as votaries all over the world, and recently the people of Canada, that place where treason nestled and where the schemes of murder and arson to destroy our rulers and burn our cities were concocted, were startled from their homes to defend themselves for the wrongs inflicted by their Government upon the sons of the Emerald Isle in years gone by—checks and balances. France, too, ruled by Napoleon III, with an eye always lusting for power, when the days of our Republic were almost dark as the night, discovers that in that hour it was her duty to collect from our little sister republic of Mexico a claim, old, stale, imaginary, and unadjusted as it was, and with that deceitful pretense sends her imperial troops and lands them upon our southern border, with a pitiless, penniless, and bigoted adventurer, with the regalia of a despot, at their head. Money and debts were not the object of that expedition. Napoleon, like England, believed he saw our republic tottering to the fall, and while, as he supposed, we went down, an empire should be established upon our ruins. That empire is not yet established. War is upon the people in Europe. The American struggle is ended, and Napoleon proclaims that he will very soon withdraw his troops, and trembles lest they get kicked out before he can decently ship them away.

But to return again to the consideration of the proposed amendments. I believe them to be eminently fair and just and subject only to the objection that they are too liberal to the offenders against the country. The last section of the amendment declares the Federal debt of the United States authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing the rebellion, inviolate, and prohibits either the nation or the States from the payment either of any debt or obligation incurred in aid of the rebellion or any claim for emancipated slaves. The trade and commerce and business of the country demand this at our hands; our financial stability requires it; our credit requires it; and justice to the men of labor and toil who fought the battles of the country and conquered the rebellion demand such guarantees as that the nation may not in the future be borne down by the load of rebel debts which might be placed upon them unless they are cut off by the Constitution of the country. I have given and shall continue to give these proposed amendments my support; they will soon, I trust, be ratified by a sufficient number of States and become a part of the great Magna Charta of the land. They are preliminary to the full restoration of the rebellious States to their political power in the nation.

But we are told that those States will not accept such amendments as a condition precedent to their restoration to their practical relations with the Government; whether this be true I am unable to say, but, sir, viewing them in the light of their own interest, which I believe they now begin to see, I think they will accept them as a just, liberal, and generous offer founded on justice and humanity, and not in malice and revenge. But we hear it said that this is not the time to amend the Constitution, while a part of the country remains unrepresented. Sir, all that part of the country is represented whose people helped to save it in the late struggle. Whose business is it to reconstruct this country? Who should be consulted in regard to our duty here? Shall the men who struggled to destroy the temple of liberty be invited to dictate the manner in which its battered walls shall be repaired? Or shall the patriotic men who gathered around that temple and drove back the enemies of liberty repair and beautify the structure in their own time and way, and, if they so desire, place a new cap-stone thereon, written upon its face the words akin to the Declaration of Independence—"the equal rights of all men before the law, without regard to religion, race, or color."

Sir, the situation is improving; the Government is being established upon an enduring basis, and the hopes of the future are brightening as the star of justice rises above the political horizon. We are moving forward, and the distinctive principle of our Government stands out bolder and bolder every day as a terror to tyrants and oppression. America shall be in fact what it has been in name, free and independent; the home of the brave and the land of the free. A nation to which the oppressed of all countries may come and find a free home for themselves and their children, and become the peers of all the rest. Here the German, whose patriotic heart yearns for the largest liberty; the Irishman, who has long struggled against the iron heel of oppression; the oppressed of all nations, may come and contest with an "equal chance" the proudest American, to wealth, position, and the highest honors a mighty people can bestow.

39TH CONG...1ST SESS.

Reconstruction Amendment, &amp;c.—Mr. Baker.

HO. OF REPS.

But, Mr. Speaker, other nations are being stirred to their very center by the mighty moving of the people for equal rights. The rulers of England and France and Austria and Prussia are to-day watching the pulse of the people, and as it beats stronger and stronger for equal rights, the thrones of monarchs and despots become more unstable, and in the interest of humanity I say, God hasten their fall! The world moves, and may we not hope that America will place herself first in the line, and in her grand march to wealth and power may the oppressed of all nations gather around her standard, and push on the army of liberty until all the enemies of justice are subdued by the convincing power and logic of truth and right.

But, Mr. Speaker, where are our enemies in this contest? Sir, they have not yet left the field. Beaten as they have been ever since the great struggle has been going on, yet they are still vigilant and hopeful of final success—the two wings of that great political army, the southern wing, under the command of Davis, and the northern wing, under the command of Vallandigham, are coming closer together, and in the coming election these two great political armies, one once beaten by the sword, and the other often beaten by the ballot, are to be thrown against the great political army of the Union in the hope that victory may yet perch upon their banners. There will be, there can be, as there has not been for the last four years, but two great parties in this country. Men may talk, devise schemes, make platforms, call conventions under whatever name they please, and organize third parties, but the people will sweep them out of the way, and believing that they are in the midst of that same struggle for national existence and the perpetuity of free institutions, they will move forward in the support of the men and measures who will protect them from the power of rebels and the reestablishment of oppression.

This Government is either to remain in the hands of the people whose views are reflected by the votes and speeches of the majority in this Congress, or it is to be handed over to the people whose sentiments and political views are reflected by Vallandigham, Seymour, Stephens, and Lee. The same doubting, undecided disposition existed in the minds of many good men during the war that exists now. As the storms of opposition came upon the Union party then from all quarters of the country, faint-hearted men almost staggered in their faith, and sometimes were ready to advise a more amiable and tender policy on the part of the Government toward the rebels and on the question of slavery; but the Government, in the hands of the Union party, kept right on, neither turning to the right nor left, until finally the rebellion collapsed and the corner-stone of its temple was removed. So let the Union party continue to keep right on, neither turning the one way or the other, but moving forward in the right, and it will not be weakened by faint-hearted men nor beaten by all its foes combined, and will soon have accomplished the great object of its mission, the salvation of the Republic from all its domestic enemies and its establishment upon the foundations of justice, which shall guaranty its perpetuity for ages yet to come.

Reconstruction Amendment, and Future Civil Policy of the Country.

SPEECH OF HON. JEHU BAKER,

OF ILLINOIS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

July 9, 1866.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Speaker, when I look over this great land and think how immense is its surface; when I consider its rivers, its mountains, its lakes, its valleys and its plains, all lying various and broad beneath a brighter sky than overhangs the States of Europe, I am filled with admiration of the beautiful and grand material home which God has provided for civilization in this western world.

When I reflect upon the prodigious material work which man has already performed in this new scene; when I recall that within little more than two centuries he has hewn down the forests, and drained the swamps, and tunneled the mountains of a continent; when I look at his great cities, almost equal to Paris, London, or ancient Rome, and soon to be greater than these; when I contemplate his ships going and coming over every sea upon the planet; when I consider the dock-yards of his commercial emporiums, burdened with a commerce that dwarfs the old fame of Arad and Tyre and Sidon; his fleets of deep-freighted steamers swimming his broad rivers and beautiful lakes; his fire-breathing steam cars, numerous as an army, and running with their long trains swift as the wind to and from every point of the compass; the lightning messenger of his thoughts, by which deep answers unto deep, and the eastern speaks to the western ocean; his immense agriculture, fructifying with teeming abundance unbroken thousands of miles of the most beautiful country the sun shines on from heaven; when I consider these things, my admiration mounts yet higher, and my love of country grows to a still deeper passion.

But, when I put aside all this natural beauty and magnificence; when I close the eye of sense to all this grand, visible performance, wrought out in so short a time by the cunning hand of our countrymen, and, with the eye of the mind look in upon the great soul of the nation, and consider what heroism, what intelligence, what high purpose is there—higher than all merely selfish and material ends—then it is that my love of country is profoundest; for then it is that I realize the full measure of its greatness.

With all their limitations and their vices, with all their still unenlightened ignorance and unconquered prejudices, in very truth the American people are more distinctively a people, self-conscious, self-thinking, self-acting, and aspiring to higher and better realizations, than is to be seen elsewhere on earth to-day, or found recorded upon any the brightest page of human history. I recur to this fact not in any spirit of vain boasting, but in humble thankfulness to God that He has set in this fair heritage a people with such antecedents and advantages, that it is theirs to lead the nations in their weary battle-journey toward the humanities which spring out of the true democratic idea.

Upon these great qualities of the popular masses the American statesman must ever rely in his contests with the American demagogue. And in every case of urgent and positive necessity they can be relied upon with implicit confidence. They have saved the country from two mighty perils, and they will save it from a third. When slavery went about overthrowing the great landmarks of liberty, and aspired to establish an absolute rule over the nation in the civil sphere, the people hurled it from power by the ballot. When next it took the sword to sever the Republic in half, the people crushed it upon the battle-field and wiped it from existence. And now, after the great struggle of arms is over, after more than half a million of patriot lives have perished in the conflict, the people will see to it that everything shall not be left at loose ends—unguarded, insecure, and liable to relapse into another public calamity—but that the basis of pacification shall involve proper and just securities for the future peace and welfare of the country.

When the first peril came, the demagogue advised the people to bow their necks and wear the yoke of the slaveholder. The people spurned the demagogue. When the second peril came, the demagogue advised the people to let the nation perish in peace, rather than knock the rogues on the head who were seeking its life. Again the people spurned the demagogue. And now that the third peril is upon us, the demagogue, ever true to his unworthy instincts, is trying to persuade the people that their blood is as cheap as the soft earth that drank it, and that they should take to themselves no reliable guarantees that it has not been poured out in vain! And once more, so sure as God reigns and reason has not forsaken this noble people, they will spurn the demagogue!

After long, earnest, and laborious consideration, this Congress, by very great majorities in both Houses, has agreed upon a fundamental basis for the pacification and future security of the Republic. As it was plainly necessary that the nation, and not its late enemies, should take into its own hands the keeping of its own securities, it clearly resulted that the great terms of the arrangement should go into the Constitution of the country. Accordingly, the plan presented consists of a proposed amendment of the Constitution, made up of five sections.

This amendment I regard as one of immense value. Though it may not make our Constitution ideally perfect, or embrace all that many desired, yet it is full of strong, practical, and most valuable provisions; valuable for the safety of the Republic, and valuable for the security and future growth of liberty. On the whole, I regard it as a very fair expression of the average sense and average culture of the great popular mind of the country.

And I will say here, that as I apprehend it, the growth of institutions and liberties in any country is and must be but the forward movement of this average sense and culture. In the development of its civilization, the whole of a national society, and especially of a democratic society, must be looked at as one individual organism, impelled by one aggregate life force; from which it results that the social and institutional progress of the community will conform itself, not to the highest thought and aspiration in the State, nor yet to the lowest, but, as I have said, to the general average of the whole mass.

This being one of the laws, higher than any of human enactment, which governs the progress of nations and the growth of civilization, every truly wise thinker, freighted though his mind may be with darling conceptions which he longs to see completely realized, will accept it as a providential arrangement, content himself with adding one additional stone to the edifice of ages, and thus contrive to keep his soul in peace. The coral insect that is building a new continent in the western sea works wiser than it knows, because its puny efforts are guided by an infinite intelligence. Man too, with all his intellect, works to ends other and higher than he perceives, because the order, consistence and upshot of his effort is fashioned, not by him, but by that same infinite intelligence which is composing human history, age after age, even as a poet composes a drama—act after act, scene after scene.

If in the working out of the grand finale of human life on the earth, whatever that may be, progress seems slow, and the aspiring heart sinks with sadness, we may remember with the great Christian father, that God is patient, because He has all eternity to work in; and we may gather some cheer from the reflection, that though civilization in all lands is still blundering in its alphabet, yet the realized fact of to-day is higher than the most famous ideal embodiments of the past; for we have here in our own country an actual subsisting polity incomparably superior as a whole to anything we read of in the Republic of Plato, the New Atlantis of Bacon, the Oceana of Harrington, or the Utopia of More. In view of this great law, which slowly evolves, step by step, the progress of human society, as of universal physical nature, we may learn to chasten our impatience without abating our zeal, and to accept thankfully for the time the best measure of good we are able to attain. If liberty will not grow in advance of culture, if in politics as in hydraulics the stream will not flow above the fountain head, it is no fault of ours, nor of God's either. Deep down at the bottom of the being of things, further down than finite intelligence may ever be able to penetrate, I make no question there is a complete moral justification of that wonderful arrangement, by which the individual, the social, the moral, the political, and religious life of mankind must pass by gradual advances, and through suffering, labor, and patient endurance, into the higher goods of liberty and virtue. If it seem that the wine-press of affliction we have trod during these late bloody years should yield more perfect immediate results, we may doubt whether our national culture has been equal to our national affliction, and we may know that the blood of the martyrs of humanity, like all other seed, does not instantly spring from the ground and flower forth into the full fruition of human uses. Now, and in the future, the utmost return will be made for the late prodigious heroism and suffering of the nation.

Most encouraging is that profound change for the better which has already taken place in our public life and public thought. The popular mind now perceives, if not perfectly, yet in shadowy outline, that there is a higher law than any of human devise, older than cities and empires, and to the requirements of which every nation ought to conform its institutions and its laws, just as the mason builds his wall by the plummet line, or as the husbandman observes the course of the seasons in his tillage. Here is the foundation of that party of Progress to which belongs the future of our country. When I attentively contemplate our fair and stalwart young Republic, her foot upon the broken lash and manacle, her garments red with the precious blood of her slain children, I detect upon her beautiful countenance a greater depth of thought, a more humane love, a higher purpose and wiser look than was ever seen there before. Like Magdalene, she has flung from her the gross filthiness of her pollutions, and lifted her heart in strong resolve to the things of a purer and greater life. If yet she has not entered completely into that higher life, if yet the new habit has not fully conquered the old, still, the great thoughts that quicken her intellect, the noble aspirations that inspire her heart, are prophetic of the peerless beauty and glory and rightness which shall crown her coming life.

Meantime, content with the possibilities of the present, nothing doubting the better realizations of the future, let us briefly analyze this Reconstruction Amendment which we have tendered to the States as a practical basis for the restored political order of the Union.

Indeed, comment upon the several sections which compose this amendment may well be brief; for there are some propositions, the justice and propriety of which are so obvious in their simple statement, that they cannot be much helped by any amount of argument or illustration.

The first section of the amendment is as follows:

"SEC. 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

This section I regard as more valuable for clearing away bad interpretations and bad uses of the Constitution as it is than for any positive grant of new power which it contains. How admirable, how plainly just, are the several provisions of it!

"All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside."

Who can object to this? Persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to its jurisdiction, subject to taxation, to military service, to all the burdens of society, both State and national, ought, upon every principle of manly justice, to receive in turn from society that protection which is involved in the status of citizenship. To compel a man to submit to your jurisdiction in all things, to pay your taxes, and fight your battles, and then withhold from him this reasonable measure of reciprocal protection is, to say the least, and to call it by no harder name, a political villainy which every citizen of a democratic country ought to be ashamed of. Again:

"No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

What business is it of any State to do the things here forbidden? to rob the American citizen of rights thrown around him by the supreme law of the land? When we remember to what an extent this has been done in the past, we can appreciate the need of putting a stop to it in the future. Again:

"Nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

How clearly right and necessary to liberty is this! The Constitution already declares generally that no person shall "be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." This declares particularly that no State shall do it—a wholesome and needed check upon the great abuse of liberty which several of the States have practiced, and which they manifest too much purpose to continue. The final clause of the section, providing that no State shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws, is so obviously right, that one would imagine nobody could be found so hard-hearted and cruel as not to recognize its simple justice. Is it not a disgrace to a free country that the poor and the weak members of society should be denied equal justice and equal protection at the hands of the law? Who can look straight at the fact till he realizes its full meaning and its full meanness without dropping his eyes and hanging his head in shame? This whole section is sound in all its parts and in every particular. It appeals irresistibly to the democratic instinct of the people, and it will be a jewel of beauty when placed in the Constitution of the country.

The second section is in these words:

"SEC. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State."

The substantial, practical meaning of which is, that those States which disfranchise their colored population shall have them struck out of their basis of representation in Congress, lessening thereby their number of Representatives, and, by consequence, lessening to the same extent their quotas of electors for President and Vice President. Taking for a basis the census of 1860, and the present law regulating the number of Representatives, the exact state of the case is as follows: the number of slaves was three million nine hundred and fifty thousand; the legal quota for a Representative in Congress is one hundred and twenty-seven thousand; from which it results that the unvoting, manumitted slave population, as matters now stand, would yield thirty-one members of Congress and thirty-one electors of President and Vice President. In addition to this, the curiously absurd feature of the case is to be observed, that in consequence of the abolition of slavery, the two fifths of the slaves who were excluded, would now be included in the basis of representation—thus actually adding not less than eleven Representatives and presidential electors to the strength of the late slaveholding States: that is, before the rebellion there were twenty, now there would be thirty-one Representatives and electors, resting upon no better foundation than the disfranchised colored people of the South. That a power so great as this—great enough in all doubtful cases to determine the destiny of the Republic by electing its President and controlling the popular branch of its Legislature—that such an odious, aristocratic power, based on not one solitary vote among the people, and controlled too, by those States which have deluged the country in blood in order to overthrow the Republic; that such a power, I say, so grossly unjust, so disgraceful to free institutions, and so dangerous to the country, should be permitted to continue in the system as a means of strengthening the hands of the late enemies of the Republic, is a thing too absurd, too out of joint with all the logic, justice, and patriotism of the case, to be conceived of as possible on any other hypothesis than that the loyal people of the country shall become stricken with judicial blindness.

It is idle to say the defeated insurgents are impoverished and weak. They have an ally in the North whose name is legion. The ex-cereb of the South and the copperhead Democrat of the North will rally under one banner, gather inspiration from one impulse, and strain every nerve to get control of the Government. In view of all that is past, the sentiment is higher than mere party, which prompts me to say that the ascendancy of this coalition would be dangerous to the Republic. Upon all accounts and by every just means such a public calamity ought to be prevented. Now, the eminent merit of this second section is, that while it will serve the practical purpose of greatly narrowing the power of the disloyal and dangerous element of the country, it is palpably just in itself, and at the same time plainly tends to a still higher justice. Who will be impudent enough to say, that if a State withholds suffrage from a large portion of her people, they ought nevertheless, in point of very right, to be numbered in her basis of representation? No just-minded man can say it. And who does not perceive that when such disfranchised persons are stricken from the count, the State is placed under an inducement of interest to enlarge her political power by elevating her political justice? This section of the amendment, in view of all the circumstances of the country, is, in my judgment, a most wise, righteous, and necessary measure.

The following is the third section of the amendment:

"SEC. 3. No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States or under any State, who having previously taken an oath as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two thirds of each House, remove such disability."

Small room for comment here. It would be unfit, unjust, and indecent in the last degree, to allow these classes of ringleaders in treason to exercise any official control over the country. Members of Congress, graduates of West Point, gratuitously educated and nurtured by the nation, officers of the United States generally, Governors, State judges, and State legislators, who having sworn to support the Constitution, did then break their pledged faith and urge on the recent infernal rebellion against the life of the Republic, are excluded from office, unless Congress shall by a vote of two thirds of each House remove the disability. Here is mild rigor and humane leniency; rigor enough to make treason odious—that once favorite idea of the President; rigor enough to teach the value of an oath, and the necessity of official patriotism in all our borders; leniency enough to relax the rule, if by future repentance and good conduct, particular persons or classes may appear to merit such indulgence. The moral sense of the country surely demands that some punishment should be visited upon so great a public crime as the late rebellion; the safety of the country surely demands that its offices should not be filled by the prime movers of the rebellion; and thus public justice and public safety lend their united sanction to the measure under review.

I proceed to the fourth section of the amendment:

"SEC. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void."

Beyond all question this is a vitally necessary measure; the happiness and safety of the people demand that the great material interests it provides for should be made perfectly secure. That these interests are perfectly secure without it, it is idle to pretend. That without such a check, many if not all the late rebel States will fasten their respective rebel debts on their people, is morally certain; that the policy of these same States will be to obtain some compensation for slaves manumitted by force and against their will, is equally certain; that another part of their policy will be to deny the justice of being taxed to pay the war debt of the nation and the pensions of Union soldiers, while their own war debt is repudiated and their own soldiers pensionless, is likewise certain; that, failing to get recognition of their own debt and pensions for their own soldiers, and pay for their manumitted slaves, they will do all they can to unsettle the national debt, and to rob the Union soldier of his pension, is none the less certain. The nature of man and the interests and passions by which he is actuated make these conclusions exceedingly probable. When we add to this the powerful alliance the late rebel States will have in the North, and think of the corrupting power of an enormous monetary interest struggling for recognition, these considerations, when summed up and taken as a whole, make it perfectly apparent that the safety and well-being of the country loudly demand the adoption of this security.

The following is the fifth and last clause of the amendment:

"SEC. 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article."

This section was of course necessary in order to carry the proposed article into practical effect.

Now, when we look at this amendment in the aggregate, and reflect how just and reasonable are its several provisions; when we consider the great liberties which are better secured by the first section—liberties to which the honor of the nation is pledged, and which no rational man can gainsay; when we consider the plain, undeniable political justice of that more equal basis of representation which is provided for in the second section; when we look at the third section, by which, in conformity to national justice and national safety, the forsworn ringleaders of the late rebellion are most righteously excluded from the honors of official station in a country which they have striven through havoc and blood to destroy; when we examine the fourth section, and see what an ample shield of protection it throws over the otherwise imperiled material interests of the country; when we consider how humane and moderate is the whole arrangement—punishing lightly the prime actors in the rebellion, and punishing not at all the misled rebel masses; and finally, when we reflect how fatally necessary are the great features of the plan to the safety and well-being of the nation, I feel the utmost assurance that it will be triumphantly ratified by the voice of the people. So strong is it, so just is it, so necessary is it, that whoever stands before it and tries to defeat its adoption will be swept like a dry leaf before a western hurricane! After all that has happened by this iniquitous rebellion—after the tears and the blood that have flowed, the wreck of property and the grinding debt piled high on the shoulders of the nation—under God I declare it does not now rest with traitors, apostates, demagogues, and trimmers, to so shape affairs at this critical juncture, that the Republic shall be left insecure, and the people be robbed at last of the price of their blood! The amendment will and must be carried through. Liberty, patriotism, public safety, justice to the martyred dead and justice to the whole country, demand its adoption in a voice of thunder!

When ratified and conformed to in good faith by the revolted States respectively, they will be in a condition to resume their cast-off governing power in the Union, on terms at once safe to the country and humane and just to themselves. That the loyal nation, after crushing a rebellion which shook the Republic to its center, has now a constitutional right to require of its late enemies such conditions—precedent, as a basis for its own future quiet and security, is a proposition too utterly plain to admit of serious argument. The power to put down the rebellion carried with it as a necessary sequence the power to prescribe a safe order for the future. After all this terrible hubbub of war, after marshaling two millions of men to the field, and fighting hundreds of bloody battles, to be told that we have now no constitutional right to insist upon proper conditions of safety for the future, before admitting the defeated rebellion to power again, is an assumption so basely absurd, and so absurdly base, that I fling it from me with the contempt it merits. Most true, representation is a sacred right in a free Government. But, when States combine together in a Government like this, and drench the land with blood in their mad effort to overthrow the Republic, it is not true, that the very moment their flag of treason goes down in the field, they have a right to march their representative men into the councils of the nation! Some little breathing time, some decent interval for looking over the field and arranging the terms of a safe future, is certainly the most natural and the most reasonable thing in the world under the extraordinary circumstances of the case. That such temporary delay, for such just and necessary purposes, is an infringement of the real right of representation, can be seen only by the most inveterate of demagogues.

The difference between the plan of Congress, as presented in this Reconstruction Amendment, and the plan of the President, as presented in what is termed his "policy," may be stated in one brief sentence: all that is contained in the first is missing in the second. That great security for civil liberty provided for in the first section of the amendment, to which the honor of the nation is committed, and which has been so richly earned by the suffering and the blood of its poor people, finds no place in the President's plan. That plainly just and democratic basis of representation, provided for in the second section, by which the late southern traitor will not be allowed in future to wield nearly twice the political power of the northern loyalist, finds no place in the President's plan. That most just provision of the third section, by which the perjured leaders of the rebellion will be effectually debarred from holding office and making laws for the loyal people of the country, finds no place in the President's plan. That wise and necessary provision of the fourth section, making inviolable the national debt, and securely protecting the people from rebel debts and immense impending claims for manumitted slaves, finds no place in the President's plan. All these great matters are fully provided for and permanently adjusted in the scheme of Congress—none of them in that of the President. Surely here is a difference wide enough to arrest the attention of the way-faring man, though a fool and running as he reads. All is made secure on the one hand; all is left insecure on the other.

Here, sir, I might rest; but I am loath to close without adverting, though in the briefest possible manner, to the great ideas and principles which should enter into the public life, and mold the future Civil Policy of our country.

1. The first grand political idea is, that the Republic should be contemplated as an indissoluble whole; all its powers should be cheerfully respected and obeyed; and the citizen of every State should feel a yet larger distinction in being a citizen of the United States.

2. The States ought to be regarded as indestructible members of the Republic, and all their rights should be sacredly respected.

These two ideas, taken in just combination, will guard against undue States rights on the one hand, and undue centralization on the other. Nature supplies us with a sublime and beautiful analogy to our political system. As the sun presides over the great movements of the solar field, holding each planet in its proper orbit, so each planet in turn presides over the things which belong peculiarly to itself. The destruction of the sun would send the planets madly from their spheres. The destruction of the planets would rifle the system of all its beauty and variety. We should adhere with equal tenacity to the indissolubility of the Republic and the indestructibility of the States; and all the rights and powers appropriate to each, should be regarded as indispensable to the health and well-being of the entire system.

3. The Administration of the Government of the Republic should be lifted high above all sectional or local partiality; and the official men who administer it, though elected or appointed from local districts, should stand for the equal rights and well-being of the whole country.

4. The people of every part should cultivate kind and respectful feelings toward the people of every other part of the Republic; and their representative men should encourage the growth of these sentiments.

5. The true Democratic Idea should be so cultivated, that all the liberties and humanities of our institutions and laws should find a vital expression in the sphere of our social life.

True democracy, like true religion, recognizes the inherent and immeasurable value of man, and of all men. I fear that this great sentiment finds, as yet, a better expression in our declarations, bills of rights, and brave public utterances, than in the core and habit of our private, practical life. We still look rather at the accidents of the man—his wealth, his station, his factitious advantage—than at the man himself. The divine genius of democracy will gradually remedy this, and bring our social life more completely under the influence of that broad humanity which we profess as a public theory. The leper must be cleansed and healed and made equal to a king in American society. Lazarus, scorned by the passer-by, and licked by the dogs, must be washed and renovated and advanced to a full peership with the richest denizen of Gotham. O Democracy! excellent benefactor of mankind, this is thy work! Though in thy name bad men and misled men have done the work of devils, placing their feet upon their brother's neck, laying the lash and the gyve upon thy altar as the symbols of thy genius, and striving might and main and through seas of blood to rend in twain thy temple of liberty, yet, blessed handmaiden of humanity, art thou holy and from God! These false ones have known thee no more than those knew Christ who burned their brother man to ashes with green wood for very love of the Lord!

Ho. OF REPS.

The Tariff—Mr. Delano.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

6. Order combined with Progress is a political formula which ought to be appropriated by every American citizen; order for the permanent preservation of all that is good; progress for the remedy of all that is evil or imperfect in the Republic. Thus the stability of the system will be assured on the one hand, and its growth and perfection on the other.

7. As a people, we ought to cultivate just, generous, and magnanimous feelings toward all the other peoples of the earth; entering into appreciative sympathy with their peculiar genius; aiding them all we properly can in their struggles for liberty; and recognizing at its fullest value the contribution of each to the common civilization of the race. By occupying this high moral position before the nations, we shall draw to us the well-wishes and the affection of mankind, and aid, in the highest possible degree, the growth of that larger liberty, and that cosmopolitan civilization which are dawning upon the world.

8. As a means of counteracting the influence of climate upon character, and preventing the development of Provincial Centers in a country so great in area, a very important part of policy is to encourage the most intimate and the cheapest possible intercommunication—extending in every direction, and from center to circumference of the Republic. Not less than three such centers have manifested themselves already, though in different degrees—in the South, in New England, and in the West. These results have been produced in part by causes independent of slavery, and having nothing to do with Puritan and Cavalier. The assemblage of physical causes in the South, on the Mississippi plain, and in New England, have certainly a tendency to produce modified types of character; and these in turn conduce to modified social, and political opinions. The general diffusion of right Ideas, combined with a system of intercommunication which shall multiply commercial relations, and translate the people frequently and numerously from part to part of the Republic, will hold these natural tendencies within such limits, that they will contribute to the richness and variety of the national genius, without endangering the integrity of the Union.

9. Finally, and most important of all, Education should be made universal in the Republic; and in one important respect it should correspond to our political system. As we have a central Government for the whole Republic, and State governments for the subordinate parts, so the education of the national mind, which supports this complex system, should be unitary as to certain great general elements of culture, and diverse as to the rest. The unity of such a system of education would constitute us one nation in thought, while its diversity would break up our culture into as many varieties as there are States. Thus the popular mind of the whole country would become harmoniously adapted to our institutions, State and National, and stay them up with all the force of early habit and instinctive affection. I am persuaded that a profound improvement, in the direction here indicated, is needed in our system, or rather no system, of National Education.

Such are the cardinal elements of a permanent future Civil Policy for the country. If but tolerably observed, they will conduct our Republic to an inconceivable measure of greatness and power; and, what is of infinitely more worth, they will make it an unequalled blessing to the countless millions who shall dwell beneath its protecting wing, and to the more numerous millions upon whom it shall shed its ameliorating influence.

Sir, as there is a time for all things, so there are things which are appropriate to each period of time. Late the martial drum-beat was heard through all our borders, and the deep-throated cannon was dragged to fields of carnage and death. War, furious, relentless, consuming war, was then the duty of the hour—made its duty in order that the Republic might not be blotted from the map of nations. After the most tremendous conflict of the age if not of history, the flag of treason and slavery went down before the banner of the Republic. The smoke has cleared away from the battle-field; the moldering dead, sown thick as the leaves of the forest, sleep quietly in the long battle-trenches where they fell; the green grass of summer is made greener by the blood that enriched the soil. O, God! how revolting is the thought, that the coming harvest of such a sowing should be prematurely blighted by the same hand that cast the seed! that the people which gave its children to the slaughter, and made itself immortal by its heroic endurance and its deeds of valor, should now prove itself incompetent to make secure and fruitful the peace it has conquered at so great a cost! It is impossible! It is impossible! There is too much intelligence, and patriotism, and nobleness of mind and heart in this great people, to allow such an ignoble and detestable fact to have a place in their history! The imperative public duty that now lies next our hand will be performed! The amendment proposed by this Congress as a basis of safe and permanent pacification—so just to the Nation, so just to the South, and so just in itself—will be sustained and placed in the Constitution of the Republic. Then—the country made secure from the perils which still threaten it—every star restored to more than its former luster in the azure field of the national escutcheon—we shall move upon the future with firm and assured footstep, meeting, as I trust in God successfully, the ever new and momentous duties which that future shall bring.

The Tariff.

SPEECH OF HON. C. DELANO,
OF OHIO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
July 10, 1866.

The House having under consideration the bill to provide increased revenue from imports, and for other purposes—

Mr. DELANO said:

Mr. SPEAKER: I do not rise for the purpose of discussing the details of the bill before the House nor with a view of entering into a general discussion of the questions of revenue and finance that are connected with it. But, as I desire the passage of this bill, whatever may be its perfections or imperfections, and as I am of opinion that all those whose interests are identified with interests like my own ought to support this bill, I have felt at liberty to offer to the House a few observations. I know, very well, that I may say of this tariff bill, truthfully, that it is not all it should be; that it is not all that the committee who brought it forward desire to have it; that it is not acceptable to every interest which it affects. And I presume that this much might be truthfully said of every revenue bill of the same kind that has ever been introduced or that is ever likely to be introduced into this or any other legislative body. And while I say this, I must add that I have no doubt, with all respect for the committee who have matured this bill and brought it forward, that it might be materially improved. I have no doubt the laborious, vigilant, and diligent committee themselves entertain a similar opinion. I know how difficult it is to enter upon the question of taxation in any of the forms of legislation so as to meet justly and equitably all the interests that are affected by the measure. One of the most difficult subjects of legislation is this question of taxation in all its forms. While, therefore, I admit the imperfections of this bill, while I feel that it is subject to easy amendment and improvement, yet I feel that with all these imperfections and with all the opportunities for improvement, the bill, as it comes before us, ought to pass rather than be rejected.

I ought to say here, for myself, upon this question, at least that my constituents may know my views, that I am not for a prohibitory tariff nor for a tariff for protection merely and never have been; neither do I favor a tariff simply for revenue, and never have, although I have been for protection by means of a tariff whenever our finances have demanded revenue from import duties ever since I have participated in public affairs. As I said a few days since, when the question of imposing a duty on salt was under consideration, the finances of our country demand of us the collection of taxes by means of import duties at the present time, and were I called upon myself to prepare a revenue bill my first effort would be to ascertain how much duty ought to be collected; how much the finances of the Government required us to collect by means of imposts, and having settled that question, I would look over the interests of the country and see how this amount of revenue could be distributed with the nearest approach to justice, and with the greatest equality to all the great interests of the nation; and then, thirdly, I would inquire how this can be done and afford the most judicious protection to the industry, labor, and skill of the United States. I mean not simply the industry of the mechanic; I mean the industry of the agriculturist. And I mean not alone the industry of the mechanic and the agriculturist, but of the miner—all the interests of labor in the land; I make no discrimination at all.

The past history of our country admonishes us that the days of American prosperity have been during periods of protection to American industry, and that our days of adversity, of bankruptcy and financial distress, have been during periods of non-protection, when low tariffs, or horizontal tariffs, and other free-trade experiments, were being made. Free trade, sir, will answer, perhaps, if it is free.

But there is no nation on earth with whom we have important commercial intercourse that adopts this principle. How has England obtained so strong a position for her manufacturing interests? Why, sir, by protection, protection which she did not relax until this interest had become so strong, so experienced, so self-sustaining and powerful as not to require it. Free trade, in my opinion, if adopted now, will bring this nation to early bankruptcy and financial ruin. It will impose upon our people such burdens, from direct taxation, as cannot be endured. Meantime it will flood our country with the products of other nations; and to pay for these products we must ultimately export gold. We cannot always pay in bonds, and with all branches of industry paralyzed we shall soon have nothing left to export save our precious metals. Sir, the gold mountains of the West will prove inadequate to the task of paying our foreign debt if we are guilty of the suicidal policy of destroying all domestic industry by this delusive cry of free trade. I often think, sir, that the money of the foreign manufacturer, added to the prejudice and animosity engendered by party strife, constitute the principal alimant for the sustenance of the theory of free trade.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

The Tariff—Mr. Delano.

HO. OF REPS.

The bill now before the House does not altogether meet my own views in reference to the theory or the manner in which a revenue bill should be framed. But, sir, I am for it. I think there is a class of persons in this House whose interests are with mine, who show some signs of giving way and going against this bill, but who ought, like myself, to be for it. It is for their ears that I venture, not with the expectation of convincing them, but for their attention, nevertheless, a few remarks. There is another class of persons, those not directly interested with me, those, perhaps, who are interested adversely, but who have consented to or have arranged and agreed upon the main features of this bill, and who, I think now, not only in this House but out of it, ought to stand up to that arrangement and not start the hue and cry against the bill out of the House or in the House after they have signified their assent to it. I do not mean that this opposition is started in the House, but I do fear that some parties who have consented to this arrangement are not, out of the House, living up in good faith to the compromises that have been made.

Within all my recollections of public events this is the first bill that has ever been brought before Congress that did justly protect, or that approached anything like just protection to the agricultural interest of the land. Hitherto it has seemed that, in the course of legislation, there was no protection to be given to the man who labored on the soil, and brought things out of the soil, and made wealth in the production of the raw material, but it was to be given to him only who wrought it out and converted it into fabrics. The day has gone by when this discrimination should be made. The hour has come, and I wish to say it to members of this House, that those who represent that great interest of producing the raw material must and will be fairly heard and fairly represented in this matter, and it is for that interest that I speak.

I know how difficult it has been to bring this interest before Congress. Capital engaged in manufactures is combined and consolidated. Its influence can be condensed and brought to bear upon legislation, but in the case of agriculture it is diversified, scattered, and spread abroad over the nation; it cannot be concentrated. And hence concentrated capital has made itself powerful and great and mighty for protection. The interests of agriculture have been neglected, because they have not been represented. The day has come when it must be seen by statesmen how important these agricultural interests are, and how they demand just, proper, equal protection at the hands of the national Legislature. It is because this is the first bill that has ever proposed justice to this interest that I will go for it, and thus, if possible, place agricultural interests on an equal footing with other interests and among the other interests that are protected, so that when the tariff has to be modified and reformed, as I have no doubt it will in time have to be, the interest for which I speak may have a voice and a hearing in the reformation and correction and in the proper adjustment of the revenue question.

Are we to forget, gentlemen, have we not in the whole history of our legislation in America forgotten, that one of the great pillars upon which our country rests is agriculture? I ask you, where would be your commerce and where your manufactures were it not that you were furnished with material for their sustenance and support by those who plow the earth and cause it to bear fruit and grain and materials for your use? I ask you if the time has not come when this interest deserves and has a right to receive at your hands a fair and equal protection with other interests in the adjustment of your revenue laws. Now, sir, I do not propose, as I have before said, to discuss the details of this bill. I concede that there are many things in it that are imperfect. But I assert that it does protect the agricultural interest, and will bring that interest somewhat upon a level with the other interests of the nation in the future adjustment of our revenue laws.

No sooner was this bill placed before Congress than the free-trade howl began all over the land; and I am sorry that I was compelled to hear a voice from Massachusetts in the other end of this Capitol saying that New England did not want this bill. I do not pretend to intimate that there are any gentlemen in this House who have sanctioned that cry. But the voice came from Massachusetts that New England does not want this bill; and why? I can look at the facts and see the reason why she may not want it. Although this bill largely advances the protection upon manufactures, it also puts protection upon the raw material for which she has had heretofore the markets of the world in which to seek supplies, and often without duties; and perhaps New England would prefer, or the gentleman who sounded this key note would prefer, to stand by the law giving protection to Massachusetts as it is, without any protection to agriculture, rather than advance the protection on manufactures and place agricultural protection along side of it.

Mr. BOUTWELL. I fear there is some misapprehension as to the opinions of New England, and as I may not have another opportunity to say a word, if the gentleman from Ohio will indulge me for a moment, I will say now that although I have no authority to speak for New England or for Massachusetts as a whole, I think I am able to comprehend the general idea of the people. I think it is this: that they are in favor of protection as the general policy of the country, not protection to manufactures or to commerce or to the mechanic arts merely, but to agriculture also. It is a policy by which they have lived and prospered, and they are likely to remain in the support of that policy under all circumstances. If there is any difficulty to-day in New England in reference to this bill it is not, I think I may say, in consequence of any particular interests which they think are fostered elsewhere at the expense of New England. Nor is it because they think that in this bill, as a whole, New England interests are not sufficiently protected. But New England, as the gentleman well knows, had a long and, during some periods of its progress, a bitter warfare with other sections of the country in reference to protection to domestic industry.

If I apprehend the sentiments and the purposes of the people of New England, they are not anxious to continue a contest of that sort. While they mean to maintain the principle and the policy of protection with reference to their own interests, with reference to the interests of the whole country, what they ask of Congress and of the country is a protective system which shall not only protect the interests of New England, but shall so protect all the interests of the country as to commend itself generally to the whole country. The difficulty in New England to-day is, then, not with reference to this bill, but it is from this circumstance: that in other sections of the country, and particularly in the great West, with which New England desires to be in accord upon this great subject of protection, there appears to be determined hostility to this bill. This is the aspect, as I understand, upon which New England presents herself to Congress and to the country in reference to the bill now under consideration.

Mr. DELANO. I shall have a few words to say before I have done to my friends of the West who are accused of hostility to this bill, and who thereby furnish an excuse to New England to deviate from her legitimate policy, as laid down by the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. BOUTWELL.] I am very glad to hear from that gentleman that the general policy of New England is to protect all the interests of the country. And I beg of New England now to show her faith by her works, and not by her words only. If others in other parts of the country, with whom New England desires to act in harmony, are unwilling to walk up to the line that New England believes to be the just line, still I ask New England to stand up to what the country expects from her, and go for that principle of equal protection to all the interests which she says she is in favor of. God forbid that I should be understood as having any feeling against New England!

Mr. DAWES. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. DELANO. I will yield for an explanation, but I have not time to yield for a speech.

Mr. DAWES. I want to ask the gentleman if he desires New England to vote for this tariff bill upon the West against the wishes and the denunciations of the West. I say to him that New England is ready to vote for this tariff bill if the West wants it. But New England is not ambitious to furnish the West a tariff bill and then have the West relieve itself of all responsibility for it and heap upon New England the denunciations that have been heaped upon her in the past. She does not want the responsibility of this bill shifted from the shoulders of those who the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DELANO] has well said have more interest in it than ever we have had in any tariff bill that has ever been passed. We are content with things as they are; we are content with the bill; we are content with things as they are rather than with the bill, if we are to carry the load of denunciations that is heaped upon us from the West.

Mr. DELANO. God bless New England, I was about to say, for her love for the West!

Mr. DAWES. We do not want it to be understood that we are forcing this tariff bill upon the country; we do not want it to be understood by your leading organs in the West that New England interests are forcing their protection upon you and upon the West. We say firmly to you, you made this tariff, we will abide by it, and by the present state of things, if you desire it.

Mr. DELANO. How pleasant are thy ways, O New England! You would not inflict a tariff upon the West without their consent. God bless you! How many years have you stood up and demanded of us a tariff on the ground that if it was not granted your manufactures would go to ruin? How long have I stood in Ohio against the free-trade Democracy and been accused of being the employed advocate of New England manufacturers? All the days of my life. I have no feeling against New England. But if she has at heart a principle, and that principle is equal protection—and she says so, and I am bound to take her at her word—I say to her, show your faith by your works, and come up now and vote for that principle as you have always done before, when you forced upon us your tariffs, with our feeble assistance, those of us who were in the minority; you had then no conscientious scruples about forcing upon the West what she did not want. You were very glad then to get your tariff, and you got it. I am glad of it, sir; for I feel that it has been a benefit to the country. Now, I want you to come up to the broad work, and when other interests are involved show that you believe what you say, and that you do not fall back from your faith the moment anybody else is to participate in the benefits of protection. Nor do I believe that you will. I do not believe that it is in New England to do so.

In what I have said here I do not wish to intimate that all this howl has come from New England; but when I heard from a Senator representing New England the declaration that the manufacturers of New England do not want this bill, and when I saw the whole kennel of free-trade hounds set loose upon the country, and all of them backed by this senatorial declaration, I began to wonder who was setting the dogs upon us. I do not say who it is. I ask you now to show that you who represent New England are not responsible for it. I do not believe you are. I trust that in our action upon this bill it will be seen that New England is true to her ancient traditions, true to her interests, true to her faith, and that she will stand up to this bill to the end. If she does not I will make her a prophecy.

HO. OF REPS.

The Tariff—Mr. Delano.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

There is a West this side of where the sun sets; and there are people in it. It has a soil from twelve inches to eight feet in depth, yielding corn and oats and rye and flaxseed and hemp and wheat. And that is not all. There are men and women there; and they populate the earth as the Lord commanded when He directed them to go forth and subdue it. There is youthful vigor and power there. We are your children. We came from you. We sympathize with you and we love you. All we want is that you shall treat us as parents should treat their children; that you shall live up to the declarations you have made here in the House to-day. Then we shall be repaid for what we have done for you these many years; and we will strike hands with you. Together we will sustain this Government against all enemies to its integrity, against all enemies to its finances, and we will make ours the greatest Government and the greatest people that God's sun has ever shone upon. But if you will not help us, then when we get strong enough, as we soon shall be, we will help ourselves and you may help yourselves. Is not such a course the instinct of nature and of humanity?

Have I not some reason for these remarks? Sir, I have alluded to what has transpired. I want to say now to my friends of the West, be not deluded with this cry of free trade. You have now for the first time in your lives an opportunity to put the agricultural interest upon the protective list. Ay, sir, and the people and your constituencies are watching. Let me give you a fact. There are in this country this day thirty-six million sheep; and I would not go a rod to kick any one of them.

Mr. WENTWORTH. And all of them have two lambs!

Mr. DELANO. That may be in the neighborhood where the gentleman from Chicago obtains; but sheep are not so prolific in other parts of the country. These thirty-six million sheep are represented by two hundred thousand voters. The sheep represent the voters, or the voters the sheep, or both ways, as you choose. [Laughter.] The men who own this property are voters. For the first time in their lives it is proposed that this property should be protected by the tariff law. I know that this bill will protect this property and its annual product and also many other important agricultural interests. I say to gentlemen that those two hundred thousand voters have been watching with intense interest the action of this House during the past week on this subject. Do you ask me why? Let me present to you a few facts. I want to call the attention of this House to the importations of wool for the last few years. Members are aware that I am not much a man of detail, and do not generally elaborate largely upon tables and statistics; but here are a few facts which exhibit an idea, and I want to lay them before the House.

In 1859 we imported two hundred and thirty-one thousand pounds of wool. Now, mark you, in 1860 we imported a million and a half pounds. That was before the war—before the embarrassments following the war stared the manufacturers in the face. Now, in 1861, when the war came upon us, when the manufacturers did not know what was about to happen, when the farmers of the West could not sell their wool at all, there was imported into this country only five hundred and fifty-six thousand (half a million) pounds of wool; one third of the amount imported in 1860. Next year, sir, it was given in evidence that the war had brought out a demand for woolen goods. In 1862 you imported thirty-one million three hundred thousand pounds of wool; in 1863 seventy-three million nine hundred thousand pounds; and in 1864 eighty-seven million one hundred and ninety-three thousand pounds; and all this time when you were running up from an importation of half a million to eighty-seven million the importation of woolen goods was being diminished. Yes, sir, the importation of goods manufactured abroad was being diminished. The manufacturer had the monopoly of the markets of America for the sale of his goods, and the markets of the world, so far as we were concerned, in which to buy the raw material. What fact is more apparent than that the price of wool has not risen commensurately with that of other articles in any degree whatever during the war? It is a known fact that it has not, and the reason of it is here: you had a tariff that furnished no protection to the wool-grower whatever. Why, sir, to show you how this was accomplished, let me call the attention of the House to the importations of wool at the port of New York for the year ending the 31st of December last. You remember, sir, that that tariff puts a duty on wool, valued at the last port of exportation at twelve cents or less, of three cents a pound; when over twelve and not over twenty-four, six cents per pound; when over twenty-four and not over thirty-two, ten, and ten per cent. ad valorem; and when over thirty-two, twelve cents per pound and ten cents ad valorem. Now, sir, this was so framed by the ingenuity of the manufacturers that wools competing with American wools could be brought in here at a price less than twenty-four cents per pound. The average price is fourteen cents per pound. The South American wools, competing with our half, three fourths, and seven eighths Spanish merino wools, are imported under the existing tariff so as not to pay above three to six cents per pound duty. This is done by sending them here unwashed, and by handling them in the dirt, so as to reduce their value at the last port of export to such a sum as to cheat us of revenue, and thus deprive our own wool-growers of a market. In point of fiber and excellence these South American wools are as valuable to the manufacturer as the American fine wools.

By looking at the imports at New York you will see what was the result. We imported there for six months, ending December 31, 1865, five and a half million pounds of wool that cost twelve cents or less; eight million eight hundred and sixty-one thousand pounds of wool costing over twelve and under twenty-four cents per pound that paid a duty of only six cents; and when you go beyond twenty-four cents per pound, only fifty pounds were imported. A greater legislative wrong was never practiced upon a people than has been practiced upon the wool-growers of this land. We have borne it through the days of trial, in the days of taxation, in the days of heavy internal revenues, high taxes upon incomes, and high prices for all our manufactured goods. We have borne it as long as we can, and, God helping us, we will bear it no longer. And this I tell you, gentlemen, is the voice and sentiment of the western people to-day.

Now, sir, it is to put ourselves in a condition where we can prevent these impositions; where we can have a voice in adjusting this tariff, when it is to be adjusted, that I am here to-day to appeal to western men as well as eastern men to give us this tariff. Postpone it now, until next December, and the same interest, the same influence that causes the postponement will cause its defeat. Gentlemen, now is your time, and if you fail to avail yourselves of this hour you will stand where the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Dawes] places you. New England will say to you, "We loved you and your productions, but, you did not want this tariff yourselves; you did not want it, and we were not so blind that we would force it upon you."

Mr. HUBBARD, of Connecticut. Will the gentleman yield for one word?

Mr. DELANO. Yes, sir.

Mr. HUBBARD, of Connecticut. I desire to say to my friend that I believe there is one State in New England that does want this tariff, and that is the State of Connecticut. I believe that all of her interests, agricultural, commercial, and manufacturing, will be promoted by it, and I intend to vote for it.

Mr. DELANO. Thank you, sir. Good for Connecticut. She is a glorious State and has kept up the banner of the Union lately, and I trust she intends to do it in the future.

Mr. HUBBARD, of Connecticut. Yes, sir, she sent fifty-four thousand men into the field to fight for the flag, with only half a million of population.

Mr. DELANO. Nobody will suppose that I have any feeling against New England, or that I have come here to-day to asperse her. I want to present this question to New England and the West in its true light, and I have feebly attempted to do it in some of its phases and aspects.

There is one other fact that I desire to call the attention of this House to. I spoke of the importation of eighty-seven million pounds of wool in 1864. That, sir, did not include eight million pounds of—what do you call it? Shoddy? Eight million pounds of shoddy. I do not know but I have got some of it on. May be some of the rest of you have. In the last four years twenty-seven million pounds of shoddy have been imported into the United States competing with our wools. The people of the United States in four years have bought and paid for twenty-seven million pounds of the old clothing of what the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GRINNELL] calls the lazzaroni of the East. Gentlemen of the West, do you want to continue this disgraceful state of things?

Mr. KELLEY. I want to say to the gentleman that he makes a mistake when he says only twenty-seven million pounds have been imported in four years. There has been twice that amount brought in in the shape of manufactured goods—our own old clothes coming back to us as new cloth.

Mr. DELANO. I cannot say as to that. My friend is very familiar with details of that sort, and probably knows the run of old clothes closer than I do. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, you may think that this wool interest is a little nearer my heart than it ought to be. It is not for that only that I speak. That is not the only interest to be protected. There is the oil interest, the flaxseed, the hempseed, and the oil that is made and the lint that is produced and to be produced in that great half-explored and undeveloped area of country capable of producing these articles. While we sustain the spindle and the shuttle, the loom and the rolling-mill of our country, shall we neglect to protect the hardy tiller of the soil also? Why, sir, I venture to predict that with five years of judicious protection of the wool interest there will be produced from the States of Missouri and Iowa the eighty-seven millions of wool, with all the shoddy thrown in, that you have imported from abroad and derived no benefit from in the last four years.

Understand me, gentlemen, and my policy! I am for protecting labor and industry in all its branches. Sir, I do not want to strike down those blazing forges of Pennsylvania, whose light, when I travel on the railroads by night, is among the most joyful sights that greet my vision. Nor do I wish to silence the ringing anvils made jubilant with the hammer of industrious men. God forbid! I would multiply all these elements of industry, wealth, and power. But while I would do that I would build up these other great interests along-side of them. I join hands with you gentlemen who have iron and steel and coal and looms, and I am willing to have a fair adjustment. Sir, I want my cattle, my flax, my oil, my wool, if need be my salt, upon an equal ground of protection with these other interests. And now, I say to New England, "As you have so long had protection, and had it at our expense—I do not say unjustly, but you have had it—come now to the work; do not seek to cast off your responsibility by saying that the West declines it. The West does not decline it; the West will not decline it; and if western men here decline it, there are two or three hundred thousand voters who will wish they had this protection."

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Appropriations for New Jersey Coast—Mr. Newell.

HO. OF REPS.

The following tables are introduced to illustrate the positions assumed in the line of my argument and to establish the facts therein stated:

Year.	Free of duty.		Paying duty.		Total.
	Pounds.	Value.	Pounds.	Value.	Pounds.	Value.
1859	Not returned.	$4,363,121	221,290	$81,833	221,290	$4,444,954
1860	Not returned.	4,450,658	1,557,039	321,494	1,557,039	4,842,152
1861	Not returned.	4,593,100	556,700	137,673	556,700	4,700,773
1862	Not returned.	55,390	31,300,739	4,893,827	31,300,739	4,949,366
1863	Not returned.	-	71,917,754	11,772,034	71,917,754	11,772,034
1864	Not returned.	-	87,193,462	14,595,162	87,193,462	14,595,162
1865	Not returned.	-	-	-	-	-
		$13,432,418	192,756,974	$31,872,053	192,756,974	$45,304,471

Unmanufactured wool imported into the United States annually since the year 1858.

Flocks or shoddy imported into the United States annually since the year 1861 is as follows:

Year.	Pounds.
1862	6,201,077
1863	7,867,601
1864	8,133,391
1865	4,863,034
Total	27,155,133

The value of manufactured wools imported into the United States annually since 1861 is as follows:

1862	$14,884,394
1863	20,411,625
1864	32,139,336
1865	20,347,563
Total	$87,782,918

This table, taken in connection with the table showing the amount of unmanufactured wool imported since 1858, presents the following remarkable contrast:

In 1861 the amount of unmanufactured wool imported amounted in round numbers to half a million. These imports steadily and annually increased, and in 1864 reached the enormous amount of eighty-seven millions, to which may be added eight millions of shoddy, making an aggregate of ninety-five million pounds; while in 1862 the importation of manufactured wools was fourteen millions, and in 1865 only twenty millions, never reaching a greater amount than thirty-two millions, which was in the year 1864.

It thus appears that the American manufacturers have had and still enjoy such monopoly of the American market as to prevent successful competition from abroad, while the producer of the raw material has been left without protection, leaving the manufacturer free access to the markets of the world for his raw material. American wools ought to be so protected as that the ninety-five millions now annually imported may be produced upon our own soil. The extensive and unoccupied prairies of the West will sooner be brought into occupation and cultivation by encouraging the growth of wool than in any other manner whatever. No country in the world is better adapted to this branch of agriculture, and protection is as necessary to develop the dormant wealth of the western States in this respect as it is to open the coal beds and iron mountains of the middle States or to keep in motion the looms and spindles of New England. To enforce the truth of this observation I submit the following table, showing the present number of sheep to the acre in various localities:

England	1 sheep to 11 acres.
Scotland	1 sheep to 12 acres.
Great Britain	1 sheep to 2 acres.
United States	1 sheep to 57 acres.
Vermont and Ohio	1 sheep to 44 acres.
New York	1 sheep to 64 acres.
Iowa	1 sheep to 24 acres.

In 1860—
Vermont and Ohio had	1 sheep to 8 acres.
New York	1 sheep to 11 acres.
Iowa	1 sheep to 136 acres.

I call attention to the following provisions of the existing tariff. Wool, unmanufactured, the value of which at the last port of exports twelve cents per pound, or less, exclusive of charges in such port, pays a duty of three cents per pound. Wool, as above, of the value of more than twelve cents and not over twenty-four cents per pound, pays a duty of six cents per pound. Wool, as above, value over twenty-four cents and not over thirty-two cents per pound, duty ten cents per pound, and ten per cent. ad valorem. Wool, as above, value over thirty-two cents per pound, duty twelve cents per pound and ten per cent. ad valorem.

The finest mestiza and other fine wools imported into the United States, and which compete with the fine wools of America, have not during the last ten years averaged in valuation over fourteen cents per pound at the last port of export. Hence wools competing with American fine wools do not, by the existing tariff, pay a duty above six cents per pound.

The practical operation of the existing tariff will be exhibited by the following statement, furnished by the collector of the port of New York, giving the imports of wool into that port, and the duties paid, during six months ending December 31, 1865:

Grade.	Pounds.	Value.	Duty.
Wool costing 12 cents or less, 3 cents duty	5,510,694	$564,039	$165,320 82
Wool costing over 12 cents and not over 24 cents, 6 cents duty	8,881,250	1,420,249	532,875 00
Wool costing over 24 cents and not over 32 cents, 12 cents, and 10 per cent. ad valorem	50	31	9 10
Total	14,391,994	$1,984,319	$698,204 92

It will be thus seen that the American farmer has no encouragement in competing in the production of one of the great and indispensable products of industry, and that he cannot contend with the labor of the peasantry of other countries, where subsistence and labor do not cost to exceed one fourth of what they cost in the United States, and where winter feed and shelter are rendered unnecessary by the climate.

The national tax on American wool and the duties on objects necessary for its production exceed the average duties on foreign wools, as will appear from the above table, so that the American wool-grower absolutely pays more for the privilege of selling his wool in the markets of his own country than is paid by foreigners for the privilege of importing.

I feel bound to state that the framers of the present tariff never contemplated that foreign fine wools would come into our country at the lowest rates of duty. They have been, themselves, disappointed in its effects, and are by no means chargeable with the injustice which it works.

I desire to say that the chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means is incapable of doing intentional injustice to any of the great interests of the country; and I take pleasure in adding that the industry, learning, and ability with which he has so long discharged his important and laborious duties as a member of the Committee of Ways and Means, entitle him to the profound respect and gratitude of the American people.

Appropriations for New Jersey Coast.

REMARKS OF HON. W. A. NEWELL,

OF NEW JERSEY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

July 13, 1866.

The House being in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union on the bill (H. R. No. 737) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1867, and for other purposes, the question was upon the following amendment, offered by Mr. O'NEILL:

Insert after line one hundred and forty-three the following:

To provide additional station-houses, life-boats, and other appliances for the better preservation of life and property from shipwreck along the coast of New Jersey, between Sandy Hook and Little Egg Harbor, $10,000; and for repairing and relighting the light-house on Tucker's Beach, on the coast of New Jersey, $5,000.

Mr. NEWELL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to submit a few remarks upon the amendment just offered by the member of the Committee on Commerce, my friend from Pennsylvania, [Mr. O'NEILL.] The amendment proposes to appropriate the sum of $10,000 to provide additional means for the better preservation of life and property from shipwreck along the coast of New Jersey, between Sandy Hook and Little Egg Harbor, and is in pursuance of resolutions which I had the honor to present at the opening of this session, and which I am glad to see have the approval of the Committee on Commerce, and will, I trust, be equally well received by the members of the House. I will take a moment to give a brief account of the history and nature of the system of life-saving in operation at the entering angle to the harbor of New York on the coasts of New Jersey and Long Island.

At the first session of the Thirty-Eighth Congress I presented a resolution requesting the Committee on Commerce to inquire if any and what means were necessary for the better preservation of life and property from shipwreck along the coasts of Long Island and New Jersey, and upon the passage of the light-house bill for that year offered an amendment providing that $10,000 be appropriated to provide life-boats, rockets, carronades, and other appliances for the purpose indicated, which was unanimously adopted. At the next session $10,000 more were added in the same manner, and subsequently an additional $10,000, making in all $30,000. Those appropriations were expended under the supervision of an experienced officer of the revenue service in erecting buildings called station-houses, originally at intervals of about ten miles, and as the appropriations were made, of five or six miles, along the coast of New Jersey, beginning at Sandy Hook and extending to Cape May, of which there are now twenty-eight; and on the coast of Long Island, which has twelve of these establishments. Each house is provided with a surf-boat, a life-car, which is a metallic elliptical-shaped vessel, holding six passengers, who lie down, when the hatch is fastened and the car thus made impervious to water. At each end of the car is a large iron ring, and through them runs a cable extending from the vessel to the shore, and on this the car plays through the surf, being pulled backward and forward by a rope attached to each end alternately by the crew and wreckers. Communication is established by a ball thrown from a mortar. To the ball is attached a small line, with which a cable is drawn to the vessel. On this the car runs a truck, or broad-fellowed beach wagon, to convey the surf-boat, cars, and other necessary appliances to the point of danger. Blue lights, used to notify the wrecked of approaching aid or to warn them of a dangerous point of shore; lanterns, axes, spades, speaking-trumpets, lincs, ropes, cables, life-preservers, a stove, and a full supply of dry wood cut up, complete the furniture of a station-house. A superintendent is required to make a monthly inspection of each house, to report if any repairs be necessary, as well as other matters of interest. A keeper for each house receives $200 a year, who employs without expense to the Government a crew of eight thorough watermen and skilled in wrecking. So far as is possible, these men are always ready for emergencies.

HO. OF REPS.

Contested Election—Mr. Paine.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

The present superintendent has called my attention to the absolute necessity of doubling the number of stations and fixtures between the points designated in the resolution. Being five or six miles apart, it frequently happens that the opportunity to save life and property is lost by the time necessarily consumed in transporting the clumsy and heavy apparatus over a sandy and irregular beach, in the midst of a blinding storm, it may be, and not unfrequently in the night season. If the number is increased, as suggested, no need will ever exist for further extension. I trust the committee are sufficiently impressed with the value and importance of the system to appropriate the requisite sum and to provide for the salaries of the keepers; and I am fully persuaded that no similar amount can be disposed of in any way to accomplish greater good to humanity. During the existence of the system nearly, if not quite, four thousand lives and much property have been saved through its agency. Most noticeable among all the cases was that of the emigrant ship Ayrshire, wrecked on the coast of New Jersey, whose four hundred and one passengers were safely landed in a fearful storm in the Government life-cars, and during the subsequent storms not a few lives were saved in the same manner. It is desirable that the crews who endanger their lives shall be paid, and especially rewarded for any acts of dangerous and successful duty in saving life and property.

Such services have hitherto been rendered by these gallant men without pay or reward, and so palpable an injustice should no longer disgrace this Government. The present embarrassed condition of our finances may deter members from making any new source of expenditure, but I beg them to remember that these services have been rendered many years without salary or any recognition from the Government; and I trust that when the proposition is made to reward them it will not be withheld. I desire to give notice that at the proper time I shall make an effort to provide for them suitable remuneration. My constituents have ever been on the alert to save life and property from the dangers of shipwreck, and ask no compensation for acts of humanity, and desire no relief from its burdens; but they should not be expected to keep up organizations for that purpose, and to be always ready to afford relief, and receive no consideration for their services. I hope, also, that the appropriation asked for repairing and relighting the light-house on Tucker's Beach, on the coast of New Jersey, will be made. This light has been discontinued since the year 1859. This light-house is located on Tucker's Beach, near Little Egg Harbor inlet, which leads into a large and commodious bay and harbor, acknowledged to be the best on the coast, there being about fifteen feet of water on the bar. It is frequented by all classes of coasting vessels, it not being unusual to see fifty sail at anchor here; and in the judgment of sensible seamen and coast traders the relighting is necessary to make this bay more useful as a harbor, it being difficult to find the inlet on a dark and stormy night without this light. I trust the small appropriation asked for may not be withheld.

Contested Election.

SPEECH OF HON. H. E. PAINE,

OF WISCONSIN,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

July 11, 1866.

The House having under consideration the following resolution, reported from the Committee of Elections—

Resolved, That Hon. John L. Dawson is entitled to retain his seat as Representative in the Thirty-Ninth Congress from the twenty-first district of the State of Pennsylvania—

Mr. PAINE said:

Mr. SPEAKER: There was no minority report submitted in this case. It would seem, therefore, to be unnecessary for the committee to consume any time in the discussion of the report which they have submitted; and I would not occupy the attention of the House for a single minute in the argument of the case were it not for the fact that my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. SCOTFIELD,] and other members of the House from that State, have intimated a desire to debate the resolutions which have been presented, and to advocate the claims of the contestant to the disputed seat on this floor. It becomes necessary, therefore, that an opportunity should be afforded to them to present the reasons which, in their minds, are strong enough to satisfy them that the report made in the case is incorrect, and that the contestant should have the seat. I shall, therefore, be obliged to explain to the House somewhat in detail the grounds upon which the majority of the committee have based the report which they have submitted. There are other reasons, which will appear as I proceed with the statement of the case, why this discussion on the part of the committee may be carried to some length. This was a case in which the soldiers of the State of Pennsylvania, under a law peculiar to that State, were allowed, while in actual service in the field, to vote for members of Congress; and the dispute between the contestant and the sitting member hinges for the most part upon the soldiers' vote. I will state the points which were made by the contestant.

He alleged, in his notice of contest, that the return judges of Westmoreland county unlawfully rejected certain military returns certified to them by the prothonotary of that county; that the same judges omitted to include in their canvass certain other military returns for that county, filed in the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth; that fraudulent and illegal votes were cast for John L. Dawson at certain polls within the district; that the return judges of Indiana and Fayette counties omitted to compute certain military returns for those counties, filed in the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth; and that, of the aggregate of votes, Smith Fuller had 11,068 and John L. Dawson 10,848.

He claimed, in argument, that 367 lawful military votes were returned, which were not embraced in the canvass of the district board, and that of these votes 254 were cast for Smith Fuller, and 113 for John L. Dawson.

He also claimed in argument that, through an error in the computation of the return judges, John L. Dawson received 3 instead of 2 votes from company E, one hundred and fifth regiment; that in footing up the votes of Mr. Dawson they also made a mistake of 1 in his favor; and that if these corrections were made in Mr. Dawson's majority of 125 and the military votes given in the foregoing table correctly counted, the result would be as follows:

Majority of uncounted military votes for Smith Fuller.....	141
Corrected majority of John L. Dawson.....	123
Majority for contestant.....	18

He also insisted in the argument that if the case should be decided upon technical grounds, eleven specified military returns, giving Mr. Dawson a majority of 31 votes, and alleged to have been actually included in the canvass, would be rejected, and Mr. Dawson's official majority of 125 thereby reduced to the extent of 31 votes.

He also insisted that the law was disregarded in the canvass of the home vote of Westmoreland county, of which Mr. Dawson received a majority of 1,477; that the returns of this vote were characterized by irregularities and frauds; and finally that the sitting member had in his answer failed to deny the averments of the notice, particularly the averment "that of the votes cast at the October election, 1864, Fuller received 11,068 votes and Dawson 10,848," and could not, therefore, dispute them in this contest.

These were the positions taken by the contestant. On the other hand, the sitting member, in his answer and argument, insisted that the notice of contest was not served within the time limited by law; that it was never served on him personally or otherwise; that the contestant, on the first argument, abandoned all the averments of the notice except the first, second, fifth, sixth, and eleventh; that the first was alone entitled to consideration, and would not, if true, reduce the majority of the sitting member below 59; that the second, fifth, and sixth averments were bad, and the proof respecting returns not received by the proper officer before issuing the certificate of election insufficient, because it was neither alleged nor shown that the returns in the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth had been "bona fide forwarded by the judges in the manner prescribed by law;" that the eleventh was not a particular specification of any ground of contest and was insufficient; that if sufficient it was not sustained by the proofs; that even if an unrestricted reexamination of the entire vote should be made, the sitting member would nevertheless retain his seat; that it was neither proven that all the votes lawfully polled were produced in evidence, nor that those produced in evidence were counted by the return judges; that the committee could only count those votes which were received too late to be counted by the return judges, and which, if received in time, could have been properly included in their returns; that certain fraudulent votes were cast and counted for the contestant; and that certain "false, fraudulent, imperfect, and illegal returns" were made in his favor and included in the canvass of the district board; and, finally, that no lawful votes were excluded from that canvass.

Mr. Speaker, in what I shall have to say to the House on this case, I shall not consider the points which were made by the sitting member. I shall only consider those points upon which the contestant relied before the committee; and of these there were two, upon which the contest before the committee turned. In the first place, the contestant insisted that certain votes which were cast by the soldiers, and which if counted would have been favorable to him, were not counted. And, secondly, he insisted in the argument, although he made no such point in his notice of contest, that certain

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Contested Election.—Mr. Paine.

HO. OF REPS.

votes which were actually counted for the sitting member in the canvass, were unlawful and ought not to have been counted. I shall ask the attention of the House to-day to those two points of the contestant, and to those only.

First, then, I ask your attention to those votes which he insists were not counted, but ought to have been counted. He presents to the House through the committee, forty-five returns claimed to be the returns of soldiers' votes cast at various military election precincts by soldiers of the three counties of that district, giving an aggregate majority of 141; and he asserts these votes were not counted, and the canvassers did not embrace them in the canvass on which the Governor predicated his proclamation giving the sitting member his seat. Among these forty-five returns, the committee found a few absolutely perfect in form. They found a large number which, although not regular in form, were sufficient in substance to authorize the committee, in their own judgment, to count them.

But there were among these forty-five returns, seventeen which the committee were unable to consider worthy of being embraced in the canvass. Of these seventeen the committee unanimously agreed to reject eleven wholly or in part. I will not say the committee unanimously agreed to reject them, but I will say that those members of the committee who agreed to this report were unanimous in the exclusion of eleven of these seventeen returns. There were six of the seventeen returns respecting which the committee were not unanimous. And the reason the committee were not unanimous was this: a principle had been established in a contest from the State of Pennsylvania, already determined by this House, in accordance with the recommendation of a majority of the committee, to which the minority could not assent. I refer to the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth. When that case was decided it was the opinion of the minority of the Committee of Elections that certain military returns were unlawfully excluded from the canvass; that the irregularities for which they were rejected by the majority of the committee and finally by the House were not substantial defects, but mere informalities, which, under the law of Pennsylvania, were not sufficient grounds for their exclusion. That opinion still remains unchanged. In the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth certain rejected returns ought in the judgment of the minority to have been counted. Of those members of the committee who have agreed to the report made in the case now before the House in conformity with the ruling of the House in that case, two reserved to themselves the right to vote in the House on the present case in accordance with their own convictions of the law and the facts. If this difference of opinion among the members of the committee would have made any difference in the result, two who sustained the report and now sustain it would have voted for the contestant. I am one of those. If the principle laid down by the minority of the committee and repudiated by the House in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth could have changed the result in this case, I would have felt not only authorized but bound as a member of the House to adhere to the opinion of the minority, and to vote to admit Smith Fuller to the contested seat as the lawfully chosen Representative of the twenty-first district of the State of Pennsylvania in the Thirty-Ninth Congress.

But it so happens that whether in this case we adhere to the ruling of the majority of the committee in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, or adhere to the opinion of the minority, we are still obliged, in my judgment, to award the contested seat to the sitting member. The result is this: while I, in accordance with the views maintained by the minority in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, would have counted these six rejected returns, the majority of those who agreed to the report now before the House were in favor of excluding them. If the position taken by the majority in that case is correct, if the report recommended by the majority of the committee and adopted by the House in that case is to prevail in this, then, in the judgment not only of the majority, but of the minority, including myself, the sitting member is entitled to retain his seat by a majority of 21 votes. If the House should reverse its decision made in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, and hold that the rejected votes should have been counted as the minority in that case recommended, the sitting member would be entitled to his seat by a majority of 4 votes.

I will not now go minutely into these points of difference between the majority and the minority in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, because in a subsequent part of my argument it will be necessary to consider in detail the several returns which that difference of opinion affected. I only allude to this now to show the effect this difference would have in the case before the House.

Now, this alternative majority of 21 or 4 is based on the supposition that nothing is to be deducted from the vote which was given to the sitting member by the official canvass.

I have said that the second of the points made by the contestant and requiring the consideration of the House was this, that certain military votes were, in fact, counted by the canvassers for the sitting member, which ought not to have been counted, which were not lawful votes. I will indicate the eleven returns alleged to contain these votes:

Westmoreland county.	Dawson.	Fuller.
1. Company B, 142d regiment.....	8	3
2. Company E, 206th regiment.....	30	24
3. Company K, 206th regiment.....	13	8
4. 16th cavalry regiment.....	1	0
Indiana county.
5. Lookout Mountain hospital.....	1	0
6. Company G, 76th regiment.....	7	6
7. Company G, 11th regiment.....	4	0
8. Company A, 155th regiment.....	2	0
Fayette county.
9. Company E, 140th regiment.....	6	4
10. Carver hospital.....	3	0
11. 7th cavalry regiment.....	1	0
	76	45
	—	—

Now, Mr. Speaker, in order to warrant this deduction from the official vote of the sitting member on account of ballots alleged to have been unlawfully cast or counted, it was necessary that three things should have been done by the contestant. In the first place he should have given notice by some allegation in his notice of contest that he intended to insist upon an objection of that nature to the validity of the sitting member's title to his seat. In the second place he should have shown that the votes which he disputed were really illegal votes and ought not to have been counted; and in the third place he should have shown that they were, in fact, counted. Now, he did not show that a single one of these votes was counted. There was no sufficient proof before the committee that any of these votes to which he objected were embraced in the official canvass. The only evidence that they were actually counted, aside from what appears in the table on page 389 of the contestant's second book, and relates exclusively to Westmoreland county, is to be found in the fact that the returns themselves are on file in the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth or county prothonotary. But while it might well be claimed that the presence of regular returns in these offices would be prima facie evidence that they were embraced in the canvass, how can it be said that the presence of irregular returns would be prima facie evidence that they were counted? It seems to the committee that the presumption would be in the opposite direction.

This paper, exhibited on page 389 of the second book, is inadmissible because only signed by one of the judges; but it would not be evidence before the committee even if signed by all the county judges, for the reason that when a congressional district is composed of two or more counties there is no authority for depositing any return or statement of the county board in the office of the prothonotary, as will be more fully shown hereafter. But, more than that, he did not allege in his notice of contest that he should rely upon any such objection as this to the validity of the title of the sitting member to his seat. Unless, indeed, it be in the general allegation that the sitting member received 10,848 votes, and the contestant 11,068 votes, which allegation is the eleventh in the notice of contest, you cannot find any averment sufficient to entitle the contestant to introduce proof upon this point.

I will not discuss the validity of that allegation as a foundation for such proof, because it will devolve upon the chairman of the committee, [Mr. DAWES,] as a part of his duty, to consider this as well as the other points which were made in this case by the sitting member, while my own remarks will be confined to the positions taken by the contestant.

But, granting for the sake of argument, that there is in this eleventh allegation sufficient to constitute a basis for the introduction of such proofs as this, I have further to say that the contestant did satisfy the committee that of these eleven returns of votes which he insists were counted, but ought not to have been counted, four, and only four, were upon their face irregular and illegal, and could not of themselves justify the canvassers in counting the votes which they contained. These four returns were—

	Dawson.	Fuller.
1. Lookout hospital.....	1	0
2. Company G, 76th regiment.....	7	6
3. Company E, 140th regiment.....	6	4
4. 7th Pennsylvania cavalry.....	1	0

I do not say that satisfactory proof was made before the committee that in the case of these four returns the votes which were alleged to have been given for the sitting member were not, in fact, legally cast and returned for him; but I do say that, taking into consideration merely the proofs which were placed before the committee by the contestant in the printed and manuscript returns, I find no evidence that these votes were legally cast or returned. The sitting member offered no proof on this subject. Indeed, the contestant never, until near the close of the thirteen days consumed in the trial of this case, alluded to this claim to reduce the official vote of the sitting member. But for the sake of the argument I will assume that those 6 votes were illegal and ought not to have been counted. There still remains the difficulty that there is no proof that they ever were counted; and I suppose the chairman of the committee, [Mr. DAWES,] when he comes to discuss this part of the case, will satisfy you that no foundation was laid in the pleadings for the introduction of any such proof on the trial. Of course, then, it was impossible for the committee to deduct these votes from the aggregate majority of the sitting member.

The committee found, therefore, that the sitting member had a majority of 21 votes. Adhering to the principle which I maintained in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, I would have given him a majority of 4 votes, because I believed that the returns for McClellan hospital, battery H, fourth artillery; Camp Parole, Carver hospital, field and staff two hundred and sixth regiment, and company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment, ought to be embraced in the canvass. These gave the contestant an aggregate majority of 17 votes. Inasmuch as there is no minority report in this contest, I should, under ordinary circumstances, be content to stop here and await the arguments that may be adduced by those who are to speak on behalf of the contestant before saying anything further in the case. But, sir, a remarkable document has been laid upon the desks of the members of this House since our report was submitted. I am compelled to call your attention to this document, which is entitled "A short review of the report of the Committee of Elections," and is signed "Smith Fuller, contestant." The charges made by the contestant against the committee are so erroneous and offensive that they could have no palliation except in the disappointment naturally felt at an unexpected result of such a close and protracted contest, a result doubtless believed to be irreconcilable with the law and the facts. I know that under the influence of these grave charges Representatives have been led to entertain opinions respecting the contest now pending before the House which have very much astonished me. For example, a gentleman from the State of Pennsylvania, for whom I entertain the very highest respect, and whom every gentleman of this House esteems as one of the most honorable of men, stated to me, to my face, that he did not believe this to be the report of the Committee of Elections, and that he understood it was repudiated by every member of the committee except the chairman and myself! It becomes necessary for me, therefore, in view of the charges against the committee made in this pamphlet by Smith Fuller, the contestant, and in view of declarations made by members of this House which have repeatedly come to my ear, to submit the statement to which I now invite the attention of the House. And I ask permission of the House at this point to produce and read in this case certain portions of the journal of the Committee of Elections. I believe it can only be done with the consent of the House.

HO. OF REPS.

Contested Election—Mr. Paine.

39TH CONG.... 1ST SESS.

No objection was made.

Mr. PAINE. The journal of the committee is not pagged; but I find under date of June 19, 1866, the following:

"The committee met.

"Mr. Koontz concluded his argument in the case of Koontz against Coffroth.

"The committee voted upon the case of Fuller against Dawson, twenty-first congressional district of Pennsylvania.

"The vote upon the right to the seat stood as follows:

For Dawson—Dawes, Marshall, Paine, McClurg, and Nicholson.

For Fuller—Scotfield and Baxter."

It appears, therefore, that there were seven members of the committee who voted on that occasion, and of those seven five voted for this report and two against it. Two members of the committee, Messrs. SCOTFIELD and SHELLABARGER, were absent. Two did not vote, namely, Mr. UPSON and Mr. SHELLABARGER, of whom the latter was absent and the former was present, but asked to be excused from voting; he reserved his vote, and I do not know that he has up to this time given it either to the contestant or to the sitting member, nor do I know why he withheld it when the decision was made, unless it was because he had not then arrived at a conclusion in the case.

Mr. SHELLABARGER. Mr. Speaker, it is due to myself that I should say that my absence from the Committee of Elections when it was investigating the matter now before the House, was due to my almost compelled presence and attendance upon the investigation of a select committee of this House, for the proceedings and doings of which committee I felt more responsibility than I did in regard to the proceedings of this regular committee of the House. That explains the fact that during the entire investigation of the Committee of Elections in this particular case, I was not able to be present or to participate in the conclusions at which they arrived.

Mr. PAINE. I entirely understood the reason why the gentleman from Ohio was not present to have been that which he has just stated, and I will add, that after the vote was taken in the committee I called upon the gentleman and requested that he would record his vote upon this case on one side or the other. He informed me that not having been present, having been compelled by his duties on another committee to be absent, he did not feel that he was entitled without further examination to vote upon the case, and was unwilling to do so.

It appears, therefore, that seven members of the committee did vote upon the case. Two did not vote, of whom one was present and one absent. Two were absent, of whom one did and one did not finally record his vote. And one, although present, did not vote. I refer to Mr. UPSON. As I have already stated, I do not know why his vote was not recorded. The chairman of the committee now suggests to me that he had been detained by sickness from some of the sessions of the committee.

I have made this explanation for the purpose of repelling the unkind attack made on the committee in respect to this vote. It seems to me that when seven out of nine members of a committee vote upon a case and the absence of one other vote, as of Mr. SHELLABARGER's, is fully explained, it can hardly be said that the report of the committee is repudiated by all of the committee excepting the chairman and myself. I insist that we have in good faith and fairly decided this case. If we have made mistakes, let them be shown. But let it not be said to this House that this report which we have presented here is not the report of the committee. It is the report of the committee, just as much so, and in precisely the same sense, as any report that was ever presented to this House in an election case, where there was no contradictory minority report, was the report of the committee. This is not only the report of the committee, but it is the only report emanating from the committee in this case. So much for that.

Now, Smith Fuller, contestant, in his "short review of the report of the Committee of Elections," makes several statements which I deem it my duty to correct. He says, "The Committee of Elections, after examining the returns of votes cast in the district, (the twenty-first congressional district,) find the allegations of the contestant in this particular (that the contestant received a majority of the votes cast) to be true." Smith Fuller, contestant, has therein made a great mistake. The committee found that the sitting member, John L. Dawson, received a majority of the votes cast at that election, as they have stated in this report, parts of which I have caused to be read. They found that, on the ruling of the majority of the Committee of Elections and of the House itself in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, the majority of Mr. Dawson was 21; and upon the theory of the minority in that case he had a majority of 4 votes. The contestant further states that "They find, upon a computation of all the votes polled for this district, that I, the contestant, have a majority of 16 votes." On the contrary, we find that the sitting member has a majority of 21 votes.

Mr. SCOTFIELD. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him a moment?

Mr. PAINE. Certainly.

Mr. SCOTFIELD. I would like to have it understood whether the gentleman from Wisconsin, [Mr. PAINE,] in denying that Fuller had a majority of 16 votes, is only speaking of the legal votes, or the votes legally cast. I take it that in this review offered by the contestant he means to say that if all the votes had been counted by the committee, those that were formal and those that were not formal, he would have had a majority of 16. And when the gentleman from Wisconsin controverts that, he means to say, I suppose, that there was no such majority formally certified; taking advantage of all the informalities or mistakes, whatever they are, I want to have him state clearly what he means.

Mr. PAINE. I suppose there is no difference between the gentleman and myself when we come to the real point. The committee did find that the contestant claimed a majority of 16 votes. They found more than that, that he claimed a majority of 18 votes, insisting upon the two corrections to which we have particularly referred in our report. But we did not find that he had received a majority of 16 votes. We found, it is true, that if we had counted all the votes alleged to be contained in the papers which he laid before the committee he would have received a majority of 16 votes. But we found that the papers which he laid before us were not such that we or the House ought of right to receive the votes they contained. So that, leaving out of view entirely the questions raised by the sitting member in this case, instead of the contestant having a majority of 16 votes, the sitting member has a majority of 21 votes. It is true that if we had received every paper, whether merely informal or absolutely defective and worthless in substance, every paper which had any value, whether in form or substance, and every paper which had no value, either in form or substance, if all that were claimed by the contestant had been allowed by the committee, he would have had a majority of 16 votes, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SCOTFIELD] says. But I shall show, before I conclude, why we were compelled to reject many returns placed before us.

The contestant proceeds in his "review" to say, "It seems strange, under these circumstances, that the voice of the people of this district is to be stifled, and a man who has been rejected by their votes is to be retained as their Representative." That would be a strange thing for the committee to recommend to this House; it will be a strange recommendation for this House to adopt. But, in my judgment, it would be a proceeding no less marvelous for this House to evict the sitting member and give the contestant his seat here because he claims it without proving his right to it. I say that the voice of the electors of the twenty-first congressional district of Pennsylvania will not be stifled by permitting the sitting member to retain his seat. On the contrary, I say that their voice, so far as we are able to gather it from anything placed before the committee or before this House, will be stifled if you drive out the sitting member and admit the contestant to the seat which he claims, but which he has proved no right to hold.

"But," he proceeds to say, "the committee have given their reasons for reporting in favor of the candidate having the smallest number of votes; and to these reasons I will briefly call attention." I shall make no comment, Mr. Speaker, upon the taste which the contestant has shown in that passage of his short review of the report of the Committee of Elections. The committee have not undertaken to give their reasons for rejecting the candidate having the smallest number of votes. The committee have fairly stated to the House which candidate they believe had the largest number of votes; and as in duty bound they have recommended to the House to give him the seat. What less than this, what else than this, I ask, could the committee do?

Now, sir, I come to these particular returns about which there was so much dispute in the committee, and about which there will be much debate, I presume, in this House.

Mr. Fuller, in this document, says:

"The committee reject the returns of elections held by company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, upon the ground that there is no evidence that the officers who held the election were sworn. They also reject the return of the election held at McClellan hospital, Virginia, for the same reason. If they had turned to pages 59 and 60 of book known as No. 2 printed by them for their own convenience, they would have found that the first named of these returns showed that the officers had been duly sworn and all the certificates required by law had been duly signed by the persons who administered the oaths. Had they taken pains to turn to page 380 of the same book they would have found that the officers who held the election at McClellan hospital had been sworn, as shown by the certificates of these officers who administered the oaths. I append these oaths to this statement; they will be found in the appendix, marked A and B. So if the committee wish to correct this statement in their report they will have no difficulty in doing so. These two returns give me a majority of 10 votes and would have reduced the majority accorded to the sitting member to 5 votes."

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Contested Election—Mr. Paine.

HO. OF REPS.

I will first consider the return of company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment Pennsylvania volunteers. The contestant asserts that we rejected this return on the ground that there was no evidence that the officers who conducted the election were sworn. He has not stated the whole of the objection which we made to that return. He has stated only one of two objections which we raised. One was that there was no evidence that these judges were sworn, but the other was that there was no poll-book accompanying the return and tallylist. That there may be no mistake on this point, let me read from pages 4 and 5 of the report of the committee; and I shall be obliged to read in this connection the opinions expressed by the majority and minority of the committee in the case to which I have so often referred, the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, in order to show precisely the points of objection to this return, and the reason why it was excluded by the majority of the committee:

"The military returns alleged to have been omitted from the canvass, although in many instances irregular and informal, seem to be good in substance, with the following exceptions, namely:

"McClellan hospital, (No. 3.) The return for Westmoreland county in this case is in all things, except the names and residences, identical with the return from the same hospital for Adams county made by the same officers, and produced in evidence in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, recently decided by this House. In that case the majority used the following language: 'Of the eight alleged as rejected returns for Adams county, the three from the hospitals, namely: Mower, Cuyler, and McClellan, (papers 23, 24, 25,) are by all the committee admitted to be too defectively certified and authenticated to be entitled to any consideration. The law in relation to the certifying, signing, and returning, with the poll-book, the evidence of the administering of the oath to the officers of the election (sections 5 and 15) was wholly disregarded.' The minority in the same case expressed the following opinion: 'The three returns from the Mower, Cuyler, and McClellan hospitals (papers 12, 23, 24, 25) were rejected because the certificates of the oaths of the election officers were wanting. This was no lawful ground for their rejection, for it appears from the whole papers that the judges and clerks were actually sworn, and the returns, though defective in form, are perfectly intelligible, and clearly within the provisions of the statute applicable to mere formalities.' The authority of that decision is unanimously recognized by the committee, although its correctness is still doubted by the minority. It excludes the three votes from McClellan hospital for Westmoreland county, which are claimed by the contestant. Upon similar but rather stronger grounds the following transcripts, which do not contain the poll-books or certificates of oaths, namely: battery H, fourth artillery, (No. 2;) Camp Parole, (No. 9;) Carver hospital, (No. 10;) field and staff, two hundred and sixth regiment, (No. 12;) and company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment, (No. 13,) are rejected by the committee. They would give Mr. Dawson 4 and Mr. Fuller 18 votes."

I call the attention of the House to the exact language of the report, because it becomes important in deciding as to the precise reasons for which this return of company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment was excluded by the committee in the case now before us. I am one of the minority who still doubt the correctness of the decision referred to.

Upon the statements in the extract which I have read from the report of the committee relating to the return for company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment, is predicated the contestant's assertion that this return was rejected, because there was no evidence that the officers who held the election were sworn.

Now, it is true that the absence of the certificates of oaths was one of the reasons why the committee rejected this return; but that was only one of two reasons. The other reason was that the poll-book was wanting.

In the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, the committee and the House decided that the following six defects were each and all substantial and fatal, namely, first, the absence of the certificates of oaths of two of the judges; second, a joint election by two or more organized companies; third, the administration of the oaths to the election officers by a person who was not one of their number; fourth, the absence of a certified poll-book; fifth, a failure to keep separate poll-books for the voters of each city or county; sixth, an omission to make separate returns for the voters of each city or county.

I did not think, as the majority of the committee did in that case, that the presence of the certificate of oaths or of the certified poll-books was essential to the validity of a return if it was substantially shown by the papers taken together that the officers were sworn and that the votes were duly cast. Indeed, I was, and still am, satisfied that under the law of Pennsylvania the return, strictly so called, should suffice, if substantially correct, without either oaths, certificates, poll-book, or tally-list. And if in this case the decision had turned upon the vote of company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment, I should have voted for the contestant, because I believe that return should have been canvassed. I said so in this report. I agree with the contestant that it should be counted in this case, and if when counted it would secure him the seat I would vote to give him this contested seat.

The contestant asserts in the extract which I have given from his pamphlet that if the committee had turned to pages 59 and 60 of the second volume of his evidence they would have made certain discoveries respecting the return of company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment; and if they had taken pains to turn to page 380 of the same book they would have made certain other discoveries respecting the return for McClellan hospital. In other parts of his review similar language is used.

Sir, if he means by all this to say that the committee did not carefully and patiently examine these returns from beginning to end, he does, I know, great injustice to the committee, for never since I have been a member has any case been so patiently, so carefully examined as this case. There is no item of evidence referred to in this review as having escaped the attention of the committee which I had not read many times and carefully considered before the contestant's attorney placed the review in my hands. There is one item, and only one, which I had not observed before I drew up the report, and that was the certificates or oaths of company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment. I think the reason these were overlooked ought to satisfy the most fastidious contestant. The statute of Pennsylvania provides the forms in which oaths, certificates of oaths, poll-books, tally-lists, and returns are to be sent in duplicate to the secretary of state and the prothonotary of the county. The several documents are arranged in the order in which I have named them, the oaths and certificates being first, the return last, and the poll-book and tally-list between them. I believe that in all the hundreds of returns printed in this and other Pennsylvania contests there is but one solitary case where this order is inverted, and that happens to be the identical case which is now before the House.

Here the return comes first and the certificates last. I had examined the return over and over again, looking for the certificates in their proper place without finding them. But I had discovered them before the review was placed in my hands. And it is true that upon these pages are to be found the certificates which this contestant alleges are there. If that fact would entitle him to have these votes counted under the ruling of the majority, then they should be counted by the majority of the committee. I, as one of the minority, had expressed in the report my opinion that this return ought to be counted, even before I had discovered the certificates of oaths. Their discovery, therefore, does not affect me. But the majority of the committee required not only the certificates of oaths but also the poll-books. The latter are wanting; hence the discovery of the certificates does not affect the majority. But, counting this return, I cannot vote to give the contested seat to Mr. Fuller, because this return added to all the others to which he is entitled would not destroy the majority of the sitting member.

I proceed now to the examination of the return for McClellan hospital, on page 380. Here, too, the contestant intimates negligence on the part of the committee. But I was familiar with that return long before the report was prepared, and I must again say that the insinuation that the committee have shown want of diligence in searching for evidence in this case is unjust. They have shown more diligence here, I am sure, than they have ever shown before or will ever show again in favor of any contestant at the expense of a sitting member.

Mr. SCOFIELD. I would like to know for whom the gentleman speaks when he says that hereafter no contestant shall have as much care and attention shown to his case as has been given to this. I think he will find no such resolution on the records of the committee that they will never treat another case as fairly as this.

Mr. PAINE. Mr. Speaker, I certainly did not speak for the gentleman from Pennsylvania. I will frankly admit that his habits of marvelous industry will necessarily lead him in all future contests to make as diligent and thorough an examination as he has made in this. I merely meant to state the result of conversations with the committee—a majority of them, I think, though I may be mistaken about that—

Mr. SCOFIELD. Not the committee, but individual members of it.

Mr. PAINE. That is all. I do not mean to say that the committee have taken a vote on the resolution, but I do say that I believe they have come to the conclusion that they have granted in this case indulgence to the contestant at the expense of the sitting member which they will never feel justified in granting again to any contestant. At all events that is my conviction.

Now, sir, I was very anxious myself to find a substantial return in regard to the McClellan hospital.

Mr. SHELLABARGER. I would like to understand the gentleman a little more explicitly in regard to the return of company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment. He has given an explanation in regard to its not being sworn to, but he has not explained, I believe, in regard to setting it aside.

Mr. PAINE. I explained it fully, but the gentleman does not seem to understand what I said. I said that a second objection was that the poll-book was absent, that there was no poll-book at all. I am asked again what difference that makes. I answer, as I said before, that it makes no difference with me, it makes no difference with the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SHELLABARGER,] who was of the minority of the committee in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, nor with my friend from Pennsylvania, [Mr. SCOFIELD,] who was also of the minority, but it makes a very great difference with the majority of the committee.

Mr. SHELLABARGER. I understand my colleague to take the ground that the House must follow its determination in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth; that that becomes the law of the House, which we must follow as the decision of the court of last resort in this case; that is, we must follow what my colleague regards as that judgment. Now, I maintain that neither he nor I nor anybody else is bound to look upon the decision of the House in a former case in any other light than a mere proposition, not as authority.

Mr. PAINE. It would be utterly impossible for me to be more explicit than I have been on that point. I can only repeat what I have said. I have said over and over again that if you count company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment, as the gentleman from Ohio believes and as the gentleman from Pennsylvania believes it should be counted, and as I believe it should be counted, it can make no difference in the result in this case. I further say, as I said before, that although the report of the majority of the committee in the case so often referred to was ratified in this House, I feel not only authorized but bound in this case to vote in accordance with the opinion which I maintain in the minority report in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth. I answer him; then, by saying that I do not believe this House is bound to follow the rule which the House adopted in that case, but I believe we are at liberty, if we see fit, to reconsider and change the rule which was then adopted, and I have no doubt that we ought to do so.

HO. OF REPS.

Contested Election—Mr. Paine.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

But I have to ask how you will change the result in the case now before us when you have done all that, when you have reconsidered and rescinded the rule which you then laid down, as I believe you ought to do? You will not affect the result in this case. You will still leave the sitting member in his seat. I have not intimidated—and the gentleman misunderstood me if he thinks I have—that this House is bound to follow an incorrect decision. I repudiate that idea. We are not only not bound to follow it, but are, in my judgment, in duty bound not to follow it.

Mr. SCOFIELD. If I understand my friend, he now says that company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment, were counted for Fuller, so that that makes 7 votes to be taken from the 15 majority counted for the sitting member, leaving him in. Do I understand his position correctly?

Mr. PAINE. Let me explain.

Mr. SCOFIELD. I do not want an explanation. If the gentleman wants to meet this case with fairness, he will give us a categorical answer without talking and explaining and making speeches about it. Is he in favor of counting the 7 votes given by the soldiers of company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth Pennsylvania regiment, or is he in favor of rejecting them?

Mr. PAINE. I shall be very apt to answer the gentleman in my own way. I do not quite like to hear him say that he now understands this matter so and so, as if I had ever expressed a different opinion. I repeat that I have always thought, as I think now, that this return should have been counted. I say so in the report and have repeatedly said so in the House to-day. Why did not the gentleman read the report and ascertain my opinions there, instead of asking me whether he understands that now I say "so and so?" If that return would change the result it would change my vote in this case. But it makes no change in the result. I have said nothing different from this, and it is idle to insinuate that I have stated one thing in the report, or heretofore on this floor, in reference to this case, and now state another thing. I now answer the gentleman "categorically," and say that that return ought to have been counted.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. SCOFIELD obtained the floor.

Mr. PAINE. I have not yet reached the main points of my argument, and should be glad of an extension of time.

Mr. SCOFIELD. I move the gentleman's time be extended.

Mr. PAINE. Personally, I do not desire to proceed, but I thought it due to the gentlemen on the other side that I should fully explain what they have to meet. But there seems to be some opposition, and perhaps I had better wait until I take the floor to close the debate.

FRIDAY, July 13, 1866.

The House resumed the consideration of the report from the Committee of Elections.

Mr. PAINE. Mr. Speaker, I understand how completely the patience of the House has been exhausted by this protracted debate and I promise to bring the question to a vote, if possible, in a very short time; but in order to do so I must now announce that I shall be unable to yield any portion of my time to any member of the House for any purpose.

This contest commenced before the Committee of Elections on the 14th of March last. At or about that time the contestant presented his proofs and they were printed, and here is the volume which resulted. It contains one hundred and twenty-seven pages. On the 18th day of April the attorney of the sitting member asked the attorney of the contestant, in the presence of the committee, whether that book contained all the evidence upon which he rested his case. The answer was that it contained his whole case; I heard that answer given in the presence of both of the parties to the contest.

The committee then resolved to meet again on the 27th day of April for a further hearing of the parties, but when the 27th day of April came the contestant did not appear. It was evident to all of us, I presume—certainly it was to me when I came to look into this book—that it contained not one single line which, as evidence in this case either before the committee or before the House, was worth the paper upon which it was printed. It contains no certified copies of anything, but merely certified abstracts of returns of votes deposited in the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; abstracts for which no law of the State of Pennsylvania or of the United States provides. It was not seriously contended on the hearing that these abstracts were competent evidence, but the contestant insisted in his "review" that just such certified abstracts were admitted in the cases of Vallandigham vs. Campbell, and Blair vs. Barrett, formerly decided by this House. An examination of those cases will show that no such abstracts were admitted either by the committee or by the House.

In the former case, which was decided in 1858, Mr. Vallandigham produced from the office of the secretary of the State of Ohio, not certified abstracts made by the secretary of returns on file in his office, but copies certified by the secretary of election summaries or abstracts prepared, in accordance with the statute of that State, by the county clerks of the district, and by them deposited, in obedience to law, in the office of the secretary of state. The evidence in that case consisted of copies authorized by law of abstracts authorized by law. The evidence in this book consists of abstracts not authorized by law of returns authorized by law. In that case the Committee of Elections were unable to agree, but submitted three minority statements. Four recommended the admission of Mr. Vallandigham to the seat. Four were in favor of Mr. Campbell, and one, the chairman, recommended that the seat should be declared vacant. The only objection to the introduction of this evidence referred to by those who supported Mr. Vallandigham's claim to the seat was that it was not procured within the sixty days limited for taking testimony. Those who supported Mr. Campbell's claim insisted that under the statutes of Ohio the abstracts or summaries made by the clerks and transmitted to the secretary of state constituted a valid foundation for the Governor's certificate of election to the successful candidate, but were not valid for any other purpose, and neither the original summaries of the clerks nor the copy thereof certified by the secretary of state would be competent evidence in a contest.

The following is an extract from the views of Mr. Lamar, in favor of Mr. Vallandigham:

"It was objected that the committee ought not to receive and consider the 'abstract' of votes returned to the office of the secretary of state for the returned member and the contestant because the document was not 'obtained' or 'taken' within the sixty days limited for 'taking testimony.' This objection, in the opinion of the undersigned, is destitute of force. Without deciding whether it was not rather the duty of the sitting member than of the contestant to produce it before the committee, they are clearly of the opinion that the negative provision as to testimony, in the ninth section of the act of 1851, was intended to apply and does apply solely to the testimony of witnesses, or at most to such writing as can be proved only by the examination of witnesses; and that documentary evidence, at least that which proves itself, may be obtained at any time after the sixty days, and produced before the committee at the hearing. The abstract in question purports to come from the proper officer, and officer, and bears upon it the impress of the great seal of the State, than which there can be no higher evidence of authenticity."

In the minority report in favor of Mr. Campbell, Mr. Gilmer uses this language:

"It is not a copy of any official paper which of itself, when produced, would be evidence, but a mere copy of a certificate which itself is merely a result ascertained by calculation from the original and only source of information, the poll-books. The laws of Ohio require each voter to be registered on a poll-book at the time of his voting, by the judges or commissioners of the election. This poll-book is directed to be returned from each place of voting to the clerk of the county, and from it the clerk is directed to certify the summary—that is the number of votes cast for the respective candidates. (See Swan's Dig., State of Ohio, pages 342, 343, 344, sections 17, 18, 19.) It is therefore plain that the only original records of the votes cast at any precinct or poll, are not the clerk's certificate to the Governor, but the poll-books kept by the commissioners and by them sent to the clerk's office, to be there safely kept for all persons 'who may choose to inspect them.' * * * * * So the certificate of the clerk to the Governor of the number—the summary of the votes—is an adequate foundation for the merely ministerial act of the Governor in giving the certificate of election to the person appearing to have, from the clerk's certificate, the greatest number of votes. For that special ministerial act the clerk's certificate is a just foundation; the law makes it so; but it goes no further. It does not make it evidence in a legal contest when the question is not how many votes are certified to the Governor, but how many votes were actually cast at the polls, that any vote was really so cast."

The House by a vote of—yeas 107, nays 100, declared that the contestant, Mr. Vallandigham, was entitled to the seat.

The character of the evidence admitted in the case of Blair vs. Barrett, decided in 1860, will appear from the extract which I now give from the report of the committee in that case:

"In addition to this testimony was that from another source, which was strenuously resisted by the sitting member on two grounds: first, that evidence from this source was not competent in an investigation of this kind; second, that the method of producing it before the committee was in conflict with the well-established rules of evidence. The evidence alluded to was this: on the 15th day of August, 1858, the city council of St. Louis passed an ordinance to take the census of the city provided by its charter and previous ordinances. A copy of this ordinance will be annexed to this report. For this purpose the city was divided into districts and census-takers were appointed for each census district. They were instructed in addition to an enumeration of the inhabitants, to ascertain and report various other matters of statistical information; among which was the nationality of the inhabitants found within their respective precincts, and whether naturalized or not if foreign-born; how long resident, &c. It was to the evidence which the reports of these census takers disclosed that the sitting member strenuously objected: first, because under no circumstances could they be evidence of facts which they purport to contain; and secondly, because of the manner of bringing that evidence before the committee. The committee answer that so far as the census takers themselves were witnesses testifying to the facts contained in their report obtained by themselves, which was the case in very many instances in which this kind of testimony was offered, it is the ordinary case of men making memoranda or writing down what they know, and then coming into court and testifying to the facts thus acquired, refreshing their memory from the paper thus made out by them. Nor is there any objection to others comparing the poll-books with those memoranda thus verified and testifying to the result of the comparison. But these reports of the census takers now in the archives of the city are official documents and are prima facie evidence of the facts they contain."

The House sustained the report of the committee by a vote of—yeas 93, nays 91.

The contestant is therefore mistaken in his assertion that abstracts similar to those contained in this book were admitted in the case of Vallandigham vs. Campbell, and Blair vs. Barrett.

But if such a decision had been made by this House twenty times over it could be no rule for me, because it would have been so entirely violative of all known principles of evidence and so dangerous in contests of this kind that I should feel bound to ask the House to reconsider and reject it.

I have said that on the 18th day of April the committee adjourned to meet on the 27th. But

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Contested Election—Mr. Paine.

HO. OF REPS.

the contestant did not appear on that day, nor did we receive any explanation of his absence, except a vague rumor that illness detained him at home. On the 4th day of May he at last returned to the committee-room, and instead of proceeding with the case upon the evidence already printed, he presented some four hundred additional documents, which he asked us to receive in evidence and order printed. Leave to postpone the hearing from April 27 to May 4 and obtain additional evidence had neither been asked nor granted, and yet we decided to accept these new proofs and print them for him at the expense of the United States. Such of them as he desired to have printed were printed in this volume of four hundred pages.

There were also presented in the case, before it finally closed, two briefs of the contestant, which have been printed and have been used before the committee, and when the case came up finally for decision, there was printed for the contestant this third brief, [holding a paper up in his hand,] which I will say here is most creditable to the attorneys for the contestant, and has been of great service in the examination of the case.

After we had heard the case for the last time, after the contestant had consumed nine days in our committee-room, and the sitting member had consumed four days, after we had spent many days in working out the details of the case, and after the decision of the committee had been communicated to the House in this report, the contestant laid upon the desks of members another document signed by him and entitled "A short review of the report of the Committee of Elections." Now, sir, the Committee of Elections found the majority of the sitting member to be 21 votes. It has been said here and many times reiterated that the committee found the majority to be only 15. I will not consume the time of the House now by referring to the language of the report. But I will state again that we found that the sitting member had a majority of 21 votes. I myself, as an individual member of the committee, adhered to the position which I took in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, and held the sitting member's majority to be 4.

I have been willing ever since this case was before us, even since it was decided, and up to this moment—I am willing now to reconsider any portion of it in which I may be charged with error. And if I can be convinced that I am wrong, I am ready at this moment to vote for the contestant.

Sir, the only consistency that I care for in such a case as this is consistency in the pursuit of truth; and this I will maintain, whatever the result may be. Having been intrusted with the task of working out the details of this case, I have carefully reviewed them again and again, in order that I might avoid mistake and consequent injustice. I will confess, however, that I have not escaped those feelings which I have no doubt all men experience to a greater or less extent in similar circumstances. In entering upon its investigation I resolved to accept whatever result it might lead to, and yet I felt a strong hope that the result of that investigation would enable me to vote in favor of awarding to the contestant the seat which he claims. I could not avoid the desire that such might be the result, because he is my political friend, and I had more personal acquaintance with him than with the sitting member. But, sir, I have not forgotten from the beginning of this examination to the end of it—I trust I shall never forget—that in a case like this I am, whether acting in the committee-room or in this House, both judge and juror, and that I cannot act as a mere partisan without a violation of my duty and my oath. And I tell this House that after having carefully examined this case over and over again, both before and after the report was printed, both before and after this "short review" by "Smith Fuller, contestant," was put into my hands, I have a clear and firm conviction that John L. Dawson is entitled to retain the seat which he now holds in this House. I feel a greater confidence in the correctness of my conviction concerning the merits of this case than I have felt in any case which has been before the committee since I have been a member of it. Not only is there in my mind no reasonable doubt as to the right of the sitting member to retain the seat he now occupies, but an irresistible conviction compels me to give him my vote, and I could not do otherwise without being guilty of a violation of the oath which I took as a member of this House, without a violation of my sense of honor as a gentleman and of my conscience as an honest man.

Sir, in that "short review" of the report, which was handed to us by the contestant, he asks us to reconsider the case. I have carefully reconsidered it since that pamphlet was handed to me; I had reviewed it before; and there is nothing presented in this document, there has been nothing presented to this House by any of the gentlemen who have taken part in this debate, that I had not considered fully and carefully, over and over again, before that document was placed in my hands. One point in the case had escaped my attention when I drew up the report; but before the pamphlet was handed to me I had discovered it, and resolved to present it to the House. That was the case of company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment. I have already informed this House of the immateriality of that return so far as it concerns the issue before us. And now I have to say to this House—and I call attention to the statement—that if you should proceed, as the contestant asks you to do, to review and correct this case, the majority for the sitting member would be increased by 16 votes at least. By careful reexamination since the report was prepared I find that you would have to add to the majority of the sitting member 4 votes for company C, fourth cavalry, and 12 votes for company K, one hundred and fifth regiment. If the contestant insists upon a review of this case, and is willing to abide the result of that review, it will compel him to retire from this House with a larger majority against him than that which the committee have reported.

When I drew the report I supposed that the return for company C, fourth cavalry, which is found on page 8 of the book containing the evidence of the sitting member, came from the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth, and therefore could be counted in this case; but upon the last careful review that I have made I have discovered that there is before this House no proof which will authorize us to count those 4 votes. The return, strictly so called, from the office of the prothonotary, shown on page 19 of the contestant's second book, was on its face regular, but on reexamination of the return set out on page 8 of the book of the sitting member, which I supposed to have been made by the secretary of the Commonwealth, I find that it was made by the prothonotary of Westmoreland county. It shows, what does not appear on page 19 of the second book, that voters from each of the three counties of the district took part in the election. For reasons fully explained in the case of Lincoln hospital in the report this paper can only be evidence of the Westmoreland county vote. But the whole number of voters for Westmoreland county was 16. The entire vote returned for Mr. Fuller is 18 and for Mr. Dawson 13. It is not shown how many of the 16 Westmoreland county voters voted for the candidates respectively. Hence the contestant cannot insist upon counting the return unless he allows Mr. Dawson 13 of the 16 votes. If rejected, it would increase the majority of Mr. Dawson by 4 only, a correction of 1 vote having already been made in the report.

I have discovered also that the return of company K, one hundred and fifth regiment, shows that the votes cast by that company, of which the contestant had a majority of 12, were cast for John L. Dawson and Smith Fuller for the Senate of the State of Pennsylvania. As the chairman of the committee said yesterday, it would be an unprecedented course for us to count those votes without some proof that there was a mistake in the return. The insertion in this return of what would probably be claimed to be copies of the ballots themselves has no semblance of legal proof. But the deposition of one of the judges or clerks would have shown that the votes were cast for Representative in Congress, and that a mistake had been made in the return if such were the facts.

But I pass from this to the returns which the committee rejected wholly or in part. There were seventeen of these returns, namely:

	Dawson.	Fuller.
1. Battery H, 4th artillery.....	0	4
2. McClellan hospital.....	0	3
3. Company C, 4th cavalry.....	13	18
4. Camp Parole.....	0	1
5. Caylor hospital.....	4	4
6. 206th regiment, field and staff.....	0	2
7. Company A, 155th regiment.....	0	7
8. Lincoln hospital.....	0	15
9. Company E, 204th regiment.....	0	2
10. Company E, 4th cavalry.....	1	3
11. Co's E and C, 99th and 76th reg'ts.....	0	3
12. Camp Hamilton.....	0	1
13. Filbert street hospital.....	0	2
14. Satterlee hospital.....	1	6
15. Depot field hospital.....	0	4
16. Company C, 212th regiment.....	8	4
17. Company H, 211th regiment.....	13	10

Of these nine were so worthless that no man in this House can under any pretense of refusing to disfranchise soldiers count a single one of them. I now refer to the returns for company E, two hundred and fourth regiment; company E, fourth cavalry; companies E and C, ninety-ninth and seventy-sixth regiments; Camp Hamilton; Filbert street hospital; Satterlee hospital; Depot field hospital; company C, two hundred and twelfth regiment; and company H, two hundred and eleventh regiment, which I have numbered from nine to seventeen inclusive. The only proof, so far as company E, two hundred and fourth regiment, and company E, fourth cavalry, are concerned, is what purports to be a copy made and certified by the prothonotary of Westmoreland county of an abstract of votes made by the prothonotary of Alleghany county, in another district. Neither the abstract nor the certified copy was authorized by law. The return for company E, ninety-ninth regiment, and company G, seventy-sixth regiment, had already been counted once as the return for Cuyler hospital, and of course should not be counted the second time. But I call the attention of the House to the Camp Hamilton return at page 310 of this book. I wish the House to see what it is that provokes such a hue and cry about the threatened disfranchisement of the soldiers. Here is the return. It shows only one thing, that three men were sworn as judges and two as clerks of the election. There is not one word to show that a single vote was cast by any elector for any candidate. And because I refused to count that I am charged with consenting to disfranchise the soldiers in the field.

If the contestant can introduce that document and claim one single vote as the result of it, he can claim five hundred or one thousand just as well. If this document can prove one vote for a Republican in a Republican Congress, it could as well prove one thousand for a Democrat if this were a Democratic Congress. This return is a complete blank. Why shall we permit the contestant to fill the blank at his pleasure rather than the sitting member? It is a mistake to say that the rejection of such a paper involves the disfranchisement of the soldiers. Its admission would necessarily work their disfranchisement, for it would leave them no certainty that their votes would ever be correctly returned.

I come next to Filbert street hospital, on page 333 of the second book. The evidence shows that certain persons were chosen judges and clerks of the election, and that 48 electors voted, but it does not show for what candidates any of them voted. Is it a virtual disfranchisement of the soldiers to refuse to permit the contestant to appropriate these votes without proof that they were cast for him? In the case of Satterlee hospital, on page 336 of the second book, there is no return, and the tally-list is only signed by two clerks. It might as well be signed by two boot-blacks. If there was any good reason why the judges did not sign it, there has been abundant opportunity since November, 1864, to show by depositions what that reason was. The return for the Depot hospital will be found on page 346 of the second book. I ask you to mark the effrontery of the contestant's claim in this case. The poll-book shows that only four soldiers of the twenty-first congressional district voted at this hospital. But in the tally-list it is set forth that John L. Dawson had 2 votes and Smith Fuller 4, and the same statement is again made in the return. And yet the contestant, who introduces this return, does not hesitate to count all of the votes for himself in making up his alleged majority of 18 votes. But Mr. Dawson should have 2 of these votes, and the result, instead of being a majority of 4 for Mr. Fuller, is an even vote.

HO. OF REPS.

Contested Election—Mr. Paine.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

The proof respecting the vote of company C, two hundred and twelfth regiment, is nothing but a Westmoreland prothonotary's copy of an Alleghany prothonotary's abstract, and is not entitled to a moment's consideration. The evidence respecting company H, two hundred and eleventh regiment, on page 341 of the second book, shows that certain persons were selected as judges and clerks, and gives the names of 28 voters of this district, but does not show how one of them voted. I have already shown that a reconsideration of the case would exclude the return of company C, fourth cavalry. Of the remaining seven returns six ought, in my judgment, to be counted. They are the returns for battery H, fourth artillery, McClellan hospital, Camp Parole, Carver hospital, two hundred and sixth regiment field and staff, and company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment. I have repeatedly stated in the report and in the progress of the debate the reasons why I think these returns should be embraced in the canvass.

One only of the seventeen rejected returns remains to be considered. It is the Lincoln hospital return. The contestant in his short review of the report makes the following statements respecting this vote:

"The committee declined to count 7 votes polled for me at Lincoln hospital, District of Columbia, upon the ground that they had not been properly returned. The return contained a majority of 15 votes for me: 8 of them had been polled by soldiers from Westmoreland county, and the others from Fayette and Indiana, the other counties in the district. The committee held that although the return of the election was in all due form, and had been returned to one of the legal depositaries of the district, it could not be counted because it had not been returned to all. They admit, however, that if this return had been returned to the secretary of the State of Pennsylvania it would have been all right and should be counted. They admit also that it was returned to the secretary of state, as is shown by the certificate of the secretary of state, on page 68 of Book No. 1, but they say that this is only an abstract, and they cannot receive it as evidence. It is just such evidence as was admitted in the case of Vallandigham vs. Campbell, Bartlett's Contested-Election Cases, page 229, and Barrett vs. Blair, same, page 317.

"But what I consider most unjust to me and to the majority of the people of the district, is the fact that I procured this return in full, and just as the committee require it from the secretary of state, and had it referred by the House to this committee, as I can prove by my counsel and by the clerk who compared and numbered all the certificates. The papers on file in the room of this committee show that all the other returns are there in full from the secretary of state, July numbered, except this particular return, and it is gone. This return was No. 64, as appears from the book, and we find Nos. 63 and 65 on file, but 64 is missing! This return alone, added to the ten above, if it had not been lost by the committee, would have elected me by 2 votes. I appeal to every fair-minded man to say if it is just to me or to the people of the twenty-first district for this committee, when they admit they had the evidence before them that this return was in the office of the secretary of state, and when they knew it would show that I had a majority of the votes polled in the district, not to notify me that it had been mislaid, from their files. They had lost the paper themselves and they could have replaced it in a few hours by writing to the secretary of the State of Pennsylvania at Harrisburg. On reading the report of the committee, a copy of this lost return was sent for to Governor Curtin, and is now on hand in full, marked, as it is, a 'duplicate copy.'

"It thus appears that this committee have counted me out by mistaking the facts and losing my papers, as they admit. I was elected by the rules laid down by themselves for measuring this case."

After Mr. Fuller's review had been placed upon our desks, he handed to the chairman of the committee a regular return for Lincoln hospital, with the following affidavit, namely:

IN THE THIRTY-NINTH CONGRESS.

CONTESTED ELECTION—FULLER vs. DAWSON.

Washington, D. C.:

Before the undersigned appeared William A. Cook, who on his oath says that he was one of the counsel of Dr. Smith Fuller, contestant for the seat now held by Hon. J. L. Dawson in the House of Representatives; that after the certified copies of the poll-books or returns from the secretary of state arrived from Harrisburg and passed into the hands of the contestant, they were carefully examined and compared by this deponent and others with the county returns or copies certified by the prothonotaries of the several counties, as well as with the abstract of returns previously obtained from the secretary of state, and schedules made of them; that at the time of that comparison and examination Lincoln hospital, which gave Smith Fuller 15 votes, 8 from Westmoreland county, 5 from Indiana, and 2 from Fayette, was among the number received from the secretary of state; that it was numbered 64, corresponding with the same number from Westmoreland county and schedules retained; that these returns were then placed together and by this deponent and the contestant presented, or caused to be presented, to the House and referred to the Committee of Elections, and that afterward, under the direction of the said clerk and in presence of said contestant, all the returns from the counties were prepared for printing, and wherever a county return was supposed to be defective or required explanation the certified copy from the secretary of state was also printed and the others left on file in the committee-room; that among these was the entire poll-book and return, complete in all respects, from the secretary of state, of Lincoln hospital, numbered 64, and agreeing in all respects as regards number of votes, &c., with that from Westmoreland county; that after preparing them in the mode indicated lists of these so prepared and of those on file were retained; that on seeing the report of the committee, and surprised that the statement was made that there was no State certificate, and that 7 votes were therefore rejected for the contestant, these lists were examined, and application was at once made to Governor Curtin for a copy of the return, which was promptly received marked "duplicate," and which is perfect in all respects, and is now on hand. The deponent also states that the brief of the sitting member refers to the return from Lincoln hospital as objectionable because, as is alleged, there was "no certificate from secretary of state;" but the brief was not printed until after the argument of the case closed, and a copy of it was not procured until a special messenger was sent for it to the room of the committee sometime after it was filed there, and it has never been submitted to either the contestant or his counsel, nor, so far as the deponent knows, was it ever in writing before the committee during any period of the argument, while the contestant's briefs were, in compliance with the demand of the committee, printed at the outset of the argument on the merits of the case. And the deponent further says that, if necessary, he is prepared he believes to furnish on proper demand additional affidavits as to the fact of the return in question being referred by the House to the committee; and he herewith incloses the "duplicate" copy received from the secretary of state.

WILLIAM A. COOK.

Sworn and subscribed before the undersigned this [L. S.] 3d of July, 1866.

EDMUND F. BROWN.

Notary Public.

The chairman of the committee thereupon inclosed copies of this affidavit and of the contestant's review, accompanied by several interrogatories relating to the subject, to Mr. Bartlett, the clerk of the committee, who was then in New England. The following answers were received:

WEST HAVEN, CONNECTICUT, July 5, 1866.

DEAR SIR: Your note of the 3d instant surprises me. It is impossible that any part of the evidence in the case of Fuller vs. Dawson (or in any other case) can have been lost. In accordance with the usage of the committee, Mr. Fuller and his counsel arranged the order of their papers for the printer, and prepared the index. The work was done under the direction of Mr. Cook, one of Mr. Fuller's counsel. In this case you will remember that a very large amount of record evidence was brought in long after the case was opened. It is customary to allow the party interested to make his own selections from this kind of evidence for the printer. Mr. Cook (for Mr. Fuller) did so in this case; and all the papers which he stated it was unnecessary to print were at once locked up by me. The papers which he selected for the printer were tied up and sent to the printer by me at once.

Sometime after the argument in the case was closed, General PAINE desired to examine the original papers, and I delivered them to him, (both the printed and unprinted manuscripts,) and they were in his hands for two or three days. As I did not examine a page of the manuscript evidence in the case, it is impossible for me to identify any particular paper, but I cannot believe that it was possible to lose one of the documents.

I came here, as you know, at the urgent summons of my family, because of illness that required my presence. If you will write or telegraph me that I can be of any service in this matter, I will return instantly.

Truly yours,

D. W. BARTLETT.

Mr. DAWES.

Copy of questions addressed to Mr. Bartlett by the chairman of the committee, at the request of Mr. PAINE, and of Mr. Bartlett's answers to the several questions:

Mr. Bartlett's attention should be called to the following points:

1. Who selected the papers to be printed?
2. Were all papers which Mr. Fuller selected printed?
3. Did Mr. Bartlett lose any papers?
4. What did Mr. Fuller (the attorney) say while he was hunting for this lost paper in the committee-room?
5. What is the usage as to printing and indexing papers?
6. Is it the practice of the committee to read those not printed?

Answers:

1. Mr. Cook.
2. They were all sent to the printer?
3. Certainly not.
4. I have not the slightest recollection. He asked for the manuscripts, and I gave them to him.
5. The parties select such of their own papers as they wish to be printed and make their own index.
6. It is not.

D. W. BARTLETT.

WEST HAVEN, CONNECTICUT, July 5, 1866.

What the committee reported respecting this return will be easily ascertained from the report itself. That portion which relates to Lincoln hospital is in the following words, namely:

"Lincoln hospital, (No. 16.) Of these 15 votes, 8 are for Westmoreland, 5 for Indiana, and 2 for Fayette. The only proof before the committee respecting any of these votes, except the abstract on page 68 of Book 1, which is not legal evidence, was the certified transcript of the prothonotary of Westmoreland county. And the question is whether this transcript is competent evidence of the vote for Fayette and Indiana counties. The following are the statutory provisions of Pennsylvania bearing upon the question:"

They are cited at length.

"These provisions do not seem to make the certified transcript of the prothonotary of one county competent evidence of the votes of other counties. The prothonotary appears to be the lawful depositary of military returns, so far as they pertain to his own county and no further. And he can only certify to those of which he is the lawful custodian; at the same time the practical effect of such a construction of the law should not be overlooked. Separate poll-books, tally-lists, and returns are made for each of the counties. If three voters, one from each county, present themselves at the polls, their ballots are all deposited without number, mark, or other means of identification, in one ballot-box, and the name of each is entered upon a separate poll-book for his own county. At the close of the polls the judges count the votes and find 3 for Representative in Congress from this district. Suppose 1 to be for Mr. Dawson and 2 for Mr. Fuller, the judges are unable to prepare either the separate tally-lists or the separate returns, because they cannot know whether the vote for Mr. Dawson was cast by the Westmoreland, Indiana, or Fayette voter. A literal compliance with the law is absolutely impossible. They know that for the entire district Mr. Dawson appears to have 1 vote and Mr. Fuller 2, but to which county to return the respective votes they cannot possibly decide. And if they make a return purporting to show for which counties the respective votes for Mr. Fuller were cast, it must necessarily be fictitious. It is therefore impossible for the county return judges and of course for the district return judges to canvass any votes cast under such circumstances. And unless there is some other legal mode of proof such votes might be utterly lost in a contest in this House, if a transcript certified by the prothonotary of one county could not be admitted to prove the votes of another. But there is another instrument of proof, the certified transcript of the secretary of the Commonwealth, who is the lawful depositary of military returns for every county in the State. This is not produced in the present case, and only 8 of the votes contained in this return can be counted."

An examination of the documents which I have submitted shows that all the material statements of the contestant's review respect-

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

The Constitution and the Union—Mr. Trimble.

HO. OF REPS.

ing this hospital are wholly erroneous, and it will be unnecessary to consume any time in pointing out the particular errors. I will only refer to two points. We printed the four hundred returns at the contestant's selection in this case, as in other cases, to obviate the necessity of deciphering them in manuscript. Only the printed returns are used on the hearing. But in this case, failing to find the necessary evidence of the Lincoln hospital vote in the printed books, I sought for it also, in vain, among the manuscript returns. Before the report was prepared, I informed the attorney who wrote the contestant's review, in reply to an inquiry made by him on the subject, that this evidence was wanting, and the next day I saw the same attorney engaged in the examination of the manuscript returns himself in an unsuccessful attempt to find this evidence. The contestant, therefore, actually had the notice which he denies. Again, the confirmatory evidence of the presence of this return, alleged to be furnished by the consecutive numbering of the secretary's returns, would not be without weight if these numbers had been placed upon them before they left the secretary's office. But the fact is that they were written upon the secretary's returns in Washington in pencil by the contestant's attorney and clerk, in order to give those several returns the same numbers which the corresponding prothonotary's returns already had. The secretary's numbering, which was in black (not red) ink, was entirely different. The returns which are referred to as sixty-three and sixty-five were by him numbered one and twenty-one. Nor is it correct that these were the only returns which could not be found. There were thirteen others which I could not find. I am constrained to believe that Mr. Cook, although entirely sincere, is mistaken in his affidavit, and that this Lincoln hospital return was never in the committee-room before the report was submitted. And yet I would be willing to use the return presented since the report was made if that could be done without injustice to the sitting member, who has been advised, I presume, for the first time of this proposed evidence by the debate now in progress. But if you embrace in the canvass this Lincoln hospital return, and also the returns for McClellan hospital, battery H, fourth artillery, Camp Parole, Carver hospital, field and staff two hundred and sixth regiment, and company A, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment, you must still vote for the sitting member, for he still has a majority of 13 votes.

Mr. Speaker, I wish now to call the attention of the House to some of the results which would follow if we should admit the claims of the contestant in this case. Sir, the contestant in his review of the report of the committee finds fault with the committee because they rejected the vote of Satterlee hospital, to which I have referred, where the tally-list was signed only by two clerks, and at the same time counted the vote of Carver hospital, which gave a majority of 3 votes for Dawson, although, as he alleges, the return was altogether blank. The return, strictly so called, from Carver hospital for Fayette county was, it is true, a mere blank. But, sir, there was appended to the entire document, including the poll-book, tally-list, and blank return, these words:

A true return of the election held as aforesaid, on the second Tuesday of October, 1864. Certified by us the day and year aforesaid.

GEORGE HINDS,
Hospital Steeward United States Army,
JOHN W. WINDSOR,
Private 170th Company V. R. C.,
H. R. WEST,
Corporal Company H, 143d Pennsylvania,
Judges of the said Election.

Attest:
WILLIAM C. STINE,
Clerk Carver Hospital,
HERBERT S. GEE,
Musician 52d Company V. R. C., Clerks.

Now, that word "return" may mean either one of two things. It may refer to the technical return, or it may have a more comprehensive signification, referring not only to the technical return, but to the whole document, including the poll-book and tally-list. If you consider it in its most comprehensive sense as covering the poll-book and tally-list, then this return ought to have been counted. But if the contestant is unwise enough to insist upon using this final certificate in its restricted sense, I wish you to observe what the result will be, so far as his own vote is concerned. Sir, if you adopt that view at his request, if you take him at his own word, and decide that returns like that of the Carver hospital shall not be canvassed, you will rob him of five returns in Westmoreland county, of three in Indiana county, and of five in Fayette county, which give him an aggregate majority of 27 votes, all of which we have counted in his favor.

For in each of these cases the return was precisely like that in the case of the Carver hospital. The following statement will show what he would lose by the enforcement against himself of this rule, which he thinks should have been enforced against the sitting member:

Westmoreland county.	Fuller.	Dawson.
1. Company E, 21st cavalry.....	3	0
2. Company C, 204th regiment.....	6	2
3. Patterson Park.....	1	0
4. Findlay hospital.....	1	0
5. Hospital No. 1, Chattanooga.....	1	0
Indiana county.
6. McClellan hospital.....	3	0
7. Carver hospital.....	3	0
8. Hospital No. 1, Chattanooga.....	1	0
Fayette county.
9. Company K, 211th regiment.....	3	2
10. Company A, 121st regiment.....	1	0
11. Company B, 212th regiment.....	1	0
12. Company L, 8d artillery.....	1	0
13. Company F, 1st cavalry.....	1	0
	31	4

Why, sir, if you adopt the rule which the contestant asks you to adopt you add to the majority of the sitting member 27 votes, and subtract therefrom only 3. What becomes of the contestant if you take him at his own word? But, sir, great complaint has been made because I have, as is charged, asked the House to adhere to the rigid rule adopted by the Committee of Elections and by the House in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth. I have, however, asked for nothing inconsistent with the views entertained by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SCOFIELD] and the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. SHELLABARGER.] I differ with them not at all respecting the rule adopted in that case. But suppose we had in this case adhered strictly to the rule then established. I ask you, what would have become of this contestant? Six specified objections to returns in that case were held by the committee and by the House to be fatal, namely: first, the absence of certificates of oaths of two or more judges; second, the absence of the poll-book; third, a joint election by two or more organized companies; fourth, the administration of the oaths to the election officers by persons not of their number; fifth, an omission to keep a separate poll-book for each county; sixth, an omission to make a separate return for each county. Under one or the other of those six objections falls every one of the seven returns, which I shall now read to the House, and which we have counted for the contestant:

Westmoreland county.	Fuller.	Dawson.
1. Cuyler hospital, (certificates wanting).....	2	0
2. Company C, 204th regiment, (certificates wanting).....	6	2
3. Company M, 100th regiment, (certificates wanting).....	3	0
4. Companies C and D, 140th and 116th regiments, (joint election).....	1	0
5. Company L, 6th artillery, (oath signed by one judge only).....	26	11
Fayette county.
6. Battery H, Independent artillery, (several defects).....	1	0
7. Cuyler hospital, (certificates wanting).....	2	0
	41	13

Now, sir, a rigid adherence to the rules laid down in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth would have added to the majority of the sitting member the difference between 41 and 13 votes.

In support of three returns which were counted in favor of the contestant he himself made no proof satisfactory to the committee. But the proof was furnished by the sitting member. They were—

	Fuller.	Dawson.
1. Camp Smithers.....	4	1
2. Columbia hospital.....	1	0
3. Company B, 155th regiment.....	4	1
	9	2

Let us now recapitulate the results which might have followed if we had enforced against the contestant his own rules, and had rigidly adhered to those laid down in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth:

The committee found Mr. Dawson's majority to be..21
If the case is reconsidered corrections must be made for company C, fourth cavalry, and company K, one hundred and fifty-fifth regiment.....16

His majority will then be.....37
If you exclude blank returns like that of Carver hospital you add to his majority.....27

And his majority will be.....64
A rigid observance of the rule adopted in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth would add to his majority.....28

And his majority would be.....92
And but for evidence introduced by the sitting member you would add to this.....7

And Mr. Dawson's majority would be.....99

In conclusion I have to say that I know of no reason why the sitting member should not retain his seat, unless it be this: that he is what we on this side of the House sometimes call a copperhead. That may be a good reason why his constituents should not have sent him here; I believe it was a good reason. But that is a reason for his constituents to consider; it is no reason why you and I should kick him out of this House. And if that shall be done here to-day, it will, in my judgment, be a violation of right and of duty, to which I can be no party.

The Constitution and the Union.

SPEECH OF HON. L. S. TRIMBLE,

OF KENTUCKY,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

June 16, 1866,

In Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, on the President's annual message.

[The SPEAKER stated there were several gentlemen who wished to speak, but were precluded by the closing of the debate on the state of the Union, and if there were no objection they could hand their speeches to the reporters to be printed in the Globe. There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.]

Mr. TRIMBLE. Mr. Chairman, I had not intended to trouble this committee with any remarks upon this message. But when I hear, day after day, such flagitious calumnies hurled at the fame and memories of the departed heroes and statesmen of the Revolution by gentlemen whose great learning and experience as statesmen have been developed in this war, by their cries for blood, by the violence and vindictiveness of their natures, sharpened by confiscation acts, illegal proclamations, suppression of speech and the press, and who now gloat in their revenge upon unarmed men, innocent and defenseless women and children, I feel that to be silent under such circumstances would be criminal and recreant to every principle of honor and manhood.

It must be a source of profound regret to every votary of republican and representative government, that the dominant or revolutionary party now upon this floor, professing to represent the people of this great Government, was elected to the places they now hold amid the most terrific, cruel, and bloody civil war ever waged since the morning of creation; elected

HO. OF REPS.

The Constitution and the Union—Mr. Trimble.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

upon the paramount and distinct issue, as they professed, to preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution and the Union. But, oh! how shamefully they have violated, and are to-day violating, all their solemn resolves and pledges; trampling beneath their unhallowed feet the Constitution they have sworn in the presence of God to support, protect, and defend. Charity would probably plead for them, in much of the legislation done here, that they are acting under the inspiration of a Constitution they are going to make, which is to be odorous with the fragrance of their recently emancipated allies and friends, the negroes, who are, as they say, so preëminently qualified to govern and control this great country, schooled as they have been in that great school of slavery by cruel and inhuman masters. With such high Christian results accomplished by these southern people, ought you to lose the services of such valuable and efficient teachers of Africans? I shall not be surprised to hear next that a fleet of Yankee ships are on the way from the land of Africa or some other country, with a new supply of Congoes, to be elevated to the high estate of voters and American citizens by and through servitude and slavery. Of one thing I feel assured, if the past be any criterion for the future, they will take good care to be paid in gold, as they were paid for those the North sold to the South before the suppression of the slave trade.

The people of the South are not alone responsible for the institution of slavery. Did not the New England and northern ship-owners and capitalists receive rich and solid tribute from this trade they then so zealously protected, and now so unanimously denounce and condemn? If their avaricious schemes aided by the Freedmen's Bureau had not been frustrated by the timely interference of the veto of President Johnson, the unfortunate negroes of the South would to-day be under the most galling and despotic slavery the world ever saw, with only a change of masters, with none of the care and responsibilities of that humane but much abused class in the South.

Sir, this Republican party must entertain the hope and belief that there is no hereafter; that an outraged, oppressed, and tax-ridden people will never again be free. You deceive yourselves when you lay that flattering unction to your souls. We do not despair of the Union and the Constitution. That glorious era of law and of order, of freedom to the white man, cannot long be deferred. In defiance of bastiles and guard-houses and the minions of tyrants who would enslave them, the toiling millions cannot and will not long be enslaved. They will burst the chains that bind them, and in their just and righteous indignation hurl from power these tyrants and revolutionists who are to-day sowing broadcast the fatal seed for another rebellion or revolution. Pause, I beseech you, in this career of force and of madness. If you, from this Capitol, force upon the people of the States, North and South, without their consent, your dogmas of negro equality, of negro suffrage, the Freedmen's Bureau, and kindred measures, with the tyrants and usurpers that must follow in the very nature of things; these measures must and will produce, in my judgment, alienation and disunion. War will be the inevitable result of such sectional, unjust, and flagitious legislation, if God in His mercy does not avert it. We have had enough of war, carnage, blood-letting, and assassination to satisfy, it seems to me, the thirst for blood of any one, even a hyena. The white people of Maine and of Texas, of all the States, are of right free, and should be treated as free-men. They are taxed, and should be entitled to vote, with representatives here. They ought to be treated with kindness and justice. Friendship and union, to be lasting, should be reciprocal and founded in equality. Why not deal gently with them, as God has dealt with you? I entreat you to avoid the further shedding of blood. This can be accomplished by us in acting as becomes Christians and patriots, uniting our whole country in the bonds of union, justice, and mercy, thus making the United States truly a refuge and asylum, not only for our own people, but for the oppressed of every nation and every clime.

In the district which I have the honor to represent, the first Kentucky, this remorseless and despotic party have, by their minions and miserable satellites, robbed, pillaged, and plundered the citizens to enrich themselves; burned their houses and their homes, turning innocent women and helpless children homeless to the wintry blast and cold charity of a friendless world, and to-day are repudiating just claims for property consumed by the Army and destroyed by order of military commanders. They have held our elections, driving from the polls loyal and legal voters at the point of the bayonet; issuing and executing illegal and infamous military orders; imprisoning loyal citizens for no cause except they refused to make war upon the Constitution; ordering our loyal judges to dismiss cases and enter up decrees to serve the purposes of tyrants and criminals; imprisoning loyal and law-abiding citizens for no crime except opposing crime, lawlessness, and vice. Hear the following summons and return:

The Commonwealth of Kentucky,

To the Sheriff of McCracken County, greeting:

You are commanded to summon Colonel James N. McArthur, Colonel A. M. York, and the owners of the steamboat Charmer, and A. M. DeSouhet, the master and part owner thereof, to answer on the first day of the next October term of the McCracken circuit court, a petition filed against them in the said court, by R. Saunders, and warn them that upon their failure to answer, the petition will be taken for confessed, or they will be proceeded against for contempt; and you will make due return of this summons on the first day of the next October term of said court.

Witness, B. SMALL, clerk of said court, this 20th day of September, 1865.

B. SMALL.

A copy. Attest:

B. SMALL, C. M. C. C.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT WEST KENTUCKY.

PADUCAH, KENTUCKY, September 23, 1865.

Respectfully returned through the sheriff of McCracken county to B. Small, clerk of the circuit court.

The civil authorities had no power to summon a United States officer, nor have they any jurisdiction toward the military in a State or Territory where martial law prevails. Nor have they any jurisdiction over officers or soldiers of the United States Army in any State or Territory where the writ of habeas corpus has been suspended.

Any further prosecution in this case or any other case of this character will subject the parties to arrest and imprisonment.

By command of Colonel James M. McArthur, commanding district of West Kentucky, and second brigade, first division, department of Kentucky:

SAMUEL WATSON, A. A. A. G.

A copy. Attest:

B. SMALL, C. M. C. C.

This was long after the surrender of the last confederate soldier, when we should have had peace with law and order.

Another specimen. I will read one of the said orders, published in McPherson's book, page 313, upon which there was a return of "fully executed by the military, August, 1863," to wit:

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH DIVISION

SIXTEENTH ARMY CORPS,

COLUMBIA, KENTUCKY, July 29, 1863.

That no further doubt may exist as to the intent and meaning of Special Orders No. 150, dated headquarters sixteenth Army corps, July 14, 1863, it is ordered that no person shall be permitted to be voted for or be a candidate for office who has been or is now under arrest or bonds, by proper authority, for uttering disloyal language or sentiments.

County judges within this district are hereby ordered to appoint as judges and clerks of the ensuing August elections only such persons as are avowedly and unconditionally for the Union and the suppression of the rebellion, and are further ordered to revoke and recall any appointment of judges or clerks already made who are not such loyal persons.

Judges and clerks of elections are hereby ordered not to place the name of any person upon the poll-books, to be voted for at said election, who is not avowedly and unconditionally for the Union and the suppression of the rebellion, or who may be opposed to furnishing men and money for the suppression of the rebellion.

The following oath is prescribed, and will be administered by judges of elections to voters, and to such candidates as reside within the district:

"I do solemnly swear that I have never entered the service of the so-called confederate States; that I have not been engaged in the service of the so-called 'provisional government of Kentucky,' either in a civil or military capacity; that I have never, either directly or indirectly, aided the rebellion against the Government of the United States or the State of Kentucky; that I am unconditionally for the Union and the suppression of the rebellion, and am willing to furnish men and money for the vigorous prosecution of the war against the rebellious league known as the 'confederate States.' So help me God."

Any voter, judge, or clerk of elections, or other person who may evade, neglect, or refuse compliance with this order, will be arrested and sent before a military commission as soon as the facts are substantiated.

By order of Brigadier General Asboth:

T. H. HARRIS,
Assistant Adjutant General.

This, with some twelve others, with the "bastile," was used in 1863 to elect one L. Anderson to vote in violation of the known wishes of the people of that district to amend the Constitution, arrest a citizen and candidate without cause, then make his arrest cause for striking his name from the poll-book, and disfranchising and imprisoning his friends; which was done in this instance, as the records show. All of which was done in plain and open violation of the constitution and laws of Kentucky. O shame! where thy blush? This is the character of appliances brought to bear by a venal and desperate party to maintain the Constitution and the Union. No; not to main the Constitution and Union, but to overthrow it and the liberties of the people. The vote on the thirteenth amendment stood 119 to 56, not a majority even of a full Congress, much less two thirds. I regret to say it was carried by the votes of men from border slave States. A change of three votes would have altered the result. Without the vote of this bayonet Congressman, L. Anderson, and the aid of two others elected by like means we would have to-day the Constitution as our fathers made it, with union, peace, and prosperity. This is the way our Constitution was amended: robbing Kentucky and the South of $4,000,000,000 of property.

But shall this dominant party claim that numbers are the great element of free government when they are really a majority of a minority, if you estimate the whole white voting population of the United States? Defiantly we are told that such a majority is infallible and omnipotent; the divine right of kings to rule is only transferred to this malignant minority. I have been taught that one of the objects of constitutional and well-regulated Governments was to restrain excited and revolutionary majorities; to protect the weak. A Constitution to the self-constituted dictators in this House is but unrighteous inventions restricting liberty. No Constitution ought to exist, but that we Democrats should bow to the great Sanhedrim of the saints, admit that they are the saints, whose first duty is to free all the negroes in the South, and make them voters, to keep up the Republican or disunion party. Then enslave and disfranchise the white people there, and take their property that they have not already taken; they to meet in caucus and keep up their organization; to bring out their flats in defiance of President, people, and Constitution.

I will give you a specimen of this immaculate party's tactics and documents in the campaign of 1864 in my district:

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT WESTERN KENTUCKY,
PADUCAH, September 6, 1861.

Mr. L. S. TRIMBLE:

You are hereby notified to appear at the counting-room of B. G. Brazelton, in the city of Paducah, within ten days from this date, and pay over the sum of five thousand dollars, the amount of an assessment levied on you to reimburse Union men for property taken by rebels in their several raids in this district.

By order of Brigadier General E. A. Paine, commanding district of Western Kentucky:

W. M. STARKS,
T. M. REDD,
B. G. BRAZELTON,
Commissioners.

Office hours from two to five o'clock p. m.

Brazelton denies this act.

This was executed upon me by delivery at my office in Paducah, Kentucky. This is but one of hundreds issued by that incarnate fiend Paine, by which thousands were imprisoned, robbed, pillaged, and plundered.

Kentucky, with all her sufferings and wrongs, inflicted by those who profess to be her friends, has remained as true as the needle to the pole to the Union and the Constitution. Still she is taunted by upstarts as disloyal. You wonder that Kentucky complains at the treatment she has received at the hands of the Federal Government. She does complain with just and holy cause. Every promise and pledge made to her was made only to be broken; every right and privilege, however dear and inalienable to her under the Constitution, has been trampled under foot with scorn and contempt. Can you wonder she complains? It is the consequence of your own infliction of wrongs.

"The blood will follow where the knife is driven. The flesh will quiver where the pincer tears."

Your friendship to her has been worse than hostility. She feels its embrace by the pressure of her fetters. I am only amazed that she submits to such tyranny and usurpation. Forbearance will ere long cease to be a virtue. She has petitioned respectfully in time of war; she wastold to wait until the war was over; that was not the time. We now petition in time of peace to make and execute our own laws. We are told the war is not yet over. Our remonstrances were first mocked and construed into treason, then into impudence and audacity. Why do you by your legislation draw invidious distinctions between Kentucky and her loyal sister States of the North? Was it because she refused to be precipitated into revolution and join her kindred and friends of the South, but adhered unflinchingly to the Union and Constitution, offering and sacrificing upon every battle-field her heroic and gallant sons that the nation might live? Is this the justice you would have meted out to you? Is it justice? Nay, sir; it is base ingratitude.

The faith that has been kept with Kentucky has been only Panic faith. The Government by solemn enactment of law agreed to pay the loyal States for the slaves which voluntarily enlisted or were forced into the Army. Under this law Maryland and Delaware were partially compensated for their lost property. But Kentucky has never been paid to this day. The late President forbid the appointment of commissioners to adjust the claims of citizens of my State; and notwithstanding there are millions of dollars in the fund set apart for this purpose, she has not been paid, and never will be in my opinion, if the majority here shall remain in power.

There have been many things done in Kentucky that I do not indorse, that never were indorsed by a majority of her people. But throughout this entire conflict a majority of her noble and gallant sons have heroically and defiantly stood by the principles of self-government so indelibly impressed upon them by the teachings of her immortal and patriotic sires. She was the first-born of Virginia, that mother of States and of statesmen, which contributed more to establish this Government than any other State. Virginia gave to the United States, in a spirit of patriotism and undying love for the Constitution, an empire—the Northwest Territory—now comprising the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin, represented on this floor by fifty-six Representatives, in the other end of this Capitol by ten Senators. By this act she gave that rich and valuable country to the United States. Little did Virginia then dream or believe that the children of her common country, aided by her bounty and enjoying the richest legacy ever enjoyed by any people in the world, would so soon and so far forget their duty to themselves, their country, and benefactor, as to now turn upon her with passion and malignity to drive her, mutilated as she is, from the Union and the Constitution of her fathers, levying onerous and unequal taxes upon her charred ruins, denying her representation as a coequal State. Honor and justice revolt at such ingratitude. This fell spirit would drive your mothers from your houses and homes, making them wanderers and outcasts, with no place to lay their weary, devoted heads.

The dominant party here treat with scorn and derision the declared policy of the President and the people of the North and South. They have placed the Government of the Constitution in abeyance, and its legislative and executive functions are usurped by a revolutionary cabal who, in obedience to caucus, govern the nation through the forms of a directory. The right of each State to regulate the qualifications of its electors is denied, the will of the people of the District of Columbia is overridden; and by an almost unanimous vote they are for according to the negro equal political rights with the white man. The initial step, in my opinion, to a war of races has been taken, and a consolidated Government looms up in the future, if it be not already accomplished.

Sir, if the rights and powers claimed by the majority here for the Federal Government be not restrained, then, indeed, have we become a grand military centralized despotism, with no restraint upon the fury of passion or venality of party warfare. If you have a right by constitutional amendment to take my private property without compensation, either for public use or not; if you have the right, under your Freedmen's Bureau Bill, by despotic agents, to invade the States in times of profound peace, take my land, arrest, fine, and imprison me, denying me the right of suffrage, the writ of habeas corpus, trial by jury, or bail, then I fear indeed the Union is gone, our liberties forever lost. If they have authority thus to act they can with the same impunity create titles of nobility, declare Butler king or Fred. Douglass emperor, repudiate the public debt, abolish trial by jury. What may they not do?

We are told by the majority in their fury and frenzy that President Johnson's infractions of the Constitution in England would have cost him his head. They should remember and ponder upon it well, and not forget that they have heads also, and that history often repeats itself. We are informed that some instances have occurred when the gallows and guillotine were used contrary to the wishes of the inventors for the execution of the builders and makers. I know of no better guide for the future than the past. While we adhered to the Constitution we had peace, wealth, prosperity, and happiness, challenging and commanding the respect and admiration of the world, our commerce whitened every sea, our proud flag waved honored and respected in every port. Why is this not so to-day? The war is over. You can trace all our troubles and trials to this one source—disobedience to our own Constitution and laws.

Sir, when we demand that our Constitution and laws shall be respected and obeyed, ought we not to respect and obey them ourselves? You have whipped South Carolina and the other seceded States into obedience under our Constitution and laws. We require them to pay taxes, we require them to do more in the way of tribute to the Government than we require from New England. What do you give them in return? Nothing but insult, cruelty, and oppression. You declare them aliens and foreigners. You pass unjust laws to impoverish, degrade, and finally destroy them as a people.

By the resolution passed by Congress and by this House on the 22d day of July, 1861, it was solemnly asserted by the Congress of the United States that the war was prosecuted not to oppress, nor to conquer, nor to subjugate, nor to overthrow, nor to interfere with the rights of the States, but to defend and maintain the Constitution and preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality, and rights of the several States unimpaired. When accomplished, the war ought to cease.

On the 6th of February 1863, President Lincoln authorized Secretary Seward to make the following important avowal, among other things, in reply to an offer of mediation between the United States and the confederate States made by the French Government:

"We have here, in the political sense, no North and South, no northern and southern States."

"The Congress of the United States furnishes a constitutional forum for debate between alienated parties. Senators and Representatives from the loyal portion of the people are there already, freely empowered to confer; and seats also are vacant, and inviting Senators and Representatives of this discontented party, who may be constitutionally sent there from the States involved in the insurrection."

These declarations contain the whole gist of the policy, not only of President Lincoln, but of the Government, as declared by the three great departments, legislative, executive, and judicial.

Does the Government stand by these solemn pledges made to the North, South, East, and West, and to the world? Did not Congress and Mr. Seward, the organ of the Government, hereby and herein declare that we accepted the war to make good and defend the Constitution and guaranty the State governments with all their dignity, equality, and rights unimpaired? Was this resolution an official declaration issued to deceive and inveigle into the Army the true men of the country who held the principles therein contained? Was this a deliberate falsehood or a solemn farce, to be changed with new scenery in another act, or were they high, holy, and national manifestoes to the people of the States and the world of the purpose and object for which the war was waged? I must weep for my country if she, when reason resumes its throne, shall then repudiate and renounce these solemn pledges thus expressed, and turn the whole power of the Government upon one section, and crucify States and State institutions, which cost such fearful sacrifices of blood and treasure, and which she undertook to protect and save through all time.

It is said the States of the South seceded and formed a new so-called government. They did, and we declared these acts null and void. They appealed to the sword—so did we—and submitted the question to the arbitrament of war and the God of battles. The result is before the world and a part of the history of the country. The decree should now be rendered that the Union is saved, the Constitution is saved, the States are saved, with the rights of every citizen in this land preserved, with the eleven stars of the South upon that glorious old flag shining with renewed splendor and glory. Desecrate not that flag, I entreat you, by mutilation or by tearing from its folds eleven or one single star; let it continue to greet the breezes of heaven as the ensign of thirty-six coequal States united by a just Government, shedding its blessings upon all like the dews of heaven. Let there be one refuge secure from tyranny and oppression; let that glorious refuge be here in the United States of America.

I have ever believed and sincerely believe to-day that the only way or hope to save this Union and preserve the life of the nation will be to preserve inviolate the Constitution. Tell me not that you can preserve my life after you have torn out my heart; it is as idle to talk of preserving this nation by overthrowing her Constitution. Under no circumstance conceivable by the human mind have I or would I ever violate that Constitution for any purpose. I will cling to it as the last hope of freedom, as the bond of unity in the past, as the only practical bond of union in the future, the only land lifted above the waters to which the ark of the Union can be moored. From that ark alone will go out the dove, which shall return bringing the habeas corpus and the olive-branch of peace.

HO. OF REPS.

The Constitution and the Union—Mr. Trimble.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

The Union was originally formed by the exercise of a spirit of conciliation and compromise; to restore and preserve it the same spirit must prevail in our councils and the hearts of the people. Who will assert that our ancestors would have formed this Union with the people of the North if the feelings and opinions now existing among them had then existed? When the Constitution was framed there was then no hatred, no sectional strife, no negro suffrage, no Freedmen's Bureau, no military despotism, no high tariffs, no taxation without representation to enslave one section of the country to carry out the Black Republican negro policy to the detriment and disgrace of all. Then they were coequal States, protected alike, acknowledged by the Government and the world to be sovereign and independent States. By the Constitution certain duties were imposed upon the several States, and the exercise of certain of their powers was restrained, which implied their continued existence as States. But to remove all doubt an amendment was added which declared that the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people. The reserved rights of the States have been treated as nullities, not worth the paper on which they were written.

The finances of the country demand our immediate consideration. If we would avoid bankruptcy and repudiation our taxes should be equal and uniform. The wealth of the country should bear its just proportion, whether in bonds, stocks, or anything else. The rate of interest should be reduced, the debt scaled whenever there was fraud or want of consideration. All just claims should be paid. We should settle fair. When we go into court for equity we should do justice ourselves.

Sir, it has been said in this Hall, and elsewhere, by distinguished leaders of the radical party, that the Constitution and Union should never be restored as it was before this terrible civil war. Disunionists may and will object, but patriots would glory in such a result. Would to God I had it in my power, I would issue a general amnesty and let the captives free. I would open the new-made graves from the R.R. Grande to Gettysburg, restore the dead to life, the widows to their husbands, the orphans to their fathers, and the charred ruins and desolations of the South to all their original splendor. Sir, I would restore the maimed, the halt, crippled, and the blind with a reunion of friends and of States under the Constitution, with the ardent prayer that God in His wisdom and mercy should never again scourge a people as we have been.

But, sir, that is impossible. But we can and ought to do this for the thousands who have upon each side, in the discharge of what they considered their duty to their God, their country, their homes, and their firesides—who have gone from the bloody fields of war to that undiscovered bourne from whence no traveler ever returns—we should throw over their graves and memory the mantle of charity, foster and protect their widows and orphans, and, if possible, save for the living and posterity the Constitution unamended by tinkers, and which I trust will yet bless us with the best Government ever vouchsafed by God to any people since the morning of creation. Let us act with charity toward all and malice toward none; save, restore, and protect what is left from the fires of war to the living and those who are to come after us.

We are told by the action of Congress the southern people are disloyal. Will the taxing of cotton, the adoption of the various amendments submitted here and to the States, crushing out the last vestige of State rights and the liberty of the citizens, make them loyal? They were told, "If you will abolish slavery, give up four thousand millions of property guarantied to you by the Constitution of the United States, and yours by law until confiscated by legal process; if you will ratify the amendment and repudiate your war debt for the payment of which the faith of your States were pledged in many instances, it will be evidence of your loyalty and submission to the Federal Government; you will be entitled then to return to the house of your fathers." They did all this with an alacrity and unanimity never displayed before by any free people. But now it is sought to enforce other more onerous and degrading conditions. The pound of flesh was nominated in the bond, but not one jot of blood.

Suppose the southern people could be so lost to honor and manhood as to accept the terms proposed by the radicals or revolutionists, would their abject obedience to your unlawful behests fit them in any sense to become free American citizens? The people of the South say we have thought five years' residence was necessary to fit the intelligent foreigner for citizenship, so as to acquire knowledge of our institutions, yet Congress will admit that the negro, even though in besotted ignorance, is better than the foreigner, equal before the law with ourselves. Enfranchising the negro by Congress, will that make the South loyal? The imposition of such an act, its acceptance or non-acceptance does not change their position. What is the test a great nation should make of loyalty other than submission to the Constitution as it is and the laws passed in pursuance thereof? Does any gentleman here pretend a necessity for any other test? Does he apply any other test to his own loyalty, or ought he in justice? I fear there are some among us who care less for loyalty than power and plunder, and nothing for justice, but more to spit out their venom and wreak vengeance on a brave and chivalrous people whom the fortunes of war have prostrated at our feet. Nationalize our people; obliterate all sectional feeling by national, just, and humane laws. Every man should be proud of his State when its people have adorned their manhood by deeds of chivalry and valor. Has any one here looked on a returning regiment from the war, belonging to his own or native State, who has heard of its valor on the field? He sees its ranks thinned, and knows these veterans are battle-scarred; he sees that flag which was presented to them brought back, but in tatters, for it has borne the storm of battle. Who is there that does not feel a pride for these men, and for the State that gave them birth, North or South? Shall the people of the South be denied this poor privilege, and if you please, to weep over their fallen braves, shed tears for departed friends? Nay, sir, let her fair women decorate the lonely graves of their loved ones and strew flowers upon the cold clay that covers their mortal remains. There is no treason in this. Do you fear dead men, or would you crush this feeling of affection that has commanded the respect of the wise and good of all ages?

The issues which divided the Democrats and Abolitionists before the war are, as Mr. Lincoln predicted, again upon us. The Democratic party are unanimously in favor of restoring the Union with the rights of citizens unimpaired—the Republican party is against it. Then the cry was "No union with slaveholders." Now it is "No union with rebels." What further punishment do you propose to inflict on the South—on your own countrymen? Do you wish to prey on them as England has on poor Ireland, or crush them as the Kaiser did the Hungarians, or obliterate those States as Poland has been blotted out from the map of Europe by the Russian Czars? Sir, if you do not intend to have a Union upon terms of equality, you had better at once let the South go in peace, for no brave people ever did or ever will submit long to such taxes and oppression without representation. Our forefathers fought for representation. They established the principle by the offering of their lives and their blood that representation and taxation should go together. Is that principle less dear to American freemen to-day? No, sir; it will continue to glow and burn until again enshrined in the hearts of every true American in this land, and woe to the man or party that stands in the way of this inalienable right. Eleven States are kept out of the Union as subjugated provinces. Twenty-two Senators are denied votes in the Senate in plain violation of that provision of the Constitution (article five) that you admit cannot be amended except by the consent of the State deprived of her equal voice in the Senate. New England had well pause and survey the ground this precedent establishes; it may some day deprive her of her arrogance and power. As American freemen and Democrats we will raise the banner of the Constitution and Union, emblazon upon its folds taxation without representation is unconstitutional and tyrannous, and resistance to tyrants is obedience to God. Upon this issue we will appeal from Congress to the people, the source of all power. Who can doubt the result, aided as we will be by Andrew Johnson, the patriot and people's friend, and by every lover of law and order?

In this contest we do not seek partisan advantage; we are battling for the rights of all. We are determined that freedom of speech and of the press shall be unimpaired, although they may be used to denounce us and the Constitution. We intend that rights of conscience shall be protected, although mistaken views of duty may turn the temples of God into theaters for partisan denunciation.

This Congress will not save the Union. It has, by its vindictive legislation, by displays of hate and passion, placed obstructions in its own pathway which it cannot overcome, and has hampered its own powers of action by illegal and unconstitutional acts. But if Congress will not save the Union the great constitutional Democratic party can. Congress has placed many things above the Constitution; we put it first of all. They think amendments to the organic law are worth more than Union and peace; we demand no conditions for the restoration of the Union. We are shackled with no prejudices, no hate, no passion. We wish for fraternal relationship with the people of the South. We demand for them what we demand for ourselves, the full recognition of the rights of States and every citizen thereof. In the coming elections the people must decide with which of the now great political parties they will act. But as they value their liberty, vote for no man whose position is doubtful. If they wish for Union, peace, and liberty, they will act with that party which does now and always did love and reverence the Union of our fathers. If they wish peace, they will act with those who sought to avert the war, and who now seek to restore good-will and harmony among all sections of our common country. If they care for their rights as persons, and the sacredness of their homes, they will act with those who stood up to resist arbitrary arrests, despotie legislation, illegal proclamations, and the overthrow of the judiciary, the last hope of justice and liberty. I have yet faith in the patriotism and intelligence of the American people. To them must be submitted this momentous question. To them I shall look with an abiding confidence for the triumph of the Constitution over all enemies.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Koontz vs. Coffroth—Mr. McClurg.

HO. OF REPS.

Koontz vs. Coffroth.

SPEECH OF HON. J. W. MCCLURG,

OF MISSOURI,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

July 18, 1866.

The House resumed the consideration of the following resolutions, reported from the Committee of Elections:

Resolved, That Alexander H. Coffroth is not entitled to a seat in this House as a Representative from the sixteenth district of Pennsylvania in the Thirty-Ninth Congress.

Resolved, That William H. Koontz is entitled to a seat in this House as a Representative from the sixteenth district of Pennsylvania in the Thirty-Ninth Congress.

Mr. MCCLURG. Mr. Speaker, I hope I will receive the attention of the House for a very short time. I shall not presume too much upon the uniformly good temper of the House. I am compelled to make some remarks, as the sitting member deems it necessary for him to occupy his hour. But I shall be very brief, for a case that called for the labor and eloquence of the sitting member nine hours before the committee, and of the contestant four and a half hours, and to read carefully the report of which will require one hour. Neither is this the place to dissect and discuss, in all its parts, the evidence contained in a volume of two hundred and seventy-two pages. That must be done in the dissecting-room, the committee-room. I will, therefore, now present only the important features, the important points of the case.

The case is that of a contest for a seat in this House between William H. Koontz, contestant, and Hon. Alexander H. Coffroth, the sitting member, from the sixteenth congressional district of Pennsylvania. It will be remembered that in the early days of the present session there was a contest between the same parties on the prima facie right to the seat, neither having received a certificate of election. That contest was decided "upon the certificates and papers," "without prejudice to the right of William H. Koontz, claiming to have been duly elected." In the present contest we are brought properly, in pursuance of the resolutions of this House, by due notice and pleadings, to the investigation on the merits of the case; and the important question is, Who received the greater number of legal votes? In determining this little else enters into the contest than the claim by the contestant that certain soldiers' votes should be counted; and by the sitting member, not only that they should not be counted, but that other soldiers' votes should be deducted, claimed to have been improperly and illegally counted for the contestant. In other words, the contestant claims that he received of votes of legal voters whose votes were not included in the official count a sufficient number to overbalance the majority which appears for the sitting member on the official count, to wit, 88. The sitting member resists this claim, and would have deducted other votes, which he claims were illegally counted for contestant. The soldiers' vote decides this case. But before proceeding to consider it, I will briefly notice a claim of each party outside of the soldiers' vote.

PAUPERS.

The contestant claimed that 33 votes of paupers should be deducted from the count of sitting member, 17 in Bedford county and 16 in Adams, contending that, under the Pennsylvania law, paupers had no right to vote. It will be seen, on pages 7 and 8 of the report of the committee, that as the laws of Pennsylvania do not expressly deprive paupers of the exercise of the elective franchise the committee would not undertake to do so until the authorities of Pennsylvania shall have decided for themselves the law. The committee, therefore, make no deductions from count of sitting member on account of the pauper vote.

STUDENTS' VOTE.

On the other hand the sitting member claimed that 13 votes should be deducted from contestant's count because given by students at Gettysburg, claimed by him to be non-residents. As it was in proof that but one student voted for contestant who did not consider Gettysburg his place of residence, and as it is not in proof that the students' vote was counted, and in proof that three only voted for Mr. Koontz, the committee make no deductions.

We come, then, to the ## SOLDIERS' VOTE.

And, Mr. Speaker, I wish every member of the House to bear in mind that not one soldier vote claimed by or counted for the sitting member is attacked by the contestant. And further, not one soldier vote, is it claimed by sitting member, should for any reason be added to his own count. By referring to the table on eighth page of the report of the committee, it will be seen that but one vote in all has been deducted from count of the sitting member. That one is the vote of Hezekiah Hite, a minor, acknowledged by sitting member to have been such and to have voted for him. And it will be perceived that that one is deducted, not from his official count, but from 99 before uncounted votes given him from returns introduced by contestant and proven not to have been included in the official count. The contestant gathers up the returns of soldiers' votes which had either not been received by the boards of return judges who canvassed returns or had been rejected, and offers, as it were, to restore the right of voting to the disfranchised soldiers; while, on the other hand, the policy of the sitting member, both in his allegations and his argument, is attack upon the soldiers' vote, persistent attack. He offers to disfranchise many who voted for himself, that in so doing he may disfranchise more who voted for the contestant. These are facts which no sophistry in debate can remove or should be permitted to mystify.

It is acknowledged by the parties in this contest that the official count of votes gave the sitting member a majority of 88 votes. On page 2 of the report of the committee is a table showing and numbering eleven companies, camps, and hospitals, and it is alleged and claimed by the contestant that they cast for him, Mr. Koontz, 258 votes, and for Mr. Coffroth 99 votes, and that they were not included in the official count by the return judges of the counties of Bedford, Fulton, and Adams, and that they should now be counted. On pages 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of the report these eleven companies, camps, and hospitals are separately considered and the objections to the returns noticed. It is useless to consume time now in discussing these objections, as certainly neither the sitting member nor any one for him will attempt to interfere with the count of the committee, as on page 8 of the report, except so far as I shall name. There can be nothing dwelt upon so as to reduce the count in that table that can affect the result in this case. There can be no doubt, except as to McClellan hospital No. 6, pages 4 and 5 of report, and No. 7, one hundred and thirty-eighth Pennsylvania regiment, pages 5 and 6. One of my colleagues on the committee, the gentleman from Michigan, who would, if here, defend this report, if necessary, doubts, as likewise does the colleague from Vermont, the legality of the vote in the one hundred and thirty-eighth Pennsylvania regiment, because two companies, B and G, voted together at the same poll, when the soldiers' voting law, section two, on page 15 of report, requires that "a poll shall be opened in each company." They doubt whether the twenty-seventh section of law as to "informalities" removes the difficulty. This vote was 32 for Mr. Koontz and 1 for Mr. Coffroth. Deduct the majority, 31, from his majority, as on page 14 of the report, and a majority still remains for Mr. Koontz of 40 votes; 71 with this vote, 40 without.

The colleague from Wisconsin expressed some doubt as to McClellan hospital, which gives 3 for Mr. Koontz, and he may, in his mind, give Mr. Koontz a majority of only 68. I need not therefore dwell here, neither need the sitting member in his remarks, because all doubts, as expressed by all members of the committee, (and all had opportunity to express themselves except the colleague from Delaware,) added together and deducted would leave Mr. Koontz's majority 37 votes. This would be by deducting from the eleven companies, camps, and hospitals, page 2 of report, which the contestant proved by competent and legal testimony had been cast for him and not counted on the official count, all cases where there is a legal doubt, and after deducting also from Mr. Koontz, as appears in table on page 8 of report, 3 votes from the uncounted votes appearing on page 2. This majority of 71 or of 40, according to the views of members as to two companies of legal voters having voted at one poll, and without an attempt to show fraud or unfairness, but mere ignorance of the letter of the law, the sitting member attempts to overcome by an effort to show that other votes should be deducted which he claims were counted upon defective and illegal returns from various other companies, camps, and hospitals.

A like attempt is made in all the counties to disfranchise the soldiers to deduct from the official count of the contestant votes alleged by sitting member to have been counted which he claims should be deducted. It is clearly useless to inspect what he presents as returns, and claims to be informal and insufficient, in any of these counties, because there is no satisfactory or legal evidence to show what returns were before the return judges who made the count. There is not one word of evidence that what are called copies of returns are copies of what were before the return judges.

I ask attention to Adams county. The foundation being removed, all will admit nothing can stand. The foundation for what sitting member presents as insufficient returns, which he claims to have been counted for contestant, is this: "a tally-list" of a clerk, nothing more, nothing less.

On page 212 of Miscellaneous Document No. 117, Henry G. Wolf, a clerk for return judges, testifies that "this paper now before me is my tally-list of the votes received and counted by the judges," &c. That paper is not in evidence. It is not in any way in this book No. 117 for us to inspect it. If it were it would still be an unauthorized paper. Section sixty-three of election law of Pennsylvania (see page 14 of the report in this case) reads:

"The clerks [in the plural] shall make out a fair statement of all the votes which shall have been given at such election within the county, &c., which shall be signed by said judges and attested by the clerks."

The judges shall sign it and one judge shall take charge of it, &c. Here one clerk produces what he calls "my tally-list." Then, from that unauthorized paper, read by him or looked at, but not placed in evidence, he testifies that "among the votes counted" were certain votes, 1, 2, 6, and 1, at various camps named by him for Mr. Koontz. And as further proof this clerk refers to paper A, papers B, C, D, and paper E, which are not put in evidence. Still we find in this book what purport to be such papers, (but not the tally-list.) They are not in evidence. If they were the clerk does not swear they are copies of anything the judges had before them. We presume all the clerk swore to was true; that 1, 2, 6, and 1 votes were counted. But we also presume that they were not counted upon defective papers, and he does not swear they were counted upon such as he had before him or such as we find in this book. We might, then, very properly reject all this.

But to pursue these votes with sitting member, which he claims were counted on illegal papers, we look at what we suppose he intended to present as evidence and what he calls returns. We find them defective, one in this respect and another in that. And while I do not accuse any one, and certainly not the honorable gentleman who has the seat, of presenting extracts from poll-books, &c., it does seem to me that the decision of the majority on the prima facie case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, "that poll-books, &c., were fatally defective without certificate of oath of officers," has caused only parts of papers to be made out and certified. Look at the first, A; it seems to be carefully certified to be "true copies of the poll-book, tally-paper, and returns." It may be all it is certified to be, and yet a portion may not have been copied. No oath appears. No certificate appears, and no oath that all the papers were copied; and bear in mind there is no proof that other and better papers were not before the return judges.

HO. OF REPS.

Koontz vs. Coffroth—Mr. Koontz.

39TH CONG...1ST SESS.

Further remark here seems to me wholly unnecessary to intelligent gentlemen. I might take up these returns one by one and show that they may not be defective; but then I would come to this same point, and could not say, for my life, whether these votes were counted or not; or, if counted, whether upon these papers.

As clearly in point, I will read from the report of the committee in the late case of Fuller vs. Dawson, in which like papers were excluded to the advantage of the sitting member, as follows:

"The prothonotary certifies that the transcript given on pages 68 and 69 of the second book is a correct copy of the poll-book, tally-list, and certificate of the return of the election, but makes no allusion to the certificate of oaths in the case. If these votes were, in fact, canvassed, and the only evidence upon which the canvass was made was such as is found in this transcript, it is clear that under the rule adopted by the majority of the committee respecting the hospital returns in the case of Koontz vs. Coffroth, these votes ought not to have been counted, for the certificates of oaths are entirely wanting. But it is not shown affirmatively that this was the only evidence, and the transcript raises no such presumption, because the prothonotary's certificate does not exclude the idea that perfect certificates may have been on file in his office."

In this condition and on this foundation are all the papers on which we are asked to deduct soldiers' votes in this (Adams) county. The attempt in each of the other counties is of a like character.

BEDFORD COUNTY.

In Bedford county there is no evidence as to what papers were before the return judges. For a portion of them the prothonotary testifies that returns "from Nos. 44 to 53 are certified copies of the returns sent to me by the secretary of the Commonwealth, as shown by my certificate to the return judges." He produced a certified copy of his own certificate to the return judges, which certificate he made without authority of law. Certified copies of returns are required by eighteenth section of soldiers' law, and he took upon himself to certify a tabular statement made out by himself. Although it may be true the votes were counted, it cannot be presumed, without evidence, they were counted upon such papers. Certified copies of the returns before the judges should have been presented to the committee, and were not. This very certificate of the prothonotary was rejected by the committee on the prima facie case, Koontz vs. Coffroth, and therefore the sitting member had notice, if he did not otherwise know, that such papers were not admissible as evidence.

SOMERSET COUNTY.

For Somerset county it is the same argument over again. "A certified copy of a tally-paper of clerks" is produced, and we are asked to reject returns alluded to in that unauthorized paper. A like paper was rejected by the committee in the case of Fuller vs. Dawson, as shown by the report in this case, pages 12 and 13.

FRANKLIN AND FULTON COUNTIES.

In Franklin and Fulton counties there is the same want of evidence to show what returns were before the judges and counted. The committee have therefore been led to recommend the resolutions which, if adopted, will give the seat to Mr. Koontz.

But I should not close without asking gentlemen to read extracts from testimony of deserters, on pages 11 and 12 of the report. The sitting member asks attention to it in his brief. He claims that soldiers at the polls "deterred" some twenty or thirty "citizens" from voting. These "citizens," or a number of them, are produced and testify for the sitting member. I earnestly unite with the sitting member in inviting attention to that testimony, pages 11 and 12 of report, or pages 184 to 190 of this book, Miscellaneous Document No. 117. I need not now refer to the law, but quote from one witness to show the character of the "citizens" whose votes would be counted by the sitting member to exclude or neutralize soldiers' votes. Peter G. Miller, commencing near foot of page 11 of report, and on pages 188 and 189 of this book, (Miscellaneous Document No. 117), swears:

"I was across, between the top and foot of the mountain, about six miles from the election; I did not go any nearer the polls; I did not offer my vote, because I was afraid to go there; I was a conscript and had not reported; I was drafted in 1863, in August, and had managed to escape the officers all that time; I would have been apt to have voted for Coffroth if I had gone, most assuredly; I am a Democrat in politics."

With one remark more I shall have finished. Judging by the past, I presume the sitting member will talk about persons voting who had not been assessed, &c., say some twenty-two in Somerset county. I have not here spoken of that and some other talk we will probably hear, because it is all excluded unless we admit those unauthorized certificates and tally-papers of clerks, &c., that I have alluded to. And, if they were admitted, the proper record evidence of assessments is not introduced, and it will be perceived that, in his brief, the sitting member ruled the contestant to record testimony where it could be produced. And of the 9 voters for Bedford county which he would exclude on such papers, I may in addition state that, for a portion of them, it is not in proof for whom they voted. I may add, as to Franklin county, in addition to what I said, that nothing shows what returns were counted, that the attempt to have 4 votes deducted because General Couch and staff voted and were "Black Republicans," is in character with much of what is called evidence in this book. The sitting member, in his brief, claims these votes should be deducted, and says, "See testimony of J. Newton Stelletto, page 237." What is that testimony to which he invites attention in order to deduct votes? Witness swears:

"Major John S. Schultz and Captain T. B. Swearingen voted; I do not know how they voted; both were members of General Couch's staff, whose headquarters were at Chambersburg; General Couch also voted."

Another witness, on same page, testified:

"I know these military men were Black Republicans, and intended to vote that ticket; I never heard them say how they had voted."

Mr. Speaker, I think it is unnecessary to say more.

Koontz vs. Coffroth.

SPEECH OF HON. W. H. KOONTZ,
OF PENNSYLVANIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
July 18, 1866.

The House resumed the consideration of the following resolutions, reported from the Committee of Elections:

Resolved, That Alexander H. Coffroth is not entitled to a seat in this House as a Representative from the sixteenth district of Pennsylvania in the Thirty-Ninth Congress.

Resolved, That William H. Koontz is entitled to a seat in this House as a Representative from the sixteenth district of Pennsylvania in the Thirty-Ninth Congress.

Mr. KOONTZ, (contestant.) Mr. Speaker, I claim the right to represent the sixteenth congressional district of Pennsylvania in this Congress. I will endeavor, in as brief a manner as possible, to present to the consideration of the House the grounds upon which my title is based. I assert that a majority of the legal votes of the district were cast for me, and that the official canvass, which gives the sitting member 11,067 votes, and myself 10,979 votes, being a majority in his favor of 88, is incorrect, for the following reasons:

1. It does not contain all the votes that were cast for member of the House of Representatives in said district by the duly qualified electors thereof; the return judges of three of the counties, to wit, Bedford, Fulton, and Adams, having excluded from the count eleven returns of elections held by soldiers from the district in actual military service under the laws of Pennsylvania.

2. That the board of return judges of Adams county made a mistake of 2 against me in counting the vote of the district of Hamilton Ban and Liberty townships, which should now be added to my vote.

3. That certain illegal votes were cast and counted for the sitting member.

I will proceed to consider these points in the order in which they are stated. The returns which were rejected by the judges, and which I claim should be added to the official canvass, are as follows:

		Koontz. Coffroth.
No. 1. Company H, 208th regiment,	army of the James.....	34	18
2. Barracks No. 1, Soldiers' Rest,	Washington, D. C.....	58	29
3. Company G, 205th regiment.....		8	2
4. Mower hospital, United States,	Philadelphia.....	1	-
5. Cuyler United States hospital,	Philadelphia.....	1	-
6. McClellan United States hospital,	Philadelphia.....	3	-
7. 138th Pennsylvania regiment,	Front Royal, Virginia.....	32	1
8. 184th Pennsylvania regiment,		39	21
9. 202d Pennsylvania regiment,	White Plains.....	27	15
10. 21st Pennsylvania cavalry, City	Point, Virginia.....	36	4
11. 210th Pennsylvania regiment,		19	9
Total.....		258	99

I will not consume the time of the House in answering the various objections that were made to these returns, as that has been fully and ably done by the committee in their report. I will simply state that all the objections are overcome by the testimony, which shows conclusively that the elections were all fairly held, that the persons voting were duly qualified voters of the district, that they were required to establish their right to vote by the production of tax receipts or other necessary proof, and that in every case save one the officers were duly qualified according to law. In that case the officers were sworn by the captain of the company, who is not authorized by the law to administer the oath; but because the officers were not properly qualified the election is not thereby invalidated. They were public officers de facto, and as such their acts are valid and binding. This principle of law is thus laid down by Chancellor Kent:

"In the case of public officers who are such de facto, acting under color of office, by an election or appointment not strictly legal, or without having qualified themselves by the requisite tests, or by holding over after the period prescribed for a new appointment, their acts are held valid as respects the rights of third persons who have an interest in them, and as concerns the public, in order to prevent a failure of justice."

It is proven, also, that this election was fairly conducted, and neither in this nor any of the other rejected returns has the sitting member attempted to show fraud in holding the elections.

The committee have deducted 1 vote from me in each of the returns of company H, two hundred and eighth regiment, and company K, one hundred and eighty-fourth regiment, by reason of a discrepancy in the number of votes returned and the number of voters on the lists, the returns being in excess of the lists, 1 in each company. They also refuse to count the vote cast for me at Cuyler hospital; not because it was an illegal vote, for the voter, Henry Rupp, on page 60, Miscellaneous Document No. 117, swears that he voted for me, and that he was a qualified voter at the time; but because I failed to insert the name of this witness in the notice for taking testimony. With these exceptions, the committee have recommended in their report that the votes contained in the foregoing returns should be counted, the legality of the votes having been fully established by the evidence.

By the act of 31st of January, 1801, (Smith's Laws, volume three, page 449,) the townships of Hamilton and Liberty, in Adams county, are created into an election district. A certified copy of the return of this election, on page 113, Miscellaneous Document No. 117, shows that I had 165 votes, while the testimony of Wolf, on page 212, shows that said return was only counted 163. I am therefore clearly entitled to these 2 votes.

The illegal votes that I object to as having been cast for the sitting member were those of thirty-three paupers taken out of the poor-houses of the counties of Adams and Bedford. As it does not appear in the testimony that the votes of the seventeen Bedford county paupers were included in the official count, although it is clearly proven that they voted for the sitting member, and as it is not shown that the sixteen paupers in Adams county who voted for him were not residents of Cumberland township, wherein the poor-house is located, and further, as the question of the right of paupers to vote under the laws of Pennsylvania has never been adjudicated by the courts of the State, the committee have refused to deduct these votes from the sitting member. Although upon this point I yield to the superior judgment of the committee, I cannot but express my firm conviction that under the laws of Pennsylvania a pauper in the common poor-house of a county is not entitled to the right of suffrage. By the constitution of Pennsylvania this right is restricted to white freemen over the age of twenty-one years, and when over twenty-two years of age the voter must have paid a State or county tax within two years. The foundation of this tax is an assessment upon the real or personal estate of the voter, or his occupation, or upon single freemen above the age of twenty-one years. A pauper cannot be the subject of taxation, because the moment he is sent to the poor-house his property is by law placed under the control of the directors of the poor; he cannot sue for and recover it, and is in the same position, in the eye of the law, as infants, lunatics, &c. His "occupation is gone" the moment he enters it, for he there becomes liable to do such duty as the steward may direct, nor has he the right of locomotion; he cannot come and go whithersoever he pleases, but his person is under the control of the overseer, and he therefore does not possess the essential elements necessary to constitute a freeman as intended by the legislative clause making single freemen the subjects of taxation, or within the meaning of the constitution restricting the right of suffrage to white freemen. The danger of allowing them the right to vote is shown in this case. In both the counties the stewards were active partisans, looking after the assessment and payment of taxes, and taking the paupers to the polls, and in one county it is proven that the steward offered to treat all who would vote the Democratic ticket, and as an inducement to one of the paupers to vote that ticket offered to buy him an article of clothing. It must be perfectly plain that under such circumstances a pauper cannot cast a free ballot because, did he attempt to contravene the wishes of the steward, he would not be permitted to go to the polls. The refusal of the committee to deduct these votes from the sitting member does not, however, change the result, and under such circumstances it could not be asked of the committee to decide an immaterial point which has never been adjudicated by the courts of the State. Without deducting these votes from the sitting member I have still a majority of 71 votes over his majority in the official canvass, having shown to the satisfaction of the committee that in the uncounted returns I had a majority of 159 votes.

And what is the answer made by the sitting member to my case, which is so clearly established by the testimony? The points raised by him in his answer and argument may be classified as follows:

1. Alleged illegal votes received and counted for me by the board of election officers in some of the election precincts in the district.

2. Alleged illegal military returns said to have been received and counted for me by the boards of return judges, of the different counties.

3. That certain legal voters were restrained from going to the polls in certain districts in Bedford county through fear of arrest by the military, they being deserters, and that as they desired to vote and would have voted for the sitting member, had they gone to the polls, their votes should now be counted for him.

To sustain the first proposition the testimony of several witnesses was taken in all of the counties of the district except Fulton. It does not appear from the testimony that the votes assailed by the sitting member were included in the official canvass. Before any votes can be deducted from me he must first show that the votes were illegal, and second, that they were counted for me. In every instance he has failed to make the necessary proof that they were counted, attempting by illegal papers, wholly unauthorized by law, to establish these facts. But as this question has been so fully discussed by the committee in their report, and settled in accordance with the previous rulings of the committee upon like questions, I will not dwell upon it.

I now propose to take his testimony, and, assuming for the sake of the argument that the votes assailed by him were included in the official canvass, show that even if it were considered and all the weight given it that could be given by any impartial tribunal, it cannot change the result in this case. I will consider, first, the votes assailed by parol proof; second, the returns that he would have rejected; and third, the votes that he demands should be counted for him; and will take them just in the order in which he presents them in his brief prepared for the use of the committee. The alleged illegal votes in Somerset county are the following:

1. Charles B. Ellsworth, company F, one hundred and ninety-eight regiment.
2. George C. Chrestner, company F, forty-fifth regiment.
3. Lewis Andrews voted in Jonner township.
4. John S. Ellis voted, fifty-fourth regiment, Cedar creek, Virginia.
5. John H. Lloyd, company F, one hundred and thirty-eighth regiment.
6. Paul Hoffman, in Greenville township.
7. John Miers voted at Clarysville hospital.
8. William H. Owen, Mower hospital.
9. Edward Haisappel, York hospital.
10. Samuel Hummel, company B, fifty-fourth regiment.
11. Hiram I. Sauner, Chester hospital.
12. William H. Sauner, Chester hospital.
13. William C. Kelley, Chester hospital.
14. L. Albright, Mower hospital.
15. Christian Dietz, Alexandria (Virginia) hospital.
16. Daniel I. Miller, Campbell hospital.
17. Edward Ling, company I, one hundred and thirty-eighth regiment.
18. George Hudenfelter, company D, one hundred and thirty-eighth regiment.
19. Charles R. Walker, Mount Pleasant hospital.
20. Philip Glepner, Haddington hospital.
21. Henry Ware, Cuyler hospital.
22. A. J. Parker, Mount Pleasant hospital.

It is not proven for whom two of the parties above named voted, namely, Andrews and Hoffman, so that no deduction can be made for their votes unless it be from the sitting member, who proves them illegal, but fails to prove they were cast for me. Chrestner's vote is assailed, because it is alleged that he is a mulatto, and not entitled to vote. I do not believe the proof is sufficient to show that the person who voted in the Army is the same person that is alluded to by the witnesses in their testimony, but if it is, then possibly under the testimony the committee would have been warranted, had the proof been made that this vote went into the official count, in deducting it from me. Lloyd swears that he voted for Mr. Coffroth, although the return gives me all the votes cast at that poll, his among the number. In this case it is the oath of one man against the oaths of five sworn officers, and as the preponderance of testimony is in favor of the return, and as it has been so long since the election took place that he may be mistaken, this vote should not be deducted from me. The votes of Ellsworth, Miers, and Owen are assailed, because it is alleged that they were non-residents of the districts where their votes were returned, all having voted in the Army. It is proven that when Ellsworth went into the Army, his family moved into Shade township, on the 1st of September, 1864, and remained there until in the spring of 1865. They were living there more than ten days before the election, which took place on the second Tuesday in October, 1864, eleventh day; and as "residence is a question of intention," to quote the authority cited from 3 P. L. J., page 310, McDaniel's case, by the sitting member in his brief, Ellsworth evidently considered Shade township (as it actually was by the residence of his family there) his residence, and he was clearly entitled to vote as a resident of that township; otherwise he would have been deprived of his vote altogether. Miers is returned as a voter of Salisbury borough, while one of the witnesses swears that no man of that name has lived in the borough for thirteen years past. It is proven that Miers did live in Elklick township before he went into the Army, that Salisbury borough was a part of said township until within a few years, and always was, and now is, the place of voting for Elklick township. Therefore, how natural would it be for him to say, when interrogated by the officers of elections as to his place of voting at home, that it was Salisbury borough. One of the witnesses swears that no man by the name of Owen lived in his township for the last five years, "that he knows of; thinks he would have known it." This testimony, however, is too uncertain to overcome the legal presumption that the proper proof was made by the voter before the election officers, of residence, payment of taxes, &c. The other votes contained in the above list are assailed by reason of alleged non-assessment and non-payment of tax. It is proven, however, (see page 116,) that the taxes of three of said persons, namely, Kelley, Ware, and Parker, were paid, and the witness thinks Ellis also.

But let me examine the kind of testimony by which it is attempted to show the non-payment of tax by these parties. A list of names is put in evidence (see paper marked A, on page 148) containing the names of these persons and their townships, and the clerk to the board of county commissioners is called as a witness, and he swears that he has examined the assessments on file in the commissioner's office for the years 1862, 1863, 1864, and that their names do not appear upon them. I deny that this is legal evidence, because it is not competent to prove the contents of a record by parol testimony. The record must speak for itself as to what it does or does not contain, and certified copies should have been produced for the inspection of the committee. But even if it were legal evidence it proves nothing, because all of these parties may have been legal voters, and their names not appear upon the assessments. There are three classes of voters whose names would not appear upon these books of assessment: first, voters on age; second, persons who voted upon the payment of a State or county tax elsewhere in the State within two years; and third, persons who established their right to vote before the board by the production of a receipt for payment of taxes, under section forty of the act of 25th of August, 1864. These men were all in the Army, and voted under this law, which states specifically what shall be noted upon the record, and none of its provisions require that it shall appear whether the voter voted on age or upon payment of tax. But, I may add, why were not the assessors of these various precincts called as witnesses, and why were not the voters themselves called and examined upon oath as to their right to vote? Why were the legitimate and proper modes of proof abandoned, and the attempt made to take away the dearest right of the citizen by this kind of evidence?

HO. OF REPS.

Koontz vs. Coffroth—Mr. Koontz.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

The votes assailed in Bedford county are these:

1. George C. Gordon, voted at Camp Biddle.
2. John Stineman, voted at Camp Biddle.
3. William Mock, voted at Camp Biddle.
4. James Cull, (or Carl), voted at Lincoln hospital.
5. James Gaguely, one hundred and eighty-sixth regiment, provost duty, Philadelphia.
6. William Ernst, voted at Mower hospital.
7. Andrew Buzzard, West Providence township.
8. John C. Sparks, Camp Carroll.
9. George McDaniels, Navy School hospital, Annapolis, Maryland.

It does not appear from the evidence that Gordon was not a legal voter; neither is it shown anywhere for whom Stineman, Mock, and Gaguely voted; nor is there any legal evidence to show whether Buzzard voted at all, or for whom. It is said that he admitted he voted for me in the township of West Providence. Yet no list of voters of that township is put in evidence, nor is it shown that it was counted, even if proven to have been cast. The testimony relating to Cull, Ernst, Sparks, and McDaniels is too uncertain to be of any weight whatever.

In Adams county the following votes are assailed:

"Gettysburg Student Vote—Jacob Rhone, J. C. Kohler, J. A. Krumwine, P. H. Schaffer, Joseph Griffith, S. S. Henry, William H. Gottwaldt, M. G. Boyer, L. A. Swope, George Grossman, Michael Colner, William H. Stiek, T. C. Pritchards—13."

The testimony shows that only three of these persons voted for me, two of whom swear positively that they considered Gettysburg their residence at the time, and were therefore legal voters. The testimony of the third is rather uncertain as to residence, but there is no legal proof that he voted, as there is no list of voters in evidence for the borough of Gettysburg, nor is it shown anywhere that this vote was counted.

The votes assailed in Franklin county are, Major General D. N. Couch, Major John S. Schultz, Captain T. B. Swearingen, and Major Bent—4.

I assert, without fear of successful contradiction, that there is not a particle of testimony to show that these men voted for me. Why these names, along with others that the sitting member has not proven voted for me, are brought into this case and asked to be deducted from my vote is beyond my comprehension. It would be a singular proceeding indeed to allow it to be done. A careful examination of the testimony in regard to all the votes assailed by parol proof in the different counties of the district will satisfy any candid mind that no legal tribunal would be warranted in deducting more than 3 votes from me, even if it had been proven that these votes were embraced in the official count.

The next class of votes to which he objects are the military returns. And what is the character of the demand made by the sitting member upon the committee and this House? It is that they shall deduct from the official count sundry returns of soldiers' votes that he alleges were embraced in it by the board of canvassers simply upon the ground of informalities on the face of the papers, and without his having produced one iota of testimony to prove fraud in conducting any one of these elections. This demand is so preposterous that I will not attempt an examination of these returns in detail, but, as an instance of his mode of assailing votes, will refer to one of these returns, which he would have excluded. It is the return of company K, fifth Pennsylvania heavy artillery, Somerset county, and found on page 150. An examination of this will show that the poll-book is complete; the oaths signed by the judges and clerks; the certificate by one judge; that the other four officers were sworn; the tally-list complete, giving the names of the voters, and the township, and county to which they belong, with a proper certificate, signed by the judges and clerks; a complete tally-paper, signed by the clerks as required by law; and a full return, in the exact form prescribed by law, signed by the judges and clerks. In short, it is absolutely perfect, with the single exception that one of the clerks does not certify that one of the judges was sworn, although said judge certifies that he administered the oaths to the others, and he, along with them, signs the oath. This return gives me 23 votes and the sitting member 8, and for this trifling informality he would willfully disfranchise these voters.

It will be found, on an examination of all these returns, that, with the exception of company E, one hundred and forty-ninth regiment, (page 254,) which gives me 4 votes, but does not show the names of the voters, and of company B, two hundred and third regiment, (page 261,) which gives me 2 votes, with their names and residence, but does not show, on the face of the paper, that the officers were sworn, all the other papers produced by him give the poll-books, showing affirmatively that the officers were sworn, and in every instance the names of the officers holding the election, in many instances the full oaths and certificates attached, in every case the list of voters, showing their names and residence, in every instance a tally-paper or return, which are precisely the same in phraseology, and in many instances giving both; thus showing who held these elections, that they were sworn, and the names and residence of the voters, and being in substantial compliance with the act of Assembly. This, I contend, was sufficient, assuming, for the sake of the argument, that these votes were counted, to have put the sitting member upon his guard, and to have required some evidence of fraud in conducting these elections, before they could be thrown out. He would have the committee and the House repeat, on a larger scale, the action of the return judges. These returns passed the keen scrutiny of his friends in the board of judges, who could only pronounce the eleven returns above referred to to be too defective to be counted; while, by his answer and argument in this case, the sitting member has attempted to disfranchise nearly every soldier from the sixteenth district who voted at the October election in 1864, and that, too, without producing any testimony to show fraud at any one of the various polls held in the military camps. The record of contested elections may be searched in vain to find a more cruel assault upon the elective franchise than is attempted by the sitting member in this case.

Next in order is that class of votes which the sitting member claims should be added to his vote, because the voters, who were deserters, were restrained from going to the polls for fear of being arrested by the military; and that this part of the case may be fully understood by the House, I will here quote a portion of the testimony in relation thereto:

"Laban Johnson, being duly sworn, doth say, that he is a resident and voter of Southampton township, Bedford county, Pennsylvania. I was at the election and voted on the 11th of October, A. D. 1864. I am tolerably well acquainted with most of the voters of that township. I never knew a man of the name of James A. Shade in that township. No man of that name went to the Army from that township that I know of. There were soldiers at the polls from a few minutes after they were opened until after they were closed. They said they were there for the purpose of taking any conscript that came there to vote from the township. There was a right smart company of soldiers there, ten or a dozen. All the conscripts were deprived from voting except one man, who voted a few minutes before the soldiers came. The soldiers said that if they had got there a few minutes sooner he would not have got away from there. Gideon Smith, Aquila Smith, David Smith, James Smith, James Collins were deprived from voting. James Hook—I saw him on the road; he didn't vote. Jesse Henser was a conscript; there, too. I didn't see Francis Donahoo that day. I saw Joseph Barnes on the road. Amos Perrin was in the band that was on the road to vote. These men were not permitted to come in the yard that day. I saw Joseph Moss on the road that day, and he was a conscript. The politics of these men were Democratic, and those that I saw said they were going to vote for Coffroth.

"Cross-examined by Mr. Cessna, under protest: I was a clerk at the polls and passed in and out of the election house that day. I know they were conscripts, and they told me that they were drafted and hadn't gone; they were there. Gideon Smith didn't offer his vote, and didn't come in sight of the window that day; nor did Aquila Smith, nor David Smith, nor James Smith, nor James Collins, nor James Hook, nor Jesse Henser, nor Francis Donahoo, nor Joseph Barnes, nor Amos Perrin, nor Joseph Morse, nor any other conscript except the one that voted. The soldiers did not arrest anybody at the polls that day. I don't know that there were men deprived of their votes except from what they told me after the election. They said that they saw the soldiers there, and knew that they would be taken up. They calculated that they would be taken up. The soldiers were at the polls all day.

LABAN JOHNSON.

Attest:
S. L. RUSSELL.

Isaac Jiams, called.
Mr. Cessna makes the same objections to the evidence of this witness that he did to that of the above witness, Laban Johnson.

Isaac Jiams, being duly sworn, doth say, that he is a citizen of Southampton township, Bedford county, Pennsylvania; that he was at the election in said township on the 11th day of October, A. D. 1864. The testimony given by Laban Johnson is substantially correct. I saw John Jiams. I talked to him. It was by the soldiers being there that he didn't vote. I saw Joshua Houser there. These men were Democrats, and intended voting the Democratic ticket.

"Cross-examined by Mr. Cessna: I did not see any of these conscripts offer to vote. There was a company of conscripts about two hundred yards from the window. They saw the window. I was with them. I don't know that they went any nearer to offer to vote. They could see the soldiers, and they were afraid to go to vote. They had been told by different ones that if they went to vote they would be picked up.

ISAAC X JIAMS.
mark.

Attest:
S. L. RUSSELL, Commissioner.

Richard McMullen, sworn, declares and says, that he has been a legal voter of Napier township for many years; that he did not vote at the election of 11th October, 1864; that he did not vote because he had been drafted some time before the election and did not report at the time he was bound to report; that he had sent his papers down by the deputy provost marshal, who thought that he could fix by moping him a little. The soldiers arrested him on Saturday evening before the election. He studied about the matter a little and saw a good opportunity to leave them, and he left them; that they were there at his house two or three times searching for him, and were there on the morning of the election; that about the middle of the day of the election he understood that there were soldiers at the polls, and that their business there was to arrest all deserters, and he did not on that account go to the polls; that he would have gone to the polls if the soldiers had not been there; that if he had gone to the polls he would have voted for A. H. Coffroth; that he was told that there were soldiers at the polls by a man who had been there and voted; that he reported at Somerset on the next Friday and was discharged; that he knew John Mansfield; that said Mansfield was with deponent on the day of the election avoiding the soldiers; that said Mansfield did not vote; he votes the Democratic ticket.

"Cross-examined by Mr. Cessna under protest: That he made his escape from the soldiers a little after dark; that he lives four miles from the polls; that on the day of the election he was six or seven miles from the polls, and was not at home on that day; that he did not go to the polls to offer his vote; that he did not go nearer to the polls on that day than six miles because he was afraid that he would be arrested; and the reason that he was afraid was, that he had been told that there were going to be soldiers there; that John Mansfield did not go to any election on that day.

RICHARD McMULLEN.

Attest:
S. L. RUSSELL, Commissioner.

Mr. Reed calls A. J. Reighard. Mr. Cessna makes the same objections to him that he did to Laban Johnson and Richard McMullen.

A. J. Reighard, being duly sworn, doth depose and say, that he is a legal voter of Bedford township; that

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Koontz vs. Coffroth—Mr. Koontz.

HO. OF REPS.

he did not vote at the election of the 11th of October, 1864; that he didn't vote because he was afraid to come in; that he was afraid to come in because he heard that there were soldiers here; that he always did come to vote; that if he had come he would have voted the Democratic ticket; that he knows Henry Claar.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cessna under protest:

That he was eight or ten miles from the polls on the election day; that he was not in Bedford township on the day of the election; that the citizens of Bedford township vote at the court-house in Bedford borough; that he didn't come any nearer than eight or ten miles to the election house on that day; that he don't know that there were any soldiers in Bedford on that day except from hearsay; that he was afraid of the soldiers on that day because he had been drafted; that he had been drafted on the 21st day of September, 1864; that his day to report was the 1st of October, and the election was the 10th or 11th of October; that he didn't report, and that was the reason that he was afraid.

By Mr. Reed:

I desired to vote.

Attest:

A. J. REIGHARD.

S. L. RUSSELL, Commissioner.

Mr. Reed calls John Groman. Mr. Cessna makes the same objections as in the last above case.

John Groman, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he thought that he was a legal voter prior to and since the election of 11th October, 1864; that he is sure that he was a legal voter on the 11th October, 1864; that he did not vote at that election; that he was a drafted man, and was afraid of the soldiers; and that was the reason he didn't vote; that it was his desire to vote, and intended to have voted for A. H. Coffroth.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cessna under protest:

That he was not in Bedford on the election day; was about nine miles from the polls; didn't come any nearer than that, and didn't offer to vote; that he was drafted in September; was to report on 1st October; didn't report, and that was the reason that he was afraid to come here to vote; was informed that there were soldiers here; didn't know except from that information.

JOHN GROMAN.

Attest:

S. L. RUSSELL.

Mr. Reed calls Adam H. Earnest. Mr. Cessna makes the same objection as in the former cases.

Adam H. Earnest, being duly sworn, doth depose and say, that he is a resident of Bedford township, and a voter for years; that he did not vote at the election of the 11th October, 1864; that he did not vote because he was afraid to come in on account of the soldiers; that he wished to come in and vote; that he would have come in, he guesses, if there had been no soldiers here; that if he had come in and voted, he would have voted the Democratic ticket.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cessna under protest:

That he was about ten miles from the polls on the election day; didn't come nearer that day; didn't come to offer to vote; that the only way he knows, that there were soldiers here was by hearsay; that he was drafted in June, 1864; was to report in June or July; didn't report, and that is the reason why he didn't come to vote.

ADAM H. EARNEST.

Attest:

S. L. RUSSELL.

Mr. Reed calls William Thompson. Mr. Cessna makes the same objection as in former cases.

William Thompson, being sworn, deposes and says, that he is a resident and voter of Bedford township; that he has a brother, James Thompson, who in 1864 was a legal voter; that he, James, deponent guesses, must now be in Indiana; that he, James, was out about Mr. Hemming's; that he would have liked to come in and vote, but he was afraid of the soldiers, (to this Mr. Cessna emphatically objects, as being but hearsay); that he, James, told me he would have voted the Democratic ticket.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cessna under protest:

That James was drafted and didn't report, and didn't come in to the election.

his
WILLIAM X THOMPSON.
mark.

Attest:

S. L. RUSSELL, Commissioner.

Peter A. Miller, sworn, doth depose and say, that he is a citizen of Napier township, and has been for five years. I was in Napier township on the 11th day of October, A. D. 1864. I would have been at the polls if I had not been afraid that I would be taken by the soldiers that were there. I was threatened to be taken, because they were after me to take me. I would have been apt to have voted for Coffroth if I had gone, most assuredly. I am a Democrat in politics. I was informed that there were soldiers there.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cessna:

On the day of the election I was across between the top of the mountain and the foot of the mountain. It was about six miles from the election. I didn't go any nearer than that to the polls that day. I didn't offer my vote to the officers of the election, because I was afraid to go there. I was afraid of being taken. I was a conscript and hadn't reported, and I was afraid that they would take me for that; was drafted in 1863, on the 25th of August, and had managed to escape the officers all that time. They had been trying to take me for some time before the election. I didn't see any soldiers at the election that day. I only know that there were soldiers there from hearsay only. I do not know that the soldiers on that day arrested anybody, or offered to arrest anybody, or disturbed anybody.

PETER A. MILLER.

Attest:

S. L. RUSSELL, Commissioner.

Mr. Reed calls Henry Stichler, who, having been sworn, doth depose and say, that he is a citizen of Napier, and has been a voter there for fourteen years, as near as I can recollect. I was in the township on the 11th October, 1864. I did not vote at that election. I desired to vote. I was afraid that the fellows with the blue clothes on, the soldiers, would arrest me, and that was the reason I didn't vote. If I had voted I would have voted for Coffroth. Henry Miller was then in the same situation, and would have voted the same scale.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cessna:

I was around at home on the day of the election; about my father's house, shoemaking a little, sneakingly. I was not at the election; was five miles off, and didn't go any nearer; didn't offer my vote to the officers of the election. I didn't go to the election for fear of being taken. I was drafted and did not report; I was drafted in June, and was trying to keep out of the way; that was my game. The soldiers caught me at last: treated me first rate. I knew that there were soldiers at the polls from hearsay only. I cannot say that the soldiers arrested, or offered to arrest, or disturbed anybody that day. I know nothing about Henry Miller, except what he told me. I cannot tell where he was that day; he was not with me.

HENRY STICHLER.

Attest:

S. L. RUSSELL, Commissioner.

Mr. Reed calls John Oldham, who, having been duly affirmed, doth depose and say, I am a citizen and voter of Napier township ever since I had a vote; was in the township on the 11th October, 1864; didn't vote. I was drafted and had not reported, and was afraid that the soldiers would take me, and therefore I did not vote; they had been after me on the Sunday previous, but they did not get me. If I had voted, I would have voted for Coffroth. I have always voted the Democratic ticket, and always will. I knew that Henry Miller was similarly situated; he told me so, and that he was chased back by the soldiers when he went to vote.

(Mr. Cessna objects to the declarations of Miller.)

Isaw Henry Miller the night of the election; hadn't seen him before on that day; we had a little tent where we laid together; to tell the plain truth it was about a quarter of a mile from my house, in the woods. Henry Miller was drafted man before I was. I was drafted in the June draft, about the 2d of June. I was about six miles away from the polls on election day; saw no soldiers there; only knew about soldiers being there by hearsay. I had not reported after being drafted. I knew that according to military law I was a deserter. I was afraid, because I was drafted and hadn't reported. If Jeff Davis should get upon the Democratic ticket, I would vote for him.

Re-cross-examined:

If Thaddeus Stevens should get upon the Democratic ticket I would vote for him. Miller is not in Bedford county.

his
JOHN X OLDHAM.
mark.

Attest:

S. L. RUSSELL, Commissioner.

Mr. Reed calls George W. Burkholder, who, having been duly affirmed, doth say, I have been a citizen and voter of St. Clair township, Bedford county, for many years; I didn't vote on the 11th of October, 1864; I was drafted and didn't report and went away; took the western train at Johnstown seven days before the election.

G. W. BURKHOLDER.

Attest:

S. L. RUSSELL, Commissioner.

It is true, sir, that by the ninety-fifth section of the act of the Legislature of Pennsylvania, of 2d July, 1839, it is provided that "no body of troops in the Army of the United States or of this Commonwealth shall be present, either armed or unarmed, at any place of election within this Commonwealth, during the time of such election;" but it is further provided "that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to prevent any officer or soldier from exercising the right of suffrage in the election district to which he may belong, if otherwise qualified according to law." Now, while it appears from the testimony that there were soldiers at certain polls, there is no proof that they were not residents of those districts, and therefore may have been rightfully there for the purpose of exercising the right of suffrage. If, however, they were there in violation of law, they could doubtless be punished for it; but it is no reason why it should enable these persons to have their votes counted in this contest, because not a man of them offered to vote. On the contrary, they all say that they were deserters, had failed to respond to the draft, and having heard that there were soldiers about were afraid that they would be arrested, and staid away from the polls, being in most instances five, six, eight, and ten miles away. If all the votes of this description could be added to the vote of the sitting member, my majority of 71 might perhaps be overcome. I submit, however, if it is not rather inconsistent in the sitting member, after trying so hard to take away from me the votes of the soldiers actually in service and who did vote, to ask that the votes of these draft-deserting soldiers hid in the mountains, and who never offered to vote, should be added to his vote?

I have shown conclusively that certain legal votes were excluded from the official canvass, and that these votes when added thereto give me a majority of 71. I have demonstrated that there is nothing in the proof adduced by the sitting member to cause the reduction of this majority except the mere trifle of a few votes, and therefore having a clear majority of the legal votes, I am entitled to be admitted to this House as the member from the sixteenth district of Pennsylvania.

A few reasons why I have made this contest and I have done. In the first place, since the day the return judges assembled in the various counties in the district to sum up the home and soldier vote, I have entertained the sincere conviction that I was honestly and fairly elected, and so believing, I determined that I would push the investigation of this case until after a fair and full hearing upon the merits, it would be determined by the learned and honest Committee of Elections whether that convict was right or wrong. They have after a patient and careful examination of the case reported to this House that I was elected.

But there were other reasons still that prompted me to make this contest. I was chosen as the candidate of the Union party in the sixteenth district in one of the most critical periods of the country's history. Over three years of war, carried on upon the most gigantic scale upon the part of the Government, had failed to put down a wicked rebellion, organized for the purpose of destroying this Union. An unsubdued rebellion, a rapidly increasing and enormous public debt, the finances of the country unsettled, gold as high as two hundred and ninety per cent., and repeated drafts, so depressed the public mind that the loyal people of the country almost began to wonder whether, when the dark clouds were rolled away and the sun of peace again shone forth, it would be upon a rent Union or a preserved Republic. The public sentiment of the country was divided upon the question whether the war should be stopped or whether it should be carried on by every resource of the Government until the rebellion was overthrown.

The feeling of distrust in our institutions, of our inability to put down the rebellion, of admitted weakness and half-concealed sympathy with treason, found expression in that remarkable document promulgated at the city of Chicago, which declared "that the war was a failure, and that justice, liberty, and humanity required that it should be stopped." On the other hand, the unwearied patience, the unswerving loyalty, and deep and profound faith of the American people in the permanency and stability of our institutions, and of our ultimate success over armed treason found utterance in the patriotic resolves of the Baltimore convention, which declared that treason must be overthrown and the unity and integrity of the Government preserved. These were no uncertain sounds. The former was an appeal to the timid, the wavering, the unpatriotic; the latter spoke the language of faith and hope in the darkest hour of the nation's history. Selected by the Union party of the sixteenth district of Pennsylvania as their candidate at such a time, and upon such an issue, I would have been untrue to them had I failed to make this contest.

SENATE.

Illinois Central Railroad—Mr. Yates.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

But there is still another reason. Beaten upon the home vote largely, my election was saved by the brave men in the field, who for a brief time stopped their work of putting down treason in the front to send a crushing blow against its allies in the rear. To the brave men in front, with cannon in front of them, cannon to the right of them, and cannon to the left of them; to the brave men hurrying to the front to join the deadly strife; to the brave men who had been to the front, but alas! then lay prostrate in the hospitals with fevered brows, maimed limbs, and bodies pierced with shot and torn with shell, is due the credit of having saved the sixteenth district of Pennsylvania to the Union cause. Many of them have since the close of the war returned to their homes, and are now engaged in the peaceful pursuits of life, while many others were stricken down upon the battle-field or by disease contracted in the service of their country, and were not permitted to return to their homes and firesides, but now rest among the patriot dead of the Republic.

"They sleep their last sleep, they have fought their last battle,
No sound can awake them to glory again."

Justice to the martyred dead and heroic living of the brave soldiers of the sixteenth district of Pennsylvania demanded that I should make this contest and vindicate their rights by preserving the purity of the elective franchise. Impelled by these considerations, sir, I have gone through this long and annoying contest, to find at last, as a reward for my time and labor, that justice is about to be done to myself and the majority of the legal voters of the sixteenth congressional district of Pennsylvania.

Illinois Central Railroad.

SPEECH OF HON. RICHARD YATES,

OF ILLINOIS,
IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE,
May 2, 1863.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, having under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 127) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending the 30th of June, 1867, the Committee on Finance proposed to amend the bill by striking out the following proviso at its close:

Provided, That no part of the money hereby appropriated shall be used for paying the Illinois Central Railroad Company for the transportation of the troops or the property of the United States; and the Attorney General of the United States is hereby directed to institute a suit against the said company in the circuit court of the United States, in the eleventh circuit, without delay, to recover from the said company any moneys that have been paid to the said company by any Department of the Government for the transportation of the troops or property of the United States; and the said Attorney General is hereby further directed to appear for the United States in said court and prosecute its interests in the said suit.

Mr. YATES. Mr. President, as one of the Senators from the State of Illinois, in which the Central railroad is situated, and whose interests are so immediately to be affected by the amendment, I deem it my duty to give some reasons which will influence me to give my vote for the motion to strike out. I will explain to Senators, who may not have given their attention to the history of the grant of lands by the United States to the State of Illinois in aid of the construction of the Illinois Central railroad, that the State, instead of building the road itself, chartered a company for that purpose, and in consideration of the grant of lands to the company reserved to the State seven per cent. of the annual proceeds of the road. This reservation now produces to the State a rich annuity, amounting the last year to about half a million dollars.

Now, Mr. President, if this motion shall not prevail, and the Central Railroad Company shall be compelled to refund to the Government what it has received for Government transportation during the war, then to the extent of the amount refunded is the amount of the gross proceeds reduced, and the State would be compelled to refund to the company seven per cent. of that amount. For instance, if as has been alleged elsewhere the railroad has received from the Government $5,000,000 for the transportation of Government troops and property, then seven per cent. of that sum would be $350,000, which the State would have to refund to the railroad company. Before I can consent that the people of the State of Illinois shall be taxed to refund this large sum, which is the effect of this amendment of the House of Representatives, I must be fully satisfied that she improperly received it. And, sir, the more I examine the subject the better am I satisfied, that it would be an act of gross injustice to require the railroad company to refund the amount it has received to the Government, and a gross wrong to my State to require it to refund to the company the seven per cent. of that amount which it has received. I shall therefore resist this amendment with all my might from first to last.

But, independent of the consideration that the road is situated in the State of Illinois, and that the State derives a large annual income from its gross earnings, and is directly interested to the amount of several hundred thousand dollars in the question at issue, and also that the prosperity of the State and that of the road are closely identified; beside such considerations as these I with great cheerfulness come to the defense of the road in its legal and equitable rights, from the consideration that from the beginning to the end of the war it has most faithfully, promptly, and energetically discharged its whole duty to the Government. There was not on the land or on the sea during the war a more important arm of our national defense than the Illinois Central railroad. Running from Dunleith, from the southern boundary of Wisconsin south to Cairo, and from Chicago south to Cairo, and being the only road running north and south in the direction of the seat of the war on the Mississippi, Tennessee, Cumberland, and the Southwest, it was the only road upon which could be, and were, transported the mighty armies, vast supplies and munitions of war, not only of the States of the Northwest but of the large armies which were sent from the East to the Southwest and from the Southwest to the East to meet the varying exigencies of the war.

I was placed in a position to know exactly, and almost all the time, how these duties were discharged; for no inconsiderable portion of this transportation was done upon orders issued by me in pursuance of the requisitions of the War Department. And when it is charged, as elsewhere it has been, that the road belonged to foreign capitalists who sympathized with the rebels, I happen to know well that the stock of the Illinois Central railroad was controlled by that class of capitalists in England represented by such men as Bright and Cobden, and that at least on two different occasions Richard Cobden visited the State of Illinois as the representative of these capitalists to examine and report upon its condition and management; and I happen to know what every Senator must in the nature of things know, that the success of the road and consequently the value of their stock and other heavy interests depended upon the triumph of the Union cause and the suppression of the rebellion. Be this as it may—and I freely admit that its bearing upon the question we are considering is not direct—yet I do know the fact to be that the Illinois Central railroad performed its duties to the Government, and performed them well.

And, sir, that it may be seen that this statement of mine is not for this occasion merely, I will trouble the Senate to read from a message delivered by me during the war, while I was resisting a claim of the Central railroad against the State, which message was made to the people of Illinois and to Senators and Representatives who lived on the line of the road, and who knew the truth of the facts therein stated. I read from the Governor's message January 5, 1863:

"It is to be said in behalf of this company that they have most promptly, willingly, and uncomplainingly responded to all the calls of the Government in the transportation of troops; and very many cases have come to my knowledge in which they have transported our sanitary stores and nurses and moneyless sick and wounded without expense. So far as abuses may have occurred, in all cases I suppose they have been without the approval of the chief officers."

It is urged, that by the terms of the grant to the State of Illinois to aid in the construction of the Illinois Central railroad, contained in section four of the act for that purpose, approved September 30, 1850, the railroad company were to transport the troops and property of the Government free of cost, and that, therefore, the Government should institute suit to recover from said company all moneys that have been paid to said company for such transportation. The fourth section of the act reads:

"That the said lands hereby granted to the said State of Illinois shall be subject to the disposal of the Legislature thereof for the purpose aforesaid and no other. And the said railroad and branches shall be and remain a public highway, for the use of the Government of the United States free from tolls or other charge upon the transportation of any property or troops of the United States."

Now, while I confess that from a first careless reading of this section it would seem that technically the company was bound to transport Government troops and property free of charge; on the other hand, I contend that a careful reading will show plainly the reverse, and that the company in accepting the grant did not undertake to transport for the Government at all, but simply to keep open its road and branches for the use of the Government to do its own transportation, and that for thus keeping open the road as a highway the company was to exact no toll or other charges upon such transportation.

Now, sir, let us read carefully, giving to each word its proper signification: "the said railroad and branches shall be and remain a public highway." A highway for what? "For the use of the Government of the United States." It would be no very strained construction to say that this means for the use by the Government of the United States; but that I will not insist upon. "For the use of the Government of the United States." How? Why, of course as a public highway. "Free from toll or other charges" for this use of it as a public highway. "Free from toll or other charge upon the transportation of any property or troops of the United States." That most clearly means that the Government shall not be liable to pay any toll or charges in using the road as a public highway in the transportation of its troops and property. Senators must see that the distinction is broad and marked between a provision which gives to the Government the use of the road as a public highway, free from toll and charges, and a provision which would bind the company to become carriers for the Government free of charge. If the design of this provision was that the company was to do all Government transportation, why did it not expressly say so without the circumlocution of saying that it should remain a public highway? If it was the design that the road should be carriers for the Government, then the words "public highway for the use of the Government" are superfluous and meaningless, and all that was necessary to have been said was that the company should transport for the Government without charge.

In section six of the same act, where Congress did design that the company should

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Illinois Central Railroad—Mr. Yates.

SENATE.

actually do the transportation in fact, it says so in precise and direct language. The section as to carrying the mails reads as follows:

"And be it further enacted, That the United States mail shall at all times be transported on the said railroad, under the directions of the Post Office Department, at such price as Congress may by law direct."

Thus we see that where the company was to be carrier for the Government the language is specific and direct that the railroad shall transport the mails.

This provision as to the mails is useful by way of interpretation in another important aspect, as illustrative of the fact that where the Government required, not merely the use of the road, but actual transportation by the company as a carrier, it also provided for compensation to the company. Where the Government was to have only the use of the easement, the right of passage, it stipulated that it was to have that easement without charge. And is it at all reasonable to suppose that the Government meant that the company should transport vast armies, with long trains of ordnance and munitions of war of every kind and vast supplies without cost, and yet almost in the next section take care to provide that for the inconsiderable service of carrying the United States mail it should have adequate compensation?

But, sir, there are other means of arriving at the true construction of the provision contained in section four. We have both antecedent and contemporaneous construction. The term highway in the common law and the customary sense means a public road, turnpike, or thoroughfare. In the absence of statutory regulation any one may use it free of toll or charge of any kind. And we find in the legislative acts establishing turnpikes and canals almost the identical language contained in the grant to Illinois for the construction of the Illinois Central railroad.

Now, sir, look at the history of this clause for free transportation contained in the act authorizing the building of the road—see where it came from, and you will find that it was not inserted in the act because the Government had granted lands. This right to use the road by the Government was not given in consideration for the lands received, but I will prove to you, sir, that the clause reserving the right of the Government to use the road free came from and was copied from an act where no grant of lands was made. I will now give this history and will refer to a fact which in the long debates heretofore made has been overlooked, and which will show unanswerably that the construction which has been given the clause under consideration is entirely unwarranted.

Where, then, did this clause come from? I will show you. Here is volume three, United States Statutes-at-Large, and on page 659 I find the act of March 30, 1822, authorizing the State of Illinois to open a canal through the public lands to connect the Illinois river with Lake Michigan. Now, sir, that act made no grant of lands whatever except the right of way and ninety feet on each side of the canal, but, mark the fact, that it contained this same clause reserving to the Government the use of the canal as a public highway for the transportation of Government property without charge. How, then, can it be said that the road in consideration of the grant of lands agreed to this free transportation when in the act from which the clause is copied there was no grant of lands whatever? But I proceed with the history. On the 2d of March, 1827, Congress passed an additional act in relation to the canal and donated a large body of land to aid in its construction, and in this act copied verbatim the clause contained in the act of 1822, reserving the use of the canal as a public highway to the Government free of toll or other charge. Now, sir, there cannot be the slightest doubt that the late Senator Douglas, the author of the bill making the grant to the State in aid of the construction of the Illinois Central railroad, copied the clause in question from the canal grants—making only the slightest verbal alterations. That there may be no mistake in this regard, I quote the clause contained in the canal grants verbatim:

"It is hereby further enacted and declared that said canal when completed shall be and forever remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States free from all toll or other charge whatever for any property of the United States or persons in their service passing through the same."

The clause in the railroad grant is precisely the same in meaning and almost identical in language. Now, sir, that canal was to be made by the State as a great commercial thoroughfare connecting the waters of the lakes with the Father of Waters, to be open as a highway for all persons and for vessels of private individuals, and it was never contemplated that the State should put a single boat or horse or driver upon it; but the State was to have the right to collect tolls of all who used it for the purposes of transportation; and hence the Government reserved to itself the right to its use as a highway for the transportation of Government property or of persons in the service of the United States free of any toll or other charge.

Now, sir, will any one contend that under such a clause the State of Illinois was to construct canal boats, furnish teams, hands, conductors, and all other employés of the Government without charge? On the other hand, the Government has not in all the transportation it has done on the canal during the war set up any such claim against the State or company. Now, if this was the construction which was given immemorially to the provision in turnpikes and canals, and as undoubtedly applicable to all thoroughfares, by what warrant shall we attempt to give a different construction in this instance? Would not such construction be clearly in violation of that principle of law recognized to be sound, that where an antecedent statute or provision of a previous law is carried or adopted into a new law, it carries into the new law the same interpretation and construction which was given to it in the old law?

It is replied to this view of the case that the term railroad includes the rolling stock of the road. This may be the law of the case. Yet I believe there would be but few purchasers upon such a principle unless there was distinct designation of the rolling stock in the deeds of conveyance, and I know that in all the deeds and mortgages of railroads with which I am familiar, there is as much particularity in describing the rolling stock as the railway itself; and it is a sufficient answer to this objection to say that if the rolling stock is included in the term railroad it is quite clear that the officers, conductors, agents, and all the hands are not so included, and these constitute a large portion of the operative expense of the road. And yet it is absurdly contended that the Illinois Central railroad should receive no pay whatever for its immense army of employés. And even more than this, it is contended that, although it became necessary for the road, in order to meet the increased business occasioned by the war, to purchase at great expense large additions of rolling stock in the market at large, and to draw largely and at great expense on connecting lines of roads, yet all this was to be done for the Government free of charge. This, indeed, would be a convenient way for a great Government to draw on private individuals ad libitum et ad infinitum for material, men, and money to carry on a great war.

In the debates heretofore had, it was urged that Congress could not have meant simply to give the Government the use of the railroad, because that would suppose both the Government and company to be running their trains over the road at the same time, which, it was alleged, is impracticable, because collisions must necessarily occur. Now, sir, there never was a greater mistake. The instances are numerous in which several different companies run their trains over the same road without any conflict whatever. All danger is averted by a simple arrangement of the time-table. Not only two, but a half a dozen roads may run their trains over a track common to them all, by arranging the hours of departure and arrival of each, respectively, without the least fear of collision. The reservation of the use of the road by the Government was entirely consistent with the use, at the same time by the company.

It is also alleged that the mere right to use the road by the Government was worth nothing to it, and why, therefore, provide for its simple use as a highway? Sir, the best answer to this would be to suppose that there had been no railroad at all from Chicago to Cairo or from Galena to Cairo, and then ask what price the Government would have given for a well-laid track, a road-bed complete, bridges of solid masonry, turnouts, depots, warehouses, &c., all ready for the Government, upon which to put its rolling stock for the transportation of its troops, supplies, and munitions of war. Inquire how many million dollars it would have cost the Government to have constructed the road-bed of this road, so indispensable to the success of our military operations in the Southwest? Why, sir, it would have cost the Government ten times the sum it has paid the road for the transportation of its troops and property. The right to use the road was a sufficient consideration in itself for the grant of lands. It must not, however, I repeat, be understood that the free use of the road was the consideration the Government was to receive for the lands. This was not the case, for the Government had required this free use of roads and canals where it gave no lands at all. The object the Government had in view was to sell its lands by doubling the price of the reserved alternate sections, to build the road as a great commercial and military thoroughfare, and to promote the prosperity of the country. It would have reserved the free use of the road if it had only granted the right of way and no lands whatever to the company, as it did in the first canal bill.

I now come to another point in this question, and that point is, that the moneys which it is proposed to recover from the Illinois Central Railroad Company have been paid to them in pursuance of a contract in writing entered into between the Government through the Secretary of War on the one hand, and the company by its president on the other. It was a valid contract based upon a valuable consideration, and was a wise and judicious arrangement of the Government for its great advantage, if not absolutely necessary under all the circumstances under which it was made.

Immediately upon the breaking out of the war in April, 1861, it became necessary for the Government to commence a heavy transportation on this road, which increased from month to month, until the road became almost exclusively the carrier for the Government, to the exclusion of the regular customers of the road, and sometimes for months its whole capacity could not meet the demands of the Government. I am informed that the Government often issued its orders to the company to do no private carrying for certain lengths of time. Sometimes for months they were thus prohibited from carrying for their customers.

Under these circumstances, Mr. Osborn, the president, and Mr. Douglas, the attorney of the road, came to Washington to effect an arrangement with the authorities as to the terms on which this transportation was to be made. They had interviews with the President, Secretary of War, and Quartermaster General; and the president and attorney for the road contended that under the clause in the land grant as to transportation it was not contemplated that the company should furnish rolling stock, men, and money for transportation of Government troops and property, but merely the use of the road as a highway. To this view of the case the Secretary of War assented, and

SENATE.

Illinois Central Railroad—Mr. Yates.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

the following stipulation in writing was entered into:

WAR DEPARTMENT, August 15, 1861.

SIR: Upon consultation with the Quartermaster General, it has been decided by this Department that the clause in your charter, section four, gives a clear right to the Government of the United States to the use of your roadway, without compensation, for the transportation of its troops and its property. As a proper compensation for motive power, cars, and all other facilities incident to transportation, two cents per mile will be allowed for passengers' travel, subject to a discount of thirty-three and a third per cent, as due to Government for charter privileges. Payment for transportation of freight, stores, munitions of war, and other public property, will be made at such reasonable rates as may be allowed to other railroad companies, subject, however, to the abatement of thirty-three and a third per cent, as before specified.

The foregoing basis has been arranged with the distinct understanding that transportation shall be furnished by your company at such times and in such manner as the Government of the United States may require, and that preferences shall be given to Government transportation in accordance with the regulations of this Department and of its officers.

If this proposition is acceptable to your company, notice in writing to that effect will be expected within ten days from this date.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

SIMON CAMERON,

Secretary of War.

W. H. OSBORN, President Illinois Central Railroad.

NEW YORK, August 17, 1861.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge your communication of the 15th, containing the determination of the Government in relation to the use of the railroad of this company.

Under present circumstances an important part of our line is imperiled, and active cooperation with the Government is indispensable, and I beg to notify you that the proposition of the Government is accepted.

The company will endeavor to forward the troops and property with the utmost promptitude, preference always being given as indicated.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. H. OSBORN, President.

Hon. SIMON CAMERON, Secretary of War.

This arrangement was made with Mr. Cameron, the Secretary of War at that time, and the present Secretary of War at the last session of Congress said to the chairman of the Committee on Finance that he believed it wise to continue the arrangement. He said that if the Government had refused to pay anything the effect would be to stop the running of the road, and compel the United States to seize and operate it on Government account.

The Secretary of War acted wisely in not engaging in the railroad business, and in employing the company to do its work, (which all business men know it could do more economically,) at the same time reserving sufficient compensation for its right to the use of the road by requiring the company to perform the service at one third less than was paid to other roads. Was this not a valid contract? It was in the power of the Government to seize the road, and the company was ready to turn it over to the Government. Now, in all fairness, can the Government honorably go back upon its contract, especially when, but for that contract the company could have turned over the road to be operated by the Government, instead of losing the millions of dollars they have expended in transporting for the United States? Can it be denied that the Secretary of War had a right to make such a contract? Was it not wiser in him to employ the railroad as Government carrier than for the Government to undertake to do its own transportation and to do it at greater cost? Was this not eminently his duty, in view of the important fact that the road did not make one dime of profit upon the transportation for the Government? This declaration may strike you, Mr. President, as strange, if you have never been engaged in the business of railroads. But, sir, it is a statistical fact that the expenses of operating railroads are from fifty to seventy-five per cent. of their gross earnings. So that if you deduct one third from the gross earnings of a road you have nothing left by way of profit. The other two thirds are absorbed in the actual expenses incurred in operating the road. Upon our western roads the operating expenses are much greater than on eastern, owing to the sparseness of our population. The amount of trade is irregular. Sometimes whole trains of cars have to be run with only half freights, which is not the case on eastern roads running through populous cities and a densely settled country, where the exact amount of business can be calculated and relied upon, and where trains, without any waste of material, are uniformly supplied to their full capacity.

I hold in my hands the last report of the Illinois Central Railroad Company for the year ending 31st December, 1865, by which it appears that the earnings for the year were $7,181,208 37, and that, exclusive of outlays for permanent structures and for increase of equipment, the expenses for operation alone were $4,509,794 33. Thus you see that the running expenses were about sixty-five per cent. of the whole amount received by the road. And thus also you see the Secretary of War made a profitable arrangement with the company, because the Government could not have operated the road near so cheaply.

Now, Mr. President, please remember, also, that in the first place all the railroads in the United States agreed to carry for the Government at about two thirds the ordinary fare and freights charged to private individuals, and that the Illinois Central railroad in consideration of its charter privileges, agreed to carry for two thirds of what other railroads received, and you will find that the United States did not pay what was absolutely required for running expenses; and if the Government had taken the road and run it there can be no question that the expense to the Government would have been far greater than it was under the wise policy pursued by Mr. Lincoln, the Secretary of War, and the Quartermaster General.

Mr. President, there were few, if any, clearer-headed lawyers in the United States than Mr. Lincoln; and while I do not assert it as a fact, yet I was positively assured in my own mind that he took the same view of the contract which I have taken, and that the contract was made after full conference with him upon the part of the Secretary of War and Quartermaster General. While I cannot prove that he did approve of the construction of the law as given in the contract, and of the contract as it was made, yet I can and will now prove to the Senate that the whole subject was before his mind, and that it was referred by him to the Secretary of War. Then, I will ask, if it is reasonable to infer that so important a contract, affecting not only the Illinois Central, but all the land-grant railroads, and involving many million dollars, would have been entered into without his consent and approval?

I now read from a copy of a letter from Mr. Lincoln to the Secretary of War, and certified by the Quartermaster General:

QUARTERMASTER GENERAL'S OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 31, 1866.

SIR: In accordance with instructions of the Secretary of War of this date I transmit herewith a copy of the letter of President Lincoln, dated May 23, 1865, in relation to the Illinois Central railroad.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. C. MEIGS,

Brevet Major General United States Army,
Quartermaster General.
J. M. DOUGLAS, Esq., President Illinois Central Railroad, Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, May 23, 1863.

MY DEAR SIR: In order to construct the Illinois Central railroad, a large grant of land was made by the United States to the State of Illinois, which land was again given to the railroad company by the State in certain provisions of the charter. By the United States grant certain privileges were attempted to be secured from the contemplated railroad to the United States, and by the charter certain percentage of the income of the road was to be from time to time paid to the State of Illinois; at the beginning of the present war the railroad did certain carrying for the United States, for which it claims pay; and as I understand the United States claims at least part of this the road was bound to do without pay.

Though attempts have been made to settle the matter, it remains unsettled; meanwhile the road refuses to pay the percentage to the State. This delay is working badly, and I understand the delay exists because of there being no definite decision whether the United States will settle its own account with the railroad, or will allow the State to settle it, and account to the State for it. If I had the leisure, which I have not, I believe I could settle it; but prima facie it appears to me we had better settle the account ourselves, because that will save us all question as to whether the State deals fairly with us in the settlement of our account with a third party, the railroad. I wish you would see Mr. Butler, late our State treasurer, and see if something definite cannot be done in the case.

Yours truly,

Hon. SECRETARY OF WAR.

True copy of original letter.

CHARLES THOMAS,

Assistant Quartermaster General.

Brevet Major General United States Army.
March 31, 1866.

But to state the argument of those who favor the amendment in the strongest light possible for them, we will suppose the railroad was bound to furnish the Government not only the use of its road, but also of its rolling stock and employes in the transportation of Government troops and property free of cost, yet it will not be contended that the Government was to have any other than the same facilities with the company in its transportation of freights for its own benefit. I mean that no one will contend that in the use of it as a highway that the Government was to have any more than equal facilities with the company itself. What capitalist would ever be induced to invest in an enterprise in which others were to have superior privileges or preference? I believe all will admit that the railroad would have fully discharged its whole duty to the Government when it had done all in the way of transportation which it was doing for private customers.

But, sir, the Government required more of the railroad than this equal service. It required that the company should agree in writing to furnish "transportation at such times and in such manner as the Government of the United States may require," and "that preference should be given to Government transportation in accordance with the regulations of this [the War] Department and of its officers." The company was to start its trains at whatever time, to delay its trains, (which I know it often did,) at the pleasure of the officers of the Government, and it was to transport "in such manner" as to speed, quantity, quality of cars, &c., as the Government required. Now, sir, is not this preference a valid, a sufficient, and an independent consideration for the contract made by the Secretary of War? In that contract the Government required that the railroad should not only be open and free to the Government as a public highway, as it was to the company, but that it should have the preference for Government transportation. Here was a great surrender on the part of the company; for no matter if its warehouses were full of grain or produce or freights, those articles must remain without transportation, or find shipment on other roads, as long as Government required the use of the road.

Any military officer, any quartermaster furnishing Army supplies, could, by a simple order, employ every car, passenger or freight, in the transportation of troops and munitions of war and supplies to the exclusion of private shippers. The company, by giving this preference to the Government, incurred liability to private individuals. I am informed by the president of the company that large quantities of produce, which otherwise would have been shipped on their road, went to other roads, and that suits are now pending in the Illinois courts for losses sustained by individuals whose produce could not be shipped in time to meet the demands of the market in consequence of preference given to Government transportation. You can well imagine, sir, that if to-day corn at Cairo or Chicago is worth fifty cents per bushel, and in thirty days it is only worth thirty-five, individuals who had bought largely for those markets would be ruined by the failure of the company to ship in time for the market, and the company in having given a preference to the Government would incur heavy liabilities to those who had sustained the losses. Why, sir, it was often the case that for a month at a time the company was prohibited by positive orders from doing any private transportation whatever.

39TH CONG...1ST SESS.

Illinois Central Railroad—Mr. Yates.

SENATE.

Here, sir, we find a legal consideration for this contract which, by no construction of law, by no argument or special pleading, can be said to have failed, for the preference which the Government required the road to give in writing was more than the worst enemy of the road would contend the company was liable for. If liable to afford the Government free, or, the same thing, equal transportation, it certainly was not liable to afford it preferred transportation. Therefore such preferred transportation, requiring the company to do what it was not liable to do, putting it to trouble, additional outlays, and subjecting it to heavy liabilities to private customers, beyond all doubt constituted a valuable and independent consideration.

Also, if it should be decided that the Secretary of War transcended his power in allowing the road remuneration for services which it was alleged the road was liable to perform without charge, yet it cannot be denied that when the Secretary of War discovered that merely the use of the road and its entire equipment upon equal terms with the company did not meet the emergencies of the war, he had a right, and it was required of him, to stipulate for any additional service which could be exacted from the road. Preference to the Government was a military necessity. The effectual prosecution of the war imperatively demanded that military should have preference over private transportation. Illinois alone sent two hundred and fifty thousand men to the field, together with uncounted trains of supplies from her rich granaries. Nearly all these, together with the troops and supplies of the northwestern States, and also of many of the eastern and middle States, were sent over this, the most expeditious route to the seat of war, making that preference necessary. The conclusion is therefore irresistible, that upon this ground of preference, if on no other, the contract was made upon the basis of an independent and valuable legal consideration.

Now, sir, as to the equity of the case. Suppose we admit that I am in error in the law, and suppose we adopt the unreasonable construction that the company was to furnish the road-bed, rolling stock, hands, and money, without charge, to the Government. Suppose this to be the strict legal construction, the letter of the bond. Yet all concede that when the grant was made no one dreamed that we should have such a war, and that such immense burdens would be put upon this road. When the war began the United States had an Army of thirteen thousand men. The provisions of the grant were made in view of peace, or of such increase of our Army force as ordinary wars, like that with Mexico, or with the Indians, or with some foreign Power, might require. No one dreamed that we should have an Army of over one million men. No one believed that the Illinois Central railroad, throughout its entire length of seven hundred and six miles, and all its machinery, cars, and employes, were to be absorbed by the Government for the greater part of four long years. And now, in all fairness, in all honesty, in just dealing, who will say that the Government shall require all this service for nothing? Who is the Shylock to demand the blood of the bond? Is there a Senator here who, if he had a contract of this kind with a neighbor, would enforce it? Could he, in honor, in equity, do it? And shall the most magnificent and most magnanimous nation of the world enforce such a hard construction upon a company which, amid the storms of this gigantic war, sent her locomotives thundering along our prairies to the relief of our armies and the triumph of our flag? If the railroad was willing to do such service at actual cost, at one third less than the previously reduced price of all other roads, in all conscience is that not enough?

The President, Secretary of War, and Quartermaster General took the right view of the case. To have required of the Illinois Central road to perform a service costing them an immediate and immense outlay of millions of money without any return from the Government, and upon the great and pressing emergencies of war, was to require of them what they could not possibly have performed, and which would have resulted in as much injury to the Government as to the company. Indeed, the delays occasioned thereby might have proved fatal to the vigorous prosecution of the war, left the enemy with impunity to occupy all points on the Mississippi and expose southern Illinois to successful rebel invasion.

The argument relied upon for the oppressive course proposed to be pursued toward the Central road is that the Government has made a munificent grant of the public lands to aid in its construction, and that now it is only fair that the company should pay the Government all the moneys advanced to it during the war. Now, in reply to this it can be shown that the Government has been paid the full value of those lands in half a dozen different ways. In the first place, the United States granted to the Central road every alternate section and doubled the price of the reserved alternate section, charging $2 50 per acre instead of $1 25.

It is a well-known fact that for some of these reserved lands the Government received as high as seven dollars per acre. How was this? Why, sir, because this much-abused road made that half of the lands reserved by the Government far more valuable than the whole by bringing them nearer to market, and by attracting an industrious and energetic population to purchase and settle them. By this grant the Government was the greatest gainer, and it got early purchasers for lands which for thirty years had laid unsought and undesirable in a wilderness prairie, besides filling southern Illinois with a population which drove back the rebel hordes, preserved inviolate our soil, and sent to the war the very flower and chivalry of our great Army. And, sir, it can also be shown that the Government has already received from the Central railroad, dollar for dollar, the whole value of the lands at the time they were given to the company, in the deduction of one third from the amount which would have been charged for Government transportation by this as has been charged by other roads. If you consider this as an arrangement in perpetuity, that for all time to come the Government is to have this same privilege, namely, a deduction of one third of the cost of transportation, you will find that the United States will realize from this source alone, not only five times the value of the lands, but will have a perpetual, exhaustless, unfailing annuity so large and so vast as to defy the powers of computation. What, also, shall be said of the millions and hundreds of millions of dollars worth of property, created through the agency of the road along its whole extent, from which the Government draws, and will continue to draw, an ever-increasing revenue? Stately cities, a thousand prosperous villages, comfortable mansions, and highly cultivated farms have sprung up along the line of this railroad in the wilderness prairie where before wolves howled and the rank grass waved untrodden.

Mr. President, a most unfair line of argument has been pursued in the debates upon this subject. It is said that the Central railroad is rich, and therefore should be compelled to refund the money she has made under the contract with the Government. Sir, that most immoral logic must be founded on the principle of robbing a man of $50,000 because he has $50,000 left. But, sir, I need not dwell upon such an argument before an American Senate.

A great nation like this will do justice and will not soil its fair escutcheon by arbitrarily taking that which righteously belongs either to the rich or the poor. Rich as the Central road may be, I am informed that during its whole existence it has never paid but three annual dividends.

But, as further evidence of unfairness, it has been recklessly represented that the lands donated by the Government had of themselves built the road, and that the cost to the stockholders was nothing, or inconsiderable. How inexcusably reckless is this statement! At the same time Senators know that when the company received these lands, the whole of them (2,595,053 acres) would not have sold for $1,500,000. Why, sir, do not all western and many eastern men know what the value of land-warrants was at the time this railroad was commenced? They were the tests of the value of these lands, and for years after this grant, and after they began to increase in value in prospect of the road, many, if not most of the public lands sold were bought with land-warrants, which were hawked around the markets and sold on 'change at from fifty to seventy-five cents to the dollar. And yet, sir, you talk of the Government having built a road which has cost $40,000,000 with lands which were worth not to exceed in value, allowing the highest figure, $2,000,000.

It is said, however, that the company has realized far more than two million dollars for these lands. This is true; but through whose agency? Not that of the Government, surely. No, sir; the company by investing millions of money and by great energy and wise management opened these lands to market and settlement and made them valuable. Is the United States, after granting these lands, and after they are made valuable, to set up a claim on the road on account of the increased value?

As well might it say to the pioneer, who under the homestead act goes into the wilderness, erects his cabin, and prospers until he becomes wealthy in houses, farm, stocks, and store; as well might the Government say to him after he has been paid an account for cattle and produce furnished the United States quartermaster upon contract: "Yes, you have complied with your contract, but you must remember that the land we gave you and which your labor and money have improved is now worth fifty dollars per acre, and in consideration of that fact we must recover from you the amount paid you upon the contract."

But, sir, to show you how unfounded and reckless are the charges made to prejudice the two Houses against the Central railroad, I will in answer to the charge that these lands have paid for the road, read a letter from Hon. William H. Osborn, the former president, a gentleman of eminently high character among the business men and capitalists of this country, whose word no man can rightfully question, showing the cost of the road and the sums already received and which will probably be received from the lands granted by the United States to the railroad company:

OFFICE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY,
NEW YORK, March 24, 1866.

MY DEAR SIR: The secretary has made up an exact statement of the outlays upon the Illinois Central railway from the acceptance of its charter by the present company in 1852, with interest at six per cent. per annum, and has deducted the interest coupons on debt and the dividends paid, with the interest on said payments at six per cent. from the time at which they were made. He has also deducted all the money received for interest on lands and for interest-free lands, which reduces the sum total to the actual cost with six per cent. interest only. The result is that the railway cost, on the 31st of December last, $47,646,685 97. From this cost the receipts from the lands have reduced the original debt, by payment of the bonds, $4,801,500; leaving the cost (less land collections on 31st December) $42,845,185 97.

Against this sum the company held on the 31st December $8,785,035 25 land notes and $98,620 acres of land. This land is worth to-day eight dollars per acre. It would be a good sale and one which the directors would confirm at any moment, say $7,508,360, or with the notes in hand, $16,293,395 25, to be deducted from $42,845,185 97, leaves $26,551,194 72 the actual cost to the shareholders of the Illinois Central Company on the 31st December last.

HO. OF REPS.

Admission of Tennessee—Mr. Miller.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Yours, respectfully, W. H. OSBORN.
JOHN M. DOUGLAS, Esq.,
President Illinois Central Railroad Company.

Mr. President, I desire to call your attention to a most important consideration which must be set down on the credit side of the Illinois Central railroad, and it will appear strange to you when I say that the capitalists who invested so largely in this enterprise might have done far better without receiving a single acre of the public lands. I refer to the location of the road, and state that any one at all acquainted with the geography of the country through which the road and branches run, and with the commercial points and lines of travel and trade, will see at a glance that the road was located for the benefit of the State and the United States, and very much to the pecuniary prejudice of the stockholders of the company. The road was, by the charter, made to run, not between important commercial points, such as Chicago and St. Louis, nor along any of the lines of trade and traffic running East and West, nor through the settled portions of the State, but North and South, through the wild and unsettled lands of the United States; the sale, settlement, and improvement of these lands being the chief consideration which influenced Congress to make the grant. At the date of the grant the settlements had been principally confined to the public highways or stage routes and mainly to the timber lands, leaving the prairies to bloom in their native wildness. Flourishing little villages and a considerably dense population had sprung up along these thoroughfares and natural channels of intercommunication, which, from the beginning, have furnished travel and traffic and most remunerative profits to the roads which have since been constructed along them. On the other hand, the Central railroad had to build up its own settlements, its own towns and farms, and to create its own trade, travel, and business.

As late as 1853 I stood in the center of one of the grand prairies of Illinois, when almost the only sign of civilization I could see was the pioneer locomotive of the Illinois Central railroad and the hardy sons of the Emerald isle as they were laying the first rails of that great work; all else was an ocean world of wilderness land. The object of my visit there was to enter some land, with a few land-warrants which I had bought at seventy-five cents to the dollar, but so remote did it seem to me before that vast area could be settled that it was long before I could make a selection, and get my consent to risk what then was almost my all upon so seemingly wild a venture.

In order to get vacant lands on each side of the track the aim of the Government was to miss the settlements. So important was this consideration that I do not hesitate to say that the Central Railroad Company would have made money if it had given back to the Government every acre of land it had received, and constructed the road through the settled portion of the State and between the most important commercial points. Railroad men understand this view of the case well. They will inform you that while long lines of road through unsettled regions require the same or greater outlays for construction and operation, three fourths of the profits or earnings of all roads proceed from the local traffic and travel, and not from the through trade and travel. But these great advantages the Central company were compelled to forego, because the Government was not consulting the interest of the company but its own, and the development of the country, and seeking not for settled but for unsettled lands. Thus the location of the road through an unsettled route deprived the company of advantages greater than the value of the lands themselves.

To show the wonderful effect which the money of the stockholders of the Illinois Central railroad had in bringing into market and settlement the lands of the Government, I mention, that while these lands had been in the market for twenty-five years, and on account of their remoteness from market and destitution of timber seemed likely to remain so for half a century more, while they came under the denomination of refuse lands, and belonged to that class which at a former session of Congress were proposed to be ceded to the States in which they were situated, in order to dispense with the machinery of land offices and other expenses which cost the Government more than the revenue derived from their sale while these things were so, yet in the year 1853, while the first earth was being thrown up by the spade and the iron was being laid upon the fresh road-bed, the Government sold of its public lands in the State of Illinois alone 2,807,981 acres, and most of them in the prairies traversed by the Central road.

Sir, a few days since, when the Senator from Maine rather humorously called to account my friend from Indiana [Mr. HENDRICKS] for finding but little warrant in the Constitution for voting away money, but as not having so tender a conscience in voting away lands, and the Senator replied that the policy of the Government was wise, because, as a great land-holder, it had adopted the most effectual means of imparting value to its lands by donating half and doubling the price of the reserved half, and at the same time, incidentally, this policy had given stimulus to production, impulse to trade, and opened new fields to enterprise, affecting in no small degree a large portion of the Union, I felt like congratulating the Senator from Indiana (for I was with him in Congress and with him in his policy) for the triumphant vindication years has given of the wisdom of that policy.

Sir, the history of the Central railroad is the history of the origin, rise, progress and glorious triumph of this policy. Sir, look at it. In 1852 the State of Illinois had just ninety-five miles of completed road. The mammoth system of the State (as it was called) had burst like a bubble, and the Commonwealth was bankrupt, her credit down, and her bonds hawked about in the market almost as worthless rags. But, sir, Congress made the grant of lands to the State; the road commenced; it brought population and wealth to Illinois; it astonished the Government and the opposers of this policy by placing in the hands of the Government every dollar it asked for its land. I read from the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office for the year 1865, page 32:

"By an act of Congress in 1850 a grant was made to Illinois to aid in the construction of railroads. It conveyed for the purpose 2,595,053 acres, which have been valued as high as $30,000,000, resulting in an extraordinary impulse to the settlement and prosperity of the State. At the date of the grant nearly half of the public lands within the limits of Illinois were vacant and undisposed of. Now, after the lapse of only fifteen years, the United States have virtually retired as a land-holder from the State."

I might say that as early as the year 1857 the United States had virtually retired from the State as a land-holder, and that it was almost impossible to find eighty acres of land unentered which was not either swamp or barrens; and, indeed, nearly all of these descriptions of land had been entered.

In ten years the population of the State advanced from 851,740 to 1,711,951, more than doubling her population in a single decade. The construction of the road gave a new and wonderful impetus. Other roads began to be built, and the State which in 1852 had only ninety-five miles of road in 1860 had three thousand miles, intersecting through all its length and breadth, and developing her immense domain until now agriculture is reaping harvests upon her prairies such as the world never saw before. The growth of the State has not been by any ordinary progress. Setting all example at defiance, she has marched forward with a bound to the proud position of the fourth in our "glorious empire of States." Wealth, power, glory, and dominion beyond the possibility of recall or change are hers, and hers forever. The Senator from Indiana was right. The policy of the land grants was right.

But, sir, let us not put to shame that policy by attempting to crush out the enterprises which so far have prospered under that policy and which should have the careful and continued support of the Government and of all the people of all the States.

Admission of Tennessee.

REMARKS OF HON. G. F. MILLER,

OF PENNSYLVANIA,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

July 20, 1866,

On the joint resolution concerning the admission of Representatives from the State of Tennessee.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, the Legislature of Tennessee having ratified the amendment to the Constitution of the United States, as passed the present Congress, this joint resolution provides for the admission to seats in Congress of loyal representatives from that State upon taking the oath prescribed by existing laws. It is conceded that Tennessee has sixty-three thousand loyal voters, and that she has, through her Legislature, disfranchised rebels, and in fact so changed her constitution and laws as to protect her citizens and make it truly a republican form of government, and the question is, shall this resolution be adopted? I trust, Mr. Speaker, it will.

The Governor of that State deserves the thanks, not only of his own State, but of the entire nation, for his indefatigable energy and patriotic services in calling together the Legislature, and urging upon them the ratification of the amendment, which with extraordinary alacrity was accomplished. It must be remembered that the loyal citizens of Tennessee during the late rebellion stood firm and undaunted for the Constitution and flag of this Republic. They suffered from persecution and hunger beyond description. They raised a large force, and entered the conflict for the preservation of this Union. Sir, the patriots of that State ought to receive encouragement from the nation, for to be a true patriot, surrounded as they were by blood-thirsty rebels ready and willing to take the heart's blood, not only of those who took arms for the preservation of this Union, but that of their wives, children, mothers, and fathers, and beside, had the torch applied to their homes, thus rendering them houseless, and many of the helpless portion of loyal families were compelled to fly to the mountains to hide themselves in order to evade the wrath of the rebels, while the able-bodied portion were engaged in the battle-field in mighty conflict with the blood-thirsty rebels. I tell you, sir, that men thus situated, who stood firm to their integrity when all that is dear to the human heart was in peril, are patriots indeed, and deserve the commendation of this Republic.

This is the first State that is claimed by the rebels to have seceded that has ratified this amendment, and by admitting its loyal representatives we will give encouragement to the loyal element and teach the other southern States that the only way for them to be represented in the councils of the nation will be to follow the example of Tennessee. It is unnecessary, however, to say here at what time or under what circumstances other of the States lately in rebellion will be admitted to representation, as that question will be determined when application is made, but I for one would say that I would require as a condition precedent that the State so applying must first ratify the constitutional amendment, for I look upon that as indispensable to the injunction of "guaranteeing to every State in the Union a republican form of government." It is a great mistake in those who urge that Congress is bound to admit representatives from the so-called rebel States without any conditions whatever, for if that doctrine were tenable then those States would be sitting in judgment in their own case, and it would be idle to think they would vote for restrictions upon themselves after their admission. But owing to the peculiar condition in which these States were placed by the rebellion there can be no doubt that Congress has a right under the Constitution to demand first a guarantee by adopting the proposed amendment, and any other construction would, in my opinion, be detrimental to the preservation of the Union. But, as I have already said, I believe Tennessee has placed herself in a proper position, under the circumstances, to be entitled to have her representatives admitted to seats in Congress provided they can take the required oath. This amendment, so far as regards its practical effects, is applicable not only to the States lately in rebellion, but to all others.

Considerable has been said in regard to the preamble to the resolution: this, Mr. Speaker, I look upon as too trifling for us to divide upon, and in fact more is embraced than necessary; that, however, is not material as the resolution contains the main object, and that is the admission of representatives.

The honorable gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BOUTWELL] finds fault with the resolution because it does not require Tennessee to so change her constitution and laws as to permit universal suffrage. It has been the uniform construction of the Constitution of the United States, of the 17th of September, 1787, from its adoption, to allow each State to regulate therein the elective franchise, and that rule has been too firmly settled to be shaken. The amendment to the Constitution, however, will not allow a representation for men disfranchised; thus leaving to each State the privilege of deciding whether the colored man shall vote or not, and if not allowed that right no representation can be had for him, or in other words no other person can vote in his place. This may eventually induce at least those southern States that have a large population of colored people to allow them to vote in order to increase their representation in Congress. This, however, is a question entirely for such States to decide, and not for Congress to force upon them. But why should we insist upon the southern States allowing universal suffrage as a condition precedent to representation when our own States have not adopted that rule? I find that in the State represented by the honorable gentleman from Massachusetts conditions are imposed. The fourth article of the third section of the constitution of that State reads thus:

"Every male person (being twenty-one years and resident of any particular town in this Commonwealth for the space of one year next preceding) having a freehold estate within the same town of the annual income of three pounds or an estate of the value of sixty pounds shall have a right to vote in the choice of Representatives for the said town."

I find also in the article of amendments, adopted April 17, 1840, to that constitution, under item twenty, as follows:

"No person shall have the right to vote or be eligible to office under the constitution of this Commonwealth, who shall not be able to read the constitution in the English language and write his name: Provided, however, That the provisions of this amendment shall not apply to any person prevented by physical disability from complying with its requirements nor to any person who now has the right to vote nor to any person who shall be sixty years of age or upward at the time this amendment shall take effect."

Hence it will be seen that that gentleman's State has both a property and an educational qualification annexed to the voters, and in all the other States, with the exception of some five or six, by their constitutions negro suffrage is excluded. Now, while the States we represent exclude negro suffrage, we cannot with much grace insist upon these States doing that which our own refused to do. I admit that the appeals of gentlemen in favor of such a theory are very patriotic, and especially those of the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. BOUTWELL,] but he must remember that the State he has the honor to represent has not gone the length he asks to be imposed on the southern States.

It is true, as said by the honorable gentleman, that four million slaves have been emancipated; that the stigma of slavery that rested upon this Republic has been eradicated; and I might add that the country, by the aid of Providence, has done much for the colored race; and it is also true that the black man rendered good service in the Army in putting down the rebellion, and well he might, as by the war his race has become free and he is now being educated and elevated from degradation, in which the war at its breaking out found him. Truly much has been done for that race, and no wonder they so much revere the name of our much-lamented President, Abraham Lincoln, who by the guidance of Him in whom he trusted was able to bring about that great change in the social condition of the country. But as Providence has blessed our arms and brought about the emancipation of the colored race, we must not be too eager for their elevation. Time alone can bring about what is best. Often by being over zealous we retard that which we are too hasty to accomplish.

I am therefore, Mr. Speaker, in favor of the resolution now under consideration, and will most cheerfully vote for its adoption and join in welcoming loyal members from that State, who stood up in the hour of peril in behalf of and rendered valuable service for the preservation of our Republic, to a participation in the affairs of the nation.

The Tariff.

SPEECH OF HON. S. S. MARSHALL,

OF ILLINOIS,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

July 9, 1866,

In Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, in opposition to the tariff bill.

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Chairman, it is difficult to speak with patience or decorum of the measure now before the House. In all ages of the world there has been an effort on the part of the few by legislative jugglery to rob the toiling millions and build up a favored class who could riot in unbounded wealth wrung from the hard earnings of labor. In other countries this effort has been but too successful. A favored aristocracy are thus enabled to riot in luxuries that their hands have not earned, and to domineer with supercilious arrogance over the meritorious and productive classes of the community. In our favored land it was fondly hoped by the founders of our great Republic that we had escaped forever from this system of robbery. It cannot be denied, indeed, that at the very foundation of our Government this system had its advocates, and that even then there were men whose aristocratic tastes were outraged and whose aristocratic noses turned up with supercilious arrogance at the idea of a democratic republic where labor should be unfettered, where no class should be specially favored, and where every man should be required to earn his bread by the sweat of his own face.

THE OLD FEDERAL PARTY.

The great central idea of the old Federal party (not always avowed, it is true,) was that a favored class, removed from the degradations and contaminations of labor, was necessary to the maintenance of order and to the dignity and character of every Government. "So manage your legislation as to make the rich richer and keep the poor in subjection" was their secret but favorite watchword. The less the producing classes are permitted to retain of the fruits of their own labor, the more subservient, it was believed, they would be to the purposes of the favored few. To consummate these purposes an emasculation of the States and a centralization of power in the Federal Government was necessary. And to effect this the old Federal party, with unflinching zeal, devoted its matchless talents and untiring energies.

RISE OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

This attempt to make Republicanism itself an instrument of tyranny—to transfer under a specious disguise the effete institutions of the Old World to our virgin soils; to oppress and impoverish the people under the forms of a free constitution; to make the great producing classes of the country but "hewers of wood and drawers of water" to the legislative jugglers and their friends—was for the time defeated by the uprising of the people themselves under the lead of Jefferson, the great apostle of Democracy. The Democratic party was formed and organized, and with truth, justice, and the Constitution for its armor, and the protection of the people from legislative robbery for its battle-cry, it went boldly into the conflict, and with Herculean blows struck down (as was then hoped forever) the mailed hosts of disguised monarchy and Federal usurpation. It is now two thirds of a century since Thomas Jefferson was first elected President of the United States, and by his clear, simple, yet grand inaugural announced to the world the fundamental principles of Democracy, by which that historic party has ever since been guided:

"Equal and exact justice to all men and exclusive privileges to none; the support of the State governments in all their rights, as the most competent administrators of our domestic concerns and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies; the preservation of the General Government in its whole constitutional vigor, as the sheet-anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad; economy in the public expense, that labor may be lightly burdened; the honest payment of our debts and sacred preservation of the public faith; encouragement of agriculture and of commerce as its handmaid; the diffusion of information and arraignment of all public abuses at the bar of public reason; freedom of religion, freedom of the press, and freedom of person, under the protection of the habeas corpus; and trials by juries impartially selected."

These, sir, are the historic principles of the Democratic party, and these principles faithfully carried out in the administration of the Government would make us a free, prosperous, happy, and united people. Government should interfere with the business of the people only so far as is necessary to protect them in their legal and constitutional rights, and should take from them by taxation what is necessary to its support, economically administered, and not one dollar more.

When you go beyond that you are guilty of robbery. When you exempt any species of capital from taxation, and impose all its legitimate burdens on the residue of the people you are not only guilty of robbery to that extent, but you violate the very spirit and purposes of our Government. And when you go still further, as in this bill, and use the machinery of Government to take money by millions from one portion of the people, not for the use of the national Treasury, but to put it by a kind of skillful hocus pocus into the coffers of an already bloated and domineering aristocracy, you are guilty of a crime that language fails sufficiently to characterize. Labor, sir, should be protected in the right to eat the bread earned with its own hands, and the burdens of Government should be imposed rather upon the accumulated capital of the country than upon the humble pittance of the toiling millions.

To comprehend the real character and importance of this and kindred measures it is necessary to take a somewhat wide range of discussion. This bill and the system of taxation of which it is the offspring, most extraordinary and diabolical as they are, are but the outcroppings of the deep-laid schemes of the old Federal or New England party, adopted almost immediately after the formation of our Federal Constitution. These schemes have never been abandoned, but on the contrary have been adhered to and prosecuted with a pertinacity almost without a parallel. The name and organization of that party have passed into history, but its principles and purposes have never for one moment been in abeyance, and they live to-day in full vitality and possess really greater power than they did in the time of the elder Adams. They never will be abandoned while selfishness and avarice constitute motives of human action, and the only hope of the country is in enlightening and arousing the people as to their true character. In this respect more than in any other it is important ever to remember that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," for when you place the laboring classes at the mercy of a moneyed aristocracy, I care not what may be the form of government, liberty itself becomes a mockery and a delusion.

HO. OF REPS.

The Tariff—Mr. Marshall.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

TO CONSUMMATE THEIR PURPOSES THE OLD FEDERALISTS TURN DISUNIONISTS.

The daily and nightly dream and hope of the old Federal party was to inaugurate some scheme by which they could seize upon the Federal Government and use it as an instrument for levying tribute upon the agricultural States and upon the laboring classes of the whole country. It was soon discovered that the interests and policy of the southern States were opposed to the schemes of that party, and that these Federal hopes were in danger of being blighted forever. The magnificent West already began to loom up before the enraptured vision of these greedy cormorants, and their patriotic eyes brightened at the glorious prospect of levying tribute without limit upon the labor of the toiling millions that were destined to spread over those fertile plains. But this system could not be inaugurated with hope of success unless the South could be emasculated or driven from the Union. And it was thus that at the very commencement of the present century an agitation was commenced in New England to effect a dissolution of the Union. It is now over fifty years since Matthew Carey, of Philadelphia, published his valuable book, "The Olive Branch," in which he demonstrated "that there existed a conspiracy in New England to effect a dissolution of the Union at every hazard, and to form a separate confederacy."

Hear his description of these disunion Federalists who flourished in the days of Jefferson and Madison:

"They are possessed of inordinate wealth, of considerable talents, great energy, and overgrown influence. A northern confederacy has been their grand object for a number of years. They have repeatedly advocated in the public prints a separation of the States."

"To sow discord, jealousy, and hostility between the different sections of the Union was the first grand step in their career in order to accomplish their favorite object of a separation of the States."

"In fact, without this efficient instrument all their efforts would have been utterly unavailing. It would have been impossible had the honest yeomanry of the eastern States continued to regard their southern fellow-citizens as friends and brethren, having one common interest in the promotion of the general welfare, to make them instruments in the hands of those who intended to employ them to operate the unholy work of destroying the noble, the august, the splendid fabric of our Union."

"For eighteen years, therefore, the most unceasing endeavors have been made to poison the minds of the people of the eastern States toward and to alienate them from their fellow-citizens of the southern. The people of the latter section have been portrayed as demons incarnate and destitute of all the good qualities that dignify or adorn human nature."

"It thus happens that a people proverbially orderly, quiet, sober, and rational were actually so highly excited as to be ripe for revolution and ready to overturn the whole system of social order."

It has been often and well said that history repeats itself. In language written over fifty years ago, our author, in describing the old Federal disunionists of that day, draws a life-like and most truthful picture of the radical agitators of the present day. In reading his graphic pages we almost imagine that he had in his eye our "central directory," with the smelling committees and the inflammatory libels sent forth "to sow discord, jealousy, and hostility between the different sections of the Union," and thus to render a restoration of peace, union, and fraternity impossible. These Federal disunionists of sixty years ago used precisely the same denunciations against Washington, Jefferson, Madison, the Randolphs, the Henrys, and their contemporaries of the southern States that are now so eagerly fulminated against the entire people of the same section of our country. In a time of war, such inflammatory appeals might be excusable, but now, when we need the healing influences of love, kindness, and conciliation to cure the wounds of our bleeding country such conduct is simply devilish, and should receive the execrations of all good men.

THE TRUE KEY TO OUR POLITICAL TROUBLES.

And, sir, this and kindred schemes furnish the true key to and solution of our present political dangers and complications. On all economic and financial questions the interests of the West and the South are identical. They are all now, and will continue to be, agricultural States. That measure which wrongs and oppresses one wrongs and oppresses them all equally and alike. The South is the natural and inevitable ally of the West on all questions of revenue and taxation. With the South excluded, the New England lords of the loom, with their allies of the middle States, can levy tribute upon the people of the West at pleasure and without limit. This is demonstrated by the experience of the last five years. With the representatives of the South in their seats this could not be done. Hence this already bloated race of extortioners do not want the southern States restored to the Union, and they are determined that they shall not be unless the negroes are all admitted to the right of suffrage, by which means they expect to secure eight hundred thousand black allies as voters, who would be their pliant tools, and would aid them in continuing their system of outrage and oppression.

In speaking of this measure with that fearlessness and frankness which are due to those whom I represent here, I desire to say nothing that can justly be deemed offensive to any member of the House. I shall not charge that the Committee of Ways and Means deliberately intend the wrong and robbery that must result from the passage of this bill. It is much pleasanter to assume that they are the victims of false theories or have unwittingly become the dupes of the hordes of monopolists and manufacturers who have infested the Capitol during the entire session. I willingly take it for granted, as it is my duty to do on all occasions, that all the advocates of the bill within these Halls are actuated by just and honorable motives. The bill, indeed, is understood to have emanated principally from the brain of that prodigy in social science, Mr. Colwell, of the revenue commission, aided by a combination of the plunderers, each of whom, it is said, has agreed upon the portion he would be willing to take in the general grab. I take it for granted that the committee has been the victim of this unholy combination, and shall not hold them responsible for what cannot fairly be considered the result of their own deliberations. I therefore make no charge against any member of the House; but I do insist that with those who understand the secrets and control the action of the dominant faction this greed of plunder is at the bottom of and furnishes the proper key to our present political complications.

That very able Republican paper, the New York Evening Post, is beginning to more than suspect the secret motives of the loud-mouthed patriots of its own party; and touches upon the key-note of its action when in an article a few days ago it says:

"We warn the prohibitionists that they ride too high a horse for safety. They are trying to force a most hateful and wicked scheme upon the country. That is bad enough; but they are at the same time keeping out the representatives of the southern States. Are they doing this in order to make sure of their own schemes? Is it to secure the passage of this prohibitive and destructive bill that they refuse to admit the southern members? It would seem so from their high-handed course. The country will believe it, and they will only ruin themselves by such a course, which heaps injustice on injustice, and commits one wrong in order to facilitate the commission of another—just as a highwayman maims his victims in order the more easily to plunder their persons."

PROTECTIVE SYSTEM.

This system never could have found favor beyond those who were to be enriched by it but for the ingenious adoption for it by its advocates of a false and fallacious but popular name. The designation, "protection of home industry," certainly sounds remarkably well, and has won for it thousands of misguided advocates. Call it by its proper name, "robbery of the masses to enrich a supercilious and domineering aristocracy," and it will soon fall into merited disgrace and odium. Its advocates who had been watching and praying and laboring to bring about such an opportunity seized upon the occasion of the withdrawal of the southern representatives from Congress to immediately inaugurate and force upon the country the tariff of 1861, known as the "Morrill tariff." Its injustice and outrageous discriminations in favor of the capitalists and against the laboring men, especially of the West, were clearly and forcibly pointed out and demonstrated at the time. But the advocates of the bill, claiming a monopoly of all the loyalty of the country, and insisting that it was a revenue measure and necessary for the maintenance and credit of the Government in that time of war, succeeded by this false clamor in passing it through Congress and placing it upon the statute-book as a law of the land. The effect of it was the almost instantaneous doubling the price of everything purchased for consumption by the people of the West.

But we were in the midst of war, and the patriotic people, although disapproving of many measures of the Government, were not disposed to cavil at them in that time of peril. Indeed the masses of the people regarded this sudden and extraordinary increase in the cost of the necessities of life as the natural result of the war, and did not realize that in the main it was caused by a legislative fraud. Under the operations of this bill the profits of the manufacturers were enormous, and they found themselves, as if by magic, rolling in more than oriental wealth and splendor. A superficial observer would have supposed very naturally that these favored classes thus daily receiving enormous bounties, drawn from the pittance of the toiling masses, would have rested contented without asking for further legislation in their behalf. But, sir, it is the old story of privileged classes. Having once tasted the forbidden fruit of legislative robbery, their unholy demands are ever increasing. Avarice and extortion always grow by what they feed on. Although these lordly manufacturers were building palatial residences, sporting princely equipages, and regularly declaring annual dividends of twenty, forty, sixty, and in many instances one and two hundred per cent. on their capitals, the very next Congress was met by their clamors for more "protection," or, in other words, for the privilege of adding to the price of their goods, and thus more thoroughly robbing the consumer. They insisted that they were in danger of being ruined without more "protection." And that very wise and accommodating Congress almost immediately passed a joint resolution increasing the entire duties fifty per cent., which resolution remained in force until the existing oppressive tariff was enacted in 1864, carrying out the demands of the manufacturers.

As the law now stands, the manufacturers, ironmongers, bankers, and bond-holders are rapidly drawing to themselves the entire wealth of the nation. The existing tariff can be defended on no ground except that by which the highwayman claims the right to strip and plunder the defenseless traveler. Although yielding for the last year a large revenue, it is in no proper sense a tariff for revenue. The main idea running through it is "protection" of the manufacturer, or, as I more properly call it, "robbery of the people." The people, be it remarked, do not object to any fair and equal system of taxation to support their Government and maintain its good faith and credit. But they are every day becoming more enlightened on the subject of this legislative jugglery; and when they do fully comprehend that they are being impoverished to build up a heartless, soulless, domineering oligarchy, they will rise up in a body and demand that this robbery shall cease. Indeed, sir, if the people could fully understand and comprehend the fact that this measure will, on the day it passes, add $200,000,000 to the wealth of the manufacturers and the holders of the immense stocks of goods that have been recently imported, and that this immense sum with the accumulated per cent. and interest added thereto must be raised by the bitter toil and sweat and agony of an already oppressed people, they would rise in their might and majesty and drive the authors and advocates of this scheme from these Halls in disgrace and confusion, as Christ drove the money-changers from the temple they were desecrating.

A REDUCTION OF EXISTING DUTIES DEMANDED.

That a radical modification of the existing tariff is imperatively demanded is undeniable. It violates every sound principle of political economy, and is a disgrace to the civilization of the age. A tariff of any kind inevitably increases the prices to the consumer. It can only be justified where it is necessary to raise revenue for the Government. But tariffs for revenue, and tariffs simply for "protection," as it is falsely called, are the natural antagonists and enemies of each other. When you very greatly increase the price of an article you necessarily reduce the consumption thereof. A very able writer on political economy, (Perry,) in his recent work, forcibly illustrates this point. He says:

"It follows, that the principles on which a revenue tariff should be framed are very different from those that should rule in protective tariffs. If the object be revenue, the duties should be low, so as not to discourage importation, or very sensibly increase prices. Low duties on all imports, except high-priced foreign luxuries, which are used only by the rich, and which may be taxed heavily without discouraging importation, will infallibly yield the largest aggregate revenue. The reason for this is, that society is like a pyramid standing on its broadest base; each horizontal section of it is more extended than the one above it. So in society. The number of those able to purchase an article at five dollars is more than twice as numerous as those able to purchase it at ten; and those who are able to buy it at one dollar are probably more than ten times as many as those who would buy it at five dollars."

"A lower duty, therefore, on any article is likely to bring it within the reach of a much wider circle of consumers; and for many to pay a low duty is better for the revenue than for a few to pay a high duty."

The same able writer shows very clearly the principles upon which the tariff now in force was framed, and the means by which its passage was secured. He says:

"The protectionists in Congress seized upon the opportunity of the withdrawal of the southern members for discriminating in favor of the articles in which they were interested, even to the extent of diminishing the revenue by practically prohibiting the importation. They did another thing which imposed at the time on many people, and which can hardly be characterized in too severe terms. At the moment when the great need of the Government was revenue, they added largely to the free list, taking care to put upon it many articles which are used in manufactures and which thus escape taxation altogether. They put the duty upon protected articles so high that little or no revenue is received from them, and at the same time withdrew by means of the free list all revenue from many articles especially used in protected manufactures. The new tariff, therefore, has not produced the revenue expected from it. It is not honestly adjusted for that purpose. To put articles on a free list is no boon to free trade; especially when it is accompanied, as in this case, by very high duties. The present duties are very much too high, and many things are exempted from duty which ought to pay duty for the sake of revenue. The present tariff, therefore, rests on false principles throughout, and it cannot be permanent. They who feel themselves benefited by it may as well make up their minds to dispense with it. The western States will not tolerate it. Political economy denounces it. To relax commercial systems and not to restrict them is alone in accordance with the spirit of the age. The state of the country demands its abolition."—Elements of Political Economy, page 430.

Notwithstanding this spirited denunciation and demand for the repeal of this bill of abominations by the ablest living writer on political economy in our country, these favored classes come here and demand more "protection," and the result is the bill now before the committee, increasing the duties in many cases over one hundred per cent., and in almost innumerable instances making them absolutely prohibitory.

THE PROPOSED TARIFF.

I will not at this time attempt a thorough analysis of this bill or of its numberless enormities. It starts out with a fraud upon its very face. It professes to be a bill to provide increased revenue from imports, and for other purposes. The "other purposes" unrevealed are the real purposes of the bill. That it will very greatly increase the burdens of the people is beyond all question; and that it will reduce the revenue derived from customs at least $50,000,000 will scarcely be seriously denied. A large number of articles used by manufacturers, from which revenue is now derived, are placed on the free list, while upon many important articles, largely consumed by the people, the duties are so greatly increased as absolutely to prohibit importation, thus enabling our favored manufacturers to charge just what they please for their fabrics. From these two classes—the free-list articles and the prohibited articles—no revenue whatever will be derived by the Government. On many other articles the importations and the revenue will be very greatly reduced by the increased duties. It is therefore a double robbery; a robbery of the people and a robbery of the Government at the same time. And this, too, when the people are already greatly oppressed and the Government is compelled to raise a large sum in gold to meet the accruing interest on our public debt, there being no other source from which this fund can be derived.

In this connection I will submit the exposition made by the importers of hardware and cutlery of New York of the effect of the bill on a single class of articles:

"The enormous rates of duty proposed to be levied upon hardware and cutlery indicate a regard for special interests to the entire sacrifice of revenue and great injury of consumers. It might have been expected that the protection of a war tariff of 50 per cent. on pocket cutlery, and 35 per cent. on table cutlery, and on files 30 per cent. ad valorem, and 6 cents per pound on some, and 10 cents per pound on others, averaging 66 per cent. on files, &c., on which many domestic manufacturers have become wealthy, would have satisfied them, and that the country might now be allowed the receipt of revenue from those which are imported, when it is remembered that, in addition to the import duties, the domestic manufacturer enjoys protection to the extent of 10 to 30 per cent. in the cost of freights, packages, commissions, &c."

"But it is now proposed, by taxing all pocket cutlery costing under five dollars with a specific duty of 75 cents per dozen and costing five dollars per dozen, and above with two dollars per dozen in addition to 50 per cent. ad valorem, to tax every child's knife costing 6d. sterling per dozen, (custom-house value 12 cents,) with both rates of tax 81 cents, which is 675 per cent. On every boy's knife which costs 1s. 3d. or 30 cents per dozen, the two duties will amount to 90 cents, equal to 300 per cent., and on every farmer's knife costing 3s. or 72 cents, the tariff will be $1 11 or 154 per cent.; while the duty on all pocket knives costing (custom-house value) 72 cents to $9 08 will average 72 per cent."

"In table cutlery a considerable quantity is imported, which costs 6s. per gross or $1 44; the specific duty as the clause passed the House is 12 cents per dozen or $1 44 per gross, with the 45 per cent. ad valorem, is $2 09, equal to 145 per cent. The table cutlery, extensively used through the country, costing 16s., or $3 86 per gross; the specific and ad valorem duty is $3 18 or 82 per cent. Ivory table knives, costing 6s. per dozen or $1 44 are to bear a specific duty of $1 per dozen and ad valorem 45 per cent., together $1 65 or 115 per cent., and a 10s. table-knife, custom-house value $2 42, with both rates bears a duty of $2 09, equal to 86 per cent."

"An English twelve-inch flat bastard file, used by nearly every mechanic, (custom-house value $2 20,) with the proposed heavy specific of $2 per dozen, is taxed 91 per cent., while mill and taper files, used by every farmer, are proposed to be taxed in the same proportion. German files, being of less cost, are taxed on the average 141 per cent."

"The proposed duty on German wrought nails varies from 141 to 155 per cent.; halter and dog chains, 81 per cent.; coil chain, 110 to 135 per cent.; trace chains, 134 to 154 per cent.; hooks and hinges, 183 per cent.; on curry-combs and padlocks, with specific 25 cents and ad valorem 45 per cent.; on cheaper kinds, costing from 18 to 45 cents per dozen, of which great quantities are used, the tariff is proposed to be 93 to 184 per cent."

"On the article of saws, used by every farmer, the specific and ad valorem duties will average 77 to 163 per cent."

"All these goods come into general use by the bulk of the community, especially among the poorer classes, many of whom have not the means to pay high prices; thus revenue will be sacrificed and the population generally injured."

When even the school-boys of the land have not escaped the vigilance of these extortioners, and are taxed from ninety to six hundred and seventy-five per cent. on their pocket-knives it is high time that grown up men and women shall look into this bill and see how much they are required to contribute to keep up this soulless aristocracy. Under the tariff as it now stands, look for a moment at the enormous profits of the manufacturers, as shown by the facts which they themselves have given to the country:

"The Androscooggin mills, with a capital of one million, declared last January a dividend of twenty-five per cent., and on the first of the present month another of twenty per cent., that is they have cleared nearly half a million dollars in the last twelve months. The Lancaster mills divided in January twenty per cent., and on the 1st of July twenty-five per cent. The Langdon mills divided twenty-five per cent. in January, and another twenty-five per cent. the present month. The Bates mills divided twenty-five per cent. in January and ten per cent. in July. The Chicago mills thirty per cent. in January and fifteen in July. The Hill mill ten per cent. in January and twenty in July. The Appleton mills twenty per cent. in January and ten in July."

And so on with other companies; and in addition to these enormous dividends we are informed that many of the companies have greatly enlarged their works, or otherwise greatly enhanced the value of their property and the capital invested. The manufacturing companies were never more prosperous. Their actual earnings average from forty to one hundred and twenty per cent. Some companies, the screw companies for example, divide three and four hundred per cent. per annum. If these profits were the legitimate results of industry and enterprise no one could complain, and, indeed, all should be gratified. But when it is the result of unjust legislation, by which the masses may be robbed to enrich these men, no language can sufficiently characterize the outrage.

Under the existing tariff the railroad system of the United States, in which the farmers are so vitally interested, is almost paralyzed, and the building of new lines of road is rendered almost an impossibility. Indeed, the present duty on railroad iron (all of which be it remembered must be paid in gold) almost amounts to a prohibition. A ton of rails which costs in Wales £6 10s. or $32 50, will cost at New York, in our currency, at least $83 62. To illustrate:

One ton at £6 10s. makes, at $5 per £.....	$32 50
Freight, insurance, interest, &c.....	7 50
Present duty.....	15 68

Total, in gold.....$55 68 which, at fifty per cent. premium, makes $83 52 in our currency. And now, by the bill before us, as reported, it is proposed to add an additional duty of about seven dollars per ton. From an able article in the Evening Post on this subject I extract the following:

"Already in anticipation of this duty some ironmasters have advanced the price to $87 50. What the price will be we may well ask when the additional duty of about $7 per ton in gold becomes fixed. As an evidence of how little the railroad iron interest needs protection we quote from a statement published by the American Iron and Steel Association: 'The total production of rails in this country, new and re-rolled, in 1859, was 195,195 tons; in 1861, 335,308 tons, and the present capacity in 1866 of the mills in this country is 755,000 tons.* Now, during this period of two years the importation of foreign rails was larger than at any previous period, yet with all this the iron interest has thriven remarkably. Had it not been for the importation of foreign rails, thousands of miles of important railroad lines would not now have been in existence, and millions of acres of productive land would still be without access to a market.

"We call the attention of the farmers of America to these facts. Without railroads their farms would be almost worthless; without railroads Illinois to-day be a thinly-settled, poverty-stricken plain; by its railroad system it has become one of the wealthiest and most populous States of the Union. The country needs nothing so much as more and cheaper railroads; but the protectionists are now laying such a tariff upon railroad iron as will cripple the greater number of the railroads in this country, and entirely stop the building of new roads, and for what? To put enormous profits in the pockets of a few iron-masters, who, after all, cannot make half the iron absolutely needed by the country. That is 'protection' to iron—but ruin to agriculture."

It may be said, sir, that the language I use in denunciation of this measure is extraordinary and unjustifiable. I admit that it is strong, and would be unjustifiable if the measure itself would admit of milder language. But, sir, when a bill of this character is brought into the House, which will inevitably have the effect, not to raise revenue for the Government, but to rob my constituents, I would be recreant in my duty to them if I did not call it by its proper name. In using such language I do not stand alone. Leading and influential Republican journals that heretofore tamely submitted to the robberies that have been perpetrated under the tariff laws from 1861 to this time, have been so shocked at this additional outrage that they have not hesitated to denounce it in the boldest and most fearless manner. The Chicago Tribune, the leading Republican journal of the West, says of it:

"It is such a bare-faced cheat that no man in the community, who has not a stock of goods on hand on the sale of which he expects to rob his neighbors from twenty to one hundred per cent. of their value, can fail to see and denounce it."

Again it says:

"The proposed increase of the tariff is an attempt on the part of its advocates to take about two hundred million dollars at one swoop out of the pockets of the rightful owners, and transfer it to the manufacturers, merchants, jobbers, and speculators who have goods on hand, whether of domestic or foreign production. It is a pure scheme of plunder, without the slightest excuse or palliation."

And again:

"The new tariff bill reported by the Committee of Ways and Means is a financial monstrosity, the like of which is rarely seen in any age or clime. It is hardly necessary to specify particular articles in the bill. Turn which way we will a new mountain of taxation rises before us—taxation avowedly not to put money into the national Treasury, but to keep it out—taxation to wring money from the many and give it to the few."

"Mr. MORRILL says that the proposed tariff is temporary. It cannot be so temporary that it will not take from two to four hundred million dollars out of the pockets of those who have earned it and transfer it to the pockets of those who have not earned it."

The New York Evening Post and Cincinnati Commercial, leading Republican journals, have also denounced the bill with equal vigor and courage. The New York Herald says very forcibly:

"The crowning act of infamous legislation, corruption, and imbecility of the present Congress is about to be consummated in the passage of the tariff bill reported by the Committee of Ways and Means. This bill, if rightly named, should be called a bill to enrich a few New England and Pennsylvania manufacturers and a few rich merchants who have large stocks of goods on hand, at the expense of the rest of the community."

"It is estimated—and we think the estimate is moderate—that if this tariff should become a law it would put at once five hundred millions into the pockets of those who hold stocks of goods and into the hands of the forestallers." * * * "But who pays for all this? The farmers of the West and North, the planters, the mechanics, laborers, and all the industrious classes. They pay for it in enormous high prices, and all to enrich a bloated monopoly."

That able paper, the New York Mercantile Journal, says:

"The new tariff bill, as reported by Mr. MORRILL, is a most sweeping and radical measure. It changes the rates of duties upon upward of four thousand separate articles. The free list is largely increased, but it is composed almost exclusively of articles that do not enter into general consumption, and which constitute the raw material for manufactures. Upon articles of general consumption the changes are of a most important character, and are from twenty to a hundred and fifty per cent. higher. In general, the new tariff bill will add an average of about thirty per cent. to the cost of living." * * * "In many cases the taxes amount to an absolute prohibition. This is an important departure from the established principles of our Government and people, which regard a tariff as a source of revenue rather than an instrument of protection and monopoly."

"If the majority in Congress had devoted itself to the work of stopping the leaks in the present law so as to increase the revenue without adding to the burdens of taxation or the cost of living, there could be no objection to it. But we find that this was by no means the intention, and it is apparent, that if the present bill should become a law, the cost of living will be largely increased while the revenue will be diminished. It cannot fail to excite surprise, that after a brief two year's experience of the present law the manufacturers should again desire increased protection. The explanation, however, is obvious. The average duties of fifty per cent. ad valorem imposed by the law of 1864 increased the cost of labor and raw products to that precise extent, and the consequence is, that the tax operates as a bounty on the foreign manufacturer, and ceases to benefit the American producer. Hence, there is a fresh demand for higher duties, and if they should be adopted we shall have another demand next year for additional duties. If we increase the duties this year from fifty to seventy-five per cent, we must increase them next year to one hundred per cent., because every increase of duties is followed by a corresponding advance in prices. Upon this principle we shall be constantly obliged to adopt an increasing schedule of duties until we at last reach the Japanese ideal of absolute exclusion."

But in addition to this iniquitous taxation of the people of the West, this measure inflicts upon them another wrong equally disastrous. While you double the cost of the necessities of life you destroy our means of purchasing. This bill, so far as it operates in the way of prohibition, shuts up the foreign market for western breadstuffs. The paper last quoted says, truly:

"The prohibitive duties of the new tariff virtually shut up the foreign market for western breadstuffs. The foreign consumer has nothing but the products of his labor to give in exchange for our wheat, corn, beef, and pork; and if we exclude these from our markets by a prohibitory tariff, we deprive the western farmers of their best customers. The consequences are apparent. Our foreign customers are necessarily obliged to seek new markets, where the people will be willing to receive their products in exchange for their surplus of commodities. There can be no doubt that one of the results of the new tariff will be to render American breadstuffs and products generally almost unsalable in foreign markets."

That such will be the legitimate result cannot be denied by any one who has paid the slightest attention to the principles of political economy. These extracts, which might be multiplied almost indefinitely, have been taken from Republican and independent journals, and show at least that there are some iniquities that the lash of party cannot force some of your ablest journals to countenance, and that the independent press is thoroughly aroused to the outrages of our present financial and revenue system.

I repeat that these systems of taxation furnish the true key to our present political complications. I do not charge or think that any considerable portion of the dominant party are aware of this or are actuated by sinister motives. But it is notorious that the actual tone and direction is given to all political parties by a very few leading spirits. No one among the people supposed when the war ended so triumphantly to the Union Army that at this time, fifteen long months after that grand event, we would still remain a disaffected people, and that, too, by the voluntary action of the North, while the South stood quietly by asking for peace and union under the Constitution of our fathers. But the people had not learned, then, that there was a favored class controlling the legislation of the country who cannot afford a restoration of the Union under the Constitution. Union would soon deprive them, as they too well know, of the rich spoils they are now gathering from a deluded and oppressed people. Union would soon be followed by a just and equitable system of revenue and taxation by which labor would be relieved of its intolerable burdens. Union, immediate Union, under the Constitution of our fathers, is now an absolute necessity to the laboring man, and especially to the people of the West. But for the same reason that we demand Union these favored classes will never consent to its restoration. They will never release their grip upon the throats of the people if they can avoid it. They will continue by all the means that great wealth and perverted talents can command, to stir up strife and animosity and distrust between the sections, and they will continue to insist that four million ignorant, degraded Africans, shall immediately, without preparation, be elevated to all the dignity and rights of American citizenship, under the hope that they will be effective allies of these lordly schemers and will aid them in perpetuating their system of legislative robbery.

It is for this that the Union remains broken, and strife, discord, and distrust continue to agitate the land. It is under this influence that Congress resolved itself into a political caucus and surrendered its powers to a central directory; for this that our grand Union Army has been robbed of that for which they laid down their lives upon a thousand battle-fields—the real, cordial restoration of the Union; for this that negro equality, negro citizenship, and negro suffrage are demanded, and this long-heeled child of Africa is fostered, fed, and clothed with money wrung by oppressive taxation from the toiling white man; for this the doors of these legislative halls have been shut in the faces of gallant soldiers who for four long years risked their lives and all that was dear to them in the cause of the Union; for this these gallant Union men, duly elected as members of Congress, with the evidence of election in their hands, have stood for seven long months at these doors, asking in vain for admission or recognition; for this the Constitution of our country has been openly and habitually violated. This, in short, is at the foundation of every political movement of the faction that now controls the legislation of our country.

THE PROHIBITIONISTS PRACTICAL REPUDIATORS.

Another serious objection to the bill arises from the fact that the prohibitionists have been so eager for "protection" that they threaten by such a system to destroy the revenues, and thereby entail upon the Government disgrace and bankruptcy. It is in fact the first practical step in the direction of repudiation. We have now a debt of $1,000,000,000, the interest on which must be paid in gold; and by the very terms of our national obligations the interest on a debt of over $2,000,000,000 must very soon be paid regularly in gold. As long as our currency continues in its present vicious and irredeemable condition the only source from which the Treasury can be supplied with the means of preserving its honor unsullied is the revenue derived from the duties on foreign imports. If these import duties should fall far short of the accruing obligations that must be met by payments in gold where and how is the deficiency to be met and provided for? It is manifest that in such case the danger of national disgrace by a failure to meet our obligations would be imminent. If the Government should be compelled to go into the market to buy up large amounts of gold, say twenty, thirty, or forty millions at one time, it requires no prophet to foresee ruin and disaster to every branch of business. This measure is therefore at the same time a blow at the prosperity of the people and the credit and stability of Government.

IT IS THE DUTY OF GOVERNMENT TO PROTECT AND NOT OPPRESS THE INDUSTRIAL CLASSES.

I desire here to state briefly an objection of a very grave character which, as I think, can be truly urged against the entire system of legislation adopted here. A Government which discriminates in favor of the wealthy, the bond-

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

The Tariff.—Mr. Marshall.

HO. OF REPS.

holders, the bankers, the manufacturers, and other capitalists, and throws its burdens chiefly upon the laboring and industrious millions, proves recreant in the discharge of its highest and holiest duties. It is a system that cannot be long persisted in without proving disastrous to the whole country. It has been conceded on all hands, I believe, that the taxes should be reduced. This could be safely done, even though you pay the bounties to our soldiers which they expect, and which should have been paid months ago. Notwithstanding our enormous indebtedness, more money has been raised by taxation than was needed by the Government. The result of the last year's bleeding of the people has been to realize over five hundred million dollars, a greater sum than was ever raised by any other Government on earth in the same time by taxation. It is very considerably above the necessities of the Government. The suffering people demand to be relieved from these unnecessary burdens. What is the result? An internal revenue bill is framed and passed, which the chairman of the finance committee tells us will reduce the revenue from that source about seventy-five millions. And yet a critical examination and test of that measure will, as I believe, demonstrate that it will not bring one particle of relief to the laboring and industrious classes. It will unquestionably put additional millions into the pockets of the manufacturers, but where it will bring relief to the masses of the people I am wholly unable to see. By the tax on cotton alone, an article consumed almost entirely by the industrial classes, you have added to the burdens of the people more than enough to overbalance the relief given in all other items of the bill.

And now, again, by this tariff bill the revenue in the opinion of the best-informed on such subjects, will be reduced at least fifty millions more, while the cost of living will be nearly doubled to the people; and contrary to every wise and just system of taxation the articles of necessary and daily consumption that enter into the very life of the people, without which they cannot live at all, are the very articles most grievously taxed. On the common article of salt (which in my judgment should not be taxed at all) you propose to levy an import tax of over two hundred per cent., thus greatly increasing the price of an article now ruinously high. You by your duties double the price of iron, without which railroads cannot be built, the mechanic can have no tool, and the farmer no instrument of husbandry, the cost of which, in fact, enters into everything that we eat, drink, or wear, and without which society could not exist. You levy a heavy tax upon raw cotton, and a heavy import duty upon cotton goods, thus doubly increasing the cost of these fabrics, an article scarcely worn at all by the wealthy, and consumed almost exclusively by the laboring and industrial classes of the country. And so I might go on with this enumeration and show that the articles of prime necessity consumed by the great mass of the people are those most heavily taxed and from which the principal revenues are derived; and, with the single exception of the income tax, that the wealthy capitalists of the country almost escape the burdens of Federal taxation.

While the question of taxing cotton was before the House, I attempted in a few remarks to show that the proposed tax would be levied almost exclusively on the labor of the country, and argued that all Governments should derive their revenue principally from the accumulated wealth of the nation and not from the humble pittance of the toiling millions. This argument was characterized by an honorable member as ad captandum, by which, I suppose, was meant that it was an unjust appeal to the prejudices of the people. But, sir, I say now deliberately, that no Government deserves to live that habitually and persistently discriminates by legislation in favor of the wealthy and against the laboring classes, and any Government that deliberately, by any system of taxation, robs the toiling masses to add to the already swollen hoards of the rich deserves the execration of mankind. It is to the industrial classes that we owe everything that makes us most proud of our country. It is upon them you must rely for your armies. It is there alone that the great fountain of virtue and patriotism is found uncontaminated and uncorrupted. It is the strong arm of the laborer that has established the greatness, the glory, and the prowess of our country. They, sir, have built your magnificent navies, your imperial cities, your towns, your churches, your railroads, your telegraphs—everything, sir, that gives to us grandeur and prosperity. They have hewn down the primeval forests and made this land an Eden for the habitation of man.

If by some sad fatality every banker, every great bond-holder, every capitalist in the land should in one moment be stricken with death, we would still remain a great and powerful nation. But, sir, if the arm of the laborer should be paralyzed, if for one single year the mechanic should cease from his labors, the farmer should abandon his fields, and the laborer refuse his accustomed toil; if the sound of the hammer, the harsh music of the saw, and the voice of the plowman should be heard no more, where, then, would be the grandeur, glory, and prowess of your country? Your ships would rot at your lifeless wharves; your cities would be inhabited by bats and owls, and desolation and death would reign supreme where now we still have life and hope and prosperity.

If by the jugglery of legislation, by oppressive taxation, you rob the laborer of the fruit of his toil, reduce him to the bare necessities of life, clothe his family in rags and wretchedness, rob him of all time for mental culture and social enjoyment, you thereby break his spirit and eventually ruin the whole country. And the fact that you will have scattered over the land a few men of immense and princely wealth will bring no relief when that hour of calamity arrives. Sir, if we wish our country to remain "great, glorious, and free," if we desire to transmit free institutions to those who shall come after us, the industrial classes must be protected from unnecessary and oppressive burdens.

"Princes and lords may flourish, or may fade,
A breath can make them as a breath has made;
But a bold peasantry, their country's pride,
When once destroyed, can never be supplied."

This may be called ad captandum, but, sir, I insist that it is founded on the truest philosophy of government and of man. The industrial classes are not only the most necessary and indispensable to society, but they are in the main the most patriotic and deserving. And, sir, I say solemnly, a curse, a thousand curses on all legislation that would place upon them any burden not absolutely necessary to the proper administration of the Government.

"The noblest men I know on earth
Are men whose hands are brown with toil,
Who, backed by no ancestral graves,
Hew down the woods and till the soil,
And win thereby a prouder fame
Than follows king or warrior's name."

"God bless the noble workingmen
Who rear the cities of the plain,
Who dig the mines and build the ships,
And drive the commerce of the main;
God bless them, for their swarthy hands
Have wrought the glory of all lands."

Doctor Wayland, in his able work on Political Economy, very forcibly portrays the effect upon a nation of unjust and oppressive taxation of the industrial classes. He says:

"Of all the destructive agencies which can be brought to bear upon production, by far the most fatal is oppression. It drinks up the spirit of a people by inflicting wrong through means of an agency which was created for the sole purpose of preventing wrong and which was intended to be the ultimate and faithful refuge of the friendless. When the antidote to evil becomes the source of evil what hope for man is left? When society itself sets the example of peculation, what shall prevent the individuals of that society from imitating the example? Hence, public injustice is always the prolific parent of private violence. The result is that capital emigrates, production ceases, and a nation either sinks down in hopeless despondence, or else the people, harassed beyond endurance and believing that their condition cannot be made worse by any change, rush into all the horrors of civil war, the social elements are dissolved, the sword enters every house, the holiest ties which bind men together are severed, and no prophet can predict at the beginning what will be the end."

One of the strangest sophisms ever offered in a deliberative body is the argument of the honorable gentleman from Vermont [Mr. Morrill] in opening the debate on this bill. Of course he is deceived by it himself, for it is not to be supposed that he would willfully mislead the House or the country. Laborers are scarce, (is the burden of the argument,) and therefore this tariff is necessary to protect laborers from competition with the cheap or pauper labor of Europe. How do you protect them? Do you propose to prohibit the importation of cheap or pauper labor from Europe, as you prohibit the importation of cheap goods? Do you prevent your manufacturers and capitalists from bringing them here by the ship-load to come in competition with our laborers now here? Do you not rather encourage their immigration, and are they not, in fact, coming to our shores at the rate of several hundred thousand souls per annum? Is not the price of labor, like everything else, governed by the supply and the demand? When the supply is small and the demand great the price must go up; and on the other hand, when the supply is greater than the demand the price must inevitably come down. You therefore protect the laborer by doubling the cost of the necessities of life, and at the same time inviting and encouraging the cheap and pauper laborers of Europe to come here and underbid and reduce the price of his labor. This is the same protection that the wolf gives to the lamb or that the robber gives to the defenseless traveler. It is impossible, sir, that any people can be long deceived by such miserable sophisms as these.

THE DEPARTMENT OF THE MAJORITY TOWARD THE MINORITY IN THE HOUSE.

And now, sir, as I may not again have the opportunity of doing so, I am impelled before concluding to enter upon the discharge of a neglected duty. This duty is to me an unpleasant one, but I feel that I would do great injustice to my constituents and to myself if I should return to them without first animadverting in a proper spirit upon the extraordinary department of the majority toward the minority in this House during the present session. No parallel to it can be found anywhere in the history of deliberative bodies; and unless the etiquette and eloquence of the fish market shall at some time find a congenial historian the records of this session for scurrility and offensive personality will, it is hoped, remain forever without a recorded parallel. This Congress met in December last, under peculiar circumstances, and had reposed in its hands the gravest responsibilities. The self-styled "Union party" had an overwhelming majority in both branches of Congress. The Democratic minority had no power, if they so desired, to stop for an hour the passage of any bill or measure. The country was rapidly recovering from the effects of our sad and ruinous war, and the people turned with eager hopes to this Congress for a speedy and complete restoration of union, peace, fraternity, and prosperity. In the consummation of this end the minority expected to cooperate freely and fully with the majority, and it did not occur to us that any issue could be raised on this question or that any party could be mad enough to place itself in the way as a barrier to the restoration of the Union.

True, before Congress met we heard the distant rumblings of faction and discord—the mad and crazy threats that the Union of our fathers should not be restored to us; and that the fond hopes of the heroic living and the martyred dead should be blasted forever. But no one then supposed that the malignant ravings of a superannuated madman would become the settled policy of a triumphant party, or that any man would be permitted, for party purposes, to tear open the closing wounds of a distracted country, and to sow broad-cast again the seeds of sectional hate and internecine war.

The minority, stripped of all power, and by the use of the previous question almost deprived of voice on this floor, have been spectators here rather than actors. Adhering to the principles of the fathers, and desiring that liberty and union under the Constitution should be preserved and perpetuated, we sincerely hoped that the majority would so deport themselves in this critical time in our country's destiny, that we might bury or forget party and party designations and all act together for the preservation and happiness of our common country. With this end in view, we hailed with sincere pleasure the annual message of the President; for although he was not the President of our choice, we saw with transport that the old landmarks of the Constitution were still kept in view, and that the pilot at the helm was attempting to steer our noble ship of state into a haven of safety and prosperity. We hoped that the principles therein enunciated would furnish a common platform upon which all could stand, and around which the people of the whole country could once more rally as a band of brethren.

Without hesitation we gave to the President a cordial and undeviating support upon his avowed policy. In doing this we were controlled solely by the dictates of an unselfish patriotism. We have sought neither executive smiles nor the loaves and fishes of office, upon which you have so long fed, and by means of which your party has become so insolent and domineering. We have avowed everywhere, publicly and privately, that we neither expected or desired any portion of the public patronage. The President does not owe his elevation to our voices, and in supporting him we are discharging a simple duty to our country. In the effort to heal the wounds of a distracted country, we neither sought nor expected any party advantage. Hoping that the great majority of the Republican party here would cordially cooperate in an effort to restore the Union we expected to stand with you upon a common platform, and without any reference to the past to labor with you for the peace and prosperity of our common country. And even when these hopes were disappointed, all must bear witness that we have borne ourselves with courtesy and kindness toward our fellow-members of all parties on this floor.

We have been met in this respect by the most offensive deportment, and by insulting language, almost daily used, that is by no means creditable to the House that has tolerated it. Some super-valiant gentlemen have seemed to court and expect the kicking their insolence so richly merits, under the vain hope of increasing their popularity at home by their self-sacrificing martyrdom. But we could not afford at this time to thus build up fading reputations, and these lofty aspirations and bright hopes must be doomed to disappointment. I freely and gladly admit that this deportment has by no means been universal, and that in the ranks of the majority are many gentlemen who would scorn to resort to such meretricious weapons of warfare, and who regard such conduct as injurious to the character of the House and disgraceful to the country. To such gentlemen, and to the masses of the party, I would be very far from applying any language I may use here in the way of condemnation.

The pretext for this offensive deportment is as extraordinary as such conduct is reprehensible. No one has dared, or will dare, to make a personal charge against any gentleman on this side of the House. No one can or will intimate that any one of us has in any respect been derelict in his duty as a member of society or as a citizen of our common country. The sole pretext for this most reprehensible deportment is that we of the minority are members of the Democratic party. And gentlemen have seemed to take it for granted that a violation of the Constitution of our country, a revolution in the Government, civil strife, disunion, and disintegration were all preferable to a restoration to power of the Democratic party, and that all these desperate measures might properly be resorted to for the purpose of keeping the immaculate radicals in power. Members who from their position should have been far above such things, have not hesitated to drag before this House and spread upon its records the miserable worn-out garbage gathered from the purlieus frequented by the dirtiest pot-house politicians. The epithets "copperheads," "traitors," "rebel sympathizers," "secessionists," and the like, have been dealt out day by day in all possible forms and with every variety of decoration. The charges on which these epithets are based were originally false and contemptible, and the dragging them here from the dirty kennels where they originated can give them neither dignity nor respectability.

In this style of oratory it is hoped that the gentlemen who for a few years past have so freely indulged in it will forever remain without a successful rival. It requires neither education, brains, nor decency, as is apparent from the fact that men who are destitute of either are generally the greatest proficient in it. A parrot could cry out "traitor" and "copperhead," and would do so with quite as much elegance and propriety as such gentlemen have done. At the very commencement of this session, in the opening speech on the President's message, (and that, too, by the leader of the House,) the most offensive charges were indulged in. And it was there urged, as a reason for depriving eleven States of representation, and for indefinitely postponing a restoration of the Union, that if southern representatives were admitted the Democratic party would, at the first election, get control of the Government. And then, says the venerable coryphæus:

"I need not depict the ruin that would follow. Assumption of the rebel debt or repudiation of the Federal debt would be sure to follow. The oppression of the freedmen, the rearmament of their State constitutions, and the reestablishment of slavery would be the inevitable result."

And then the honorable gentleman closed by hurling his choicest anathemas at the "whole coil of copperheads" who persisted in calling ours a "white man's Government." The great leader having thus gallantly led off, all the small-fry have joined in the exciting cry, and we have thus been regaled with some of the most extraordinary eloquence known to any country. One super-valiant and exceedingly muscular gentleman could not join the Union army and fight for the salvation of his country for the reason that "he had to stay at home to watch copperheads." The member from Pennsylvania [Mr. BROOMALL] commences a speech on reconstruction with the following choice sentences:

"It was to be expected that the measure now before the House would meet the opposition and denunciation of the unrepentant thirty-three of this body." "The gentlemen who have voted on all occasions upon the rebel side of all questions that have been before the country for six years could hardly be expected to change their position at this time."

And the whole speech is continued and ended in this spirit. Another distinguished gentleman of the Keystone State [Mr. KELLEY] uses language still more unjust and offensive. Another member, in language and bearing that should not be tolerated in a deliberative body, attempted to defeat an important financial bill recommended by a Republican Secretary and reported by a Republican committee of this House, and urged as the chief ground of opposition that it was supported by the Democratic side of the House. Another preëminently eloquent gentleman characterizes the Democratic party as "the left wing of Jeff. Davis's army."

But, Mr. Chairman, I cannot quote or even allude to the one thousandth part of these offensive imputations. They have been continued from day to day almost without intermission. And I am certainly willing that these gentlemen shall retain all the laurels they have thus gathered around their prurient brows. The object is evident. They hope by this system of unscrupulous defamation to build up an insuperable mountain of prejudice against all who will not bow down to the Moloch of radicalism, and thus to retain their greedy and unholy grasp upon the Treasury.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

But, sir, if they desire to fix the brand of infamy on the Democratic party they must first blot out the history and records of our country for almost seventy years. By doing this you would obliterate that which is most grand and glorious in the history of our country. This can never be done. The world will not permit the memory of the past to perish. Falsehood and calumny may for a time dim the effulgence of its glory, but as the sun, obscured for a moment by a passing cloud, comes forth more grandly brilliant and triumphant as it marches across the trackless heavens, so will it be with that grand old party whose foundation is the Constitution of our country, and whose mission is the preservation of the rights and liberties of the people.

The Democratic party is of no mushroom growth, and was engendered neither by fanaticism nor bigotry. It was born with the Constitution, and after a protracted and bitter struggle, at the very commencement of this century, it hurled the old Federal party from place and power, and, under the lead of Thomas Jefferson, assumed the reins of Government; which it retained with scarcely a real intermission for sixty years. And, sir, that sixty years of administration will proudly bear comparison with any other in the annals of the world. It came into power in the very infancy of the Republic. Under its auspices our country immediately took up its grand and marvelous march to greatness and glory; the wilderness was subdued and made to put on the garb of civilization, the grand old forest receded, beautiful villages, towns, and cities sprang up as if by magic all over the land, and peace and prosperity brought gladness and joy to every heart and hearthstone. Under its auspices every acre of that vast domain that has been added to the original limits of the Republic was acquired; and under its fostering care our pioneers took up and prosecuted their wonderful westward march, carrying the arts and sciences, civilization and progress, with them from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Lake of the Woods to the Rio Grande. Under its guidance two great foreign wars were successfully prosecuted and our flag and honor vindicated without increasing perceptibly the burdens of the people. Under its auspices our people passed the barriers of the Rocky mountains, took possession of the golden plains of California, and reduced to subjection the Pacific's dark blue waves. Under its care our flag whitened every sea, was kissed by every wind under the whole heavens, and visited every isle that gems the bosom of the ocean. And, sir, during this wonderful career the entire people, in peace and in war, were free.

prosperous, and happy; labor was lightly burdened, and the Federal tax-gatherer was unknown in the land. Liberty, regulated by law, prevailed everywhere; freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom of the press, and freedom of person remained inviolate. All these grand results were effected without having erected a single prison or arrested a single prisoner; "without having shed one drop of human blood or wrung one tear-drop from a human eye for a political offense." Political prisoners, military arrests, and state bastilles were things unknown in the land, and Government, like the dews of heaven, dispensed its blessings equally and alike to all. This is the party whose light these malignant defamers would extinguish and whose history they would blot out from the records of the country. As well try to extinguish the sun or eradicate the impress that God Himself has placed on all His works.

"THE INTENSELY LOYAL."

These slanders and epithets, so flippantly used against the Democratic party, were originally fabricated and circulated by men who wished to seize the Government that they might plunder and rob the people; men who "put on the livery of the court of heaven to serve the devil in;" in virtue's guise devour the widow's mite and orphan's bread; in holy phrase, transact villainies that common sinners durst not meddle with. Men who, in the name of Union, have labored unceasingly to bring about discord and disunion, in the name of republicanism have nearly achieved a centralized despotism; in the guise of loyalty and patriotism have struck at the vitals of the Constitution, and undermined the foundations of civil liberty; in the name of religion have sown infidelity broadcast, and in the name of charity cry unceasingly for bloodshed and massacre; in the name of honesty have robbed the people of uncounted millions, and in the name of economy have squandered the wealth of the nation; a faction, in short, conceived in sin and brought forth in iniquity, whose whole life has been a lie and a fraud, and whose advent to power was the prelude to every conceivable calamity to the country; whose honesty is speculation; whose economy consists in pocketing the money of the people; whose religion is hypocrisy; whose piety is infidelity; whose Unionism consists in stirring up strife and hatred between the sections; whose charity cries for blood and confiscation; whose love of country is a sham and a mockery; whose devotion to the interests of the soldier is shown by utterly refusing to pay him what is justly his due, and attempting to degrade him to the level of the negro; whose fidelity to the Constitution is manifested by trampling that sacred charter of our liberties under their unhallowed feet; whose political capital is falsehood and defamation, and whose sole principles are sectional domination for the sake of power and plunder. A faction, in fine, that has professed every virtue but to trample upon and outrage it, and denounced every vice while openly and unblushingly practicing it. An adulterous conjunction of the deserters of all parties, held together by the "cohesive power of public plunder;" oppressors of the poor; betrayers of the rights and interests of the soldiers, whose championships they profess to be; deliberate stirrers up of strife, hatreds, and animosities between different sections of our common country; promoters of discord and disunion; false to their own professions, false to God, and false to country, they will be driven from power with the curses of Heaven and of all good men resting upon them.

THE DEMOCRACY DURING THE WAR.

From such characters as these we constantly hear the cry of "treason" raised against all who will not quietly submit to their tyrannical domination. Sir, I do not stand here to vindicate the Democratic party. It needs no vindication. The annals of the world furnish no parallel to the self-sacrificing devotion to their Government of the Democracy during the last few years. Their country precipitated into a bloody civil conflict which they had labored unceasingly to avert; with a party in power in whose devotion to the Union and the Constitution they had no confidence; slandered, hunted down, and imprisoned without the slightest cause, you could not drive from their hearts, you could not even weaken their love of the Union and of the starry flag of their country. Shut out from the emoluments and great prizes of the conflict, they rushed to the front ranks, and wherever the cannon roared the loudest, and the conflict raged the fiercest, there they bared their breasts to the merciless iron hail that rattled around them. Their bones lie bleaching on a thousand battle-fields, while a hundred thousand green graves open their voiceless mouths toward the heavens in silent rebuke of this infamous slander. Go, vile wretch, to these battle-fields, and in the presence of these martyred heroes repeat this slander if you dare. I had many dear friends who went forth to the conflict in all the glory and pride of their manhood, never more to return to their homes, their friends, and their little ones. They sleep now the sleep that knows no waking.

"The trumpet may sound and the loud cannon rattle,
They hear not, they heed not, they are free from all pain;
They sleep their last sleep, they have fought their last battle,
No sound can awake them to glory again."

If any man, in view of these indisputable facts, shall hereafter in my presence repeat these stale and putrid slanders against the men who in 1860 rallied to the Union under the lead of Stephen A. Douglas, and in 1864 under George B. McClellan, I will not denounce him as a liar and a slanderer. I would not violate here any of the rules or proprieties of the House, and indeed would not raise such a defamer to the dignity of a personal altercation with a gentleman. I would pass him by with the same loathing with which I would pass a putrid carcass on the highway, and would leave him to the contempt and detestation of mankind.

Imported Wool.

REMARKS OF HON. W. LAWRENCE, OF OHIO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

July 23, 1866,

On the bill to provide increased revenue from imported wool, and for other purposes.

Mr. LAWRENCE, of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, the tariff bill which recently passed this House but failed as yet to pass the Senate, provided that "on woolen rags, shoddy, mungo, waste, and flocks, the duty shall be twelve cents per pound." That bill was by no means perfect, but I do not propose to discuss its merits or its imperfections now.

While I would reduce the duty on many of the five thousand articles or more covered by it, yet in one other particular at least I would increase the duty; I refer to the duty on the importation of foreign "woolen rags, shoddy, mungo, waste, and flocks." The bill introduced by my colleague, [Mr. BINGHAM,] and now before the House, makes no change in the existing tariff laws, except in relation to wool in its various forms.

I will not now discuss the policy of protection further than to say, that when a new and struggling branch of industry is essential to our national independence in war and in peace, and is adapted to our capacities and condition, it may not be wise to permit its destruction by foreign competition.

The subject of the duty on foreign wool has received much consideration by the States and the people. The General Assembly of Ohio on the 9th of March, 1866, expressed the sense of the people of that State in these words:

Joint resolution relative to increasing the duty on imported wools.

Whereas sound policy dictates that every independent Government should develop to the fullest extent all its industrial resources, and not be dependent upon any other Government, whether foreign or adjacent, for any industrial productions; and whereas under many foreign Governments populations have become so dense as to reduce the price of labor to a minimum standard, and therefore are enabled to compete successfully in the United States market on almost all descriptions of manufactured articles, and especially clothing; and whereas American manufactures of clothing materials are never offered in American markets for a sum or at a rate less than the invoice price of foreign manufactures of the same quality and the custom dues or duty added; and whereas wool-growing is an industrial pursuit requiring a large capital, great experience, skill, and care, and, as the Statutes-at-Large now stand, the American wool-growers are compelled to compete with countries where lands are of a nominal value only, and the price of labor at a reduced minimum: Therefore,

Resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That our Senators in the United States Congress are respectfully instructed, and our Representatives requested, to secure the passage of such a law as shall secure to the American wool-grower the same protection against foreign competition that is now insured to the manufacturer of either pure or mixed woolen goods.

The Ohio Wool-Growers' Association on the 16th of January last adopted these resolves:

"Resolved, That we approve the policy of terminating the action of the reciprocity treaty between the United States and the Canadas.

"Resolved, That wool-growers' interests are entitled to a degree of legislative protection equal to that accorded to manufacturing interests.

"Resolved, That the interests of the country require an extension of the culture of worsted wools."

I do not propose to discuss the subject of duties on wool, for that has been done by the gentleman from Iowa, [Mr. GRINNELL, March 6,] and by my colleagues, [Mr. ECKLEY, June 9, and Mr. DELANO, August 10.]

There is one topic connected with the interests of the whole country and not the wool-growers merely, which has not been discussed, and to that I will address a few words. I maintain that the duty on the importation of foreign "woolen rags, shoddy, mungo, waste, and flocks" is not sufficiently high. By the existing law the duty is only three cents per pound. I find these terms are not very generally understood; and I may, therefore, attempt to present some definitions of them.

On the 13th of December last, Mr. John L. Hayes, of Massachusetts, in the convention of wool-growers and manufacturers at Syracuse, said:

"In considering this matter, the producer of wool should not overlook the competition with clothing or merino wool of a material which was not known in manufactures until the present century. I refer to shoddy, or rather that variety of shoddy known in England by the name of mungo. The term 'shoddy,' strictly speaking, is the name applied to fiber made from soft rags, from flannels and blankets which were first used in manufacture of cloth. The use of this material originated at Batley, in England, in 1813. Mungo is the fiber obtained from hard rags of fine broadcloth, such as clippings from the tailors' shops. This was not introduced until later, and the manufacturers of Batley were quite incredulous of its being utilized. The Yorkshire man who first conceived the idea of using the fiber of hard rags, obstinately replied to the objection that the material could not be introduced, 'It mun go, (it must go.) It did go, and a new substance was introduced into the arts and a new word into the English language. Of shoddy and mungo sixty-five million pounds are consumed in England, more than our whole clip of wool in 1860. It is estimated that twenty-five thousand persons are employed in converting shoddy into cloth, and that the value of the product is five or six million pounds sterling. The fact, however, to which I wish to call attention is, that shoddy comes in competition with fine or cloth-wool only. It is not used in the manufacture of worsted, and does not take the place of combing wools."

"Flocks" are of two kinds, one being the shearings produced in manufacturing new cloth, while the other is the product of old rags and cloth ground up. Both varieties of flocks are mixed in or felted on cloth to give it weight and fill up, but neither of the varieties can be woven, while shoddy can be, and is woven into goods either mixed or unmixed with wool.

Waste is simply the flyings produced from the machinery in the manufacture of cloth.

HO. OF REPS.

Imported Wool—Mr. Lawrence.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Now, I insist upon an increase of duties on the importation of these articles for several reasons:

1. It is our policy to discourage their importation. They produce woolen goods which, when handsomely finished, may deceive the great mass of purchasers, and yet are notoriously inferior in value and wearing capacity.

During the recent war the soldiers had frequent occasion to complain of imposition practiced upon them by clothing made in part of these imported rags.

Let England, then, manufacture her own rags for her own people, and let us adopt such a policy as will exclude foreign rags, either in the form of rags, or when picked into fiber, or in the form of fraudulent cloth.

2. This foreign trash when imported destroys the business of the wool-grower here. It must be remembered that in the manufacture of cloth a pound of shoddy is more productive than double its weight in wool. Wool loses by washing and scouring, shoddy loses nothing.

Every pound of shoddy imported drives out of the market more than two pounds of wool, perhaps three pounds. Yet foreign shoddy can be imported at a cost in New York of not over ten cents per pound.

If it be wise to levy duties on foreign wool, it is wiser still to levy them on this foreign fraud. I submit to the House a statistical table showing the extent of the foreign trade in this article. It is thus:

Summary statement of quantity and value of wool and shoddy for four years ending June 30, 1865, imported into the United States.

	Pounds.	Value.	Average price pr. lb.
1862.....	41,598,946	$6,480,306	15.4 cents.
1863.....	71,917,754	11,772,064	16.3 cents.
1864.....	87,193,462	14,595,140	16.7 cents.
1865.....	40,372,075	6,201,108	15.3 cents.

	Wool on skin.	Flocks or shoddy, lbs.	Total wool and shoddy.
1862.....	-	6,291,077	$6,922,682
1863.....	-	7,867,601	12,353,208
1864.....	$148,487	8,133,391	15,365,141
1865.....	108,593	4,863,064	6,720,096

	Pounds.
Wool dutiable in four years.....	251,442,237
Shoddy dutiable in four years.....	27,155,133
Canadian, under reciprocity treaty.....	10,585,559
Total.....	289,182,929

	Value.
Dutiable wool, as above.....	$39,048,618
Shoddy.....	2,055,519
Wool on skin.....	257,080
Canadian wool, under reciprocity treaty....	4,207,832
Total.....	$45,569,049

It should be remembered that we have American shoddy, and if it be desirable at all let us patronize the home article. From woollens and cloths imported and produced in this country, it would seem the supply of shoddy would be more than sufficient to answer every demand required by the real interests of the people.

I have already remarked that I did not propose to discuss in detail the policy of a tariff. That has been sufficiently done. But for the purpose of illustrating this whole subject as affecting the producers, manufacturers, and consumers of wool and woolen goods, I present in this connection statistical tables, prepared with great care, and which I trust will be of value in the consideration of this and kindred subjects. They are as follows:

STATEMENT OF EXPORTS OF WOOL AND WOOLENS. Product of United States.

	Wool, lbs.	Woolen Goods.
1861.....	-	$237,846
1862.....	1,153,388	296,225
1863.....	355,722	178,434
1864.....	155,482	66,358
1865.....	-	$81,943

	Wool, lbs.	Woolen Goods.
1861.....	199,226	$56,432
1862.....	332,953	76,708
1863.....	414,427	109,403
1864.....	223,475	134,634
1865.....	-	120,190

The exports, as heretofore, are of trifling amount. The woolen goods of American manufacture were scarcely deemed worthy of special enumeration until 1864.

Statement of Unmanufactured Wool imported in the year ending June 30, 1862.

Countries.	Wool, pounds.	Value.	Shoddy or flocks, pounds.	Value.
Russia and dependencies.....	292,089	$36,859	-	-
Hamburg and Bremen.....	203,799	35,037	1,875,930	$107,300
Holland and Dutch colonial possessions.....	24,730	3,255	51,154	3,044
Belgium.....	1,023,439	157,893	643,904	38,537
England, Scotland, and Ireland.....	16,006,963	2,699,049	3,322,658	271,725
Canada and British North American possessions.....	100,072	11,149	1,135	110
British West Indies and South American possessions.....	44,651	5,007	1,980	125
British possessions in Africa and Mediterranean.....	3,920,257	665,480	-	-
British East Indies and Australia.....	783,670	112,118	-	-
France.....	4,433,429	813,373	391,728	21,651
Spain and Canary Islands.....	425,803	63,525	-	-
Spanish West Indies, Cuba, and Porto Rico.....	94,808	9,680	-	-
Portugal and Portuguese colonies.....	129,275	18,106	-	-
Italy.....	429,793	59,433	2,588	84
Austria.....	112,610	16,983	-	-
Turkey in Europe, Asia, and Egypt.....	3,710,506	392,616	-	-
Mexico.....	31,209	3,560	-	-
New Granada and Venezuela.....	207,417	22,193	-	-
Brazil.....	618,481	88,574	-	-
Uruguay.....	14,061	1,386	-	-
Buenos Ayres.....	5,786,368	838,850	-	-
Chili.....	2,793,501	289,895	-	-
China and Japan.....	7,714	857	-	-
Sandwich and Pacific Islands.....	10,926	1,112	-	-
Liberia and West Africa.....	438,170	78,777	-	-
Canada under reciprocity.....	1,916,785	569,839	-	-
Total.....	43,571,026	$6,994,606	6,201,077	$442,376

Statement of Woollens imported in the year ending June 30, 1862.

Woolen cloths.....	4,432,392	pounds valued at.....	$5,441,719
Blankets.....	6,930,296	" " " ".....	1,945,707
Shawls.....	49,882	" " " ".....	105,925
Woolen and worsted yarns.....	479,558	" " " ".....	372,533
Delaines and dress goods.....	23,133	" " " ".....	17,229
Carpets.....	559,928	square yds. " ".....	466,596
Flannels.....	92,642	yards " ".....	30,798
Felt and lasting.....	-	-	68,485
All manufactures not specified.....	-	-	6,435,412
Total.....	11,915,311	-	$14,884,394
square yards.....	539,928	-	-
yards.....	92,642	-	-
cost.....	$14,884,394	-	-

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Imported Wool—Mr. Lawrence.

HO. OF REPS.

Statement of Wool imported during the year ending June 30, 1863.

Countries.	Wool, pounds.	Value.	Shoddy, pounds.	Value.
Russia and dependencies.....	1,758,367	$275,651	68,412	$5,470
Hamburg and Bremen.....	356,461	85,690	2,179,508	187,066
Holland and Dutch colonial possessions.....	88,619	11,593	26,186	1,627
Belgium.....	2,988,889	493,312	691,326	45,213
England, Scotland, and Ireland.....	17,619,123	3,384,866	3,652,569	325,382
Gibraltar and Malta.....	598,241	67,341	-	-
Canada and British North America.....	52,872	9,243	15,789	1,125
British West Indies, Central and South America.....	8,610	905	-	-
British possessions in Africa.....	6,711,975	1,179,707	-	-
British East Indies and Australia.....	118,234	16,753	-	-
France.....	9,643,764	1,632,843	1,195,078	62,977
Spain and Canary Islands.....	981,468	152,730	6,055	292
Spanish West Indies, Cuba, &c.....	72,409	11,577	-	-
Portugal and colonies.....	167,903	27,492	-	-
Italy.....	328,284	51,038	13,518	495
Turkey in Europe, and Asia.....	4,213,473	618,776	-	-
Mexico.....	1,226,820	155,450	-	-
South America.....	22,481,521	3,168,434	19,160	1,587
China and Japan.....	19,750	2,287	-	-
Sandwich Islands and whale fisheries.....	38,906	4,954	-	-
Posts in West Africa.....	2,442,065	421,522	-	-
	71,917,754	$11,772,064	7,867,801	$581,234
Reciprocity treaty with Canada.....	1,980,053	$781,867	-	-

Statement of Woolens imported in the year ending June 30, 1863.

Woolen cloths and shawls.....	4,363,993	pounds.....	$5,147,404
Blankets.....	1,798,293	pounds.....	1,297,864
Yarn.....	357,967	pounds.....	383,011
	6,520,253	pounds
Delaines.....	7,672,987	yards.....	1,744,639
Carpets.....	1,092,498	yards.....	1,016,562
Manufactures not specified.....			10,822,145
			$20,411,625
Total pounds.....	6,520,253
“ yards.....	8,765,485
“ value.....	$20,412,625

Statement of unmanufactured Wool and Shoddy imported in the year ending June 30, 1864.

Countries.	Unmanufac- tured wool, pounds.	Value.	Wool on skin.	Shoddy or flock, pounds.	Value.
Russia and dependencies.....	4,645,303	$801,291	-	-	-
Denmark, Norway, and Swedish West Indies.....	44	3	$16	-	-
Hamburg and Bremen.....	890,142	106,723	943	1,850,283	$130,852
Holland colonial possessions.....	16,006	1,615	46	7,989	579
Belgium.....	1,511,347	343,941	-	697,012	51,273
England, Scotland, and Ireland.....	13,099,501	2,715,843	-	4,944,133	379,461
Gibraltar, Malta, and Greece.....	244,678	38,236	-	-	-
Canada and British North American Provinces.....	12,936	2,579	-	44,005	3,654
British West Indies and Central and South America.....	1,101	166	760	-	-
British possessions in Africa.....	13,717,900	2,415,145	100,334	-	-
British Australia and East Indies.....	864,548	177,209	-	-	-
France.....	10,945,299	1,771,423	-	541,200	53,920
Spain and Canary Islands.....	179,722	28,734	-	-	-
Spanish West Indies, Cuba, and Porto Rico.....	5,529	1,255	-	-	-
Portugal and colonies.....	230,914	38,407	-	-	-
Italy.....	1,261,078	65,400	-	48,481	1,756
Turkey in Europe, Asia, and Egypt.....	5,534,693	805,115	-	-	-
Mexico.....	702,676	96,111	392	-	-
Central America.....	114	21	24	-	-
South America.....	31,134,935	4,729,014	32,995	288	19
China and Japan.....	63,069	7,666	-	-	-
Sandwich Islands and whale fisheries.....	169,838	30,272	-	-	-
Other Pacific ports.....	8,522	1,246	1,870	-	-
Other ports in Africa.....	2,455,565	417,735	11,107	-	-
Under reciprocity treaty.....	3,202,642	1,328,851	-	-	-
Total.....	90,396,104	$15,973,991	$148,487	8,133,391	$621,514

HO. OF REPS.

Imported Wool—Mr. Lawrence.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Statement of manufactures of woollens imported in the year ending June 30, 1864.

Woolen cloths and shawls.....	9,855,327 lbs.	$10,698,035
Blankets.....	2,576,269 lbs.	749,793
Wool and worsted yarns.....	419,928 lbs.	434,549
Delaines and dress goods.....	39,777,952 yards.	10,069,768
Flannels.....	1,208,606 yards.	457,410
Carpets.....	1,508,370 yards.	1,658,380
Felt and lastings.....	-	102,910
Manufactures not specified.....	-	7,963,491
Total woollens.....	32,139,336
Wool on skin.....	-	148,487
Wool, dutiable.....	-	14,595,140
Wool, free under reciprocity.....	-	1,378,851
Shoddy.....	-	621,514

Total wool and woollens.....$48,883,328

Statement of wool imported during the year ending June 30, 1865.

	Pounds.	Value.
Wool at or under 12 cents.....	17,297,247	$2,012,175
Wool at 12 to 24 cents.....	22,981,168	4,144,262
Wool at 24 to 32 cents.....	31,044	9,318
Wool over 32 cents.....	15,092	8,766
Wool, scoured.....	47,524	26,587
Wool on the skin.....	40,372,075	6,201,108
Shoddy, &c.....	4,863,064	108,598
		410,395
	45,235,139	$6,720,096

Statement exhibiting the total quantities and values of manufactures of wool imported into the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1865.

Woolen cloths, wholly or in part of wool, lbs.....	4,573,110	$5,223,524
Shawls, wholly or in part of wool, lbs.....	28,596	34,295
Blankets, wholly or in part of wool, lbs.....	3,182,650	838,741
Flannels, not colored, value thirty cents or less per square yard, lbs.....	10,630	12,956
Flannels, colored and white, value over thirty cents per square yard, lbs.....	39,773	52,219
Flannels, composed in part of silk.....	-	18,154
Carpets—Wilton, Saxony, Aubusson, velvet, and all Jacquard woven, square yards.....	86,982	129,613
Brussels or tapestry, printed on the warp, square yards.....	235,739	217,375
Treble ingrain, three-ply, and worsted chain Venetian, sq. yards.....	10,055	7,520
Two-ply, ingrain and yarn Venetian, square yards.....	157	86
Druggists, brookings, and felt carpets, square yards.....	40,740	18,170
Carpets of wool, flax, or whatever material, N. O. P., square yards.....	19,611	28,549
Carpets, not specified.....	-	70,346
Yarns of wool or worsted, lbs.....	363,363	393,130
Balmorals and skirting of wool, worsted, or other material, lbs.....	250,823	192,121
Dress goods of wool or worsted, wholly or in part gray or uncolored, yards.....	436,885	97,414

Dress goods of wool or worsted, wholly or in part printed or colored, yards.....	27,794,892	$7,719,725
Hosiery, shirts, and other knit goods of wool or mixed, lbs.....	152,031	309,968
Bunting, and all other manufactures of worsted, or of which worsted shall be a material, N. O. P.....	-	4,876,590
Felting and endless belts for paper printing machines, lbs.....	83,267	87,213
Hats of wool.....	-	615
(Mats, screens, rugs, &c., as carpets of like material.)	-	-
All other mats of wool and other material, lbs.....	12,726	19,239

Statement exhibiting the quantities and values of wool and manufactures of wool, of foreign growth, and produce, exported from the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1865.

Wool, unmanufactured, lbs.....	658,582	$288,501
Cloths.....	-	41,146
Blankets, bales.....	486	21,953
Carpets, yards.....	1,114	1,658
Worsteds and mixed piece goods, yds.....	151,529	72,166
Shawls, yards.....	-	42,449
Wool manufactures not specified.....	-	252,188
Flannels, yards.....	76	64

Statement exhibiting the quantities and values of wool and manufactures of wool, the growth and produce of the United States, exported to foreign countries during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1865.

Wool, unmanufactured, lbs.....	466,182	$254,721
Wool, manufactures.....	-	132,544

Statement exhibiting the Quantity and Value of unmanufactured Wool and Woolen Flocks, Waste, or Shoddy imported into the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1865, and countries from whence imported.

Countries.	Wool on the skin and wool skins.	Wool, value 12 cents per pound or less.	Wool, over 12 and not over 24 cents per pound.	Wool, value over 24 and not over 32 cents per pound.	Wool, value over 32 cents per pound.	Wool scoured, value over 32 cents per pound.	Woolen flocks, waste, or shoddy.
		Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.	Pounds.
Russia on the Baltic and North seas.....	-	212,770	$27,685	258,836	$54,392	-	-
Russia on the Black sea.....	-	1,086,432	111,166	1,190,441	228,315	-	-
Danish West Indies.....	$79	4,700	538	682	144	-	-
Hamburg.....	-	-	-	104,495	13,383	-	1,286,731
Bremen.....	1,656	-	-	150	28	-	175,589
Holland.....	-	-	-	-	-	-	6,254
Dutch West Indies.....	140	9,617	1,060	2,430	367	-	851
Belgium.....	-	6,413	851	31,113	6,370	6,704	317,718
England.....	2,408	676,668	74,052	1,298,714	260,495	$5,212	26,115
Gibraltar.....	-	-	-	71,573	12,638	1,732	2,866,969
Canada.....	-	-	-	-	-	941	256,455
British American possessions on the Pacific.....	-	-	-	-	20	-	1,900
British West Indies.....	851	6,302	646	-	-	-	-
British possessions in Africa.....	55,297	1,027	101	55,388	9,580	-	-
British East Indies.....	-	32,290	3,807	8,279,973	1,529,989	505	-
Australia.....	3,802	138,860	16,611	605,273	127,856	6,059	-
France, Atlantic.....	-	-	-	408,592	90,573	2,293	-
France, Mediterranean.....	-	111,305	15,851	737,290	126,698	92	179,271
Spain.....	-	-	-	234,985	38,506	122	28,632
Portugal.....	-	2,009	131	-	-	-	-
Cape de Verde Islands.....	-	1,874	211	-	-	-	-
Italy.....	-	-	-	63,107	13,892	-	-
Austria.....	-	-	-	32,946	7,527	-	-
Greece.....	-	234,852	26,792	-	-	-	-
Turkey in Europe.....	-	185,007	10,758	-	-	-	-
Turkey in Asia.....	-	353,240	41,589	102,300	20,072	-	-
Other ports in Africa.....	-	645,719	93,198	895,056	154,878	-	-
Hayti.....	20	-	-	-	-	-	-
Mexico.....	1,468	267,969	29,371	81,481	14,851	-	-
Central America.....	9	-	-	-	-	-	-
New Granada.....	-	47,132	4,353	240,020	4,394	-	-
Brazil.....	-	261,982	29,380	615,447	90,644	-	-
Cisplatine Republic.....	2,567	188,364	19,022	975,896	177,979	-	-
Argentine Republic.....	39,470	9,859,618	1,199,056	6,244,271	1,024,697	-	-
Chili.....	-	3,019,861	305,581	342,612	64,614	-	-
Sandwich Islands.....	-	3,236	365	28,497	4,783	-	-
China.....	-	-	-	306	125	-	-
Unenumerated countries.....	826	-	-	294,694	66,672	-	-
Total.....	$108,593	17,297,247	$2,012,175	22,981,168	$4,144,262	31,044	$9,318
Under reciprocity treaty.....	-	3,486,079	$1,527,275	-	-	-	-

Summary statement of woollens imported for four years ending June 30, 1865.

	1862.	1863.
Woolen cloths and shawls.....	$5,547,044	$5,147,404
Blankets.....	1,945,707	1,297,864
Woolen and worsted yarns.....	372,523	383,011
Delaines and dress goods.....	17,229	1,744,639
Carpets.....	466,596	1,016,562
Flannels.....	30,798	-
Felt and lasting.....	68,485	-
All others.....	6,435,412	10,822,145
	$14,884,394	$20,411,625

	1864.	1865.
Woolen cloths and shawls.....	$10,698,035	$5,257,819
Blankets.....	749,793	838,741
Woolen and worsted yarns.....	434,549	393,130
Delaines and dress goods.....	10,069,768	7,817,139
Carpets.....	1,658,380	471,659
Flannels.....	457,410	83,329
Felt and lasting.....	102,910	87,213
All others.....	7,963,491	5,398,593
	$32,139,336	$20,347,563
Foreign woollens imported.....	$14,884,394	20,411,625
Amount carried forward.....	$35,296,019

Amount brought forward.....	$35,296,019
1864.....	32,139,336
1865.....	20,347,563
Grand total.....	$87,782,918

Summary of wool under reciprocity treaty in four years ending June 30, 1865, imported from Canada.

	Pounds.	Value.	Cents
1862.....	1,916,785	$569,839	29.7
1863.....	1,980,053	781,867	39.5
1864.....	3,202,642	1,328,851	41.4
1865.....	3,486,079	1,527,375	43.8
	10,585,559	$4,207,832	154.4

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Rights of Citizens—Mr. Shellabarger.

HO. OF REPS.

DATA FOR PROPOSED DUTIES ON WOOLENS, Founded on the following proposition agreed upon by the executive committee of wool-growers and manufacturers, 1860.

2. All manufactures composed wholly or in part of wool or worsted shall be subjected to a duty which shall be equal to twenty-five per cent. net; that is to say, twenty-five per cent. after reimbursing the amount paid on account of duties on wool, dye-stuffs, and other imported materials used in such manufactures, and also the amount paid for the internal revenue tax imposed on manufactures, and upon the supplies and material used therefor.

Table No. 1.

Four pounds mestiza wool to one pound finished cloth.
Cassimeres manufactured, 77,320 yards; wool consumed per yard, 32.4 ounces; weight per yard, 8.2
ounces.
Doeskins manufactured, 79,606½ yards; wool consumed per yard, 31.1 ounces; weight per yard, 8.2
ounces.

Tariff of 1861:
Duty on wool, 3 cents by 4, equal to 12 cents specific duty per pound of cloth; ad valorem duty 25 per cent.

Tariff of 1864:
Duty on wool, 6 cents by 4, equal to 24 cents specific duty; ad valorem duty 40 to 45 per cent.

Proposed tariff:
Duty on wool 10 cents specific, 10 per cent. ad valorem; average price mestiza wool, 15 cents per pound;
ad valorem duty on wool per pound, 1½ cents, whole duty 1½ cents. Proposed specific duty on cloth, per pound, 55 cents; proposed ad valorem, 35 per cent.

Basis of proposed specific duty:
Wool duty paid on one pound of cloth is 46 cents.
1½ by 4, equal to..... 2.5 "

Duty on drugs, &c., per pound of cloth..... 2.5 "
Total duty on raw material..... 48.5 "
Charges on above duty:
Interest six months, at 7 per cent. 3.5 per ct.
Commissions and guarantees..... 6.5 "

Total charges.....10 " 4.85 "

Total compensatory duty required..... 53.35 "

Scale of minimums on flannels, blankets, &c.:
Below 40 cents..... 25 cents.
From 40 to 60 cents..... 35 "
From 60 to 80 cents..... 45 "
Above 80 cents..... 55 "
Canada wool, average cost..... 45 "
Duty 12 cents specific, and 10 per cent. ad valorem..... 16.5 "

Twelve pounds wool to one pound worsted;
duty therefor..... 33 "
Charges, 10 per cent..... 3.3 "

Reimbursing duties required..... 36.6 "

Table No. 2.

Basis of proposed ad valorem duty, 35 per cent.; 25 per cent. net duty required for protection of manufacturer, 10 per cent. duty required for 5 per cent.
internal revenue tax.

Data for determining above:
Average weight of ten samples of foreign cassimeres, 9.33 ounces.
Average cost abroad..... 93.70 cents.
Custom duties..... 51.47 "
To cost abroad..... 93.70 " Add 60 per cent., cost importation and duties..... 74.40 "

Home value.....168.10

Five per cent. on above for internal revenue tax..... 8.40 "
Ten per cent. on foreign cost..... 9.30 "
Increase of duties under proposed tariff. 12.23 "
Add present home value.....168.10 "

Home value under proposed tariff.....183.33 "

Five per cent. on above for internal revenue tax..... 9.01 "
Ten per cent. on foreign cost..... 9.30 "
Difference......29 "

Basis of specific duty on dress goods and Italian cloths:

Wool put 16 yards, 22 inches wide, or 10 square yards delaines, weighs 1 lb.

Wool duty 53 cents, requires 5.3 cents per square yard; proposed specific duty 6 cents.

Wool put 63-10 yards, 32 inches wide, or 5.6 yards
Italian cloths, weighs 1 lb.

Wool duty 53 cents, requires 9.64 cents per square yard, proposed specific duty 8 cents.

Distribution of duty on cloth of suit of clothes:
Quantity of goods, 7½ yards.

Average weight cassimeres, 69.98 ounces.
Average cost abroad, $7 02.75.

	Present tariff.	Proposed tariff.
Duty on wool.....	$1 04.92	$2 01.15
Duty on dye-stuffs.....	10.95	10.95
Charges on duties.....	11.59	21.21
Internal revenue tax at six per cent.....	75.90	81.40
Manufacturer's duty.....	1 82.66	1 63.03
Total.....	$3 86.02	$4 77.75

Total amount increase, 97.73 cents.
Percentage increase on foreign cost of wool, 36.66
per cent.
Percentage increase on foreign manufacture, 13.05
per cent.
Proportion of manufacturer's duty on suit of clothes, average cost $50, 3.26 per cent.

Rights of Citizens.

SPEECH OF HON. S. SHELLABARGER,
OF OHIO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
July 25, 1866,

On the bill to declare and protect all the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States in the several States.

Mr. SHELLABARGER. Mr. Speaker, I regret that the Judiciary Committee, having charge of this bill, has not been called since the committee agreed to report in favor of this measure until now, when it is too late to fully discuss this important measure and to pass it through both Houses of Congress. It will, I I doubt not, be taken up and passed at our next session. I here, and now, submit some remarks upon the right of Congress to pass this bill into a law. I desire, if I can, to attract to its consideration the attention of my fellow-members of this House.

The design of this bill is to enforce that demand of the Constitution which declares "the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens" [of the United States] "in the several States." The bill occupies this single ground, and aims at nothing beyond. Its scope is distinct from that of the "civil rights bill." That insures equality in certain civil rights. This protects all the fundamental rights of the citizen of one State who seeks to enjoy them in another State.
The "civil rights bill," therefore, has, in no sense, rendered this law unnecessary.

To accurately apprehend what remedies may be provided by Congress for enforcing this clause of the Constitution some well-settled principles in regard to it ought to be carefully noted. One of these is thus stated by Judge Story. He says:

"The intention of this clause was to confer on them," [the citizens of each State,] "if one may so say, a general citizenship."—2 Story's Commentaries, section 1806.

This clause, therefore, enacts that all "the privileges and immunities" of a "general" or "national" citizenship shall be enjoyed in every State by the citizens of the United States.
Again, it was the design of this clause, as is expressed by the court of appeals of New York, in Lemmon vs. The People, (6 Smith's Reports, 626, 627,) to secure to the citizens of every State within every other State the "privileges and immunities (whatever they might be) according in each to its own citizens." Judge Story (2 Commentaries, section 1806) expresses this design in these words:

"The intention of this clause was to confer on them, if one may so say, a general citizenship, and to communicate all the privileges and immunities which citizens of the same State would be entitled to under like circumstances."

Chancellor Kent (2 Commentaries, page 71,) says the same thing in these words:

"If they [that is native or naturalized citizens of the United States] remove from one State to another they are entitled to the privileges that persons of the same description are entitled to in the State to which the removal is made, and to none other."

The same thing is decided in *Livingston vs.
Van Ingen*, (9 John. R., 507) and in numerous other cases.

The next proposition touching this clause, which is thoroughly established, is this: that these words, "privileges and immunities," of this general or national citizenship, include and embrace at least the following, to wit: "the rights of protection of life and liberty, and to acquire and enjoy property, and to pay no higher impositions than other citizens, and to pass through or to reside in the State at pleasure; and to enjoy the elective franchise according to the regulations of the law of the State." This I copy from Chancellor Kent's enumeration. (2 Kent, s. p. 710.) He takes this enumeration of rights from the opinion of Judge Washington, in the case of *Corfield vs.

Coryell*, (4 Washington's Circuit Court Reports, 371,) in which case Chancellor Kent says:

"It was decided that the privileges and immunities conceded by the Constitution of the United States to citizens in the several States, were to be confined to those which were fundamental, and which belonged of right to the citizens of all free Governments. Such are the rights of protection of life, liberty, and to acquire and enjoy property, and to pay no higher impositions than other citizens, and to pass through or reside in the State at pleasure, and to enjoy the elective franchise according to the regulation of the law of the State."

To this enumeration of fundamental rights
Story adds what I have already quoted, to wit:
"all such as citizens of the same State would be entitled to under like circumstances."

Whatever confusion there may be (and there is some) as to what those local, and not fundamental, privileges are which a State may give to its own permanent inhabitants and deny to sojourners, (see 2 Kent's Commentaries, page 72,) it is universally agreed that these, which Kent enumerates as "fundamental," cannot be taken away from any citizen of the United States by the laws of any State, neither from its own citizens nor from those coming in from another State. We have now seen what the fundamental rights are which every citizen of the United States holds as the gift of his national Government, and which neither any individual nor any State can rightfully deprive him of.

Our next and principal proposition is that,
as these rights grow out of and belong to national citizenship and not out of State citizenship, and as the Constitution expressly enjoins that every citizen of the United States "shall be entitled" to them "in the several States," therefore it is within the power and duty of the United States to secure by appropriate legislation these fundamental rights. And, in entering upon the statement of this point, it is proper that I should here state that, in order to avoid every doubtful exercise of power by the United States, and not to assume or trench upon the powers of the States, this bill has been carefully limited in the following particulars and ways:

1. It protects no one except such as seek to or are attempting to go either temporarily or for abode from their own State into some other.
It does not attempt to enforce the enjoyment of the rights of a citizen within his own State, against the wrongs of his fellow-citizens of his own State after the injured party has become or when he is a citizen of the State where the injury is done. This is because the bill is confined to the enforcement of this single clause of the Constitution. Without determining what further powers the Government may have in enforcing rights of "national citizenship" in favor of all its citizens, without regard to the fact of their passing from one State into another, it was thought best to make this act single and compact in its scope and structure, and to that end to confine its provisions to the single object of seeing that this clause of the Constitution was executed throughout the Republic.
In Abbott vs. Bailey (6 Pick. R. 92) it is decided "that the privileges and immunities of 'the citizens of each State,' in every other State can, by virtue of this clause, only be applied in case of a removal from one State into another."
To conform the bill to this view of this constitutional provision, it was deemed best to limit it in accordance with that decision, and to make it secure to all the people those great international rights which are embraced in unrestrained and secure inter-State commerce, intercourse, travel, sojourn, and acquisition of abode.

2. As a consequence resulting from the last stated legal idea, the criminal provisions of this bill are so framed and drawn that no offense is created by it at all, unless it shall be proved (in addition to the proof of the other facts required by the common law, or by the other provisions and terms of this act, to be established to make out the offense charged) that the act was done with the criminal intent of preventing the injured party from enjoying the invaded right in the State where he is injured. In other words, the act creates no offense of which the United States can take jurisdiction, unless the intent is proved, to prevent an American citizen from sojourning or staying or taking up abode or from doing business and the like in that State, or, what is the same thing, in that part of it where his interests and choice lead him to attempt the exercise of these privileges. The act, therefore, does not attempt to punish an ordinary wrong, such as murder, assaults, &c., of which the States have jurisdiction. It only attempts to see to it that the citizens of the United States shall have what it is solemnly and expressly declared by their national Constitution they shall be "entitled to in the several States."

With these preliminary remarks, I now wish to condense into the shortest possible space a statement of the authority for saying that Congress can pass a law enforcing this right. The first authority I introduce in support of the bill is the fact that Congress has already exercised its legislative power in enforcing this identical clause of the Constitution. This was done in a way which asserts the power of Congress to enforce the rights of citizens, as secured by this clause, more emphatically, if possible, than this bill does, because it was done in the repeal or abrogation of a clause of a State constitution which seemed to invade the privileges guaranteed by this clause of the Constitution of the United States.

By a joint resolution of March 2, 1821, (see 6 United States Statutes, 645,) it was declared that the State of Missouri should be admitted into the Union—

"Upon the fundamental condition that the fourth clause of the twenty-sixth section of the third article of her constitution 'shall never be construed to authorize the passage of any law, and no law shall be passed in conformity thereto, by which any citizen of either of the States of the Union shall be excluded from the enjoyment of any of the privileges or immunities to which such citizen is entitled under the Constitution of the United States.'"

These are the words of this act, and the Legislature was required to assent to it. Now, it will be seen that Congress solemnly enacted for the entire future of the State of Missouri that "no law shall be passed" by which any citizen of either of the States of the Union should be excluded from any rights of citizens of the United States as secured by the Constitution. And this statute is yet in force. By this memorable act of Congress, passed in that first great contest of the free spirit of our Constitution with the despotism of slavery, it was settled, and has ever since by its continuance in force stood confessed that it is the duty of Congress to secure, by appropriate legislation, to the citizens of each State the privileges of the American citizen in the several States.

I next refer to legislation by Congress enforcing other provisions of the Constitution, the validity of which legislation has been established by decisions of the courts, by the settled practices of our Government, and by the common consent and acquiescence of the people; but which depends for its validity upon identically the same principle as the bill before the House depends upon. The bill before the House rests for its constitutionality upon two propositions of constitutional law, both of which are now so firmly established as to have become postulates in discussions determining upon the validity of an act of Congress. One of these the Supreme Court of the United States expresses in the case of Jones vs. Van Zant, (5 Howard, 229, 230,) in these words. The duty is upon the Government—

"Of enforcing, by appropriate legislation, every constitutional provision, whether in favor of itself or others. This grows out of the position and nature of such a Government; and is as imperative in cases not enumerated specially, in respect to such legislation, as in others."

The other postulate is thus expressed in United States vs. Fisher, (2 Cranch, 358:)

"The power to make all laws necessary and proper to carry into execution the powers granted confers on Congress a choice of means and does not confine it to what is indispensably necessary."

If these two principles do not embrace in them the power and duty of "enforcing, by appropriate legislation," that supremely important and imperative provision of the Constitution which declares, the citizens of the United States "shall be entitled to all the privileges of such citizens in the several States," then we have no power to pass this, or, indeed, any other law enforcing any provisions of the Constitution in any "case not enumerated specially in respect to such legislation."

Let us now look at some of the laws which this Government has kept in force during all its existence, and which rest for their validity upon no express grant of power to Congress to enact the law, but upon the—"Duty of Congress, by the aid of appropriate legislation, to enforce every constitutional provision."

A duty which—

"Is as imperative in cases not enumerated specially in respect to such legislation as in others."

Justice Story declares that—

"The various instances in which Congress, in the progress of the Government, have made use of incidental and implied means to execute its powers it is almost impracticable to enumerate, if it were not useless. They are almost infinitely varied in their ramifications and details."—2 Story's Constitution, 145.

Indeed, a glance at the subject will show that those acts of Congress which rest alone for their validity upon the implied powers of the Government compose almost, if not quite, a majority of all the acts of Congress ever passed. There is no express power given in the Constitution to erect forts or magazines or light-houses or piers or buoys or public buildings or to make surveys of the coast. (2 Story, 145.)

There is no power expressly given to Congress to acquire territory or to make a government for or exercise jurisdiction over any Territory, (2 Story, 144;) nor to bring any suit, (Id.;) nor to make any contract, (Id.;) nor to create any corporation, (4 Wheaton, 409;) nor to make any military road, work, or defense whatever; nor any custom-house; nor to remove an obstruction from or to improve any harbor or navigable river; nor to lay embargoes, (2 Story, 170, and 5 McLean, 426;) nor to establish a military or naval academy; nor to secure exemption to nor protection of the officers of the United States, (2 Story, section 1246;) nor to protect any property of the United States; nor to punish crimes by citizens committed on ships-of-war; nor to punish robberies or other crimes against the United States mails; nor even to provide for carrying the mails. (3 McLean, 393.) You have no express power by the Constitution to protect the sessions of this body, nor to punish any breach of its privileges.

Such a mere glance at the subject shows how vast, both in number and importance, are the subjects as to which this Government's powers exist only by implication. The very first act of Congress ever passed was dated 1st June, 1789, and related to the vital matter of providing for the administration of oaths of public officers; and its constitutionality was denied, (2 Story, 166,) because there was no express power to enact it. What is said with so much emphasis by Justice Story (Constitution, section 1255) was very early in our history found to be true, to wit, that the provision of the Constitution enabling Congress "to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution" the provisions of the Constitution, was necessary "To remove all possible doubt respecting the right to legislate on that vast mass of incidental powers which must be involved in the Constitution if that instrument be not a splendid pageant or a delusive phantom of sovereignty."

There is besides the power of Congress arising out of that clause just cited, another sort of implied power which has been called with great propriety a resulting power arising from the aggregate powers of the General Government."—2 Story's Constitution, section 1255.

This general statement about the implied powers of the Government is made to show how utterly idle it is to say that it is unconstitutional to pass a law enforcing the express provision of the Constitution that the citizens "shall be entitled" to their rights in all the States merely because the Constitution does not say in express words that Congress may pass a law on that subject. What I have said shows that probably half the laws ever passed by Congress would be rendered unconstitutional by such a rule; and it also shows that this bill rests upon the same authority which supports a vast mass of the legislation of the United States.

But, Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of showing how impregnable are the foundations of this bill, in the authorities of the Constitution, and to make the assurance of its validity doubly sure, I wish now to refer to cases where the Congress has exercised the power to enforce the provisions of the Constitution by criminal enactments, which, in principle, are not distinguishable from this bill. I will take only a few.

There is no power given to Congress to pass a law punishing any offense by one not in the service of the United States for a crime committed upon a ship-of-war. (2 Story, sec. 1256.) And yet the right to pass such a law is as well established as the Government itself. (3 Wheaton, 388; 7 Cranch, 156; 2 Peters, 439.) Or take the case of the act of July 7, 1836, section twelve, (Brightly, 203,) imprisoning in penitentiary for not over ten years every person employed on any steamboat, by whose misconduct any person's life is destroyed, and this, too, although the act may be done upon any water within the criminal jurisdiction of the States. There is nowhere any express power to pass such a law. And yet the courts have held invariably what Judge McLean says in United States vs. Warner, (4 McLean, 469,) that "this is a subject clearly within the power of Congress." (See 5 McLean, 242; Wharton on Homicide, 507.) The authority for this criminal legislation by which the United States punishes men for crimes committed in the body of the States, and where the States can try and punish the same persons for the same acts, is only to be found by implication as arising out of that clause of the Constitution which authorizes Congress "to regulate commerce among the several States." (9 Wheaton, 1—Gibbons vs. Ogden.)

Or take the twentieth section of the act of 3d of March, 1825, (4 Statutes-at-Large, 121,) punishing the uttering of foreign coin made in the similitude of the coin of the United States Mint. There is no express power to pass such a law to be found anywhere in the Constitution. In the case of United States vs. Marigold (9 Howard, 568,) the Supreme Court of the United States says that the clause authorizing the punishment of counterfeiting coin does not embrace the offense of uttering such coin, and then proceeds to trace and find the power of Congress to punish the uttering of such coin to be not expressly given in the Constitution, but only to arise incidentally out of either one of the two clauses, to wit, that relating to the regulation of commerce, or that authorizing the coining of money. Upon this subject the Supreme Court uses this language, to which I beg attention:

"Congress had the constitutional power to pass this law. Under the power to regulate commerce, Congress can exclude, either wholly or partially, any subject falling within the legitimate sphere of commercial regulation, and under the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof Congress can protect the creature and object of that power."

We have seen that the fundamental rights

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Rights of Citizens—Mr. Shellabarger.

HO. OF REFS.

of national citizenship are the "creatures" of the American Constitution. Shall we be told that this "creature" is of less value or less entitled to demand the protection of this Government than the coin in which the Government makes? If not, then indeed may Congress protect this "creature and object of its power." It must be here noted again that this act of Congress punishes this act of uttering counterfeit coin within the body of the States, and this, too, although the State may punish the same man for the identical act for which he had been already indicted and punished under this act of Congress. This is because the same act may be a violation of the laws of both governments, the State and the national. This has been expressly decided in the Supreme Court of the United States in several cases: Fox vs. Ohio, 5 Howard, 410; Moore vs. Illinois, 14 Howard, 13. I submit that it is beyond the powers of reason, logic, or law, to show how it is that the power to regulate commerce between the States enables the United States to punish as crimes negligent acts of steamboat officers, and the uttering of spurious foreign coin, and that, too, within the jurisdiction of the States, and yet that logic be able to show that the constitutional enactment that United States citizens "shall be entitled" to these national privileges and immunities gives no power to Congress to carry out this provision of the Constitution.

It may be said that the difference is in the fact that the Constitution says expressly that Congress shall have power to regulate commerce, to coin money, but that it does not say that Congress shall have any power upon this subject-matter of the rights of citizenship. I answer this in two ways. First, I answer it by a direct denial of the assertion that the Constitution does not expressly give to Congress power to legislate upon any matter as near akin to these rights of citizenship as is the preservation of life upon steamboats akin to the regulation of commerce. I assert that the entire subject-matter of this bill is far more directly and plainly within the power to regulate commerce between the States than is negligence on steamboats or uttering spurious coin with the scope of that clause. What kind of commerce could there be between the States if the hostility of either the laws or of the individuals of the States were permitted to exclude men of other States from passing into or through, or sojourning in or doing business in such hostile State? Is it not absolutely self-evident that if this clause as to the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States did not exist in the Constitution, yet all the powers assumed by this bill would amply exist in the other provisions of the Constitution?

But, Mr. Speaker, I now turn to the presentation of an argument which is utterly conclusive of this and every other objection to the constitutionality of this bill. It is this: that other provisions of the Constitution which, like the one upon which this bill is framed, merely declare rights to exist, but as to which no express grant of power to legislate for their securement is contained in the Constitution, have been held, by conclusive and overwhelming authority, to be capable of being enforced by both the civil and criminal legislation of Congress. Let us look at one of these. Take that second clause of the second section of the fourth article of the Constitution touching fugitive slaves, which is in these words:

"No person held to service or labor in one State under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due."

There is no provision anywhere in the Constitution that Congress shall have power to pass any law, civil or criminal, to prevent "any law or regulation" of a State from discharging a person owing service; nor compelling such person owing service to "be delivered up to the party to whom the labor is due." If there be any power to enforce, by legislation, this right to the person owing service, then it is merely an implied power, arising out of the assertion in the Constitution of the existence of the right. And this clause too is one where the Constitution designed to prevent one State, and its people, from taking away the constitutional rights of citizens of other States. In this respect it is like the clause on which this bill is founded. It is impossible to conceive of a principle upon which can be rested the claim that civil and criminal laws of Congress can be enacted and executed within the States, as valid and constitutional, enforcing this provision of the Constitution in favor of slavery, and yet it be unconstitutional, by civil and criminal laws, to enforce in all the States the rights of liberty which inhere in American citizenship.

Now, what has been the action of your Government touching the enforcement within the body of the States of this clause as to fugitive slaves? The fugitive slave law of 1793, in the fourth section, punished as an "offense," and by fine, any one who willfully obstructed the seizure of the slave, or who concealed such slave; and the other sections provided for that seizure, &c. The law of 1850 also enforces, by highly criminal provisions, this clause of the Constitution. It would be an abuse of the intelligence and patience of the House to detain it by a review of the decisions of the States and of the nation sustaining the constitutionality of the laws. I shall, however, enumerate a few of the leading cases for the purpose of showing how utterly irresistible they are in authority and how overwhelming in number. As both the law of 1793 and 1850 contained penal and civil remedies enforcing a constitutional right, as to which the Constitution gave no express power to Congress to legislate, both acts are identical in asserting the vital principle upon which this bill rests; and the cases which I enumerate sustaining the one or other of these laws are equally applicable to this measure, and directly affirm the principle on which it rests.

The following are some of the cases where this power of Congress to enforce, by proper legislation, any constitutional right, although the right is not one of those "enumerated especially in respect to such legislation:"

The case of Glenn vs. Hodges, 9 Johns, 67, decided by Chancellor Kent and others in 1812.

The case of Wright vs. Deacon, 5 S. & R., 64, decided by Chief Justice Tilgham in 1819.

The case of Commonwealth vs. Griffith, 2 Pick., 11, decided by Chief Justice Parker in 1823.

The case of Lock vs. Martin, 12 Wend., 314, decided in 1834.

The case of Kauffman vs. Oliver, 10 Barr., 517, decided in 1848.

The case of Jones vs. Van Zant, 5 Howard, 229, decided by Supreme Court of the United States in 1847.

The case of Commonwealth vs. Aves, 18 Pick., 219, decided in 1836.

The case of Bushnel, 9 O. S. R., decided in 1859 by the supreme court of Ohio.

The case of Thompson, 11 Ill., 332, decided in 1849.

The case of Graves, 1 Ind., 369, decided in 1849.

The case of Sims, 7 Cush., 285, decided by supreme court of Massachusetts.

The case of Grigg vs. Pennsylvania, 16 Peters, 539.

But, sir, it is unnecessary further to state cases. They are to be found in the decisions of the supreme courts of every State and of the United States; and have been repeated by these just as often as the question came before them. Every one of them affirms the power of Congress to pass civil and criminal laws enforcing in the body of the States and in the Federal courts, a right secured to the citizen by the American Constitution; and this although there is no express grant of power to Congress to legislate upon the subject.

If these cases do not establish this right of legislation, then nothing can be established in our system of Government. It may be objected that anti-slavery men deny the constitutionality of the act of 1850, and some that of 1793. Some of the provisions of the act of 1850, if the question were a new one, I think would be, and ought to be, held unconstitutional, such as that depriving men of a jury trial. To these provisions the great mass of the constitutional objections of anti-slavery men have been directed. Comparatively few, perhaps none, denied that single distinct principle for which I contend, and upon which this bill rests its constitutionality, and which I again repeat in the words of the Supreme Court of the United States, in 5 Howard, 229, that it is the duty of the Government to—"Enforce by appropriate legislation every constitutional provision, whether in favor of itself or others. This grows out of the position and nature of such a Government, and is as imperative in cases not enumerated specially in respect to such legislation as in others."

But, Mr. Speaker, suppose these decisions affirming this power to legislate for the enforcement of the constitutional rights of the people are not such as ought to have been made, yet they have been made, and the principle has become the settled law of the country. Shall it be endured, sir, that after slavery has for seventy years asserted and used these powers in its service, freedom and the highest rights of the citizen shall be denied them the moment they are first sought to be employed in their service?

In the solicitude which was felt to avoid every assumption of powers of doubtful constitutionality, and to secure the best attainable forms and terms of legislation in execution of this clause of the Constitution, this bill was submitted to the careful examination of the Attorney General of the United States. He kindly submitted some suggestions in writing as to some of the details of the bill, which have been adopted into the bill as reported to the House. I understand that the Attorney General of the United States approves this bill, both as to its constitutionality and necessity.

And here, Mr. Speaker, I leave this measure, submitting it to the careful deliberation and judgment of Congress. I would gladly hope that it might meet with the unanimous approval of both Houses. The power to pass it into law is plain and unquestionable. It aims at no sectional or partisan purposes. Its benefits, like the beneficences of all good government, are meant for all the people alike. The high and the lowly, the weak and the powerful, take of its protection. It is for the East and the West, the North and the South. All of the States and all of the people thereof will alike enjoy the protection it affords. Each child of the Republic, wherever he may go, however alone, frail, or defenseless, may by his touch start into action the provisions of this short and simple law, and instantly he is neither alone, frail, or defenseless, but has summoned to him the sublime presence and power of his Government, all of whose energies that touch has started into irresistible force and activity for his safety.

The necessities which demand the enactment of this law are so obvious, of such permanent duration, and are so overwhelming as to make the presentation of them now and here an improper consumption of the time of the House. Since the period of modern civilization, I know of no nation which has presented such a spectacle as our own. I know of no other in whose dominions was embraced an area large as half its territories which had become to near one half its own citizens a terra incognita. In our country there came to be a land into which its own children could not go and live. In that land for a quarter of a century could not be safely uttered that sublimest aphorism of our own national faith, and the very one with which we had propitiated the ear of Heaven in our imprecations for national life, "that all men were created equal." It was a land made of Heaven, rich and beautiful as the vale of Cashmere; but whose moral terrors had become as deadly as the fabled horrors of that land of the Britons where the ground was covered with serpents; the air such that none could breathe it and live; whither fishermen ferried goblins at midnight, and where the speech of the dead was constantly heard by the mariners. It was a land where the best precepts of Wilberforce and Washington could generally not be uttered with safety to life; and where that last, best petition sent by Franklin to the American Congress could be whispered neither by men nor by the children, neither in the ear of nation nor of God; a land where the experiences of the citizen who would avow or would not discard the best precepts of his own national faith and religion can, without exaggeration, be told in that strangely sublime recital of the sufferings of the good men of other ages who suffered tortures, cruel mockings, and scourgings, bonds and imprisonment; who were stoned, sawn asunder, slain with the sword; who wandered in deserts, mountains, dens, and caves of the earth, being destitute, afflicted, tormented.

HO. OF REPS.

Basis of Representation—Mr. Schenck.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

And now, Mr. Speaker, since the people have poured out an offering of blood such as Liberty never had before upon her altars, to the end that the people might be free and safe throughout our country, the heart of the nation is again already sinking and sickening at the reappearance of that same reign of violence and terror which so cursed the land before. The sad and unwelcome fact is again being forced upon the attention of the nation that its own truly loyal citizens cannot safely dwell or go into all parts of their own country. It is becoming more manifest each day that the higher the evidences of the citizen's loyalty to his country, and the greater his sacrifices of blood made for that country, the less secure these citizens are now in attempting to abide in or even to go into vast portions of the country which their own blood has just delivered. In this Hall where I now speak, and within a few days of the time when I speak, one who was once a member of this House, and later a provisional governor of his State, and whose deserved eminence comes from his unconquerable loyalty, startled you and the country by the announcement that he could not return with safety to his home because that treason had prohibited his abode in the State of which he is the most illustrious patriot.

Another sad proof of this return of the reign of proscription and of murder has just been taken in Vicksburg under the order of this House. Its horrid enormities, in the massacre of a defenseless people, in the exposure and mutilation of their dead bodies, in the burning of their homes, schools, and churches, make one of the darkest pages in the annals of barbarism.

Sir, in every country and in every age the grave of a nation's soldiery has been the nation's shrine—a shrine whither science and art and song have ever repaired as rivals, emulous to bestow their choicest treasures; a shrine where gratitude and religion have sat together watching as sleepless vestals forever; a shrine where—

"Honor comes, a pilgrim gray,
To deck the sod that wraps their clay."

But, Mr. Speaker, already to-day, when the first daisy which God planted upon the grave of the American soldier is scarcely dead, their comrades dare not go thither to strew them with new flowers because treason and an officer of the American Army forbid it. Sir, from nearly every part of that beautiful land—land of the orange and the magnolia—the soldier of the Republic and the friends of your Government are being driven to-day.

Mr. Speaker, the nation must protect its citizens or else perish. Refuse or fail, and your country sinks into the deserved contempt of the nation, and of its own people. In that contempt, should it come—which Heaven in mercy forbid—the Republic will find its grave.

Members of the Thirty-Ninth Congress, I entreat you to pass the bill. In it help to complete that circle of constitutional and legal defenses which the new nation must have. Fellow-members, may it be our peerless honor to provide these defenses. Let them be made, in their amplitude, their strength, their virtue, and their adaptation, not in the interests of a single race, government, continent, or age; but in the interests of humanity, God, and the ages. And then, in that circle of laws, when complete, protecting everywhere all the rights of all the people, behold that shield of the nation, beautiful and indurant as the shield of Achilles; part of the "Arms which the Father of the fires bestowed Forged on th' eternal anvils of the god"— a shield which shall cover the nation's head as well in the hour of peace as of battle, as well in the day of prosperity as of disaster. For you have covered the nation's head when you have covered the head of her children.

Basis of Representation.

SPEECH OF HON. R. C. SCHENCK,
OF OHIO,

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

January 24, 1866,

On the proposition to amend the Constitution of the United States, establishing the basis of representation.

Mr. SCHENCK said:

Mr. SPEAKER: I do not propose to address the House at any length on the subject we have now before us; but I do regard this discussion as in every sense a most interesting and important one. Early in the debate, if I could have obtained the floor, I should have been glad to enter into the matter somewhat at large. I propose to confine myself to some two or three remarks on the condition of the question, and on the two antagonistic schemes presented for remedying what is admitted, at least by all on this side of the House, to be a great evil.

It is not a new thing for me, sir, to feel an interest in this subject. By the present Constitution of the United States there is a provision for an unequal system of representation which, now that slavery, the cause of it, has gone, we propose also to get rid of. This evil was felt long before slavery was itself, by the late amendment to the Constitution of the United States, abolished throughout the whole broad expanse of this land; and if I may be permitted to refer to my own part in the treatment of this question, at a day much earlier than this, I will show by reference to an argument which I submitted seventeen years and a half ago in the House of Representatives of the United States I manifested, for once, a determination I felt then, in common with others, that this evil of unequal representation should be spread no further; just as upon the same principle I would now get rid of it altogether.

I will, at the risk of being considered egotistical in repeating myself, send up to the Clerk's desk a short extract from a speech I made here the 1st of August, 1848. A bill was then pending and under consideration to organize a government for Oregon, a territorial government. During the discussion of that bill it was proposed by a gentleman from the South, then a Representative upon this floor, to amend so as to authorize the carrying of their property into Oregon. I was among those who would not object to the taking of property there, including slaves held as such by the laws prevailing in certain sections of the Union, because I well understood, or believed, that the act of taking slaves to Oregon would be of itself their manumission. This suggestion brought another gentleman from the South to the aid of his friend, who moved further to amend by a provision that all property carried there should still be held as property. On this sprung up a long debate, involving the whole policy in regard to the Territories in connection with the exclusion of slavery from them and the effect of carrying slave property into what was the common heritage and under the common jurisdiction of the national Government. I ask the Clerk to read the paragraphs I have marked from that speech.

The Clerk read, as follows:

"But, sir, regarding this as a political question purely, or one, if you will, of political power, there is a thing connected with slavery to which we cannot and will not be blind. It is the advantage in Federal representation which it gives. This much we do know in the free States, if we know nothing else; that a man at the South, with his hundred slaves, counts sixty-one in the weight of influence and power upon this floor, while a man at the North with his hundred farms counts but one. Sir, we want no more of that; and, with the help of God and our own firm purpose, we will have no more of it. Therefore, above all, it is that we want no more slave territory. That is a sufficient and conclusive reason, if there were no other; and it might as well be distinctly understood first as last. I am for no Missouri compromise, nor for compromises on this subject of any character. I want the principles of the great ordinance of 1787, prohibiting slavery, extended over all the territory owned or acquired by us. I would to God there had been no such acquisition. I have opposed, in all my time here, from the beginning, every scheme of annexation and all forms of territorial conquest and extension; but when, by the greater power of others, such acquisition comes, I am determined that with my vote there never shall come with it anything but free and equal institutions."

"Sir, shall I illustrate, to show that we understand this matter? There is the district of the honorable gentleman from South Carolina who would amend so as to extend slavery into Oregon. I have not consulted the census to see how it may be in his particular case, but he probably represents some five, or six, or eight thousand voters. Now there are about eighteen thousand voters in my district—eighteen thousand free white male adult citizens. These eighteen thousand freemen have one voice and one vote—I would it were an able one—on this floor. The five thousand or eight thousand in South Carolina have the same. On every bill or resolution, or other subject of legislation here, the eighteen thousand in Ohio can say ay or no once and no more, while one third or one half that number in South Carolina have also their ay or no. We do not complain of this. I wish it were not so. But so it was arranged, so agreed that it should be, by our fathers when they framed the Constitution; and we will hold by that agreement in all good faith, and submit to it as part of the price paid for this Union. But let there be no more slave territory, to make more slave States, to give us more of this slave representation and inequality of weight in the councils of the nation."

Mr. SCHENCK. Those were my opinions then, entirely coincident with what I think and feel now, with this difference, that then slavery existed. Then we could only guard the Territories in such manner as to exclude from them an institution which should build up more of the unequal relative representation already provided for among the States under the Constitution. Now, sir, another time has come. Dissatisfied with the condition of things as then existing, dissatisfied with the constitutional guarantees they had, dissatisfied with the spirit exhibited by the free States, which only asked that slavery might be extended no further, but were willing to stand by the Constitution and not infringe upon any of the rights secured locally or sectionally to the people of the South, these slave States rushed into war to get something better. The consequence has been that instead of getting further and greater securities for slavery, instead of being able to carry out their purposes of aggression upon freedom and upon the free States, their whole institution has come tottering down, thank God! and we are now standing here in our places to determine what provisions we shall make in the midst of the ruin of their favored system so as to prevent the perpetual mischiefs which it carried with it while in existence.

Whatever was said, therefore, at that time with regard to Territories is to be said now with regard to States. There is no longer any slavery, and there being no slavery, we ask that along with the institution which was the cause of this unequal representation the unequal representation itself shall be utterly wiped out.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Basis of Representation—Mr. Schenck.

HO. OF REPS.

I need not go into any remarks in relation to the great evil we are called upon to remedy. I will but submit a single illustration, among many others which I was accustomed to present to my constituents and friends at home when addressing them during the past season in relation to this matter. I felt that now, as has been so properly said by the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. Cook,] the "golden opportunity" had come, and that it must not be permitted to pass without improving it—now that we have the power to stretch our strong hand over it and ask the States to unite with us in abolishing the injustice altogether and forever. It was for this reason, with a view to prepare, as far as in my humble endeavor I might, the public mind for accepting a proposition of this kind, to be made in Congress, or having already been made in a former Congress, to be insisted upon and put in some practical shape when we should be assembled here again, that I presented the subject, as I said, to my people at home. Among the illustrations I say I will refer to but one to show what the great magnitude of that evil of unequal representation has been hitherto.

By looking at the results of the census taken in 1860 I find, among other facts equally extraordinary illustrating this inequality, this to be true in relation to the State of Pennsylvania, as compared with portions of the South. You cannot take the State of Pennsylvania and compare her with any other one State of the South. It is not worth while now to discuss why the South, in wealth and in population, has not increased and prospered as the free States have done. It is not worth while to inquire now, for all this has been sufficiently discussed and reflected upon, how far the institution of slavery has been a dead weight carried by the States of the South, nor how it has prevented their growth and prosperity in wealth and population. The fact, however, stands recorded, proved by your census, that when you come to compare Pennsylvania with any portion of the South in relation to the number of the white population, you are compelled to take half a dozen or more of those States in order to make that comparison, because there is no one of them that may be put in opposition to the State of Pennsylvania. By the census of 1860 Pennsylvania is found to have a population of 2,849,266. That is, of course, all free population. The States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, and Louisiana, seven of them, all taken together, have a free population of 2,829,785, being twenty thousand less than Pennsylvania has alone. Take them, however, as if they were equal, then how do they stand? Two million eight hundred thousand people in Pennsylvania, under the Constitution of the United States, are represented by two votes in the Senate and by twenty-four votes in this House; those seven lately slave States, with twenty thousand less free and white population, under the present form of the Constitution, have their fourteen Senators and thirty-nine votes in the House of Representatives.

Now, so far as Senators are concerned, no objection is to be taken. The Senate may be regarded as that aristocratic feature in our system which provides that one branch of the Legislature shall be composed of representatives of States, thus putting the smallest States upon an equality with the largest, in order to the protection of the former. But when we come to the House of Representatives, where equality of representation is maintained, or ought to be, under that old system we find that a population which, in these seven slave States, gives thirty-nine votes to them, gives only twenty-four to Pennsylvania. That, then, is the evil. It might be exemplified by a comparison between South Carolina and some northern States in a still more extraordinary degree while the Constitution of the United States remains in its present form. This comes of counting three fifths of the slave population and adding it to the other population in order to make up an artificial basis of representation. Now that you count the other two fifths, you go on to increase the representation of these seven States and others that were slave States, without affecting in any perceptible degree the right of representation of those that, being already free, remained also loyal in the war which has ended in the destruction of slavery.

We are then agreed, I believe, that there is an evil to be remedied. There certainly can be no discussion upon that point on this side of the House. It is true, the gentleman [Mr. Marshall] who has just taken his seat, representing in part the great State of Illinois, speaks of us, because we desire to remedy this evil, as a revolutionary party; he speaks of us as rushing upon experiments which are abominable in their character, and at a time when no attempt to amend the Constitution should be made. Sir, I will not stop to answer remarks of that kind. If we are a revolutionary party, we are only revolutionary in the direction of freedom and equality; and it does not become a Democrat, as the gentleman improperly calls himself, to object to us on that account. If we are revolutionary, we are revolutionary only in the interest of humanity, and we have no sympathy with rebels at the South who clung with such tenacity to everything that made them tyrants and oligarchs, depriving a large part of their population of a portion of their natural rights. If there be any sympathy with those, it is not to be found in our breasts, however revolutionary may be our character. I leave it to the gentleman and those who act and think and feel with him to say whether they have or have not cooperated with any such party as that.

This, then, is the evil which we desire, under the forms of the Constitution, without resort to revolution, but by the use only of the means provided by that instrument itself, to remove, by submitting to the people the question whether they will apply that remedy which we think it now a good time to propose to them. We find ourselves divided in opinion, not with reference to what is to be cured, but as to the best mode of making that cure. On some accounts I regret that there should be this division of opinion among those of us who are disposed to get rid of this anti-democratic inequality of representation, now that the cause for it is gone. And yet, on other accounts, perhaps, it is well that this debate has come on and been continued as it has been, because in the collision of mind with mind and thought with thought, in the consideration of propositions and suggestions pro and con, we may perhaps arrive in the end at a better solution of the whole difficulty than we would otherwise reach.

I undertake to say, among the many important propositions to amend the organic law of this country, there is no one which commands itself to the consideration, the judgment, and approval of the people with more force than this as a means of solving and removing all the difficulties which now agitate the public mind. And on this account I can understand why, on this side of the House, we all may be agreed in seeking to get something, while on the other there may be objections to any amendment at all.

The gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. Cook,] in front of me, who addressed the House, suggested that, in opposing such a fair, equal, democratic representative amendment, gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber hold themselves liable to be suspected of being disposed to keep up this unequal share of representation on the part of the southern States with a view to a combination which shall enable them to get the control of the Government. It is for them to reflect whether they are actuated by such a motive or not. This much I will say, however, I am inclined to suspect that any man who is opposed to the adoption of some such amendment can only be so because he is unwilling to remove the question about the negro from the arena of politics, considering that if he does so his party capital will be taken away and his occupation gone forever.

Now, sir, various amendments and propositions have been made, all circling around two plans—or two principles, perhaps I should say. There are a number of amendments, including one I had the honor myself to offer, which look to a cure to be arrived at by basing representation upon suffrage. Then there is the plan presented by the select committee on reconstruction, which proposes still to count the whole population as a basis of representation, providing, however, as a penalty, that that representation shall be taken away from any State in proportion to the number of citizens she may have, of any race or color, whose right to vote she denies or abridges. I like the first proposition the best. I will be content with anything that will effectually cure the evil; but I prefer the first proposition because I think it is founded upon a better principle, and will more practically accomplish the great thing desired by all of us.

Thinking so, sir, at a very early day in this session, I was one of those disposed to ask the attention of Congress to the subject, to propose in proper form the submission of the question to the Legislatures of the several States. On the first day of the session, on the 4th of December last, as soon as the House was organized, I gave notice that I would, on the next, or some succeeding day, introduce a proposition to amend the Constitution. On the ensuing day I did accordingly present a joint resolution. It stands as House resolution No. 1 of the session.

In that I propose representation hereafter shall be based upon suffrage. I propose that representation shall be apportioned among the several States of the Union according to the number of voters having qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the Legislature of the States where they reside, following in this the language of the Constitution; these voters, however, to be further limited in their descriptions and definitions as being male citizens of the United States over twenty-one years of age. Now, whether the proposition be a good one or not, whether the limitation be such as should commend itself to the masses of our people, I will not for the present inquire. I will only remark they have seemed to me to embrace as many qualifications as we ought to include when we are going to lay down a new organic law on this subject.

Some gentlemen object to the word "male," and would extend the franchise of voting to the females. Well, I have as much gallantry, were that alone the thing to be considered, and sentiment of admiration for that sex, as any gentleman; but I claim, by common consent of civilized countries, including our own, the whole subject being considered, and especially the sphere of the two sexes, it has been held that the Government should be in the hands of the male part of the population and not the female.

I do not regard voting as a natural right, as some gentlemen do. I think that it is expedient in framing a republican Government you should extend as far as you conveniently and properly can the right of suffrage.

But after all it is not a question of natural right but one of justice and expediency how far you will go. Believing that, I have concluded to put among the other qualifications the word "male" in my amendment as discriminative at once of those qualities which an elector shall have. I have also required that these males shall be above the age of twenty-one years. Now, if I believed that voting was a natural right, instead of a matter to be settled according to expediency and the best exercise of fair and just consideration of age, sex, and everything else, among those who are called upon to take a share in the Government, I might not have fixed upon this age of twenty-one years. For if it be a natural right, how is it in France, for instance, a man shall not become an adult, capable of taking part in the legal transactions of the Government, or giving his consent to certain things, or beyond the control of his parents, till he is twenty-five years of age? For the simple reason that in every country the age of majority, not being a thing which is settled by any consideration of natural right, is to be settled according to the best exercise of discrimination on the subject, and the best consideration that is to be given to questions of expediency by those who framed the institutions of that Government.

HO. OF REPS.

Basis of Representation—Mr. Schenck.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

I take twenty-one years as the best age, because, I believe, in every State of the Union that has always been and is now the line of limitation between the adult and the minor. I have adopted that which has commended itself to the common discrimination, the common judgment, and has had the common assent of the people of this country.

I have required, also, that the voter shall be a citizen of the United States. Why? Because I hold this to be a Government by the citizens of the United States, and for the citizens of the United States. We are sufficiently liberal to the foreigner—and every intelligent, right-thinking foreigner himself so regards it—when we say to him, "After a certain term of probation, (making it very short, as we do by our laws,) when you come to this country as an asylum open for all lovers of liberty in all lands, you shall be permitted to take a position equal in every respect, with the exception, perhaps, of not being eligible to the office of President of the United States, to that of the native-born citizen."

This, sir, is my idea of what an amendment should be that assumes suffrage as a basis of representation. It is opposed by another system, involving a different principle, which comes to us from the committee on reconstruction. This subject had been referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and was by them held under consideration, and would have been doubtless brought forward in due time. That is the appropriate committee to which have always been referred questions and propositions relating to amendment of the Constitution. But inasmuch as the subject allied itself to some of those matters which were under consideration by the committee on reconstruction—a proposition submitted by the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BLAINE] being referred to that committee—they have put into form an amendment involving a principle in which representation is to be based on the enumeration of the whole population of the country, excepting any race or color from being counted with regard to which there shall be a denial or abridgment of the elective franchise.

I make but two objections now, for it has been too fully and completely discussed to require that anybody should detain the House long in a debate which has already been so protracted. I make but two objections to that amendment, and to me they are objections most fatal to its adoption as a remedy.

In the first I have been anticipated most clearly and ably by my colleague, [Mr. LAWRENCE.] He objected that this language contained in the amendment, reported from the joint committee on reconstruction—"that whenever the elective franchise shall be denied or abridged in any State on account of race or color, all persons of such race or color shall be excluded from the basis of representation"—held out virtually an offer of a bargain to the people of the States and to the States by their organic law to disfranchise some portion of the citizens; that it was equivalent to saying this: "You may, and by our language we imply that you probably will, deny or abridge the right of voting on account of race or color to some portion of your population, only it shall be with the understanding that if you do you shall by so much lessen your representation." Now I, together with my colleague and other gentlemen here, are unwilling, if we can avoid it, and can get a better mode of curing this evil, to ingraft into the organic law of the nation anything which looks to even an implied consent that any of the people of any of the States of the Union shall make local organic laws which shall strike down and deprive of just, fair, and equal privileges, on account of race or color, any part of their number.

But I make another objection, and this does not go so much to the principle as it does to what may be the practice, the practical working of this amendment, if it shall prevail and become a part of the Constitution of the United States. Let me read the language again:

That whenever the elective franchise shall be denied or abridged in any State on account of race or color, all persons of such race or color shall be excluded from the basis of representation.

Now, sir, I am not one of those who entertain Utopian ideas in relation, not merely to the progress, but to the immediate change of sentiment, opinions, and practice among the people of those States that have so lately been slave States, and so recently in rebellion. I believe that, like all other people, their growth toward good and right and free institutions must necessarily be gradual; and if we pass the amendment which I have proposed, or anything similar to it, and say to them, "You shall have representation proportioned to the portion of your population to which you extend this inestimable franchise," my belief is that they will not, on the next day after it becomes a part of the organic law of the United States, at once enfranchise all the negroes in their midst. I am not sure that they ought to do it; but we are dealing with the matter now as it presents itself as a practical question. What will they probably do? My belief is that if you persuade them to do right, if you hold out to them an inducement for letting their negroes vote and striking out these disqualifications and putting all upon the basis of manhood, they will probably begin, after the amendment becomes part of the organic law, by extending this right to those who have acquired certain property; perhaps they will also extend it, after awhile, to those who have certain qualifications of education. However they may proceed, whether rapidly or slowly, it will be a work of progress and a work of time. But by this amendment you would say to them, "We do not want you to enter upon any such gradual bringing up of these people to the level plain of right to be enjoyed by them equally with others of other races in your midst." We say to them, "You may enfranchise one third or one fourth of your people who are black and deprived of the privilege of voting by introducing the qualification of property, up to which one third or one fourth may come; you may introduce a qualification of education up to which a number of them may come; but that will all be of no value; so long as there is any denial or any abridgment of the right to vote of a single man on account of his race or color, you shall have no part of the population of that race or color counted to measure to you your share of representation."

Now, I will not go into the abstract question whether they ought to enfranchise the negroes at once or not. I will not go into the question of how soon they ought to do it as a matter of expediency. I say that in all human probability, when they come to enfranchise, if they do it at all, this portion of their population, they will do it gradually; yet by this amendment, as it comes from the committee, you say that they shall not be represented for any part of it at all till they completely enfranchise them and put them on the same footing with the white population.

It is not worth while to go into the question as to what expedients shall be or ought to be resorted to in the South or elsewhere in order to educate the negro up to a condition for a full participation in this privilege. It is not worth while to go into the question whether the negro race ought to be completely and equally enfranchised now with the white population. We are dealing, I repeat, with a practical question. We are saying to the South, if we pass this amendment, "Stand off; we care not for your property qualification." As an individual, I do not care for a property qualification for whites or blacks. I repudiate it altogether. I think on that question Dr. Franklin's argument about the man and the jackass has never been answered. But we say also to them, "We do not care about your qualification of reading and writing (on which there may be—certainly Massachusetts thinks so—something important to be considered); you may give every negro that can read and every negro that can write and every negro that can spell, on the day after this is made a part of the Constitution of the land, full rights as an elector in your States, but he shall not be counted in the apportionment of representation, nor shall one of his race be counted until you get through with and complete the whole work in some future time when you have enfranchised the whole race." I do not misconstrue or misstate the language and the evident purpose and effect of the amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. In the State?

Mr. SCHENCK. Of course, in the State in which this takes place. That is precisely my argument. You say to each State that has any of this population that none of it shall be counted until the whole of them are fully enfranchised.

Mr. BINGHAM. If my colleague [Mr. SCHENCK] will allow me, I will suggest that this precludes a State from a class legislation which would operate injuriously upon colored people. But if that legislation be general and not class legislation in its character, applying to the white population as well as to the black population, the standard of intelligence for instance, this proposed amendment to the Constitution will not operate as the gentleman suggests.

Mr. SCHENCK. My reply to that shall be to read here, in the presence and hearing of the House, the language of the amendment itself:

Provided, That whenever the elective franchise shall be denied or abridged in any State on account of race or color, all persons of such race or color shall be excluded from the basis of representation.

Of course I understand it to mean all such persons in the State where the denial or abridgment shall be made.

Mr. BINGHAM. I beg my colleague to understand further that the words of the proposed amendment which he has just read import, ex vi termini, that the proviso does not operate at all, except the legislation is caste legislation, and then applies only to that caste.

Mr. SCHENCK. And when it does operate, how does it operate? If there be one negro denied the privilege of voting because he is a negro, is not that a denial or abridgment of the elective franchise on account of race or color? If one half of that race, or one third, or any proportion, be denied the right of voting on account of race or color, although that right is given to the rest, then what follows? If you deny or abridge the elective franchise at all, in any degree, this is the consequence: that "all persons of such race or color shall be excluded from the basis of representation."

Mr. BINGHAM. I beg leave to repeat to my colleague again, that if, for example, in South Carolina, when that State comes to be recognized, it is generally provided, without regard to race or color, generally provided by law that no citizen of South Carolina shall vote unless such citizen shall be able to read the English language, in that case this provision does not operate to the exclusion of her enfranchised black population who come up to that standard. But if, on the other hand, South Carolina shall by law expressly declare that no colored citizen of the State shall vote unless he can read the English language, leaving the ignorant white man to vote, then this provision declares that South Carolina shall not be entitled to representation upon her black population. I ask the gentleman now to say whether he is opposed to or in favor of such caste legislation.

39TH CONG...1ST SESS.

Basis of Representation—Mr. Schenck.

HO. OF REPS.

Mr. SCHENCK. I will answer the gentleman distinctly. I am opposed to caste legislation; that is comprehensible. But we are legislating here, by an amendment of our organic law, for the present existing condition of things. And what I say is that it is not probable that we shall be able in a day, perhaps not in a year, or two years, or three years, to educate South Carolina, for instance, up to the point of enfranchising all her black population with the right of voting. We shall not be able to educate her up to the point of making no distinction on account of color, so far as this matter of voting is concerned. If we do not, then we say to her by this amendment, "You may allow one third, or one half, or two thirds of your negroes to vote, by reason of their intelligence and education, or for some other qualification, but it shall not benefit you in the least in the matter of representation here. You must wait until there is no abridgment or denial of the elective franchise on account of race or color, before your negro population shall be included in your basis of representation." I am sure there can be no difference now between my colleague [Mr. BINGHAM] and myself as to our understanding of this matter.

I am not arguing the question of abstract right; I think that is unnecessary. I am arguing the question of the practical working of this amendment. I think it is very objectionable, because we must take these States as they are now; we must lead them, guide them, teach them to walk, put them in the right way and keep them there; we must educate them, up to the right point if we are to expect that when they reach that point they will feel themselves standing upon solid ground, from which they cannot be forced or driven.

Mr. STEVENS. If South Carolina by law shall provide that one half of her black population shall vote, and that the other half shall not, because they are black, can South Carolina complain if we punish her for such injustice by saying that she shall not be allowed to take advantage of the number of the black population in her basis of representation?

Mr. SCHENCK. That is not a question into which I can be drawn. I do not approve that more than the gentleman himself does.

Mr. STEVENS. I do not ask the gentleman if he approves it; but I ask would we be doing injustice to South Carolina by punishing her for excluding that class from voting by excluding them from representation?

Mr. SCHENCK. I have no desire to punish South Carolina for being half right.

Mr. STEVENS. Well, I have.

Mr. SCHENCK. I would give her credit for being even half right. So fast as she approaches the right basis, so fast as she advances toward the adoption of that rule of freedom and equality which extends to all men without distinction of color their right to take part in the government, simply upon the ground of their manhood, I would give her credit for her conduct. My objection in this case is that this amendment does not give her credit so far as she goes, but says to her, "The last ounce of the pound of flesh, with every quivering fiber, and every drop of blood, must be fully and entirely paid, or you shall have no consideration whatever."

Now, then, I come back to what I conceive to be the better system, a system based upon suffrage, a system of representation which shall be equalized among all the States of this Union according to the number of people that they have within their respective limits of whom they are willing to say that they are fit to take part in the Government. In the first place, this is most liberal. It says to the States, "Remove from the arena of politics this embittered and embittering question about interfering with your local institutions. We are willing that you yourselves shall hereafter, as heretofore, determine who shall and who shall not be electors of the most numerous branch of your Legislative Assembly; but we give you warning, a warning to all North, South, East, and West, that only in proportion as you shall adjudge your people fit to participate in this common Government of ours, shall you take part in the Government through representatives in Congress."

Mr. BENJAMIN. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. SCHENCK. I yield to the gentleman for that purpose.

Mr. BENJAMIN. If the State of Missouri, in her wisdom, sees cause to disfranchise a large part of her citizens in consequence of their disloyalty, as she has done, is it just that she should be deprived of a portion of her representation in this House in consequence of that act?

Mr. SCHENCK. Well, Mr. Speaker, I think it is, because the fewer of that sort of population she has to be represented, the better for her. If her citizens are loyal, even though they be so few as to entitle her to only one Representative, it is better for her than to have five or six or ten times the number of disloyal citizens.

Mr. BENJAMIN. I would remind the gentleman that in Missouri a part of our population are of that sort; and we cannot get rid of them.

Mr. SCHENCK. Very well; my amendment, upon the principle that—"While the lamp holds out to burn,

The vilest sinner may return."

extends to the States and to the people of the States every inducement to be loyal and law-abiding in their conduct in order that they may have, through their representatives, a greater share in the Government.

Now, sir, the objections which are made to this system of representation based upon suffrage come from gentlemen representing different sections of the country. Gentlemen from Indiana and some of the northwestern States are not quite reconciled to this system, because they say that by their State constitutions certain persons who are not citizens of the United States—men who, having recently arrived in the country, are yet aliens, or have only declared their intention to become citizens—are allowed to vote. Well, my reply to that is, that though it may at first operate hardly upon some of the voters of the northwestern and western States, yet this is a thing which is continually curing itself; and the amendment which I advocate, being based upon a right principle, that the citizens of the country shall rule the country, will only afford an additional inducement and stimulus for these people to become citizens as soon as the lapse of time will allow them to do so. So far from this being an objection to the amendment, I trust we shall have the help of the members from Indiana and all those northwestern members; that they will come to our aid and pass this amendment, although it may operate a little hardly upon themselves just at the present time.

Mr. VOORHEES. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him for one moment?

Mr. SCHENCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. VOORHEES. I have been listening to the gentleman with a great deal of interest, and I wish simply to ask him a question, so that his position may be clearly defined. I desire to know whether the gentleman takes the ground that the unnaturalized foreigner, who, although he has not yet attained to citizenship, is allowed in some of the States to vote, should be stricken from the basis of representation. Is that the gentleman's position?

Mr. SCHENCK. I think that that would be necessary. My proposition is that hereafter, if we can succeed in making this the organic law, no person shall vote unless he be not only a male over twenty-one years of age but also a citizen of the United States. I think it is time, if we have not had it sufficiently expressed heretofore in the Constitution of the United States, that the great organic law of the nation should embrace such a provision.

We have had a little experiment upon this matter in my own State. By the first constitution of the State of Ohio, adopted in 1802, every free white male inhabitant above the age of twenty-one years who had paid or been charged with a State or county tax was allowed to vote. That operated in such a manner that our courts were compelled to adopt a forced construction, and say that "inhabitant" meant a citizen of the United States.

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not wish to interrupt the gentleman if it is not desirable. My questions are put in good faith.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's hour has expired.

Mr. ELDRIDGE obtained the floor.

Mr. VOORHEES. I move that the time of the gentleman from Ohio be extended.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. VOORHEES. I wish to ask the gentleman how his proposition would operate on those soldiers who have not been naturalized and received into citizenship, but are voters because of their service in the war. Would it strike them out?

Mr. SCHENCK. No, sir. Every man who has fought for the country shall furnish that instead of the requirement of five years' residence; that will make him a citizen.

Mr. VOORHEES. I understand the fact to be that in some of the States where, of course, it was not the intention to interfere with the law of Congress on the subject of naturalization, laws have been passed making soldiers who served in the Army voters; not naturalizing them, but making them voters. A State cannot naturalize—a State cannot make a foreigner a citizen. The gentleman understands my point.

Mr. SCHENCK. I do.

Mr. VOORHEES. The question is whether this proposition, which proposes to strike from the basis of representation all who are not citizens, does not strike out the soldiers who have not been naturalized, but who have been made voters on account of service in the Army.

Mr. SCHENCK. I understand that the law makes service in the Army an equivalent for five years' residence.

Mr. VOORHEES. A State cannot do that.

Mr. SCHENCK. Such is the law, that proof of service shall stand in the place of previous residence in the country for five years. I am not afraid that they will be stricken out of the basis of representation; but I am thankful to the gentleman for any suggestion which will serve to call our attention to these men who have risked their lives and shed their blood for the salvation of the country. I think we will take good care of them on this side of the House, with the aid of the other side, if they choose to give it; if not, without their aid.

Mr. VOORHEES. We understand what that means. We are all ready to help you here.

Mr. SCHENCK. It is very unusual that we have any aid from that side of the House in regard to the rights of the soldiers.

Mr. VOORHEES. This is a day of new things.

Mr. SCHENCK. Now, sir, I was, when interrupted, as I think inopportunist, in the midst of an illustration from my own State. In Ohio, on the adoption of the first constitution, in 1802, our description of the qualifications of electors was in those words, "that the elector must be a free white male inhabitant above the age of twenty-one, who has paid or been charged with a State or county tax;" and such was the force of public opinion, and such the peculiar interest felt for that relation, that the courts held that the word "inhabitant," when properly construed, meant "citizen." I always thanked the courts for that construction, although I was not able to see on what process of reasoning they made it. When we came, fifteen years ago,

SENATE.

Representation of Southern States—Mr. Davis.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

to amend the constitution of Ohio we came up with the growth of public sentiment and put "citizens" into our new constitution as part of the description of those who should make competent voters. Therefore, as an inference from that history of my own State, I hold that if that same general rule be applied to the people of all the States—that the nation shall be governed by its own proper citizens—it will be a wholesome amendment; and if not clearly expressed or inferred from the Constitution of the United States as it now stands, as it would seem not to be, I think the amendment should be made now.

There is another section of the country from which comes objection to this amendment, involving a system of representation based upon suffrage. My own State, the middle and western States, indeed all the States outside of New England, are excluding negroes from the privilege of voting. The effect of the amendment will be, in Ohio, and in other States, where they are not put upon an equality, either to lose a fraction of our representation, or to extend to them the right of suffrage. I am not alarmed by either horn of that dilemma. I am not concerned that my State and the surrounding States should be shorn in their basis of representation of a few thousands of men of that race, provided that we shall take away the immense disproportion of the South by reason of their millions of that population.

I hope, therefore, that my friends from Ohio and other parts of the country where negroes are not permitted to vote will not be governed by any such consideration.

Then I turn to another objection that some gentlemen have discovered—that Massachusetts, for instance, may possibly lose a vote or two because of the disproportion there as compared with other parts of the country between males and females. I have not gone into the figures to ascertain whether that deduction is fairly drawn from the premises or not, and I will not do it. I am told by gentlemen from that section of the country that no such result is to be obtained by a fair examination. The truth is that the census does not at this time afford the means of making a fair representation of this subject. There is no enumeration taken of voters, or even of those who are of the age of twenty-one years and upward, but the census has been so taken as to give you the aggregate of those between ten and twenty, twenty and thirty, thirty and forty, and so on. And gentlemen are probably led into this mistake by going down to twenty years, not having any limit given in the census by which they may stop at twenty-one.

But I say I will not go into the figures, because I am willing and ready to stand upon this proposition, that New England, if she should even lose a vote, or two votes, or a fraction of a vote, cannot afford, any more than Ohio, or Indiana, or any other of those States can, having these particular objections to the scheme, to let the opportunity go by now and not introduce a general amendment which will remedy the one great evil under which we are all laboring together. I hold that Ohio must give up her objections on account of her negro population; that the northwestern States must give up their objections on account of the fact that they are permitting persons to vote who are not yet citizens of the United States. Those persons would have to wait, "to tarry at Jericho until their beards are grown." I hold that New England must give up her objections, and if we are to amend the organic law at all, we must do it by uniting upon a common principle, a common sympathy, a common feeling, at least on this side of the House, upon which the entire responsibility is thrown, acting harmoniously, and adopting such an amendment to the organic law as shall be entirely democratic and fair in all its scope and action upon all the people of the States of this Union.

Representation of Southern States.

SPEECH OF HON. GARRETT DAVIS,
OF KENTUCKY,
IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
March 2, 1866.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the following resolution of the House of Representatives:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That in order to close agitation upon a question which seems likely to disturb the action of the Government, as well as to quiet the uncertainty which is agitating the minds of the people of the eleven States which have been declared to be in insurrection, no Senator or Representative shall be admitted into either branch of Congress from any of said States until Congress shall have declared such State entitled to such representation.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, it is not my purpose to make an elaborate speech upon the pending question, or one that I have matured with any degree of consideration; merely to make a few points in a desultory manner. I do not propose to occupy a great portion of the time of the Senate, and I expect to conclude my remarks in such time as will afford the Senator from Massachusetts, or any other gentleman who wishes to address the Senate upon this question, ample opportunity to do so.

I have heard complaints in the course of this and other debates recently, of executive acts, and of the exercise of executive power, from sources that I was hardly prepared for. The gentlemen who make these complaints have been for the last four or five years upholding and defending such executive acts and powers. I presume that the explanation of these complaints at this time is, that executive power has not been exercised so as to promote the party and personal objects of those who make such complaints, otherwise we should never have heard them. The mode in which the present President of the United States has intervened in the reorganization of State governments in the late rebellious States has been a subject of their animadversion, and I presume that the real grievance is, that the Executive did not proceed to an extent to satisfy certain radical gentlemen. If, for example, the President, in addition to exerting his moral power, or even his official power to induce the late rebellious States to abolish slavery by their new constitutions, to ratify the amendment of the Constitution abolishing slavery throughout the United States, and to repudiate their rebel debt, had advanced one other step, and had imposed on those States as another and indispensable condition upon which they would receive his assent to be restored to their proper relations in the Union, that they should concede to negroes the right of suffrage, I doubt not we would have heard no complaint whatever from that quarter of the interference of the Executive in the matter of the reconstruction of those State governments. I presume there is no gentleman in this Chamber who is supporting the proposition now under debate who would not concede that if all the States lately in insurrection had elected Senators and Representatives, of whatever position in relation to the rebellion, and had also sent up their several constitutions with provisions securing to their negro and white populations equal suffrage, he would without objection have advocated the admission of such Senators and Representatives. I have no doubt that to all the radical members of both Houses negro suffrage would have been the "open sesame" for full congressional representation for each State whose constitution guaranteed it.

Mr. President, in this matter of the admission of the Representatives of the southern States I am not a partisan. I am contending for a great constitutional principle. If the party to which I once belonged, or any party to which I might belong, were to occupy the position of the majority of the Senate in relation to that subject, and were now opposing the admission of Senators from the southern States, I would make war upon that position and all its supporters, because I regard the exclusion of the southern States from representation in the two Houses of Congress as revolutionary, as subversive of the most important principle of our Government. I regard it practically as a dissolution of the Union by the two Houses of Congress; and as earnestly and zealously as I opposed a dissolution of the Union by the secession of the southern States, so I would stand in opposition to a dissolution of the Union, either permanently or temporarily, in the form of the exclusion of the Senators and Representatives of the eleven southern States from their seats in Congress.

Mr. President, we have a mixed form of Government, partly national, partly Federal, and partly State. Our form of Government is fashioned by the Constitution. Every power vested in the Government, and the distribution of all powers among the different departments and officers, are provided for in the Constitution. It is further a fundamental principle of our Government that it was created by the States acting as separate sovereignties. As the honorable Senator from Maryland [Mr. JOHNSON] said yesterday, when the States in 1787 entered upon the work of forming this Government, each State was sovereign and independent, as much so as any nation in the world. These separate sovereignties then proceeded to organize a common Government by each ceding to it the same portion of their separate sovereignty and political powers, and retaining all the residue except what was enumerated in the deed of cession, the Constitution. All political sovereignty and powers were thus divided between the States and the United States.

I hold these to be truisms in our system:

1. Every political power, every particle of sovereignty that was not delegated by the Constitution to the General Government, and that is not prohibited by the Constitution to be exercised by the States, still belongs to the States respectively.

2. All the powers of the General Government are distributed among three departments—the legislative, the executive, and the judicial.

3. Neither department has one iota more of power than is vested in it by the Constitution.

4. Congress is clothed with the whole legislative, the President with the whole executive, and the courts with the judicial power of the Government.

I hold that neither department of the Government can exercise one particle more of power than is organized by the Constitution and is vested by its words in that particular department. I propound this general principle, that the General Government can exercise no powers but what are conferred upon it by the Constitution; that if it collectively or by any of its departments or officers attempts to grasp any other powers, it is usurpation, and wholly unauthorized and void.

Laying down these general principles, I shall proceed to make some remarks relating more particularly to the subject-matter under consideration.

When the Constitution was formed it was well understood what were the States of the United States. Every independent sovereignty that was then in existence and united under the old Articles of Confederation was a State. Delegates from all of them, except Rhode Island, convened at Philadelphia for the purpose of forming a more efficient Government. By what authority was that Convention elected and did it proceed to frame a new Government? There was no power under the old Articles of Confederation to call such an assembly for such a purpose. It was appointed and organized without any authority or warrant except that of each State in sending its own delegates. It, however, was urged on by the law of necessity. The old system of government had so signally failed as to prove to the satisfaction of all the men of that day that it was wholly insufficient to answer the exigencies of the United States as a Government. They, therefore, the great men of the country, those who had carried it through the Revolution and who had established our liberty and our independence, saw that all the fruits of their long war and of their great sacrifices would be lost unless there was a more efficient form of government made for all the States. Therefore, ex officio, they wrote letters to the different States, urging upon the leading men of each to have delegates elected to meet in general convention for the purpose of forming a more efficient common Government. That Convention met and deliberated. It framed a written instrument that afterwards appeared with the impress of each State as constituting for them a common Government. It was signed by Washington as the President of that Convention, and the Convention recommended it to the people of the United States for their adoption. The Articles of Confederation conferred upon the Congress very limited and only advisory powers. It neither established nor authorized any courts. Its resolves were not laws, but mere recommendations to the States; they had no sanctions, no machinery to give them effect; they had no operation on individuals, but spoke through the State governments, and by them came to be habitually disregarded. The Articles of Confederation did not organize a Government, but formed merely a league for independent States; the proposed Constitution provided for a common Government for the States, was recommended by the Convention to be adopted by the people of each State as a separate sovereignty, to have no obligation upon any State until accepted and ratified by it, and none upon those which might ratify it unless it was accepted by at least nine. It was submitted to the people of the States acting by their sovereign conventions, and was ratified by all, and in this way it was stamped by the highest authority. But it was with a full understanding that it was simply a proposition of a plan of government, by wise and patriotic men, and it was recommended to the different States; and it was adopted by them, acting by their conventions, and thus received its first authority. But the conventions of Virginia, New York, Massachusetts, North Carolina, and other States, at the same time recommended numerous amendments, that were generally publicly debated; and if it had not been manifest that the most important would be adopted, the proposed Constitution would have been rejected. The most essential of those suggested amendments were adopted, and are the chief bulwarks of American liberty.

In this scheme of government we find this clause: "New States may be admitted by Congress into this Union;" and that is all the provision of the Constitution in relation to the subject of new States. It has been said in the course of this discussion, and truly, that when a State is once in the Union it is always in the Union. That position is true; and why is it true? Because there is no mode provided or contemplated in the Constitution by which a State of the Union can ever get out of it. The original thirteen States became permanent members of the Union when they adopted the Constitution and entered into the Union by becoming parties to the Government. That is their destiny until it is changed by revolution, and no force, no power short of successful revolution, can ever change the position of those States as members of the Union, or disrupt a single State of the Union from it. As Vermont, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, and all the subsequent new States were admitted into the Union, they became members of the United States upon precisely the same permanent law and condition; they were all States of the Union in perpetuity and all the time; and to be sometimes out and then again in without revolution was a legal impossibility.

What is done when a State is admitted into the Union? What is then required by the Constitution? She simply presents herself with a government of a republican form, and the question is submitted to Congress whether she shall be received as a new State into the Union or not. An act of Congress for that purpose is framed and passed; and so soon as that act has passed and her Senators and Representatives are admitted to their seats, the work is consummated. Nothing more is to be done. She may change her constitution in time of war or peace as often as she may please, and her change of constitution does not affect her position as a member of the Union so long as she adheres to a republican form of government; and even though she should change her government so as not to preserve a republican form, that change would not affect her position in the Union. She would continue de jure one of the United States. How would Congress take cognizance in the matter of a State having adopted a government not republican in form? It would simply declare the anti-republican features to be void and inoperative; the residue would remain in full force and effect, the State being all the time in the Union and possessed of all her constitutional rights and powers.

Mr. President, most of the old States have changed their constitutions at some time or other. The State of New York formed her first constitution in 1777. She had no mode prescribed in that constitution by which it should be amended or altered, yet it was amended twice by conventions of the people. In 1821 she met in general convention and formed another constitution, and in that constitution she provided a mode for its amendment; that mode required time and had some complexity; and in 1846 the State of New York determined to change her constitution again, and disregarding the forms of the proceeding required by it, she called summarily a sovereign convention of her people, which proceeded to form a new constitution, and repudiated the one of 1821. This action of the convention was ratified and confirmed by her people.

When the constitutions of 1821 and 1846 were framed, they both went quietly into operation, and the position of New York as one of our constellation of States was in no way perturbed, and Congress took no notice whatever of her having changed her constitutions. Their submission to Congress for its approval, or any rehabilitation of that State as one of the United States, was not dreamed of by any one. On the contrary, being a State in the Union, and having a republican form of government in 1787, when the Constitution of the United States was adopted, she changed it from time to time, and continued her relations with the Federal Government without any question. There was no congressional action whatever when New York or any other State changed its constitution. So long as the State government was preserved in a republican form, and the proper relations of the State with the United States were not disturbed, their government could not interfere; and its whole power of interference would be simply to reform what the State might improperly do in the premises.

I conclude, then, that the attempt of the rebel States to get out of the Union by secession, or by unsuccessful arms, has left them members of the Union as though they had never made such an attempt, and that their abortive efforts cannot be effectuated by Congress, or by the entire Government of the United States; that their entire power and duty is to hold all the States in the position of States in the Union, and where their proper relations are broken simply to restore, preserve, and perpetuate them.

Mr. President, Congress is expressly clothed with authority by the Constitution to call out the militia to suppress insurrections. I ask gentlemen whether there is any difference between an insurrection by the authority or the countenance of a State government and an insurrection without such authority; or, if you please, in defiance of it. Here, for example, is the great State of New York; she now has more than four million people. Suppose there was an insurrection in that State against the State government, and the United States Government moved to suppress it, and the State government adhered to the Union and took part against the insurgents, and, with such assistance, the General Government suppressed the insurrection; every man engaged in the insurrection against the State government and the United States Government would be guilty of treason. But I ask the difference in principle, in constitutional provision, in punishment, or for any other legal consequences, between rebels who had thus reared the standard of revolt independently and in defiance of the State government, and of those rebels who have the sanction and all the cooperation and aid which their State governments can give them. The States cannot commit treason or any other crime against the United States, and consequently there is no punishment or forfeitures declared against States, no modes to try or punish States. Crimes can be perpetrated, according to our system and laws, only by individuals, natural persons, and it is only individuals and natural persons that can be punished. The individuals, natural persons, who make war against the United States, or who adhere to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort, commit treason and are subject to its punishment, whether they act under or in defiance of the State authorities; their crime, their punishment, and all the legal consequences are precisely the same whether the insurgents act in obedience to or against the State authorities.

The governments of eleven States arrayed themselves in favor of the late insurrection. But in Missouri, Kentucky, and Maryland, the State governments adhered to the United States, although many of the people of each of those States entered into the rebel armies; while in the revolted States many of their citizens were faithful to the United States. The whole law which governed the rebellion having no application whatever to States, all the States as political organizations continued unaffected by it; but all individual persons who embarked in the rebellion became equally subject to the law of treason, without any regard to the course of the State governments of which they were citizens.

Mr. President, these hasty remarks lead me to the conclusion that these States as States were not in the rebellion at all. It was an impossibility for the State governments to assume that position; they could not take upon themselves that delinquency. They could not give the form and relationship of State governments to the rebellion at all. They could in no way modify the character of the rebellion or of the rebels by connecting the State government with it. It remained as it would have been if there had been no effort to enlist the State governments in the rebellion, simply the crime of individuals. Jefferson Davis would not be responsible as the president of the confederate States, nor would any of the Governors of the confederate States be responsible as Governors of their respective States. Their delinquency, their crime, their responsibility and punishment, the denunciation by the Constitution and the law of their acts, are against them as individuals, and not as officials either of the confederate government or of the State governments of the confederate States.

If this position be true, here is the pretext for assuming now that an act of Congress is necessary to the readmission of the rebel States into the Union? They have never been out of it legally. In contemplation of the Constitution and law they have never been out of it. They were no more out of it in the midst of the rebellion when the wager of battle seemed most unpromising to the United States

SENATE.

Representation of Southern States—Mr. Davis.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

than they are now. They are out of it as much now as they were then. They were not out of the Union at either time; they were a portion of the United States whose people were in a revolt and rebellion against the Government of the United States, and that was all.

But the honorable Senator from Maine exclaims, shall these men assume a position of hostility to the General Government, and will you allow those who were engaged in this hostile conflict against their own Government to come back and take seats on the floor of the two Houses of Congress? He assumes that the laws of conquest apply to the rebels as they do between independent States internationally. No sir. The honorable Senator from Maryland stated that position truly in his speech some days ago. This insurrection was not a "war" in the sense in which that term is used in our Constitution and in the sense in which it is used by the laws of nations. Congress is authorized by the Constitution to declare war. To declare war against whom? Not against a State. All the contemporary expositors held, and the Supreme Court have again and again decided, that Congress cannot declare war against a State, and a State cannot declare war against the General Government any more than the General Government can declare war against a State. That sort of relation between the States and the United States is impossible. It cannot exist under our system. It resolves itself, then, simply into this, that a portion, if you please a larger portion, of the people of certain States arrayed themselves individually against the United States Government and resisted its authority by force of arms. They are simply guilty of insurrection. They committed a domestic offense. They are guilty of the crime of treason. While they have arms in their hands and are in the shock of battle they may be shot down as public enemies, because the Constitution permits the militia to be called out for the purpose of suppressing insurrection; and while military resistance exists anywhere, that term in the Constitution and its necessary significance permit them to be pursued with arms in the hands of the pursuers and a resort to all the means, forces, and usages of civilized warfare, while the resistance is continued, but no longer.

But, Mr. President, as the Senator from Maryland said, it is not a war power, it is a police power. There may be a riot in the United States in resistance to its authority; there may be sedition in the United States in the resistance of the execution of its laws and authority. There may be an insurrection. They are all crimes and offenses of the same class, of different degrees; and the highest grade of offense which our Constitution recognizes is that of an insurrection. It is a domestic offense. It is a simple resistance by persons who were bound to obey the laws, to their execution, and they are to be put down by the great police power of the nation, not by war technically. International belligerent rights do not apply to the rebels or the United States Government. There is no conquest or rights of conquest; there is no subjugation or forfeiture further than it is declared by law and enforced by the judgment of the civil courts. Obedience to law and punishment of individuals for crimes committed are the only legitimate ends to be effected by the Government. Most of the people of the southern States became insurgents. That was a state of things which the Constitution contemplated might exist, and for which it made provision, and what provision did it make? Congress shall have power—

"To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions."

Now, shall we have a Government of delegated powers? The instrument by which all the power that this Government possesses was received is the Constitution. I have read this clause of the Constitution to show what power Congress has over the matter of insurrection, and it is simply the power to suppress it. Has Congress any more or additional power than to suppress the insurrection? If it has any other power, from whence is it derived and where is the language of the Constitution that confers it? Here is all the power with which Congress is clothed over the subject of the late or any other insurrection. The President directs the military power of the nation so far as that power is in commission. It is the duty of the President to see that the laws be faithfully executed; and it is his function to apply all the forces which the laws have placed in his hands to this end. In addition to that there is that special provision in the fifteenth paragraph of the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution which declares that Congress shall have power—

"To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions."

Will any gentleman tell me what other power Congress has over the subject of insurrection than what is imparted in the words which I have read? What other act in relation to that matter has Congress the right to do? Congress is authorized to call forth the whole militia of the country if it be necessary to suppress any insurrection. That is all the power that Congress has over this subject of insurrection. If it is not, and Congress has other power, I again ask for the provision of the Constitution which authorizes any other or additional act in relation to insurrection to be performed either by Congress or the President. Whenever the insurrection is suppressed, the work of both Congress and the President is fully and completely performed, and all governmental power over the subject is exhausted.

I will now prove from the Constitution, the laws of Congress, and the decisions of the Supreme Court, that the power to determine when any portion of the country is in a state of insurrection belongs to the President exclusively; that he as the Commander-in-Chief of the armies and navies of the United States has a right to control and direct all the military power, land and naval, for the suppression of the rebellion, and that he has the exclusive right to decide for himself and for the Government and for the people when the insurrection has been suppressed; that Congress has no cognizance whatever over these points. I here assume to you, Mr. President, and to such gentlemen as are present, that Congress has passed organic laws to carry this clause of the Constitution into operation, to wit, to suppress insurrection and to enforce the execution of the laws; that by those laws in their form and letter, as recognized and passed upon by the Supreme Court itself, Congress vested in the President the exclusive power to decide when the country was invaded, when any portion of the country was in a state of insurrection, and when there was domestic violence in a State; that Congress has no power, since the passage of those laws, to decide those questions at all, but that their decision rests exclusively with the President of the United States without any intermeddling by Congress.

I will read that clause of the Constitution again, and in connection with it a portion of the laws of Congress that have been passed to carry it into operation. Congress shall have power—

"To call forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions."

The first law to give effect to that clause was passed in May, 1792, and the second section of it provides:

"That whenever the laws of the United States shall be opposed, or the execution thereof obstructed, in any State by combinations too powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, or by the powers vested in the marshals by this act, the same being notified to the President of the United States by an associate justice or the district judge, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States to call forth the militia of such State to suppress such combinations, and to cause the laws to be duly executed."

This law was passed before the whisky insurrection of Pennsylvania. It will be observed that before the President could act so as to call forth the militia to enforce the execution of the laws of Congress, the state of resistance to their execution there must be certified to the President by the judge of the district court. Congress became satisfied that this mode was too dilatory, and consequently in 1795 it passed a supplementary law, authorizing the President himself to take notice of such state of case as it provided for, without the intervention of the judge. I will read the second section of that act:

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That whenever the laws of the United States shall be opposed, or the execution thereof obstructed, in any State by combinations too powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, or by the powers vested in the marshals by this act, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States to call forth the militia of such State or of any other State or States as may be necessary to suppress such combinations, and to cause the laws to be duly executed; and the use of the militia so to be called forth may be continued, if necessary, until the expiration of thirty days after the commencement of the next session of Congress."—United States Statutes-at-Large, p. 424.

It will be seen that the President is made the organ by this latter act of Congress, for the purpose of determining when the country is in a state of insurrection, and when the exigencies of the Government require the militia to be called out to enforce the execution of the law. These laws have been before the Supreme Court for their construction, in the case of Luther vs. Borden, 7 Howard. I will read several extracts from the opinion of the court rendered by Chief Justice Taney. On the points of the existence of the State government, what it was, and who were its incumbents, the opinion says:

"But the courts uniformly held that that inquiry proposed to be made belonged to the political power and not the judicial; that it rested with the political power to decide whether the charter government had been displaced or not; and when that decision was made the judicial department would be bound to take notice of it as the paramount law of the State, without the aid of oral evidence or the examination of witnesses; that according to the laws and institutions of Rhode Island no such government had been recognized by the political power; and that the charter government was the lawful and established government of the State during the period in contest; and that those who were in arms against it were insurgents and liable to punishment."—7 Howard, 89.

Page 42:

"The fourth section of the fourth article of the Constitution of the United States provides that 'the United States shall guaranty to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of the Legislature, or of the Executive, (when the Legislature cannot be convened,) against domestic violence.' Under this article of the Constitution it rests with Congress to determine what government is the established one in a State. For as the United States guaranty to each State a republican form of government, Congress must necessarily decide what government is established in the State before it can determine whether it is republican or not. And when the Senators and Representatives of a State are admitted into the councils of the Union, the authority of the government under which they are appointed, as well as its republican character, is recognized by the proper constitutional authority. And its decision is binding on every other department of government and could not be questioned in a judicial tribunal."

In the same case (7 Howard, 42), the court said:

"So too, as relates to the clause in the above-mentioned article of the Constitution, providing for cases of domestic violence. It rested with Congress, too, to determine upon the means proper to be adopted to fulfill this guarantee. They might, if they had deemed it most advisable to do so, have placed it in the power of a court to decide when the contingency had happened which required the Federal Government to interfere. But Congress thought otherwise, and no doubt wisely; and by the act of February 28, 1795, provided that 'in case of an insurrection in any State against the government thereof, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States, on application of the Legislature of such State, or of the Executive, (when the Legislature cannot be convened,) to call forth such number of the militia of another State or States as may be applied for, as he may judge sufficient to suppress such insurrection.'"

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Representation of Southern States—Mr. Davis.

SENATE.

Again, on page 43:

"By this act, the power of deciding whether the exigency had arisen upon which the Government of the United States is bound to interfere is given to the President. He is to act upon the application of the Legislature or of the Executive, and consequently he must determine what body of men constitute the Legislature, and who is the Governor, before he can act. The fact that both parties claim the government cannot alter the case, for both cannot be entitled to it. If there is an armed conflict like the one of which we are speaking, it is a case of domestic violence, and one of the parties must be in insurrection against the lawful government. And the President must of necessity decide which is the government, and which party is unlawfully arrayed against it, before he can perform the duty imposed upon him by the act of Congress."

On page 44:

"In the case of foreign nations, the Government acknowledged by the President is always acknowledged by the courts of justice. And this principle has been applied by the act of Congress to the sovereign States of the Union."

Here is the principle that is at the pith of the proposition that is now pending before the Senate. I read from page 44:

"It is said that this power in the President is dangerous to liberty, and may be abused. All power may be abused if placed in unworthy hands. But it would be difficult, we think, to point to any other hands in which this power would be more safe, and at the same time equally effectual."

"At all events, it is conferred upon him by the Constitution and laws of the United States, and must therefore be respected and enforced in its judicial tribunals."

"A question very similar to this arose in the case of Martin vs. Mott, 12 Wheaton, 20-31. The first clause of the first section of the act of February 28, 1795, of which we have been speaking, authorizes the President to call out the militia to repel invasion. It is the second clause in the same section which authorizes the call to suppress an insurrection against a State government. The power given to the President is such and is the same—with this difference only, that it cannot be exercised by him in the latter case, except upon the application of the Legislature or the Executive of the State."

"The case above mentioned arose out of a call made by the President, by virtue of the power conferred by the first clause; and the court said that 'whenever a statute gives a discretionary power to any person to be exercised by him upon his own opinion of certain facts, it is a sound rule of construction that the statute constitutes him the sole and exclusive judge of the existence of those facts.' The grounds upon which that opinion is maintained are set forth in the report, and are, we think, conclusive. The same principle applies to the case now before the court."

I will now read a short extract from that opinion in Wheaton, rendered by Mr. Justice Story:

"If we look at the language of the act of 1795, every conclusion drawn from the nature of the power itself is strongly fortified. The words are, 'whenever the United States shall be invaded, or be in imminent danger of invasion, &c., it shall be lawful for the President, &c., to call forth such number of the militia, &c., as he may judge necessary to repel such invasion.' The power itself is conferred to the Executive of the Union, to him who is, by the Constitution, 'the Commander-in-Chief of the militia when called into the actual service of the United States,' whose duty it is to 'take care that the laws be faithfully executed,' and whose responsibility for an honest discharge of his official obligations is secured by the highest sanctions. He is necessarily constituted the judge of the existence of the exigency in the first instance, and is bound to act according to his belief of the facts. If he does so act, and decides to call forth the militia, his orders for this purpose are in strict conformity with the provisions of the law, and it would seem to follow as a necessary consequence, that every act done by a subordinate officer in obedience to such orders, is equally justifiable. The law contemplates that under such circumstances, orders shall be given to carry the power into effect; and it cannot therefore be a correct inference that any other person has a just right to disobey them. The law does not provide for any appeal from the judgment of the President, or for any right in subordinate officers to review his decision and in effect defeat it. Whenever a statute gives a discretionary power to any person, to be exercised by him upon his own opinions of certain facts, it is a sound rule of construction that the statute constitutes him the sole and exclusive judge of the existence of those facts. And in the present case we are all of opinion that such is the true construction of the act of 1795. It is no answer that such a power may be abused, for there is no power which is not susceptible of abuse. The remedy for this, as well as for all other official misconduct, if it should occur, is to be found in the Constitution itself."

Here is a compend of the whole matter. The fifteenth paragraph of section eight of article one of the Constitution provides that Congress shall have power—

"To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof."

This general clause gives to Congress an indefinite power to pass all laws which shall be necessary to execute its enumerated powers, among which is one to provide "for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions." This act of 1795, and the act of July, 1861, are made under this general power vested by that clause of the Constitution in Congress. Congress is authorized to invoke all subsidiary powers necessary to carry the express powers given to it into operation. Among those express powers is one to call out the militia to suppress insurrection, to repel invasion, to put down domestic disorders in a State, and to enforce the due execution of the laws of Congress where they are resisted by combinations too powerful for the marshal with his ordinary posse comitatus to overrule. Then Congress in the exercise of this general power passed a law with this section:

"That whenever the laws of the United States shall be opposed, or the execution thereof obstructed, in any State by combinations too powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, or by the powers vested in the marshals by this act, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States to call forth the militia of such State, or of any other State or States, as may be necessary to suppress such combinations and to cause the laws to be duly executed."

What states of case do this clause of the Constitution and this section of the act of 1795 provide for? The Constitution contemplated that a State might be disturbed by a domestic insurrection; that the United States might be invaded; that there might be insurrection against the Government of the United States, and that the execution of its laws might be resisted by combinations too powerful to be put down by the marshal and his posse comitatus. It therefore expressly declared that Congress should have power to act whenever the country was in either of those conditions. Congress was given power to pass such laws as should be necessary and proper for rectifying the disturbed condition of the country. Congress has so legislated in reference to the very case of this insurrection. Here has been a resistance in the southern States to the due execution of the laws of Congress. That resistance has been headed by combinations too powerful to be put down by the marshal and his posse comitatus. Congress, by its act of 1795, the second section of which I have just read, provides that to correct such a disorder as that the President shall not be required to wait for the certificate of the judge of the United States court, but he himself, upon his own information, upon his own volition, shall decide when the country is in such a state of case as to require him to call out the militia for the purpose of enforcing the due execution of the law and putting down the insurrection.

What has the Supreme Court in the cases of Luther vs. Borden, and Martin vs. Mott, decided in relation to these questions? That Congress has expressly vested in the President the power to order out the militia to meet such demands of the Government and the country. The Supreme Court has proceeded to consider and to expound this law in the two cases from which I have just read; and it has decided explicitly that the sole and exclusive power over the whole subject is given by the law of Congress into the hands of the President. It is for the President to decide when the laws are resisted by such a combination. The court holds that it is his sole and exclusive function to decide that point. The court further decides, that when the President has determined that such a state of case exists, he has the exclusive power to call out the militia forces of the States to the extent authorized by law into the service of the United States for the purpose of enforcing the due execution of the law. If he has the right to do this, as Commander-in-Chief he has the right to conduct the military operations to put down this resistance to the execution of the law. He has not only the right to say when this state of case has arisen, but he necessarily has the right to decide how long it continues and when it terminates.

Let me illustrate this by the example of the whisky insurrection in the State of Pennsylvania. That was an insurrection, a resistance by an armed mass of people to the due execution of the law. That exigence gave rise to the passage of the act of 1795. The Supreme Court in passing upon that act say expressly that the President, if that act had been in existence at the time of the whisky insurrection, would have had the sole and the exclusive right to decide the fact whether the laws were resisted by such a combination or not, and that if he determined that they were so resisted, he would have had the right to call out the militia of the State, and as much of the militia of the adjoining States, within the limits of the law, according to his discretion, for the purpose of enforcing the execution of the law. Congress was necessarily excluded from all right to act in the case.

Now, sir, let us apply these principles to the case of the southern States in which the people rose in resistance to the execution of the laws of the United States. Whose office, whose duty was it to decide when they thus resisted the execution of the laws of the United States? It was the function of the President of the United States. The law of 1795 authorized him to do so, required him to make that decision, and commanded him to call out the militia for the due execution of the laws of Congress. The Supreme Court in both the cases from which I have read decided that Congress by the passage of the act of 1795 vested the President with the sole and exclusive power to determine that point himself, and that his decision cannot be appealed from; that it is final, conclusive, and exclusive. The court said in terms that the President had the exclusive right to decide that question. If he has a right when the country is in a state of insurrection to order out the militia, he has necessarily a right to decide when the military power has suppressed it. He orders the militia into the service of the United States; he orders them and the United States Army also to march upon an expedition to put down the obstructions to the execution of the law. Everybody embraced by that order must obey it. The Supreme Court has decided that this order of his is dominant; that it controls and commands the courts as well as all military and civil officers. It has been decided that he himself in virtue of this clause of the Constitution making him Commander-in-Chief, and the act of Congress, is clothed with the sole and exclusive power to decide that question of insurrection and to suppress it by force of arms.

The further question whether the President has the power to decide when insurrection is put down, I admit is not expressly determined by the Supreme Court, nor is there any opinion upon that point suggested, but that is a sequence necessary of the principle which it did sustain. When it decided that the act of 1795 gives to the President the sole and exclusive right to determine when the country is invaded; when a State has such a domestic disturbance in it as requires the President, upon the application of the Governor or the Legislature of that State, to intervene with the military power of the United States for the purpose of putting down the disorder; when they decided that the act of 1795 authorized the President himself, without the intervention of a district judge or of any other officer, civil or military, to determine that the laws of Congress are resisted in a State by a combination too powerful to be put down by the marshal and his posse comitatus; and that he having adjudged that to be the state of the case, orders the militia and the military power to march to the scene of invasion or resistance or disturbance, their position that he had the discretionary and sole power to determine the existence of the facts which required his intervention necessarily involved the principle that he was to decide when the force which his duty required to be interposed should also be withdrawn.

What is the reason of the thing? Why is he authorized by the law of Congress to order out the militia or military force? It is to sweep away the obstruction to the due execution of the laws. When that is removed all is accomplished which the Constitution or the law or reason permits to be done. The normal state of things is restored; obedience from refractory citizens to the law and their submission to its due execution are brought about. Then, of course, the continuance of the application of military power is to cease. Would it not be absurd to say that the President has the right under the Constitution and the law, as decided by the Supreme Court in these two cases, to precipitate the military power upon a refractory population for the simple purpose of enforcing the due execution of the law, and when that has been achieved and the law is no longer resisted in its execution, but is peacefully and quietly submitted to by the insurgents, that the President has not the power to say that the cause for the interposition of the military power had ceased and to recall that power?

Mr. President, I will now make this point: here is the law of Congress vesting the powers on which I have been remarking, in the President. If Congress were to attempt itself to execute those powers without a repeal of the law, or were to pass a law vesting them in some other officer than the President, and that officer or Congress were to resist forcibly the President in the execution of such powers, that resistance would be treasonable. No power can rightfully interfere with the President in the execution of those laws, and if it be made he would properly remove it by the application of the necessary force.

Mr. President, each House of Congress is by the Constitution made the judge of the returns, elections, and qualifications of its own members. The State Legislatures elect Senators to Congress; and the Senate is made by the Constitution the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its members. In the exercise of this power I admit the Senate may inquire into the fact of an election by a State Legislature; but when they have reached that point they cannot proceed beyond it and inquire into the regularity of the organization of the Legislature. Has the Senate the right to inquire and decide whether the members of a Legislature have been elected? No, sir. When the Senate, in the matter of judging of the election of its members, reaches the fact the choice has been made by the body acting as the State Legislature it can proceed no further, but must recognize and admit as a Senator the person chosen by that body, if he present the proper return. To inquire into the loyalty of the different members of the Legislature, and such matters, would carry the Senate into an unknown and shoreless sea, and far beyond the safe and constitutional power of the Senate.

But, sir, in conclusion, I will state another point. Gentlemen in the majority dash along here as though they had the Government and the world in a sling. They do not occupy anything like as strong a position as they imagine. I here announce that in ten days from this time the members of this Senate who are in favor of the admission of the southern Senators and the President of the United States could legally and constitutionally place every one of those Senators in his seat; and it is a plain and demonstrable constitutional proposition. The President is required by the Constitution to communicate with Congress, and from time to time give it information of the state of the Union and recommend such measures as he shall deem necessary and expedient. Have gentlemen reflected what power is imported in those few short words? The Supreme Court has settled the principle that where the President is called upon to sustain the government of a State, by suppressing domestic violence, he necessarily has the power himself to ascertain and determine which is the regular government, where there are two in conflict. Apply that principle to the present case. Here is a provision in the Constitution which requires the President to communicate to the two Houses of Congress information as to the state of the Union and to recommend to them such measures as he shall deem proper and expedient. What does this necessarily impose upon him? He has to ascertain what men compose the two Houses of Congress. It is his right, it is his constitutional function, to ascertain who constitute the two Houses of Congress. The members of the Senate who are in favor of the admission of the southern Senators could get into a conclave with those southern Senators any day, and they would constitute a majority of the Senate. The President of the United States has the constitutional option, it is his function, it is his power, it is his right, and I would advise him to exercise it, to ascertain, where there are two different bodies of men both claiming to be the Senate, which is the true Senate. If the southern members and those who are for admitting them to their seats constitute a majority of the whole Senate, the President has a right, and by the Eternal he ought to exercise that right forthwith, to-morrow, or any day, to recognize the Opposition in this body and the southern members, the majority of the whole body, as the true Senate. And then what would become of you gentlemen? Oh, if the lion of the Hermitage, and that great statesman, the sage of Ashland, were here in the seat of power, how soon would they settle this question! They would say to, and they would inspire those to whom they spoke, "You southern men are kept out of your seats by violence, by revolution, against the Constitution, against right; the Union is dissolved, the Government is brought to an end by keeping the Senators from eleven States out of their seats when the Constitution expressly states that every State shall have two Senators."

These States have submitted. Has not the insurrection been suppressed? What else is to be done? Was it not suppressed ten months ago? Have not rebel armies surrendered? Are not their whole population disarmed? At the bidding of the President have they not put in their constitutions a clause abolishing slavery in their respective States? Have they not adopted the amendment to the Constitution of the United States abolishing slavery throughout the United States? Have they not in addition repudiated the rebel national debt, if I may use the term? What other evidences of submission could they give? What man not demented by passion, or interest, or some other worse influence could deny for a single moment that this insurrection is suppressed? It is suppressed. Was there ever an insurrection more effectually suppressed? Christopher Columbus is not more dead than the late rebellion is dead. What other evidence can these people give of their loyalty, of their obedience to the Constitution and laws? What terms are they to submit to? What other conditions do you wish to impose upon them?

The Senator from Illinois says nobody wants to keep them out. They want to get in, and why in the name of reason, then, are they not allowed to come in? There is no difficulty at all if that be the true sentiment here; but it is not the true sentiment. We all know that it is not the true sentiment. They are to be treated as a conquered, subjugated, and enslaved enemy. That is not the sense of the Constitution. It is not the spirit in which insurrections are to be put down under its authority. When a domestic enemy, if you please, to our Government and country submits and gives all evidence of submission; not pretexts, not feigned submission, but deep, honest, and abiding as the gallant people of the South have: when they have surrendered every soldier they had in the field and have no longer a bayonet or lance to oppose the authority of the United States; when they have submitted to be disarmed, and there are not arms enough for a battalion in the southern States; when they are accepting first one humiliating condition suggested by the President, and then another, and then another, and are asking all the time for a restoration to their proper relations to the Government of the United States, why are they still refused? They are loyal. They are more loyal than those who keep them out of their rights. I would sooner trust them to-day as the true and devoted friends of our country and Government than the men who trample upon the Constitution still further to oppress them.

You cannot keep them out always, Senators. The time will come when there will be a recoil and a terrible recoil. This country is becoming impatient, indignant, and outraged by this paltering with the liberties of the southern people and with the fundamental principles of our Constitution. Whenever the President chooses to grasp the remedy it is at his hand.

Mr. CONNESS. May I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. DAVIS. No, sir. When I get through I will answer every question the honorable Senator may propound.

There is no plainer principle of constitutional law than that the President has the right to ascertain and decide what body of men is the Senate and what the House of Representatives when there are two bodies of men claiming to be each. He is to communicate with the two Houses of Congress. Before he can communicate he must ascertain what men constitute the Senate and what men constitute the House. It is his right to do so, and the people of America will sustain him in the noble and manly and patriotic performance of his duty in determining the identity of the true House. It ought to have been done at the beginning of this session. When a petty clerk took upon himself to read the list of the Representatives of the people of the United States, and to keep the Representatives of eleven States out of their seats, the Constitution guaranteeing to them those seats for the benefit of their constituents and country, that subordinate never ought to have been tolerated for one day in the perpetration of so great an outrage. Whenever Andrew Johnson chooses to exercise his high function, his constitutional right of saying to the southern Senators, "Get together with the Democrats and the Conservatives of the Senate, and if you constitute a majority I will recognize you as the Senate of the United States," what then will become of you gentlemen? You will quietly come in and form a part of that Senate.

Political Questions of the Day.

SPEECH OF HON. GEORGE F. MILLER,
OF PENNSYLVANIA,
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
July 28, 1866,

On the general political questions of the day.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, when the present Congress assembled on the 4th day of December last, among the many important national questions presented, one was whether the eleven States lately in rebellion were in a proper condition to send Representatives to Congress; and in order to have that question fully investigated a concurrent resolution was adopted on the 13th day of December, 1865, by the two Houses as follows:

"Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That a joint committee of fifteen members shall be appointed, nine of whom shall be members of the House and six of the Senate, who shall inquire into the condition of the States which formed the so-called 'confederate States of America,' and report whether any of them are entitled to be represented in either House of Congress, with leave to report at any time by bill or otherwise."

Under which resolution nine members were appointed by the Speaker of the House, and six by the President of the Senate, making the fifteen contemplated by the resolution. This joint committee on reconstruction, thus appointed, organized and entered upon the duties of their appointment, and after taking a large amount of testimony and making a thorough examination as to the status of these eleven States, recommended an amendment to the Constitution of the United States which passed the Senate by a vote of 38 to 11, and the House of Representatives by 138 to 36, (being more than a two-thirds vote,) in the following form:

Joint Resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, (two thirds of both Houses concurring.) That the following article be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by three fourths of said Legislatures, shall be valid as part of the Constitution, namely:

ARTICLE —.

SEC. 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

SEC. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

SEC. 3. No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two thirds of each House, remove such disability.

SEC. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void.

SEC. 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

The above adoption of this proposed amendment is indispensable, especially in regard to representation. Under the provisions of the Constitution of the United States of 1787 all colored freemen in the slave States and three fifths of the slaves were represented, although none of them were entitled to vote. Those States had nineteen Representatives of colored slaves, and as the slaves are now free they can add for the other two fifths thirteen more, making the slave representation thirty-two. Suppose the free blacks prior to the emancipation of the slaves will give at least five more, making the representation of non-voting people of color about thirty-seven. The full number of Representatives from the slave States at the breaking out of the rebellion was seventy. Add the other two fifths and it will be eighty-eight; thus giving to the late slaveholding States a large representation for a non-voting population, which may be the means of their having a preponderance in Congress, which would certainly be vesting the States lately in rebellion with a power that might be wielded with injury and embarrassment to the Government. But why should they be vested with such extraordinary functions? If it is inexpedient to clothe the colored man with the elective franchise, certainly no one ought to exercise it for him. Hence the stern necessity of the adoption of the proposed amendment, which also extends protection to that race.

A diversity of opinion prevails as to the propriety of extending to the colored race the elective franchise. To me, Mr. Speaker, this question seems to belong entirely to the respective States to decide, and that evidently is the construction placed by statesmen upon the Constitution of the 17th of September 1787, and as I have said on other occasions it has now become too firmly settled to be shaken. In my own State the constitution confines the elective franchise to citizens who are white free men of the age of twenty-one years, and that constitution can only be changed in two ways: first, by calling a convention; and secondly, by an amendment or amendments proposed in the Senate or House of Representatives, and if the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each House, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered on their Journals with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and the secretary of the Commonwealth shall cause the same to be published three months before the next election in at least one newspaper in every county in which a newspaper shall be published; and if the Legislature next chosen shall agree to such proposed amendment or amendments by a majority of the members elected to each House, the secretary of the Commonwealth shall cause the same to be published in the manner aforesaid, and such proposed amendment or amendments shall be submitted to the people in such manner and at such times, at least three months after being so agreed upon by the two Houses, as the Legislature shall prescribe. And if the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments by a majority of the qualified voters of the State voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become part of the constitution.

While the State I have the honor to represent in part refuses negro suffrage by her constitution, I would not vote for any act of Congress to extend that right over any other State, leaving that question to the respective States. In the District of Columbia Congress has exclusive jurisdiction, and may try the experiment, if an experiment it is. I do not apprehend as much danger in allowing the black man a vote as some imagine. One thing is true, and that is that they are loyal to the Government of the United States, while many whites who claim to exercise that sacred right are the contrary. In Pennsylvania the black man voted prior to the amended constitution of 1838. And under the constitution of the great State of New York a man of color who shall have been for three years a citizen of the State and for one year next preceding any elections shall have been seized and possessed of a freehold estate of the value of $250, over and above all debts and incumbrances charged thereon, and shall have been actually valued and paid a tax thereon, shall be entitled to vote. I understand that at the last presidential election several thousand colored men voted in that State; yet no apprehension was had that the colored men would be forced into the jury-box, raised to a judgeship, or placed in any office, or be thrust into the social circle of the whites, nor has any party in that State asked for a change of the constitution. Attempted prejudice against the black man is gotten up by demagogue politicians.

I am aware, sir, that aspirants for office are trying to get up a prejudice against the Union party in Congress because they want to see the colored man who fought to save this Republic protected. I do not wish to be understood to be in favor of giving the colored man the right of suffrage against the will of the majority of the people of any State and on this subject I think I speak the sentiments of the majority of this House; that is the spirit of the proposed amendment of the Constitution of the United States which we lately passed and submitted to the States, some of which through their Legislatures have already ratified it, among which is Tennessee, which is one of those States lately in rebellion, and we have in response admitted her loyal Representatives to seats on this floor, and if the other States that rebelled desire representation they must follow the example of Tennessee. The preservation of this Union depends on Congress standing firm and united on this point. It has been said by politicians that the colored population will emigrate to the northern States. This is a great mistake. The northern climate is not suitable to the black man, while that of the South is congenial to his nature. What induced him to leave the South in former years was to escape from bondage, but as slavery is now abolished and protection afforded, the South is where that race will emigrate, and instead of southern colored men coming North to live it is more likely that those born in the North will make the South their home.

The recent bold and daring conduct of the rebels clearly demonstrates that the policy of President Johnson in regard to the States lately in rebellion is inadequate to afford protection to loyal citizens of the South, and render sufficient security to the Government, while that of Congress (in my opinion) is the only true mode of reconstruction, and the one that will place our Government on a firm and substantial basis and be a preventive against future rebellions. It is now for the people to say whether they will sustain Congress or not in their efforts to render our Government secure. This is no time to be week-kneed. One side or the other must be taken. Plutarch takes notice of a very remarkable though just law of Solon which declared "every man infamous who in any seditious or civil dissensions in the State should continue neutral and refuse to side with either party." Surely every lover of his country desires permanent security and a safeguard against another rebellion. We have expended too much treasure and lost too many precious lives to sustain this Republic to allow rebels to dictate terms to us. If the amendment to the Constitution of the United States that we have recently passed is ratified by the requisite number of the States we will have a bright future.

OUR COUNTRY.

The United States has 3,000,000 square miles of territory and 200,000 square miles of productive territory, or one fifteenth of the whole. Each acre contains 80,000 tons of coal, (of which only 20,000 are available or in workable beds in the aggregate.) We now produce over 20,000,000 tons of coal, including home and colliery consumption, and sell 20,000,000 tons annually. Our total resources in coal at 20,000 tons per acre are 3,740,000,000 tons. Of this amount about 27,073,000,000 tons are anthracite. We have also inexhaustible beds of iron ore and precious metals. These resources are available located; they are in proximity with the widest and most fertile plains, the richest soils known to man. They are open to development by ocean, lakes, or magnificent rivers, and are or will be traversed by railroad from ocean to ocean. Their value is incalculable; their extent boundless; their richness unequalled; and their quantity immeasurable. The wealth they represent cannot be told in figures. To make our country what it ought to be we must have a protective tariff in order to build up manufactories so as to consume our own agricultural products and put a stop to the immense drain of gold to enrich the manufacturers of Europe. We now produce over $2,500,000,000 of manufactures annually which consume about $2,000,000,000 of agricultural products in food, raw material, &c.; yet we are paying the skill and sagacity of the manufacturers of Europe nearly $100,000,000 annually in gold over and above our exchanges, value for value; while the manufacturers of Europe never took more than $80,000,000 of our agricultural products, exclusive of cotton, in any one year, and generally considerably less.

It is said we have incurred a large debt in consequence of the late war in putting down the rebellion. True it is, but it is small compared to that of other nations, as the following will show when we take into consideration our own resources:

Statement of the different national debts, together with the population and average amount per capita to each inhabitant.

Name.	Debt.	Popula- tion.	Av'g amt per capita.
Great Britain.....	$4,000,000,000	30,000,000	$133 38
United States.....	3,000,000,000	35,000,000	87 70
France.....	2,000,000,000	36,500,000	54 79
Russia.....	1,155,000,000	75,000,000	15 40
Austria.....	1,125,000,000	35,000,000	32 14
Spain.....	535,000,000	16,000,000	33 44
Netherlands.....	465,000,000	3,000,000	155 00
Prussia.....	210,000,000	18,000,000	11 66
Portugal.....	150,000,000	4,000,000	37 50
Belgium.....	130,000,000	4,500,000	28 88
Bavaria.....	130,000,000	4,500,000	28 88
Brazil.....	88,000,000	7,700,000	11 43
Denmark.....	60,000,000	2,600,000	23 10
Hanover.....	48,000,000	2,000,000	24 00
Wurtemberg.....	40,000,000	1,800,000	22 23
Hamburg.....	25,000,000	1,700,000	14 77
Greece.....	23,000,000	222,000	103 60
Greece.....	20,000,000	1,000,000	20 00

The following is an estimate of the receipts and expenditures of the United States Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1866:

Receipts.
Customs, first, second, and third quarters, actual.....	$132,871,519 25
Customs, fourth quarter, estimated.....	46,505,359 35
	$179,376,878 60
Lands, first, second, and third quarters, actual.....	$488,311 40
Lands, fourth quarter, estimated.....	243,228 21
	731,539 61
Amount carried forward.....	$180,108,418 21

Amount brought forward.....	$180,108,418 21
Internal revenue, first, second, and third quarters, actual.....	$245,369,074 50
Internal revenue, fourth quarter, estimated.....	64,141,853 87
Miscellaneous, first, second, and third quarters, actual.....	$48,478,119 41
Miscellaneous, fourth quarter, estimated, including direct tax.....	18,463,365 64
Direct tax, first, second, and third quarters, actual.....	1,486,118 05
Total.....	$558,046,954 68
Expenditures.
Civil, first, second, third, and fourth quarters, actual.....	$41,017,922 85
Interior, first, second, third, and fourth quarters, actual.....	18,852,455 91
War, first, second, third, and fourth quarters, actual.....	284,449,701 82
Navy, first, second, third, and fourth quarters, actual.....	43,364,118 52
Interest on public debt, first, second, and third quarters, actual.....	$96,919,456 38
Interest on public debt, fourth quarter, estimated.....	36,219,903 52
	133,139,359 90
Total.....	$520,823,559 00

From this statement it will be seen that the receipts exceed the expenditures $37,223,395 68 after payment of the interest on the public debt, and $284,449,701 82 for the War, and $43,364,118 52 for the Navy. The large amount of expenditures for the past year was caused by the payment of the Army and Navy, and as the greater portion of them are now discharged that expenditure will be small for the next fiscal year; consequently a large sum can be applied to the liquidation of the national debt.

If, Mr. Speaker, our Government is properly and judiciously administered, we will advance in prosperity and strength. But should those who have for the past four years been endeavoring to destroy this Republic, in council chamber and on fields of battle, be in power and permitted to mold the destinies of the nation, we will have a gloomy and foreboding prospect. There will be no security for life or property—no permanent faith in the lasting security of our institutions. The hecatombs that have strewn the field of carnage or perished in the prison-pens of the South will all be in vain.

God forbid that the leading rebels should ever sit in the councils of the nation or participate in the affairs of the Government. Go to Arlington Heights where once the arch-traitor Lee, who was educated by the United States, resided, and indulged in all the luxury the land afforded, and what do we see? Thousands upon thousands of graves containing the bodies of Union soldiers whose lives this man directed in destroying, and here and there you will find a grave marked "unknown," but not unwept. What a satisfaction it would be to some dear relative to be able to designate the body which that grave contains; but alas! that cannot be done; it can only be recognized by friends at the final resurrection. How mortifying it is to every lover of the Union to see leading rebels who caused so much misery throughout the land stalking about, bold and impudent, and even asking to aid in the administration of the Government!

And now, Mr. Speaker, as we are about to separate and return to our constituents after an arduous session of eight months, it is for them to say whether they will sustain us in our efforts to save the country. I am aware that many demagogues and aspiring politicians find fault with our proceedings, but I am willing to submit them to the scrutiny of a candid people. I assert here, as I will before my constituents, that I will not vote for the admission of Representatives from any of the States lately in rebellion which refuse to ratify the late amendment to the Constitution that we have submitted to the respective States, for I deem it indispensable for the security and permanency of our Government. With proper safeguards thrown around, and a firm reliance in Him in whose hands alone a country can prosper, this great nation will endure until time is no more, and be an asylum for the oppressed of all nations, and not like the ancient republics which through their luxury and wickedness fell to rise no more; for, as Mr. Montagu has said—

"Greece, once the nursery of arts and sciences, the faithful mother of philosophers, lawyers, and authors now lies prostrate under the iron yoke of ignorance and barbarism; Carthage, once the mighty sovereign of the ocean, and the center of universal commerce, which poured the riches of the nations into her lap, now puzzles the inquisitive traveler in his researches after even the vestiges of her ruin; and Rome, the mistress of the universe, which once contained whatever was esteemed great or brilliant in human nature, is now sunk into the ignoble feast of whatever is esteemed mean and infamous."

LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

PUBLIC ACTS OF THE THIRTY-NINTH CONGRESS

OF THE

UNITED STATES,

Passed at the First Session, which was begun and held at the City of Washington, in the District of Columbia, on Monday, the 4th day of December, A. D. 1865, and ended on Saturday, the 28th day of July, A. D. 1866.

ANDREW JOHNSON, President. LA FAYETTE S. FOSTER, President of the Senate. LA FAYETTE S. FOSTER was elected President of the Senate pro tempore on the 7th day of March, and so acted until the end of the Session. SCHUYLER COLFAX, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[The Index to the Laws follows the Index to the Appendix.]

CHAPTER I.—An Act to amend an Act entitled “An Act providing for the Selection of Jurors to serve in the several Courts of the District of Columbia.”

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That if at any time it shall occur that all of the names in the box provided for in the fourth section of the act to which this is an amendment shall have been drawn out of the same at any term of the court before the first day of February next ensuing, the court, or any judge thereof, may order the marshal to summon from the body of Washington county twenty-three citizens, having the qualifications of jurors, as provided in said act, to serve as grand jurors, and twenty-six citizens, having such qualifications, to act as petit jurors, or either, as may be needed at any subsequent term of the court to be held between the time of the happening of the contingency aforesaid and the first day of February then next ensuing; and vacancies in either grand or petit jurors so ordered to be summoned as aforesaid may be filled by other persons summoned by the marshal upon the order of the court.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That whereas all the names in the jury-box provided for by the fourth section of the act to which this is an amendment were, at the late term of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, sitting for the trial of crimes and misdemeanors, drawn from said box, the judge assigned to hold the December term of said court for the year eighteen hundred and sixty-five, be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to order the marshal to summon from the body of Washington county twenty-three citizens, having the qualifications of jurors, as provided in the act to which this is an amendment, to act as grand jurors for said term of said court, and twenty-six citizens, having such qualifications, to act as petit jurors for said term, and that vacancies in said grand and petit jurors may be filled as provided for in the first section of this act.

APPROVED, December 18, 1865.

CHAP. II.—An Act to prevent the Spread of foreign Diseases among the Cattle of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the importation of cattle be, and hereby is, prohibited. And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to make such regulations as will give this law full and immediate effect, and to send copies of them to the proper officers in this country, and to all officers or agents of the United States in foreign countries.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That when the President shall give thirty days' notice, by proclamation, that no further danger is to be apprehended from the spread of foreign infectious or contagious diseases among cattle, this law shall be of no force, and cattle may be imported in the same way as before its passage.

APPROVED, December 18, 1865.

CHAP. III.—An Act making Appropriation for refurnishing and repairing the President's House.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of thirty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, be and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for refurnishing the President's House and repairing the same.

APPROVED, December 19, 1865.

CHAP. V.—An Act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to appoint Assistant Assessors of Internal Revenue.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to appoint any assistant assessors of internal revenue now provided by law.

APPROVED, January 15, 1866.

CHAP. VI.—An Act making Appropriations for the Payment of invalid and other Pensions of the United States for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and additional Appropriations for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the payment of pensions for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven:

For invalid pensions under various acts, five millions five hundred thousand dollars.

For revolutionary pensions, and pensions of widows, children, mothers, and sisters of soldiers, as provided for by acts of March eighteenth, eighteen hundred and eighteen; May fifteenth, eighteen hundred and twenty-eight; June seventh, eighteen hundred and thirty-two; July fourth, eighteen hundred and thirty-six; July seventh, eighteen hundred and thirty-eight; March third, eighteen hundred and forty-three; June seventeenth, eighteen hundred and forty-four; February second, July twenty-first, and July twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and forty-eight; February third, eighteen hundred and fifty-three; June third, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight; and July fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and for compensation to pension agents and expenses of agencies, nine millions eight hundred thousand dollars.

For Navy pensions to widows, children, mothers, and sisters, as provided for by acts of August eleventh, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, and July fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, one hundred and forty thousand dollars, to be paid out of the Navy pension fund.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the following [sum] be, and the same is hereby, appropriated to supply a deficiency in the appropriation for the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated:

For revolutionary pensions and pensions of widows, children, mothers, and sisters of soldiers as provided for by acts of March eighteen, eighteen hundred and eighteen, May fifteen, eighteen hundred and twenty-eight, June seven, eighteen hundred and thirty-two, July four, eighteen hundred and thirty-six, July seven, eighteen hundred and thirty-eight, March three, eighteen hundred and forty-three, June seven, eighteen hundred and forty-four, February two, July twenty-one, and July twenty-nine, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, February three, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, June three, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, and July fourteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, two millions five hundred thousand dollars.

APPROVED, February 7, 1866.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

CHAP. VIII.—An Act to regulate the Registering of Vessels.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That no ship or vessel, which has been recorded or registered as an American vessel, pursuant to law, and which shall have been licensed or otherwise authorized to sail under a foreign flag, and to have the protection of any foreign Government during the existence of the rebellion, shall be deemed or registered as an American vessel, or shall have the rights and privileges of American vessels, except under the provisions of an act of Congress authorizing such registry.

APPROVED, February 10, 1866.

CHAP. IX.—An Act granting the franking Privilege to Mary Lincoln.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all letters and packets carried by post, to and from Mary Lincoln, widow of the late Abraham Lincoln, be conveyed free of postage during her natural life.

APPROVED, February 10, 1866.

CHAP. X.—An Act authorizing an Increase of the clerical Force in the Post Office Department.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, in addition to the clerical force now authorized by law in the Post Office Department, the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint and employ four clerks of class one, seven of class two, fourteen of class three, and four of class four; and said clerks shall be paid until the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, February 16, 1866.

CHAP. XII.—An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to prevent the Spread of foreign Diseases among the Cattle of the United States," approved December eighteen, eight hundred and sixty-five.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That an act entitled "An act to prevent the spread of foreign diseases among the cattle of the United States," approved December eighteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the importation of neat cattle and the hides of neat cattle from any foreign country into the United States is hereby prohibited: Provided, however, That the operation of this act, or any part thereof, shall be suspended as to any foreign country or countries, or any parts of such country or countries, whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall officially determine, and give public notice thereof, that such importation will not tend to the introduction or spread of contagious or infectious diseases among the cattle of the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered, and it shall be his duty, to make all necessary orders and regulations to carry this law into effect, or to suspend the same as therein provided, and to send copies thereof to the proper officers in the United States, and to such officers or agents of the United States in foreign countries as he shall judge necessary.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States, whenever in his judgment the importation of neat cattle and the hides of neat cattle may be made without danger of the introduction or spread of contagious or infectious disease among the cattle of the United States, may, by proclamation, declare the provisions of this act to be inoperative, and the same shall be afterwards inoperative and of no effect from and after thirty days from the date of said proclamation.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That any person convicted of a willful violation of any of the provisions of this act shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

APPROVED, March 6, 1866.

CHAP. XIII.—An Act to quiet the Title to certain Lands within the corporate Limits of the City of San Francisco.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all the right and title of the United States to the land situated within the corporate limits of the city of San Francisco, in the State of California, confirmed to the city of San Francisco by the decree of the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of California, entered on the eighteenth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, be, and the same are hereby, relinquished and granted to the said city of San Francisco and its successors, and the claim of the said city to said land is hereby confirmed, subject, however, to the reservations and exceptions designated in said decree, and upon the following trusts, namely: that all the said land, not heretofore granted to said city shall be disposed of and conveyed by said city to parties in the bona fide actual possession thereof, by themselves or tenants, on the passage of this act, in such quantities and upon such terms and conditions as the Legislature of the State of California may prescribe, except such parcels thereof as may be reserved and set apart by ordinance of said city for public uses: Provided, however, That the relinquishment and grant by this act shall not interfere with or prejudice any valid adverse right or claim, if such exist, to said land or any part thereof, whether derived from Spain, Mexico, or the United States, or preclude a judicial examination and adjustment thereof.

APPROVED, March 8, 1866.

CHAP. XV.—An Act to declare the Meaning of certain Parts of the Internal Revenue Act, approved June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in section one hundred and twenty of the act entitled "An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," approved June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, the words, "all dividends in scrip, or money thereafter declared due, and whenever the same shall be payable, to stockholders, policy-holders or depositors," are hereby declared to mean all dividends in scrip or money wherever payable, and all stockholders, policy-holders, depositors, or parties whatsoever, including non-residents, whether citizens or aliens.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That in section one hundred and twenty-two of said act the word "stockholders" is hereby declared to mean all persons or parties whatsoever that are or may be stockholders, including non-residents, whether citizens or aliens; and the words "all such interest or coupons, dividends or profits, whenever the same shall be payable," are hereby declared to apply to all such interest or coupons, dividends or profits wherever the same are or may be payable, and to whatsoever party or person the same are or may be payable, including non-residents, whether citizens or aliens.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of all persons required to make returns or lists of income and articles or objects charged with any duty or tax, as provided by the act aforesaid, or any act amendatory thereof, to declare in such returns whether the several rates and amounts therein contained are stated according to their values in legal-tender currency; and in case of neglect or refusal so to state, to the satisfaction of the assistant assessor receiving such returns or lists, such assistant assessor is hereby required to make returns or lists for such persons so neglecting or refusing, as in case of persons neglecting or refusing to make the lists or returns required by the acts aforesaid, and to assess the duty thereon, and to add thereto the amount of penalties imposed by law in case of such neglect or refusal.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That whenever the rates and amounts contained in the lists or returns as aforesaid shall be stated in coined money, it shall be the duty of each assessor receiving the same to reduce such rates and amounts to their equivalent in legal-tender currency, according to the value of such coined money in said currency at the time when and place where said lists or returns are receivable, and which value the said assessor shall determine. And the lists required by law to be furnished to collectors by assessors shall in all cases contain the several amounts of taxes or duties assessed, estimated, or valued in legal-tender currency only.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of this act shall, so far as necessary, apply to all returns, lists, assessments, and collections required by the acts aforesaid in addition to those above mentioned, by whomsoever made, returned, assessed, or collected, in any mode or for any purpose whatever. And the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, is hereby authorized to make all necessary rules and regulations for carrying this act into effect.

APPROVED, March 10, 1866.

CHAP. XVI.—An Act to establish certain Post Roads.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following be established as post roads:

CALIFORNIA.

From Rio Vista, via Maine Prairie and Binghampton, to Silveyville.

From Red Bluff, via the Upper Sacramento river, Soda Springs, and Shasta Valley, to Yreka.

From Red Bluff, via Payne's Creek, Mill Creek, and Big Meadows, to Susanville.

From Chico, via Stony Creek and Coast Range, to Nome Cult.

From Cloverdale, via the Lakeport and Cloverdale Wagon Road, to Lakeport.

COLORADO.

From Central City, via Georgetown, to Argentine.

From Gold Dirt to South Boulder.

From Denver, via Mount Vernon and Idaho, to Empire City.

DAKOTA.

From Fort Wadsworth to Devils Lake.

INDIANA.

From Momence, Illinois, via Beaver Lake Ditch, Stringham's Point, and Pilot Grove, all in Newton county, Indiana, to Adriance, Indiana.

From Fulton, via Millville, to Keenawha.

IOWA.

From Boonsboro' to Panora.

From Winterset, via Quincy, Clarinda, and Marysville, to Savannah, in Missouri.

From Indianola, via Lawrenceburg and Liberty Centre, to Chariton.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG. ... 1ST SESS.

From Chariton, Lucas county, via Garden Grove, to Leon.

From Marshalltown, via Vienna, Wolf Grove, Fifteen-Mile Grove, and Grundy Centre, to New Hartford.

From Decorah to Hesper, in Winneshek county.

From West Mitchell, in Mitchell county, by Plymouth and Mason City, to Clear Lake, in Cerro Gordo county.

From Postville, via Lybrand and Ludlow, to Waukon, in Alamakee county.

KANSAS.

From Humboldt, Kansas, via Osage, Catholic Mission, and Chetopa, to Fort Gibson.

From Pleasant Hill, Missouri, via Blooming Grove, to Mound City, Kansas.

From Neosha Falls, Kansas, via Belmont, to Syracuse, in Wilson county.

From Fort Scott, via Mill Creek, Dayton, Mapleton, and Blue Mounds, to Garnett, tri-weekly.

From Verdigris Falls, via Virgil, to Pleasant Grove.

From Xenia to Walnut Hills.

From Council Grove to Albilene.

From Neosha Falls, via Mount Airy, to Liberty, in Woodson county.

From Emporia, via Madison, Shell Rock, Pleasant Grove, and Post Oak, to Fort Roe.

From Ottumwa, via Madison, Janesville, Eureka, and Darley's Mills, to Salt Spring.

From Enterprise, via Ottumwa, Sac and Fox Agency, Greenwood, Ottawa, and Paola, to Harrisonville, Missouri.

From Council Grove to Marion Centre.

From Ottawa, via James Carroll's, Jackson Mark's, and Mineral Point, to Burlington.

From Medina, via Oskaloosa, Winchester, and Easton, to Leavenworth.

From Lawrence, via Oskaloosa, to Grass-hopper Falls.

From Perryville, (located on the route of the Union Pacific railroad,) via Oskaloosa and Easton, to Leavenworth.

MAINE.

From Porter, via North Parsonfield, Parsonfield, and North Newfield, to West Newfield, in York county.

From North Acton, Maine, via Wakefield, to Union, New Hampshire.

From Woodman's Station, via New Gloucester and West Gloucester, to North Raymond, in Cumberland county.

From Poland to West Poland, in Andros-coggin county.

MASSACHUSETTS.

From North Falmouth, by Hatchville and East Falmouth, to Waquoit.

MICHIGAN.

From Coopersville to Squire's Ferry.

From Coopersville, via Mansfield Mills, Ravenna, Slocum's Grove, Whitney's Mill, and Moreland, to Squire's Ferry.

MINNESOTA.

From Paynesville, by Norway Lake, to Six-mile Timber, on Chippeway river.

From Hastings, via Cannon Falls, to Kenyon.

From St. Cloud to Fort Ripley, on the west bank of the Mississippi river.

From Watertown to Glencoe.

From Blue Earth city, Minnesota, to Yankton, Dakota Territory.

From Hutchinson, via Cedar, Greenleaf, Kandigoli, and Irving, to Torah.

From Henderson, by Arlington, New Auburn, Witadan Lake, and Fort Wadsworth, in Dakota Territory, to Fort Rice on Missouri river.

NEBRASKA.

From West Point, Cumming county, to Rock Creek, in said county, ten miles.

From Pawnee City, via Frieses Mills, Nebraska, to Seneca, in Kansas.

From Dakota City, via West Point, to Columbus.

From Brownsville, Nebraska, to Rockport, Missouri.

From Big Sandy, Jones county, to Rose Creek, Nuckolls county.

From Plattsmouth, via Glendale, South Bend, Ashland, Salt Creek, Rock Creek, Lancaster, Saline City, Saltillo, Centerville, Olive Branch, Clatona, to Beatrice.

From Plattsmouth, via 8 Mile Grove, to Weeping Water.

From Decatur, via Logan Valley, West Point, St. Charles, and Jalapa, to Fremont.

From De Soto, via Arizona, to Decatur.

NEVADA.

From Carson, by way of Ophir, Washoe City, and Steamboat Springs, to Huffaker's Ranch, all in Nevada.

From Ione, by way of Canon City, to Austin, all in Nevada.

From Austin to Cortez, in Nevada.

From Austin, by way of Kingston, Twin river, and San Antonio District, to Silver Peak, all in Nevada.

From Virginia, by way of Sacramento District, Unionville, Star, Dungen, and Paradise Valley, in Nevada, to Boise City, in Idaho.

NEW YORK.

From Unadilla, in the county of Otsego, via Sidney, Tompkins, and Masonville, to Cannonsville, in the county of Delaware.

The road from South New Berlin, in the county of Chenango, to Morris, in the county of Otsego, in the State of New York, is hereby declared to be a post road.

OHIO.

From New Carlisle, via Brant, to Dayton.

OREGON.

From Auburn to Clarksville.

From Dalles City, on the Columbia river, to Umatilla, in Umatilla county.

From Umatilla, by Le Grand, in Union county, to Baker City, in Baker county.

PENNSYLVANIA.

From Tylersport, in Montgomery county, to Seller's Tavern, in Bucks county.

VERMONT.

From Rassaumpsie, via South Danville, to Danville.

From South Danville to West Danville.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

From Wallula, by Antoine Plants, Peru, D'Orville Lake, and Hell Gate, to Helena, Montana Territory.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Change route numbered four thousand one hundred and twenty-five, (4,125,) from Midgetown, in Tyler county, to Ellenboro', in Ritchie county; and route Sisterville, in Tyler county, to Twigg, in Pleasant county.

WISCONSIN.

From Watome, Waushara county, to Grand Rapids, Wood county.

APPROVED, March 14, 1866.

CHAP. XVII.—An Act to extend the Time for the withdrawal of Goods for Consumption from public Store and bonded Warehouse, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That on and after the passage of this act, and until the first day of May, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, any goods, wares, or merchandise under bond, in any public or private bonded warehouse, upon which the duties are unpaid, may be withdrawn for consumption, and the bonds canceled, on payment of the duties and charges prescribed by law; and any goods, wares, or merchandise

deposited in bond, in any public or private bonded warehouse, on and after the first day of May aforesaid, and all goods, wares, or merchandise remaining in warehouse, under bond, on said first day of May, may be withdrawn for consumption within one year from the date of original importation, on payment of the duties and charges to which they may be subject by law at the time of such withdrawal; and after the expiration of one year from the date of original importation, and until the expiration of three years from said date, any goods, wares, or merchandise, in bond as aforesaid, may be withdrawn for consumption on payment of the duties assessed on the original entry and charges, and an additional duty of ten per centum of the amount of such duties and charges.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That neither this nor any other act shall operate to prevent the exportation of bonded goods, wares, or merchandise from warehouse within three years from the date of original importation, nor their transportation in bond from the port into which they were originally imported to any other port or ports for the purpose of exportation; and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

APPROVED, March 14, 1866.

CHAP. XVIII.—An Act to further secure American Citizens certain Privileges under the Treaty of Washington.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the Saint John river and its tributaries, owned by American citizens, and sawed or hewed in the Province of New Brunswick by American citizens, (the same being unmanufactured in whole or in part,) which is now admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty, shall continue to be so admitted under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time prescribe.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That this act shall take effect from and after the seventeenth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

APPROVED, March 16, 1866.

CHAP. XIX.—An Act in Relation to the Court of Claims.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the fourteenth section of an act approved the third day of March, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-three, entitled "An act to amend an act to establish a court for the investigation of claims against the United States," approved February twenty-fourth, eighteen [hundred] and fifty-five, be, and the same is hereby, repealed; and from the final judgment, or decree, in all cases heretofore decided by the Court of Claims, of the character mentioned in the fifth section of said act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, an appeal shall be allowed to the Supreme Court of the United States, at any time within ninety days after the passage of this act, except in such cases where the amounts found due by said court have been paid at the Treasury.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the regular session of the Court of Claims shall hereafter commence on the first Monday of December in each year.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That at the end of every term of the Court of Claims, the clerk of said court transmit a copy of the decisions thereof to the heads of Departments; to the Solicitor, Comptrollers, and Auditors of the Treasury; to the Commissioners of the General Land Office and of Indian Affairs; to the chiefs of bureaus; and to other officers charged with adjusting claims against the United States.

APPROVED, March 17, 1866.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

CHAP. XX.—An Act to amend an Act to extend the Charter of the President and Directors of the Fireman's Insurance Company of Washington and Georgetown, in the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth sections of the act to incorporate the president and directors of the Firemen's Insurance Company of Washington and Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, approved March third, eighteen hundred and thirty-seven, and which was extended by the act approved February seventh, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, be, and the same hereby are, repealed; the fire companies which existed at the time of the passage of said acts, and upon which existence said sections were based, having ceased to exist.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the stock of said Firemen's Insurance Company shall be issued, sold, transferred, and held in the same manner that the same might have been issued, sold, transferred, and held had those sections never existed.

APPROVED, March 17, 1866.

CHAP. XXI.—An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to incorporate a National Military and Naval Asylum, for the Relief of the totally disabled Officers and Men of the volunteer Forces of the United States."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States, Secretary of War, Chief Justice of the United States, and such other persons as from time to time may hereafter be associated with them, according to the provisions of this act, are hereby constituted and established a board of managers of an establishment for the care and relief of the disabled volunteers of the United States Army, to be known by the name and style of "The National Asylum for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers," and have perpetual succession, with powers to take, hold, and convey real and personal property, establish a common seal, and to sue and be sued in courts of law and equity; and to make by-laws, rules, and regulations for carrying on the business and government of the asylum, and affix penalties thereto: Provided, That such by-laws, rules, and regulations are not inconsistent with the laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the business of said asylum shall be managed by a board of twelve managers, who shall elect from their own number a president, who shall be the chief executive officer of the board, two vice presidents, and a secretary; and seven of the board, of whom the president or one of the vice presidents shall be one, shall form a quorum for the transaction of business at any meeting of the board.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the board of managers shall be composed of the President and Secretary of War and Chief Justice of the United States, ex officio, during their terms of office, together with nine other citizens of the United States, not members of Congress, no two of whom shall be residents of the same State, but who shall all be residents of States which furnished organized bodies of soldiers to aid in the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, (no person being ever eligible who gave aid or countenance to the rebellion,) to be selected by joint resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives immediately after the passage of this act. The term of office shall be for six years, and until others are appointed in their places, after the first election, which shall be of three for six years, three for four years, and three for two years, to be determined by the order in which they shall be named in the resolution. New elections shall be made by joint resolution of Congress, and vacancies by death, resignation, or otherwise, to be filled in like manner. No member of the board of managers shall receive any compensation as such member; but his traveling and other actual expenses while upon the business of the asylum may be paid. But any member of the board having other duties connected with the asylum may receive a reasonable compensation therefor, to be determined by the board.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the board of managers shall have authority to procure for early use, at suitable places, sites for military asylums for all persons serving in the Army of the United States at any time in the war of the rebellion not provided for by existing laws, who have been or may hereafter be disqualified for procuring their own maintenance and support by reason of wounds received or sickness contracted while in the line of their duty during the present rebellion, and to have the necessary buildings erected, having due regard to the health of location, facility of access, and capacity to accommodate the persons provided for in this act.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That for the establishment and support of this asylum there shall be appropriated all stoppages or fines adjudged against such officers and soldiers by sentence of court-martial or military commission, over and above the amounts necessary for the reimbursement of the Government or of individuals; all forfeitures on account of desertion from such service; and all moneys due such deceased officers and soldiers, which now are or may be unclaimed for three years after the death of such officers and soldiers, to be repaid upon the demand of the heirs or legal representatives of such deceased officers or soldiers. And the said board of managers are hereby authorized to receive all donations of money or property made by any person or persons for the benefit of the asylum, and to hold or dispose of the same for its sole and exclusive use.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the officers of the asylum shall consist of a governor, a deputy governor, a secretary, and a treasurer, and such other officers as the board of managers may deem necessary, to be appointed from disabled officers serving as before mentioned, and they may be appointed and removed from time to time, as the interests of the institution may require, by the board of managers.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the following persons only shall be entitled to the benefits of the asylum, and may be admitted thereto, upon the recommendation of three of the board of managers, namely: all officers and soldiers who served in the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, and not provided for by existing laws, who have been or may be disabled by wounds received or sickness contracted in the line of their duty; and such of these as have neither wife, child, nor parent dependent upon them, on becoming inmates of this asylum, or receiving relief therefrom, shall assign thereto their pensions when required by the board of managers, during the time they shall remain therein or receive its benefits.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the board of managers shall make an annual report of the condition of the asylum to Congress on the first Monday of every January after the passage of this act; and it shall be the duty of the said board to examine and audit the accounts of the treasurer and visit the asylum quarterly.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That all inmates of the asylum shall be, and they are hereby, made subject to the Rules and Articles of War, and will be governed thereby in the same manner as if they were in the Army of the United States.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the managers of the asylum shall have power and authority to aid persons who are entitled to its benefits by out-door relief in such manner and to such extent as they may deem proper, provided such relief shall not exceed the average cost of maintaining an inmate of the asylum.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That so much of the act to which this is an amendment as provides for the establishment of a naval in connection with a military asylum, and so much of said act as provides that all stoppages of fines adjudged against naval officers and seamen by sentence of courts-martial or military commission, all forfeitures on account of desertions from the naval service, and all moneys due to deceased naval officers and seamen which are or may be unclaimed for three years after the death of such officers or seamen, shall be appropriated for the establishment of the asylum contemplated and provided for by this act and the act of which it is amendatory, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That all the property of the United States now at Point Lookout, St. Mary's county, Maryland, shall be and become the property of the asylum so soon as a title to the satisfaction of the board of managers shall be made to the asylum of at least three hundred acres of land, including that on which said property of the United States is now built and maintained or held.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That Congress may at any time hereafter alter, amend, or repeal this act.

APPROVED, March 21, 1866.

CHAP. XXII.—An Act quieting Doubts in Relation to the Validity of certain Locations of Lands in the State of Missouri, made by Virtue of Certificates issued under the Act of Congress of February the seventeenth, eighteen hundred and fifteen.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all locations of lands in the State of Missouri, purporting to have been made by virtue of certificates issued under the act of Congress, approved February the seventeenth, eighteen hundred and fifteen, entitled "An act for the relief of the inhabitants of the late county of New Madrid, in the Missouri Territory, who suffered by earthquakes," which are invalid in consequence of having been made or located after the expiration of the time specified by law for making said locations, shall be, and the same are hereby declared to be, as valid, and as binding, as if the said locations had been made and fully completed within the time prescribed by law, provided said locations shall be according to law in all other respects; but the foregoing provisions of this section shall not apply to, comprehend, include, or extend to any land within township forty-five, north of the base line, in range seven, east of the fifth principal meridian line in said State of Missouri.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the United States do hereby grant, relinquish, and convey, in fee-simple, and in full property, to James Y. O'Carroll, or his legal representatives, all of the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to all of the land within survey-number two thousand four hundred and ninety-eight, in township forty-five, north of the base line in range seven east of the fifth principal meridian line, in the State of Missouri, being the same land that was located by virtue of certificate number one hundred and fifty, issued to the said James Y. O'Carroll, or his legal representatives, under the act of Congress approved February the seventeenth, eighteen hundred and fifteen, entitled "An act for the relief of the inhabitants of the late county of New Madrid, in the Missouri Territory, who suffered by earthquakes:" Provided, however, That nothing in this section shall grant, relinquish, or convey the whole or any part of any lot, tract, piece, or parcel of land in said township, which has been heretofore confirmed by the United States to any person or persons, or to the legal representatives of any person or persons: And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to invalidate or impair any patent heretofore issued by the United States, or shall in any manner abridge, divest, impair, injure, or prejudice any valid adverse right, title, or interest of any person or persons in or to any portion or part of the aforesaid land which is granted, relinquished, and conveyed by this act.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

APPROVED, March 21, 1866.

CHAP. XXIV.—An Act more effectually to provide for the Punishment of certain Crimes against the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That if any person or persons shall falsely make, alter, forge, or counterfeit; or cause or procure to be falsely made, altered, forged, or counterfeited; or willingly aid or assist in the false making, altering, forging, or counterfeiting any bond, bid, proposal, guarantee, security, official bond, public record, affidavit, or other writing for the purpose of defrauding the United States; or shall utter or publish as true, or cause to be uttered or published, as true, any such false, forged, altered, or counterfeited bond, bid, proposal, guarantee, security, official bond, public record, affidavit, or other writing, for the purpose of defrauding the United States, knowing the same to be false, forged, altered, or counterfeited; or shall transmit to, or present at, or cause or procure to be transmitted to, or presented at, the office of any officer of the United States, any such false, forged, altered, or counterfeited bond, bid, proposal, guarantee, security, official bond, public record, affidavit, or other writing, knowing the same to be false, forged, altered, or counterfeited, for the purpose of defrauding the United States; every such person shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of felony, and being thereof duly convicted, shall be sentenced to be imprisoned, and kept at hard labor, for a period not exceeding ten years, or be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both of said punishments in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if any offense shall be committed in any place which has been, or shall hereafter be, ceded to, and under the jurisdiction of the United States, which offense is not prohibited, or the punishment thereof is not specially provided for by any law of the United States, such offense shall, upon conviction in any court of the United States having cognizance thereof, be liable to, and receive the same punishment as the laws of the State in which such place is, or may be situated, now in force, provided for the like offense when committed within the jurisdiction of such State; and no subsequent repeal of any such State law shall affect any prosecution for such offense in any of the courts of the United States.

APPROVED, April 5, 1866.

CHAP. XXV.—An Act to provide for the transfer of the Custody of the Library of the Smithsonian Institute to the Library of Congress.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the library collected by the Smithsonian Institution under the provisions of an act approved August tenth, eighteen hundred and forty-six, shall be removed from the building of said institution, with the consent of the regents thereof, to the new fire-proof extension of the Library of Congress, upon completion of a sufficient portion thereof for its accommodation, and shall, while there deposited, be subject to the same regulations as the Library of Congress, except as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That when such library shall have been so removed and deposited, the Smithsonian Institution shall have the use thereof in like manner as it is now used, and the public shall have access thereto for purposes of consultation on every ordinary week day except during one month of each year, in the recess of Congress, when it may be closed for renovation. All the books, maps, and charts of the Smithsonian library shall be properly cared for and preserved in like manner as are those of the Congressional Library, from which the Smithsonian library shall not be removed except on reimbursement by the Smithsonian Institution to the Treasury of the United States of expenses incurred in binding and in taking care of the same, or upon such terms and conditions as shall be mutually agreed upon by Congress and the regents of said Institution.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Smithsonian Institution, through its secretary, shall have the use of the Library of Congress, subject to the same regulations as Senators and Representatives.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Librarian of Congress shall be authorized to employ two additional assistants, who shall receive a yearly compensation of eight hundred dollars, and one thousand dollars, respectively, commencing July one, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the sum of five hundred dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to defray the expenses of the removal herein provided for.

APPROVED, April 5, 1866.

CHAP. XXVI.—An Act to provide for a Term of the District Court for the District of Minnesota, to be held at the City of Winona in said District.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That hereafter, and until otherwise provided by law, there shall be held, annually, on the first Monday in June, a term of the district court of the United States for the district of Minnesota at the city of Winona, in said district, and all process, writs, and recognizances, civil and criminal, which may have been, or may hereafter be, issued and made returnable at Mankato, shall be returned to the said term of the said court at the said city of Winona, in like manner and with the like effect as if originally made returnable thereto.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all acts or parts of acts which require a term of said court to be held at Mankato, in said district, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

APPROVED, April 5, 1866.

CHAP. XXVII.—An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act for the Relief of Seamen and others borne on the Books of Vessels wrecked or lost in the Naval Service," approved July four, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in case any officer of the Navy or Marine corps on board a vessel in the employ of the United States which, by any casualty, or in action with the enemy, has been or may be sunk or otherwise destroyed, shall thereby have lost his personal effects, the proper accounting officers are hereby authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of the Navy, to allow to such officer a sum not exceeding the amount of his sea pay for one month, as compensation for said loss: Provided, That such loss has not occurred through the negligence or want of skill or foresight of the officer making application for such loss: Provided, That the accounting officers shall in all cases require a schedule and certificate from the officer making the claim for effects so lost: And provided further, That no allowance shall be made by virtue of this act for any loss incurred prior to the nineteenth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-one.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That so much of the seventh section of the act of Congress, approved February twenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act for enrolling and calling out the national forces, and for other purposes,' approved March third, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-three," as provides that "the bounty money which any mariner or se[a]man enlisting from the Army into the Navy may have received from the United States, or from the State in which he enlisted in the Army, shall be deducted from the prize money to which he may become entitled during the time required to complete his military service," be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

APPROVED, April 6, 1866.

CHAP. XXVIII.—An Act making additional Appropriations, and to supply the Deficiencies in the Appropriations for sundry civil Expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, and to supply deficiencies in the appropriations, for the service of the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, namely:

SURVEY OF THE COAST.

For the survey of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts of the United States, including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, and excluding pay and emoluments of officers of the Army and Navy and petty officers and men of the Navy employed in the work, one hundred and twenty thousand dollars.

For continuing the survey of the western coast of the United States, including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, seventy-five thousand dollars.

For continuing the survey of the reefs, shoals, and keys of South Florida, including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, and excluding pay and emoluments of the officers of the Army and Navy and petty officers and men of the Navy employed in the work, eleven thousand dollars.

For publishing the observations made in the progress of the survey of the coast of the United States, including compensation of civilians employed in the work, four thousand dollars.

For repairs of steamers and sailing schooners used in the coast survey, twenty thousand dollars.

For pay and rations of engineers for steamers used in the hydrography of the coast survey, no longer supplied by the Navy Department, six thousand dollars.

LIGHT-HOUSE ESTABLISHMENT.

For the Atlantic, Gulf, and Lake coasts, viz:

For supplying the light-houses and beacon-lights with oil, wicks, glass chimneys, and other necessary expenses of the same, and repairing and keeping in repair the lighting apparatus, one hundred and eighty-three thousand two hundred and eighty-seven dollars.

To supply deficiency in estimate for supplies of oil, wicks, glass chimneys, and other necessary expenses of the same, and repairing and keeping in repair the lighting apparatus, seven thousand dollars.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

For repairs and incidental expenses of light-houses and lighted beacons, one hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

To supply a deficiency in estimate for repairs and incidental expenses of light-houses, fifty thousand dollars.

For salaries of five hundred and eighty-nine keepers of light-houses and lighted beacons, and their assistants, two hundred and thirteen thousand one hundred and ninety-three dollars and thirty-three cents.

For salaries of forty-three keepers of light-vessels, twenty-three thousand nine hundred dollars.

For mates' and seamen's wages, repairs, supplies, and incidental expenses of forty-three light-vessels, two hundred and eighteen thousand nine hundred and seventeen dollars and seventy-five cents.

To supply deficiency in estimates for seamen's wages, repairs, supplies, and incidental expenses for light-vessels, twenty-three thousand three hundred and twenty-one dollars and seventy-five cents.

For expenses of weighing, cleaning, repairing, painting, replacing, and supplying losses of buoys, chains, moorings, and incidental expenses of the same, and for repairing and keeping in repair all the day-marks, beacons, spindles, and monuments, and for expenses of coloring and numbering all the buoys and beacons, one hundred and twelve thousand three hundred and fifty dollars.

For expenses of visiting and inspecting lights and other aids to navigation, two thousand dollars.

For the coasts of California, Oregon, and Washington:

For supplying light-houses and beacon-lights with oil, glass chimneys, and wicks, chamois skins, polishing powder, and other cleaning materials, transportation, and expenses of keeping lamps and machinery in repair, thirty-three thousand and thirty dollars.

For repairs and incidental expenses of light-houses and lighted beacons, fifteen thousand dollars.

For salaries of forty keepers and assistant keepers of light-houses, at an average not exceeding eight hundred dollars per annum, thirty-two thousand dollars.

For expenses of raising, cleaning, painting, repairing, remooing, and supplying losses of floating buoys and beacons, and for chains and sinkers for the same, and for coloring and numbering all the buoys, ten thousand dollars.

To supply deficiency in estimate for raising, cleaning, painting, remooing, and supplying losses of buoys, fifty thousand dollars.

For special works, viz:

For rebuilding sea-wall at Sand's Point light-station, New York, fourteen thousand eight hundred dollars.

For rebuilding sea-wall and repairs to tower at Nayat Point light-house, Rhode Island, six thousand five hundred dollars.

For replacing the present stakes at Whitehall Narrows, New York, by approved structures, nine thousand four hundred dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Little Gull Island light-station, New York, three thousand dollars.

For a new light-house on Hart Island, New York, or vicinity, six thousand six hundred dollars.

For a new light-house on North Brother Island, or vicinity, East River, New York, eight thousand five hundred dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Split Rock light-station, Lake Champlain, nine thousand six hundred dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Galloo Island light-station, fifteen thousand dollars.

For beacons in Providence river, Rhode Island, on Conanicut and Bullock's Points, in addition to previous appropriations, seventeen thousand dollars.

For banking in light-house site at Cohansey,

Delaware bay, four thousand five hundred dollars.

For a new iron stairway at Cape Henlopen light-house, twelve thousand dollars.

For a new light-house at Sharp's Island, Maryland, fifteen thousand dollars.

For new lanterns at Clay Island, Fog Point, Watt's Island, Turkey Point, Havre de Grace, and Fishing Battery light-houses, six thousand dollars.

For a new iron stairway at Cape Henry light-house, Virginia, twelve thousand dollars.

For new iron stairways at Cape Lookout and Cape Hatteras light-houses, North Carolina, twenty thousand dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Turtle Island light-station, Ohio, twelve thousand dollars.

For rebuilding Green Island light-house, Ohio, thirteen thousand seven hundred dollars.

For protecting the foundation on which Waugoshance light-house is constructed, ninety thousand dollars.

For renovations and repairs at Windmill Point light-house, Lake Saint Clair, three thousand five hundred dollars.

For rebuilding outer-range light at Cedar Point, Sandusky bay, Ohio, twenty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

For range lights at Portage entry, Michigan, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For new keeper's dwelling at Beaver Island light-station, Michigan, five thousand eight hundred dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Marquette light-station, Michigan, thirteen thousand dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Cooper Harbor light-station, Michigan, thirteen thousand seven hundred dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Ontonagon light-station, Michigan, fourteen thousand dollars.

For beacon-lights at the mouth of Fox river, Wisconsin, six thousand dollars.

For a beacon-light on the landing at Santa Barbara, California, six thousand seven hundred dollars.

To enable the Light-House Board to reestablish lights and other aids to navigation discontinued by the enemy on the southern coast, one hundred thousand dollars.

To enable the Light-House Board to experiment with new illuminating apparatus and fog signals, three thousand four hundred dollars.

For a new light-house at the mouth of North river, Albemarle sound, North Carolina, fifteen thousand dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Tybee light-house, Georgia, twenty thousand dollars.

For rebuilding light-house at Presque Isle, Pennsylvania, (Lake Erie,) upon the most eligible site under the control of the Light-House Board, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Mamagada light-station, Detroit river, seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Kenosha light-station, Wisconsin, four thousand dollars.

For repairs and preservation of public buildings, especially southern buildings, fifty thousand dollars.

For furniture, carpets, and miscellaneous items for the same, fifteen thousand dollars.

For continuation of the north wing of the Treasury extension, two hundred thousand dollars.

For completion of the Dubuque, Iowa, custom-house, post office, and United States court-room, fifteen thousand dollars.

For completion of alterations of the Cincinnati custom-house, twenty-two thousand dollars.

For completion of alterations of the Philadelphia custom-house, thirty thousand dollars.

For payment of claims due for the constructing and furnishing the Baltimore court-house, one hundred and nine thousand dollars.

For payment of claims due for the repair of Government warehouses and construction of wharves, Staten Island, New York, twenty-nine thousand dollars.

For burglar-proof safes, or vaults, twenty thousand dollars.

For heating of old Treasury building, ten thousand dollars.

For office furniture and repairs of furniture and miscellaneous expenses for Treasury bureaus, Washington, twenty thousand dollars.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS.

For error in compensation of employes in the Interior Department, to wit: one messenger, at one thousand dollars, and two assistants, at eight hundred and forty dollars each, forty dollars.

For compensation of two night watchmen at the President's House, at six hundred dollars, each, per annum, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For additional compensation of twenty per centum to two night watchmen, at six hundred dollars each, two hundred and forty dollars.

For deficiency due the Navy Department, for use of pile-driver, men, oil, and engine, while repairing navy-yard bridge, two thousand nine hundred and fifty-nine dollars and sixty-six cents.

For deficiency in consequence of relaying and repaving all the crossings of the streets intersecting Pennsylvania avenue, on the north side, from the Capitol to the Treasury Department, ten thousand dollars.

For deficiency in repairing the conservatory at the President's House, seven thousand five hundred dollars.

To enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to properly refurnish and repair the President's House, in conformity with his estimate, forty-six thousand dollars, the old furniture to be disposed of under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior.

For purchase of coal and pay of firemen to warm the Library of Congress, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For care, support, medical and surgical treatment for forty transient paupers; medical and surgical patients, in some proper medical institution in the city of Washington, to be selected by the Commissioner of Public Buildings, twelve thousand dollars.

For hire of carts on the public grounds, two thousand dollars.

For purchase and repair of tools used in the public grounds, four hundred dollars.

For purchase of trees and tree-boxes, to replace, when necessary, such as have been planted by the United States, to whitewash tree-boxes and fences, and to repair pavements in front of the public grounds, three thousand dollars.

For annual repairs of the Capitol, water-closets, public stables, water-pipes, pavements, and other walks within the Capitol square, broken glass, and locks, and for the protection of the building, and keeping the main approaches to it unincumbered, in addition to old material sold, eight thousand dollars.

For fitting up rooms in the basement, under the court-room of the Supreme Court, for a consultation room for the court, six thousand five hundred dollars.

To enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to pay for sewers and paving in front of Government property constructed under the act of May five, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, thirty-two thousand and seventy dollars: Provided, That no payment shall be made on account of any appropriation herein contained to reimburse the city of Washington for improvements heretofore constructed in front of or through the public grounds, until the items have been properly examined and audited as to legality and amount by the proper officer of the Treasury.

For improvement of grounds, purchase of

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

plants for garden, and contingent expenses incident thereto, two thousand dollars.

For fuel, in part, for the President's House, five thousand dollars.

For lighting the Capitol and President's House, the public grounds around them, and around the executive offices, and Pennsylvania avenue, Bridge and High streets, in Georgetown, Four-and-a-half street, Seventh and Twelfth streets across the Mall, and Maryland avenue west, and Sixth street south, eighty-five thousand dollars.

For repairs of the Potomac and upper bridges, six thousand dollars.

For repairs of Pennsylvania avenue, and keeping it clean, and for sprinkling the same, ten thousand dollars.

For public reservation number two and Lafayette square, in addition to any sum heretofore received or that may hereafter be received for the sale of hay raised on the grounds, two thousand dollars.

For taking care of the grounds south of the President's House, and continuing the improvement of the same, three thousand dollars.

For repairs of water-pipes, five hundred dollars.

For cleaning and repairing sewer traps on Pennsylvania avenue, three hundred dollars.

For casual repairs of all the furnaces under the Capitol, five hundred dollars.

For an additional watchman in reservation number two, seven hundred and twenty dollars.

For casing with stone and erecting a wall in front of the north basement of the old part of the Capitol, so as to correspond with the south basement already completed, four thousand three hundred dollars.

For completing the sewer through the Botanic Garden, twenty thousand five hundred and five dollars.

For taking up and relaying with stone flagging the brick pavement in front of the War and Navy Departments, on Seventeenth street, three thousand dollars.

For stone crossings at the streets intersecting Pennsylvania avenue, five thousand dollars.

For repairing, reglazing, repainting, and putting in thorough order the greenhouse at the President's, five thousand dollars.

For repairing roof of the old portion of the Capitol, five thousand four hundred and fifty dollars.

To meet the expenditure made by the Commissioner of Public Buildings in illuminating the Capitol and the Government portion of the City Hall, two hundred and fifty dollars.

For hauling manure for the public grounds, five hundred dollars.

For the protection and improvement of Franklin square, two thousand dollars.

For painting the President's House inside and out, eight thousand dollars; to be expended by the Commissioner of Public Buildings.

For rebuilding fence (destroyed by fire) around the Smithsonian Institution, two hundred dollars.

For fuel for center building of Capitol, fifteen hundred dollars.

For completing the dome of the Capitol, fifty thousand dollars.

For supplying deficiency in appropriation for lighting the Capitol and President's House and public grounds around them, and around the executive offices and Pennsylvania avenue; Bridge and High streets, Georgetown; Four-and-a-half street, Seventh street, and Twelfth street across the Mall, and Maryland avenue west, and Sixth street south, thirteen thousand dollars.

For sweeping and cleaning Pennsylvania avenue prior to the inauguration on the fourth of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, one thousand dollars.

For carrying the Potomac water into that portion of the President's House occupied for offices, and all the necessary fixtures, three thousand dollars.

For supplying deficiency in appropriation for fuel for the President's House and Capitol, six thousand dollars.

For continuing the work on the Capitol extension, one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars.

For casual repairs of Patent Office building, ten thousand dollars.

For defraying the expenses incident to the death and burial of Abraham Lincoln, late President of the United States, thirty thousand dollars.

For salary of warden of the jail in the District of Columbia, sixteen hundred dollars.

For the support and maintenance of the convicts transferred from the District of Columbia to such place or places as may be selected by the Secretary of the Interior, thirty thousand dollars.

For the preservation of the collections of the exploring and surveying expeditions of the Government, four thousand dollars.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

For publication of the laws, eight thousand dollars.

For extra clerk hire, eight thousand dollars.

For the pay of the United States commissioner, and for the pay of the United States surveyor, and for incidental expenses in the execution of the duty assigned to the joint commission appointed under the first article of the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Great Britain of the fifth of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, from November first, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to March, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and for drafting and compilation of the final chart, showing the places "reserved from the common liberty of fishing," their limits and descriptions, fifteen hundred dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

For deficiency in appropriations for salaries under act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, three thousand three hundred dollars.

For deficiency in appropriation for contingent expenses, three thousand five hundred dollars.

For pay of two temporary clerks from January first to June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, twelve hundred dollars.

For stationery, furniture, and other contingencies, and for books and maps for the library for the Interior Department, three thousand dollars.

For compensation for temporary clerks in the Pension Bureau, for the current fiscal year, twenty thousand dollars.

GOVERNMENT HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE.

For the support, clothing, and medical treatment of the insane of the Army and Navy and the revenue-cutter service, and of the District of Columbia, at the Government hospital for the insane in said District, including five hundred dollars for books, stationery, and incidental expenses, ninety thousand five hundred dollars.

For finishing, furnishing, and lighting additional accommodations in the east wing; for new bedding for the west wing, and for the extension and replanking of the coal wharf, ten thousand dollars.

For continuation of the wall inclosing the grounds of the hospital, ten thousand dollars.

For removing and repairing three old frame houses and building two new cottages for the occupation of the employes of the hospital having families, six thousand dollars.

PATENT OFFICE.

For expenses of receiving, arranging, and taking care of copyright books, charts, and other copyright matter, one thousand eight hundred dollars.

For preparing illustrations and descriptions for report, six thousand dollars.

For finishing the saloon in the north wing of the Patent Office building, and for furnishing the same with suitable accommodations for the reception and convenient exhibition of the models, thirty thousand dollars: Provided, That in the purchase of carpets for any of the public buildings or offices under any appropriations herein provided, they shall be of domestic manufacture.

CENSUS OFFICE.

For making good the aggregate difference between the original rates of salaries paid the clerks and employes of the Census Office, before they were assigned to the General Land Office, from June one to December thirty-one, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, two thousand four hundred and fifty dollars and thirty-one cents.

For paying the salaries at the original census rate, of principal clerk, and other clerks and one employe from January one to June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, six thousand four hundred and sixty dollars.

For incidental expenses of the Census Office, fifteen hundred dollars.

In the office of the engineer, Department of the Interior, viz:

For one clerk, six months, at one thousand eight hundred dollars per annum, nine hundred dollars.

For one clerk, six months, at one thousand five hundred dollars per annum, seven hundred and fifty dollars.

For one clerk, six months, at one thousand two hundred dollars per annum, six hundred dollars.

For mileage of Government engineer from Cincinnati, Ohio, to Omaha, Nebraska, and thence to Washington, in July, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, directed by the President of the United States to examine and report upon Union Pacific railroad routes west from Omaha, two thousand nine hundred and two miles, at ten cents per mile, two hundred and ninety dollars and twenty cents.

For mileage of the same from Washington to New York and back, in August, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, on account of the Union Pacific railway, two hundred and twenty-five miles, each way, at ten cents per mile, forty-five dollars.

For cost of completing bridge over Big Sioux river, near Sioux City, and Government wagon road from Sioux City, Iowa, to Fort Randall, Dakota Territory, in addition to former appropriations, ten thousand dollars.

For commutation of quarters and fuel to officer of corps of Engineers, United States Army, in charge of Engineer office, Department of the Interior, agreeably to Army regulations, from first August, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, to be paid by Department of the Interior, agreeably to Army regulations, eleven hundred and thirty-seven dollars and sixty-four cents.

For contingencies, two thousand dollars.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

For purchasing files of leading American newspapers for the Library of Congress, one thousand five hundred dollars.

To enable the Joint Committee on the Library to pay the first installment due on a contract made with William H. Powell for a naval picture to be placed in the Capitol, in pursuance of a joint resolution approved March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, two thousand dollars.

BOTANIC GARDEN.

For grading, draining, procuring manure, tools, fuel, and repairs, purchasing trees and shrubs, under the direction of the Library Committee of Congress, three thousand three hundred dollars.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

For pay of Superintendent of Botanic Garden, and assistants in the Botanic Garden and greenhouses, to be expended under the direction of the Library Committee of Congress, six thousand one hundred and forty-five dollars and eighty cents.

For the purchase and removal of materials, and for erecting four greenhouses in the Botanic Garden, to be expended under the direction of the Joint Committee on the Library, twenty-five hundred dollars.

COLUMBIAN INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.

For salaries and incidental expenses, including five hundred dollars for the purchase of books and illustrative apparatus, twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

For the erection, furnishing, and fitting up of the two extensions to the buildings, to provide enlarged accommodations for the male department, and to furnish rooms for the instruction of the pupils in useful labor, thirty-nine thousand four hundred and forty-five dollars and eighty-seven cents.

For the proper inclosure, grading, and improvement of the grounds of the institution, three thousand five hundred dollars.

SURVEYING THE PUBLIC LANDS.

For surveying the public lands in Wisconsin, six thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Minnesota, fifteen thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Dakota Territory, five thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Nebraska Territory, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Kansas, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Colorado Territory, fifteen thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Nevada, fifteen thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in New Mexico, five thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in California, thirty thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Oregon, twenty thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Washington Territory, twenty thousand dollars.

To supply a deficiency in the fund for the relief of sick and disabled seamen, one hundred and seventy thousand dollars.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For the fencing in, repair, and completion of the United States court-house and post office at Indianapolis, Indiana, and paving the sidewalks in front of the same, the sum of eight thousand dollars, or such part thereof as may be necessary.

For the alteration and repair of the court-house in the city of Boston, five thousand dollars.

For repairs of United States marine hospital at Cleveland, in the State of Ohio, eight thousand dollars.

For facilitating communication between the Atlantic and Pacific States by electrical telegraph, forty thousand dollars.

For expenses in detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons engaged in counterfeiting Treasury notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, as well as the coins of the United States, fifty thousand dollars.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to adjust and settle the accounts of D. S. Payne, for enumerating the inhabitants of the Territory of Idaho, under the direction of the Governor of said Territory, as authorized by the act of March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, entitled "An act to provide a temporary government for the Territory of Idaho," the sum of eight thousand eight hundred dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

For building a custom-house at Portland, Maine, in addition to the sum heretofore appropriated by Congress, seventy-five thousand dollars: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, if he thinks it advisable, expend a sum, not exceeding thirty-five thousand dollars, in the purchase of ground adjoining the site of the old custom-house on Fore street, now owned by the United States, for the purpose of enlarging the same, or the Secretary may exchange the lot now owned as aforesaid for a more eligible one, if the same can be procured; but no money shall be paid or agreed to be paid by the United States in consideration of such exchange, and no transfer, assignment, or conveyance of property by the United States shall be made upon such exchange, except a conveyance, on its behalf, by the Secretary of the Treasury, of the interest of the United States in the lot aforesaid and the building thereon.

For building a custom-house at St. Albans, in the State of Vermont, ten thousand dollars.

For expenses of the census of Arizona Territory, taken in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to be audited and paid under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, four thousand one hundred and sixty dollars.

For securing the right of way and building a bridge across the canal to the marine hospital near Portland, Maine, three thousand dollars.

For making alterations and repairs in the custom-house, court-house, and post office building, at Providence, Rhode Island, three thousand dollars.

For compensation of the revenue agent stationed at New York, in addition to the sum authorized by the act of June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, including one thousand dollars for the current fiscal year, two thousand dollars.

For one thousand copies of a compilation of the laws of the United States relating to revenue, commerce, and navigation, now in course of preparation for the press at the Treasury Department, such sum as may be necessary therefor in the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, and not exceeding seven thousand dollars.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to William Handy, of the Treasury Department, for extra clerical services, such sum as may be found due, not exceeding five hundred dollars.

For compensation to John Hopley, for services in indexing the national currency act, one hundred dollars.

For additional compensation to the publishers of the Statutes-at-Large, eight thousand five hundred and seventy-five dollars and sixty-nine cents.

For refitting the rear basement rooms of the old Treasury building for office purposes, eleven thousand dollars.

For the purchase of the property in Washington city known as Ford's theater, for the deposit and safe-keeping of documentary papers relating to the soldiers of the Army of the United States, and of the museum of the medical and surgical department of the Army, one hundred thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the ninth section of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and for other purposes," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, appropriating thirty per centum of the cost of engraving the special dies for internal revenue stamps, not to exceed in amount twenty thousand dollars, be, and the same is hereby, so amended as to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the contractors, Butler and Carpenter, the said sum of twenty thousand dollars in full of all claims for indemnity.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase for the United States an appropriate building site at Island Pond, or at some point northerly of Island Pond and south of the Canadian boundary line, in the State of Vermont, and to cause to be erected thereon a suitable building for the use of such officers of the customs as are or may be stationed at that place: Provided, That the cost of such purchase and erection shall not exceed the sum of ten thousand dollars; which amount is hereby appropriated for the purpose.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the sum of four thousand dollars, appropriated by "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-five," approved June twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-five [four], "to enable the Joint Library Committee to purchase a complete file of selections from European periodicals, from eighteen hundred and sixty-one to eighteen hundred and sixty-four, relating to the rebellion in the United States, to be deposited in the Library," is hereby transferred to the fund for the purchase of books for the Library of Congress, to be expended one half for the purchase of law books and one half for the purchase of miscellaneous books for said Library.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States be, and hereby is, authorized to expend during the fiscal year ending the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, so much of the appropriation of second March, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, as he may deem expedient and proper, not exceeding in the whole ten thousand dollars, for compensation to United States marshals, district attorneys, and other persons employed in enforcing the laws for the suppression of the African slave trade, for any services they may render, and for which no allowance is otherwise provided by law; and also so much of said appropriation as may be necessary to pay the salaries of the judges and arbitrators appointed by him, pursuant to the act of Congress approved July eleven, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An act to carry into effect the treaty between the United States and her Britannic Majesty for the suppression of the African slave trade," and for the expenses of the mixed courts of justice provided for by said treaty.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the authority to sell the property known as the Pennsylvania Bank building, in accordance with the acts approved June twenty-third, eighteen hundred and sixty, section two, and March fourteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, section five, is hereby conferred upon the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That the property be sold at public auction, and for a sum not less than one hundred and ten thousand dollars.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to increase the clerical force in the office of the Assistant Treasurer of Philadelphia, and the aggregate salaries of said clerks shall not exceed the sum of nine thousand dollars, which amount is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That, in addition to the appropriations hereinbefore allowed for the branch mint at California, the following sums respectively are hereby, in like manner, appropriated, viz:

For wages of workmen and adjusters, sixty-nine thousand four hundred and fifty dollars.

For incidental and contingent expenses, repairs, and wastage, one hundred and six thousand five hundred and twenty-nine dollars and twenty-nine cents.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That in addition to the appropriations hereinbefore made for the Territory of Arizona, the following sums are hereby appropriated, viz:

For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, clerks, and contingent expenses, five thousand dollars.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

For preparation and printing laws of the Territory, five thousand dollars.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for deficiencies in the appropriations for the objects hereinafter expressed, viz:

For compensation of the officers, clerks, messengers, and others, receiving an annual salary in the House of Representatives, one thousand four hundred and twenty-nine dollars and sixty-four cents.

For clerks of committees, and temporary clerks in the office of the Clerk of the House of Representatives, four thousand one hundred and eighty dollars.

For contingent expenses of the House of Representatives, viz:

For fuel and lights, pay of engineers, firemen, and laborers, repairs and materials, ten thousand dollars.

For furniture, repairs, and packing boxes, for members, twenty thousand dollars.

For pages and temporary mail boys, two thousand three hundred dollars.

For stationery, thirteen thousand four hundred and thirty-two dollars.

For folding documents, including materials, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For miscellaneous items, ten thousand dollars.

Contingent expenses of the Senate, viz:

For stationery, fifteen thousand dollars.

For clerks, pages, horses, carryalls, and so forth, twenty-seven thousand dollars.

For miscellaneous items, five thousand dollars.

For fuel and repairs of heating and ventilating apparatus, to be provided under the charge of the Sergeant-at-Arms, sixteen thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

For furniture purchased, and repairs done by the Sergeant-at-Arms, under the direction of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, twenty-three thousand five hundred dollars.

For additional labor in the folding-room and around Senate Chamber, five thousand dollars.

To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for the Capitol police under the act of April twenty-two, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, to be paid to the widow of David Vose, late a policeman in the crypt, being twentyper centum on his salary from December four, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, to July eight, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, five hundred and thirty-two dollars to be expended under the direction of the Commissioner of Public Buildings.

For salary of the stenographer appointed under resolution of January fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, three thousand and six hundred and fifty dollars.

For additional compensation to laborers in the Clerk's office of the House of Representatives, the same as allowed by act of June twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, seven hundred and thirty dollars.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and they are hereby, authorized to pay A. D. Collingsworth, O. H. Veder, Edward R. Sherman, Charles C. Adams, Samuel W. Tucker, J. G. Adams, A. Benigral, J. C. Parker, J. A. Odell, V. Barnes, T. H. Gladman, R. A. Cronin, T. N. Adams, J. C. Cleary, W. D. Lindsay, A. Jewett, jr., F. Cochran, B. C. Farless, J. P. Townsend, C. W. Odell, J. W. Morehead, S. P. Lee, W. H. Salter, James Cross, J. R. Creed, H. B. Rourke, E. A. Lipscomb, George Cottenham, C. A. Perkins, W. B. Cudlipp, S. S. Baker, J. M. Conroy, O. W. Boyden, J. O. Armes, J. Bellows, E. S. Brossius, J. J. Calvert, F. G. Calvert, G. D. Curtis, W. B. Dyer, D. A. Fish, A. H. Gillespie, R. B. Guillion, Charles Goheen, H. Holmes, G. C. Holliday, B. E. Messer, E. C. Messer, F. Madden, W. McKee, W. H. E. Ourand, L. P. Porter, P. W. Pearson, J. L. Rowland, C. V. Rotterdam, E. J. Schale, E. J. Sweet, T. J. Schea, J. C. Williams, J. G. Wilson, L. K. Brown, J. H. Gunn, H. A. Dobson, J. A. McIntire, V. B. Munson, J. J. Dickens, W. E. Armes, J. C. Green, Lewis E. Rauterburg, and B. W. Parsons, employed by the deputy provost marshal of the District of Columbia in the enrolling office of said marshal, for night work and especial service performed in pursuance of a contract between said clerks and said provost marshal, such accounts being properly certified upon the rolls, or by said deputy provost marshal, and the sum of three thousand three hundred and sixty dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated therefor.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated:

For the compensation of the superintendent of the building occupied by the Quartermaster General, viz: for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and the present fiscal year four hundred dollars.

For the Indian service in Utah, being for money advanced by Brigham Young, while Governor and ex-officio superintendent of Indian affairs, found due and allowed by the Secretary of the Interior, thirty-eight thousand four hundred and eighty-seven dollars and fifty-three cents.

For plates, engraving, printing, and paper for national currency notes, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars: Provided, That no portrait or likeness of any living person hereafter engraved, shall be placed upon any of the bonds, securities, notes, fractional or postal currency of the United States.

For making certain alterations in the custom-house building at Philadelphia, seven thousand four hundred and twenty-five dollars.

For deficiency in the appropriation for fuel for the President's House and Capitol, six thousand dollars.

To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for the Naval Academy for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, one hundred and seventy-eight thousand and sixty-four dollars.

To pay H. A. Klopfer for ten months' service, as a laborer in the office of the Attorney General, at forty dollars per month, four hundred dollars.

For certain alterations to the post office portion of the building in Portland, Maine, used for post office, custom-house, and court-house, five thousand dollars: Provided, That no part of the money hereby appropriated for claims due for the construction and furnishing the Baltimore court-house, and for the payment of claims due for the repairs of the Government warehouses and the construction wharves, Staten Island, New York, shall be paid for damages, and no payments whatever shall be made unless upon a full examination of the proper Department of the Government, and a certificate by the Attorney General that the said amounts to be paid are just, legal, and proper.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That such sum as may be required to pay the additional compensation provided by section three of "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and for other purposes," approved June twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, up to and including the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That from and after the first day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, there shall be paid annually, instead of the yearly salaries at present authorized, to the Director of the Mint at Philadelphia, four thousand five hundred dollars; to the treasurer, three thousand five hundred dollars, and one thousand five hundred dollars for additional compensation as Assistant Treasurer of the United States; to the melter and refiner, three thousand dollars; to the assayer, three thousand dollars; to the assistant to the assayer, two thousand dollars; to the chief coiner, three thousand dollars; to the assistant to the chief coiner, two thousand dollars; to the engraver, three thousand dollars; to one clerk, two thousand five hundred dollars; to two clerks, two thousand dollars each; to four clerks, one thousand five hundred dollars each; to the treasurer of the branch mint at San Francisco, for salary as Assistant Treasurer of the United States, in addition to his salary as treasurer of said mint, one thousand five hundred dollars; to the Assistant Treasurer of the United States at New York, eight thousand dollars; to the Assistant Treasurer of the United States at Boston, five thousand dollars; to the Assistant Treasurer of the United States at Saint Louis, five thousand dollars; and the amount necessary to carry these provisions into effect for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, is hereby appropriated.

APPROVED, April 7, 1866.

CHAP. XXIX.—An Act to provide Arms and Ammunition for the Defense of the Inhabitants of Dakota Territory.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue, upon the requisition of the Governor of Dakota Territory, such amount of ordnance and ordnance stores as may be necessary to arm the inhabitants of said Territory who may organize for defense against hostile Indians, not exceeding one thousand stand of small-arms, and one hundred thousand rounds of ammunition, to be charged against the quota due, or to become due, to the Territory under the laws for arming and equipping the militia.

APPROVED, April 7, 1866.

CHAP. XXXI.—An Act to protect all Persons in the United States in their civil Rights, and furnish the Means of their Vindication.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all persons born in the United States and not subject to any foreign Power, excluding Indians not taxed, are hereby declared to be citizens of the United States; and such citizens, of every race and color, without regard to any previous condition of slavery or involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall have the same right, in every State and Territory in the United States, to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, and give evidence, to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey real and personal property, and to full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of person and property, as is enjoyed by white citizens, and shall be subject to like punishment, pains, and penalties, and to none other, any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That any person who, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or custom, shall subject, or cause to be subjected, any inhabitant of any State or Territory to the deprivation of any right secured or protected by this act, or to different punishment, pains, or penalties on account of such person having at any time been held in a condition of slavery or involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, or by reason of his color or race, than is prescribed for the punishment of white persons, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the district courts of the United States, within their respective districts, shall have, exclusively of the courts of the several States, cognizance of all crimes and offenses committed against the provisions of this act, and also, concurrently with the circuit courts of the United States, of all causes, civil and criminal, affecting persons who are denied or cannot enforce in the courts or judicial tribunals of the State or locality where they may be any of the rights secured to them by the first section of this act; and if any suit or prosecution, civil or criminal, has been or shall be commenced in any State court, against any such person, for any cause whatsoever, or against any officer, civil or military, or other person, for any arrest or imprisonment, trespasses, or wrongs done or committed by virtue or under color of authority derived from this act or the act establishing a Bureau for the Relief of Freedmen and Refugees, and all acts amendatory thereof, or for refusing to do any act upon the ground that it would be inconsistent with this act, such defendant shall have the right to remove such cause for trial to the proper district or circuit court in the manner prescribed by the "Act relating to habeas corpus and regulating judicial proceedings in certain cases," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and all acts amendatory thereof. The jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters hereby conferred on the district and circuit courts of the United States shall be exercised and enforced in conformity with the laws of the United States, so far as such laws are suitable to carry the same into effect; but in all cases where such laws are not adapted to the object, or are deficient in the provisions necessary to furnish suitable remedies and punish offenses against law, the common law, as modified and changed by the constitution and statutes of the State wherein the court having jurisdiction of the cause, civil or criminal, is held, so far as the same is not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, shall be extended to and govern said courts in the trial and disposition of such cause, and, if of a criminal nature, in the infliction of punishment on the party found guilty.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the district attorneys, marshals, and deputy marshals of the United States, the commissioners appointed by the circuit and territorial courts of the United States, with powers of arresting, imprisoning, or bailing offenders against the laws of the United States, the officers and agents of the Freedmen's Bureau, and every other officer who may be specially empowered by the President of the United States, shall be, and they are hereby, specially authorized and required, at the expense of the United States, to institute proceedings against all and every person who shall violate the provisions of this act, and cause him or them to be arrested and imprisoned, or bailed, as the case may be, for trial before such court of the United States or territorial court as by this act has cognizance of the offense. And with a view to affording reasonable protection to all persons in their constitutional rights of equality before the law, without distinction of race or color, or previous condition of slavery or involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, and to the prompt discharge of the duties of this act, it shall be the duty of the circuit courts of the United States and the superior courts of the Territories of the United States, from time to time, to increase the number of the commissioners, so as to afford a speedy and convenient means for the arrest and examination of persons charged with a violation of this act; and such commissioners are hereby authorized and required to exercise and discharge all the powers and duties conferred on them by this act, and the same duties with regard to offenses created by this act, as they are authorized by law to exercise with regard to other offenses against the laws of the United States.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of all marshals and deputy marshals to obey and execute all warrants and precepts issued under the provisions of this act, when to them directed; and should any marshal or deputy marshal refuse to receive such warrant or other process when tendered, or to use all proper means diligently to execute the same, he shall, on conviction thereof, be fined in the sum of one thousand dollars, to the use of the person upon whom the accused is alleged to have committed the offense. And the better to enable the said commissioners to execute their duties faithfully and efficiently, in conformity with the Constitution of the United States and the requirements of this act, they are hereby authorized and empowered, within their counties respectively, to appoint, in writing, under their hands, any one or more suitable persons, from time to time, to execute all such warrants and other process as may be issued by them in the lawful performance of their respective duties; and the persons so appointed to execute any warrant or process as aforesaid shall have authority to summon and call to their aid the bystanders or posse comitatus of the proper county, or such portion of the land or naval forces of the United States, or of the militia, as may be necessary to the performance of the duty with which they are charged, and to insure a faithful observance of the clause of the Constitution which prohibits slavery, in conformity with the provisions of this act; and said warrants shall run and be executed by said officers anywhere in the State or Territory within which they are issued.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That any person who shall knowingly and willfully obstruct, hinder, or prevent any officer, or other person charged with the execution of any warrant or process issued under the provisions of this act, or any person or persons lawfully assisting him or them, from arresting any person for whose apprehension such warrant or process may have been issued, or shall rescue or attempt to rescue such person from the custody of the officer, other person or persons, or those lawfully assisting as aforesaid, when so arrested pursuant to the authority herein given and declared, or shall aid, abet, or assist any person so arrested as aforesaid, directly or indirectly, to escape from the custody of the officer or other person legally authorized as aforesaid, or shall harbor or conceal any person for whose arrest a warrant or process shall have been issued as aforesaid, so as to prevent his discovery and arrest after notice or knowledge of the fact that a warrant has been issued for the apprehension of such person, shall, for either of said offenses, be subject to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, and imprisonment not exceeding six months, by indictment and conviction before the district court of the United States for the district in which said offense may have been committed, or before the proper court of criminal jurisdiction, if committed within any one of the organized Territories of the United States.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the district attorneys, the marshals, their deputies, and the clerks of the said district and territorial courts shall be paid for their services the like fees as may be allowed to them for similar services in other cases; and in all cases where the proceedings are before a commissioner, he shall be entitled to a fee of ten dollars in full for his services in each case, inclusive of all services incident to such arrest and examination. The person or persons authorized to execute the process to be issued by such commissioners for the arrest of offenders against the provisions of this act shall be entitled to a fee of five dollars for each person he or they may arrest and take before any such commissioner as aforesaid, with such other fees as may be deemed reasonable by such commissioner for such other additional services as may be necessarily performed by him or them, such as attending at the examination, keeping the prisoner in custody, and providing him with food and lodging during his detention, and until the final determination of such commissioner, and in general for performing such other duties as may be required in the premises; such fees to be made up in conformity with the fees usually charged by the officers of the courts of justice within the proper district or county, as near as may be practicable, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States on the certificate of the judge of the district within which the arrest is made, and to be recoverable from the defendant as part of the judgment in case of conviction.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That whenever the President of the United States shall have reason to believe that offenses have been or are likely to be committed against the provisions of this act within any judicial district, it shall be lawful for him, in his discretion, to direct the judge, marshal, and district attorney of such district to attend at such place within the district, and for such time as he may designate, for the purpose of the more speedy arrest and trial of persons charged with a violation of this act; and it shall be the duty of every judge or other officer, when any such requisition shall be received by him, to attend at the place and for the time therein designated.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for the President of the United States, or such person as he may empower for that purpose, to employ such part of the land or naval forces of the United States, or of the militia, as shall be necessary to prevent the violation and enforce the due execution of this act.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That upon all questions of law arising in any cause under the provisions of this act a final appeal may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States.

SCHUYLER COLFAX,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
LA FAYETTE S. FOSTER,
President of the Senate, pro tempore.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
April 6, 1866.

The President of the United States having returned to the Senate, in which it originated, the bill entitled "An act to protect all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and furnish the means of their vindication," with his objections thereto, the Senate proceeded, in pursuance of the Constitution, to reconsider the same; and,

Resolved, That the said bill do pass, two thirds of the Senate agreeing to pass the same.

Attest:
J. W. FORNEY,
Secretary of the Senate.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES, April 9, 1866.

The House of Representatives having proceeded, in pursuance of the Constitution, to reconsider the bill entitled "An act to protect all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and furnish the means of their vindication," returned to the Senate by the President of the United States, with his objections, and sent by the Senate to the House of Representatives, with the message of the President returning the bill:

Resolved, That the bill do pass, two thirds

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG.... 1ST SESS.

of the House of Representatives agreeing to pass the same.

Attest:

EDWARD McPHERSON, Clerk,
by CLINTON LLOYD, Chief Clerk.

CHAP. XXXII.—An Act granting to the State of Wisconsin a Donation of public Lands to aid in the Construction of a Breakwater and Harbor and Ship-Canal at the head of Sturgeon Bay, in the County of Door, in said State, to connect the Waters of Green Bay with Lake Michigan, in said State.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the State of Wisconsin for the purpose of aiding said State in constructing and completing a breakwater and harbor and ship-canal to connect the waters of Green Bay with the waters of Lake Michigan, two hundred thousand acres of public lands, to be selected in subdivisions agreeably to the United States survey, by an agent or agents appointed by the Governor of said State, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, from lands subject to private entry: Provided, That said selections shall all be made from alternate and odd-numbered sections of land nearest the location of said harbor and canal in said State not otherwise appropriated, and not from lands designated by the United States as "mineral" before the passage of this act, nor from lands to which the rights of preëemption or homestead have attached.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said lands hereby granted shall be subject to the disposal of the Legislature of said State, or, if the Legislature thereof shall not be in session, or shall adjourn within ten days after the passage and approval of this act, then said lands shall be subject to the disposal of the Governor and board of commissioners of school, university, and swamp lands of said State, for the purposes aforesaid, and for no other; and the said canal shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States, free from toll or charge upon the vessels of said Government, or upon vessels employed by said Government in the transportation of any property or troops of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That before it shall be competent for said State to dispose of any of said lands, to be selected as aforesaid, the plan of said breakwater and harbor and the route of said canal shall be established, and a plat or plats thereof shall be filed in the office of the War Department, and a duplicate thereof filed in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That if the said breakwater, harbor, and canal shall not be completed within three years from the passage of this act, the lands hereby granted and remaining unsold shall revert to the United States.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the Legislature of said State shall cease to be kept an accurate account of the sales and net proceeds of the lands hereby granted, and of all expenditures in the construction, repairs, and operating of said canal, and of the earnings thereof, and shall return a statement of the same annually to the Secretary of the Interior. And whenever said State shall be fully reimbursed for all advances made for the construction, repairs, and operating of said canal, with legal interest on all advances until the reimbursement of the same, or upon payment by the United States of any balance of such advances over such receipts from said lands and canal, with such interest, the said State shall be allowed to tax for the use of said canal only such tolls as shall be sufficient to pay all necessary expenses for the care, charge, and repair of the same.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That said ship-canal shall be at least one hundred feet in width, with a depth of water not less than thirteen feet.

APPROVED, April 10, 1866.

CHAP. XXXIII.—An Act to grant the Right of Way to the "Cascade Railroad Company" through a military Reserve in Washington Territory.

Whereas the Cascade Railroad Company, a corporation duly created and organized under the laws of Washington Territory, has constructed and put in operation a railroad on the Cascade Portage of the Columbia river, in said Territory, a portion of which said road is constructed through a military reserve of the United States; and whereas doubts have arisen as to the right to construct such road through said reserve and the validity of the charter of said company: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall be, and is hereby, granted to the said Cascade Railroad Company a right of way of sixty feet in width along the line of said road as at present constructed and along the changes of location hereafter made to straighten and render said road safe, through the public lands of the United States, the military reserve, and the lands of private persons agreeing thereto, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, side-tracks, and wharves. And the charter of said company is hereby adopted and declared to be valid: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to give said company the right to occupy for any purpose whatever more than sixty feet in width on the line of said road at any point or points where the space or pass between the river and bluff or mountain is so narrow as not to admit of the construction of another parallel railroad, turnpike, road, canal, or other public work for transportation of freight or passengers.

APPROVED, April 10, 1866.

CHAP. XXXIX.—An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to provide Ways and Means to support the Government," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act entitled "An act to provide ways and means to support the Government," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, shall be extended and construed to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury, at his discretion, to receive any Treasury notes or other obligations issued under any act of Congress, whether bearing interest or not, in exchange for any description of bonds authorized by the act to which this is an amendment; and also to dispose of any description of bonds authorized by said act, either in the United States or elsewhere, to such an amount, in such manner, and at such rates as he may think advisable, for lawful money of the United States, or for any Treasury notes, certificates of indebtedness, or certificates of deposit, or other representatives of value, which have been or which may be issued under any act of Congress, the proceeds thereof to be used only for retiring Treasury notes or other obligations issued under any act of Congress; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize any increase of the public debt: Provided, That of United States notes not more than ten millions of dollars may be retired and canceled within six months from the passage of this act, and thereafter not more than four millions of dollars in any one month: And provided further, That the act to which this is an amendment shall continue in full force in all its provisions, except as modified by this act.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall report to Congress at the commencement of the next session the amount of exchanges made or money borrowed under this act, and of whom, and on what terms; and also the amount and character of indebtedness retired under this act, and the act to which this is an amendment, with a detailed statement of the expense of making such loans and exchanges.

APPROVED, April 12, 1866.

CHAP. XL.—An Act to reimburse the State of Pennsylvania for Moneys advanced Government for War Purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That to supply a deficiency in paying the Army, under the act of March fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and to reimburse the State of Pennsylvania for money expended for payment of militia in the service of the United States, the sum of eight hundred thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That before the same is paid, the claim of the said State shall be again examined and settled by the Secretary of War.

APPROVED, April 12, 1866.

CHAP. XLI.—An Act to amend "An Act to incorporate the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of the District of Columbia."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the third section of an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Mutual Fire Insurance Company in [of] the District of Columbia," approved on the tenth day of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, be, and the same hereby is, so amended as to read fifty thousand dollars, in the place of twenty thousand dollars.

APPROVED, April 12, 1866.

CHAP. XLIV.—An Act to establish the Collection District of Port Huron, the Collection District of Michigan, the Collection District of Montana and Idaho, and to change the Name of the Collection District of Penobscot.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That a new collection district, to be called the district of Port Huron, be, and the same is hereby, established in the State of Michigan, which shall embrace the mouth and entire shore of the Saint Clair river, and the counties of Saint Clair, Lapeer, Tuscola, and Saginaw, and all the territory and waters of the State of Michigan lying north of said counties and east of the principal meridian; and a collector shall be appointed to reside at Port Huron, which shall be the sole port of entry for said district. And the said collector shall receive the same compensation provided for the collectors of Pembina, Chicago, and certain other ports, by the second section of the act entitled "An act to regulate the foreign coasting trade on the northern, northeastern, and northwestern frontiers of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June seventeen, eighteen hundred and sixty-four. And all the territory and waters of the said State of Michigan lying west of the said principal meridian, and not included in the district of Michilimackinac, are hereby made a separate district, to be called the district of Michigan, for which a collector, with the same compensation as above provided for the collector of Port Huron, shall be appointed to reside at Grand Haven, which shall be the sole port of entry for said district of Michigan.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Territories of Montana and Idaho be, and the same are hereby, made a new collection district, to be called the district of Montana and Idaho; and that a collector, with the same salary as is above provided for each of the collectors of Port Huron and Michigan, shall be appointed to reside at the port of entry in said district, which shall be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the collection district of Penobscot, in the State of Maine, shall hereafter be called the district of Castine.

APPROVED, April 13, 1866.

CHAP. XLV.—An Act making Appropriations for the Naval Service for the year ending thirtieth June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and they are hereby, appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven:

For pay of commission, warrant, and petty officers and seamen, including the Engineer corps of the Navy, nine millions three hundred and thirty-six thousand six hundred and thirty-eight dollars.

For the payment of bounties to discharged seamen, eight hundred thousand dollars.

For the purchase of various articles of equipment, viz: canvas, leather, iron, cables, and anchors, oil, galleys, and stores, and for the payment of labor on articles manufactured in the navy-yards, and for outfit stores in the navigators', boatswains', and sailmakers' department of vessels, one million dollars.

For surgeons' necessities and appliances for the sick and wounded of the Navy, including the Coast Survey and Engineer and Marine corps, one hundred and sixty-eight thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars.

For navigation apparatus and supplies, and for purposes incidental to navigation, one hundred and ninety-two thousand five hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses of the Navy, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Bureau of Yards and Docks:

For contingent expenses that may accrue for the following purposes, viz: for freight and transportation; for printing, advertising, and stationery; for books, maps, models, and drawings; for the purchase and repair of fire-engines; for machinery of every description, and patent right to use the same; for repairs of steam-engines and attendance; for purchase and maintenance of oxen and horses, and driving teams; for carts, timber-wheels, and workmen's tools of every description for navy-yard purposes; for telegrams and postage of letters on public service; for furniture for Government offices and houses; for coals and other fuel; for candles, oil, and gas; for cleaning and clearing up yards; for flags, awnings, and packing boxes; for pay of watchmen; for incidental labor at navy-yards not applicable to any other appropriation; for rent of landing at Portsmouth, New Hampshire; for tolls and ferriages; for water tax; and for rent of stores, one million seven hundred and sixty thousand dollars.

Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting:

For expenses that may accrue for the following purposes, namely: expenses of recruiting, traveling expenses of officers, transportation of men, printing and stationery, advertising in public newspapers, postage on public letters, wharfage and demurrage, apprehension of deserters, pilotage and towage of vessels, and assistance to vessels in distress, eight hundred thousand dollars.

Bureau of Navigation:

For contingent expenses of the Bureau of Navigation, viz:

For freight and transportation of navigation materials, instruments, books, and stores; for postage on public letters; for telegraphing on public business; for advertising for proposals; for packing boxes and materials; for blank-books, forms, and stationery at navigation offices; for maps, charts, drawings, and models; and for incidental expenses not applicable to any other appropriation, five thousand dollars.

Bureau of Medicine and Surgery:

For contingent expenses of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, seventy-five thousand dollars.

MARINE CORPS.

For pay of officers, non-commissioned officers, musicians, privates, clerks, messengers, steward and nurse, and servants; for rations and clothing for officers' servants; additional rations to officers for five years' service; for undrawn clothing, and bounties for enlistment, one million one hundred and seven thousand and sixty-six dollars and ninety-five cents.

For provisions, one hundred and sixty-nine thousand nine hundred and seven dollars and fifty cents.

For clothing, three hundred and fourteen thousand six hundred and sixty-three dollars and five cents.

For fuel, thirty thousand one hundred and seventeen dollars.

For military stores, viz: pay of mechanics, repair of arms, purchase of accouterments, ordnance stores, flags, drums, fifes, and other instruments, sixteen thousand dollars.

For transportation of officers, their servants, troops, and expenses of recruiting, ten thousand dollars.

For repairs of barracks, and rent of offices where there are no public buildings, fifteen thousand dollars.

For contingencies, viz: freight; ferriage; toll; cartage; wharfage; purchase and repair of boats; compensation to judge advocates per diem for attending courts-martial, courts of inquiry, and for constant labor; house rent in lieu of quarters; burial of deceased marines; printing, stationery, postage, telegraphing; apprehension of deserters; oil, candles, gas; repairs of gas and water fixtures; water rent, forage, straw, barrack furniture, furniture for officers' quarters; bed-sacks, wrapping-paper, oil-cloth, crash, rope, twine, spades, shovels, axes, picks, carpenters' tools; keep of a horse for the messenger; pay of matron, washerwoman, and porter at the hospital headquarters; repair to fire-engine; purchase and repair of engine-hose; purchase of lumber for benches, mess tables, and bunks; repairs to public carryall; purchase and repair of harness; purchase and repair of handcarts and wheelbarrows; scavengering; purchase and repair of galleys, cooking stoves, ranges, stoves where there are no grates; gravel for parade grounds; repair of pumps; furniture for staff and commanding officers' offices; brushes, brooms, buckets, paving, and for other purposes, eighty thousand dollars: Provided, That in the purchase of carpets and furniture provided for in this act they shall be of domestic manufacture.

NAVY-YARDS.

Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

For iron foundry, five thousand nine hundred and forty-six dollars.

For shop for iron-cladding, sixteen thousand six hundred and thirty-two dollars.

For condensers, seven thousand six hundred and sixty dollars.

For road and timber slips, twenty-eight thousand three hundred and three dollars.

For enlarging office building, nine thousand seven hundred and forty-eight dollars.

For fitting and furnishing plumber's, coppersmith's, and tin shop, three thousand six hundred dollars.

For machinery and tools, forty-eight thousand one hundred dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, seventy thousand dollars.

For completing plumber's, coppersmith's, and tin shop, ten thousand dollars.

For the purchase of Seavey's Island, one hundred and five thousand dollars: Provided, That a perfect and approved title in fee to the whole island can be obtained and vested in the United States for that sum: And provided further, That in case the owners of lots and improvements on said island shall not agree to receive said sum for the whole of said island and the privileges and improvements thereunto belonging, the Secretary of the Navy is hereby required to discontinue the public use of the bridge and thoroughfare leading from said island to and across the navy-yard, to take effect on the first day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

Boston.

For purchase of the right of drainage through the yard, now held by the city of Charlestown, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For one steam fire-engine, five thousand dollars.

For widening main entrance, twelve thousand dollars.

For tools for machine and forge shops, seventy-one thousand five hundred dollars.

For machinery for ropewalk, thirty-one thousand dollars.

For filling in a portion of timber-dock, forty thousand dollars.

For addition to stable, eight thousand dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, eighty-five thousand dollars.

New York.

For iron-plating shop, ninety-eight thousand nine hundred and twenty-two dollars.

For receiving store, forty-seven thousand six hundred and three dollars.

For quay-wall extension at sewer, one hundred thousand dollars.

For continuing the work on the new machine and boiler shop, one hundred thousand dollars.

For dredging channels, sixty-five thousand dollars.

For special repairs, twenty thousand five hundred dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, one hundred and sixteen thousand dollars.

For the purchase of the Ruggles property, ninety thousand dollars.

For protecting from destruction and decay the unfinished buildings and other structures already commenced, for which no appropriation is made in this bill, twenty thousand dollars.

Philadelphia.

For dredging channels, four thousand and twenty-eight dollars.

For repairs of dry dock, forty-six thousand dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, fifty-eight thousand four hundred and eighty dollars.

For completing saw-mill, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For extending south pier one hundred feet, fifteen thousand dollars.

Washington.

For new paint shop, eight thousand five hundred and eighty-three dollars.

For smithery, twelve thousand and sixty-two dollars.

For extension of iron foundry, eight thousand four hundred and forty-five dollars.

For machinery and tools, ninety thousand six hundred dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, sixty-one thousand six hundred dollars.

Norfolk.

For railway track and cars, eight thousand dollars.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

For repair of wharves, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For one Ames's wharf crane, three thousand dollars.

For machinery and tools, fifty thousand dollars.

For ship-joiners' shop and timber shed number twelve, forty-five thousand dollars.

For storehouse number fourteen, forty-six thousand dollars.

For the protection of the property at Norfolk navy-yard, twenty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as shall be necessary.

Pensacola, Florida.

For muster office, eight thousand one hundred and four dollars.

For new gate to dock basin, thirty thousand dollars.

For pile engine, seven hundred dollars.

For the preservation and necessary repairs of the property of the United States at the Pensacola navy-yard, fifty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Mare Island, California.

For foundry and boiler establishment, eighty-five thousand dollars.

For cisterns, buildings sixty-eight and forty-five, seven thousand three hundred dollars.

For quay wall, fifty thousand dollars.

For grading, twenty thousand dollars.

For cistern and holder for gas-works, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, fifty thousand dollars.

HOSPITALS.Boston.*

For repairs of buildings, roads, fences, cemetery, walls, stable, and furniture; painting, glazing, grounds, and miscellaneous items, ten thousand dollars.

New York.

For repairs of hospital buildings and appendages, roads, fences, walls, stables, and furniture; painting, glazing, cemetery, grounds, and miscellaneous items, ten thousand five hundred dollars.

Laboratory, New York.

For repairs of buildings and appendages, purchase and repairs of instruments, apparatus, and machinery, painting, glazing, furniture, and miscellaneous items, three thousand five hundred dollars.

Washington.

For completing building authorized by act of Congress approved March fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, including cost of inclosing premises, grading sidewalks, laying curbstones, together with the necessary out-buildings and their appurtenances, thirty thousand dollars.

Annapolis.

For repairing hospital building, appendages, painting, glazing, furniture, and miscellaneous items, five thousand dollars.

Norfolk.

For repairs of buildings, appendages, roads, fences, rebuilding sea-wall, painting and glazing, spouting and repairing roof, wharves and bridges, brick pavement, stable, furniture, floors of basement, improving grounds, and for miscellaneous items, twenty thousand dollars.

Pensacola.

For repairs of building, appendages, painting, glazing, furniture, and miscellaneous items, ten thousand five hundred dollars.

Mare Island.

For repairs of building, appendages, painting, glazing, furniture, and miscellaneous items, seven thousand five hundred dollars.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For pay of superintendent, naval constructors, and all the civil establishments of the several navy-yards and stations, one hundred and forty-six thousand two hundred and thirty dollars. And the pay of the clerk of the yard and first clerk to naval store-keeper at each of the navy-yards at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and Philadelphia, shall be twelve hundred dollars per annum.

For testing the use of petroleum as a fuel under marine boilers, five thousand dollars.

For the construction of a levee on the river front of the Government property at Mound City, Illinois, seven thousand dollars.

To pay mileage of Visitors to the Naval Academy, one thousand dollars.

For expenses of Naval Academy, viz: for pay of civil officers, professors, watchmen, and others, contingent expenses, improvements, and repairs, one hundred and ninety-eight thousand four hundred and twenty-nine dollars.

For the purchase of the land adjacent to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, belonging to the State of Maryland, and known as the Government House and grounds, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For the purchase of other grounds at Annapolis for the use of the Naval Academy, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For the erection of a building suitable for the accommodation of the third and fourth classes at the Naval Academy, one hundred thousand dollars.

For the erection of a machine-shop at the Naval Academy, twenty thousand dollars.

For the increase of the library at the Naval Academy, two thousand dollars.

For the enlargement of the chapel at the Naval Academy, and for the erection of mural tablets therein to commemorate the memory of naval officers who have sacrificed their lives in the service of the country, seven thousand dollars.

NAVAL OBSERVATORY.

For the pay of assistant astronomer, three aids, and clerk, eight thousand dollars.

For wages of instrument maker, two watchmen, porter, and messenger; for keeping grounds in order, and repairs to buildings and inclosures; for fuel, light, office furniture, and stationery, and for freight, transportation, postage, and incidental expenses, twelve thousand dollars.

For preparing for publication the American Nautical Almanac, fifteen thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars.

NAVAL ASYLUM, PHILADELPHIA.

For furniture and repairs to same, one thousand dollars.

For house cleaning and whitewashing, eight hundred dollars.

For furnaces, grates, and ranges, seven hundred dollars.

For gas and water rent, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For improvement of grounds, three hundred dollars.

For wharves and lots, eight hundred dollars.

For painting houses and walls, two thousand dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, one thousand dollars.

For support of beneficiaries, forty-eight thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That so much of the first section of the act making appropriations for the naval service, approved May twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, as appropriates two hundred and fifty thousand dollars "for bounties for destruction of enemies' vessels, as per act of July seventeenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two," be amended so that said appropriation shall apply to all cases of destruction of enemies' vessels during the recent rebellion, and at the same rate as is provided in the act to which reference is made.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That no portion of the amounts herein appropriated shall be paid in violation of the provisions of the act entitled "An act to prescribe an oath of office, and for other purposes," approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That so much of the second section of an act entitled "An act to regulate the pay of the Navy of the United States, approved March three, eighteen hundred and thirty-five, as prohibits any allowance to any officer in the naval service for rent of quarters, or for furniture, or for lights, or fuel, or transporting baggage, and all acts and parts of acts authorizing the appointment of Navy agents, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the examination of candidates for admission to the Naval Academy shall be held at such stated times as the Secretary of the Navy may direct.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the office of assistant in Bureau of Ordnance be, and the same is hereby, abolished.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That hereafter no vacancy in the grade of professor of mathematics in the Navy shall be filled.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the act approved August thirty-first, eighteen hundred and fifty-two, for "surveys an[d] reconnoissances, for naval and commercial purposes, of such parts of Behring's straits of the north Pacific ocean, and of the China seas, as are frequented by American whale ships and by trading vessels in their routes between the United States and China," be, and the same is hereby, revived, and the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized and required to recommence and continue surveys and reconnoissances in the Pacific ocean, not yet fully examined, by using such vessels, officers, crews, outfits, and supplies of the Navy, as may be necessary and available for that service.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That, for the purpose of settling the accounts of disbursing officers of the Navy, where payments for contingent expenses have been made from the appropriation for "the pay of the Navy" prior to the passage of the act making appropriations for the fiscal year eighteen hundred and sixty-three-four, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to transfer from the appropriation for the pay of the Navy to the appropriation for contingent, the sum of two hundred and forty-five thousand and nine hundred and four dollars and twelve cents.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. XLVI.—An Act to reimburse the State of Missouri for Moneys expended for the United States in enrolling, equipping, and provisioning militia Forces to aid in suppressing the Rebellion.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That immediately after the passage of this act the President shall by and with the advice and consent of the Senate appoint three commissioners, whose duty it shall be to ascertain the amount of moneys expended by the State of Missouri, in enrolling, equipping, subsisting, and paying such State forces as have been called into service in said State since the twenty-fourth day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, to act in concert with the United States forces in the suppression of rebellion against the United States. And the said commissioners shall be authorized and required to sit as a board at some place in the State of Missouri, and shall be authorized to call witnesses before them and examine them under oath. And said commissioners shall be authorized to employ a clerk at a rate of compensation not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars per annum.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the commissioners so appointed shall proceed, subject to regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War, at once to examine all the items of expenditure made by said State for the purposes herein named, allowing only for disbursements made and amounts assumed by the State for enrolling, equipping, subsisting, and paying such troops as were called into service by the Governor, at the request of the United States department commander commanding the district in which Missouri may at the time have been included, or by the express order, consent, or concurrence of such commander, or which may have been employed in suppressing rebellion in said State, under the authority and command of Federal officers. And no allowance shall be made for any troops which did not perform actual military service in full concert and coöperation with the authorities of the United States and subject to their orders.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That in making up said account, for the convenience of the accounting officers of the Government, the commissioners shall state separately the amounts expended, respectively, for enrolling, equipping, arming, subsisting, and paying said troops, and from the aggregate amount they shall deduct the amount of direct tax due by the said State to the United States under the act entitled "An act to provide increased revenue from imports, pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," approved August fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-one.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That in the adjustment of accounts under this act the commissioners shall not allow for any expenditure or compensation for service at a rate greater than was at the time authorized by the laws of the United States and the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War in similar cases.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That so soon as said commissioners shall have made up said account and ascertained the balance, as herein directed, they shall make written report thereof, showing the different items of expenditure as hereinbefore stated, to the Secretary of the Treasury, and shall transmit all the testimony taken by said commissioners to the Secretary of the Treasury; and if upon an examination by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury the account shall be found to be just and correct, the same shall be paid.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the commissioners to be appointed as aforesaid shall, before proceeding to the discharge of their duties, be severally sworn that they will carefully examine the accounts existing between the United States and the State of Missouri, and that they will, to the best of their ability, make a just, true, and impartial statement thereof, as required by this act. They shall receive such compensation for their services as may be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, not exceeding ten dollars per day for each day of actual service.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the sum of six million seven hundred and fifteen thousand and eighty-nine dollars and sixty-five cents, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated to carry this act into effect.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. XLVII.—An Act to authorize the President of the United States to transfer a Gunboat to the Government of the Republic of Liberia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to transfer to the Government of the republic of Liberia any one of the gunboats now or hereafter included in the Navy of the United States, her armament, tackle, apparel, and furniture, which may be acceptable to that Government, and cau, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy, be conveniently spared for that purpose, and upon a valuation to be fixed by him.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Navy is authorized and directed to enter into a contract with any person duly empowered by the Government of that republic, by which that Government shall engage to repay to the United States the value of the gunboat to be transferred: Provided, That the contract shall stipulate for the full reimbursement to the United States of the value of such gunboat in annual installments, not exceeding ten in number, with interest on each at six per centum per annum from the date of the contract.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. XLVIII.—An Act to provide that the "Soldier's Individual Memorial" shall be carried through the Mails at the usual Rate of printed Matter.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the ornamental records of the personal services of Federal officers and soldiers, composed partly of written and partly of printed matter, but containing no private communications, and known as the "soldier's individual memorial," shall be allowed to pass through the mails upon the payment of the usual postage on printed matter.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. LXIII.—An Act to authorize the Sale of Marine Hospitals and of Revenue-Cutters.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to lease, or to sell at public auction, to the highest and best bidder, for cash, after due notice in the public newspapers, such marine hospital buildings and lands appertaining thereto as he may deem advisable; and he is hereby empowered to make, execute, and deliver all needful conveyances to the lessees or purchasers thereof respectively; and the proceeds of said leases and sales are hereby appropriated for the marine hospital establishment: Provided, That the hospitals at Cleveland, Ohio, and Portland, Maine, shall not be sold or leased, nor shall any hospital be sold or leased where no other suitable and sufficient hospital accommodations can be procured upon reasonable terms for the comfort and convenience of the patients.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to sell at public auction, to the highest and best bidder, for cash, after due notice in the public newspapers, such of the revenue-cutters as he shall find to be ill adapted to the purposes of the revenue service, and to expend the proceeds of said sales in the purchase or construction of other vessels better suited to the wants of said service.

APPROVED, April 20, 1866.

CHAP. LXV.—An Act to issue American Registers to the Steam Vessels "Michigan," "Dispatch," and "William K. Muir," and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue American registers to the Canadian-built steamers "Michigan" and "Dispatch," and the American-built steamer "William K. Muir," of the collection district of Detroit; and American registers, or enrollment and license, to the following-named vessels, that is to say, to the sloop "Jenny Lind of Wolf Island," of Oswego, New York; the schooners "Coquette of Oakville," "Trenton of Trenton," "Forest Queen," "Two Brothers of Wallaceburg," "Minetta of Gananogue," and "Elizabeth," of Oswego, New York; the bark "St. Elizabeth," of Provincetown, Massachusetts; the barks "Advance" and "Acorn," and schooner "Asia," of Chicago, Illinois; the barges "Harvest," "Ajax," and "Matilda," of Chicago, Illinois; the steamer "Prince Albert," of Georgetown, District of Columbia; the brig "Maitland," propeller "Niagara," and steamboat "Canadian," of Buffalo, New York; the schooner "E. P. Ryerse," of Cleveland, Ohio; the schooner "Eureka," of Margareta, Ohio; the brigantine "City of Toronto," of Erie, Pennsylvania; and the schooner[r] "Wavertree," of Cleveland, Ohio; and American registers, or enrollment and license, to the following-named vessels, that is to say, the ship "Screamer," of Brunswick, Maine; the barge "Mary," of Detroit; the steam-tug "Sampson," of Detroit; and the schooners "Caledonia" and "Enterprise," of Detroit; and the "Anglo-Saxon," a Canadian-built vessel.

APPROVED, April 25, 1866.

CHAP. LXVIII.—An Act making Appropriations to supply Deficiency in the Appropriation for the Public Printing for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated to supply deficiencies in the appropriation for the public printing for the fiscal year ending thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated:

To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for the public printing, one hundred and fifteen thousand dollars.

To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for paper for the public printing, four hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

To supply a deficiency in the appropriation for the public binding, ninety-five thousand dollars.

And the Superintendent of the Public Printing is hereby authorized to employ an additional clerk, of class four.

APPROVED, April 26, 1866.

CHAP. LXX.—An Act to facilitate the Settlement of the Accounts of the Treasurer of the United States, and to secure certain Moneys to the People of the United States, or to Persons to whom they are due, and who are entitled to receive the same.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all amounts of moneys that are represented by certificates, drafts, or checks, issued by the Treasurer of the United States, or by any disbursing officer of any department of the Government of the United States, upon the Treasurer or any Assistant Treasurer, or designated depository of the United States, or upon any national bank designated as a depository of the United States, and which shall be represented on the books of either such offices as standing to the credit of any disbursing officer, and bearing date prior to July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and which were issued to facilitate the payment of warrants, or for any other purpose in liquidation of a debt due from the United States, which may remain outstanding on the first day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, shall be deposited by the Treasurer of the United States, to be covered into the Treasury by warrant, and to be carried to the credit of the parties in whose favor such certificates, drafts, or checks were respectively issued, or to the persons who are entitled to receive pay therefor, and into an appropriation account to be denominated "outstanding liabilities."

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the certificate of the Register of the Treasury, stating that the amount of any draft issued by the Treasurer of the United States, to facilitate the payment of a warrant directed to him for payment, and which may have so remained outstanding and unpaid for three years or more as aforesaid, and which shall have been thus deposited and covered into the Treasury, shall be, and the same is hereby authorized to be, when attached to any such warrant, a sufficient voucher in satisfaction of any such warrant or part of any warrant, the same as if the drafts correctly indorsed and fully satisfied were attached to such warrant or part of warrant. And all such moneys mentioned in this and in the preceding section shall remain as a permanent appropriation for the redemption and payment of all such outstanding and unpaid certificates, drafts, and checks as aforesaid.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the payee, or the bona fide holder of any such draft or check, the amount of which has been so deposited and covered into the Treasury, shall, on presenting the same to the proper officer of the Treasury, be entitled to have it paid by the settlement of an account and the issuing of a warrant in his favor, according to the practice in other cases of authorized and liquidated claims against the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That at the termination of every fiscal year after this act shall begin to operate, the provisions thereof shall apply to all similar certificates, drafts, and checks, which shall then have for three years or more remained outstanding, unsatisfied and unpaid, and to all disbursing officers' accounts that shall have so remained unchanged, as in the next section provided for.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the amounts, except such as are provided for in the first section of this act, of the accounts of every kind of disbursing officer of the Government of the United States, which shall have remained unchanged, or which shall not have been increased by any new deposit thereto, nor decreased by drafts drawn thereon, for the space of three years, shall in like manner be covered into the Treasury, to the proper appropriation to which they may belong, and the amounts thereof shall, on the certificate of the Treasurer of the United States that such amount has been deposited in the Treasury, be credited by the proper accounting officer of the Treasury on the books of the Treasury Department, to the officer in whose name it had stood on the books of any agency of the Treasury, if it shall be made to appear that he is entitled to such credit.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of giving force and effect to the full intent and meaning of this act, it shall be the duty of the Treasurer, and of all Assistant Treasurers, and of all designated depositories of the United States, and of the cashiers of all national banks designated as such depositories, to report to the Secretary of the Treasury, at the close of business on the thirtieth day of June next, and in like manner at the close of business on every thirtieth day of June thereafter, the condition of every such account so standing, as in the preceding section specified, on the books of their respective offices, stating the name of each depositor, respectively, with his official designation, the total amount so remaining on deposit to his credit, and the dates, respectively, of the last credit and the last debit made to each of such accounts, respectively. And it shall be the duty of every and each disbursing officer in any and every department of the Government of the United States to make a like return of all checks issued by such officer, and which may then have been outstanding and unpaid for three years and more, stating fully in such report the name of the payee, for what purpose given, the office on which drawn, the number of the voucher received therefor, and the date, number, and amount for which it was drawn, and, when known, the residence of the payee.

APPROVED, May 2, 1866.

CHAP. LXXI.—An Act to remit and refund certain Duties.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered to remit, or if paid to refund, any duties levied on produce shipped from a port of the United States to a port of the United States, via Canada, if the said produce was actually in transitu and detained by ice when the recent reciprocity treaty with Canada expired.

APPROVED, May 2, 1866.

CHAP. LXXII.—An Act to provide for the better Organization of the Pay Department of the Navy.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, from and after the passage of this act, the active list of the pay corps of the Navy shall consist of eighty paymasters, forty passed assistant paymasters, and thirty assistant paymasters. Paymasters shall be regularly promoted and commissioned from passed assistant paymasters, and passed assistant paymasters from assistant paymasters, and all passed assistant paymasters authorized by this act to be appointed who have not heretofore been appointed and commissioned as assistant paymasters and all assistant paymasters hereby authorized to be appointed shall be selected from those who have served as acting assistant paymasters for the term of one year, and who were eligible to appointment in the grade of assistant paymasters when they were appointed acting assistant paymasters, as aforesaid; subject, however, to such examinations as are required by law, and such as may be established by the Secretary of the Navy.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That passed assistant paymasters shall give bonds for the faithful performance of their duties in the sum of fifteen thousand dollars, and that their annual pay shall be, at sea, fifteen hundred dollars; on other duty, fourteen hundred dollars; on leave or waiting orders, twelve hundred dollars.

APPROVED, May 3, 1866.

CHAP. LXXIII.—An Act concerning the Boundaries of the State of Nevada.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, as provided for and consented to in the constitution of the State of Nevada, all that territory and tract of land adjoining the present eastern boundary of the State of Nevada, and lying between the thirty-seventh and the forty-second degrees of north latitude and west of the thirty-seventh degree of longitude west of Washington, is hereby added to and made a part of the State of Nevada.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there is hereby added to and made a part of the State of Nevada all that extent of territory lying within the following boundaries, to wit: commencing on the thirty-seventh degree of north latitude, at the thirty-seventh degree of longitude west from Washington; and running thence south on said degree of longitude to the middle of the river Colorado of the West; thence down the middle of said river to the eastern boundary of the State of California; thence northwesterly along said boundary of California to the thirty-seventh degree of north latitude; and thence east along said degree of latitude to the point of beginning: Provided, That the territory mentioned in this section shall not become a part of the State of Nevada until said State shall, through its Legislature, consent thereto: And provided further, That all possessory rights acquired by citizens of the United States to mining claims, discovered, located, and originally recorded in compliance with the rules and regulations adopted by miners in the Pah-Ranagat and other mining districts in the territory incorporated by the provisions of this act into the State of Nevada shall remain as valid subsisting mining claims; but nothing herein contained shall be so construed as granting a title in fee to any mineral lands held by possessory titles in the mining States and Territories.

APPROVED, May 5, 1866.

CHAP. LXXIV.—An Act to encourage telegraphic communication between the United States and the Island of Cuba and other West India Islands and the Bahamas.

Whereas James A. Scrymser, Alfred Pell, junior, Alexander Hamilton, junior, Oliver K. King, Maturin L. Delafield, William F. Smith, and James M. Digges, their associates, successors, and assigns, persons composing the International Ocean Telegraph Company, an incorporated company chartered by the State of New York, are desirous of establishing a submarine telegraphic communication between the United States of America and the West India islands and the Bahamas: Now, therefore, in order to facilitate the said enterprise,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the said International Ocean Telegraph Company, incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, their successors and assigns, shall have the sole privilege for a period of fourteen years from the approval of this act, to lay, construct, land, maintain, and operate telegraphic or magnetic lines or cables in and over the waters, reefs, islands, shores, and lands, over which the United States have jurisdiction, from the shores of the State of Florida, in the said United States, to the island of Cuba and the Bahamas, either or both, and other West India islands.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said International Ocean Telegraph Company shall at all times give the United States the free use of said cable or cables, to a telegraphic operator of its own selection, to transmit any messages to and from its military, naval, and diplomatic or consular agents; and the said company shall keep all its lines open to the public for the transmission for daily publication of market and commercial reports and intelligence, and all messages, dispatches, and communications shall be forwarded in the order in which they shall be received; and the said company shall not be permitted to charge and collect for messages transmitted through any of its submarine cables more than the rate of three dollars and fifty cents for messages of ten words, subject, however, to the power of Congress to alter and determine said rates: Provided, That the said International Ocean Telegraph Company shall, within the period of three years from the passage of this act, cause the said submarine telegraphic cable or cables to be laid down, and that the said cable or cables shall be in successful operation for the transmission of messages within the said period of five years; otherwise, this grant to be null and void.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That Congress shall have power, at any time, to alter or repeal the foregoing act.

APPROVED, May 5, 1866.

CHAP. LXXV.—An Act to extend the Jurisdiction of the Court of Claims.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Court of Claims shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the claim of any paymaster, quartermaster, commissary of subsistence, or other disbursing officer of the United States, or of his administrators or executors, for relief from responsibility on account of losses by capture or otherwise, while in the line of his duty, of Government funds, vouchers, records, and papers in his charge, and for which such officer was and is held responsible: Provided, That an appeal may be taken to the Supreme Court, as in other cases.

39TH CONG.... 1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That whenever said court shall have ascertained the facts of any such loss to have been without fault or neglect on the part of any such officer, it shall make a decree, setting forth the amount thereof, upon which the proper accounting officers of the Treasury shall allow to such officer the amount so decreed as a credit in the settlement of his accounts.

APPROVED, May 9, 1866.

CHAP. LXXXVI.—An Act enlarging the Powers of the Levy Court of the County of Washington, in the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the levy court of the county of Washington, in the District of Columbia, is hereby empowered to declare and locate as public highways such roads known and used as military roads in said District during the rebellion as said court may deem advisable: Provided, That the damages which the owners of the land over which said roads pass shall sustain by reason of said roads being declared public highways, shall be assessed as provided for in section three of the act of Congress approved July first, eighteen hundred and twelve, entitled "An act conferring certain powers on the levy court for the county of Washington, in the District of Columbia."

APPROVED, May 9, 1866.

CHAP. LXXIX.—An Act to incorporate the National Theological Institute.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Abram D. Gillette, Edgar H. Gray, Edmund Turney, Zalman Richards, Robert J. Powell, William T. Johnson, Henry Beard, Charles H. Morse, Joseph C. Lewis, John S. Poler, David Rees, D. W. Anderson, Daniel C. Eddy, Leonard A. Grimes, Justice D. Fulton, William R. Williams, Isaac Westcott, Howard Malcolm, Joseph H. Kennard, Newton Brown, T. Dwight Miller, and all persons who shall or may be associated with them, and their successors, are hereby created and declared a body corporate and politic, in deed and in law, by the name of "The National Theological Institute," and by that name shall have succession and be capable in law to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, answer and be answered, defend and be defended, in all courts of law and equity and elsewhere; to make and use a common seal, and the same to alter or renew at pleasure; and generally to do and perform all things relative to the object of this corporation which is now and shall be lawful for any individual or body politic or corporate to do.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the object and purpose of this corporation shall be for the education of persons for the Christian ministry, and those associated with them as assistants, in such course of theological and general studies as may be deemed proper for that purpose; and for that purpose is hereby authorized to elect or appoint such officers as may be deemed necessary or proper for the control of its affairs; to adopt such regulations and by-laws for its government as may be deemed necessary, not inconsistent with the laws of the United States in force in the District of Columbia, and to amend or repeal them at pleasure; to receive and hold any lands, tenements, annuities, moneys, goods, chattels, or other property of every kind or nature, which shall be given, granted, or bequeathed to it, or be otherwise acquired, for the purpose of carrying out the object of this corporation, not exceeding fifty thousand dollars in real estate at any one time; and the same to sell or dispose of in such manner as may be desired for the purpose aforesaid: Provided, That any property so acquired, or the proceeds thereof, or any money received as a gift, shall not be used for any other than such educational purposes: And provided, also, That no person shall be excluded from the advantages of education afforded by the institute on account of theological belief.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That this act may at any time be altered, amended, or repealed.

APPROVED, May 10, 1866.

CHAP. LXXX.—An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act relating to Habeas Corpus, and regulating judicial Proceedings in certain Cases," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That any search, seizure, arrest, or imprisonment made, or any acts done or omitted to be done during the said rebellion, by any officer or person, under and by virtue of any order, written or verbal, general or special, issued by the President or Secretary of War, or by any military officer of the United States holding the command of the department, district, or place within which such seizure, search, arrest, or imprisonment was made, done, or committed, or any acts were so done or omitted to be done, either by the person or officer to whom the order was addressed, or for whom it was intended, or by any other person aiding or assisting him therein, shall be held, and are hereby declared, to come within the purview of the act to which this is amendatory, and within the purview of the fourth, fifth, and sixth sections of the said act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for all the purposes of defense, transfer, appeal, error, or limitation provided therein. But no such order shall, by force of this act, or the act to which this is an amendment, be a defense to any suit or action for any act done or omitted to be done after the passage of this act.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That when the said order is in writing, it shall be sufficient to produce in evidence the original, with proof of its authenticity, or a certified copy of the same; or if sent by telegraph, the production of the telegram purporting to emanate from such military officer shall be prima facie evidence of its authenticity; or if the original of such order or telegram is lost or cannot be produced, secondary evidence thereof shall be admissible, as in other cases.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the right of removal from the State court into the circuit court of the United States, provided in the fifth section of the act to which this is amendatory, may be exercised after the appearance of the defendant and the filing of his plea or other defense in said court, or at any term of said court subsequent to the term when the appearance is entered, and before a jury is impaneled to try the same; but nothing herein contained shall be held to abridge the right of such removal after final judgment in the State court, nor shall it be necessary in the State court to offer or give surety for the filing of copies in the circuit court of the United States; but, on the filing of the petition, verified as provided in said fifth section, the further proceedings in the State court shall cease, and not be resumed until a certificate under the seal of the circuit court of the United States, stating that the petitioner has failed to file copies in the said circuit court, at the next term, is produced.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That if the State court shall, notwithstanding the performance of all things required for the removal of the case to the circuit court aforesaid, proceed further in said cause or prosecution before said certificate is produced, then, in that case, all such further proceedings shall be void and of none effect; and all parties, judges, officers, and other persons, thenceforth proceeding thereunder, or by color thereof, shall be liable to damages therefor to the party aggrieved, to be recovered by action in a court of the State having proper jurisdiction, or in a circuit court of the United States for the district in which such further proceedings may have been had, or where the party, officer, or other person, so offending, shall be found; and upon a recovery of damages in either court, the party plaintiff shall be entitled to double costs.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the clerk of the State court to furnish copies of the papers and files in the case to the party so petitioning for the removal; and upon the refusal or neglect of the clerk to furnish such copies, the said party may docket the case in the circuit court of the United States; and thereupon said circuit court shall have jurisdiction therein, and may, upon proof of such refusal or neglect of the clerk of the State court, and upon reasonable notice being given to the plaintiff, require him to file a declaration or petition therein; and upon his default may order a non-suit, and dismiss the case at the costs of the plaintiff, which dismissal shall be a bar to any further suit touching the matter in controversy.

APPROVED, May 11, 1866.

CHAP. LXXXI.—An Act to authorize the Coinage of Five-Cent Pieces.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, so soon as practicable after the passage of this act, there shall be coined at the Mint of the United States a five-cent piece composed of copper and nickel, in such proportions, not exceeding twenty-five per centum of nickel, as shall be determined by the Director of the Mint, the standard weight of which shall be seventy-seven and sixteen hundredths grains, with no greater deviation than two grains to each piece; and the shape, mottoes, and devices of said coin shall be determined by the Director of the Mint, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury; and the laws now in force relating to the coinage of cents, and providing for the purchase of material, and prescribing the appropriate duties of the officers of the Mint and the Secretary of the Treasury, be, and the same are hereby, extended to the coinage herein provided for.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all laws now in force relating to the coins of the United States, and the striking and coining of the same, shall, so far as applicable, be extended to the coinage herein authorized, whether said laws are penal or otherwise, for the security of the coin, regulating and guarding the process of striking and coining, for preventing debasement or counterfeiting, or for any other purpose. And the Director of the Mint shall prescribe suitable regulations to insure a due conformity to the required weights and proportions of alloy in the said coin, and shall order trials thereof to be made from time to time by the assayer of the Mint, whereof a report shall be made in writing to the Director.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That said coin shall be a legal tender in any payment to the amount of one dollar. And it shall be lawful to pay out such coins in exchange for the lawful currency in the United States, (except cents, or half cents, or two-cent pieces, issued under former acts of Congress,) in suitable sums, by the treasurer of the Mint, and by such other depositaries as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and under general regulations approved by the Secretary of the Treasury. And under the like regulations the same may be exchanged in suitable sums for any lawful currency of the United States, and

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

the expenses incident to such exchange, distribution, and transmission may be paid out of the profits of said coinage; and the net profits of said coinage, as ascertained in the manner prescribed in the second section of the act entitled "An act relating to foreign coins and the coinage of cents at the Mint of the United States," approved February twenty-first, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, shall be transferred to the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That from and after the passage of this act no issues of fractional notes of the United States shall be of a less denomination than ten cents; and all such issues at that time outstanding shall, when paid into the Treasury or any designated depository of the United States, or redeemed or exchanged as now provided by law, be retained and canceled.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That if any person or persons not lawfully authorized shall knowingly make, issue, or pass, or cause to be made, issued, or passed, or aid in the making, issuing, or passing of any coin, card, token, or device whatsoever, in metal or its compound, intended to pass or be passed as money for the coin authorized by this act, or for coin of equal value, such person or persons shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, at the discretion of the court.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for the Treasurer and the several Assistant Treasurers of the United States to redeem in national currency, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, the coin herein authorized to be issued, when presented in sums of not less than one hundred dollars.

APPROVED, May 16, 1866.

CHAP. LXXXII.—An Act imposing a Duty on live Animals.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That on and after the passage of this act, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, on all horses, mules, cattle, sheep, hogs, and other live animals, imported from foreign countries, a duty of twenty per centum ad valorem: Provided, That any such animals now bona fide owned by resident citizens of the United States, and now in any of the Provinces of British America, may be imported into the United States free of duty until the expiration of ten days next after the passage of this act.

APPROVED, May 16, 1866.

CHAP. LXXXIII.—An Act to change the Place of holding the Courts of the United States for the northern District of Mississippi.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the district courts of the United States for the northern district of Mississippi, now required to be held at the town of Pontotoc, shall hereafter be held at the town of Oxford, in said State.

APPROVED, May 16, 1866.

CHAP. LXXXIV.—An Act to amend "An Act to establish the Grade of Vice Admiral in the United States Navy."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the second section of an act to establish the grade of vice admiral in the United States Navy, approved December twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following: "And he shall be allowed a secretary, with the rank and sea pay and allowances of a lieutenant in the Navy."

APPROVED, May 16, 1866.

CHAP. LXXXV.—An Act making Appropriations for the Service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated for the service of the Post Office Department for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, out of any moneys in the Treasury arising from the revenues of said Department, in conformity to the act of the second of July, eighteen hundred and thirty-six:

For transportation of the mails, (inland,) nine million five hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For transportation of the mails, (foreign,) six hundred thousand dollars.

For ship, steamboat, and way letters, eight thousand dollars.

For compensation to postmasters, four million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For clerks for post offices, one million nine hundred and twenty thousand dollars.

For payment to letter carriers, six hundred and forty thousand dollars.

For wrapping-paper, one hundred thousand dollars.

For twine, thirty thousand dollars.

For letter balances, six thousand dollars.

For compensation to blank agents and assistants, eight thousand dollars.

For office furniture, six thousand dollars.

For advertising, eighty thousand dollars.

For postage stamps and stamped envelopes, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For mail depredations and special agents, one hundred thousand dollars.

For mail bags, one hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

For mail locks, keys, and stamps, thirty thousand dollars.

For payment of balances due to foreign countries, three hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For miscellaneous payments, three hundred and twenty thousand dollars.

To enable the Superintendent of the Naval Observatory to carry out the object of Senate resolution of March nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for report of Isthmus routes to the Pacific ocean, fifteen hundred dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the following sums, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same are hereby, appropriated for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated:

For the mail steamship service between the United States and Brazil, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars: Provided, That this appropriation shall take effect only when Brazil shall have performed the condition on her part provided in the law authorizing said service.

For the mail steamship service between San Francisco, Japan, and China, for six months ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For the overland mail transportation between Atchison and Folsom, and for marine mail transportation between New York and California, nine hundred thousand dollars.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to employ sailing vessels for the transportation of the mails between the ports of the United States and any foreign ports where the service may be facilitated thereby, allowing and paying therefor a compensation not exceeding the sea postages accruing on the mails so conveyed.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and is hereby, required to report to the Secretary of the Treasury annually, prior to the first day of November of each year, his estimate of the money required for the service of the Post Office Department for the ensuing fiscal year; which estimate shall be reported to Congress with the printed estimates of appropriations required by the joint resolution of the seventh of January, eighteen hundred and forty-six.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the balance of the appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars under the thirteenth section of an act "to establish a postal money-order system," approved May seventeenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, which may remain unexpended at the close of the current fiscal year, may be used as far as necessary to supply deficiencies in the proceeds of the money-order system during the fiscal year commencing July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That all advertising, notices, and proposals for contracts for the Post Office Department, and all advertising, notices, and proposals for contracts for all the Executive Departments of the Government, required by law to be published in the city of Washington, shall hereafter be advertised by publication in the two daily newspapers in the city of Washington having the largest circulation, and in no others: Provided, That the charges for such publications shall not be higher than such as are paid by individuals for advertising in said papers: And provided also, That the same publications shall be made in each of said papers equally as to frequency, and that the circulation of such papers shall be determined upon the tenth day of June annually; and the publishers of all papers competing for such advertising shall furnish a sworn statement of their bona fide paid circulation of each regular issue for the preceding three months; and shall in like manner certify under oath that such circulation has not, during the said three months, been increased by any gratuitous circulation, by a reduction in price below the ordinary and usual price of such papers, or by any other means, for the purpose of obtaining the official advertising: Provided, That the charge for such advertising shall not be greater than is paid for the same publications in other cities, or at a higher rate than is paid by individuals for like advertising.

APPROVED, May 18, 1866.

CHAP. LXXXVI.—An Act to prevent and punish Kidnapping.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That if any person shall kidnap or carry away any other person, whether negro, mulatto, or otherwise, with the intent that such other person shall be sold or carried into involuntary servitude, or held as a slave; or if any person shall entice, persuade, or knowingly induce any other person to go on board any vessel or to any other place, with the intent that he or she shall be made or held as a slave, or sent out of the country to be so made or held, or shall in any way knowingly aid in causing any other person to be held, sold, or carried away, to be held or sold as a slave, he or she shall be punished, on conviction thereof, by a fine of not less than five hundred nor more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding five years, or by both of said punishments.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if the master or owners, or person having charge of any vessel, shall receive on board any other person, whether negro, mulatto, or otherwise, with the knowledge or intent that such person shall be carried from any State, Territory, or district of the United States, to a foreign country, State, or place, to be held or sold as a slave, or shall carry away from any State, Territory, or district of the United States, any such person, with the intent that he or she shall be so held or sold as a slave, such master, owner, or other person offending, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand nor less than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding five years, or by both of said punishments. And the vessel on board which said person was received to be carried away shall be forfeited to the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

APPROVED, May 21, 1866.

CHAP. LXXXVII.—An Act to establish a Post Route from West Alburg, Vermont, to Champlain, in the State of New York, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the railroad bridge across Lake Champlain at Rouse's Point, connecting the Ogdensburg and Lake Champlain railroad in the State of New York, with the Vermont and Canada railroad, in the State of Vermont, be, and is hereby, declared a lawful structure, and is, and shall be, recognized and known as a post route.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Ogdensburg and Lake Champlain Railroad Company, their successors or assigns, and the Vermont and Canada Railroad Company, their successors and assigns, are hereby authorized to keep up, maintain and use the said bridge, for the transportation of the mails, and for the benefit of the general commerce between said States and the transportation of persons and property. And in place of the float now in use forming part of said bridge, they or either of them may construct and maintain two suitable draws, one of which shall be at least sixty feet wide, and the other at least ninety feet wide, and which shall always be opened by the railroad company which constructs the same, whenever required for the passage of vessels, except during and for fifteen minutes prior to the passage of mail trains. And which draws shall be so constructed and managed as at all times to afford reasonable and proper facilities for the passage of vessels: Provided, That this act shall be subject to amendment or repeal at the pleasure of Congress.

APPROVED, May 21, 1866.

CHAP. LXXXVIII.—An Act amendatory of "An Act to provide for the Reports of Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States shall hereafter be allowed the term of eight months for the publication of his reports instead of six, as provided by the act of August twenty-nine, eighteen hundred and forty-two.

APPROVED, May 21, 1866.

CHAP. LXXXIX.—An Act to regulate the Time and fix the Place for holding the Circuit Court of the United States in the District of Virginia, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the circuit court of the United States in the district of Virginia shall be held at the city of Richmond, commencing on the first Monday in May and on the fourth Monday of November, in each year; and the said court may adjourn its session, now authorized, from Norfolk to Richmond, and there hold the same, and transfer to said last-named place all records, files, process, and property pertaining to said court. And all proceedings and process in or issuing out of said court, which are, or may be, made returnable to any other times or places appointed for holding said court than herein prescribed, shall be deemed legally returnable on the days specified and at Richmond, and not otherwise; and all suits and other proceedings in said court which stand continued to any other time or place shall be deemed continued to the place and time prescribed by this act. And special or adjourned terms of said court may be held at such time and on such notice as may be ordered and prescribed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, with the same power and jurisdiction as at regular terms. And said court, at any such regular, special, or adjourned terms, shall have power to issue and enforce all writs and process, make all orders, and do all acts necessary for the due administration of justice and the exercise of their jurisdiction.

APPROVED, May 22, 1866.

CHAP. XCVI.—An Act to incorporate the Academy of Music of Washington City.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Max Strakosch, William G. Pope, Max Maretzek, W. G. Metzertott, Joseph J. May, B. F. Isherwood, John G. Clark, Henry C. Sherman, Carl Bergman, and F. C. Adams, or any five of them, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to receive subscriptions to the capital stock of a company to be denominated "The Academy of Music of Washington, D. C.," who shall open a book for that purpose in the city of Washington, at the time and place to be by them designated, of which they shall give five days' notice in two or more of the daily papers of said city, and shall keep the same open until ten thousand shares of fifty dollars a share each shall have been subscribed; and any person of lawful age, and a citizen of the United States, shall be permitted to subscribe upon paying five dollars on each share at the time of subscribing. And it shall be lawful for the said corporation to have a common seal, sue and be sued, plead and be pleaded, and have and exercise all the rights, privileges, and immunities, for the purpose of the corporation hereby created.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the affairs of the company shall be managed by nine directors, to be elected annually by ballot on the first Monday of October, by the stockholders or by their legally empowered agents; and each share of stock shall entitle the holders thereof to one vote; the election to be held at the office of the company at a general meeting of the stockholders convened for that purpose by ten days' public notice in two or more of the daily papers of the city of Washington: Provided, That the first election for directors shall be held pursuant to ten days' notice given in one or more papers of the city of Washington, by the persons named in the first section of this act, or any five of them, who shall designate the time when and the place where said election shall be held; and the stockholders shall then and there elect nine directors to serve until the next ensuing election, as provided for in this act. And at the first ensuing meeting of the directors after every election they shall appoint one of their number as president, who, together with themselves, shall hold office until the next ensuing election as herein provided for, and five members of said board shall compose a quorum. And in case that an election for directors should not be made when pursuant to this act it should have been made, the company for that cause shall not be dissolved, and it shall be lawful within forty days thereafter to hold and make an election for directors in such manner as the by-laws of the company may prescribe, and the president and directors for the time being shall be continued in office until such election take place. And in the event of death or resignation, or removal of any director from office, his place for the remainder of his term may be filled by the president and directors for the time being, in such manner as the by-laws may prescribe.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the president and directors shall have power to appoint a secretary and such other officers, agents, and clerks as may to them appear proper, to fix their compensation and pay the same.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the capital stock shall be called in and paid in such installments and proportions, and at such times and places, as the president and directors for the time being may require and designate, who shall give fifteen days' notice thereof in two or more daily papers of the city of Washington. And if any stockholders, subscribers, their assignees or transferees, shall refuse or neglect to pay such proportions or installments, at the time and place appointed, such stockholders, subscriber, transferee, or assignee shall, at the option of the president and directors, forfeit to the use of the company all his, her, or their right, title, and interest in and to every share on which such installment has not been duly paid; and fresh subscriptions may be opened for the same, in such manner as the by-laws may prescribe, or the president and directors may at their option commence suit for the same and proceed against the holder of said stock for the amount of the installment or proportion so unpaid: Provided, That no stockholder or subscriber shall be permitted to vote at any election for directors, or at any general or special meeting of the company, on whose shares any installments or arrearages may be due more than fifteen days previous thereto.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the president and directors for the time being shall have power to ordain, establish, and put in execution such rules, regulations, ordinances, and by-laws as they may deem essential for the well government of the institution, not contrary to the laws and Constitution of the United States or of this act, and generally to do and perform all acts, matters, and things necessary to carry out the purposes of this corporation.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the president and directors are hereby empowered and fully authorized, on behalf of the company, to purchase and hold in fee-simple, or lease for a term of years, real estate in the city of Washington sufficient to enable them to erect thereon a building suitable for operatic, dramatic, and other entertainments, in such manner, and upon such terms, as may be by them deemed for the best interests of the company.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the said company are hereby authorized to borrow money to an amount not exceeding their capital stock, upon bonds to be issued by said company, secured upon their property and franchises: Provided, That no bond shall be issued for a less sum than one hundred dollars, and bearing a greater rate of interest than seven per centum per annum.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the president and directors shall, from time to time, divide so much of the profits of said company as to them may appear advisable, first deducting all expenses, and pay the same to the respective stockholders, or their agents duly empowered to receive the same.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the stock of said company shall be transferred on the books of the company in such manner only as the by-laws of the company may direct.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as making it perpetual, but Congress may at any time alter, amend, or repeal the same.

APPROVED, May 24, 1866.

CHAP. XCVII.—An Act to amend the Charter of the Washington Gas-Light Company.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the charter of the Washington Gas-Light Company be, and the same is hereby, amended in the third section by substituting the word "February" for "January."

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

capital stock of said company be, and the same is hereby, increased five hundred thousand dollars, subject to the same liability as is provided in the eleventh section of the original act of incorporation, approved July eighth, eighteen hundred and forty-eight.

APPROVED, May 24, 1866.

CHAP. C.—An Act to authorize the Appointment of an additional Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint an additional Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who shall perform the same duties and receive the same salary as is by law allowed to the present Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the office hereby created shall cease by limitation in six months from the approval of this act.

APPROVED, May 26, 1866.

CHAP. CII.—An Act to repeal Section twenty-three of Chapter seventy-nine of the Acts of the Third Session of the Thirty-Seventh Congress, relating to Passports.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section twenty-three of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and for the year ending the thirtieth June, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and for other purposes," be, and the same is hereby repealed. And hereafter passports shall be issued only to citizens of the United States.

APPROVED, May 30, 1866.

CHAP. CIII.—An Act to define more clearly the Jurisdiction and Powers of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That writs of attachment and garnishments shall be issued by the clerk of the supreme court of the District, without any authority or warrant from any judge or justice, whenever the plaintiff, his agent or attorney, shall file in the clerk's office, whether at the commencement or during the pendency of the suit, an affidavit, supported by the testimony of one or more witnesses, showing the grounds upon which he bases his affidavit, and also setting forth that the plaintiff has a just right to recover against the defendant what he claims in the declaration, and also stating either, first, that the defendant is a non-resident of the District; or, second, that the defendant evades the service of ordinary process by concealing himself or by withdrawing from the District temporarily; or, third, that he has removed or is about to remove some of his property from the District, so as to defeat just demands against him; and shall also file his (the plaintiff's) undertaking, with sufficient surety or sureties, to be approved by the clerk, to make good all costs and damages which the defendant may sustain by reason of the wrongful suing out of the attachment: Provided, however, That if the defendant, his agent or attorney, shall file an affidavit traversing the said affidavit, the court shall determine whether the facts set forth in said plaintiff's affidavit are true, and that there was just ground for issuing said writ or warrant of attachment; and if the court shall deem the facts do not sustain the affidavit, he shall quash the writ of attachment or garnishment; and this issue may be tried by a judge at chambers on three days' notice. And the thing attached shall not be discharged from the custody of the officer seizing it, until the defendant shall deliver, either to the officer or to the clerk, to be filed in the cause, his undertaking, with sufficient surety or sureties, to satisfy and pay the final judgment of the court against him; and in case the defendant be found liable to the plaintiff's claim, in whole or in part, the final judgment shall be that the plaintiff recover against the defendant and his surety or sureties; and if the defendant fail to execute such undertaking, the court may sell the thing attached whenever it is satisfied that it is the interest of the parties that it should be sold before final judgment.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That from and after the passage of this act the annual salaries of the chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, instead of the amount now fixed by law, shall be as follows: for the chief justice, four thousand five hundred dollars, and for each of the associate justices, four thousand dollars.

APPROVED, June 1, 1866.

CHAP. CIV.—An Act to incorporate the Women's Hospital Association of the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Abram D. Gillette, Byron Sunderland, Charles H. Hall, George W. Sampson, J. N. Coombs, William B. Matchett, Henry D. Cooke, William W. Corcoran, Charles Knap, J. H. Thompson, Moses Kelley, Ansel St. John, Mrs. Adelaide J. Brown, Mrs. Mary W. Kelley, Elmira W. Knap, Mary C. Havenner, Mary Ellen Norment, Jane Thompson, Maria L. Harkness, Isabella Margaret Washington, Mary F. Smith, Mrs. Elmira W. Powell, and Mrs. Elizabeth Sampson, and their successors duly chosen, are hereby constituted and created a body-corporate in the District of Columbia, by the name of the Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-in Asylum.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That said corporation hereby constituted shall consist of twenty-four members. They shall have power to fill all vacancies created by death, resignation, or otherwise, and to make by-laws, rules, and regulations: Provided, That such by-laws, rules, and regulations are not repugnant to the Constitution or laws of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the affairs of said corporation shall be under the control and management of a board of twelve directors, to consist of the first twelve of the above-named incorporators, or such further number as the duties of the corporation may require, such increase of numbers to be made by a vote of two thirds of the existing board. The board of directors shall also have power to appoint all sub-committees necessary to the direction and efficiency of the institution hereby authorized to be established.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the first twelve corporators named in the first section hereof, together with those who may be elected directors as provided in the preceding section, shall constitute the first board of directors, who shall from their number elect a president, two vice presidents, a secretary, and treasurer; and seven of the directors, of whom the president or one of the vice presidents shall be one, shall form a quorum for the transaction of business.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the object of the association hereby incorporated is to found in the city of Washington a hospital and dispensary for the treatment of diseases peculiar to women, and lying-in asylum, in which those unable to pay therefor shall be furnished with board, lodging, medicine, and medical attendance gratuitously, and to that end full powers are hereby conferred on the association.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That said corporation shall have power to accept, purchase, receive conveyances of, and hold property, either personal or real, to an amount necessary for the full accommodation, convenience, and support of the institution and those participating in its benefits.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the property, personal or real, so held by said corporation, shall be exempt from all taxes and assessments levied under act of Congress, or by authority of any municipal corporation or board within the District of Columbia.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That Congress may at any time hereafter alter, amend, or repeal this act.

APPROVED, June 1, 1866.

CHAP. CV.—An Act to protect American Citizens engaged in lumbering on the St. Croix River, in the State of Maine.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the St. Croix river and its tributaries, owned by American citizens, and sawed in the Province of New Brunswick by American citizens, (the same being unmanufactured in whole, or in part,) and having paid the same taxes as other American lumber on that river, shall be admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time prescribe.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That this act shall take effect from and after its passage.

APPROVED, June 1, 1866.

CHAP. CVI.—An Act supplementary to the several Acts relating to Pensions.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section five of an act entitled "An act supplementary to an act entitled 'An act to grant pensions,' approved July fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two," approved July fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and section three of an act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts relating to pensions," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, be, and the same are hereby, repealed, and the following shall stand in lieu thereof: that, from and after the passage of this act, all persons by law entitled to a less pension than hereinafter specified, who, while in the military or naval service and in line of duty, shall have lost the sight of both eyes, or who shall have lost both hands, or been permanently and totally disabled in the same, or otherwise so permanently and totally disabled as to render them utterly helpless, or so nearly so as to require the constant personal aid and attendance of another person, shall be entitled to a pension of twenty-five dollars per month; and all persons, who under like circumstances, shall have lost both feet, or one hand and one foot, or been totally and permanently disabled in the same, or otherwise so disabled as to be incapacitated for performing any manual labor, but not so much so as to require constant personal aid and attendance, shall be entitled to a pension of twenty dollars per month; and all persons who, under like circumstances, shall have lost one hand or one foot, or been totally and permanently disabled in the same, or otherwise so disabled as to render their inability to perform manual labor equivalent to the loss of a hand or a foot, shall be entitled to a pension of fifteen dollars per month.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That any pledge, mortgage, sale, assignment, or transfer of any right, claim, or interest in any pension which has been, or may hereafter be, granted, shall be void and of no effect; and any person acting as attorney to receive and receipt for money for and in behalf of any person entitled to a pension shall, before receiving said money, take and subscribe an oath, to be filed with the pension agent, and by him to be transmitted, with the vouchers now required by law, to the proper accounting officer of the Treasury, that he has no interest in said money by any pledge, mortgage, sale, assignment, or transfer, and that he does not know or believe that the same has been so disposed of to any person; and any person who shall falsely take the said oath shall be guilty of perjury, and, on conviction, shall be liable to the pains and penalties of perjury.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That any person who shall present or cause to be presented at any pension agency any power of attorney, or other paper required as a voucher in drawing a pension, which paper shall bear a date subsequently to that on which it was actually signed or executed, such person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years, or by both, at the discretion of the court before whom such conviction shall be had, and no sum of money due, or to become due, to any pensioner under the laws aforesaid, shall be liable to attachment, levy or seizure by or under any legal or equitable process whatever, whether the same remains with the Pension Office or any officer or agent thereof, or is in course of transmission to the pensioner entitled thereto; but shall inure wholly to the benefit of such pensioner.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That no claim agent or other person shall hereafter charge or receive more than twenty-five cents for preparing the papers necessary to enable a pensioner to receive a semi-annual payment of his pension, nor shall any pension agent charge or receive more than fifteen cents for administering an oath to a pensioner, or his attorney in fact, under a penalty of five dollars in each case.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That section one of an act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts relating to pensions," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, is hereby repealed.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That if any person entitled to an invalid pension has died since March four, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, or shall hereafter die while an application for such pension is pending, and after the proof has been completed, leaving no widow and no minor child under sixteen years of age, his heirs or legal representatives shall be entitled to receive the accrued pension to which the applicant would have been entitled had the certificate been issued before his death.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That in all cases when a commission shall have been regularly issued to any person in the military or naval service who shall have died or been disabled while in the line of duty, after the date of such commission, and before being mustered, such officer or other person entitled to a pension for such death or disability by existing laws shall receive a pension corresponding to his rank, as determined by such commission, the same as if he had been mustered: Provided, That this section shall not apply to any officer who shall have willfully neglected or refused to be so mustered.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That officers absent on sick leave, and enlisted men absent on sick furlough, shall be regarded in the administration of the pension laws in the same manner as if they were in the field or hospital.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the period of service of all persons entitled to the benefits of the pension laws, or on account of whose death any person may become entitled to a pension, shall be construed to extend to the time of disbanding the organization to which such persons belonged, or until their actual discharge for other cause than the expiration of the service of such organization.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That enlisted men employed as teamsters, wagoners, artificers, hospital stewards, farriers, saddlers, and all other enlisted men, however employed in the service of the Army or Navy, not specifically mentioned in the first section of an act entitled "An act to grant pensions," approved July fourteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, shall be regarded, in the administration of the pension laws, as non-commissioned officers or privates.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That if any officer, soldier, or seaman shall have died of wounds received or of disease contracted in the line of duty in the military or naval service of the United States, leaving a widow and a child or children under the age of sixteen years, and it shall be duly certified under seal, by any court having probate jurisdiction, that satisfactory evidence has been produced before such court that the widow aforesaid has abandoned the care of such child or children, or is an unsuitable person, by reason of immoral conduct, to have the custody of the same, then no pension shall be allowed to such widow until said minor child or children shall have become sixteen years of age, any previous enactment to the contrary notwithstanding; and the minor child or children aforesaid shall be pensioned in the same manner as if no widow had survived the said officer, soldier, or seaman, and such pension may be paid to the regularly authorized guardian of such minor or minors.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That section four of an act entitled "An act to grant pensions," approved July fourteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, is hereby so amended that the provisions thereof shall apply to and include the orphan brother or brothers, as well as sister or sisters, under sixteen years of age, and the father as well as mother of a deceased officer or other person named in section one of the above entitled act, who were dependent upon him for support in whole or in part, subject to the same limitations and restrictions.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this or any other act shall be so construed as to repeal or modify the sixth section of an act entitled "An act supplementary to 'An act to grant pensions,' approved July fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two," approved July fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, or to entitle a person to receive more than one pension at the same time, and in every case in which a claim for pension shall not have been filed within three years after the discharge or decease of the party on whose account the claim is made, the pension, if allowed, shall commence from the date of filing the last paper in said case by the party prosecuting the same.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the fourteenth section of an act entitled "An act supplementary to an act entitled 'An act to grant pensions,' approved July fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two," approved July fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be, and the same is hereby, repealed, and that the widows and children of colored soldiers and sailors who have been or may be hereafter killed, or who have died or may hereafter die of wounds received or of disease contracted in the military or naval service of the United States, and in the line of duty, shall be entitled to receive the pensions, bounty, and back pay provided by law, without other evidence of marriage than proof, satisfactory to the Commissioner of Pensions, that the parties had habitually recognized each other as man and wife, and lived together as such; and the children born of any marriage so proved shall be deemed and taken to be the children of the soldier or sailor party thereto.

APPROVED, June 6, 1866.

CHAP. CX.—An Act making Appropriations for the Support of the Military Academy for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the support of the Military Academy for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven:

For pay of officers, instructors, cadets, and musicians, one hundred and fifty-four thousand eight hundred and forty dollars.

For commutation of subsistence, four thousand five hundred and sixty-one dollars.

For pay in lieu of clothing to officers' servants, one hundred and fifty-six dollars.

For current and ordinary expenses, fifty-eight thousand dollars.

For increase and expense of library, two thousand dollars.

For expenses of Board of Visitors, three thousand dollars.

For forage for artillery and cavalry horses, fifteen thousand dollars.

For horses for artillery and cavalry practice, one thousand dollars.

For repairs of officers' quarters, five thousand dollars.

For targets and batteries for artillery practice, five hundred dollars.

For furniture for cadets' hospital, one hundred dollars.

For gas-pipes, gasometers, and retorts, three hundred dollars.

For reflooring academic buildings and barracks, six thousand dollars.

For the purchase of fuel for warming mess-hall, shoemakers' and tailors' shops, two thousand dollars.

For materials for quarters for subaltern officers, three thousand dollars.

For continuing the erection of memorial tablets and mural monuments to deceased officers of the regular Army, and of volunteers; arranging and preserving trophies of war; and marking with proper inscriptions the guns captured during the rebellion, five thousand dollars.

For enlarging and improving the cemetery, and for repairing the inclosure thereof, five thousand dollars.

For the removal to a safe place, and reconstruction of the magazine, ten thousand dollars.

For ventilating and heating the barracks and other academic buildings; improving the apparatus for cooking for the cadets; repairing the hospital buildings, including the introduction of baths for the sick; the construction of water-closets in the library building; and new furniture for the recitation rooms, twenty thousand dollars.

For the removal and enlargement of the gas-works, six thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That no person who has served in any capacity in the military or naval service of the so-called confederate States during the late rebellion shall hereafter receive an appointment as a cadet at the Military or Naval Academy.

APPROVED, June 8, 1866.

CHAP. CXI.—An Act making Appropriations to supply Deficiencies in the Appropriations for Contingent Expenses of the House of Representatives of the United States, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated:

For miscellaneous items, ten thousand dollars.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG...1ST SESS.

For folding documents, seventeen thousand five hundred dollars.

For furniture and repairs, and packing boxes for members, ten thousand dollars.

For stationery, fifteen thousand dollars, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

APPROVED, June 8, 1866.

CHAP. CXIV.—An Act to amend the Postal Laws.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, from and after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, prepaid and free letters shall be forwarded, at the request of the party addressed, from one post office to another without additional postage charge; and returned dead letters shall be restored to the writers thereof free of postage.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the tenth section of the act entitled "An act to establish salaries for postmasters, and for other purposes," approved July one, eighteen hundred and sixty-four; and so much of the twenty-eighth section of the act entitled "An act to amend the laws relating to the Post Office Department," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, as requires postage to be charged at the prepaid rate, to be collected on the return delivery of letters, indorsed with a request for their return to the writers, be, and the same are hereby, repealed; and all letters bearing such indorsement shall hereafter be returned to the writers thereof without additional postage charge.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the third section of the act entitled "An act to establish a postal money-order system," approved May seventeen, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to authorize the issuing of a money order for any sum not to exceed fifty dollars, and that the charge or fee for an order for a sum not exceeding twenty dollars shall be ten cents; for an order exceeding twenty dollars shall be twenty-five cents.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That a money order shall be valid and payable when presented to the deputy postmaster on whom it is drawn, within one year after its date, but for no longer period; and in case of the loss of a money order a duplicate thereof shall be issued without charge, on the application of the remitter or payee, who shall make the required proofs; and postmasters at all money-order offices are hereby authorized and required to administer to the applicant or applicants in such cases the required oath or affirmation free of charge.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That all railroad companies carrying the mails of the United States shall convey without extra charge, by any train which they may run over their roads, all such printed matter as the Postmaster General shall, from time to time, direct to be transported thereon with the persons in charge of the mails designated by the Post Office Department for that purpose.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That if any person or persons shall willfully and maliciously injure, deface, or destroy any mailable matter deposited in any letter box, pillar box, or other receiving boxes established by authority of the Postmaster General of the United States for the safe deposit of matter for the mails or for delivery, or shall willfully aid and assist in injuring such mailable matter so deposited as aforesaid, every such offender being thereof duly convicted shall, for every such offense, be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned not more than three years, at the discretion of the court.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That whenever it shall become expedient, in the opinion of the Postmaster General, to substitute a different kind of postage stamps for those now in use, he shall be, and is hereby, authorized to modify the existing contract for the manufacture of postage stamps so as to allow to the contractors a sum sufficient to cover the increased expenses, if any, of manufacturing the stamps so substituted.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That section two of the act entitled "An act to establish salaries for postmasters, and for other purposes," approved July one, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be amended by adding the following: Provided, That when the quarterly returns of any postmaster of the third, fourth, or fifth class show that the salary allowed is ten per centum less than it would be on the basis of commissions under the act of eighteen hundred and fifty-four, fixing compensation, then the Postmaster General shall review and readjust under the provisions of said section.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That whenever the Postmaster General shall require special agents of the Post Office Department to collect or disburse the public moneys accruing from postages, such special agent or agents, when so employed, shall, prior to entering upon such duty, give bond in such sum, in such form, and with such security, as the Postmaster General may approve.

APPROVED, June 12, 1866.

CHAP. CXV.—An Act making Appropriations for the Construction, Preservation, and Repairs of certain Fortifications and other Works of Defense, for the year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and they are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the construction, preservation, and repairs of certain fortifications and other works of defense for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven:

For Fort Wayne, near Detroit, Michigan, fifty thousand dollars.

For Fort Ontario, Oswego, New York, fifty thousand dollars.

For Fort Montgomery, at outlet of Lake Champlain, New York, fifty thousand dollars.

For Fort Scammel, Portland, Maine, thirty-five thousand dollars.

For Fort George, on Hog Island ledge, Portland, Maine, fifty thousand dollars.

For Fort Popham, Kennebec river, Maine, fifty thousand dollars.

For Fort Constitution, Portsmouth, New Hampshire, seventy-five thousand dollars.

For Fort Winthrop, Boston, Massachusetts, thirty thousand dollars.

For Fort Warren, Boston, Massachusetts, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For sea-wall at Great Brewster's Island, Boston harbor, Massachusetts, seventy-five thousand dollars.

For sea-walls on Deer and Lovell's Islands, Boston harbor, Massachusetts, fifty thousand dollars.

For fort at entrance of New Bedford harbor, Massachusetts, thirty thousand dollars.

For Fort Schuyler, East river, New York, thirty thousand dollars.

For fort at Willett's Point, opposite Fort Schuyler, New York, fifty thousand dollars.

For repairs of Fort Hamilton, New York, thirty thousand dollars.

For fort on site of Fort Tompkins, Staten Island, New York, fifty thousand dollars.

For fort at Sandy Hook, New Jersey, fifty thousand dollars.

For repairs of Fort Mifflin, near Philadelphia, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For construction of permanent platforms for modern cannon of large caliber, in existing fortifications of important harbors, one hundred thousand dollars.

For repairs of Fort Washington, on the Potomac river, twenty thousand dollars.

For Fort Monroe, Hampton Roads, Virginia, thirty thousand dollars.

For Fort Taylor, Key West, Florida, one hundred thousand dollars.

For Fort Jefferson, Garden Key, Tortugas, fifty thousand dollars.

For fort on Ship Island, coast of Mississippi, ten thousand dollars.

For Fort Clinch, Amelia Island, Florida, fifty thousand dollars.

For fort at Fort Point, San Francisco bay, California, one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

For fort at Lime Point, California, seventy-five thousand dollars.

For fort at Alcatraz Island, San Francisco bay, California, ninety thousand dollars.

For survey of northern and northwestern lakes, including Lake Superior, fifty thousand dollars.

For purchase of sites now occupied and lands proposed to be occupied for permanent sea-coast defenses, provided that no such purchase shall be made except upon the approval of its expediency by the Secretary of War, and of the validity of title by the Attorney General, thirty-five thousand dollars.

APPROVED, June 12, 1866.

CHAP. CXVI.—An Act authorizing Documentary Evidence of Titles to be furnished to the Owners of certain Lands in the City of St. Louis.

Whereas within the city of Saint Louis, in the State of Missouri, there are many lots, tracts, pieces, and parcels of land which were confirmed by the act of Congress of June the thirteenth, eighteen hundred and twelve, on the ground of inhabitation, possession, or cultivation of the same prior to December the twentieth, eighteen hundred and three, and in some cases there is no adequate documentary evidence of said confirmations; and in consequence of the death of the ancient witnesses, who knew the facts of said inhabitation, possession, or cultivation, the owners of said lands, in said cases where there is no adequate documentary evidence of said confirmations, are without complete evidence of title to the same, as against the United States; and whereas persons holding grants and confirmations of lands in said city of Saint Louis, under other acts of Congress heretofore passed, may, in some cases, be without perfect documentary evidence of said grants or confirmations by the United States, and difficulties may hereafter arise therefrom, to the great injury of such persons: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Missouri is hereby authorized, by proper decree, to declare released, granted, relinquished, and conveyed by the United States in fee-simple and in full property, all of the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to any lot, tract, piece or parcel of land within the city of Saint Louis, in the State of Missouri, to the person or persons having the best claim or claims to the same; but nothing in this act shall authorize said court to declare released, granted, relinquished, and conveyed, as aforesaid, any land within any wharf, street, lane, avenue, alley, or other public thoroughfare, or within the boundaries of any land which has been heretofore granted or assigned by the United States for the use or support of schools, or within the boundaries of any land heretofore lawfully granted by the United States, where full, sufficient, and complete documentary evidence of such confirmation or grant now exists of record.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That every person desiring a decree in his or her favor, under this act, shall file a petition in said district court, asking for such decree, and describing the land for which said decree is desired; and the United States and all persons claiming such land adversely to said petitioner (if there be any such adverse claimants) shall be made defendants in said cause; and if any party to any such cause shall be a minor under the age of twenty-one years, a guardian ad litem shall be appointed by said court for said minor; and said district court shall have full and complete power, jurisdiction, and authority to hear, try, and determine all questions arising in said cause relating to the claim of the petitioner, the extent, locality, and boundaries of said claim, and all other matters connected therewith or concerning the same; and said district court shall also have power to make, prescribe, and enforce such rules and regulations as may be necessary and proper to carry this act into full and complete execution.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That a copy of every petition which shall be filed under this act, and a copy of the writ or process thereto attached, shall be delivered to the district attorney of the United States for said eastern district of Missouri, by the United States marshal for said district, which said delivery shall make the United States a party to the cause specified in such petition, without any other or further proceedings, notice, service, writ, or process whatever; and said district attorney shall make such defense therein for the United States as in his opinion the public interest may require; but no answer or other pleadings filed by said attorney in such cause shall be required to be verified by oath or affirmation.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of more completely describing, identifying, and defining the boundaries, situation, and locality of any lot, tract, piece or parcel of land sought to be released, granted, relinquished, and conveyed under this act, the said district court shall have power to cause an accurate survey, plat, and description thereof to be made by a competent person at the expense of the petitioner; and all of the expenses and costs of all suits and other proceedings under this act shall be paid by the respective petitioners, and the payment thereof may be enforced by execution or otherwise.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That every decree which shall be rendered under this act in favor of any petitioner shall be deemed a full, sufficient, and complete release, grant, relinquishment, and conveyance, in fee-simple, and in full property, to such petitioner, and to his or her heirs and assigns, forever, of all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the land described in such decree.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That whenever said district court or the circuit court shall render a final decree under this act, concerning any lot, tract, piece or parcel of land, such court shall cause to be transmitted to the Commissioner of the General Land Office a full, true, and complete transcript of said final decree, and of the description or survey of said land.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That any party to any final decree rendered by said district court in any suit or cause commenced under this act may appeal from said final decree of said district court to the circuit court of the United States for the district of Missouri, at any time within one year from the time of the rendition of said final decree, and not after that time; and on the granting of said appeal, a full, true, and complete transcript of said final decree, and of the petition, and all other pleadings and proceedings in said cause, and of the evidence therein, shall be transmitted to said circuit court. And when said appeal shall have been completed, said circuit court shall have full and complete jurisdiction over said cause, and may allow the pleadings to be amended if necessary, and may admit new parties if necessary, and shall hear, try, and determine said cause de novo, without regarding any error, defect, or other imperfection in the proceedings of said district court, and shall render such final decree therein as the facts and the justice of said cause may require.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That in case of any difference of opinion between the judges of the said circuit court upon any question arising in any such cause, the same may be certified to the Supreme Court of the United States, for its decision thereon as in other cases.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That all of the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to all of the wharves, streets, lanes, avenues, alleys, and other public thoroughfares which are situate, lying, and being within the corporate limits of the city of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, shall be, and the same are hereby, granted, relinquished, and conveyed by the United States, in fee-simple and in full property, to the said city of St. Louis, and to the successors and assigns forever of said city: Provided, however, That no individual rights or titles acquired previously hereto shall be in any manner impaired or prejudiced hereby.

APPROVED, June 12, 1866.

CHAP. CXVII.—An Act to grant the Right of Way to the "Humboldt Canal Company" through the public Lands of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the right of way for a canal through the public lands of the United States lying in Humboldt county, State of Nevada, and the use of the land for tow-paths, cuttings, and embankments, to the extent of fifty feet on each side of the center of the canal, shall be, and is hereby, granted to the Humboldt Canal Company: Provided, That in cases where deep excavation or heavy embankment is required, such greater width, not exceeding two hundred feet, may be taken by said company as may be necessary.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That, in order to create a reservoir for said company sufficient to feed said canal in all seasons, said company shall be, and is hereby, authorized, by a dam across the Humboldt river, at such point at or near the gap in the Fremont range of mountains through which said river passes, to flow so much of the public lands above said dam as may be required for the purpose of said reservoir.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there shall be, and is hereby, granted to said company the necessary sites along said canal for waste-gates, mill-sites, depots, and other uses of said canal, so far as places convenient for the same fall upon the public lands, and also the privilege of discharging the waste waters of said canal over any public lands into the said Humboldt river, at such places as may be suitable for that purpose: Provided, That the proper officers of said company shall transmit to the Commissioner of the General Land Office a correct plat of the survey and location of said canal, and of the sites needed for mills, depots, waste-gates, and other uses of said canal, before the appropriation thereof for said uses shall become operative: And provided further, That unless thirty miles of said canal shall be excavated within one year, [and] the whole within three years, from the date hereof, the grants hereby made shall cease and determine: And provided further, That if said canal shall at any time after its completion be discontinued or abandoned by said company, the grants hereby made shall cease and determine, and the lands hereby granted shall revert to the United States: And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to interfere with any grant of the right of way and of public lands heretofore made to any railroad company.

APPROVED, June 12, 1866.

CHAP. CXXII.—An Act to regulate and secure the Safe-Keeping of public Money intrusted to disbursing Officers of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the passage of this act it shall be the duty of every disbursing officer of the United States having any public money intrusted to him for disbursement, to deposit the same with the Treasurer or some one of the Assistant Treasurers of the United States, and to draw for the same only as it may be required for payments to be made by him in pursuance of law; and all transfers from the Treasury of the United States to a disbursing officer shall be by draft or warrant on the Treasury or an Assistant Treasurer of the United States: Provided, That in places where there is no Treasurer nor Assistant Treasurer of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury may, when he deems it essential to the public interest, specially authorize in writing the deposit of such public money in any other public depository, or, in writing, authorize the same to be kept in any other manner, and under such rules and regulations as he may deem most safe and effectual to facilitate the payments to public creditors.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if any disbursing officer of the United States shall deposit any public money intrusted to him in any place or in any manner, except as authorized by law, or shall convert to his own use in any way whatever, or shall loan, with or without interest, or shall for any purpose not prescribed by law withdraw from the Treasurer or any Assistant Treasurer, or any authorized depository, or shall for any purpose not prescribed by law transfer or apply any portion of the public money intrusted to him, every such act shall be deemed and adjudged an embezzlement of the money so deposited, converted, used, loaned, withdrawn, transferred, or applied, and every such act is hereby declared a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not less than one year nor more than ten years, or by fine not more than the amount embezzled nor less than one thousand dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court.

SEC. [3.] And be it further enacted, That if any banker, broker, or any person, not an authorized depository of public moneys, shall knowingly receive from any disbursing officer, or collector of internal revenue, or other agent of the United States any public money on deposit or by way of loan or accommodation, with or without interest, or otherwise than in payment of a debt against the United States; or shall use, transfer, convert, appropriate, or apply any portion of the public money for any purpose not prescribed by law; or shall counsel, aid, or abet any disbursing officer or collector of internal revenue or other agent of the United States in so doing, every such act shall be deemed and adjudged an embezzlement of the money so deposited, loaned, transferred, used, converted, appropriated, or applied; and any president, cashier, teller, director, or other officer of any bank or banking association who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of embezzlement of public money, and punished as provided in section two of this act.

APPROVED, June 14, 1866.

CHAP. CXXIII.—An Act to provide for the Settlement of Accounts of certain public Officers.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, all monies raised in the United States for the support of refugees

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

or freedmen, and received by any officer of the United States Army, shall be charged against such officer on the books of the Treasury Department and accounted for by him in like manner as if such monies had been drawn from the Treasury of the United States, and if any part thereof shall have been expended for the use of refugees or freedmen, the same shall be passed to the credit of the officer, if, upon examination of his accounts, it shall appear to the proper accounting officer of the Treasury Department that the amount expended was properly disbursed for such refugees or freedmen, and on the adjustment of the accounts of the officer, if any balance shall remain in the hands of such officer the same shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, for a fund for the relief of refugees and freedmen. And any officer having such balance in his hands, who, after being duly required, shall refuse or neglect to pay over the same, or who shall, after due notice, fail to settle his account, shall be proceeded against in the same manner as is provided for by existing laws in the case of disbursing officers who neglect or refuse to account for monies drawn from the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That where accounts are rendered for expenditures for refugees or freedmen under the approval and sanction of the proper officers, and which shall have been proper and necessary, but cannot be settled for want of specific appropriations, the same may be paid out of the fund for the relief of refugees and freedmen, on the approval of the Commissioner of the Bureau of Refugees and Freedmen.

APPROVED, June 15, 1866.

CHAP. CXXIV.—An Act to facilitate commercial, postal, and military Communication among the several States.

Whereas the Constitution of the United States confers upon Congress, in express terms, the power to regulate commerce among the several States, to establish post roads, and to raise and support armies: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every railroad company in the United States, whose road is operated by steam, its successors and assigns, be, and is hereby, authorized to carry upon and over its road, boats, bridges, and ferries all passengers, troops, Government supplies, mails, freight, and property on their way from any State to another State, and to receive compensation therefor, and to connect with roads of other States so as to form continuous lines for the transportation of the same to the place of destination: Provided, That this act shall not affect any stipulation between the Government of the United States and any railroad company for transportation or fares without compensation, nor impair or change the conditions imposed by the terms of any act granting lands to any such company to aid in the construction of its road, nor shall it be construed to authorize any railroad company to build any new road or connection with any other road without authority from the State in which said railroad or connection may be proposed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That Congress may at any time alter, amend, or repeal this act.

APPROVED, June 15, 1866.

CHAP. CXXVI.—An Act to authorize the Commissioner of Patents to pay those employed as Examiners and Assistant Examiners the Salary fixed by Law for the Duties performed by them.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Commissioner of Patents is hereby authorized to pay those employed in the Patent Office from April first, eighteen [hundred] and sixty-one until the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, as examiners and assistant examiners of patents, at the rates fixed by law for these respective grades: Provided, That the same be paid out of the Patent Office fund, and that the compensation thus paid shall not exceed that received by those duly enrolled as examiners and assistant examiners of patents for the same period.

APPROVED, June 18, 1866.

CHAP. CXXVII.—An Act for the Disposal of the public Lands for Homestead actual Settlement in the States of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Florida.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the passage of this act all the public lands in the States of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Florida shall be disposed of according to the stipulations of the homestead law of twentieth May, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain," and the act supplemental thereto, approved twenty-first of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, but with this restriction, that until the expiration of two years from and after the passage of this act, no entry shall be made for more than a half quarter section, or eighty acres; and in lieu of the sum of ten dollars required to be paid by the second section of said act, there shall be paid the sum of five dollars at the time of the issue of each patent; and that the public lands in said States shall be disposed of in no other manner after the passage of this act: Provided, That no distinction or discrimination shall be made in the construction or execution of this act on account of race or color: And provided further, That no mineral lands shall be liable to entry and settlement under its provisions.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That section second of the above-cited homestead law, entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain," approved May twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, be so amended as to read as follows: that the person applying for the benefit of this act shall, upon application to the register of the land office in which he or she is about to make such entry, make affidavit before the said register or receiver that he or she is the head of a family, or is twenty-one years or more of age, or shall have performed service in the Army or Navy of the United States, and that such application is made for his or her exclusive use and benefit, and that said entry is made for the purpose of actual settlement and cultivation, and not either directly or indirectly for the use or benefit of any other person or persons whomsoever; and upon filing the said affidavit with the register or receiver, and on payment of five dollars, when the entry is of not more than eighty acres, he or she shall thereupon be permitted to enter the amount of land specified: Provided, however, That no certificate shall be given or patent issued therefor, until the expiration of five years from the date of such entry; and if, at the expiration of such time, or at any time within two years thereafter, the person making such entry, or if he be dead, his widow; or in case of her death, his heirs or devisee; or in case of a widow making such entry, her heirs or devisee, in case of her death, shall prove by two credible witnesses that he, she, or they have resided upon or cultivated the same for the term of five years immediately succeeding the time of filing the affidavit aforesaid, and shall make affidavit that no part of said land has been alienated, and that he will bear true allegiance to the Government of the United States; then, in such case, he, she, or they, if at that time a citizen of the United States, shall be entitled to a patent, as in other cases provided by law: And provided further, That in case of the death of both father and mother, leaving an infant child or children under twenty-one years of age, the right and fee shall inure to the benefit of said infant child or children; and the executor, administrator, or guardian may, at any time within two years after the death of the surviving parent, and in accordance with the laws of the State in which such children, for the time being, have their domicile, sell said land for the benefit of said infants, but for no other purpose; and the purchaser shall acquire the absolute title by the purchase, and be entitled to a patent from the United States on the payment of the office fees and sum of money herein specified: Provided, That until the first day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, any person applying for the benefit of this act shall, in addition to the oath hereinbefore required, also make oath that he has not borne arms against the United States, or given aid and comfort to its enemies.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That all the provisions of the said homestead law, and the act amendatory thereof, approved March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, so far as the same may be applicable, except so far as the same are modified by the preceding sections of this act, are applied to and made part of this act as fully as if herein enacted and set forth.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

CHAP. CXXVIII.—An Act to reimburse the State of West Virginia for Moneys expended for the United States in enrolling, equipping, and paying military Forces to aid in suppressing the Rebellion.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That immediately after the passage of this act the President shall appoint three commissioners whose duty it shall be to ascertain the amount of moneys expended by the State of West Virginia in enrolling, supplying, equipping, subsisting, transporting, and paying such State forces as have been called into service in said State since the twentieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, to act in concert with the United States forces in the suppression of rebellion against the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the commissioners so appointed shall proceed at once to examine all the expenditures made by said State for the purposes herein named, allowing only for disbursements made and amounts assumed by the State for enrolling, equipping, subsisting, transporting, supplying, and paying such troops as were called into service by the Governor, at the request of the United States department commander commanding the district in which West Virginia may at the time have been included, or by the express order, consent, or concurrence of such commander, or which may have been employed in suppressing rebellion in said State. And no allowance shall be made for any troops which did not perform actual military service in full concert and cooperation with the authorities of the United States and subject to their orders.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That in making up said account, for the convenience of the accounting officers of the Government, the commissioners shall state separately the amounts expended, respectively, for enrolling, equipping, arming, subsisting, transporting, and paying said troops, and from the aggregate amount they shall deduct the amount of direct tax due by the said State to the United States under the act entitled "An act to provide increased revenue from imports, pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," approved August fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-one.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That in the adjustment of accounts under this act the commissioners shall not allow for any expenditure or compensation for service at a rate greater than was at the time authorized by the laws of the United States in similar cases.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That so soon as said commissioners shall have made up said account and ascertained the balance, as herein directed, they shall make written report thereof, showing the different items of expenditure, as hereinbefore stated, to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall cause the same to be examined by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury, and said officer shall audit the accounts as in ordinary cases; and if from their report it shall appear that any sum remains due to the said State, he shall draw his warrant for the same, payable to the Governor of said State, and deliver it to him.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the commissioners to be appointed as aforesaid shall, before proceeding to the discharge of their duties, be sworn that they will carefully examine the accounts existing between the United States and the State of West Virginia, and that they will, to the best of their ability, make a just, true, and impartial statement thereof, as required by this act. They shall receive such compensation for their services as may be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the sum of three hundred and sixty-eight thousand five hundred and forty-eight dollars and thirty-seven cents be, and the same is hereby, appropriated to carry this act into effect.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

CHAP. CXXIX.—An Act to establish a Hydrographic Office in the Navy Department.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall be a hydrographic office attached to the Bureau of Navigation in the Navy Department, for the improvement of the means for navigating safely the vessels of the Navy and of the mercantile marine, by providing, under the authority of the Secretary of the Navy, accurate and cheap nautical charts, sailing directions, navigators, and manuals of instructions, for the use of all vessels of the United States, and for the benefit and use of navigators generally.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause to be prepared, at the hydrographic office attached to the Bureau of Navigation in the Navy Department, maps, charts, and nautical books relating to and required in navigation, and to publish and furnish them to navigators at the cost of printing and paper, and to purchase the plates and copyrights of such existing maps, charts, navigators, sailing directions, and instructions as he may consider necessary, and when he may deem it expedient to do so, and under such rules, regulations, and instructions as he may prescribe.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the moneys which may be received from the sale of all such maps, charts, and nautical books shall be returned by the Secretary of the Navy into the Treasury of the United States; to be used in the further preparation and publication of maps, charts, navigators, sailing directions, and instructions for the use of seamen, and to be sold at the rates as set forth in the preceding section.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

CHAP. CXXX.—An Act to incorporate the "Howard Institute and Home" of the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That James M. Edmunds, Sayles J. Bowen, Cordial Storrs, Augustin Chester, John R. Elvans, J. Sayles Brown, and Linus D. Bishop, and their associates and successors, are hereby declared to be a body politic and corporate, under the name and style of "The Howard Institute and Home" of the District of Columbia, and as such shall have perpetual succession, with power to receive, purchase, and hold real or personal property, and to be able to sue and be sued, and to plead and be impleaded in all courts of law and equity in the United States, and to ordain and establish such by-laws, ordinances, and regulations as may be deemed necessary to carry into effect this act, and promote the objects of the corporation hereby created.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the object for which this corporation is created is declared to be the establishment of a charitable institution for the instruction of freedmen in the industrial pursuits of life and fit them for independent self-support, and to afford a temporary home for such freedmen as may, from sickness, misfortune, age, or infirmity, require fostering care until otherwise relieved.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That James M. Edmunds, Sayles J. Bowen, Cordial Storrs, Augustin Chester, John R. Elvans, J. Sayles Brown, and Linus D. Bishop, are hereby appointed a board of managers of said "Howard Institute and Home," for one year from and after the passage of this act; and that thereafter a board of managers, consisting of seven persons, shall be elected from and by the contributors to the means to establish said institution, for such time and according to such rules as said corporation may establish. And said board of managers shall have the exclusive control of all the property, real or personal, contributed or belonging to said corporation, and to appoint such officers as may be deemed requisite for the conduct of its business, for such time and at such salaries as they may determine, and to change either at pleasure.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the corporation hereby created shall be established and maintained by voluntary contributions, gifts, donations, or bequests of money and other property, made to the same for that purpose. And the board of managers shall cause a record to be kept of all such contributions, gifts, donations, and bequests, with the name and residence of each person making the same, and of all expenditures made by said board for the establishment and conduct of said institute and home, and make an annual report of the same, exhibiting the several items of expenditure and objects thereof, and generally the work accomplished by said corporation, to the Secretary of the Interior, a copy of which report shall be sent to each individual who shall have contributed not less than five dollars to said corporation during the year previous to the issuing of said report.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That Congress may, at any time, alter, amend, or annul this act.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXI.—An Act to regulate the Appointment of Paymasters in the Navy, and explanatory of an Act for the better Organization of the Pay Department of the Navy.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the appointments to be made under the act entitled "An act to provide for the better organization of the pay department of the Navy," approved May third, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, may be made from the number of acting assistant paymasters of the Navy who performed duty as acting assistant paymasters during the war, and who at the time of their appointment under this act shall not be over the age of thirty-two years.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States be, and is hereby, authorized to waive the examination of such officers in the pay department of the Navy as are on duty abroad, and cannot at present be examined, as required by law: Provided, That such examinations as are required by law shall be made as soon as practicable after the return of said officers to the United States, and no officer found to be disqualified shall receive the promotion contemplated in the act herein referred to.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXII.—An Act authorizing the Restoration of Commander Charles Hunter to the Navy.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to restore Charles Hunter, late a commander in the Navy, to the position which he held on the retired list of the Navy when dismissed therefrom.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXVIII.—An Act making Appropriations for the Repair, Preservation, and Completion of certain Public Works heretofore commenced under the Authority of Law, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums of money be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction and superintendence of the Secretary of War, for the repair, preservation, and completion of the following works, heretofore commenced under the authority of law, and for the other purposes herein-after named, that is to say:

For examination and survey of works of improvement for which appropriations have been heretofore made, and concerning which no sufficient information is now in possession of the Department, and for examination and survey at other points in the fourth section of this act specified, that is to say, on the Atlantic coast thirty thousand dollars; on the Pacific coast twenty-five thousand dollars; on the northwestern lakes one hundred thousand dollars; on the western and northwestern rivers one hundred thousand dollars. And the Secretary of War, when the public interests require it, shall cause examinations or reexaminations to be made, with suitable surveys of the works aforesaid, and all other works provided for by this act, and shall make such changes or modifications of the plans heretofore adopted for their improvement as shall be necessary and proper. And he shall cause such needful examination of other harbors and places in the fourth section of this act specified, upon the sea and lake coasts, and on western rivers, to be made as will enable him to determine what improvements thereof are required to render them safe and convenient for the navigation of the naval and commercial vessels of the United States and the cost of such improvements, and he shall make full report thereof, and of the plans deemed advisable therefor, to Congress, at the commencement of the next session, for such action as may be judged expedient and right. And if, upon such examination and survey of works first herein named, being works now existing or in process of completion, and concerning which no sufficient information is now in the possession of the Department, there shall remain an unexpended balance of appropriation properly applicable thereto from the sums herein appropriated, which may, in the judgment of the Secretary of War, be judiciously applied toward the economical and needful continuation or completion of such works, the Secretary of War shall direct such balance to be applied and used accordingly; but no moneys shall be used for such purposes, excepting from the balances remaining from appropriations herein made for the specific examination and survey of such works.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

For extending the breakwater at Portland harbor, Maine, one hundred and five thousand one hundred and eleven dollars and five cents.

For improvement of navigation of Hudson river, New York, fifty thousand dollars.

For preservation of Provincetown harbor, Massachusetts, forty-three thousand and sixty-eight dollars and forty-four cents.

For improvement of Thames river, Connecticut, ten thousand dollars.

For extension and repair of breakwater at Burlington, Vermont, twenty-seven thousand six hundred and seventy-two dollars and twenty cents.

For completion and repair of Delaware breakwater, Delaware bay, one hundred and seven thousand nine hundred and ten dollars.

For improving channel of Susquehanna river below Havre de Grace, Maryland, twenty-six thousand four hundred dollars.

For continuing improvement of Patapsco river, Maryland, five thousand two hundred dollars.

For construction of snag-boats and other apparatus for clearing western rivers, and for the outfit, working, and preservation thereof, five hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

And the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized and directed, upon such terms as may be agreed on by the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of War, to transfer to and place at the disposal of the Secretary of War such steamers of the United States, with boats and equipage belonging thereto, and used during the rebellion as portions of the river fleet, as may be so transferred in the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy without detriment to the public service, and as may be conveniently and fitly used in raising snags or removing obstructions from western rivers, so as to render them safe and navigable for the vessels of the United States and for the uses of commerce; and if the same shall be purchased by the Secretary of War, the amounts required for the payment therefor shall be taken from the appropriation aforesaid.

For improving the mouth of the Mississippi river, seventy-five thousand dollars.

For improvement of the Mississippi, Missouri, Arkansas, and Ohio rivers, five hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For improvement of the Des Moines rapids, Mississippi river, two hundred thousand dollars.

For improvement of the Rock Island rapids, Mississippi river, one hundred thousand dollars.

For improvement of the St. Clair flats, Michigan, eighty thousand dollars.

For improvement of the Saint Mary's river, between Lake Superior and Lake Huron, fifty thousand dollars.

For improvements of Oswego harbor, New York, and preservation of the public works at that point, forty-five thousand dollars.

For improvement at Little Sodus Bay harbor, Fairhaven, in Cayuga county, New York, thirty-three thousand eight hundred and forty dollars and forty-one cents.

For improvement at Big Sodus Bay harbor, Wayne county, New York, fifty-three thousand one hundred and fifty-one dollars and eighty cents.

For improvement at the harbor of Genesee river, New York, seventy-five thousand six hundred and seven dollars and thirty cents.

For improvement of harbor at Buffalo, New York, one hundred thousand dollars.

For completing the sea-wall at Buffalo harbor, New York, thirty-one thousand dollars.

For improvement of harbor and repair of public works at Erie, Pennsylvania, thirty-six thousand nine hundred and sixty-one dollars.

For improvement of Conneaut harbor, Ohio, twenty thousand five hundred and thirteen dollars and seventy-four cents.

For improvement of Ashtabula harbor, Ohio, twenty-four thousand seven hundred and eight dollars and eighty-two cents.

For improvement of harbor at Grand river, Ohio, twenty-four thousand and seventy-two dollars.

For improvement of harbor at Cleveland, Ohio, fifty-nine thousand eight hundred and six dollars.

For improvement of harbor at Black river, Ohio, ten thousand dollars.

For improvement of harbor at Vermillion, Ohio, fifteen thousand three hundred and fifteen dollars and seventy-four cents.

For improvement of harbor at Huron, Ohio, thirty-nine thousand dollars.

For improvement of harbor at Sandusky City, Ohio, thirty-eight thousand five hundred and eighty dollars.

For improvement of the harbor at Toledo, Ohio, twenty thousand dollars.

For improvement of the harbor at Monroe, Michigan, thirty-one thousand and fifteen dollars and twenty-seven cents.

For improvement of harbor at Aux Becs Scies, Frankfort, Michigan, eighty-eight thousand five hundred and forty-one dollars.

For improvement of harbor at Grand Haven, Michigan, sixty-five thousand dollars.

For improvement of harbor at Black Lake, Michigan, fifty-five thousand six hundred and fifteen dollars and thirty-one cents.

For improvement of harbor at Saint Joseph, Michigan, six thousand dollars.

For improvement at the mouth of Saginaw river, Michigan, sixty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For improvement of harbor at Chicago, Illinois, eighty-eight thousand seven hundred and four dollars.

For improvement of harbor at Kenosha, Wisconsin, seventy-five thousand four hundred and sixty-one dollars and forty-one cents.

For improvement of harbor at Racine, Wisconsin, twenty-three thousand nine hundred and ten dollars.

For improvement of harbor at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, forty-eight thousand two hundred and eighty-three dollars and fifty-one cents.

For improvement of harbor at Sheboygan, Wisconsin, forty-seven thousand five hundred and ninety-eight dollars and ninety-one cents.

For improvement of harbor at Manitowoc, Wisconsin, fifty-two thousand dollars.

For repairs of Government wharves and landings, and improving harbor at Marcus Hook, on Delaware river, Pennsylvania, five thousand dollars: Provided, That before expenses shall be incurred on said wharves and landings, it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War that the same belong to the United States.

For improvement of the harbor at Green Bay, at the mouth of Fox river, Wisconsin, thirty thousand five hundred dollars.

For constructing works and improving the entrance into the harbor of Michigan City, Indiana, seventy-five thousand dollars: Provided, That it shall be first shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War that a sum equal to double the amount aforesaid has been expended by the Michigan City Harbor Company in the construction of a safe and convenient harbor at that place: And provided, That the passage of vessels to and from said harbor shall be free and not subject to toll or charge.

For improvement of the Kennebec river, in the State of Maine, between Sheppard Point and the city of Augusta, twenty thousand dollars.

For removal of obstructions to navigation in the Willamette river, between Portland and its mouth, in the State of Oregon, fifteen thousand dollars.

For continuing the repair of the piers in Saco river, in the State of Maine, forty thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the money appropriated by this act shall be so applied as to complete, or make the nearest approximation to completing, the work for which each specific appropriation is made; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to apply the sums herein appropriated for other purposes than for examinations and surveys by contract: Provided, That no contract shall be made except after public advertisement for proposals in such form and manner as to secure general notice thereof, and the same shall only be made with the lowest responsible bidder therefor, upon security deemed sufficient in the judgment of the Secretary. And it shall be the duty of the said Secretary, at the earliest practicable time, to report to Congress the result of any survey or resurvey, with the plan adopted and the items of expenditure under said plan; and he shall make report of all action taken under the provisions of this act; and he shall accompany said report with a statement of the amount and date of all former appropriations for each work, and a full estimate for its entire and permanent completion, with the amount that can be profitably expended in the next fiscal year. And he shall also state in what collection district each work is located, and at or near what port of entry, light-house, or fort; what amount of revenue was collected at the nearest port of entry for the last fiscal year; and, as far as practicable, what amount of commerce and navigation would be benefitted by the completion of each particular work: Provided, That he shall continue to make such a report at the commencement of every session of Congress until the works herein provided for shall all be completed.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That whenever the Secretary of War shall invite proposals for any works, or for any material or labor for any works, there shall be separate proposals and separate contracts for each work, and also for each class of material or labor for each work; and he shall report to Congress, at its next session, all the bids with the names of the bidders. All persons not holding commissions in the regular Army of the United States who shall be intrusted with the disbursement of the funds appropriated for the works named in this act, shall be required to give bond and ample security for the faithful application of the same; and no such disbursing officer in the Army of the United States shall receive any commission or compensation for making such disbursements. And the moneys hereinbefore appropriated shall remain and be at the disposal of the Secretary of War, and subject to his control for the purposes named in this act, until the several works and improvements herein provided for are completed, any law or regulation to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of War is hereby directed to cause examinations or surveys, or both as aforesaid, to be made at the following points, namely: at Superior City, Eagle Harbor, Marquette, and Lac La Belle, on Lake Superior, and at Ausable river, in the State of Michigan; of the Ohio river between Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and Buffinton Island, West Virginia; of Sandusky river, Ohio; at Chester harbor, Pennsylvania; at Bridgeport, Connecticut; at Hell Gate, New York; at the port of Ogdensburg, New York; at San Francisco, California; at the "Grand Chain," in the Ohio river; at the harbor of Baltimore, between Fort McHenry and the mouth of the Patapsco river, in the State of Maryland; of the Mississippi river, between Fort Snelling and the Falls of Saint Anthony and the Upper or Rock river rapids of the Mississippi river, with a view to ascertain the most feasible means, by economizing the water of the stream, of insuring the passage, at all navigable seasons, of boats drawing four feet of water; of the Minnesota river, from its mouth to the Yellow Medicine river, in order to ascertain the practicability and expense, by slack-water navigation or otherwise, of securing the continued navigability of said stream during the usual season of navigation; and for examining and reporting upon the subject of constructing railroad bridges across the Mississippi river, between St. Paul, in Minnesota, and St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, upon such plans of construction as will offer the least impediment to the navigation of the river; of Rock river; the Kennebec river above Gardiner, Maine; the Penobscot river above Hampden, Maine; at the Zambro river, Minnesota; at the Cannon river, Minnesota; at the harbor and the mouth of the Eighteen-mile creek, at Olcott, New York; at St. Croix river, above the ledge; from the mouth of Illinois river to La Salle; together with such necessary estimates of cost, as hereinbefore provided, as will enable the Secretary of War to determine what improvements and public works shall be necessary at the respective points aforesaid. And the Secretary of War shall cause a survey to be made at the harbor of Burlington, Vermont, and the harbor of Dunkirk, New York; at the harbor of Oak Orchard Creek, New York; and at Muskegon, White river, Manistee, South Haven, and New Buffalo, in the State of Michigan; the Fox and Wisconsin rivers, in the State of Wisconsin; and the Rock river, in the States of Illinois and Wisconsin, with its connections with Lake Winnebago; and the upper Columbia river, Oregon.

39TH CONG. . . 1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

APPROVED, June 23, 1866.

CHAP. CXL.—An Act to provide for the Revision and Consolidation of the Statute Laws of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint three persons, learned in the law, as commissioners, to revise, simplify, arrange, and consolidate all statutes of the United States, general and permanent in their nature, which shall be in force at the time such commissioners may make the final report of their doings.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That, in performing this duty, the commissioners shall bring together all statutes and parts of statutes which, from similarity of subject, ought to be brought together, omitting redundant or obsolete enactments, and making such alterations as may be necessary to reconcile the contradictions, supply the omissions, and amend the imperfections of the original text; and they shall arrange the same under titles, chapters, and sections, or other suitable divisions and subdivisions, with head notes briefly expressive of the matter contained in such divisions; also with side notes, so drawn as to point to the contents of the text, and with references to the original text from which each section is compiled, and to the decisions of the Federal courts explaining or expounding the same, and also to such decisions of the State courts as they may deem expedient; and they shall provide by a temporary index, or other expedient means, for an easy reference to every portion of their report.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That when the commissioners have completed the revision and consolidation of the statutes, as aforesaid, they shall cause a copy of the same, in print, to be submitted to Congress, that the statutes so revised and consolidated may be reënacted, if Congress shall so determine; and at the same time they shall also suggest to Congress such contradictions, omissions, and imperfections as may appear in the original text, with the mode in which they have reconciled, supplied, and amended the same; and they may also designate such statutes or parts of statutes as, in their judgment, ought to be repealed, with their reasons for such repeal.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the commissioners shall be authorized to cause their work to be printed in parts, so far as it may be ready for the press, and to distribute copies of the same to members of Congress, and to such other persons, in limited numbers, as they may see fit, for the purpose of obtaining their suggestions; and they shall, from time to time, report to Congress their progress and doings.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the statutes so revised and consolidated shall be reported to Congress as soon as practicable, and the whole work closed without unnecessary delay.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the commissioners shall each receive as compensation for his services at the rate of five thousand dollars a year for three years, with the reasonable expenses of clerical service and other incidental matters, not to exceed two thousand dollars annually for such expenses.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CXLI.—An Act making further Provisions for the Establishment of an Armory and Arsenal of Construction, Deposit, and Repair on Rock Island, in the State of Illinois.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to change, fix, and establish the position of the railroad across Rock Island and the bridge across the Mississippi river at and on the island of Rock Island, so as best to accord with the purposes of the Government in its occupancy of said island for military purposes; and in order to effect this he is authorized to grant to the railroad company a permanent location and right of way on and across Rock Island, to be fixed and designated by him, with such quantity of land, to be occupied and held by the company for railroad purposes, as may be necessary therefor; and that the said grant and change be made on such terms and conditions, previously arranged, between the Secretary of War and the companies and parties in interest, as will best effect and secure the purposes of the Government in occupying the island.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized to grant to the companies and parties in interest such other aid, pecuniary or otherwise, toward effecting the change in the present location of their road and bridge and establishing thereon a wagon road for the use of the Government of the United States to connect said island with the cities of Davenport and Rock Island, to be so constructed as not materially to interfere with, obstruct, or impair the navigation of the Mississippi river, as may be adjudged to be fair and equitable by the board of commissioners authorized under the act of April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act in addition to an act for the establishment of certain arsenals," and may be approved by him.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the act, approved April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act in addition to an act for the establishment of certain arsenals," be so extended as to include the small islands contiguous to Rock Island, and known as Benham's, Wilson's, and Winnebago Islands.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the following sums be, and they are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for Rock Island arsenal, to be applied as follows, viz:

To liquidate claims for property in Benham's, Wilson's, and Winnebago Islands, and for property in Rock Island which has been taken, in pursuance of law, for military purposes, two hundred and ninety-three thousand six hundred dollars, or so much thereof, and no more, as may be necessary to pay the respective claimants such amounts as may be reported by the board of commissioners authorized by the act of April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and ordered by the United States circuit court to be paid to each.

To secure water-power at the head of Rock Island, one hundred thousand dollars.

To erect store-houses for the preservation of arms and other munitions of war, and to establish communication between Rock Island arsenal and the cities of Davenport, Iowa, and Rock Island, Illinois, one hundred thousand dollars.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CXLII.—An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to authorize the Sale of Marine Hospitals and Revenue-Cutters," approved April 20th, 1866.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act entitled "An act to authorize the sale of marine hospitals and revenue-cutters," approved April twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, shall not be construed to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to lease or sell any such hospital where the relief furnished to sick marine[r]s shall show an extent of relief equal to twenty cases per diem, on an average, for the last preceding four years, or where no other suitable and sufficient hospital accommodations can be procured upon reasonable terms for the comfort and convenience of the patients.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CXLIII.—An Act in Amendment of an Act to promote the Progress of the Useful Arts, and the Acts in Amendment of and in Addition thereto.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That upon appealing for the first time from the decision of the primary examiner to the examiners-in-chief in the Patent Office, the appellant shall pay a fee of ten dollars into the Patent Office, to the credit of the patent fund; and no appeal from the primary examiner to the examiners-in-chief shall hereafter be allowed until the appellant shall pay said fee.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CXLIV.—An Act to establish a Land Office in the Territory of Idaho.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the public lands within the Territory of Idaho, to which the Indian title is or shall be extinguished shall constitute a new land district, to be called the Idaho district, to be located at Boise City, Ada county; and the President is hereby authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a register and receiver of public moneys for said district, who shall be required to reside at the place at which said office shall be located, and they shall have the same powers, perform the same duties, and be entitled to the same compensation as are or may be prescribed by law in relation to land offices of the United States in other Territories.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CLV.—An Act amendatory of the organic Act of Washington Territory.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That after the next annual session of the Legislative Assembly of said Territory the sessions shall be biennial. Members

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

of the Council shall be elected for the term of four years, and members of the House for the term of two years, and shall receive the sum of six dollars per day instead of three dollars heretofore allowed, and shall also receive the same mileage now allowed by law.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That each House shall have authority to elect, in addition to the officers now allowed by law, an enrolling clerk, who shall receive five dollars per day. The chief clerks shall receive six dollars per day, and the other officers elected by said Legislature shall receive five dollars per day each.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the first election, for the first biennial session under this act, shall be at the time of holding the general election for the Territory in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the act of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Washington, approved January fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, entitled "An act in relation to the county of Skamania," be, and the same is hereby, disapproved.

APPROVED, June 29, 1866.

CHAP. CLVI.—An Act to create the Office of Surveyor General in Idaho Territory.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a surveyor general for Idaho, whose annual salary shall be three thousand dollars, and whose power, authority, and duties shall be the same as those provided by law for the surveyor general of Oregon. He shall have proper allowances for clerk hire, office rent, and fuel, not exceeding what is now allowed by law to the surveyor general of Oregon, and he shall locate his office at Boise City, in said Territory of Idaho.

APPROVED, June 29, 1866.

CHAP. CLVIII.—An Act to extend the Time for the Reversion to the United States of the Lands granted by Congress to aid in the Construction of a Railroad from Amboy, by Hillsdale and Lansing, to some point on or near Traverse Bay, in the State of Michigan, and for the Completion of said Road.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the time limited by the fourth section of an act entitled "An act making a grant of alternate sections of the public lands to the State of Michigan, to aid in the construction of certain railroads in said State, and for other purposes," approved June three, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, for the completion of the railroad from Amboy, by Hillsdale and Lansing, to some point on or near Traverse bay, shall be, and hereby is, revived and extended for the period of seven years, from and after the third day of June, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six; and that said grants shall continue and remain in full force and effect for and during that period, as if it had been so provided in said fourth section of said act of June three, eighteen hundred and fifty-six: Provided, That the Amboy, Lansing, and Traverse Bay Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Michigan, shall forfeit all right to said grant, or any part thereof which it may now have, or which may hereafter be conferred upon it by the Legislature of the State of Michigan, if and whenever the said company shall fail, in whole or in part, fully and completely to perform any of the following conditions, that is to say: first, to clear, grub, and grade twenty consecutive miles of the road-bed of said road between Owasso and Saginaw City, so that the same shall be in readiness for the ties and iron by the first day of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven; second, to fully complete said road

from Owasso to Saginaw City, so that the same shall be in readiness for the running of trains by the first day of November, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven; third, to fully complete in like manner twenty miles of said road in each and every year after the said first day of November, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and to fully complete the entire road by the time limited by this act: And provided further, That in case of failure of said Amboy, Lansing, and Traverse Bay Rail Company to perform any of the above conditions by the respective times limited therefor, the Legislature of the State of Michigan may at its first session after any such failure, confer the said grant upon some other railroad corporation or corporations, upon such terms and conditions as the Legislature may see fit, to carry out the purposes of the said act of June three, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, and when so conferred, such corporation or corporations shall be entitled to have and enjoy all of the said grant which shall not then have been lawfully disposed of, to the same extent and in the same manner and for the same purposes, as if the same had been originally conferred upon such corporation or corporations: And any such railroad corporation or corporations, whether now organized or hereafter to be organized, upon which said grant may be so conferred in whole or in part, may receive the same without prejudice to any land grant or other rights or franchises previously acquired. But in no case shall such corporation or corporations be entitled to receive more than ten sections of land to the mile, for that portion of said road which may be consolidated in accordance with the provisions of this act: And provided further, That if the Legislature shall, in any such case of failure, so confer said grant as above provided, then the said lands, or so much thereof as shall then remain not lawfully disposed of, shall be subject to the disposal and future control of said Legislature, as provided in section three of said act of June three, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, until the expiration of the time limited by this act. But in case the said Legislature shall in such case fail to so confer said grant, then the said lands shall revert to the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Flint and Pere Marquette Railroad Company may change the western terminus of its road to some point on Lake Michigan, at or south of Grand Traverse bay; and any railroad corporations, having a right to the respective land grants specified in the said act of June three, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, located in the lower peninsula of the State of Michigan, may unite and contract with each other, or with any other railroad corporation or corporations, for the construction and operation of a single line of road for any portion of their routes, without prejudice to any land grants, or other rights or franchises previously acquired. And any and all such corporations are hereby authorized to change the location of their lines of road, so far as may be necessary, for the purpose of such consolidation, but not so as to change their respective termini otherwise than is authorized by this act. And whenever any change of terminus or location of line is made, as provided for in this act, the corporation or corporations making such change, shall file in the General Land Office new maps definitely showing such change and the new line of road adopted: Provided, That the road mentioned in the first section of this act shall run on the west side of Saginaw river, and that the principal depot shall be located in the northern portion of the plat of Saginaw City, so as best to accommodate the cities of Saginaw and East Saginaw.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the lands granted by the said act of June three, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, to aid in the construction of the railroad described in the first section of this act, shall be disposed of only in the following manner, that is to say: when the Governor of the State of Michigan shall certify to the Secretary of the Interior that ten or more consecutive miles of said road have been completed in a good and substantial manner, as a first-class railroad, stating definitely the commencement and termination of each completed portion of said road and the corporation or corporations so entitled to lands on account thereof, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause patents for lands for such completed portion of said road to be issued to said corporation or corporations: Provided, That none of said lands shall be acquired or so patented for any portion of said road so completed south of the intersection of said road with the Detroit and Milwaukee railway, until the whole of said road north of said intersection shall have been completed and the lands therefor patented as aforesaid: And provided further, That the road mentioned in the first section of this act shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States, and shall transport, free from toll or other charges, all property, troops, and munitions of war belonging to the same.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

CHAP. CLIX.—An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act to aid in the Construction of a Railroad and Telegraph Line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the Use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes,' approved July 1, 1862," approved July 2, 1864.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Union Pacific Railway Company, eastern division, is hereby authorized to designate the general route of their said road and to file a map thereof, as now required by law, at any time before the first day of December, eighteen hundred and sixty-six; and upon the filing of the said map, showing the general route of said road, the lands along the entire line thereof, so far as the same may be designated, shall be reserved from sale by order of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That said company shall be entitled to only the same amount of the bonds of the United States to aid in the construction of their line of railroad and telegraph as they would have been entitled to if they had connected their said line with the Union Pacific railroad on the one hundredth degree of longitude as now required by law: And provided further, That said company shall connect their line of railroad and telegraph with the Union Pacific railroad, but not at a point more than fifty miles westwardly from the meridian of Denver in Colorado.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Union Pacific Railroad Company, with the consent and approval of the Secretary of the Interior, are hereby authorized to locate, construct, and continue their road from Omaha, in Nebraska Territory, westward, according to the best and most practicable route, and without reference to the initial point on the one hundredth meridian of west longitude, as now provided by law, in a continuous completed line, until they shall meet and connect with the Central Pacific Railroad Company of California; and the Central Pacific Railroad of California, with the consent and approval of the Secretary of the Interior, are hereby authorized to locate, construct, and continue their road eastward, in a continuous completed line, until they shall meet and connect with the Union Pacific railroad: Provided, That each of the above-named companies shall have the right, when the nature of the work to be done, by reason of deep cuts and tunnels, shall for the expeditious construction of the Pacific railroad require it, to work for an extent of not to exceed three hundred miles in advance of their continuous completed lines.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

CHAP. CLX.—An Act granting certain Lands to the State of Michigan to aid in the Construction of a Ship-Canal to connect the Waters of Lake Superior with the Lake known as Lac La Belle, in said State.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and is hereby, granted to the State of Michigan, for the use and benefit of the "Lac La Belle Harbor and Improvement Company," a company organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a ship-canal to connect the waters of Lake Superior with the lake known as Lac La Belle, in said State, one hundred thousand acres of the publiclands of the United States in the upper peninsula of Michigan, to be selected from the odd-numbered sections of land nearest the location of the said canal, not otherwise reserved or appropriated, nor designated by the United States as "mineral lands," prior to the passage of this act, nor to which the rights of preemption or homestead have attached: Provided, That the said canal shall be at least one hundred feet wide at the top, seventy-five feet wide at the bottom, and shall have, when completed, a depth of water through its entire length of at least twelve feet, running from sixteen feet of water in Lake Superior to fourteen feet of water in Lac La Belle: And provided further, That said canal shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States, free from toll or charge upon the vessels of said Government, or upon vessels employed by said Government in the transportation of any property or troops of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the lands hereby granted shall be subject to the disposal of the Legislature of the State of Michigan for the purposes aforesaid and no other; that as soon as the Governor of the said State shall file, or cause to be filed, with the Secretary of the Interior, a map or plan showing the location of the said canal, then it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to withdraw from market the lands applicable and subject to the provisions of this act; and whenever the Governor of the State of Michigan shall certify to the Secretary of the Interior that the said ship-canal has been completed, in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner, in all respects in conformity with the provisions of this act, and to his satisfaction, then it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to issue patents to the said State of Michigan for the lands hereby granted.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That if the said ship-canal shall not be completed within two years from and after the passage of this act, the lands hereby granted shall revert to the United States.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

CHAP. CLXI.—An Act granting Lands to the State of Michigan to aid in the Construction of a Harbor and Ship-Canal at Portage Lake, Keweenaw Point, Lake Superior, in said State.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the State of Michigan, to aid in the building of a harbor and ship-canal at Portage Lake, Keweenaw Point, Lake Superior, in addition to a former grant for that purpose, approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, two hundred thousand acres of land in the upper peninsula of the State of Michigan, and from land to which the right of homestead or preemption has not attached: Provided, That one hundred and fifty thousand acres of said lands shall be selected from alternate odd-numbered sections, and fifty thousand acres from even-numbered sections of the lands of the United States. Said grant of lands shall inure to the use and benefit of the Portage Lake and Lake Superior Ship-Canal Company, in accordance with an act of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, conferring the land granted to the said State, by the act herein referred to, on said company: And provided further, That the time allowed for the completion of said work and the right of reversion to the United States, under the said act of Congress, approved March the third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, be extended three additional years: And provided further, That no lands designated by the United States as "mineral" before the passage of this act shall be included within this grant.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

CHAP. CLXII.—An Act to regulate the Transportation of Nitro-Glycerine, or Glynoin Oil, and other Substances therein named.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That hereafter it shall not be lawful to transport, carry or convey, ship, deliver on board, or cause to be delivered on board, the substance or article known or designated as nitro-glycerine, or glynnoin oil, nitro-leum or blasting oil, or nitrated oil, or powder mixed with any such oil, or fiber saturated with any such [article] or substance upon or in any ship, steamship, steamboat, vessel, car, wagon, or other vehicle, used or employed in transporting passengers by land or water between a place or places in any foreign country and a place or places within the limits of any State, Territory, or district of the United States, or between a place in one State, Territory, or district of the United States, and a place in any other State, Territory, or district thereof; and any person, company, or corporation who shall knowingly violate the provisions of this section, shall be liable to a fine of not less than one thousand nor more than ten thousand dollars, at the discretion of the court, one half to the use of the informer.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That in case the death of any person shall be caused, directly or indirectly, by an explosion of any quantity of said substances or articles, or either of them, while the same is being placed upon or in any such ship, steamship, steamboat, vessel, car, wagon, or other vehicle, to be transported, carried, or conveyed thereon or therein in violation of the foregoing section, or while the same is being so transported, carried, or conveyed, or while the same is being removed from such ship, steamship, steamboat, vessel, car, wagon, or other vehicle, every person who knowingly placed or aided, or permitted the placing of the said substance upon or in such ship, steamship, steamboat, vessel, car, wagon, or other vehicle, to be so transported, carried, or conveyed, shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter, and on conviction thereof shall suffer imprisonment for a period not less than two years.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall not be lawful to ship, send, or forward any quantity of the said substances or articles, or to transport, convey, or carry the same by ship, boat, vessel, vehicle, or conveyance of any description, upon land or water, between a place in a foreign country and a place within the United States, or between a place in one State, Territory, or district of the United States, and a place in any other State, Territory, or district thereof, unless the same shall be securely inclosed, deposited, or packed in a metallic vessel surrounded by plaster of paris, or other material that will be non-explosive when saturated with such oil or substance, and separate from all other substances, and the outside of the package containing the same be marked, printed, or labeled in a conspicuous manner with the words "Nitro-Glycerine, Dangerous;" and any person, company, or corporation who shall knowingly violate the provisions of this section, shall be liable to a fine of not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars, at the discretion of the court, one half to the use of the informer.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the district court of the United States within the district in which any offense against this act shall be committed, or if committed in or upon any ship, boat, vessel, or vehicle, beyond the territorial limits of any district, then within the district from which the same departed, or that in which it shall first arrive, shall have jurisdiction to try and punish the offender under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That this act shall not be so construed as to prevent any State, Territory, district, city, or town within the United States from regulating or from prohibiting the traffic in or transportation of the said substances between persons and places lying or being within their respective territorial limits, or from prohibiting its introduction into such limits for sale, use, or consumption therein.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

CHAP. CLXIII.—An Act for the Relief of the Members of the Thirty-Seventh Regiment of Iowa Volunteer Infantry.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall be paid to the members of the thirty-seventh regiment of Iowa volunteer infantry the same bounty provided by law, or which may hereafter be provided by law to soldiers enlisted into the volunteer forces of the United States during the year eighteen hundred and sixty-two; and in case any of the members of said regiment are dead or may die before the payment of said bounty, the same shall be paid to their representatives in the same order provided by law for the payment of bounty in other cases.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

CHAP. CLXIV.—An Act to create an additional Land District in the State of Oregon.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to establish an additional land district in the State of Oregon, and to fix from time to time the boundaries thereof, which district shall be named after the place at which the office shall first be established; and the President shall be authorized hereafter, from time to time, as circumstances may require, to adjust the boundaries of any and all of the land districts in said State, and change the location of the land office from time to time when the same shall be expedient.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the President is hereby authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, or during the recess thereof, and until the end of the next ensuing session, a register and receiver for said land district, who shall be required to reside at the site of the office, shall be subject to the same laws and responsibilities, and whose compensation and fees shall be respectively the same per annum, as are now allowed by law to other land officers in said State.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

CHAP. CLXV.—An Act making a Grant of Lands in alternate Sections to aid in the Construction and Extension of the Iron Mountain Railroad, from Pilot Knob, in the State of Missouri, to Helena, in Arkansas.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and is

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

hereby, granted to the State of Missouri, for the purpose of aiding in the construction and extension of the Iron Mountain railroad, from its present terminus at Pilot Knob to a point on the southern boundary line of the State of Missouri, every alternate section of land, designated by odd numbers, for ten sections in width on each side of said road; but in case it shall appear when the route of said road is definitely fixed that the United States have sold any sections or parts thereof, granted as aforesaid, or that the right of preemption has attached to the same, then it shall be lawful for any agent or agents to be appointed by the Governor of said State to select, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, from the lands of the United States nearest to the tiers of sections above specified so much land in sections or parts of sections, to be selected as aforesaid, as shall be equal to such lands as the United States have sold or otherwise appropriated or to which the rights of preemption have attached, which lands thus selected shall be held by the State of Missouri for the use and purposes aforesaid, and for none other: Provided, That the lands so located shall be within the Ironton land district as now established and not more than twenty miles from the line of said road: And provided further, That all mineral lands except those containing coal and iron, and any lands heretofore reserved to the United States by any act of Congress or in any other manner by competent authority for the purpose of aiding in any object of internal improvement, or for any other purpose whatever, be, and the same are, reserved to the United States from the operation of this act, except so far as it may be found necessary to locate the routes of said railroad through the same, in which case the right of way only shall be granted, subject to the approval of the President of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there be, and is hereby, granted to the State of Arkansas, for the purpose of aiding in the construction and extension of a railroad from the point where the Iron Mountain railroad intersects the southern boundary line of Missouri, by the nearest and most practicable route, to a point at or near the town of Helena, on the Mississippi river, every alternate section of land, designated by odd numbers, for ten sections in width on each side of said road; but in case it shall appear, when the line of said road is definitely fixed, that the United States have sold any sections or parts thereof, granted as aforesaid, or that the right of preemption has attached to the same, then it shall be lawful for any agent or agents to be appointed by the Governor of said State to select, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, from the lands of the United States nearest to the tiers of sections above specified so much land, in alternate sections, designated as aforesaid, as shall be equal to such lands as the United States have sold or otherwise appropriated, or to which the rights of preemption have attached, which lands thus selected shall be held by the State of Arkansas for the use and purposes aforesaid, and for none other: Provided, That the land so selected and located shall in no case be further than twenty miles from the line of road when the same shall be located: And provided further, That all mineral lands, except those containing coal and iron, and any lands heretofore reserved to the United States by any act of Congress, or in any other manner by competent authority, for the purpose of aiding in any object of internal improvement, or for any other purpose whatever, be, and the same are, reserved to the United States from the operation of this act, except so far as it may be found necessary to locate the routes of said railway through the same, in which case the right of way only shall be granted, subject to the approval of the President of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the sections and parts of sections of land which shall remain to the United States within ten miles on either side of said road, and the even sections and parts of sections corresponding to the odd ones selected within twenty miles of the same, shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of the public lands when sold, nor shall any of the said lands become subject to private entry until the same shall have been first offered at public sale to the highest bidder at or above the minimum price as aforesaid: Provided, That actual bona fide settlers under the preemption laws of the United States may, after the proof of settlement, improvement, and occupation, as now provided by law, purchase the same at the increased minimum price: And provided, also, That settlers under the provisions of the homestead law, who comply with the terms and requirements of this [said] act, shall be entitled to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres each, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the said railroads shall be, and remain, public highways, so far as the same may be constructed under this act, for the use of the Government of the United States, free of all toll or other charges upon the transportation of any property or troops of the United States, and at the costs in all respects of said railroad companies; and the said roads are hereby required to be constructed within the term of five years from and after the first day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the lands hereby granted to said States of Missouri and Arkansas shall be disposed of by said States for the purposes aforesaid only, and in manner following, namely: whenever the Governor of either of said States shall certify to the Secretary of the Interior that any section of ten consecutive miles of either of said roads is completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner, as a first-class railroad, and the said Secretary shall be satisfied that said State has complied in good faith with this requirement, the said Secretary of the Interior shall issue to the said State patents for all the lands granted and selected as aforesaid, not exceeding ten sections per mile, situate opposite to and within a limit of twenty miles of the line of said section of road thus completed, extending along the whole length of said completed section of ten miles of road, and no further. And when the Governor of said State shall certify to the Secretary of the Interior, and the Secretary shall be satisfied that another section of said road, ten consecutive miles in extent, connecting with the preceding section or with some other first-class railroad which may be at the time in successful operation, is completed as aforesaid, the said Secretary of the Interior shall issue to the said State patents for all the lands granted and situated opposite to and within the limits of twenty miles of the line of said completed section of road or roads, and extending the length of said section, and no further, and not exceeding ten sections of land per mile for all that part of said road thus completed under the provisions of this act and the act to which this is an amendment, and so, from time to time, until said roads and branches are completed. And when the Governor of said State shall so certify, and the Secretary of the Interior shall be satisfied that the whole of any one of said roads and branches is completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner, as a first-class railroad, the said Secretary of the Interior shall issue to the said State patents to all the remaining lands granted for and on account of said completed road and branches in this act, situated within the said limits of twenty miles from the line thereof, throughout the entire length of said road and branches: Provided, That no land shall be granted or conveyed to said States under the provisions of this act on account of the construction of any railroad or part thereof that has been constructed under the provisions of any other act at the date of the passage of this act, and adopted as a part of the line of railroad provided for in this act: And provided, That nothing herein contained shall interfere with any existing rights acquired under any law of Congress heretofore enacted making grants of land to the said States of Missouri and Arkansas to aid in the construction of railroads: And provided further, That should such States or either of them fail to complete the roads herein recited within the time prescribed by this act, then the lands undisposed of, as aforesaid, within the States so failing shall revert to the United States.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That so soon as the Governor of either of said States shall file or cause to be filed with the Secretary of the Interior maps designating the routes of said roads herein mentioned, then it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to withdraw from market the lands embraced within the provisions of this act.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That nothing contained in this act shall be held as vesting in the State of Arkansas title to the lands herein recited for the trust purpose aforesaid, or authorizing said State to make any disposition of the same, until said State shall be restored in all respects to its former relation to the national Government and be represented in the Congress of the United States.

APPROVED, July 4, 1866.

CHAP. CLXVI.—An Act concerning certain Lands granted to the State of Nevada.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the appropriation by the constitution of the State of Nevada to educational purposes of the five hundred thousand acres of land granted to said State by the law of September fourth, eighteen hundred and forty-one, for purposes of internal improvement, is hereby approved and confirmed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That land equal in amount to seventy-two entire sections, for the establishment and maintenance of a university in said State, is hereby granted to the State of Nevada.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the grant made by law of the second day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, to each State, of land equal to thirty thousand acres for each of its Senators and Representatives in Congress, is extended to the State of Nevada; and the diversion of the proceeds of these lands of Nevada from the teaching of agriculture and mechanic arts to that of the theory and practice of mining is allowed and authorized without causing a forfeiture of said grant.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a surveyor general for Nevada, who shall locate his office at such place as the Secretary of the Interior shall from time to time direct, whose compensation shall be three thousand dollars per annum, and whose duties, powers, obligations, responsibilities, and allowances for clerk hire, office rent, fuel and incidental expenses shall be the same as those of the surveyor general of Oregon, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, and such instructions as he may from time to time deem it advisable to give him.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That in extending the surveys of the public lands in the State of Nevada, the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, vary the lines of the subdivisions from a rectangular form, to suit the circumstances of the country; but in all cases lands valuable for mines of gold, silver, quicksilver, or copper shall be reserved from sale.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That until

39TH CONG...1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

the State of Nevada shall have received her full quota of lands named in the first, second, and third sections of this act, the public lands in that State shall not be subject to entry, sale, or location under any law of the United States, or any scrip or warrants issued in pursuance of any such law except the homestead act of May twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and acts amendatory thereto, and the acts granting and regulating preemptions, but shall be reserved exclusively for entry by the said State for the period of two years after such survey shall have been made: Provided, That said State shall select said lands in her own name and right, in tracts of not less than forty acres, and dispose of the same in tracts not exceeding three hundred and twenty acres, only to actual settlers and bona fide occupants: And provided further, That city and town property shall not be subject to selection under this act: And provided further, That this section shall not be construed to interfere with or impair rights heretofore acquired under any law of Congress.

APPROVED, July 4, 1866.

CHAP. CLXVII.—An Act granting Lands to the State of Oregon, to aid in the Construction of a military Road from Corvallis to the Aquinna Bay.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and is hereby, granted to the State of Oregon, to aid in the construction of a military wagon road from the town of Corvallis to the Aquinna bay, three alternate sections per mile from the unoccupied public lands, designated by odd numbers, and not more than six miles from said road: Provided, That the lands hereby granted shall be exclusively applied in the construction of said road, and shall be disposed of only as the work progresses; and the same shall be applied to no other purposes whatever: And provided further, That any and all lands heretofore reserved to the United States by act of Congress, or other competent authority, be, and the same are, reserved from the operation of this act, except so far as it may be necessary to locate the route of said road through the same, in which case the right of way is granted.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said lands hereby granted to said State shall be disposed of by the Legislature thereof for the purpose aforesaid, and for no other; and the said road shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States, free from tolls or other charges upon the transportation of any property, troops, or mails of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That said road shall be constructed with such gradation and bridges as to permit of its regular use as a wagon road, and in such other special manner as the State of Oregon may prescribe.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the lands hereby granted to said State shall be disposed of only in the following manner, that is to say: when the Governor of said State shall certify to the Secretary of the Interior that any ten continuous miles of said road are completed, then a quantity of land hereby granted consecutive to said completed portion of said road, not to exceed thirty sections may be sold, and so from time to time until said road is completed; and if said road is not completed within five years, no further sales shall be made, and the land remaining unsold shall revert to the United States.

APPROVED, July 4, 1866.

CHAP. CLXVIII.—An Act making an additional Grant of Lands to the State of Minnesota, in alternate Sections, to aid in the Construction of Railroads in said State.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and is hereby, granted to the State of Minnesota, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad from Houston, in the county of Houston, through the counties of Fillmore, Mower, Freeborn, and Faribault, to the western boundary of the State; and also for a railroad from Hastings, through the counties of Dakota, Scott, Carver, and McLeod, to such point on the western boundary of the State as the Legislature of the State may determine, every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers to the amount of five alternate sections per mile on each side of said road; but in case it shall appear that the United States have, when the lines or route of said roads are definitely located, sold any section, or part thereof, granted as aforesaid, or that the right of preemption or homestead settlement has attached to the same, or that the same has been reserved by the United States for any purpose whatever, then it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to cause to be selected, for the purposes aforesaid, from the public lands of the United States nearest to the tiers of sections above specified, so much land in alternate sections or parts of sections, designated by odd numbers, as shall be equal to such lands as the United States have sold, reserved, or otherwise appropriated, or to which the right of homestead settlement or preemption has attached as aforesaid, which lands, thus indicated by odd numbers and sections, by the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, shall be held by said State of Minnesota for the purposes and uses aforesaid: Provided, That the land so selected shall in no case be located more than twenty miles from the lines of said road: And provided further, That no land shall be granted or transferred by the provisions of this act not included within the jurisdiction of the State of Minnesota: And provided further, That any and all lands heretofore reserved to the United States by any act of Congress, or in any other manner by competent authority, for the purpose of aiding in any object of internal improvement, or other purpose whatever, be, and the same are hereby, reserved and excepted from the operations of this act, except so far as it may be found necessary to locate the route of said road through such reserved lands, in which case the right of way shall be granted, provided the United States has yet in possession the title thereto.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the sections and parts of sections of land which by such grant shall remain to the United States within ten miles on each side of said road shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public lands when sold, nor shall any of said lands become subject to sale at private entry until the same shall have been first offered at public sale to the highest bidder at or above the minimum price as aforesaid: Provided, That actual bona fide settlers under the preemption laws of the United States may, after due proof of settlement, improvement, and occupation as now provided by law, purchase the same at the increased minimum price: And provided also, That settlers under the provisions of the homestead law who shall make entries after the passage of this act, upon the sections numbered by even numbers, and who comply with the terms and requirements of said act shall be entitled to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres each, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the lands hereby granted shall be subject to the disposal of the Legislature of Minnesota for the purposes aforesaid, and no other; and the said railroad shall be and remain public highways for the use of the Government of the United States, free of all toll or other charges upon the transportation of any property or troops of the United States, and the same shall at all times be transported at the cost, charge, and expense in all respects of the company or corporation, or their successors or assigns, having or receiving the benefit of the land grants herein made.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the lands hereby granted shall be disposed of by said State for the purposes aforesaid only, and in manner following, namely: when the Governor of said State shall certify to the Secretary of the Interior that any section of ten consecutive miles of said road is completed, in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner, as a first-class railroad, then the Secretary of the Interior shall issue to the State patents for all the lands in alternate sections, or parts of sections, designated by odd numbers, situated within twenty miles of the road so completed and lying consecutive to said completed section of ten miles, and not exceeding one hundred sections, for the benefit of the road having completed the ten consecutive miles as aforesaid: Provided, however, That the consecutive principle hereby applied shall not extend to such lands as are taken by the said railroad companies to make up deficiencies, provided that no land to make up such deficiencies shall be taken at any point within ten miles upon each side of the line of said roads. When the Governor of said State shall certify that another section of ten consecutive miles shall have been completed as aforesaid, then the Secretary of the Interior shall issue patents to said State in like manner for a like number; and when certificates of the completion of additional sections of ten consecutive miles of said roads are from time to time made as aforesaid, additional sections of land shall be patented as aforesaid, until said roads are completed, when the whole of the lands hereby granted shall be patented to the State for the uses aforesaid, and none other: Provided, That if said roads are not completed within ten years from the acceptance of this grant, the said lands hereby granted and not patented shall revert to the United States.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That as soon as the Governor of said State shall file or cause to be filed with the Secretary of the Interior maps designating the routes of said roads, then it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to withdraw from market the lands embraced within the provisions of this act.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the United States mail shall be transported on said road, under the direction of the Post Office Department, at such price as Congress may by law provide: Provided, That until such price is fixed by law, the Postmaster General shall have power to fix the rate of compensation.

APPROVED, July 4, 1866.

CHAP. CLXIX.—An Act to provide for the Disposal of certain Lands therein named.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Commissioner of the General Land Office be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause to be offered at public auction all the unsold lots of that portion of the public domain known as the Fort Howard Military Reserve, which is situated in the county of Brown, and State of Wisconsin, giving not less than two months' notice of the time and place of such sale, by advertising the same in such newspapers and for such period of time as he may deem best. Every such lot shall be sold separately to the highest bidder for cash, and when not paid for within twenty-four hours from the time of purchase, it shall be liable to be resold under the order of the Commissioner of the General Land Office aforesaid, at such reasonable minimum as may be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior, and no sale shall be binding until approved by that officer.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the President to cause patents to be issued in due form of law for each and every such lot, as soon as may be after the purchase of and payment for the same.

APPROVED, July 4, 1866.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

CHAP. CLXXIV.—An Act granting Lands, to the State of Oregon, to aid in the construction of a military Road from Albany, Oregon, to the eastern Boundary of said State.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the State of Oregon, to aid in the construction of a military road from Albany, Oregon, by way of Canyon City, and the most feasible pass in Cascade range of mountains, to the eastern boundary of the State alternate sections of public lands, designated by odd numbers, three sections per mile, to be selected within six miles of said road: Provided, That the lands hereby granted shall be exclusively applied in the construction of said road, and shall be disposed of only as the work progresses; and the same shall be applied to no other purpose whatever: And provided further, That any and all lands heretofore reserved to the United States by act of Congress or other competent authority be, and the same are, reserved from the operation of this act, except so far as it may be necessary to locate the route of said road through the same, in which case the right of way is granted, subject to the approval of the President of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said lands hereby granted to said State shall be disposed of by the Legislature thereof for the purpose aforesaid, and for no other; and the said road shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States, free from tolls or other charge upon the transportation of any property, troops, or mails of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That said road shall be constructed with such width, graduation, and bridges, as to permit of its regular use as a wagon road, and in such other special manner as the State of Oregon may prescribe.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the lands hereby granted to said State shall be disposed of only in the following manner, that is to say: that when ten miles of said road shall be completed, a quantity of land not exceeding thirty sections for said road may be sold contiguous to said completed portion of said road; and when the Governor of said State shall certify to the Secretary of the Interior that any ten continuous miles of said road are completed, then another quantity of land hereby granted, not to exceed thirty sections, may be sold, contiguous to said completed portion of said road, and so from time to time until said road is completed; and if said road is not completed within five years, no further sales shall be made, and the land remaining unsold shall revert to the United States.

APPROVED, July 5, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXV.—An Act to provide for the Payment of the Sixth, Eighth, and Eleventh Regiments of Ohio Volunteer militia, of Cincinnati, Bard's Company of Cavalry, and Paulsen's Battery, during the Time they were in the Service of the United States, in 1862.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the officers and men of the sixth, eighth, and eleventh regiments of Ohio volunteer militia, and of Captain S. W. Bard's company of cavalry, and of Captain August Paulsen's battery, of Cincinnati, ordered into the service of the United States at Cincinnati, Ohio, on the second day of September, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, notwithstanding any irregularity in their muster into the service of the United States, be paid for the time the officers and men were actually in the service, respectively, not however to exceed the period of thirty-one days.

APPROVED, July 5, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXVI.—An Act making Appropriations for the Support of the Army for the year ending thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the support of the Army for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven:

For expenses of recruiting, transportation of recruits, and compensation to citizen surgeons for medical attendance, three hundred thousand dollars.

For pay of the Army, ten millions seven hundred and twelve thousand and fifty-two dollars.

For commutation of officers' subsistence, one million six hundred and fifty-one thousand five hundred and eleven dollars and fifty cents.

For commutation of forage for officers' horses, one hundred and five thousand two hundred dollars.

For payments in lieu of clothing for officers' servants, one hundred and ninety-one thousand seven hundred and sixty-six dollars.

For payments to discharged soldiers for clothing not drawn, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For subsistence in kind for regulars and volunteers, five million three hundred and one thousand six hundred and twenty-five dollars.

For the regular supplies of the quartermaster's department, consisting of fuel for the officers, enlisted men, guard, hospitals, store-houses, and offices; of forage in kind for the horses, mules, and oxen for the quartermaster's department at the several posts and stations and with the armies in the field; for the horses of the several regiments of cavalry, the batteries of artillery, and such companies of infantry as may be mounted, and for the authorized number of officers' horses when serving in the field and at the outposts, including bedding for the animals; of straw for soldiers' bedding, and of stationery, including blank books for the quartermaster's department certificates for discharged soldiers blank forms for the pay and quartermaster's departments; and for the printing of division and department orders and reports, four millions one hundred and thirty-four thousand four hundred and ninety-nine dollars and thirty-three cents.

For the incidental expenses of the quartermaster's department, consisting of postage on letters and packages received and sent by officers of the Army on public service; expenses of courts-martial, military commissions, and courts of inquiry, including the additional compensation of judge advocates, recorders, members, and witnesses, while on that service; under the act of March sixteenth, eighteen hundred and two, extra pay to soldiers employed under the direction of the quartermaster's department, in the erection of barracks, quarters, store-houses, and hospitals; in the construction of roads, and on other constant labor, for periods of not less than ten days, under the acts of March second, eighteen hundred and nineteen, and August fourth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, including those employed as clerks at division and department headquarters; expenses of expresses to and from the frontier posts and armies in the field; of escorts to paymasters and other disbursing officers and to trains where military escorts cannot be furnished; expenses of the interment of officers killed in action or who die when on duty in the field, or at posts on the frontiers, or at other posts and places when ordered by the Secretary of War, and of non-commissioned officers and soldiers; authorized office furniture; hire of laborers in the quartermaster's department, including the hire of interpreters, spies, and guides for the Army; compensation of clerks to officers of the quartermaster's department; compensation of forage and wagon masters, authorized by the act of July fifth, eighteen hundred and thirty-eight; for the apprehension of deserters, and the expenses incident to their pursuit; and for the following expenditures required for the several regiments of cavalry, the batteries of light artillery, and such companies of infantry as may be mounted, viz: the purchase of traveling forges, blacksmiths' and shoeing tools, horses' and mule shoes and nails, iron and steel for shoeing, hire of veterinary surgeons, medicines for horses and mules, picket ropes, and for shoeing the horses of the corps named; also, generally, the proper and authorized expenses for the movements and operations of an army not expressly assigned to any other department, one million dollars.

For the purchase of cavalry and artillery horses, seven hundred and thirteen thousand one hundred dollars.

For transportation of officers' baggage, fifty thousand dollars.

For transportation of the Army, including the baggage of the troops when moving, either by land or water; of clothing, camp and garrison equipage, from the depots at Philadelphia, Cincinnati, and New York to the several posts and Army depots, and from those depots to the troops in the field; and of subsistence stores from the places of purchase, and from the places of delivery under contract, to such places as the circumstances of the service may require them to be sent; of ordnance; ordnance stores, and small-arms, from foundries and armories, to the arsenals, fortifications, frontier posts, and Army depots; freights, wharfage, tolls, and ferriages; for the purchase and hire of horses, mules, oxen, and harness, and the purchase and repair of wagons, carts, and drays, and of ships and other sea-going vessels and boats required for the transportation of supplies and for garrison purposes; for drayage and cartage at the several posts; hire of teamsters; transportation of funds for the pay and other disbursing departments; the expense of sailing public transports on the various rivers, the Gulf of Mexico, and the Atlantic and Pacific; and for procuring water at such posts as, from their situation, require it to be brought from a distance; and for clearing roads, and removing obstructions from roads, harbors, and rivers, to the extent which may be required for the actual operations of the troops in the field, five million dollars.

For hire of commutation quarters for officers on military duty; hire of quarters for troops; of store-houses for the safe-keeping of military stores; of grounds for summer cantonments; for the construction of temporary huts, hospitals, and stables, and for repairing public buildings at established posts, six hundred and twenty-four thousand and thirty-eight dollars.

For contingencies of the Army, one hundred thousand dollars.

For the medical and hospital department, five hundred thousand dollars.

For repairs, improvements, and new machinery at the national armory, one hundred thousand dollars.

For repairs and improvements at arsenals, including new, and additions to present, buildings, and machinery, tools, and fixtures, fifty thousand dollars.

For purchase of site and erection of magazine for storing gunpowder, two hundred thousand dollars.

For the purchase of land for enlarging the Watervleit arsenal, thirty thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the sum of one hundred and forty-six thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be disbursed by the Secretary of War in the erection of fire-proof buildings at or near Schuylkill arsenal in the State of Pennsylvania, to be used as store-houses for Government property at that post.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the support of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands for the fiscal year commencing July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, namely:

The salaries of assistant and sub-assistant commissioners, one hundred and forty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For salaries of clerks, eighty-two thousand eight hundred dollars.

For stationery and printing, sixty-three thousand dollars.

For quarters and fuel, fifteen thousand nine hundred dollars.

For clothing for distribution, one million one hundred and seventy thousand dollars.

For commissary stores, three million one hundred and six thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

For medical department, five hundred thousand dollars.

For transportation, one million three hundred and twenty thousand dollars.

For school superintendents, twenty-one thousand dollars.

For repairs and rent of school-houses and asylums, five hundred thousand dollars.

For telegraphing, eighteen thousand dollars.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the quartermaster's department shall in all cases in obtaining supplies for the military service, state in advertisements for bids for contracts, that a preference shall be given to articles of domestic production and manufacture, conditions of price and quality being equal, and that such preference shall be given to articles of American production and manufacture, produced on the Pacific coast, to the extent of the consumption required by the public service there; and in advertising for Army supplies the quartermaster's department shall require all articles which are to be used in the States and Territories of the Pacific coast to be delivered and inspected at points designated in those States and Territories; and the advertisements for such supplies shall be published in newspapers of the cities of San Francisco, in California, and Portland, in Oregon.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That section seventeen of an act entitled, "An act to define the pay and emoluments of certain officers of the Army," approved July seventeenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and a resolution entitled "A resolution to authorize the President to assign the command of troops in the same field or department, to officers of the same grade without regard to seniority," approved April fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, be, and the same are hereby, repealed. And no officer in the military or naval service shall, in time of peace, be dismissed from service except upon and in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial to that effect, or in commutation thereof.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the Superintendent of the United States Military Academy may hereafter be selected, and the officers on duty at that institution detailed from any arm of the service; and the supervision and charge of the Academy shall be in the War Department under such officer or officers as the Secretary of War may assign to that duty.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That when it is necessary to employ soldiers as artificers or laborers in the construction of permanent military works, public roads, or other constant labor of not less than ten days' duration in any case, they shall receive, in addition to their regular pay, the following additional compensation therefor: enlisted men, working as artificers, and non-commissioned officers employed as overseers of such work, not exceeding one overseer for every twenty men, thirty-five cents per day, and enlisted men employed as laborers twenty cents per day; but such working parties shall only be authorized on the written order of a commanding officer. This allowance of extra pay is not to apply to the troops of the engineer and ordnance departments.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the allowance now made by law to officers traveling under orders where transportation is not furnished in kind shall be increased to ten cents per mile.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXVII.—An Act relating to Pilots and Pilot Regulations.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That no regulations or provisions shall be adopted by any State of the United States of America which shall make any discrimination in the rate of pilotage or half pilotage between vessels sailing between the ports of one State and vessels sailing between the ports of different States, or any discrimination against vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, or against national vessels of the United States, and all existing regulations or provisions making any such discrimination, as herein mentioned, are hereby annulled and abrogated.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXVIII.—An Act to amend "An Act making a Grant of Lands to the State of Minnesota to aid in the Construction of the Railroad from St. Paul to Lake Superior," approved May fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section one of the act entitled "An act making a grant of lands to the State of Minnesota to aid in the construction of the railroad from Saint Paul to Lake Superior," approved May fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be amended by adding thereto the following: Provided further, That in case it shall appear, when the line of the Lake Superior and Mississippi railroad is definitely located, that the quantity of land intended to be granted by the said act in aid of the construction of the said road shall be deficient by reason of the line thereof running near the boundary line of the said State of Minnesota; the said company shall be entitled to take from other public lands of the United States within thirty miles of the west line of said road such an amount of lands as shall make up such deficiency: Provided, That the same shall be taken in alternate odd sections as provided for in said act.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXIX.—An Act to extend to certain Persons the Privilege of Admission, in certain Cases, to the United States Government Asylum for the Insane.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That civilians employed in the service of the United States, in the quartermaster's department and the subsistence department of the Army, who may be, or may hereafter become, insane while in such employment, shall be admitted on the order of the Secretary of War, the same as persons belonging to the Army and Navy, to the benefits of the asylum for the insane in the District of Columbia, as now provided by law in reference to soldiers and sailors in the Army and Navy.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the following classes of persons, under the following circumstances, shall be entitled to admission to said asylum on the order of the Secretary of War, if in the Army, or the Secretary of the Navy, if in the Navy, to wit:

First. Men who, while in the service of the United States, in the Army or Navy, have been admitted to said asylum, and have been thereafter discharged therefrom on the supposition that they had recovered their reason, and have, within three years after such discharge, become again insane from causes existing at the time of such discharge, and have no adequate means of support.

Second. Indigent insane persons, who have been in the same service and been discharged therefrom on account of disability arising from such insanity.

Third. Indigent insane persons, who have become insane within three years after discharge from such service from causes which arose during and were produced by said service.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXX.—An Act to provide for making the Town of Whitehall, New York, a Port of Delivery.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the town of Whitehall, in the State of New York, which by existing law is a port through which imported merchandise may be exported in bond and for drawback to the adjacent British North American Provinces, be, and the same is hereby, constituted a port of delivery within the collection district of Champlain, and that a deputy collector, as now authorized by law, shall there reside, who shall receive the same compensation as is now paid to the deputy collector now stationed at that port.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXXI.—An Act to extend the Benefits of Section Four of an Act making Appropriations for the Support of the Army for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section four of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six," be so construed as to entitle to the three months' pay proper, provided for therein, all officers of volunteers below the rank of brigadier general, who were in service on the third day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and whose resignations were presented and accepted, or who were mustered out at their own request, or otherwise honorably discharged from the service after the ninth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-five.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXXII.—An Act granting Aid in the Construction of a Railroad and Telegraph Line from the Town of Folsom to the Town of Placerville, in the State of California.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to the Placerville and Sacramento Valley Railroad Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of California, and designated by the Legislature thereof, to construct the road hereinafter named, and to its successors and assigns, for the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the town of Folsom to the town of Placerville, in said State; and the right is hereby given to said corporation to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, material for the construction thereof; said right of way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of said road where it may pass over the public lands; also, all necessary ground for station buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, side-tracks, turn-tables, and water-stations.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there be, and is hereby, granted to the Placerville and Sacramento Valley Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores over the route of said line of railway, every alternate section of public land, not containing gold or silver, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of ten alternate sections per mile, on each side of said railroad line, as said company may adopt, whenever, on the line thereof, the United States have full title, not reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and free from preëmption or other claims or rights at the time the line of said road is definitely fixed, and a plat thereof filed in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office: Provided, That the word "mineral," when it occurs in this act, shall not be held to include iron or coal.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That whenever said Placerville and Sacramento Valley Railroad Company shall have ten consecutive miles of any portion of said railroad and telegraph line ready for the service contemplated, the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners to examine the same, and if it shall appear that ten miles of said railroad and telegraph line have been completed in a good and substantial manner, and in all respects as required by this act, the commissioners shall so report to the President of the United States, and patents of lands, as aforesaid, shall be issued to said company, confirming to said company the right and title to said lands, situated opposite to and contiguous with said completed section of said road, unless said lands are covered by the exceptions of this act. And from time to time, whenever ten additional miles shall have been constructed, completed, and in readiness, as aforesaid, and verified by the commissioners to the President of the United States, then patents shall be issued to said company, conveying the additional sections of land, as aforesaid; and so on as fast as every ten miles of said road is completed, as aforesaid: Provided, That said commissioners named in this section shall be paid, by the company, ten dollars per day for the time actually employed, and ten cents per mile for the distance actually and necessarily traveled each way.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That said Placerville and Sacramento Valley railroad shall be constructed in a substantial and workmanlike manner, with all the necessary drains, culverts, bridges, viaducts, crossings, turnouts, stations, and watering-places, and all other appurtenances, including furniture and rolling stock, equal in all respects to railroads of the first class, when prepared for business, with rails of the best quality, manufactured from American iron, and a uniform gauge shall be established the entire length of the road. And there shall be constructed a telegraph line of the most substantial and approved description, to be operated on the entire route: Provided, That said company shall not charge higher rates to the Government, its officers or agents, than they do to individuals for telegraphic service, and that the said railroad shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States free of all toll or other charge upon the transportation of any property or troops of the United States, and the same shall be transported over said road at the cost, charge, and expense of the corporation or company owning or operating the same when required by the United States to do so.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States shall cause such lands to be surveyed for twenty miles in width on both sides of the entire line of said road, after the general route shall be fixed, and as fast as may be required by the construction of said railroad; and the odd sections of land hereby granted shall not be liable to sale, or entry, or preëmption, before or after they are surveyed, except by said company, as provided in this act; but the provisions of the act of September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, granting preëmption rights, and the acts amendatory thereof and of the act entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain," approved May twenty, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, shall be, and the same are hereby, extended to all other lands on the line of said road when surveyed, excepting those hereby granted to said company; and the sections and parts of sections of land which by the aforesaid grant shall remain in the United States within ten miles on each side of said road, shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public lands when sold.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That each and every grant, right, and privilege herein are so made and given to and accepted by said Placerville and Sacramento Valley Railroad Company, upon and subject to the following conditions, namely: that the said company shall commence the work on said road within one year from the approval of this act by the President, and shall complete the whole road by the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the United States make the several conditioned grants herein, and that the said Placerville and Sacramento Valley Railroad Company accept the same, upon the further condition that if the said company make any breach of the conditions hereof, and allow the same to continue for upwards of one year, then in such case, the title to the public lands herein reserved for the construction of said road shall revert to the United States.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That all people of the United States shall have the right to subscribe to the stock of the said Placerville and Sacramento Valley Railroad Company until the whole capital is taken up, by complying with the terms of subscription.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the acceptance of the terms, conditions, and impositions of this act by the said Placerville and Sacramento Valley Railroad Company shall be signified in writing, under the corporate seal of the said company, duly executed, pursuant to the direction of its board of directors first had and obtained, which acceptance shall be made within one year after the passage of this act, and not afterwards, and shall be deposited with the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the said company is authorized to accept to its own use any grant, donation, or loan, power, franchise, aid, or assistance which may be granted to or conferred upon said company by the Congress of the United States, by the Legislature of any State, county, or municipal corporation, or by any corporation, person or persons, and said corporation is authorized to hold and enjoy any such grant, donation, loan, or power, franchise, aid, or assistance, to its own use, for the purpose aforesaid.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That unless the said Placerville and Sacramento Valley Railroad Company shall obtain bona fide subscription to the stock of said company to the amount of four hundred thousand dollars, with five per centum paid within one year after the passage and approval of this act, it shall be null and void.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That Congress may at any time, having due regard for the rights of said Placerville and Sacramento Valley Railroad Company, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That all lots in villages, towns, and cities shall be exempted from, and not subject to, the operations of this act.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXXIII.—An Act relating to Lands granted to the State of Minnesota to aid in constructing Railroads.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That whenever it shall appear that the United States have sold or disposed of any lands granted to the Territory or State of Minnesota for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads, after the definite location of the line of road, and before the withdrawal of said lands from sale at the proper local land office, said State may by its agent select, in lieu of the lands so sold or disposed of, from any of the lands of the United States subject to sale, being odd-numbered sections, within twenty miles of the line of the proper road, a quantity of land equal to that so sold or disposed of; and the lands so selected shall be substituted for those so sold or disposed of by the United States, and may be disposed of by said State in all respects as if said substituted lands had been parcel of the original grant to the State: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to diminish the quantity of land granted by act of May fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to the State of Minnesota to aid in the construction of a railroad from St. Paul to Lake Superior.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the time named in the act granting lands to the Territory of Minnesota to aid in the construction of a certain railroad, "from Saint Paul and from Saint Anthony, by the way of Minneapolis, to a convenient point of junction west of the Mississippi river, to the southern boundary of the Territory," approved March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, for the construction and completion of said road, is hereby extended for seven years from the passage of this act.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That all the lands heretofore granted to the Territory and State of Minnesota to aid in the construction of railroads, shall be certified to said State by the Secretary of the Interior, from time to time, whenever any of said roads shall be definitely located, and shall be disposed of by said State in the manner and upon the conditions provided in the particular act granting the same, as modified by the provisions of this act: Provided, That when the original quantity granted to aid in the construction of any road has been increased, the quantity authorized to be sold from time to time shall be increased correspondingly: And provided further, That on the completion of any ten miles of road, the State may sell one half the quantity of lands which said State is authorized to dispose of on the completion of twenty miles.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the lands granted by any act of Congress to the State of Minnesota, to aid in the construction of railroads in said State, specifically, lying in place, on any division of ten miles of road, shall not be disposed of until the road shall be completed through and continuous with the same: Provided, however, That this provision shall not extend to any lands authorized to be taken to make up deficiencies.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That so much of any act as conflicts with the provisions of this act is hereby repealed.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXXIV.—An Act to reduce internal Taxation and to amend an Act entitled "An Act to provide internal Revenue to support the Government, to pay Interest on the public Debt, and for other purposes," approved June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and Acts amendatory thereof.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That on and after the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

six, in lieu of the taxes on unmanufactured cotton, as provided in "An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," approved June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, as amended by the act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, there shall be paid by the producer, owner, or holder, upon all cotton produced within the United States, and upon which no tax has been levied, paid, or collected, a tax of three cents per pound, as hereinafter provided; and the weight of such cotton shall be ascertained by deducting four per centum for tare from the gross weight of each bale or package; and such tax shall be and remain a lien thereon, in the possession of any person whomsoever from the time when this law takes effect, or such cotton is produced as aforesaid, until the same shall have been paid; and no drawback shall, in any case, be allowed on raw or unmanufactured cotton of any tax paid thereon when exported in the raw or unmanufactured condition. But no tax shall be imposed upon any cotton imported from other countries, and on which an import duty shall have been paid.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the aforesaid tax upon cotton shall be levied by the assessor on the producer, owner, or holder thereof. And said tax shall be paid to the collector of internal revenue within and for the collection district in which said cotton shall have been produced, and before the same shall have been removed therefrom, except where otherwise provided in this act; and every collector to whom any tax upon cotton shall be paid shall mark the bales or other packages upon which the tax shall have been paid, in such manner as may clearly indicate the payment thereof, and shall give to the owner or other person having charge of such cotton a permit for the removal of the same, stating therein the amount and payment of the tax, the time and place of payment, and the weight and marks upon the bales and packages, so that the same may be fully identified; and it shall be the duty of every such collector to keep clear and sufficient records of all such cotton inspected or marked, and of all marks and identifications thereof, and of all permits for the removal of the same, and of all his transactions relating thereto, and he shall make full returns thereof, monthly, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is hereby authorized to designate one or more places in each collection district where an assessor or an assistant assessor and a collector or deputy collector shall be located, and where cotton may be brought for the purpose of being weighed and appropriately marked: Provided, That it shall be the duty of the assessor or assistant assessor and the collector or deputy collector to assess and cause to be properly marked the cotton, wherever it may be, in said district, provided their necessary traveling expenses to and from said designated place, for that purpose, be paid by the owners thereof.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That all cotton having been weighed and marked as herein provided, and for which permits shall have been duly obtained of the assessor, may be removed from the district in which it has been produced to any one other district, without prepayment of the tax due thereon, upon the execution of such transportation bonds or other security, and in accordance with such regulations as shall be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. The said cotton so removed shall be delivered to the collector of internal revenue or his deputy forthwith upon its arrival at its point of destination, and shall remain subject to his control until the taxes thereon, and any necessary charges of custody thereof, shall have been paid, but nothing herein contained shall authorize any delay of the payment of said taxes for more than ninety days from the date of the permits; and when cotton shall have been weighed and marked for which a permit shall have been granted without prepayment of the tax, it shall be the duty of the assessor granting such permit to give immediate notice of such permit to the collector of internal revenue for the district to which said cotton is to be transported, and he shall also transmit therewith a statement of the taxes due thereon, and of the bonds or other securities for the payment thereof, and he shall make full returns and statements of the same to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That it shall be unlawful, from and after the first day of September, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the owner, master, supercargo, agent, or other person having charge of any vessel, or for any railroad company, or other transportation company, or for any common carrier, or other person, to convey, or attempt to convey, or transport any cotton, the growth or produce of the United States, from any point in the district in which it shall have been produced, unless each bale or package thereof shall have attached to or accompanying it the proper marks or evidence of the payment of the revenue tax and a permit of the collector for such removal, or the permit of the assessor, as hereinbefore provided, under regulations of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, or to convey or transport any cotton from any State in which cotton is produced to any port or place in the United States without a certificate from the collector of internal revenue of the district from which it was brought, and such other evidence as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe, that the tax has been paid thereon, or the permit of the assessor as hereinbefore provided, and such certificate and evidence as aforesaid shall be furnished to the collector of the district to which it is transported, and his permit obtained before landing, discharging, or delivering such cotton at the place to which it is transported as aforesaid. And any person or persons who shall violate the provisions of this act in this respect, or who shall convey or attempt to convey from any State in which cotton is produced to any port or place without the United States any cotton upon which the tax has not been paid, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each bale of cotton so conveyed or transported, or attempted to be conveyed or transported, or to imprisonment for not more than one year, or both; and all vessels and vehicles employed in such conveyance or transportation shall be liable to seizure and forfeiture by proceedings in any court of the United States having competent jurisdiction. And all cotton so shipped or attempted to be shipped or transported without payment of the tax, or the execution of such transportation bonds or other security, as provided in this act, shall be forfeited to the United States, and the proceeds thereof distributed according to the statute in like cases provided.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That upon articles manufactured exclusively from cotton, when exported, there shall be allowed as a drawback an amount equal to the internal tax which shall have been assessed and paid upon such articles in their finished condition, and in addition thereto a drawback or allowance of as many cents per pound upon the pound of cotton cloth, yarn, thread, or knit fabrics, manufactured exclusively from cotton and exported, as shall have been assessed and paid in the form of an internal tax upon the raw cotton entering into the manufacture of said cloth or other article, the amount of such allowance or drawback to be ascertained in such manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury; and so much of section one hundred and seventy-one of the act of June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, "to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," as now provides for a drawback on unmanufactured cotton, is hereby repealed.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of every person, firm, or corporation, manufacturing cotton for any purpose whatever, in any district where cotton is produced, to return to the assessor or assistant assessor of the district in which such manufacture is carried on, a true statement in writing, signed by him, and verified by his oath or affirmation, on or before the tenth day of each month; and the first statement so rendered shall be on or before the tenth day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and shall state the quantity of cotton which such manufacturer had on hand and unmanufactured, or in process of manufacture, on the first day of said month; and each subsequent statement shall show the whole quantity in pounds, gross weight, of cotton purchased or obtained, and the whole quantity consumed by him in any business or process of manufacture during the last preceding calendar month, and the quantity and character of the goods manufactured therefrom; and every such manufacturer or consumer shall keep a book, in which he shall enter the quantity, in pounds, of cotton which he has on hand on the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and each quantity or lot purchased or obtained by him thereafter; the time when and the party or parties from whom the same was obtained; the quantity of said cotton, if any, which is the growth of the collection district where the same is manufactured; the quantity, if any, which has not been weighed and marked by any officer herein authorized to weigh and mark the same; the quantity, if any, upon which the tax had not been paid, so far as can be ascertained, before the manufacture thereof; and also the quantities used or disposed of by him from time to time in any process of manufacture or otherwise, and the quantity and character of the product thereof, which book shall, at all times during business hours, be open to the inspection of the assessor, assistant assessors, collector or deputy collectors of the district, inspectors, or of revenue agents; and such manufacturer shall pay monthly to the collector, within the time prescribed by law, the tax herein specified, subject to no deductions, on all cotton so consumed by him in any manufacture, and on which no excise tax has previously been paid; and every such manufacturer or person whose duty it is so to do, who shall neglect or refuse to make such returns to the assessor, or to keep such book, or who shall make false or fraudulent returns, or make false entries in such book, or procure the same to be so done, in addition to the payment of the tax to be assessed thereon, shall forfeit to the United States all cotton and all products of cotton in his possession, and shall be liable to a penalty of not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars, to be recovered with costs of suit, or to imprisonment not exceeding two years, in the discretion of the court; and any person or persons who shall make any false oath or affirmation in relation to any matter or thing herein required shall be guilty of perjury, and shall be subject to the punishment prescribed by existing statutes for that offense: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed in any manner to affect the liability of any person for any tax imposed by law on the goods manufactured from such cotton.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the act of June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, as amended by the act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, relating to the assessment of taxes and enforcing the collection of the same, and all proceedings and remedies relating thereto, shall apply to the assessment and collection of the tax, fines, and penalties imposed by, and not inconsistent with, the provisions of the preceding sections of this act; and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall make all necessary rules and regulations for ascertaining the weight of all cotton to be assessed, and for appropriately marking the same, and generally for carrying into effect the foregoing provisions. And the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to appoint all necessary inspectors, weighers, and markers of cotton, whose compensation shall be determined by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and paid in the same manner as inspectors of tobacco are paid.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG... 1ST SESS.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the act entitled "An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," approved June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, as amended by the act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, be, and the same is hereby, amended as follows, viz:

That section five be amended by adding thereto the following: and any inspector, or revenue agent, or any special agent appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall demand or receive any compensation, fee, or reward, other than such as are provided by law for, or in regard to, the performance of his official duties, or shall be guilty of any extortion or willful oppression in the discharge of such duties, shall, upon conviction thereof in any circuit or district court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof, be subject to a fine of not exceeding one thousand dollars, or to imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court, and shall be dismissed from office, and shall be forever disqualified from holding any office under the Government of the United States. And one half of the fine so imposed shall be for the use of the United States, and the other half for the use of the person, to be ascertained by the judgment of the court, who shall first give the information whereby any such fine may be imposed.

That section eight be amended by striking out of said section all after the words "until an appointment filling the vacancy shall be made."

That section fourteen be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that in case any person shall be absent from his or her residence or place of business at the time an assistant assessor shall call for the annual list or return, and no annual list or return has been rendered by such person to the assistant assessor as required by law, it shall be the duty of such assistant assessor to leave at such place of residence or business, with some one of suitable age and discretion, if such be present, otherwise to deposit in the nearest post office, a note or memorandum, addressed to such person, requiring him or her to render to such assistant assessor the list or return required by law within ten days from the date of such note or memorandum, verified by oath or affirmation. And if any person, on being notified or required as aforesaid, shall refuse or neglect to render such list or return within the time required as aforesaid, or if any person without notice, as aforesaid, shall not deliver a monthly or other list or return at the time required by law, or if any person shall deliver or disclose to any assessor or assistant assessor any list, statement, or return which, in the opinion of the assessor, is false or fraudulent, or contains any understatement or undervaluation, it shall be lawful for the assessor to summon such person, his agent, or other person having possession, custody, or care of books of account containing entries relating to the trade or business of such person, or any other person he may deem proper, to appear before such assessor and produce such book, at a time and place therein named, and to give testimony or answer interrogatories under oath or affirmation respecting any objects liable to tax as aforesaid, or the lists, statements, or returns thereof, or any trade, business, or profession liable to any tax as aforesaid. And the assessor may summon, as aforesaid, any person residing or found within the State in which his district is situated. And when the person intended to be summoned does not reside and cannot be found within such State, the assessor may enter any collection district where such person may be found, and there make the examination hereinbefore authorized. And to this end he shall there have and may exercise all the power and authority he has or may lawfully exercise in the district for which he is commissioned. The summons authorized by this section shall in all cases be served by an assistant assessor of the district where the person to whom it is directed may be found, by an attested copy delivered to such person in hand or left at his last and usual place of abode, allowing such person at the rate of one day for each twenty-five miles he may be required to travel, computed from the place of service to the place of examination; and the certificate of service signed by such assistant assessor shall be evidence of the facts it states on the hearing of an application for an attachment; and when the summons requires the production of books, it shall be sufficient if such books are described with reasonable certainty. In case any person so summoned shall neglect or refuse to obey such summons, or to give testimony, or to answer interrogatories as required, it shall be lawful for the assessor to apply to the judge of the district court or to a commissioner of the circuit court of the United States for the district within which the person so summoned resides for an attachment against such person as for a contempt. It shall be the duty of such judge or commissioner to hear such application, and, if satisfactory proof be made, to issue an attachment, directed to some proper officer, for the arrest of such person, and upon his being brought before him to proceed to a hearing of the case; and upon such hearing the judge or commissioner shall have power to make such order as he shall deem proper, not inconsistent with the provisions of existing laws for the punishment of contempts, to enforce obedience to the requirements of the summons and punish such person for his default or disobedience. It shall be the duty of the assessor or assistant assessor of the district within which such person shall have taxable property to enter into and upon the premises, if it be necessary, of such person so refusing or neglecting, or rendering a false or fraudulent list or return, and to make, according to the best information which he can obtain, including that derived from the evidence elicited by the examination of the assessor, and on his own view and information, such list or return, according to the form prescribed, of the property, goods, wares, and merchandise, and all articles or objects liable to tax, owned or possessed or under the care or management of such person, and assess the tax thereon, including the amount, if any, due for special or income tax; and in case of the return of a false or fraudulent list or valuation, he shall add one hundred per centum to such tax; and in case of a refusal or neglect, except in cases of sickness or absence, to make a list or return, or to verify the same as aforesaid, he shall add fifty per centum to such tax; and in case of neglect occasioned by sickness or absence as aforesaid, the assessor may allow such further time for making and delivering such list or return as he may judge necessary, not exceeding thirty days; and the amount so added to the tax shall, in all cases, be collected by the collector at the same time and in the same manner as the tax; and the list or return so made and subscribed by such assessor or assistant assessor shall be taken and reputed as good and sufficient for all legal purposes.

That section nineteen be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that the assessor for each collection district shall give notice by advertisement in one newspaper published in each county within said district, and if there be none published in the district, then in a newspaper published in a collection district adjoining thereto, and shall post notices in at least four public places within each assessment district, and shall mail a copy of such notice to each postmaster in his district, to be posted in his office, stating the time and place within said collection district when and where appeals will be received and determined relative to any erroneous or excessive valuations, assessments, or enumerations by the assessor or assistant assessor returned in the annual list, and such notice shall be advertised and posted by the assessor and mailed as aforesaid at least ten days before the time appointed for hearing said appeals. And it shall be the duty of the assessor for each collection district, at the time fixed for hearing such appeals as aforesaid, to submit the proceedings of the assessor and assistant assessor, and the annual lists taken and returned as aforesaid, to the inspection of any and all persons who may apply for that purpose. And such assessor is hereby authorized at any time to hear and determine in a summary way, according to law and right, upon any and all appeals which may be exhibited against the proceedings of the said assessor or assistant assessors, and the office or principal place of business of the said assessor shall be open during the business hours of each day for the hearing of appeals by parties who shall appear voluntarily before him: Provided, That no appeal shall be allowed to any party after he shall have been duly assessed, and the annual list containing the assessment has been transmitted to the collector of the district. And all appeals to the assessor as aforesaid shall be made in writing, and shall specify the particular cause, matter, or thing respecting which a decision is requested, and shall, moreover, state the ground or principle of error complained of. And the assessor shall have power to reexamine and determine upon the assessments and valuations, and rectify the same as shall appear just and equitable; but such valuation, assessment, or enumeration shall not be increased without a previous notice of at least five days to the party interested to appear and object to the same if he judge proper, which notice shall be in writing, and left at the dwelling-house, office, or place of business of the party by such assessor, assistant assessor, or other person, or sent by mail to the nearest or usual post office address of said party: Provided further, That on the hearing of appeals it shall be lawful for the assessor to require by summons the attendance of witnesses and the production of books of account in the same manner and under the same penalties as are provided in cases of refusal or neglect to furnish lists or returns. The costs for the attendance and mileage of said witnesses shall be taxed by the assessor and paid by the delinquent parties, or by the disbursing agent for the district, on certificate of the assessor, at the rates allowed to witnesses in the district courts of the United States.

That section twenty be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that the assessor of each collection district shall, immediately after the expiration of the time for hearing appeals concerning taxes returned in the annual list, and from time to time, as taxes become liable to be assessed, make out lists containing the sums payable according to law upon every subject of taxation for each collection district; which list shall contain the name of each person residing within the said district, or owning or having the care or superintendence of property lying within the said district, or engaged in any business or pursuit which is liable to any tax, when such person or persons are known, together with the sums payable by each; and where there is any property within any collection district liable to tax, not owned or occupied by or under the superintendence of any person resident therein, there shall be a separate list of such property, specifying the sum payable, and the names of the respective proprietors when known. And the assessor making out any such separate list shall transmit to the assessor of the district where the persons liable to pay such tax reside, or shall have their principal place of business, copies of the list of property held by persons so liable to pay such tax, to the end that the taxes assessed under the provisions of this act may be paid within the collection district where the persons liable to pay the same reside, or may have their principal place of business. And in all other cases the said assessor shall furnish to the collectors of the several collection districts, respectively, within ten days after the time of hearing appeals concerning taxes returned in the annual list, and from time to time thereafter as required, a certified copy of such list or lists for their proper collection districts. And in case it shall be ascertained that the annual list, or any other list, which may have been, or which shall hereafter be, delivered to any collector, is imperfect or incomplete in consequence of the omission of the names of any persons or parties liable to tax, or in consequence of any omission, or understatement, or undervaluation, or false or fraudulent statement contained in any return or returns made by any persons or parties liable to tax, the said assessor may, from time to time, or at any time within fifteen months from the time of the passage of this act or from the time of the delivery of the list to the collector as aforesaid, enter on any monthly or special list the names of such persons or parties so omitted, together with the amount of tax for which they may have been or shall become liable, and also the names of the persons or parties in respect to whose returns, as aforesaid, there has been or shall be any omission, undervaluation, understatement, or false or fraudulent statement, together with the amounts for which such persons or parties may be liable, over and above the amount for which they may have been, or shall be, assessed upon any return or returns made as aforesaid, and shall certify or return said list to the collector as required by law. And all provisions of law for the ascertainment of liability to any tax, or the assessment or collection thereof, shall be held to apply, as far as may be necessary to the proceedings herein authorized and directed. And wherever the word "duty" is used in this act, or the acts to which this is an amendment, it shall be construed to mean "tax," whenever such construction shall be necessary in order to effect the purposes of said acts.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

That section twenty-one be amended by striking out the words "without having taken the oath or affirmation required by this act," and inserting in lieu thereof the words "without having taken the oath or affirmation required by law."

That section twenty-two be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that there shall be allowed and paid to the several assessors a salary of fifteen hundred dollars per annum, payable quarterly; and, in addition thereto, where the receipts of the collection district shall exceed the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, and shall not exceed the sum of four hundred thousand dollars annually, one half of one per centum upon the excess of receipts over one hundred thousand dollars. Where the receipts of a collection district shall exceed four hundred thousand dollars, and shall not exceed six hundred thousand, one fifth of one per centum upon the excess of receipts over four hundred thousand dollars. Where the receipts shall exceed six hundred thousand dollars, one tenth of one per centum upon such excess; but the salary of no assessor shall in any case exceed the sum of four thousand dollars. And the several assessors shall be allowed and paid the sums actually and necessarily expended, with the approval of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, for office rent; but no account of such rent shall be allowed or paid until it shall have been verified in such manner as the Commissioner shall require, and shall have been audited and approved by the proper officers of the Treasury Department. And the several assessors shall be paid, after the account thereof shall have been rendered to and approved by the proper officers of the Treasury, their necessary and reasonable charges for clerk hire; but no such account shall be approved unless it shall state the name or names of the clerk or clerks employed, and the precise periods of time for which they were respectively employed, and the rate of compensation agreed upon, and shall be accompanied by an affidavit of the assessor stating that such service was actually required by the necessities of his office, and was actually rendered, and also by the affidavit of each clerk, stating that he has rendered the service charged in such account on his behalf, the compensation agreed upon, and that he has not paid, deposited or assigned, or contracted to pay, deposit, or assign any part of such compensation to the use of any other person, or in any way, directly or indirectly, paid or given, or contracted to pay or give, any reward or compensation for his office or employment, or the emoluments thereof; and the chief clerk of any such assessor is hereby authorized to administer, in the absence of the assessor, such oaths or affirmations as are required by this act. And there shall be allowed and paid to each assistant assessor four dollars for every day actually employed in collecting lists and making valuations, the number of days necessary for that purpose to be certified by the assessor, and three dollars for every hundred persons assessed contained in the tax list, as completed and delivered by him to the assessor, and twenty-five cents for each permit granted for making tobacco, snuff, or cigars; and assistant assessors may be allowed, in the settlement of their accounts, such sum as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall approve, not exceeding three hundred dollars per annum, for office rent; but no account for such rent shall be allowed or paid until it shall have been verified in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may require, and shall have been audited and approved by the proper officers of the Treasury Department; and assistant assessors, when employed outside of the town in which they reside, in addition to the compensation now allowed by law, shall, during such time so employed, receive one dollar per day; and the said assessors and assistant assessors, respectively, shall be paid, after the account thereof shall have been rendered to and approved by the proper officers of the Treasury, their necessary and reasonable charges for stationery and blank books used in the discharge of their duties, and for postage actually paid on letters and documents received and sent, and relating exclusively to official business, and for money actually paid for publishing notices required by this act: Provided, That no such account shall be approved unless it shall state the date and the particular item of every such expenditure, and shall be verified by the oath or affirmation of such assessor or assistant assessor; and the compensation herein specified shall be in full for all expenses not otherwise particularly authorized: Provided further, That the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may, under such regulations as may be established by the Secretary of the Treasury, after due public notice, receive bids and make contracts for supplying stationery, blank books, and blanks to the assessors, assistant assessors, and collectors in the several collection districts: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to fix such additional rates of compensation to be made to assessors and assistant assessors in cases where a collection district embraces more than a single congressional district, and to assessors and assistant assessors, revenue agents, and inspectors in Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama, Florida, Texas, Arkansas, North Carolina, Mississippi, Tennessee, California, Nevada, and Oregon, and the Territories, as may appear to him to be just and equitable, in consequence of the greater cost of living and traveling in those States and Territories, and as may, in his judgment, be necessary to secure the services of competent officers; but the compensation thus allowed shall not exceed the rate of five thousand dollars per annum. Collectors of internal revenue acting as disbursing officers shall be allowed all bills of assistant assessors, heretofore paid by them in pursuance of the directions of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, notwithstanding the assistant assessor did not certify to hours therein, or that two dollars per diem was deducted from his salary or compensation before computation of the tax thereon.

That section twenty-four be amended by striking out the proviso thereto, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: Provided, That in calculating the commissions of assessors and collectors of internal revenue in districts whence cotton or distilled spirits are shipped in bond to be sold in another district, one half the amount of tax received on the quantity of cotton or spirits so shipped shall be added to the amount on which the commissions of such assessors and collectors are calculated, and a corresponding amount shall be deducted from the amount on which the commissions of the assessors and collectors of the districts to which such cotton or spirits are shipped are calculated.

That section twenty-six be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that in the adjustment of the accounts of assessors and collectors of internal revenue which shall accrue after the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and in the payment of their compensation for services after that date, the fiscal year of the Treasury shall be observed; and where such compensation, or any part of it, shall be by commissions upon assessments or collections, and shall during any year, in consequence of a new appointment, be due to more than one assessor or collector in the same district, such commissions shall be apportioned between such assessors or collectors; but in no case shall a greater amount of the commissions be allowed to two or more assessors or collectors in the same district than is or may be authorized by law to be allowed to one assessor or collector. And the salary and commissions of assessors and collectors heretofore earned and accrued shall be adjusted, allowed, and paid in conformity to the provisions of this section, and not otherwise; but no payment shall be made to assessors or collectors on account of salaries or commissions without the certificate of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that all reports required by law or regulation have been received, or that a satisfactory explanation has been rendered to him of the cause of the delay.

That section twenty-eight be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that each of said collectors shall, within twenty days after receiving his annual collection list from the assessors, give notice, by advertisement in one newspaper published in each county in his collection district, if there be any, and if not, then in a newspaper published in an adjoining county; and by notifications to be posted in at least four public places in each county in his collection district, that the said taxes have become due and payable, and state the time and place within said county at which he or his deputy will attend to receive the same, which time shall not be less than ten days after the date of such notification, and shall send a copy of such notice by mail to each postmaster in the county, to be posted in his office. And if any person shall neglect to pay, as aforesaid, for more than ten days, it shall be the duty of the collector or his deputy to issue to such person a notice, to be left at his dwelling or usual place of business, or be sent by mail, demanding the payment of said taxes, stating the amount thereof, with a fee of twenty cents for the issuing and service of such notice, and with four cents for each mile actually and necessarily traveled in serving the same. And if such persons shall not pay the duties or taxes, and the fee of twenty cents and mileage as aforesaid, within ten days after the service or the sending by mail of such notice, it shall be the duty of the collector or his deputy to collect the said taxes and fee of twenty cents and mileage, with a penalty of ten per centum additional upon the amount of taxes. And with respect to all such taxes as are not included in the annual lists aforesaid, all taxes the collection of which is not otherwise provided for in this act, it shall be the duty of each collector, in person or by deputy, to give notice and demand payment thereof, in the manner last mentioned, within ten days from and after receiving the list thereof from the assessor, or within twenty days from and after the expiration of the time within which such tax should have been paid; and if the annual or other taxes shall not be paid within ten days from and after such notice and demand, it shall be lawful for such collector, or his deputies, to proceed to collect the said taxes, with ten per centum additional thereto, as aforesaid, by distraint and sale of the goods, chattels, or effects, including stocks, securities, and evidences of debt, of the persons delinquent as aforesaid. And in case of distraint, it shall be the duty of the officer charged with the collection to make, or cause to be made, an account of the goods or effects distrained, a copy of which, signed by the officer making such distraint, shall be left with the owner or possessor of such goods or effects, or at his or her dwelling or usual place of business, with some person of suitable age and discretion, if any such can be found, with a note of the sum demanded, and the time and place of sale; and the said officer shall forthwith cause a notification to be published in some newspaper within the county wherein said distraint is made, if there is a newspaper published in said county, or to be publicly posted at the post office, if there be one within five miles, nearest to the residence of the person whose property shall be distrained, and in not less than two other public places, which notice shall specify the articles distrained, and the time and place for the sale thereof, which time shall not be less than ten nor more than twenty days from the date of such notification to the owner or possessor of the property and the publication or posting of such notice as herein provided, and the place proposed for sale shall not be more than five miles distant from the place of making such distraint. And said sale may be adjourned from time to time by said officer, if he shall think it advisable to do so, but not for a time to exceed in all thirty days. And if any person, bank, association, company, or corporation, liable to pay any tax, shall neglect or refuse to pay the same after demand, the amount shall be a lien in favor of the United States from the time it was due until paid, with the interest, penalties, and costs that may accrue in addition thereto, upon all property and rights to property belonging to such person, bank, association, company, or corporation; and the collector, after demand, may levy, or by warrant may authorize a deputy collector to levy upon all property and rights to property belonging to such person, bank, association, company, or corporation, or on which the said lien exists, for the payment of the sum due as aforesaid, with the interest and penalty for non-payment, and also of such further sum as shall be sufficient for the fees, costs, and expenses of such levy. And in all cases of sale, as aforesaid, the certificate of such sale shall transfer to the purchaser all right, title, and interest of such delinquent in and to the property sold; and where such property shall consist of stocks, said certificate shall be notice, when received, to any corporation, company, or association of said transfer, and shall be authority to such corporation, company, or association to record the same on their books and records, in the same manner as if transferred or assigned by the person or party holding the same, in lieu of any original or prior certificates, which shall be void, whether canceled or not. And said certificates, where the subject of sale shall be securities or other evidences of debt, shall be good and valid receipts to the person holding the same, as against any person holding, or claiming to hold, possession of such securities or other evidences of debt. And all persons, and officers of companies or corporations, are required, on demand of a collector or deputy collector about to distraint, or having distrained on any property or rights of property, to exhibit all books containing evidence or statements relating to the subject or subjects of distraint, or the property or rights of property liable to distraint for the tax so due as aforesaid: Provided, That in any case of distraint for the payment of the taxes aforesaid, the goods, chattels, or effects so distrained shall and may be restored to the owner or possessor, if, prior to the sale, payment of the amount due shall be made to the proper officer charged with the collection, together with the fees and other charges; but in case of non-payment as aforesaid, the said officers shall proceed to sell the said goods, chattels, or effects at public auction, and shall retain from the proceeds of such sale the amount demandable for the use of the United States, and a commission of five per centum thereon for his own use, with the fees and charges for distraint and sale, rendering the overplus, if any there be, to the person who may be entitled to receive the same: Provided further, That there shall be exempt from distraint and sale, if belonging to the head of a family, the school-books and wearing apparel necessary for such family; also arms for personal use, one cow, two hogs, five sheep and the wool thereof, provided the aggregate market value of said sheep shall not exceed fifty dollars; the necessary food for such cow, hogs, and sheep for a period not exceeding thirty days; fuel to an amount not greater in value than twenty-five dollars; provisions to an amount not greater than fifty dollars; household furniture kept for use to an amount not greater than three hundred dollars; and the books, tools, or implements of a trade or profession to an amount not greater than one hundred dollars shall also be exempt; and the officer making the distraint shall summon three disinterested householders of the vicinity, who shall appraise and set apart to the owner the amount of property herein declared to be exempt.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

That section twenty-nine be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that in all cases where property liable to distraint for taxes may not be divisible, so as to enable the collector by a sale of part thereof to raise the whole amount of the tax, with all costs, charges, and commissions, the whole of such property shall be sold, and the surplus of the proceeds of the sale, after satisfying the tax, costs, and charges, shall be paid to the person legally entitled to receive the same; or if he cannot be found, or refuse to receive the same, then such surplus shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States, to be there held for the use of the person legally entitled to receive the same, until he shall make application therefor to the Secretary of the Treasury, who, upon such application and satisfactory proofs in support thereof, shall, by warrant on the Treasury, cause the same to be paid to the applicant. And if any of the property advertised for sale as aforesaid is of a kind subject to tax, and such tax has not been paid, and the amount bid for such property is not equal to the amount of such tax, the collector may purchase the same in behalf of the United States for an amount not exceeding the said tax. And in all cases where property subject to tax, but upon which the tax has not been paid, shall be seized upon distraint and sold, the amount of such tax shall, after deducting the expenses of such sale, be first appropriated out of the proceeds thereof to the payment of said tax. And if no assessment of tax has been made upon such property, the collector shall make a return thereof in the form required by law, and the assessor shall assess the tax thereon. And all property so purchased may be sold by said collector, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. And the collector shall render a distinct account of all charges incurred in the sale of such property to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, who shall by regulation determine the fees and charges to be allowed in all cases of distraint and other seizures; or where necessary expenses for making such distraint or seizure have been incurred, and in case of sale, the said collector shall pay into the Treasury the surplus, if any there be, after defraying such fees and charges.

That section thirty be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that in any case where goods, chattels, or effects sufficient to satisfy the taxes imposed by law upon any person liable to pay the same shall not be found by the collector or deputy collector whose duty it may be to collect the same, he is hereby authorized to collect the same by seizure and sale of real estate; and the officer making such seizure and sale shall give notice to the person whose estate is proposed to be sold, by giving him in hand, or leaving at his last or usual place of abode, if he has any such within the collection district where said estate is situated, a notice, in writing, stating what particular estate is proposed to be sold, describing the same with reasonable certainty, and the time when and place where said officer proposes to sell the same; which time shall not be less than twenty nor more than forty days from the time of giving said notice. And the said officer shall also cause a notification to the same effect to be published in some newspaper within the county where such seizure is made, if any such there be, and shall also cause a like notice to be posted at the post office nearest to the estate to be seized, and in two other public places within the county; and the place of said sale shall not be more than five miles distant from the estate seized, except by special order of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. At the time and place appointed, the officer making such seizure shall proceed to sell the said estate at public auction, offering the same at a minimum price, including the expense of making such levy, and all charges for advertising and an officer's fee of ten dollars. And in case the real estate so seized, as aforesaid, shall consist of several distinct tracts or parcels, the officer making sale thereof shall offer each tract or parcel for sale separately, and shall, if he deem it advisable, apportion the expenses, charges, and fees, aforesaid, to such several tracts or parcels, or to any of them, in estimating the minimum price aforesaid. And if no person offers for said estate the amount of said minimum price, the officer shall declare the same to be purchased by him for the United States, and shall deposit with the district attorney of the United States a deed thereof, as hereinafter specified and provided; otherwise, the same shall be declared to be sold to the highest bidder. And said sale may be adjourned from time to time by said officer for not exceeding thirty days in all, if he shall think it advisable so to do. If the amount bid shall not be then and there paid, the officer shall forthwith proceed to again sell said estate in the same manner; and upon any sale and the payment of the purchase money shall give to the purchaser a certificate of purchase, which shall set forth the real estate purchased, for whose taxes the same was sold, the name of the purchaser and the price paid therefor; and if the said real estate be not redeemed in the manner and within the time hereinafter provided, then the said collector or deputy collector shall execute to the said purchaser, upon his surrender of said certificate, a deed of the real estate purchased by him as aforesaid, reciting the facts set forth in said certificate, and in accordance with the laws of the State in which such real estate is situate upon the subject of sales of real estate under execution, which said deed shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated; and if the proceedings of the officer as set forth have been substantially in accordance with the provisions of law, shall be considered and operate as a conveyance of all the right, title, and interest the party delinquent had in and to the real estate thus sold at the time the lien of the United States attached thereto. Any person, whose estate may be proceeded against as aforesaid, shall have the right to pay the amount due, together with the costs and charges thereon, to the collector or deputy collector at any time prior to the sale thereof, and all further proceedings shall cease from the time of such payment. The owners of any real estate sold as aforesaid, their heirs, executors, or administrators, or any person having any interest therein, or a lien thereon, or any person in their behalf, shall be permitted to redeem the land sold as aforesaid, or any particular tract thereof, at any time within one year after the sale thereof, upon payment to the purchaser, or, in case he cannot be found in the county in which the land to be redeemed is situate, then to the collector of the district in which the land is situate, for the use of the purchaser, his heirs or assigns, the amount paid by the said purchaser and interest thereon at the rate of twenty per centum per annum. And any collector or deputy collector may, for the collection of taxes imposed upon any person or for which any person may be liable, and committed to him for collection, seize and sell the lands of such person situated in any other collection district within the State in which said officer resides; and his proceedings in relation thereto shall have the same effect as if the same were had in his proper collection district. And it shall be the duty of every collector to keep a record of all sales of land made in his collection district, whether by himself or his deputies, or by another collector, in which shall be set forth the tax for which any such sale was made, the dates of seizure and sale, the name of the party assessed, and all proceedings in making said sale, the amount of fees and expenses, the name of the purchaser, and the date of the deed; which record shall be certified by the officer making the sale. And it shall be the duty of any deputy making sale, as aforesaid, to return a statement of all his proceedings to the collector, and to certify the record thereof. And in case of the death or removal of the collector or the expiration of his term of office from any other cause, said record shall be delivered to his successor in office; and a copy of every such record, certified by the collector, shall be evidence in any court of the truth of the facts therein stated. And when any lands sold, as aforesaid, shall be redeemed as hereinbefore provided, the collector shall make an entry of the fact upon the record aforesaid, and the said entry shall be evidence of such redemption. And when any property, personal or real, seized and sold by virtue of the foregoing provisions, shall not be sufficient to satisfy the claim of the United States for which distraint or seizure may be made against any person whose property may be so seized and sold, the collector may, thereafter, and as often as the same may be necessary, proceed to seize and sell, in like manner, any other property liable to seizure of such person until the amount due from him, together with all expenses, shall be fully paid: Provided, That the word "county," wherever the same occurs in this act, or the acts of which this is amendatory, shall be construed to mean also a parish or any other equivalent subdivision of a State or Territory.

39TH CONG.... 1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

That section forty-four be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting the following: that each collector shall be charged with the whole amount of taxes, whether contained in lists delivered to him by the assessors, respectively, or delivered or transmitted to him by assistant assessors from time to time, or by other collectors, or by his predecessor in office, and with the additions thereto, with the par value of all stamps deposited with him, and with all moneys collected for passports, penalties, forfeitures, fees, or costs, and he shall be credited with all payments into the Treasury made as provided by law, with all stamps returned by him uncanceled to the Treasury, and with the amount of taxes contained in the lists transmitted in the manner above provided to other collectors, and by them received as aforesaid; and also with the amount of the taxes of such persons as may have absconded, or become insolvent, prior to the day when the tax ought, according to the provisions of law, to have been collected, and with all uncollected taxes transferred by him or by his deputy acting as collector to his successor in office: Provided, That it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that due diligence was used by the collector, who shall certify the facts to the First Comptroller of the Treasury. And each collector shall also be credited with the amount of all property purchased by him for the use of the United States, provided he shall faithfully account for and pay over the proceeds thereof upon a resale of the same as required by law. In case of the death, resignation, or removal of the collector, all lists and accounts of taxes uncollected shall be transferred to his successor in office as soon as such successor shall be appointed and qualified, and it shall be the duty of such successor to collect the same.

That section forty-one be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that it shall be the duty of the collectors aforesaid, or their deputies, in their respective districts, and they are hereby authorized, to collect all the taxes imposed by law, however the same may be designated, and to prosecute for the recovery of any sum or sums which may be forfeited by law; and all fines, penalties, and forfeitures which may be incurred or imposed by law, shall be sued for and recovered, in the name of the United States, in any proper form of action, or by any appropriate form of proceeding, qui tam or otherwise, before any circuit or district court of the United States for the district within which said fine, penalty, or forfeiture may have been incurred, or before any other court of competent jurisdiction. And taxes may be sued for and recovered, in the name of the United States, in any proper form of action before any circuit or district court of the United States for the district within which the liability to such tax may have been or shall be incurred, or where the party from whom such tax is due may reside at the time of the commencement of said action. But no such suit shall be commenced unless the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall authorize or sanction the proceedings: Provided, That in case of any suit for penalties or forfeitures brought upon information received from any person, other than a collector, deputy collector, assessor, assistant assessor, revenue agent, or inspector of internal revenue, the United States shall not be subject to any costs of suit, nor shall the fees of any attorney or counsel employed by any such officer be allowed in the settlement of his account, unless the employment of such attorney or counsel shall be authorized by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, either expressly or by general regulations.

That section forty-four be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be, and is hereby, authorized, on appeal to him made, to remit, refund, and pay back all taxes erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, all penalties collected without authority, and all taxes that shall appear to be unjustly assessed or excessive in amount or in any manner wrongfully collected, and also repay to collectors or deputy collectors the full amount of such sums of money as shall or may be recovered against them, or any of them, in any court, for any internal taxes or licenses collected by them, with the costs and expenses of suit, and all damages and costs recovered against assessors, assistant assessors, collectors, deputy collectors, and inspectors, in any suit which shall be brought against them, or any of them, by reason of anything that shall or may be done in the due performance of their official duties; and all judgments and moneys recovered or received for taxes, costs, forfeitures, and penalties, shall be paid to the collector as internal taxes are required to be paid: Provided, That where a second assessment may have been made in case of a list, statement, or return which in the opinion of the assessor or assistant assessor was false or fraudulent, or contained any understatement or undervaluation, such assessment shall not be remitted, nor shall taxes collected under such assessment be recovered, refunded, or paid back, unless it is proved that said list, statement, or return was not false or fraudulent, and did not contain any understatement or undervaluation.

That section forty-eight be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting the following: that all goods, wares, merchandise, articles, or objects, on which taxes are imposed by the provisions of law, which shall be found in the possession, or custody, or within the control of any person or persons, for the purpose of being sold or removed by such person or persons in fraud of the internal revenue laws, or with design to avoid payment of said taxes, may be seized by the collector or deputy collector of the proper district, or by such other collector or deputy collector as may be specially authorized by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for that purpose, and the same shall be forfeited to the United States; and also all raw materials found in the possession of any person or persons intending to manufacture the same into articles of a kind subject to tax for the purpose of fraudulent[ly] selling such manufactured articles, or with design to evade the payment of said tax; and also all tools, implements, instruments, and personal property whatsoever, in the place or building or within any yard or inclosure where such articles or such raw materials shall be found, may also be seized by any collector or deputy collector, as aforesaid, and the same shall be forfeited as aforesaid; and the proceedings to enforce said forfeiture shall be in the nature of a proceeding in rem in the circuit or district court of the United States for the district where such seizure is made, or in any other court of competent jurisdiction. And any person who shall have in his custody or possession any such goods, wares, merchandise, articles, or objects, subject to tax as aforesaid, for the purpose of selling the same with the design of avoiding payment of the taxes imposed thereon, shall be liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars, or not less than double the amount of taxes fraudulently attempted to be evaded, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction; and the goods, wares, merchandise, articles, or objects, which shall be so seized by any collector or deputy collector, may, at the option of the collector, be delivered to the marshal of said district, and remain in the care and custody of said marshal, and under his control until he shall obtain possession by process of law, and the cost of seizure made before process issues shall be taxable by the court: Provided, That when the property so seized may be liable to perish or become greatly reduced in price or value by keeping, or when it cannot be kept without great expense, the owner thereof, the collector, or the marshal of the district, may apply to the assessor of the district to examine said property; and if, in the opinion of said assessor, it shall be necessary that the said property should be sold to prevent such waste or expense, he shall appraise the same; and the owner thereupon shall have said property returned to him upon giving bond in such form as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and in amount equal to the appraised value, with such sureties as the said assessor shall deem good and sufficient, to abide the final order, decree, or judgment of the court having cognizance of the case, and to pay the amount of said appraised value to the collector, marshal, or otherwise, as he may be ordered and directed by the court, which bond shall be filed by said assessor with the United States district attorney for the district in which said proceedings in rem may be commenced: Provided further, That in case said bond shall have been executed and the property returned before seizure thereof, by virtue of the process aforesaid, the marshal shall give notice of the pendency of proceedings in court to the parties executing said bond, by personal service or publication, and in manner and form as the court may direct, and the court shall thereupon have jurisdiction of said matter and parties in the same manner as if such property had been seized by virtue of the process aforesaid. But if said owner shall neglect or refuse to give said bond, the assessor shall issue to the collector or marshal aforesaid an order to sell the same; and the said collector or marshal shall thereupon advertise and sell the said property at public auction in the same manner as goods may be sold on final execution in said district; and the proceeds of the sale, after deducting the reasonable costs of the seizure and sale, shall be paid to the court aforesaid, to abide its final order, decree, or judgment.

That sections fifty-three, fifty-four, fifty-five, fifty-six, fifty-seven, fifty-nine, sixty-two, sixty-three, sixty-four, sixty-five, sixty-six, sixty-seven, sixty-eight, sixty-nine, and seventy, be, and the same are hereby, repealed, to take effect on the first day of September, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

That section seventy-one be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that no person, firm, company, or corporation shall be engaged in, prosecute, or carry on any trade, business, or profession, hereinafter mentioned and described, until he or they shall have paid a special tax therefor in the manner hereinafter provided.

That section seventy-two be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that every person, firm, company, or corporation engaged in any trade, business, or profession, on which a special tax is imposed by law, shall register with the assistant assessor of the assessment district, first, his or their name or style, and in case of a firm or company, the names of the several persons constituting such firm or company, and their places of residence; second the trade, business, or profession, and the place where such trade, business, or profession is to be carried on; third, if a rectifier, the number of barrels he designs to rectify; if a peddler, whether he designs to travel on foot, or with one, two, or more horses or mules; if an innkeeper, the yearly rental value of the house and property to be occupied for said purpose. All of which facts shall be returned duly certified by such assistant assessor, to both the assessor and collector of the district; and the special tax shall be paid to the collector or deputy collector of the district as hereinafter provided for such trade, business, or profession, who shall give a receipt therefor.

That section seventy-three be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that any one who shall exercise or carry on any trade, business, or profession, or do any act hereinafter mentioned, for the exercising, carrying on, or doing of which a special tax is imposed by law, without payment thereof as in that behalf required, shall, for every such offense, besides being liable to the payment of the tax, be subject to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or both, and such fine shall be distributed between the United States and the informer, if there be any, as provided by law.

That section seventy-four be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that the receipt for the payment of any special tax shall contain and set forth the purpose, trade, business, or profession for which such tax is paid, and the name and place of abode of the person or persons paying the same; if by a rectifier, the quantity of spirits intended to be rectified; if by a peddler, whether for traveling on foot or with one, or two, or more horses or mules, the time for which payment is made, the date or time of payment, and (except in case of auctioneers, produce brokers, commercial brokers, patent-right dealers, photographers, builders, insurance agents, insurance brokers, and peddlers) the place at which the trade, business, or profession for which the tax is paid shall be carried on: Provided, That the payment of the special tax herein imposed shall not exempt from an additional special tax the person or persons, (except lawyers, physicians, surgeons, dentists, cattle brokers, horse dealers, peddlers, produce brokers, commercial brokers, patent-right dealers, photographers, builders, insurance agents, insurance brokers, and auctioneers,) or firm, company, or corporation doing business in any other place than that stated; but nothing herein contained shall require a special tax for the storage of goods, wares, or merchandise in other places than the place of business, nor for the sale by manufacturers or producers of their own goods, wares, and merchandise, at the place of production or manufacture, and at their principal office or place of business, provided no goods, wares, or merchandise shall be kept except as samples, at said office or place of business. And every person exercising or carrying on any trade, business, or profession, or doing any act for which a special tax is imposed, shall, on demand of any officer of internal revenue, produce and exhibit the receipt for payment of the tax, and unless he shall do so may be taken and deemed not to have paid such tax. And in case any peddler shall refuse to exhibit his or her receipt, as aforesaid, when demanded by any officer of internal revenue, said officer may seize the horse or mule, wagon, and contents, or pack, bundle, or basket of any person so refusing, and the assessor of the district in which the seizure has occurred may, on ten days' notice, published in any newspaper in the district, or served personally on the peddler, or at his dwelling-house, require such peddler to show cause, if any he has, why the horses or mules, wagon, and contents, pack, bundle, or basket so seized shall not be forfeited; and in case no sufficient cause is shown, the assessor may direct a forfeiture, and issue an order to the collector or to any deputy collector of the district for the sale of the property so forfeited; and the same, after payment of the expenses of the proceedings, shall be paid to the collector for the use of the United States. And all such special taxes shall become due on the first day of May in each year, or on commencing any trade, business, or profession upon which such tax is by law imposed. In the former case the tax shall be reckoned for one year, and in the latter case, proportionately for that part of the year from the first day of the month in which the liability to a special tax commenced, to the first day of May following.

That section seventy-five be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that upon the death of any person having paid the special tax for any trade, business, or profession, it may and shall be lawful for the executors or administrators, or the wife or child, or the legal representatives of such deceased person to occupy the house or premises, and in like manner to exercise or carry on, for the residue of the term for which the tax shall have been paid, the same trade, business, or profession, as the deceased before exercised or carried on, in or upon the same houses or premises, without payment of any additional tax. And in case of the removal of any person or persons from the house or premises for which any trade, business, or profession was taxed, it shall be lawful for the person or persons so removing to any other place to carry on the trade, business, or profession specified in the tax receipt at the place to which such person or persons may remove without payment of any additional tax: Provided, That all cases of death, change, or removal, as aforesaid, shall be registered with the assistant assessor, and with the collector, together with the name or names of the person or persons making such change or removal, or successor to any person deceased, under regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

That section seventy-six be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that in every case where more than one of the pursuits, employments, or occupations, hereinafter described, shall be pursued or carried on in the same place by the same person at the same time, except as hereinafter provided, the tax shall be paid for each according to the rates severally prescribed: Provided, That in cities and towns having a less population than six thousand persons according to the last preceding census, one special tax shall be held to embrace the business of land-warrant brokers, claim agents, and real-estate agents, upon payment of the highest rate of tax applicable to either one of said pursuits.

That section seventy-seven be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that no auctioneer shall, by virtue of having paid the special tax as an auctioneer, sell any goods or other property at private sale, nor shall he employ any other person to act as auctioneer in his behalf, except in his own store or warehouse or in his presence; and any auctioneer who shall sell goods or commodities otherwise than by auction, without having paid the special tax imposed upon such business, shall be subject and liable to the penalty imposed upon persons dealing in or retailing, trading or selling goods or commodities without payment of the special tax for exercising or carrying on such trade or business; and where goods or commodities are the property of any person or persons taxed to deal in or retail, or trade in or sell the same, it shall and may be lawful for any person exercising or carrying on the trade or business of an auctioneer to sell such goods or commodities for and on behalf of such person or persons in said house or premises.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

That section seventy-eight be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that any number of persons, except lawyers, conveyancers, claim agents, patent agents, physicians, surgeons, dentists, cattle brokers, horse dealers, and peddlers, doing business in co-partnership at any one place, shall be required to pay but one special tax for such co-partnership.

That section seventy-nine be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that a special tax shall be, and hereby is, imposed as follows, that is to say:

One. Banks chartered or organized under a general law, with a capital not exceeding fifty thousand dollars, and bankers using or employing a capital not exceeding the sum of fifty thousand dollars, shall pay one hundred dollars; when exceeding fifty thousand dollars, for every additional thousand dollars in excess of fifty thousand dollars, two dollars. Every incorporated or other bank, and every person, firm, or company having a place of business where credits are opened by the deposit or collection of money or currency, subject to be paid or remitted upon draft, check, or order, or where money is advanced or loaned on stocks, bonds, bullion, bills of exchange, or promissory notes, or where stocks, bonds, bullion, bills of exchange, or promissory notes are received for discount or for sale, shall be regarded as a bank or as a banker: Provided, That any savings bank having no capital stock, and whose business is confined to receiving deposits and loaning or investing the same for the benefit of its depositors, and which does no other business of banking, shall not be subject to this tax.

Two. Wholesale dealers, whose annual sales do not exceed fifty thousand dollars, shall pay fifty dollars; and if their annual sales exceed fifty thousand dollars, for every additional thousand dollars in excess of fifty thousand dollars, they shall pay one dollar; and the amount of all sales within the year beyond fifty thousand dollars shall be returned monthly to the assistant assessor, and the tax on sales in excess of fifty thousand dollars shall be assessed by the assessors, and paid monthly as other monthly taxes are assessed and paid. Every person shall be regarded as a wholesale dealer whose business it is, for himself or on commission, to sell or offer to sell any goods, wares, or merchandise of foreign or domestic production, not including wines, spirits, or malt liquors, whose annual sales exceed twenty-five thousand dollars. And the payment of the special tax as a wholesale dealer shall not exempt any such person acting as a commercial broker from the payment of the special tax imposed upon commercial brokers: Provided, That no person paying the special tax as a wholesale dealer in liquors shall be required to pay an additional special tax on account of the sale of other goods, wares, or merchandise on the same premises: And provided further, That, in estimating the amount of sales for the purposes of this section, any sales made by or through another wholesale dealer on commission shall not be again estimated and included as sold by the party for whom the sale was made.

Three. Retail dealers shall pay ten dollars. Every person whose business or occupation it is to sell or offer for sale any goods, wares, or merchandise of foreign or domestic production, not including spirits, wines, ale, beer, or other malt liquors, and whose annual sales exceed one thousand and do not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars, shall be regarded as a retail dealer.

Four. Wholesale dealers in liquors whose annual sales do not exceed fifty thousand dollars shall pay one hundred dollars, and if exceeding fifty thousand dollars, for every additional one thousand dollars in excess of fifty thousand dollars, they shall pay one dollar, and such excess shall be assessed and paid in the same manner as required of wholesale dealers. Every person who shall sell or offer for sale any distilled spirits, fermented liquors, or wines of any kind in quantities of more than three gallons at one time to the same purchaser, or whose annual sales, including sales of other merchandise, shall exceed twenty-five thousand dollars, shall be regarded as a wholesale dealer in liquors.

Five. Retail dealers in liquors shall pay twenty-five dollars. Every person who shall sell or offer for sale foreign or domestic spirits, wines, ale, beer, or other malt liquors in quantities of three gallons or less, and whose annual sales, including all sales of other merchandise, do not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars, shall be regarded as a retail dealer in liquors.

Six. Lottery ticket dealers shall pay one hundred dollars. Every person, association, firm, or corporation who shall make, sell, or offer to sell lottery tickets or fractional parts thereof, or any token, certificate, or device representing or intending to represent a lottery ticket or any fractional part thereof, or any policy of numbers in any lottery, or shall manage any lottery, or prepare schemes of lotteries, or superintend the drawing of any lottery, shall be deemed a lottery ticket dealer: Provided, That the managers of any lottery shall give bond in the sum of one thousand dollars that the person paying such tax shall not sell any tickets or supplementary ticket of such lottery which has not been duly stamped according to law, and that he will pay the tax imposed by law upon the gross receipts of his sales.

Seven. Horse dealers shall pay ten dollars. Any person whose business it is to buy or sell horses or mules shall be regarded a horse dealer: Provided, That one special tax having been paid, no additional tax shall be imposed upon any horse dealer for keeping a livery stable, nor upon any livery stable keeper for dealing in horses.

Eight. Livery stable keepers shall pay ten dollars. Any person whose business it is to keep horses for hire, or to let, or to keep, feed, or board horses for others, shall be regarded as a livery stable keeper.

Nine. Brokers shall pay fifty dollars. Every person, firm, or company, whose business it is to negotiate purchases or sales of stocks, bonds, exchange, bullion, coined money, bank notes, promissory notes, or other securities, for themselves or others, shall be regarded as a broker: Provided, That any person having paid the special tax as a banker shall not be required to pay the special tax as a broker.

Ten. Pawnbrokers using or employing a capital of not exceeding fifty thousand dollars, shall pay fifty dollars; and when using or employing a capital exceeding fifty thousand dollars, for every additional thousand dollars in excess of fifty thousand dollars, shall pay two dollars. Every person whose business or occupation it is to take or receive, by way of pledge, pawn, or exchange, any goods, wares, or merchandise, or any kind of personal property whatever, as security for the repayment of money lent thereon, shall be deemed a pawnbroker.

Eleven. Land-warrant brokers shall pay twenty-five dollars. Any person shall be regarded as a land-warrant broker who makes a business of buying and selling land-warrants or of furnishing them to settlers or other persons.

Twelve. Cattle brokers, whose annual sales do not exceed ten thousand dollars, shall pay ten dollars; and if exceeding the sum of ten thousand dollars, one dollar for each additional thousand dollars; and such excess shall be assessed and paid in the same manner as required of wholesale dealers. Any person whose business it is to buy or sell or deal in cattle, hogs, or sheep, shall be considered as a cattle broker.

Thirteen. Produce brokers, whose annual sales do not exceed the sum of ten thousand dollars, shall pay ten dollars. Every person other than one having paid the special tax as a commercial broker or cattle broker, or wholesale or retail dealer, or peddler, whose occupation it is to buy or sell agricultural or farm products, and whose annual sales do not exceed ten thousand dollars, shall be regarded as a produce broker.

Fourteen. Commercial brokers shall pay twenty dollars. Any person or firm whose business it is, as a broker, to negotiate sales or purchases of goods, wares, or merchandise, or to negotiate freights and other business for the owners of vessels, or for the shippers, or consignors, or consignees of freight carried by vessels, shall be regarded a commercial broker.

Fifteen. Custom-house brokers shall pay ten dollars. Every person whose occupation it is, as the agent of others, to arrange entries and other custom-house papers, or transact business at any port of entry relating to the importation or exportation of goods, wares, or merchandise, shall be regarded a custom-house broker.

Sixteen. Distillers shall pay one hundred dollars. Every person, firm, or corporation, who distills or manufactures spirits, or who brews or makes mash, wort, or wash for distillation or the production of spirits, shall be deemed a distiller: Provided, That distillers of apples, grapes, or peaches, distilling or manufacturing fifty and less than one hundred and fifty barrels per year from the same, shall pay fifty dollars; and those distilling or manufacturing less than fifty barrels per year from the same, shall pay twenty dollars: And provided further, That no tax shall be imposed for any still, stills, or other apparatus used by druggists and chemists for the recovery of alcohol for pharmaceutical and chemical or scientific purposes which has been used in those processes.

Seventeen. Brewers shall pay one hundred dollars. Every person, firm, or corporation who manufactures fermented liquors of any name or description, for sale, from malt, wholly or in part, or from any substitute therefor, shall be deemed a brewer: Provided, That any person, firm, or corporation, who manufactures less than five hundred barrels per year, shall pay the sum of fifty dollars.

Eighteen. Rectifiers who shall rectify any quantity of spirituous liquors, not exceeding five hundred barrels, packages, or casks, containing not more than forty gallons to each barrel, package, or cask, shall pay twenty-five dollars; and twenty-five dollars additional for each additional five hundred such barrels, packages, or casks, or any fractional part thereof. Every person, firm, or corporation who rectifies, purifies, or refines distilled spirits or wines by any process, or who, by mixing distilled spirits or wine with any materials, manufactures any spurious, imitation, or compound liquors for sale, under the name of whisky, brandy, gin, rum, wine, "spirits," or "wine bitters," or any other name, shall be regarded as a rectifier.

Nineteen. Coal-oil distillers and distillers of burning fluid and camphene shall pay fifty dollars. Any person, firm, or corporation, who shall refine, produce, or distill petroleum or rock oil, or oil made of coal, asphaltum, shale, peat, or other bituminous substances, or shall manufacture illuminating oil, shall be regarded as a coal-oil distiller.

Twenty. Keepers of hotels, inns, or taverns, shall be classified and rated according to the yearly rental, or, if not rented, according to the estimated yearly rental of the house and property intended to be so occupied as follows, to wit: when the rent or valuation of the yearly rental of said house and property shall be two hundred dollars, or less, they shall pay ten dollars; and if exceeding two hundred dollars, for any additional one hundred dollars or fractional part thereof in excess of two hundred dollars, five dollars: Provided, That a payment of such special tax shall be construed to permit the person so keeping a hotel, inn, or tavern, to furnish the necessary food for the animals of such travelers or sojourners without the payment of an additional special tax as a livery stable keeper. Every place where food and lodging are provided for and furnished to travelers and sojourners for pay shall be regarded as a hotel, inn, or tavern: Provided, That keepers of hotels, taverns, and eating-houses, in which liquors are sold by retail, to be drank upon the premises, shall pay an additional tax of twenty-five dollars. The yearly rental shall be fixed and established by the assistant assessor of the proper assessment district at its proper value; but if rented, at not less than the actual rent agreed on by the parties. All steamers and vessels, upon waters of the United States, on board of which passengers or travelers are provided with food or lodgings, shall be subject to and required to pay twenty-five dollars: Provided, That any person who shall make a false or fraudulent return concerning the actual rent mentioned in this paragraph shall be subject to a penalty therefor of double the amount of the tax.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Twenty-one. Keepers of eating-houses shall pay ten dollars. Every place where food or refreshments of any kind, not including spirits, wines, ale, beer, or other malt liquors, are provided for casual visitors and sold for consumption therein, shall be regarded as an eating-house. But the keeper of an eating-house, having paid the tax therefor, shall not be required to pay a special tax as a confectioner, anything in this [act] to the contrary notwithstanding. And keepers of hotels, inns, taverns, and eating-houses, having paid the special tax therefor, shall not be required to pay additional tax for selling tobacco, snuff, or cigars on the same premises, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

Twenty-two. Confectioners shall pay ten dollars. Every person who sells at retail confectionery, sweetmeats, comfits, or other confections, in any building, shall be regarded as a confectioner. But wholesale and retail dealers, having paid the special tax therefor, shall not be required to pay the special tax as a confectioner, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

Twenty-three. Claim agents and agents for procuring patents shall pay ten dollars. Every person whose business it is to prosecute claims in any of the Executive Departments of the Federal Government, or procure patents, shall be deemed a claim or patent agent, as the case may be.

Twenty-four. Patent-right dealers shall pay ten dollars. Every person whose business it is to sell, or offer for sale, patent-rights, shall be regarded as a patent-right dealer.

Twenty-five. Real-estate agents shall pay ten dollars. Every person whose business it is to sell or offer for sale real estate for others, or to rent houses, stores, or other buildings or real estate, or to collect rent for others, except lawyers paying a special tax as such, shall be regarded as a real-estate agent.

Twenty-six. Conveyancers shall pay ten dollars. Every person, other than one having paid the special tax as a lawyer or claim agent, whose business it is to draw deeds, bonds, mortgages, wills, writs, or other legal papers, or to examine titles to real estate, shall be regarded as a conveyancer.

Twenty-seven. Intelligence office keepers shall pay ten dollars. Every person whose business it is to find or furnish places of employment for others, or to find or furnish servants upon application in writing or otherwise, receiving compensation therefor, shall be regarded as an intelligence office keeper.

Twenty-eight. Insurance agents shall pay ten dollars. Any person who shall act as agent of any fire, marine, life, mutual, or other insurance company or companies, or any person who shall negotiate or procure insurance for which he receives any commission or other compensation, shall be regarded as an insurance agent: Provided, That if the annual receipts of any person as such agent shall not exceed one hundred dollars, he shall pay five dollars only: And provided further, That no special tax shall be imposed upon any person for selling tickets or contracts of insurance against injury to persons while traveling by land or water.

Twenty-nine. Foreign insurance agents shall pay fifty dollars. Every person who shall act as agent of any foreign fire, marine, life, mutual, or other insurance company or companies shall be regarded as a foreign insurance agent.

Thirty. Auctioneers, whose annual sales do not exceed ten thousand dollars shall pay ten dollars, and if exceeding ten thousand dollars shall pay twenty dollars. Every person shall be deemed an auctioneer whose business it is to offer property at public sale to the highest or best bidder: Provided, That the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to judicial or executive officers making auction sales by virtue of any judgment or decree of any court, nor public sales made by or for executors, administrators, or guardians of any estate held by them as such.

Thirty-one. Manufacturers shall pay ten dollars. Any person, firm, or corporation who shall manufacture by hand or machinery any goods, wares, or merchandise, not otherwise provided for, exceeding annually the sum of one thousand dollars, or who shall be engaged in the manufacture or preparation for sale of any articles or compounds, or shall put up for sale in packages with his own name or trade-mark thereon any articles or compound, shall be regarded as a manufacturer.

Thirty-two. Peddlers shall be classified and rated as follows, to wit: when traveling with more than two horses, or mules, the first class, and shall pay fifty dollars; when traveling with two horses, or mules, the second class, and shall pay twenty-five dollars; when traveling with one horse, or mule, the third class, and shall pay fifteen dollars; when traveling on foot, or by public conveyance, the fourth class, and shall pay ten dollars. Any person, except persons peddling only charcoal, newspapers, magazines, Bibles, religious tracts, or the products of his farm or garden, who sells or offers to sell at retail, goods, wares, or other commodities, traveling from place to place in the town or through the country, shall be regarded a peddler: Provided, That any peddler who sells, or offers to sell, distilled spirits, fermented liquors or wines, dry-goods, foreign or domestic, by one or more original packages or pieces, at one time, to the same person or persons, or who peddles jewelry, shall pay fifty dollars: Provided further, That manufacturers and producers of agricultural tools and implements, garden seeds, fruit and ornamental trees, stoves and hollow-ware, brooms, wooden-ware, charcoal, and gunpowder, delivering and selling at wholesale any of said articles, by themselves or their authorized agents, at places other than the place of manufacture, shall not therefor be required to pay any special tax: Provided further, That persons who shall sell shell or other fish or both, traveling from place to place, and not from any shop or stand, shall be required to pay five dollars only; and no special tax shall be imposed for selling shell or other fish from hand-carts or wheelbarrows.

Thirty-three. Apothecaries shall pay ten dollars. Every person who keeps a shop or building where medicines are compounded or prepared according to prescriptions of physicians, or where medicines are sold, shall be regarded as an apothecary. But wholesale and retail dealers, who have paid the special tax therefor, shall not be required to pay a tax as an apothecary; nor shall apothecaries who have paid the special tax be required to pay the tax as retail dealers in liquor in consequence of selling alcohol; or of selling or of dispensing, upon physicians' prescriptions, the wines and spirits official in the United States and other national pharmacopœias, in quantities not exceeding half a pint of either at any one time, nor exceeding in aggregate cost value the sum of three hundred dollars per annum.

Thirty-four. Photographers shall pay ten dollars. Any person who makes for sale photographs, ambrotypes, daguerreotypes, or pictures, by the action of light, shall be regarded as a photographer.

Thirty-five. Tobacconists shall pay ten dollars. Any person, firm or corporation whose business it is to manufacture cigars, snuff, or tobacco in any form, shall be regarded a tobacconist.

Thirty-six. Butchers shall pay ten dollars. Every person whose business it is to sell butchers' meat at retail shall be regarded as a butcher: Provided, That no butcher having paid the special tax therefor shall be required to pay the special tax as a retail dealer on account of selling other articles at the same store, stall, or premises: Provided further, That butchers who sell butchers' meat exclusively by themselves or agents, traveling from place to place, and not from any shop or stand, shall be required to pay five dollars only, any existing law to the contrary notwithstanding.

Thirty-seven. Proprietors of theaters, museums, and concert halls, shall pay one hundred dollars. Every edifice used for the purpose of dramatic or operatic or other representations, plays or performances, for admission to which entrance money is received, not including halls rented or used occasionally for concerts or theatrical representations, shall be regarded as a theater: Provided, That when any such edifice is under lease at the passage of this act the tax shall be paid by the lessee, unless otherwise stipulated between the parties to said lease.

Thirty-eight. The proprietor or proprietors of circuses shall pay [one] hundred dollars. Every building, tent, space, or area, where feats of horsemanship or acrobatic sports or theatrical performances are exhibited, shall be regarded as a circus: Provided, That no special tax paid in one State shall exempt exhibitions from the tax in another State. And but one special tax shall be imposed for exhibitions within any one State.

Thirty-nine. Jugglers shall pay twenty dollars. Every person who performs by sleight of hand shall be regarded as a juggler. The proprietors or agents of all other public exhibitions or shows for money, not enumerated in this section, shall pay ten dollars: Provided, That a special tax paid in one State shall not exempt exhibitions from the tax in another State. And but one special tax shall be required for exhibitions within any one State.

Forty. Proprietors of bowling alleys and billiard rooms shall pay ten dollars for each alley or table. Every place or building where bowls are thrown or billiards played, and open to the public with or without price, shall be regarded as a bowling alley or billiard room, respectively.

Forty-one. Proprietors of gift enterprises shall pay one hundred and fifty dollars. Every person, firm, or corporation who shall sell or offer for sale any real estate or article of merchandise of any description whatsoever, or any ticket of admission to any exhibition or performance, with a promise, express or implied, to give or bestow, or in any manner hold out the promise of gift or bestowal of any article or thing for and in consideration of the purchase by any person of any other article or thing, shall be regarded as a proprietor of a gift enterprise: Provided, That no such proprietor, in consequence of being thus taxed, shall be exempt from paying any other tax imposed by law, and the special tax herein required shall be in addition thereto.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

Forty-two. Owners of stallions and jacks shall pay ten dollars. Every person who keeps a horse or a jack for the use of mares, requiring or receiving pay therefor, shall be regarded as the owner thereof, and shall furnish a statement to the assessor or assistant assessor, which shall contain a brief description of the animal, its age, and place or places where used or to be used: Provided, That all accounts, notes, or demands for the use of any such horse or jack, the owner or keeper thereof not having paid the tax as aforesaid, shall be void.

Forty-three. Lawyers shall pay ten dollars. Every person who for fee or reward shall prosecute or defend causes in court of record or other judicial tribunal of the United States or of any of the States, or whose business it is to give legal advice in relation to any cause or matter whatever, shall be deemed to be a lawyer.

Forty-four. Physicians, surgeons, and dentists shall pay ten dollars. Every person (except apothecaries) whose business it is, for fee and reward, to prescribe remedies or perform surgical operations for the cure of any bodily disease or ailment, shall be deemed a physician, surgeon, or dentist.

Forty-five. Architects and civil engineers shall pay ten dollars. Every person whose business it is to plan, design, or superintend the construction of buildings, or ships, or of roads, or bridges, or canals, or railroads, shall be regarded as an architect and civil engineer: Provided, That this shall not include a practical carpenter who labors on a building.

Forty-six. Builders and contractors shall pay ten dollars. Every person whose business it is to construct buildings, or vessels, or bridges, or canals, or railroads, by contract, whose receipts from building contracts exceed two thousand five hundred dollars in any one year, shall be regarded as a builder and contractor.

Forty-seven. Plumbers and gas-fitters shall pay ten dollars. Every person, firm, or corporation, whose business it is to fit, furnish, or sell plumbing material, gas-pipes, gas-burners, or other gas-fixtures, shall be regarded a plumber and gas-fitter.

Forty-eight. Assayers, assaying gold and silver, or either, of a value not exceeding in one year two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, shall pay one hundred dollars, and two hundred dollars when the value exceeds two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and does not exceed five hundred thousand dollars, and five hundred dollars when the value exceeds five hundred thousand dollars. Any person or persons or corporation whose business or occupation it is to separate gold and silver from other metals or mineral substances with which such gold or silver, or both, are alloyed, combined, or united, or to ascertain or determine the quantity of gold or silver in any alloy or combination with other metals, shall be deemed an assayer.

Forty-nine. Miners shall pay ten dollars. Every person, firm, or company, who shall employ others in the business of mining for coal, or for gold, silver, copper, lead, iron, zinc, spelter, or other minerals, not having paid the tax therefor as a manufacturer, and no other, shall be regarded as a miner: Provided, That this shall not apply to any miner whose receipts as such shall not exceed, annually, one thousand dollars.

Fifty. Express carriers and agents shall pay ten dollars. Every person, firm, or company, engaged in the carrying or delivery of money, valuable papers, or any articles for pay, or doing an express business, whose gross receipts therefrom exceed the sum of one thousand dollars per annum, shall be regarded as an express carrier: Provided, That but one special tax of ten dollars shall be imposed upon any one person, firm, or company, in respect to all the business to be done by such person, firm, or company, on a continuous route, and the payment of such tax shall cover all business done upon such route by such person, firm, or company, anywhere in the United States; and such tax shall be required only from the principal in such business, and not from any subordinate: Provided further, That draymen and teamsters owning only one dray or team shall not be required to pay such tax.

Fifty-one. Grinders of coffee or spices shall pay one hundred dollars. Any person who manufactures or prepares for use and sale, by grinding or other process, coffee, spices, or mustard, or adulterated coffee, spices, or mustard, or any article or compound intended for use in the adulteration of or as substitutes for coffee, spices, or mustard, shall be regarded as a grinder of coffee or spices: Provided, That any person who shall roast coffee for use and sale shall be required to pay the special tax herein imposed upon grinders of coffee or spices.

That section eighty be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that the special tax shall not be imposed upon apothecaries, confectioners, butchers, keepers of eating-houses, hotels, inns, or taverns, or retail dealers, except retail dealers in spirituous and malt liquors, when their annual gross receipts shall not exceed the sum of one thousand dollars, any provision of law to the contrary notwithstanding; the amount of such annual receipts to be ascertained or estimated in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall prescribe, as well as the amount of all other annual sales or receipts where the tax is graduated by the amount of sales or receipts; and where the amount of the tax has been increased by law above the amount paid by any person, firm, or company, or has been understated or underestimated, such person, firm, or company shall be again assessed, and pay the amount of such increase: Provided, That when any person, before the passage of this act, has been assessed for a license, the amount thus assessed being equal to the tax herein imposed for the business covered by such license, no special tax shall be assessed until the expiration of the period for which such license was assessed.

That section eighty-one be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that nothing contained in the preceding sections of this act shall be construed to impose a special tax upon vintners who sell wine of their own growth at the place where the same is made; nor upon apothecaries, as to wines or spirituous liquors which they use exclusively in the preparation or making up of medicines; nor shall physicians be taxed for keeping on hand medicines solely for the purpose of making up their own prescriptions for their own patients; nor shall farmers be taxed as manufacturers or producers for making butter or cheese, with milk from their own cows, or for any other farm products: Provided, That the payment of any tax imposed by law shall not be held or construed to exempt any person carrying on any trade, business, or profession, from any penalty or punishment provided by the laws of any State for carrying on such trade, business or profession within such State, or in any manner to authorize the commencement or continuance of such trade, business, or profession, contrary to the laws of such State, or in places prohibited by municipal law; nor shall the payment of any tax herein provided be held or construed to prohibit or prevent any State from placing a duty or tax for State or other purposes on any trade, business, or profession, upon which a tax is imposed by law.

That section eighty-six be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that any person, firm, company, or corporation, manufacturing or producing goods, wares, and merchandise, sold or removed for consumption or use, upon which taxes are imposed by law, shall, in their return of the value and quantity, render an account of the full amount of actual sales made by the manufacturer, producer, or agent thereof, and shall state whether any part, and if so, what part, of said goods, wares, and merchandise, has been consumed or used by the owner, owners, or agent, or used for the production of another manufacture or product, together with the market value of the same at the time of such use or consumption; whether such goods, wares, and merchandise were shipped for a foreign port or consigned to auction or commission merchants, other than agents, for sale; and shall make a return according to the value at the place of shipment, when shipped for a foreign port, or according to the value at the place of manufacture or production, when removed for use or consumption, or consigned to others than agents of the manufacturer or producer. The value and quantity of the goods, wares, and merchandise required to be stated as aforesaid shall be estimated by the actual sales made by the manufacturer or by his agent. And where such goods, wares, and merchandise have been removed for consumption or for delivery to others, or placed on shipboard, or are no longer within the custody or control of the manufacturer or his agent, not being in his factory, store, or warehouse, the value shall be estimated at the average of the market value of the like goods, wares, and merchandise at the time when the same became liable to tax.

That section eighty-seven be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that any person, firm, company, or corporation who may now be engaged in the manufacture of tobacco, snuff, or cigars, or who shall hereafter commence or engage in such manufacture, before commencing, or, if already commenced, before continuing such manufacture for which they may be liable to be assessed under the provisions of law, shall, in addition to a compliance with all other provisions of law, furnish to the assessor or assistant assessor a statement, subscribed under oath or affirmation, accurately setting forth the place, and, if in a city, the street and number of the street where the manufacturing is, or is to be carried on, the name and description of the manufactured article, and, if the same shall be manufactured for or to be sold and delivered to any other person or party, the name and residence and business or occupation of the person or party for whom the said article is to be manufactured or to whom it is to be delivered, and generally the kind and quality manufactured or proposed to be manufactured; and shall give a bond to the United States, with one or more sureties to be approved by the collector of the district, in the sum of three thousand dollars for each cutting-machine kept for use; in the sum of one thousand dollars for each screw-press kept for use in making plug or pressed tobacco; in the sum of five thousand dollars for each hydraulic press kept for use; in the sum of one thousand dollars for each snuff mull kept for use; and in the sum of one hundred dollars for each person employed by said person, firm, company, or corporation in making cigars; conditioned that he will comply with all the requirements of law in regard to the manufacture of tobacco, snuff, or cigars; that he will not employ others to manufacture cigars who have not obtained the requisite permit for making cigars; that he will not engage in any attempt, by himself or by collusion with others, to defraud the Government of any tax on any manufacture of tobacco, snuff, or cigars; that he will render truly and correctly all the returns, statements, and inventories prescribed for manufacturers of tobacco, snuff, and cigars; that whenever he shall add to the number of cutting-machines, presses, snuff mulls, or cigar makers, used or employed by him, he will immediately give notice thereof to the collector who holds the bonds that he will pay to the collector of the district all the taxes which may or should be assessed and due on any tobacco, snuff, or

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

cigars so manufactured, and that he will not knowingly sell, purchase, or receive for sale any such tobacco, snuff, or cigars which have not been inspected, branded, or stamped as required by law, or upon which the tax has not been paid if it has accrued or become payable. And the said bond may be renewed or changed from time to time, in regard to the sureties or amount thereof, according to the discretion of the collector, under the instructions of the Commissioner of internal revenue. And every person, firm, company, or corporation aforesaid shall exhibit, whenever demanded by any officer of internal revenue, a certificate from the collector, who is hereby authorized and directed to issue the same, setting forth the kind and number of machines, presses, snuff mills, and number of cigar makers for which the bond has been given. And any person, firm, or corporation manufacturing tobacco, snuff, or cigars of any description without first furnishing the bond in the cases herein required, shall be subject to a fine of three hundred dollars, and in addition thereto, upon conviction thereof, shall be liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, at the discretion of the court.

That section eighty-eight be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that it shall be the duty of the assistant assessor of each district to keep a record, in a book or books to be provided for the purpose, to be open to the inspection of any person upon reasonable request, of the name of any and every person, firm, company, or corporation who may be engaged in the manufacture of tobacco, snuff, or cigars in his district, together with the place where such manufacture is carried on, and place of residence of the person or persons engaged therein; and the assistant assessor shall enter in said record, under the name of each manufacturer, an abstract of his monthly returns; and each assessor shall keep a similar record for the entire district.

That section eighty-nine be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that in all cases where tobacco, snuff, or cigars, of any description, are manufactured, in whole or in part, upon commission or shares, or where the material from which any such articles are made, or are to be made, is furnished by one party and manufactured by another, or where the material is furnished or sold by one party with an understanding or contract with another that the manufactured article is to be received in payment therefor or any part thereof, the tax imposed by law thereon may be assessed upon the party for whom the same was made, or to whom the same was delivered as aforesaid, or upon the person or party who made the same, as the assessor shall deem best for the collection of the revenue. And in case of fraud on the part of either of said parties in respect to said manufacture, or of any collusion on their part with intent to defraud the revenue, such material and manufactured articles shall be liable to forfeiture; and such articles shall be liable to be assessed the highest rates of tax imposed by law upon any article of like kind.

That section ninety be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that any person, firm, company, or corporation, now or hereafter engaged in the manufacture of tobacco, snuff, or cigars, of any description whatsoever, shall be, and hereby is, required to make out and deliver to the assistant assessor of the assessment district a true statement or inventory of the quantity of each of the different kinds of tobacco, snuff-flour, snuff, cigars, tinfoil, licorice, and stems, held or owned by him or them on the first day of January of each year, or at the time of commencing business under this act, setting forth what portion of said goods was manufactured or produced by him or them, and what was purchased from others, whether chewing, smoking, fine-cut shorts, pressed, plug, snuff-flour, or prepared snuff, or cigars, which statement or inventory shall be verified by the oath or affirmation of such person or persons, and be in manner and form as prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; and every such person, company, or corporation shall keep in book form an accurate account of all the articles aforesaid thereafter purchased by him or them, the quantity of tobacco, snuff, snuff-flour, or cigars, of whatever description, manufactured, sold, consumed, or removed for consumption or sale, or removed from the place of manufacture; and he or they shall, on or before the tenth day of each month, furnish to the assistant assessor of the district a true and accurate abstract of all such purchases and sales, or removals, which abstract shall be verified by oath or affirmation; and in case of refusal or neglect to deliver the inventory, or keep the account, or furnish the abstract aforesaid, he or they shall forfeit the sum of five hundred dollars, to be recovered with costs of suit. And it shall be the duty of any manufacturer or vendor of tinfoil, or other material used in manufacturing tobacco, snuff, or cigars, on demand of an officer of internal revenue, to render to such officer a correct statement, verified by oath or affirmation, of the quantity and amount of tinfoil or other materials sold or delivered to any person or persons named in such demand; and in case of refusal or neglect to render such statement, or of cause to believe such statement to be incorrect or fraudulent, the assessor of the district may cause an examination of persons, books, and papers to be made in the same manner as provided in the fourteenth section of this act. And all the provisions of law relating to manufactures generally, so far as applicable and not inconsistent herewith, shall be held to apply to the manufacture of tobacco, snuff, and cigars: Provided, That the tax imposed upon the manufacturer of tobacco, snuff, and cigars, shall be held to accrue upon the sale or removal from the place of manufacture, unless removed to a bonded warehouse: Provided further, That manufactured tobacco, snuff, or cigars, whether of domestic manufacture or imported, may be transferred, without payment of the tax, to a bonded warehouse established in conformity with law and Treasury regulations, under such rules and regulations and upon the execution of such transportation bonds or other security as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, said bonds or other security to be taken by the collector of the district from which such removal is made; and may be transported from such a warehouse to any other bonded warehouse established as aforesaid, and may be withdrawn from bonded warehouse for consumption on payment of the tax, or removed for export to a foreign country without payment of tax, in conformity with the provisions of law relating to the removal of distilled spirits, all the rules, regulations, and conditions of which, so far as applicable, shall apply to tobacco, snuff, or cigars in bonded warehouse. And no drawback shall in any case be allowed upon any manufactured tobacco, snuff, or cigars.

That section ninety-one be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that all manufactured tobacco, snuff, or cigars, shall, before the same is used or removed for consumption, be inspected by an inspector appointed under the provisions of law, who shall mark or affix a stamp upon the box or other package containing such tobacco, snuff, or cigars, in a manner to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, denoting the kind, quantity, or number contained in each package, with the date of inspection and the name of the inspector, and the collection district. The fees of such inspector shall in all cases be paid by the owner of the manufactured tobacco, snuff, or cigars, so inspected. And any person who shall affix upon any box or other package containing such tobacco, snuff, or cigars, any mark or stamp which shall be false or fraudulent in any of the particulars before recited in this section, or shall, with intent to defraud the United States, or to cause the same to be defrauded, change in any manner such stamp or mark, or such box or package so marked or stamped, shall be liable to a fine of not less than fifty dollars, or to imprisonment, not exceeding two years, for every such offense. And all cigars manufactured after the passage of this act shall be packed in boxes or paper packages. And any manufactured tobacco, snuff, and cigars, whether of domestic manufacture or imported, which shall be sold or pass out of the hands of the manufacturer or importer, except into a bonded warehouse, without the inspection marks or stamps affixed, unless otherwise provided, shall be forfeited, and may be seized wherever found, and shall be sold, and the proceeds of such sale shall be distributed between the United States and the informer, if there be any, as provided by law. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall keep an account of all stamps delivered to the several inspectors; and said inspectors shall also keep an account of all stamps by them used or placed upon boxes containing cigars, and of all tobacco, snuff, and cigars inspected, and the name of the person, firm, or company for whom the same were so inspected, and shall return to the assessor of the district a separate and distinct account of the same, and also return to the said Commissioner, on demand, all stamps not otherwise accounted for, and shall give a bond for a faithful performance of all the duties to which he may be assigned, and to return or account for all stamps which may be placed in his hands.

That section ninety-two be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that if any person other than the manufacturer shall sell, or consign, or remove for sale, or part with the possession of any manufactured tobacco, snuff, or cigars upon which the taxes imposed by law have not been paid, with the knowledge thereof, such person shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each offense. And any person who shall purchase or receive for sale any such tobacco, snuff, or cigars, from any manufacturer who has not paid the special tax, shall be liable for each and every offense to a penalty of one hundred dollars, and, in addition thereto, a forfeiture of all the articles, as aforesaid, so purchased or received, or the full value thereof. And every person, before making any cigars after the passage of this act, shall apply for and procure from the assistant assessor of the district in which he resides a permit authorizing such persons to carry on the trade of cigar making, for which permit he shall pay said assistant assessor the sum of twenty-five cents. And every person employed or working at the business of cigar making in any other district than that in which he or she is a resident shall, before making any cigars in such other district, present said permit to the assistant assessor of the district where so employed or working, and procure the indorsement of said assistant assessor thereon, authorizing said business in said district, for which indorsement the assistant assessor shall be entitled to receive from the applicant the sum of ten cents. And it shall be the duty of every assistant assessor, upon application of any person residing in the district, to furnish a permit, or to indorse upon the permit of the applicant,

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

if resident in another district, authority to pursue the trade of cigar making within the proper district of such assistant assessor; and said assistant assessor shall keep a record of all permits granted or indorsed by him, showing the date of each permit, the name, residence, and place of employment of the party named therein, the name and district of the officer who originally granted the same, or who may have made any subsequent indorsements thereon, and the name or names of the party or parties by whom the person named in such permit is employed, or, if working for himself, stating such fact; and every person making cigars shall keep an accurate account in a book of all the cigars made by him, for whom, and their kind or quality; and, if made for any other person, shall state in said account the name of the person for whom the same were made, and his place of business, and shall, on the first Monday of every month, deliver to the assistant assessor of the district a copy of such account, verified by oath or affirmation that the same is true and correct. And if any person shall make any cigars without procuring such permit, or the proper indorsements thereon, or neglect to keep such account in book-form, he shall be punished by a fine of five dollars for each day he shall so offend, or by imprisonment for such time as the court may order for each day's offense, not exceeding thirty days in the whole, upon any one conviction. And if any person making cigars shall fail to make the return herein required, or shall make a false return, he shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days. And any person may apply to the assistant assessor or inspector of the district to have any cigars of his own manufacture counted; and on receiving a certificate of the number, for which such fee as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall be paid by the owner thereof, may sell and deliver such cigars to any purchaser, in the presence of said assistant assessor or inspector, in bulk or unpacked, without payment of the tax. A copy of the certificate shall be retained by the assistant assessor or by the inspector, who shall return the same to the assessor of the district. The purchaser shall pack such cigars in boxes or paper packages, and have the same inspected and marked or stamped according to the provisions of law, and shall make a return of the same, as inspected, to the assistant assessor of the district wherein the same were manufactured, and, unless removed to a bonded warehouse, shall pay the taxes on such cigars within fifteen days after purchasing them, to the collector of the district wherein they were manufactured, and before the same have been removed from the store or building of such purchaser, or from his possession; and if such purchaser shall neglect for more than fifteen days to pack and have such cigars duly inspected, and to pay the taxes thereon according to law, he shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, and be imprisoned not exceeding six months, at the discretion of the court, and the cigars may be seized by the collector and shall be forfeited to the United States. And if any person, firm, company, or corporation shall employ or procure any person to make any cigars, who has not the permit or the indorsement thereon required by this act, he shall be punished by a fine of ten dollars for each day he shall so employ such person, or by imprisonment not exceeding ten days. And if any person shall be found making cigars without such permit or the indorsement thereon, the collector of the district may seize any cigars, or tobacco for making cigars, which may be found in possession of such person, and the same shall be forfeited to the United States and sold; and the proceeds of such sale shall be distributed between the United States and the informer, if there be any, as provided by law.

That section ninety-three be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that all goods, wares, and merchandise, or articles manufactured, made, or produced (except refined petroleum, refined coal oil, cotton, gold and silver, spirituous and malt liquors, manufactured tobacco, snuff, and cigars) by any person or firm, where the product shall not exceed the rate of one thousand dollars per annum, and shall be made or produced by the labor of such person or firm, or by his or their family, shall be, and are hereby, exempt from tax; where the product shall exceed such rate, and not exceed the rate of three thousand dollars, the tax shall be levied, assessed, and collected only upon the excess above the rate of one thousand dollars per annum; and in all other cases the whole annual product, including any business or transaction where one party has been furnished with materials, or any part thereof, and employed by another party to manufacture, make, or finish the goods, wares, and merchandise, or articles, paying or promising to pay therefor, and to whom the same are returned when so made and finished, shall be assessed and the tax paid thereon by the producer or manufacturer: Provided, That whenever a producer or manufacturer shall use or consume, or shall remove for consumption or use, any articles, goods, wares, or merchandise, which, if removed for sale, would be liable to taxation, he shall be assessed for the tax upon the articles, goods, wares, or merchandise so used, or so removed for consumption or use; but naphtha, the product of the distillation of petroleum, and other similar bituminous substances, when used or consumed on the premises for fuel or cleaning, shall be exempt from tax.

That section ninety-four be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that upon the articles, goods, wares, and merchandise hereinafter mentioned, except where otherwise provided, which shall be produced and sold, or be manufactured or made and sold, or be consumed or used by the manufacturer or producer thereof, or removed for consumption or use, or for delivery to others than agents of the manufacturer or producer within the United States or Territories thereof, there shall be assessed, collected, and paid the following taxes, to be paid by the producer or manufacturer thereof, that is to say:

On candles, of whatever material made, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On gas, illuminating, made of coal wholly or in part, or any other material, when the product shall not be above two hundred thousand cubic feet per month, a tax of ten cents per one thousand cubic feet; when the product shall be above two and not exceeding five hundred thousand cubic feet per month, a tax of fifteen cents per one thousand cubic feet; when the product shall be above five hundred thousand and not exceeding five millions of cubic feet per month, a tax of twenty cents per one thousand cubic feet; when the product shall be above five millions, a tax of twenty-five cents per one thousand cubic feet. And the general average of the monthly product for the year preceding the return required by law shall determine the rate of tax herein imposed. And where any gas-works have not been in operation for the next year preceding the return as aforesaid, then the rate shall be determined by the estimated average of the monthly product: Provided, That the product required to be returned by law by any gas company shall be understood to be, in addition to the gas consumed by said company or other party, the product charged in the bills actually rendered by the gas company during the month preceding the return; and until the thirtieth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, all gas companies whose price is fixed by law are authorized to add the tax herein imposed, to the price per thousand feet on gas sold; and all such companies which have heretofore contracted to furnish gas to municipal corporations are, in like manner and for the same period, authorized to add such tax to such contract price: Provided further, That all gas furnished for lighting street lamps or for other purposes, and not measured, and all gas made for and used by any hotel, inn, tavern, and private dwelling-house, shall be subject to tax whatever the amount of product, and may be estimated; and if the returns in any case shall be understated or underestimated, it shall be the duty of the assistant assessor of the district to increase the same as he shall deem just and proper: And provided further, That gas companies located within the corporate limits of any city or town, whether in the same district or otherwise, or so located as to compete with each other, shall pay the rate of tax imposed by law upon the company having the largest production: And provided further, That coal tar and ammoniacal liquor produced in the manufacture of illuminating gas, and the products of the redistillation of coal tar, and the products of the manufacture of ammoniacal liquor thus produced, shall be exempt from tax.

On illuminating, lubricating, or other mineral oils, marking not less than thirty-six nor more than fifty-nine degrees Baumé's hydrometer, the product of the distillation, redistillation, or refining of crude petroleum, twenty cents per gallon; and all such oils between the specific gravity, by Baumé's test, of thirty-six and fifty-nine degrees, inclusive, shall be deemed refined illuminating oil; and any person or persons who, for the purpose of sale or consumption, shall mix any of the heavier paraffine oils with such illuminating oils, or with naphtha, or either one with the other, shall be deemed manufacturers of illuminating oil, and taxed as such; and said oil thus mixed, either with or without further distillation, shall be subject to a tax of twenty cents per gallon if, after said mixing or distillation, the product marks, by Baumé's hydrometer, between said points of thirty-six and fifty-nine degrees, inclusive.

On illuminating, lubricating, or other mineral oils, marking not less than thirty-six nor more than fifty-nine degrees Baumé's hydrometer, the exclusive product of the refining of crude oil produced by a single distillation of coal, shale, asphaltum, peat, or other bituminous substances, not otherwise provided for, ten cents per gallon.

On oil, naphtha, benzine, benzole, or gasoline, marking more than fifty-nine degrees Baumé's hydrometer, the product of the distillation, redistillation, or refining of crude petroleum, or of crude oil produced by a single distillation of coal, shale, peat, asphaltum, or other bituminous substances, a tax of ten cents per gallon: Provided, That distillers and refiners of illuminating, lubricating, or other mineral oil, naphtha, benzine, benzole, or gasoline, shall be subject to all the provisions of law applicable to distillers of spirits, with regard to special taxes, bonds, returns, assessments, removing to and withdrawing from warehouses, liens, penalties, forfeitures, drawbacks, and all other provisions designed for the purpose of ascertaining the quantity distilled, and securing the payment of taxes, so far as the same may, in the judgment of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and under regulations prescribed by him, be deemed necessary for that purpose: And provided further, That distillers and refiners of coal or mineral oil, whose product shall not exceed twenty-five barrels per day, on a monthly average, shall not be required to make returns oftener than once in thirty days.

On spirits of turpentine, ten cents per gallon.

On coffee, roasted or ground, on all ground spices and dry mustard, and upon all articles intended for use as substitutes for or as adulterations of coffee, spices, or mustard, and upon all compounds and mixtures prepared for sale,

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

or intended for use and sale as coffee, spices, or mustard, or as substitutes therefor, one cent per pound: Provided, That the exemption of one thousand dollars in annual value of product manufactured shall not apply to any of the above-specified articles mentioned in this paragraph.

On molasses produced from the sugar-cane, and not from sorghum or imphee, a tax of three cents per gallon.

On sirup of molasses or sugar-cane juice, when removed from the plantation, concentrated molasses or melado, and cistern bottoms, of sugar produced from the sugar-cane and not made from sorghum or imphee, a tax of three fourths of one cent per pound.

On sugars not above number twelve Dutch standard in color, produced from the sugar-cane, and not from sorghum or imphee, other than those produced by the refiner, a tax of one cent per pound.

On sugars above number twelve and not above number eighteen Dutch standard in color, produced directly from the sugar-cane and not from sorghum or imphee, a tax of one and a half cent per pound.

On sugar above number eighteen Dutch standard in color, produced directly from the sugar-cane and not from sorghum or imphee, a tax of two cents per pound.

On the gross amount of the sales of sugar refiners, including all the products of their manufactories or refineries, a tax of two and one half of one per centum ad valorem: Provided, That every person shall be regarded as a sugar refiner, and pay the taxes required by law, whose business it is to advance the quality and value of sugar upon which a tax or duty has been paid, by melting and recrystallization, or by liquoring, claying, or other washing process, or by any other chemical or mechanical means, or who shall by boiling or other process advance the quality or value of molasses, concentrated molasses, or melado, upon which a tax or duty has been paid.

On sugar candy and all confectionery made wholly or in part of sugar, valued at not exceeding twenty cents per pound, including the tax, a tax of two cents per pound; exceeding twenty and not exceeding forty cents per pound, including the tax, a tax of four cents per pound; when exceeding forty cents per pound, including the tax, or sold by the box, package, or otherwise than by the pound, a tax of ten per centum ad valorem.

On chocolate and cocoa prepared, a tax of one and a half cent per pound.

On gun cotton, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On gunpowder, and all explosive substances used for mining, blasting, artillery, or sporting purposes, not otherwise provided for, when valued at thirty-eight cents per pound, or less, including the tax, a tax of five per centum ad valorem; and when valued at above thirty-eight cents per pound, including the tax, a tax of ten cents per pound.

On varnish or japan, made wholly or in part of gum copal, or other gums or substances, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On glue and gelatine of all descriptions, in the solid state, a tax of one cent per pound.

On glue and cement, made wholly or in part of glue, sold in the liquid state, a tax of forty cents per gallon.

On pins, solid head or other, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On photographs, ambrotypes, daguerreotypes, or other pictures taken by the action of light, and not hereinafter exempted from tax, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On screws, commonly called wood screws, a tax of ten per centum ad valorem.

On clocks and time-pieces, and on clock movements, when sold without being cased, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On all soaps valued at above three cents per pound, not perfumed, and on salt-water soap made of cocoa-nut oil, a tax of five mills per pound.

On all perfumed soaps, a tax of three cents per pound.

On all uncompounded chemical productions not otherwise provided for, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On essential oils of all descriptions, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On all furniture, or other articles made of wood, sold in the rough or unfinished, not otherwise provided for, a tax of five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That all furniture, or other articles made of wood, previously assessed, and a tax paid thereon, shall be assessed a tax of five per centum ad valorem upon the increased value only thereof when sold in a finished condition.

On salt, a tax of three cents per one hundred pounds.

On scales, pumps, garden engines and hydraulic rams, a tax of three per centum ad valorem.

On tin ware of all descriptions, not otherwise provided for, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On all iron not otherwise provided for, advanced beyond muck-bar, blooms, slabs, or loops, and not advanced beyond bars, and band, hoop, and sheet iron not thinner than number eighteen wire-gauge, and plate iron not less than one eighth of an inch in thickness, a tax of three dollars per ton: Provided, That a ton shall, for all the purposes of this act, be deemed and taken to be two thousand pounds.

On band, hoop, and sheet iron, thinner than number eighteen wire-gauge, plate iron less than one eighth of an inch in thickness, and cut nails and spikes, not including nails, tacks, brads, or finishing nails, usually put up and sold in papers, whether in papers or otherwise, a tax of five dollars per ton: Provided, That rods, bands, hoops, sheets, plates, spikes, and nails, not including such as are usually put up in papers as before mentioned, manufactured from iron upon which the tax of three dollars has been levied and paid, shall be subject only to a tax of two dollars per ton, in addition thereto, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

On steel made directly from muck-bar, blooms, slabs, or loops, a tax of three dollars per ton.

On stoves, and hollow ware in all conditions, whether rough, tinned, or enameled, and castings of iron, not otherwise provided for, a tax of three dollars per ton.

On tubes made of wrought iron, a tax of five dollars per ton.

On steam, locomotive, and marine engines, including the boilers, and on railroad cars, a tax of five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That when the boilers, tubes, wheels, tire[s], axles, bells, shafts, cranks, wrists, or headlights of such engines or cars shall have been once assessed, and a tax previously paid thereon, the amount so paid shall be deducted from the taxes on the finished engine or cars.

On boilers of all kinds, water-tanks, sugar-tanks, oil-stills, sewing-machines, lathes, tools, planes, planing-machines, shafting, and gearing, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On railings, gates, fences, furniture, and statuary made of iron, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On copper and brass tubes, nails, or rivets, sheet lead, and lead pipes and shot, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On goat, calf, kid, sheep, horse, hog, and dog skins, tanned or dressed in the rough, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On goat, calf, kid, sheep, horse, hog, and dog skins, carried or finished, a tax of five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That all goat, calf, kid, sheep, horse, hog, and dog skins upon which duties or taxes have been actually paid, shall be assessed on the increased value only when carried or finished.

On patent enameled and japanned leather and skins of every description, a tax of five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That when a tax or duty has been paid on the leather in the rough, the tax shall be assessed and paid only on the increased value.

On oil-dressed leather, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On leather of all descriptions, tanned or partially tanned, in the rough, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On leather of all descriptions, carried or finished, a tax of five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That all leather in the rough upon which duties or taxes have been actually paid, shall be assessed on the increased value only when carried or finished.

On all liquors known or denominated as wine, not made from grapes, currants, rhubard [rhubarb], or berries, produced by being rectified or mixed with other spirits, or into which any matter whatever may be infused to be sold as wine, or by any other name, and not otherwise provided for in this act, a tax of fifty cents per gallon: Provided, That the return, assessment, collection, and the time of collection of the taxes on such wines shall be subject to the regulations of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. And any person who shall willingly and knowingly sell or offer for sale any such wine made after the passage of this act, upon which the tax herein imposed has not been paid, or which has been fraudulently evaded, shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine of five hundred dollars or to imprisonment not exceeding two years at the discretion of the court.

On cloth and all textile or knitted or felted articles or fabrics of cotton, wool, or other materials, before the same has been dyed, printed, or bleached, and on all cloth painted, enameled, shirred, tarred, varnished, or oiled, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On thread and twine, a tax of five per centum ad valorem.

On articles of clothing manufactured or produced for sale by weaving, knitting, or felting; on silk hats, bonnets, and hoop-skirts; on articles manufactured or produced for sale as constituent parts of clothing, or for trimming or ornamenting the same, and on articles of wearing apparel manufactured or produced for sale from India-rubber, gutta-percha, or from fur, or fur skins dressed with the fur on, a tax of five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That on all articles made of fur, the value of which shall not exceed twenty dollars, a tax of two per centum only shall be paid.

On boots, shoes, and shoe-strings, a tax of two per centum ad valorem; to be paid by every person making, manufacturing, or producing for sale boots or shoes, or furnishing the materials or any part thereof, and employing others to make, manufacture, or produce them: Provided, That any boot or shoe maker making boots or shoes to order as custom work only, and not for general sale, and whose work, exclusive of the materials, does not exceed annually in value one thousand dollars, shall be exempt from this tax.

On clothing, gloves, mittens, moccasins, caps, felt hats, and other articles of dress for the wear of men, women, and children, not otherwise assessed and taxed, a tax of two per centum ad valorem, to be paid by every person making, manufacturing, or producing for sale clothing, gloves, mittens, moccasins, caps, felt hats, and other articles of dress, or furnishing the materials or any part thereof, and employing others to make, manufacture or produce them: Provided, That any tailor, or any maker of gloves, mittens, moccasins, caps, felt hats, or other articles of dress to order as custom work only, and not for general sale, and whose work, exclusive of the materials,

39TH CONG. ... 1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

does not exceed annually in value one thousand dollars, shall be exempt from this tax; and articles of dress made or trimmed by milliners or dressmakers for the wear of women and children shall also be exempt from this tax: Provided, That the branching into sprays, branches, or wreaths of artificial flowers, on which an impost or internal tax has already been paid, shall not be considered a manufacture within the meaning of this act.

On paper not otherwise herein provided for, a tax of three per centum ad valorem.

On all manufactures not otherwise provided for, of cotton, wool, silk, worsted, hemp, jute, India-rubber, gutta-percha, wood, glass, pottery-ware, leather, paper, iron, steel, lead, tin, copper, zinc, brass, gold, silver, horn, ivory, bone, bristles, wholly or in part, or of other materials, a tax of five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That on all cloths or articles dyed, printed, or bleached, on which a tax or duty shall have been paid before the same were so dyed, printed, or bleached, the said tax of five per centum shall be assessed only upon the increased value thereof: And provided further, That any cloth or fabrics or articles as aforesaid, when made of thread, yarn, or warps, imported, or upon which an internal tax shall have been assessed and paid, shall be assessed and pay a tax on the increased value only thereof; and when made wholly by the same manufacturer, shall be subject to a tax only of five per centum ad valorem: And provided further, That brown earthen and common or gray stoneware shall be subject to a tax of two and one half per centum ad valorem, and no more.

On all diamonds, emeralds, precious stones and imitations thereof, and all other jewelry, a tax of five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That when diamonds, emeralds, precious stones or imitations thereof, imported from foreign countries, and upon which import duties have been paid, shall be set or reset in gold or any other material, the tax shall be assessed and paid only upon the value of the settings.

On bullion in lump, ingot, bar, or otherwise, a tax of one half of one per centum ad valorem, to be paid by the assayer of the same, who shall stamp the product of the assay as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe by general regulations. And all sales, transfers, exchanges, transportation, and exportation of gold or silver assayed at any mint of the United States, or by any private assayer, unless stamped as prescribed by general regulations, as aforesaid, are hereby declared unlawful; and every person or corporation who shall sell, transfer, transport, exchange, export, or deal in the same, shall be subject to a penalty of one thousand dollars for each offense, and to a fine not exceeding that sum, and to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years nor less than six months. No jeweler, worker or artificer in gold or silver shall use either of those metals except it shall have first been stamped as aforesaid, as required by this act. No person or corporation shall export or cause to be exported from the United States any gold or silver in its natural state, not coined, assayed, or stamped, as aforesaid; and for every violation of this paragraph every offender shall be subject to the penalties herein provided: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall apply to the reworking of old gold or silver in lump, ingot, or bar, as aforesaid.

On snuff, manufactured of tobacco or any substitute for tobacco, ground, dry, or damp, pickled, scented, or otherwise, of all descriptions, when prepared for use, a tax of forty cents per pound.

On cavendish, plug, twist, and all other kinds of manufactured tobacco, not herein otherwise provided for, a tax of forty cents per pound.

On tobacco twisted by hand, or reduced from leaf into a condition to be consumed without the use of any machine or instrument, and without being pressed, sweetened, or otherwise prepared, and on fine-cut shorts, a tax of thirty cents per pound.

On fine-cut chewing tobacco, whether manufactured with the stems in or not, or however sold, whether loose, in bulk, or in rolls, packages, papers, wrappers, or boxes, a tax of forty cents per pound.

On smoking tobacco, sweetened, stemmed, or butted, a tax of forty cents per pound.

On smoking tobacco of all kinds, not sweetened, nor stemmed, nor butted, including that made of stems, or in part of stems, and imitations thereof, a tax of fifteen cents per pound.

On cigarettes, or small cigars, made of tobacco inclosed in a wrapper, or binder, and not over three and a half inches in length, and on cigars made with twisted heads, and on cheroots, and on cigars known as short-sixes, the market value of which is not over eight dollars per thousand, a tax of two dollars per thousand.

On all cheroots, cigarettes, and cigars, the market value of which is over eight dollars and not over twelve dollars per thousand, a tax of four dollars per thousand.

On all cheroots, cigarettes, and cigars, the market value of which is over twelve dollars per thousand, a tax of four dollars per thousand, and in addition thereto twenty per centum ad valorem on the market value thereof. And the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe such regulations for the inspection and valuation of cigars, cheroots, and cigarettes, and the collection of the tax thereon, as shall, in his judgment, be most effective for the prevention of inequalities and frauds in the payment of such tax. And, in addition to other regulations, it shall be the duty of the inspector or assessor who appraises any cigars, cigarettes, or cheroots to examine the manufacturer thereof or his agent under oath, which oath shall be administered by the inspecting and appraising officer, and reduced to writing, and signed by such manufacturer or his agent, with a view to ascertaining whether such manufacturer has any interest, direct or indirect, in any sale that has been made, or any resale to be made of said cigars, cigarettes, or cheroots, by the concealment of which he seeks to obtain a false, fraudulent, or deceptive appraisal.

That section ninety-eight be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that there shall be levied and collected and paid monthly on all sales of real estate, goods, wares, merchandise, articles, or things at auction, including all sales of stocks, bonds, and other securities, a duty of one tenth of one per centum on the gross amount of such sales: Provided, That no tax shall be levied under the provisions of this section upon any sales by or for judicial or executive officers making auction sales by virtue of a judgment or decree of any court, nor to public sales made by guardians, executors, or administrators.

That section ninety-nine be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that there shall be paid on all sales made by brokers, banks, or bankers, whether made for the benefit of others or on their own account, the following taxes, that is to say: upon all sales and contracts for the sale of stocks, bonds, gold and silver bullion and coin, promissory notes, or other securities, a tax at the rate of one cent for every hundred dollars of the amount of such sales or contracts; and on all sales and contracts for sale negotiated and made by any person, firm, or company not paying a special tax as a broker, bank, or banker, of any gold or silver bullion, coin, promissory notes, stocks, bonds, or other securities, not his or their own property, there shall be paid a tax at the rate of five cents for every hundred dollars of the amount of such sales or contracts; and on every sale and contract for sale, as aforesaid, there shall be made and delivered by the seller to the buyer a bill or memorandum of such sale or contract, on which there shall be affixed a lawful stamp or stamps in value equal to the amount of tax on such sale, to be determined by the rates of tax before mentioned; and in computing the amount of the stamp tax in any case herein provided for, any fractional part of one hundred dollars of value or amount on which tax is computed shall be accounted at one hundred dollars. And every bill or memorandum of sale, or contract of sale, before mentioned, shall show the date thereof, the name of the seller, the amount of the sale or contract, and the matter or thing to which it refers. And any person or persons liable to pay the tax as herein provided, or any one who acts in the matter as agent or broker for such person or persons, who shall make any such sale or contract, or who shall, in pursuance of any sale or contract, deliver or receive any stocks, bonds, bullion, coin, promissory notes, or other securities, without a bill or memorandum thereof as herein required, or who shall deliver or receive such bill or memorandum without having the proper stamps affixed thereto, shall forfeit and pay to the United States a penalty of five hundred dollars for each and every offense where the tax so evaded, or attempted to be evaded, does not exceed one hundred dollars, and a penalty of one thousand dollars when such tax shall exceed one hundred dollars, which may be recovered with costs in any court of the United States of competent jurisdiction, at any time within one year after the liability to such penalty shall have been incurred; and the penalty recovered shall be awarded and distributed by the court between the United States and the informer, if there be any, as provided by law, who, in the judgment of the court, shall have first given the information of the violation of the law for which recovery is had: Provided, That where it shall appear that the omission to affix the proper stamp was not with intent to evade the provisions of this section, said penalty shall not be incurred. And the provisions of law in relation to stamp duties in schedule B of this act shall apply to the stamp taxes herein imposed upon sales and contracts of sales made by brokers, banks, or bankers, and others as aforesaid. And there shall be paid monthly on all sales by commercial brokers of any goods, wares, or merchandise, a tax of one twentieth of one per centum upon the amount of such sales; and on or before the tenth day of each month, every commercial broker shall make a list or return to the assistant assessor of the district of the gross amount of such sales as aforesaid for the preceding month, in form and manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue: Provided, That in estimating sales of goods, wares, and merchandise for the purposes of this section, any sales made by or through another broker upon which a tax has been paid shall not be estimated and included as sold by the broker for whom the sale was made.

That section one hundred be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, including schedule A, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that there shall be levied, annually, on every carriage, gold watch, and billiard table, and on all gold or silver plate, the tax or sums of money set down in figures against the same, respectively, or otherwise specified and set forth in schedule A, hereto annexed, to be paid by the person or persons owning, possessing, or keeping the same on the first day in May, in each year, and the same shall be and remain a lien thereon until paid.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

SCHEDULE A.

CARRIAGE, phaeton, carryall, rockaway, or other like carriage, and any coach, hackney coach, omnibus, or four-wheeled carriage, the body of which rests upon springs of any description, which may be kept for use, for hire, or for passengers, and which shall not be used exclusively in husbandry or for the transportation of merchandise, valued at exceeding three hundred dollars and not above five hundred dollars each, including harness used therewith, six dollars.....	$6 00
Carriages of like description, valued above five hundred dollars, each, ten dollars .....	10 00
ON GOLD WATCHES, composed wholly or in part of gold or gilt, kept for use, valued at one hundred dollars or less, each, one dollar.....	1 00
On gold watches, composed wholly or in part of gold or gilt, kept for use, valued at above one hundred dollars, each, two dollars.....	2 00
BILLIARD TABLES, kept for use, each, ten dollars.....	10 00

Provided, That billiard tables kept for hire, and upon which a special tax has been imposed, shall not be required to pay the tax on billiard tables kept for use, as aforesaid, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

On plate, of gold, kept for use, per ounce troy, fifty cents..... 50 |

On plate, of silver, kept for use, per ounce troy, five cents..... 05 |

Provided, That silver spoons or plate of silver used by one family to an amount not exceeding forty ounces troy belonging to any one person, plate belonging to religious societies, and souvenirs and keepsakes actually given and received as such and not kept for use; also, all premiums awarded as a token of merit by any agricultural society, corporation, or association of persons, for any purpose whatever, shall be exempt from tax.

That sections one hundred and one and one hundred and two be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

That section one hundred and three be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that every person, firm, company, or corporation owning or possessing or having the care or management of any railroad, canal, steamboat, ship, barge, canal-boat, or other vessel, or any stage-coach or other vehicle, except hacks or carriages not running on continuous routes, engaged or employed in the business of transporting passengers for hire, or in transporting the mails of the United States upon contracts made prior to August first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, shall be subject to and pay a tax of two and one half per cent. of the gross receipts from passengers and mails of such railroad, canal, steamboat, ship, barge, canal-boat, or other vessel, or such stage-coach or other vehicle; Provided, That the tax hereby imposed shall not be assessed upon receipts for the transportation of persons or mails between the United States and any foreign port; but such tax shall be assessed upon the transportation of persons from a port within the United States through a foreign territory to a port within the United States, and shall be assessed upon and collected from persons, firms, companies, or corporations within the United States, receiving hire or pay for such transportation of persons or mails; and so much of section one hundred and nine as requires returns to be made of receipts hereby exempted from tax when derived from transporting property for hire is hereby repealed: Provided also, That any person or persons, firms, companies, or corporations owning, possessing, or having the care or management of any toll-road, ferry, or bridge, authorized by law to receive toll for the transit of passengers, beasts, carriages, teams, and freight of any description, over such toll-road, ferry, or bridge, shall be subject to and pay a tax of three per cent of the gross amount of all their receipts of every description; but when the gross receipts of any such bridge or toll-road, for and during any term of twelve consecutive calendar months, shall not exceed the amount necessarily expended during said term to keep such bridge or road in repair, no tax shall be assessed upon such receipts during the month next following any such term: Provided further, That all such persons, companies, and corporations shall, until the thirtieth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, have the right to add the tax imposed hereby to their rates of fare whenever their liability thereto may commence, any limitations which may exist by law or by agreement with any person or company which may have paid or be liable to pay such fare to the contrary notwithstanding. And whenever the addition to any fare shall amount only to the fraction of one cent, any person, or company, liable to the tax of two and a half per centum, may add to such fare one cent in lieu of such fraction; and such person or company shall keep for sale, at convenient points, tickets in packages of twenty and multiples of twenty, to the price of which only an amount equal to the revenue tax shall be added: And provided further, That no tax under the foregoing provisions of this section shall be assessed upon any person, firm, company, or corporation, whose gross receipts do not exceed one thousand dollars per annum: And provided further, That all boats, barges, and flats not used for carrying passengers, nor propelled by steam or sails, which are floated or towed by tug-boats or horses, and used exclusively for carrying coal, oil, minerals, or agricultural products to market, shall be required hereafter, in lieu of enrollment fees or tonnage tax, to pay an annual special tax, for each and every such boat of a capacity exceeding twenty-five tons, and not exceeding one hundred tons, five dollars; and when exceeding one hundred tons, as aforesaid, shall be required to pay ten dollars; and said tax shall be assessed and collected as other special taxes provided for in this act.

That section one hundred and seven be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that any person, firm, company, or corporation owning or possessing or having the care or management of any telegraphic line by which telegraphic dispatches or messages are received or transmitted, shall be subject to and pay a tax of three per centum on the gross amount of all receipts of such person, firm, company, or corporation.

That section one hundred and ten be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that there shall be levied, collected, and paid a tax of one twenty-fourth of one per centum each month upon the average amount of the deposits of money, subject to payment by check or draft, or represented by certificates of deposit or otherwise, whether payable on demand or at some future day, with any person, bank, association, company, or corporation engaged in the business of banking; and a tax of one twenty-fourth of one per centum each month, as aforesaid, upon the capital of any bank, association, company, or corporation, and on the capital employed by any person in the business of banking beyond the average amount invested in United States bonds; and a tax of one twelfth of one per centum each month upon the average amount of circulation issued by any bank, association, corporation, company, or person, including as circulation all certified checks and all notes and other obligations calculated or intended to circulate or to be used as money, but not including that in the vault of the bank, or redeemed and on deposit for said bank; and an additional tax of one sixth of one per centum, each month, upon the average amount of such circulation, issued as aforesaid, beyond the amount of ninety per centum of the capital of any such bank, association, corporation, company, or person. And a true and accurate return of the amount of circulation, of deposit and of capital, as aforesaid, and of the amount of notes of persons, State banks or State banking associations, paid out by them for the previous month, shall be made and rendered monthly by each of such banks, associations, corporations, companies, or persons to the assessor of the district in which any such bank, association, corporation, or company may be located, or in which such person has his place of business, with a declaration annexed thereto, and the oath or affirmation of such person, or of the president or cashier of such bank, association, corporation, or company, in such form and manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, that the same contains a true and faithful statement of the amounts subject to tax as aforesaid; and for any refusal or neglect to make or to render return and payment, any such bank, association, corporation, company, or person so in default, shall be subject to and pay a penalty of two hundred dollars, besides the additional penalty and forfeitures in other cases provided by law; and the amount of circulation, deposit, capital, and notes of persons, State banks and banking associations paid out as aforesaid, in default of the proper return, shall be estimated by the assessor or assistant assessor of the district as aforesaid, upon the best information he can obtain; and every such penalty may be recovered for the use of the United States in any court of competent jurisdiction. And in the case of banks with branches, the tax herein provided for shall be assessed upon the circulation of each branch, severally, and the amount of capital of each branch shall be considered to be the amount allotted to such branch; and so much of an act entitled "An act to provide ways and means for the support of the Government," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, as imposes any tax on banks, their circulation, capital, or deposits, other than is herein provided, is hereby repealed: Provided, That this section shall not apply to associations which are taxed under and by virtue of the act "to provide a national currency secured by a pledge of United States bonds, and to provide for the circulation and redemption thereof." And the deposits in associations or companies known as provident institutions, savings banks, savings funds, or savings institutions, having no capital stock and doing no other business than receiving deposits to be loaned or invested for the sole benefit of the parties making such deposits, without profit or compensation to the association or company, shall be exempt from tax on so much of their deposits as they have invested in securities of the United States, and on all deposits less than five hundred dollars made in the name of any one person; and the returns required to be made by such provident institutions and savings banks after July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, shall be made on the first Monday of January and July of each year, in such form and manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

That section one hundred and eleven be amended by inserting after the words "proprietors, managers, or agents of lotteries," the words, "and all lottery ticket dealers."

That section one hundred and fourteen be amended by inserting after the word "periodically," in the first sentence of said section, the words: or otherwise, or publishing any guide, almanac, catalogue, directory, or any other paper or book.

That section one hundred and sixteen be amended by inserting after the words "on the excess over five thousand dollars" the following: and a like tax shall be levied, collected, and paid annually upon the gains, profits, and income of every business, trade, or profession carried on in the United States by persons

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

residing without the United States, not citizens thereof.

That section one hundred and nineteen be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that the taxes on incomes herein imposed shall be levied on the first day of May, and be due and payable on or before the thirtieth day of June, in each year, until and including the year eighteen hundred and seventy, and no longer; and to any sum or sums annually due and unpaid after the thirtieth of June, as aforesaid, and for ten days after notice and demand thereof by the collector, there shall be levied, in addition thereto, the sum of ten per centum on the amount of duties unpaid, as a penalty, except from the estates of deceased or insolvent persons.

That section one hundred and twenty be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that there shall be levied and collected a tax of five per centum on all dividends in scrip or money thereafter declared due, where ever and whenever the same shall be payable, to stockholders, policy-holders, or depositors or parties whatsoever, including non-residents, whether citizens or aliens, as part of the earnings, income, or gains of any bank, trust company, savings institution, and of any fire, marine, life, inland insurance company, either stock or mutual, under whatever name or style known or called, in the United States or Territories, whether specially incorporated or existing under general laws, and on all undistributed sums, or sums made or added during the year to their surplus or contingent funds; and said banks, trust companies, savings institutions, and insurance companies shall pay the said tax, and are hereby authorized to deduct and withhold from all payments made on account of any dividends or sums of money that may be due and payable as aforesaid the said tax of five per centum. And a list or return shall be made and rendered to the assessor or assistant assessor on or before the tenth day of the month following that in which any dividends or sums of money become due or payable as aforesaid; and said list or return shall contain a true and faithful account of the amount of taxes as aforesaid; and there shall be annexed thereto a declaration of the president, cashier, or treasurer of the bank, trust company, savings institution, or insurance company, under oath or affirmation in form and manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, that the same contains a true and faithful account of the taxes as aforesaid. And for any default in the making or rendering of such list or return, with such declaration annexed, the bank, trust company, savings institution, or insurance company making such default, shall forfeit as a penalty the sum of one thousand dollars; and in case of any default in making or rendering said list or return, or of any default in the payment of the tax as required, or any part thereof, the assessment and collection of the tax and penalty shall be in accordance with the general provisions of law in other cases of neglect or refusal: Provided, That the tax upon the dividends of life insurance companies shall not be deemed due until such dividends are payable; nor shall the portion of premiums returned by mutual life insurance companies to their policy holders, nor the annual or semi-annual interest allowed or paid to the depositors in savings banks or savings institutions, be considered as dividends.

That section one hundred and twenty-two be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that any railroad, canal, turnpike, canal navigation, or slack-water company, indebted for any money for which bonds or other evidence of indebtedness have been issued, payable in one or more years after date, upon which interest is stipulated to be paid, or coupons representing the interest, or any such company that may have declared any dividend in scrip or money due or payable to its stockholders, including non-residents, whether citizens or aliens, as part of the earnings, profits, income, or gains of such company, and all profits of such company carried to the account of any fund, or used for construction, shall be subject to and pay a tax of five per centum on the amount of all such interest, or coupons, dividends, or profits, whenever and wherever the same shall be payable, and to whatsoever party or person the same may be payable, including non-residents, whether citizens or aliens; and said companies are hereby authorized to deduct and withhold from all payments on account of any interest, or coupons, and dividends, due and payable as aforesaid, the tax of five per centum; and the payment of the amount of said tax so deducted from the interest, or coupons, or dividends, and certified by the president or treasurer of said company, shall discharge said company from that amount of the dividend, or interest, or coupon on the bonds or other evidences of their indebtedness so held by any person or party whatever, except where said companies may have contracted otherwise. And a list or return shall be made and rendered to the assessor or assistant assessor on or before the tenth day of the month following that in which said interest, coupons, or dividends become due and payable, and as often as every six months; and said list or return shall contain a true and faithful account of the amount of tax, and there shall be annexed thereto a declaration of the president or treasurer of the company, under oath or affirmation in form and manner as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, that the same contains a true and faithful account of said tax. And for any default in making or rendering such list or return, with the declaration annexed, or of the payment of the tax as aforesaid, the company making such default shall forfeit as a penalty the sum of one thousand dollars; and in case of any default in making or rendering said list or return, or of the payment of the tax or any part thereof, as aforesaid, the assessment and collection of the tax and penalty shall be made according to the provisions of law in other cases of neglect or refusal.

That section one hundred and twenty-two be further amended by adding thereto the following proviso: Provided, That whenever any of the companies mentioned in this section shall be unable to pay the interest on their indebtedness, and shall in fact fail to pay such interest, that in such cases the tax levied by this section shall not be paid to the United States until said company resume the payment of interest on their indebtedness.

That section one hundred and twenty-three be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that there shall be levied, collected, and paid on all salaries of officers, or payments for services to persons in the civil, military, naval, or other employment or service of the United States, including Senators and Representatives and Delegates in Congress, when exceeding the rate of six hundred dollars per annum, a tax of five per centum on the excess above the said six hundred dollars, and a tax of ten per cent. on the excess over five thousand dollars; and it shall be the duty of all paymasters and all disbursing officers, under the Government of the United States, or persons in the employ thereof, when making any payment to any officers or persons as aforesaid, or upon settling and adjusting the accounts of such officers or persons, to deduct and withhold the aforesaid tax, and they shall, at the same time, make a certificate stating the name of the officer or person from whom such deduction was made, and the amount thereof, which shall be transmitted to the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and entered as part of the internal tax; and the pay-roll, receipts, or account of officers or persons paying such tax, as aforesaid, shall be made to exhibit the fact of such payment. And it shall be the duty of the several Auditors of the Treasury Department, when auditing the accounts of any paymaster or disbursing officer, or any officer withholding his salary from moneys received by him, or when settling or adjusting the accounts of any such officer, to require evidence that the taxes mentioned in this section have been deducted and paid over to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or other officer authorized to receive the same: Provided, That payments of prize money shall be regarded as income from salaries, and the tax thereon shall be adjusted and collected in like manner: Provided further, That this section shall not apply to payments made to mechanics or laborers employed upon public works.

That section one hundred and twenty-four be amended by adding thereto the following additional proviso: Provided further, That any legacy or share of personal property passing as aforesaid to a minor child of the person who died possessed as aforesaid shall be exempt from taxation under this section, unless such legacy or share shall exceed the sum of one thousand dollars, in which case the excess only above that sum shall be liable to such taxation.

That section one hundred and twenty-five be amended by inserting after the words "that the tax or duty aforesaid," the following: "shall be due and payable whenever the party interested in such legacy or distributive share or property or interest aforesaid shall become entitled to the possession or enjoyment thereof, or to the beneficial interest in the profits accruing therefrom, and the same;" and by inserting after the words "United States," in the first sentence of said section, the words: "and every administrator, executor, or trustee, having in charge or trust any legacy or distributive share, as aforesaid, shall give notice thereof in writing to the assessor or assistant assessor of the district where the deceased grantor or bargainer last resided, within thirty days after he shall have taken charge of such trust;" and by inserting after the words "shall make out such lists and valuation as in other cases of neglect or refusal, and shall assess the duty thereon," the words: "and in case of willful neglect, refusal, or false statement by such executor, administrator, or trustee, as aforesaid, he shall be liable to a penalty of not exceeding one thousand dollars, to be recovered with costs of suit." Any tax paid under the provisions of sections one hundred and twenty-four and one hundred and twenty-five shall be deducted from the particular legacy or distributive share on account of which the same is charged.

That section one hundred and thirty-seven be amended by inserting after the words "imposed by this act," the words: "shall be assessed in the collection district where the estate is situate, and."

That section one hundred and thirty-eight be amended by adding thereto the words: "and every such person having in charge or trust any disposition of real estate or interest therein, subject to tax under this act, shall give notice thereof in writing to the assessor or assistant assessor of the district where the estate is situate, within thirty days from the time when he shall have taken charge of such trust, and prior to any distribution of said real estate, together with a description and value thereof, and the names of the persons interested therein; and for willful neglect or refusal so to do, shall be liable to a penalty of not exceeding five hundred dollars, to be recovered with costs of suit."

That section one hundred and forty-five be amended by inserting after the word "years" the words: "from the time when such tax shall have become due and payable."

That section one hundred and forty-seven be amended by striking out all after the enacting

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that any person liable to pay a tax in respect to any succession shall give notice to the assessor or assistant assessor of his liability to such tax within thirty days from the time when he shall become entitled in possession to such succession or to the receipt of the income and profits thereof, and shall at the same time deliver to the assessor or assistant assessor a full and true account of said succession for the tax whereon he shall be accountable, and of the value of the real estate involved, and of the deductions claimed by him, together with the names of the successor and predecessor and their relation to each other, and all such other particulars as shall be necessary or proper for enabling the assessor or assistant assessor fully and correctly to ascertain the taxes due; and the assessor or assistant assessor, if satisfied with such account and estimate as originally delivered, or with any amendments that may be made therein upon his requisition, may assess the succession tax on the footing of such account and estimate; but it shall be lawful for the assessor or assistant assessor, if dissatisfied with such account, or if no account and estimate shall be delivered to him, to assess the tax on the best information he can obtain, subject to appeal as hereinafter provided; and if the tax so assessed shall exceed the tax assessable according to the return made to the assessor or assistant assessor, and with which he shall have been dissatisfied, or if no account and estimate has been delivered, and if no appeal shall be taken against such assessment, then it shall be in the discretion of the assessor, having regard to the merits of each case, to assess the whole or any part of the expenses incident to the taking of such assessment, in addition to such tax; and if there shall be an appeal against such last-mentioned assessment, then the payment of such expenses shall be in the discretion of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

That section one hundred and forty-eight be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that if any person required to give any such notice or deliver such account, as aforesaid, shall willfully neglect to do so within the time required by law, he shall be liable to pay the United States a sum equal to ten per centum upon the amount of tax payable by him; and if any person liable to pay any tax in respect of his succession shall, after such tax shall have been finally ascertained, willfully neglect to do so within ten days after being notified, he shall also be liable to pay to the United States a sum equal to ten per centum upon the amount of tax so unpaid, at the same time and in the same manner as the tax to be collected.

That section one hundred and fifty be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

That section one hundred and fifty-two be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that it shall not be lawful to record any instrument, document, or paper required by law to be stamped, unless a stamp or stamps of the proper amount shall have been affixed, and canceled in the manner required by law; and the record of any such instrument, upon which the proper stamp or stamps aforesaid shall not have been affixed and canceled as aforesaid, shall be utterly void, and shall not be used in evidence.

That section one hundred and fifty-four be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that all official instruments, documents, and papers issued by the officers of the United States Government, or by the officers of any State, county, town, or other municipal corporation, shall be, and hereby are, exempt from taxation: Provided, That it is the intent hereby to exempt from liability to taxation such State, county, town, or other municipal corporation, in the exercise only of functions strictly belonging to them in their ordinary governmental and municipal capacity.

That section one hundred and fifty-five be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that if any person shall forge or counterfeit, or cause or procure to be forged or counterfeited, any stamp, die, plate, or other instrument, or any part of any stamp, die, plate, or other instrument, which shall have be[en] provided, or may hereafter be provided, made, or used in pursuance of this act, or shall forge, counterfeit, or resemble, or cause or procure to be forged, counterfeited, or resembled, the impression, or any part of the impression, of any such stamp, die, plate, or other instrument, aforesaid, upon any vellum, parchment, or paper, or shall stamp or mark, or cause or procure to be stamped or marked, any vellum, parchment, or paper, with any such forged or counterfeited stamp, die, plate, or other instrument, or part of any stamp, die, plate, or other instrument, as aforesaid, with intent to defraud the United States of any of the taxes hereby imposed, or any part thereof; or if any person shall utter, or sell, or expose to sale, any vellum, parchment, paper, article, or thing, having thereupon the impression of any such counterfeited stamp, die, plate, or other instrument, or any part of any stamp, die, plate, or other instrument, or any such forged, counterfeited, or resembled impression, or part of impression, as aforesaid, knowing the same to be forged, counterfeited, or resembled; or if any person shall knowingly use or permit the use of any stamp, die, plate, or other instrument, which shall have been so provided, made, or used, as aforesaid, with intent to defraud the United States; or if any person shall fraudulently cut, tear, or remove, or cause or procure to be cut, torn, or removed, the impression of any stamp, die, plate, or other instrument, which shall have been provided, made, or used, in pursuance of this act, from any vellum, parchment, or paper, or any instrument or writing charged or chargeable with any of the taxes imposed by law; or if any person shall fraudulently use, join, fix, or place, or cause to be used, joined, fixed, or placed, to, with, or upon any vellum, parchment, paper, or any instrument or writing charged or chargeable with any of the taxes hereby imposed, any adhesive stamp, or the impression of any stamp, die, plate, or other instrument, which shall have been provided, made, or used in pursuance of law, and which shall have been cut, torn, or removed from any other vellum, parchment, or paper, or any instrument or writing charged or chargeable with any of the taxes imposed by law; or if any person shall willfully remove or cause to be removed, alter or cause to be altered, the canceling or defacing marks on any adhesive stamp, with intent to use the same, or to cause the use of the same after it shall have been once used, or shall knowingly or willfully sell or buy such washed or restored stamps, or offer the same for sale, or give or expose the same to any person for use, or knowingly use the same, or prepare the same with intent for the further use thereof; or if any person shall knowingly and without lawful excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on the person accused) have in his possession any washed, restored, or altered stamps, which have been removed from any vellum, parchment, paper, instrument, or writing, then, and in every such case, every person so offending, and every person knowingly and willfully aiding, abetting, or assisting in committing any such offense as aforesaid, shall, on conviction thereof, forfeit the said counterfeit stamps and the articles upon which they are placed, and be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment and confinement to hard labor not exceeding five years, or both, at the discretion of the court.

That section one hundred and fifty-eight be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that any person or persons who shall make, sign, or issue, or who shall cause to be made, signed, or issued, any instrument, document, or paper of any kind or description whatsoever, or shall accept, negotiate, or pay, or cause to be accepted, negotiated, or paid, any bill of exchange, draft, or order, or promissory note for the payment of money, without the same being duly stamped, or having thereupon an adhesive stamp for denoting the tax chargeable thereon, and canceled in the manner required by law, with intent to evade the provisions of this act, shall, for every such offense, forfeit the sum of fifty dollars, and such instrument, document, or paper, bill, draft, order, or note, not being stamped according to law, shall be deemed invalid and of no effect: Provided, That the title of a purchaser of land by deed duly stamped shall not be defeated or affected by the want of a proper stamp on any deed conveying said land by any person from, through, or under whom his grantor claims or holds title: And provided further, That hereafter, in all cases where the party has not affixed to any instrument the stamp required by law thereon, at the time of making or issuing the said instrument, and he or they, or any party having an interest therein, shall be subsequently desirous of affixing such stamp to said instrument, or if said instrument be lost, to a copy thereof, he or they shall appear before the collector of the revenue of the proper district, who shall, upon the payment of the price of the proper stamp required by law, and of a penalty of fifty dollars, and where the whole amount of the tax denoted by the stamp required shall exceed the sum of fifty dollars, on payment also of interest, at the rate of six per centum on said tax from the day on which such stamp ought to have been affixed, affix the proper stamp to such instrument or copy, and note upon the margin thereof the date of his so doing, and the fact that such penalty has been paid; and the same shall thereupon be deemed and held to be as valid, to all intents and purposes, as if stamped when made or issued: And provided further, That where it shall appear to said collector, upon oath or otherwise, to his satisfaction that any such instrument has not been duly stamped at the time of making or issuing the same, by reason of accident, mistake, inadvertence, or urgent necessity, and without any willful design to defraud the United States of the stamp, or to evade or delay the payment thereof, then and in such case, if such instrument, or, if the original be lost, a copy thereof duly certified by the officer having charge of any records in which such original is required to be recorded, or otherwise duly proven to the satisfaction of the collector, shall, within twelve calendar months after the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, or within twelve calendar months after the making or issuing thereof, be brought to the said collector of revenue to be stamped, and the stamp tax chargeable thereon shall be paid, it shall be lawful for the said collector to remit the penalty aforesaid, and to cause such instrument to be duly stamped. And when the original instrument, or a certified or duly proved copy thereof, as aforesaid, duly stamped so as to entitle the same to be recorded, shall be presented to the clerk, register, recorder, or other officer having charge of the original record, it shall be lawful for such officer, upon the payment of the fee legally chargeable for the recording thereof, to make a new record thereof, or to note upon the original record the fact that the error or omission in the stamping of said original instrument has been corrected pursuant to law; and the original instrument or such certified copy or the record thereof may be used in all courts and places in the same manner and with like effect as if the instrument had been originally stamped: And provided further, That in all cases where the party has not affixed the stamp required by law upon any instrument made, signed, or issued,

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

at a time when and at a place where no collection district was established, it shall be lawful for him or them, or any party having an interest therein, to affix the proper stamp thereto, or if the original be lost, to a copy thereof; and the instrument or copy to which the proper stamp has been thus affixed prior to the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, and the record thereof, shall be as valid, to all intents and purposes, as if stamped by the collector in the manner hereinbefore provided. But no right acquired in good faith before the stamping of such instrument or copy thereof, and the recording thereof, as herein provided, if such record be required by law, shall in any manner be affected by such stamping as aforesaid.

That section one hundred and sixty-three be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that hereafter no deed, instrument, document, writing, or paper, required by law to be stamped, which has been signed or issued without being duly stamped, or with a deficient stamp, nor any copy thereof, shall be recorded, or admitted, or used as evidence in any court until a legal stamp or stamps, denoting the amount of tax, shall have been affixed thereto, as prescribed by law: Provided, That any power of attorney, conveyance, or document, of any kind, made or purporting to be made in any foreign country to be used in the United States, shall pay the same tax as is required by law on similar instruments or documents when made or issued in the United States; and the party to whom the same is issued, or by whom it is to be used, shall, before using the same, affix thereon the stamp or stamps indicating the tax required.

That section one hundred and sixty-five be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that if any person, firm, company, or corporation shall make, prepare, and sell, or remove for consumption or sale, drugs, medicines, preparations, compositions, articles, or things, including perfumery, cosmetics, lucifer or friction matches, cigar lights, or wax tapers, and playing cards, and also including prepared mustards, preserved meats, fish, shell-fish, fruits, vegetables, sauces, sirups, jams, and jellies, when packed or sealed in cans, bottles, or other single packages, whether of domestic manufacture or imported, upon which a duty or tax is imposed by law, as enumerated and mentioned in schedule C, without affixing thereon an adhesive stamp or label denoting the tax before mentioned, he or they shall incur a penalty of fifty dollars for every omission to affix such stamp.

That section one hundred and sixty-nine be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that any person who shall offer or expose for sale any of the articles named in schedule C, or in any amendments thereto, whether the articles so offered or exposed are imported or are of foreign or domestic manufacture, shall be deemed the manufacturer thereof, and subject to all the duties, liabilities, and penalties imposed by law in regard to the sale of domestic articles without the use of the proper stamp or stamps denoting the tax paid thereon, and all such articles imported, or of foreign manufacture, shall, in addition to the import duties imposed on the same, be subject to the stamp tax, respectively, prescribed in schedule C, as aforesaid: Provided, That when such imported articles, except playing cards, lucifer or friction matches, cigar lights, and wax tapers, shall be sold in the original and unbroken package in which the bottles or other inclosures were packed by the manufacturer, the person so selling said articles shall not be subject to any penalty on account of the want of the proper stamp.

That schedule B, preceding section one hundred and seventy-one, be amended by striking out all after the paragraphs relating to "gauger's returns" and "measurer's returns;" and by striking out all from "receipts for the payment of any sum of money," down to "weigher's returns, if of a weight not exceeding five thousand pounds, ten cents; exceeding five thousand pounds, twenty-five cents," inclusive, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: receipts for any sum of money, or for the payment of any debt, exceeding twenty dollars in amount, not being for the satisfaction of any mortgage or judgment or decree of any court, or by indorsement on any stamped obligation in acknowledgment of its fulfillment, for each receipt two cents: Provided, That when more than one signature is affixed to the same paper, one or more stamps may be affixed thereto, representing the whole amount of the stamp required for such signature; and that the term money, as herein used, shall be held to include drafts and other instruments given for the payment of money.

That schedule B, preceding section one hundred and seventy-one, be amended by inserting, immediately preceding the proviso relating to stamps on mortgages, the following: upon every assignment or transfer of a mortgage the same stamp tax upon the amount remaining unpaid thereon as is herein imposed upon a mortgage for the same amount. Also by striking out the words "mortgage or" in said proviso. Also by inserting the words "domestic and inland bills of lading and" after "than" and before "those" in the first line of said schedule.

That schedule B be amended, under the head of contract, by striking out the words following: "stocks, bonds," and "notes of hand." Also, by inserting under the head of contract, after the words "for each note or memorandum of sale, ten cents," the words following: bill or memorandum of the sale or contract for the sale of stocks, bonds, gold or silver bullion, coin, promissory notes, or other securities, shall pay a stamp tax at the rate provided in section ninety-nine.

That schedule C be amended by striking out the paragraph in relation to photographs.

That schedule C be further amended by striking out the paragraph relating to cigar lights and wax tapers, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: for wax tapers, double the rates herein imposed upon friction or lucifer matches; on cigar lights, made in part of wood, wax, glass, paper, or other materials, in parcels or packages containing twenty-five lights or less in each parcel or package, one cent; when in parcels or packages containing more than twenty-five and not more than fifty lights, two cents; for every additional twenty-five lights or fractional part of that number, one cent additional; and by striking out all after the words "playing cards," and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

For and upon every pack, not exceeding fifty-two cards in number, irrespective of price or value, five cents.

For and upon every can, bottle, or other single package, containing meats, fish, shell-fish, fruits, vegetables, sauces, sirups, prepared mustard, jams or jellies contained therein and packed or sealed, made, prepared, and sold, or offered for sale, or removed for consumption in the United States, on and after the first day of October, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, when such can, bottle, or other single package, with its contents, shall not exceed two pounds in weight, the sum of one cent ($0.01.)

When such can, bottle, or other single package, with its contents, shall exceed two pounds in weight, for every additional pound or fractional part thereof, one cent ($0.01.)

That section one hundred and seventy-one be amended by adding thereto the following proviso: Provided also, That no claim for drawback on any articles of merchandise exported prior to June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, shall be allowed unless presented to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue within three months after this amendment takes effect.

That section one hundred and seventy-nine be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that, where it is not otherwise provided for, it shall be the duty of the collectors, in their respective districts, and they are hereby authorized, to prosecute for the recovery of any sum or sums that may be forfeited; and all fines, penalties, and forfeitures which may be imposed or incurred, shall and may be sued for and recovered, where not otherwise provided, in the name of the United States, in any proper form of action, or by any appropriate form of proceeding, before any circuit or district court of the United States for the district within which said fine, penalty, or forfeiture may have been incurred, or before any court of competent jurisdiction. And where not otherwise provided for, such share as the Secretary of the Treasury shall, by general regulations, provide, not exceeding one moiety nor more than five thousand dollars in any one case, shall be to the use of the person, to be ascertained by the court which shall have imposed or decreed any such fine, penalty, or forfeiture, who shall first inform of the cause, matter, or thing whereby such fine, penalty, or forfeiture shall have been incurred; and when any sum is paid without suit, or before judgment, in lieu of fine, penalty, [penalty,] or forfeiture, and a share of the same is claimed by any person as informer, the Secretary of the Treasury, under general regulations to be by him prescribed, shall determine whether any claimant is entitled to such share as above limited, and to whom the same shall be paid, and shall make payment accordingly. It is hereby declared to be the true intent and meaning of the present and all previous provisions of internal revenue acts granting shares to informers, that no right accrues to or is vested in any informer in any case until the fine, penalty, or forfeiture in such case is fixed by judgment or compromise, and the amount or proceeds shall have been paid, when the informer shall become entitled to his legal share of the sum adjudged or agreed upon and received: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to limit or affect the power of remitting the whole or any portion of a fine, penalty, or forfeiture conferred on the Secretary of the Treasury by existing laws. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to compromise, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, any case arising under the internal revenue laws, whether pending in court or otherwise. The several circuit and district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction of all offenses against any of the provisions of this act committed within their several districts: Provided, That whenever in any civil action for a penalty the informer may be a witness for the prosecution, the party against whom such penalty is claimed may be and shall be admitted as a witness on his own behalf. Every person who shall receive any money or other valuable thing under a threat of informing or as a consideration for not informing against any violation of this act, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court, with costs of prosecution.

SEC. 9, [his.] And be it further enacted, That sections two, five, eight, nine, ten, and twelve of the act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes,' approved June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

That section six of the act of March third,

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG. 1ST SESS.

eighteen hundred and sixty-five, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes,'" approved June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that every national banking association, State bank, or State banking association, shall pay a tax of ten per centum on the amount of notes of any person State bank, or State banking association, used for circulation and paid out by them after the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and such tax shall be assessed and paid in such a manner as shall be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

That section fourteen of the same act shall be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that the capital of any State bank or banking association which has ceased or shall cease to exist, or which has been or shall be converted into a national bank, shall be assumed to be the capital as it existed immediately before such bank ceased to exist or was converted as aforesaid; and whenever the outstanding circulation of any bank, association, corporation, company, or person shall be reduced to an amount not exceeding five per centum of the chartered or declared capital existing at the time the same was issued, said circulation shall be free from taxation; and whenever any bank which has ceased to issue notes for circulation shall deposit in the Treasury of the United States, in lawful money, the amount of its outstanding circulation, to be redeemed at par, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, it shall be exempt from any tax upon such circulation; and whenever any State bank or banking association has been converted into a national banking association, and such national banking association has assumed the liabilities of such State bank or banking association, including the redemption of its bills, by any agreement or understanding whatever with the representatives of such State bank or banking association, such national banking association shall be held to make the required return and payment on the circulation outstanding, so long as such circulation shall exceed five per centum of the capital before such conversion of such State bank or banking association.

That an act entitled "An act to declare the meaning of certain parts of the internal revenue act, approved June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and for other purposes," approved March tenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, be amended by striking out sections three, four, and five of said act, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that it shall be the duty of all persons required to make returns or lists of income and articles or objects charged with an internal tax, to declare in such returns or lists whether the several rates and amounts therein contained are stated according to their values in legal-tender currency or according to their values in coined money; and in case of neglect or refusal so to declare to the satisfaction of the assistant assessor receiving such returns or lists, such assistant assessor is hereby required to make returns or lists for such persons so neglecting or refusing, as in cases of persons neglecting or refusing to make the returns or lists required by the acts aforesaid, and to assess the tax thereon, and to add thereto the amount of penalties imposed by law in cases of such neglect or refusal. And whenever the rates and amounts contained in the returns or lists as aforesaid shall be stated in coined money, it shall be the duty of each assessor receiving the same to reduce such rates and amounts to their equivalent in legal-tender currency, according to the value of such coined money in said currency for the time covered by said returns. And the lists required by law to be furnished to collectors by assessors shall in all cases contain the several amounts of taxes assessed, estimated, or valued in legal-tender currency only.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That, from and after the passage of this act the articles and products hereinafter enumerated shall be exempt from internal tax:

Alum; aluminum; aluminous cake, patent alum, sulphate of alumina, and cobalt;
Aniline and aniline colors;
Animal charcoal, or carbon;
Anvils;
Articles manufactured in institutions for the blind, and in institutions for the deaf and dumb, which are sold to aid in their support, or the support of the pupils;
Barrels and casks, other than those used for the reception of fluids; packing-boxes made of wood; and boxes of wood or paper for friction matches, cigar lights, and wax tapers;
Beeswax, crude or unrefined;
Bichromate and prussiate of potash;
Bleaching powders;
Blue vitriol;
Borax, and boracic acid;
Brass not more advanced than rods or sheets;
Brick, fire-brick, draining tiles, cement, drain and sewer pipes, earthen and stone water-pipes, retorts and tiles made of clay;
Bristles;
Brooms made from corn, brush, or palm-leaf;
Building stone of all kinds, including slate, marble, freestone, and soapstone, and rock, and ground gypsum;
Bunting and flags of the United States, and banners made of bunting of domestic manufacture;
Burstones, millstones, and grindstones, rough or wrought;
Candle wicking;
Chronometers;
Coffins and burial cases;
Copperas;
Copper, lead, and tin, in ingots, pigs, or bars;
Copper and yellow sheathing metal, not more advanced than rods or sheets;
Crates, and grain or farm baskets made of splints;
Crucibles of all kinds;
Crutches and artificial limbs, eyes, and teeth;
Deer-skins, smoked, or not oil-dressed;
Feather beds, mattresses, palliasses, bolsters, and pillows;
Fertilizers of all kinds;
Flasks and patterns used by founders;
Flax and the manufactures thereof;
Flavoring extracts solely for cooking purposes;
German silver in bars or sheets;
Gold leaf and gold foil;
Hemp and jute prepared for textile or felting purposes;
Hulls of ships and other vessels;
Illuminating gas manufactured by educational institutions for their own use exclusively;
India-rubber springs used exclusively for railroad cars;
Iron bridges, and castings for iron bridges;
Iron drain and sewer pipes;
Keys, actions, and strings for musical instruments;
Litharge and orange mineral;
Machines driven by horse power and used exclusively for cutting fire-wood, staves, and shingle bolts; and hand-saws;
Magnesium, calcined magnesia, and carbonate of magnesia;
Malleable iron castings, unfinished;
Manganese;
Masts, spars, ship and vessel blocks, and tree-nail wedges and deck plugs, cordage, ropes, and cables made of vegetable fiber;
Medicinal and mineral waters, of all kinds, sold in bottles or from fountains, and mead;
Mounting and machinery of telescopes for astronomical purposes;

Mills and machinery for the manufacture of sugar, sirup, and molasses from sorghum, imphoe, beets and corn;

Mineral coal of all kinds, and peat;
Monuments of stone of all kinds, not exceeding in value the sum of one hundred dollars: Provided, That monuments exceeding the value aforesaid, erected by public or private contributions to commemorate the service of Union soldiers who have fallen in battle, shall be exempt from taxation;

Moldings for looking-glasses and picture-frames;

Muriatic, nitric, and acetic acids;

Nickel, quicksilver, and sodium;

Nitrate of lead;

Oakum;

Original paintings, statues, and groups of statuary and casts made thereof by the artist from the original designs;

Oxide of zinc;

Paints, painters' and paper stainers' colors;

Printing paper of all descriptions; and tarred paper for roofing and other purposes; books, maps, charts, and all printed matter, and book-binding; paraffine; paraffine oil, not exceeding in specific gravity thirty-six degrees Baumé's hydrometer, a residuum of distillation or the products thereof; lubricating oil made from crude petroleum, coal, or shale, not exceeding in specific gravity thirty-six degrees Baumé's hydrometer: Provided, That such oil shall be subject to the same inspection as illuminating oil; crude petroleum, and crude oil the product of the first and single distillation of coal, shale, asphaltum, peat, or other bituminous substances;

Photographs or any other sun picture, being copies of engravings or works of art, when the same are sold by the producer at wholesale at a price not exceeding fifteen cents each, or are used for the illustration of books;

Pickles, when sold by the gallon and not contained in glass packages;

Pig-iron; muck-bar; blooms, slabs, and loops;

Plows, cultivators, harrows, straw and hay cutters, planters, seed-drills, horse-rakes, hand-rakes, cotton-gins, grain-cradles, and winnowing-mills;

Pot and pearl ashes;

Productions of stereotypers, lithographers, engravers, and electrotypers;

Putty;

Quinine, morphine, and other vegetable alkaloids, and phosphorus;

Railroad iron, and railroad iron rerolled;

Railroad chairs and fish plates; railroad, boat, and ship spikes; ax polls; iron axles; shoes for horses, mules, and oxen; rivets, horseshoe nails, nuts, washers, and bolts; vises, iron chains, and anchors; when such articles are made of wrought iron which has previously paid the tax or duty assessed thereon;

Reapers, mowers, threshing-machines, and separators; corn-shellers and wooden ware; cotton and hay presses;

Repairs of articles of all kinds;

Residuum, the product of mineral, vegetable, or animal substances drawn from stills after distillation;

Roman and water cements, and lime;

Roofing slate, slabs, and tiles;

Saleratus, sal soda, caustic soda, crude soda, aluminosilicate of soda; aluminate of soda; bicarbonate of soda; and silicate of soda;

Sails, tents, awnings, and bags made by sewing from fabrics or other articles upon which a duty or tax has been paid; and bags made of paper;

Saltpeter;

Salts of tin;

Silex used in the manufacture of glass;

Soap, valued at not above three cents per pound;

Spelter;

Spindles and castings of all descriptions made specially for locks, safes, looms, spinning-ma-

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

chines, steam-engines, hot-air and hot-water furnaces, and sewing-machines, and not sold or used for any other purposes, and upon which a tax is assessed and paid on the article of which the casting is a part;

Spokes, hubs, bows, and felloes; poles, shafts, arms, and wheels not ironed or finished for carriages or wagons; wooden handles for plows, and for other agricultural, household, and mechanical tools and implements; and pail and tub cars and handles; and wooden tanks, and cisterns for crude mineral oil;

Starch;

Steel, made from iron advanced beyond muck-bar, blooms, slabs, or loops in ingots, bars, rails made and fitted for railroads, sheet, plate, coil, or wire, hoop-skirt wire covered or uncovered; car wheels, thimble skeins and pipe boxes, and springs, tire and axles made of steel used exclusively for vehicles, cars or locomotives; and clock springs, faces and hands;

Stoves, composed in part of cast iron and in part of sheet iron, or of soapstone, fire-brick, or freestone, with or without cast iron or sheet iron: Provided, That the cast and sheet iron shall have paid the tax or duty previously assessed thereon.

Sugar, molasses, or sirup made from beets, corn, sugar maple, or from sorghum or imphee;

Sulphate of barytes;

Sulphur, flowers of sulphur, and sulphur flour;

Tar and crude turpentine;

Tin cans used for preserved meats, fish, shell-fish, fruits, vegetables, jams, jellies, paints, oils, and spices;

Umbrellas and parasols, and sticks and frames for the same;

Value of bullion used in the manufacture of wares, watches, and watch-cases, and bullion prepared for the use of platers and watch-makers;

Vegetable, animal, and fish oils of all descriptions, not otherwise provided for, including red oil, oleic acid, and admixtures of the same with paraffine oil, not exceeding in specific gravity thirty-six degrees Baumé's hydrometer;

Verdigris;

Vinegar;

White and red lead;

Whiting; Paris white;

Window glass of all kinds;

Wine made of grapes, currants, or other fruits, and rhubarb;

Wire made from wire less than number twenty wire gauge, upon which a tax has been assessed and paid as wire, and no manufactured wire shall pay a greater tax than that imposed on number twenty wire gauge;

Yarn and warp for weaving, braiding, or manufacturing purposes exclusively;

Yeast and baking powders;

Zinc, in ingots or sheets;

Provided further, That the exemptions aforesaid shall, in all cases, be confined exclusively to said articles in the state and condition specified in the foregoing enumeration, and shall not extend to articles in any other form, nor to manufactures from said articles.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That all lists or returns required to be made monthly, by any person, firm, company, corporation, or party whatsoever, liable to tax, shall be made on or before the tenth day of each and every month, and the tax assessed or due thereon shall be certified or returned by the assessor to the collector on or before the last day of each and every month. And all lists or returns required to be made quarterly, and all other lists or returns, for which no provision is otherwise made, shall be made on or before the tenth day of each and every month in which said list or return is required to be made, or succeeding the time when the tax may be due and liable to be assessed, and the tax thereon shall be certified or returned as herein provided for monthly lists or returns. And the tax shall be due and payable on or before the last day of each and every month. And in case said tax is not paid on or before the last day of each and every month the collector shall add ten per centum thereto: Provided, That notice of the time when such tax shall become due and payable shall be given in such manner as shall be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; and if said tax shall not be paid on or before the last day of the month as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of said collector to demand payment thereof, with ten per centum additional thereto in the manner prescribed by law; and if said tax and ten per centum additional are not paid within ten days from and after such demand thereof, it shall be lawful for the collector or his deputy to make distraint therefor, as provided by law, and so much of section eighty-three of the act of June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, as amended by the act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, as relates to the time of payment and collection of tax, is hereby repealed; and in all cases of neglect to make such lists or returns, or in case of false and fraudulent returns, the provisions of existing law, as amended by this act, shall be applicable thereto.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That apothecaries who manufacture, for their own dispensation and sales to consumers and to physicians, the medicines compounded according to the United States or other national pharmacopœias, or of which the full and proper formula is published in any of the dispensaries now or hitherto in common use among physicians and apothecaries, or in any pharmaceutical journal now issued by any incorporated college of pharmacy, shall not be regarded as manufacturers under this act. But apothecaries and all other persons who manufacture for the dispensing and sales of others, or who make and advertise any article, medicinal or otherwise, simple or compound, with any special proprietary claim to merit, or to special advantage in use or effect, whether such claim be based on the properties, qualities, price, or any other distinctive or distinguishing characteristic, whether real or pretended, of the articles so made and advertised, whether such article be or be not made according to the authorities above cited in this section, shall be regarded as manufacturers under this act.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That no stamp tax shall be imposed upon any uncompounded medicinal drug or chemical, nor upon any medicine compounded according to the United States or other national pharmacopœia, or of which the full and proper formula is published in any of the dispensaries now or hitherto in common use among physicians or apothecaries, or in any pharmaceutical journal now issued by any incorporated college of pharmacy, when not sold or offered for sale, or advertised under any other name, form, or guise than that under which they may be severally denominated and laid down in said pharmacopœias, dispensaries, or journals as aforesaid; nor upon medicines sold to or for the use of any person, which may be mixed and compounded for said person according to the written receipt or prescription of any physician or surgeon. But nothing in this section shall be construed to exempt from stamp tax any medicinal articles, whether simple or compounded by any rule, authority, or formula, published or unpublished, which are put up in a style or manner similar to that of patent or proprietary medicines in general, or advertised in newspapers or by public handbills for popular sale and use, as having any special proprietary claim to merit, or to any peculiar advantage in mode of preparation, quality, use, or effect, whether such claim be real or pretended.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That in case any goods or commodities for or in respect whereof any tax is or shall be imposed, or any materials, utensils, or vessels proper or intended to be made use of for or in the making of such goods or commodities shall be removed, or shall be deposited or concealed in any place, with intent to defraud the United States of such tax, or any part thereof, all such goods and commodities, and all such materials, utensils, and vessels, respectively shall be forfeited; and in every such case, and in every case where any goods or commodities shall be forfeited under this act, or any other act of Congress relating to the internal revenue, all and singular the casks, vessels, cases or other packages whatsoever, containing, or which shall have contained, such goods or commodities, respectively, and every vessel, boat, cart, carriage, or other conveyance whatsoever, and all horses or other animals, and all things used in the removal or for the deposit or concealment thereof, respectively, shall be forfeited; and every person who shall remove, deposit, or conceal, or be concerned in removing, depositing, or concealing any goods or commodities for or in respect whereof any tax is or shall be imposed, with intent to defraud the United States of such tax or any part thereof, shall be liable to a fine or penalty of not exceeding five hundred dollars.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That the judge of any circuit or district court of the United States, or any commissioner thereof, may issue a search warrant, authorizing any internal revenue officer to search any premises, if such officer shall make oath in writing that he has reason to believe, and does believe, that a fraud upon the revenue has been or is being committed upon or by the use of said premises.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That in case any person shall sell, give, or purchase or receive any box, barrel, bag, or any vessel, package, wrapper, cover, or envelope of any kind, stamped, branded or marked in any way so as to show that the contents or intended contents thereof have been duly inspected, or that the tax thereon has been paid, or that any provision of the internal revenue laws has been complied with, whether such stamping, branding, or marking may have been a duly authorized act or may be false and counterfeit, or otherwise without authority of law, said box, barrel, bag, vessel, package, wrapper, cover, or envelope being empty, or containing anything else than the contents which were therein when said articles had been so lawfully stamped, branded, or marked by an officer of the revenue, such person shall be liable to a penalty of not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars. And any person who shall make, manufacture, or produce any box, barrel, bag, vessel, package, wrapper, cover, or envelope, stamped, branded, or marked, as above described, or shall stamp, brand, or mark the same, as hereinbefore recited, shall, upon conviction thereof, be liable to penalty as before provided in this section. And any person who shall violate the foregoing provisions of this section, with intent to defraud the revenue, or to defraud any person, shall, upon conviction thereof, be liable to a fine of not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars, or imprisonment for not less than six months, nor more than five years, or both such fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court. And all articles sold, given, purchased, received, made, manufactured, produced, branded, stamped, or marked in violation of the provisions of this section, and all their contents, shall be forfeited to the United States.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That where any whisky, oil, tobacco, or other articles of manufacture or produce, requiring brands, stamps, or marks of whatever kind to be placed thereon, shall be sold upon distraint, forfeiture, or other process provided by law, the same not having been branded, stamped, or marked as required by law, the officer selling the same shall, upon sale thereof, fix, or cause to be affixed the brands, stamps, or marks so required, and deduct the expense thereof from the proceeds of such sale.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That manual labor schools and colleges shall not be required to pay a manufacturer's or special tax while the proceeds of the labor of such institutions are applied exclusively to the support and maintenance of such institutions.

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That no suit shall be maintained in any court for the recovery of any tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, until appeal shall have been duly made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue according to the provisions of law in that regard, and the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury established in pursuance thereof, and a decision of said Commissioner shall be had thereon, unless such suit shall be brought within six months from the time of said decision, or within six months from the time this act takes effect: Provided, That if said decision shall be delayed more than six months from the date of such appeal, then said suit may be brought at any time within twelve months from the date of such appeal.

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That section fifteen of the act of March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes,' approved June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four," be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following: that in any port of the United States in which there is more than one collector of internal revenue, the Secretary of the Treasury may designate one of said collectors to have charge of all matters relating to the exportation of articles subject to tax under the laws to provide internal revenue; and at such ports as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem it necessary, there shall be an officer appointed by him to superintend all matters of exportation and drawback, under the direction of the collector, whose compensation therefor shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but shall not exceed, in any case, an annual rate of two thousand dollars, excepting at New York, where the compensation shall be an annual rate of three thousand dollars. And all the books, papers, and documents in the bureau of drawback in the respective ports, relating to the drawback of taxes paid under the internal revenue laws, shall be delivered to said collector of internal revenue; and any collector of internal revenue, or superintendent of exports and drawbacks, shall have authority to administer such oaths and certify to such papers as may be necessary under any rules and regulations that may be prescribed under the authority herein conferred.

SEC. 21. And be it further enacted, That every person, firm, or corporation who distills or manufactures spirits or alcohol by continuous distillation from grain, who brews or makes mash, wort, or wash for distillation or the production of spirits, shall be deemed a distiller, under this act. And the making or keeping by any person of grain, mash, wash, or beer, prepared or fit for distillation, together with the possession by such person of a still or other apparatus capable of use for distilling, upon the same premises, shall be deemed and taken as presumptive evidence that such person is a distiller within the meaning of this act.

SEC. 22. And be it further enacted, That every person, firm, or corporation who rectifies, purifies, or refines distilled spirits or wines by any process, or who, by mixing distilled spirits or wine with any materials, manufactures any spurious, imitation, or compound liquors for sale, under the name of whisky, brandy, gin, rum, wine, "spirits," or "wine bitters," or any other name, shall be regarded as a rectifier under this act.

SEC. 23. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall carry on the business of a distiller or rectifier without having paid the special tax, as required by law, he shall for every such offense be liable to a fine of not less than double the tax imposed upon the spirits distilled, or double the special tax due for the spirits rectified by such person or found upon the premises hereinafter mentioned, and to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years; and all spirituous liquors so distilled or rectified, or owned by such person, or found as hereinafter mentioned, and all materials for making or preparing the same, and all vessels containing the same, and all stills or other apparatus capable of being used for distilling, owned by such person or found upon any premises where such business shall be carried on in violation of this section, shall be forfeited to the United States, and may be seized by the collector or deputy collector of the district within which such offense is committed.

SEC. 24. And be it further enacted, That every person engaged in, or intending to be engaged in, the business of a distiller or rectifier, shall give notice in writing, subscribed by him, to the assessor of the district within which such business is to be carried on, stating the name or style under which, the name or names, and the place or places of residence of the person or persons by whom, and the place where said business is to be carried on, and whether of distilling or rectifying. In case of a distiller, the notice shall also state the kind of stills, boilers, and other implements to be used, the capacity of each, the name or names of the owner or owners of the premises on which the distillery is or is to be situated, and if such premises are leased, the terms of the lease. In case of any change in the location, form, capacity, ownership, agency, or superintendence of such distillery, stills, boilers, or other implements, like notice shall be given as aforesaid, within twenty-four hours, of such change. Such person shall also give bond, in form to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with sureties approved by the collector of the district, who may approve the same if he shall be satisfied by affidavits made on said bond, of the sufficiency of said sureties, conditioned that he will comply with all the requirements of the law in relation to distilled spirits. The penal sum of such bond shall not be more than double the amount of the tax on the spirits that can be distilled by such still or stills or other implements during a period of fifteen days; said collector may refuse to approve said bond when, in his judgment, the location of the distillery is such as would enable the distiller to defraud the revenue, and in case of such refusal, the distiller may appeal to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, whose decision in the matter shall be final. A new bond may be required in case of the death, insolvency, or removal of either of the sureties, or in any other contingency, at the discretion of the collector. Any person failing to give the notice or bond hereinbefore required, or giving a false or fraudulent notice, shall be liable to the fine and forfeiture provided in the last preceding section.

SEC. 25. And be it further enacted, That no person shall use any still, boiler, or other vessel, for the purpose of distilling in any building or on any premises where beer, lager beer, ale, porter, or other fermented liquors, vinegar, or ether, are manufactured or produced, or where sugars or sirups are refined, or where liquors of any description are retailed, or any other business is carried on, or in any dwelling-house; and every person who shall use such still, boiler, or other vessel, for the purpose of distilling, as aforesaid, in any building or other premises where the above specified articles are manufactured, produced, or other business is carried on, or in any dwelling-house, or who shall procure the same to be done, shall forfeit such stills, boilers, or other vessels so used, and all the spirits distilled, and pay a fine of one thousand dollars, or be imprisoned for not more than one year, in the discretion of the court; and any person who shall manufacture any still, boiler, or other vessel, to be used for the purpose of distilling, shall, before the same is removed from the place of manufacture, notify the collector where such still, boiler, or other vessel is to be used or sent, and by whom it is to be used, and of its capacity, and the time when the same is to be sent or set up; and no such still, boiler, or other vessel, shall be set up without the permit in writing of the collector for that purpose; and any person who shall set up such still, boiler, or other vessel, without first obtaining a permit from the collector of the district in which such still, boiler, or other vessel is intended to be used, or who shall fail to give such notice, shall pay in either case the sum of five hundred dollars, and shall forfeit the distilling apparatus thus removed or set up in violation of law: Provided, That saleratus may be made or manufactured in any building or on any premises where spirits are distilled: Provided further, That any boiler used in generating steam or heating water to be used in such distillery may be located in any other building or on any other premises to be connected with such still or boiling tubs, by suitable pipes or other apparatus, or the steam from such boiler in the distillery may be conveyed to other premises to be used for manufacturing or other purposes.

SEC. 26. And be it further enacted, That every rectifier or wholesale dealer in distilled spirits shall enter, daily, in a book or books kept for the purpose, under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may prescribe, the number of proof gallons of spirits purchased or received, of whom purchased and received, and the number of proof gallons sold or delivered; and every rectifier or wholesale dealer who shall neglect or refuse to keep such record shall forfeit all spirits in his possession, together with the apparatus, tools, and implements used, and be subject to a fine of five hundred dollars, or imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than one year, in the discretion of the court. And every rectifier shall mark on each package of five gallons or more of distilled or rectified spirits sold by him, his name and place of business.

SEC. 27. And be it further enacted, That the owner or owners of any distillery shall provide at his or their own expense a warehouse suitable for the storage of bonded spirits, of [his or] their own manufacture only; or he or they may provide a secure room in a suitable building, to be used as such warehouse, but no dwelling-house shall be used for such purpose; and no door, window, or other opening shall be made or permitted in the walls thereof, leading to any other room or building used for any other purpose, or into the distillery; and after a bond has been given, as hereinafter provided, such warehouse or room, when approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, on report of the district collector, is hereby declared to be a bonded warehouse of the United States, and shall be used only for the storing of spirits manufactured by the owner, agent, or superintendent of such distillery, and shall be under the custody of the inspector as hereinafter provided; and shall be kept locked up by the proper officer in charge, at all times, except when he shall be present; and the tax on the spirit stored in such warehouse shall be paid before removal from such warehouse, unless removed in pursuance of law. And the owner or owners of such warehouse shall execute a general bond to the United States with two or more sureties, to be approved by the collector; and such bond shall be for not less than the amount of taxes on the spirits to be covered thereby, and in such form, and containing such conditions, as shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, and shall be changed or renewed from time to time in regard to the amount and sureties thereof, as the collector, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may require.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 28. And be it further enacted, That general bonded warehouses, for the storage of spirits or other merchandise allowed by law to be placed in bond to secure the payment of the internal revenue tax thereon, or the exportation thereof, may be established under such rules and regulations and upon the execution of such bonds as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and shall be in the immediate custody of store-keepers who shall be appointed for that purpose, whose compensation shall be paid monthly to the collector of the district by the owners or proprietors of such warehouse, and shall not exceed the rates which may be allowed to store-keepers of bonded warehouses established under the laws and regulations relating to customs: Provided, That any article manufactured in a bonded warehouse established under the one hundred and sixty-eighth section of the internal revenue act of June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and located in any of the Atlantic States, may be removed therefrom for transportation to a customs bonded warehouse at any port on the Pacific coast of the United States, for the purpose only of being exported therefrom, under such rules and regulations and upon the execution of such bonds or other security as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

SEC. 29. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury an inspector for every distillery established according to law, who shall take an oath faithfully to perform his duties; and who shall take an account of all the meal and vegetable productions or other substances to be used for the purpose of producing spirits, when put into the mash tub or otherwise used; and shall inspect, gauge, and prove all the spirits distilled, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; and shall take charge of the bonded warehouse established for the distillery in conformity to law; and such warehouse shall be in the joint custody of such inspector and the owner thereof, his agent or superintendent; and when any spirits shall be placed in such warehouse, an entry therefor, in such form as shall be prescribed by regulations, shall immediately be made and signed by the owner of said spirits, and shall have indorsed thereon a certificate of the inspector that the spirits mentioned have been duly inspected and received in said warehouse, and such entry and certificate shall be filed with the collector of the district; and said inspector shall not engage in any other business while employed as an inspector, and shall be paid five dollars per day for the time during which he is engaged; and the amount of compensation thus paid for inspection shall be assessed by the assessor upon the distiller, and returned to the collector monthly for collection; and in addition to the above compensation, such inspector shall receive such fee as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for each and every proof gallon of distilled spirits inspected by him and removed to the bonded warehouse, which shall be paid by the distiller or owner of the spirits; but no compensation shall be allowed to such inspector for more than one inspection of such spirits. And in case the duties of such inspector shall be greater at any time than he can perform, upon the joint application of the inspector and owner of such distillery, the Secretary of the Treasury may appoint an assistant inspector; and upon the refusal of the distiller to join in such application, the collector shall decide as to such necessity; and such assistant inspector shall qualify in the same manner and be subject to the same penalties as the inspector, and he shall be paid in the same manner as the inspector, at a rate not exceeding the sum of three dollars per day while so employed; and in case of disagreement as to the necessity of retaining the services of such assistant, between the owner of the distillery and the inspector, the collector shall decide as to such necessity, and his decision in the matter shall be final. And in case of absence by sickness, or from any other cause, of such inspector or assistant, the collector may designate a person to take temporary charge of such distillery and warehouse, who shall during such absence perform the duties, receive the same rate of pay, and be paid in the same manner, as said inspector or assistant for the time he may be so employed: Provided, That the owner, agent, or superintendent of any distillery who shall use, cause or permit to be used, any materials for the purpose of producing spirits, or shall distill or remove any spirits in the absence of the acting inspector or assistant, without permission granted by the collector of the district, shall forfeit and pay double the amount of taxes on the spirits so produced, distilled, or removed, and in addition thereto be liable to a fine of one thousand dollars, to be recovered in the manner provided for other penalties: Provided further, That any person who shall ship, transport or remove any spirituous or fermented liquors or wines, under any other than the proper name or brand known to the trade as designating the kind and quality of the contents of the casks or packages containing the same, or who shall cause the same to be done, shall forfeit the same, and shall, on conviction thereof, be subject to and pay a fine of five hundred dollars.

SEC. 30. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, in every collection district where the same may be necessary, one or more general inspectors of spirits, who shall be entitled to receive such fee as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for each and every proof gallon gauged and proved by him, to be paid by the owner of the spirits; and any owner, agent, or superintendent of any distillery or bonded warehouse who shall refuse to admit an inspector upon such premises, so far as it may be necessary for the performance of his duties, or who shall obstruct an inspector in the performance of his duties, shall forfeit and pay the sum of five hundred dollars, to be recovered in the manner provided for recovery of other penalties imposed by this act.

SEC. 31. And be it further enacted, That every person making or distilling spirits, or owning any still, boiler, or other vessel used for the purpose of distilling spirits, or having such still, boiler, or other vessel so used under his superintendence, either as agent or owner, or using any such still, boiler, or other vessel, shall, from day to day, to make, or cause to be made, true and exact entry in a book, to be kept in such form as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may prescribe, of the number of pounds or gallons of materials used for the purpose of producing spirits, the number of gallons of spirits distilled, the number of gallons placed in warehouse, and the proof thereof, and the number of gallons sold, with the proof thereof, and the name and place of business or residence of the person to whom sold; and shall also on the first, eleventh, and twenty-first days of each month, or within five days thereafter, render to the assessor or assistant assessor an account in duplicate, taken from his books in the particulars hereinbefore recited, and verified by oath, of all the facts occurring after the last day of account preceding. The entries to be made in the books of the distiller as aforesaid shall, upon the several days when the returns are made, as provided, be verified by oath or affirmation of the person or persons by whom such entries shall have been made, in the presence of the assessor or assistant assessor, or other proper officer, who shall append thereto his certificate of the execution of the same. The owner, agent, or superintendent of any distillery shall, in case the original entries required to be made in his books by this act shall not have been made by himself, subjoin to the certificate of the person by whom they were made the following oath or affirmation: "I do certify that to the best of my knowledge and belief the foregoing entries are just and true, and that I have taken all the means in my power to make them so." Said book shall always be open for the inspection of any assessor, assistant assessor, collector, deputy collector, revenue agents, or inspectors, and any premises where distilling shall be carried on shall be open to said officers, or either of them, at all times. Any person who shall violate the provisions of this section shall for every such offense be liable to a fine of five hundred dollars. Any person who shall render an account under the provisions of this section which shall be false or fraudulent shall be liable to a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, or to imprisonment not less than six months.

SEC. 32. And be it further enacted, That there shall be levied, collected, and paid on all distilled spirits upon which no tax has been paid according to law, a tax of two dollars on each and every proof gallon, to be paid by the distiller, owner, or any person having possession thereof; and the tax shall be a lien on the spirits distilled, on the distillery used for distilling the same, with the stills, vessels, fixtures, and tools therein, and on the interest of said distiller in the lot or tract of land whereon the said distillery is situated, from the time said spirits are distilled, until the said tax shall be paid: Provided, That the tax on all spirits shall be collected at no lower rate than the basis of first-proof, and shall be increased in proportion for any greater strength than the strength of first-proof.

SEC. 33. And be it further enacted, That proof spirits shall be held and taken to be that alcoholic liquor which contains one half its volume of alcohol of a specific gravity of seven thousand nine hundred and thirty-nine ten thousandths (.7939) at sixty degrees Fahrenheit; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to adopt, procure, and prescribe for use, such hydrometers, weighing and gauging instruments, meters or other means for ascertaining the strength and quantity of spirits subject to tax, and to prescribe such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary to insure a uniform and correct system of inspection, weighing, and gauging of spirits subject to tax throughout the United States. And in all sales of spirits hereafter made, where not otherwise specially agreed, a gallon shall be taken to be a gallon of first-proof, according to the foregoing standard set forth and declared for the inspection and gauging of spirits throughout the United States.

SEC. 34. And be it further enacted, That the owner, agent, or superintendent of any distillery established as hereinbefore provided, shall erect, in a room or building to be provided and used for that purpose, and for no other, two or more receiving cisterns, each to be at least of sufficient capacity to hold all the spirits distilled during the day of twenty-four hours, into one of which shall be conveyed each day all the spirits manufactured in said distillery during that day; and such cisterns shall be so constructed as to leave an open space of at least three feet between the tops thereof and the floor or roof above, and of not less than eighteen inches between the bottoms thereof and the floor below, and shall be separated in such a manner as will enable the inspector to pass around the same, and shall be connected with the outlet of the stills, boilers, or other vessels used for distilling, by suitable pipes or other apparatus so constructed as always to be exposed to the view of the inspector; such cisterns and the room in which they are contained shall be in charge of and under the lock and seal of the inspector; and on the third day after the spirits are conveyed into such cisterns the same shall be drawn off into casks or other packages, under the supervision of the inspector, and shall be immediately inspected, gauged, proved, and the casks or packages marked as herein provided, and be removed directly to the bonded warehouse before mentioned: Provided, That the spirits may be drawn off from said cisterns at any time previous to the third day, if so desired by the owner, agent, or superintendent of such distillery; and all locks and seals required by law shall be provided by the Secretary of the Treasury, at the expense of the owner of the distillery or warehouse, and the keys shall always be in the custody of the inspector or assistant inspector, or the officer having charge of the distillery or warehouse.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

SEC. 35. And be it further enacted, That any person who shall knowingly and fraudulently use any false weights or measures in ascertaining, weighing, or measuring the quantities of grain, meal, or vegetable materials, molasses, beer, or other substances to be used for distillation, or who shall fraudulently make false record of the same, or who shall destroy or tamper with any locks or seal which may be placed on any cistern, rooms, or buildings, by the duly authorized officers of the revenue, shall on conviction thereof be imprisoned for the term of two years, and pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, in the discretion of the court; and any person who shall use any molasses, beer, or other substances, whether fermented on the premises or elsewhere, for the purpose of producing spirits, before an account of the same shall have been registered in the proper record book provided for this purpose, shall forfeit and pay the sum of one thousand dollars for each and every offense so committed.

SEC. 36. And be it further enacted, That on all wines, liquors, or compounds known or denominated as wine, made in imitation of sparkling wines or champagne, and put up in bottles in imitation of any imported wine, or with the pretense of being imported wine, or wine of foreign growth or manufacture, there shall be levied and paid a tax of six dollars per dozen bottles, each bottle containing more than one pint, and not more than one quart, or three dollars per dozen bottles, each bottle containing not more than one pint; said tax to be paid by the manufacturer, owner, or person having possession thereof; and the returns, assessment, collection, and time of collection of the tax on such imitation wines shall be subject to the regulations of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. And any person who shall willfully and knowingly sell or offer for sale any such wine made after this act takes effect, upon which the tax herein imposed has not been paid, or which has been fraudulently evaded, shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a penalty of one thousand dollars, or to imprisonment not exceeding one year, at the discretion of the court.

SEC. 37. And be it further enacted, That every owner, agent, or superintendent of any distillery shall, at all times when required, supply all assistance, lights, ladders, tools, staging, or other things necessary for inspecting the premises, stock, tools, and apparatus, belonging to such person, and shall open all doors, and open for examination all boxes, packages, and all casks, barrels, and other vessels not under the control of the inspector, when required so to do by any duly authorized officer, under a penalty of two hundred dollars for any refusal or neglect so to do.

SEC. 38. And be it further enacted, That all spirits distilled shall, before the same are removed to the bonded warehouse, be inspected, gauged, and proved by the inspector appointed for that purpose, after the same has [have] been drawn into casks or packages, each of not less capacity than twenty gallons, wine measure, and said inspector shall mark by cutting, branding, or otherwise upon the cask or package containing such spirits, in a manner to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the quantity and proof of the contents of such cask or package, with the date of inspection, the collection district, the name of the inspector and the name of the distiller, and also the number of each cask in progressive order, such progressive number, for every distiller, to begin with number one with the first cask or package inspected after this act takes effect, and subsequently with number one with the first cask inspected on or after the first day of January, in each year, and not two or more casks warehoused in the same year by the same distiller shall be marked with the same number, and the officer in charge of the warehouse shall refuse to allow any cask of spirits to be taken out therefrom which has not marked thereon all the several particulars aforesaid, and in the manner required by law. And the inspector or other revenue officer in charge of any distillery shall make a prompt return of all spirits inspected by him in accordance with the provisions of law, and the name of the distiller, to the collector, and a duplicate thereof to the assessor of the district; and any person who shall fraudulently evade or attempt fraudulently to evade the payment of the tax upon any spirits distilled as aforesaid, by changing any marks upon any such cask or package, or in any other manner whatever, or who shall fraudulently put into such cask or package spirits of greater strength than that inspected and certified to by the inspector, shall pay double the amount of tax on each proof gallon of the quantity of such spirits, to be assessed and collected as in case of other taxes, and forfeit and pay as a penalty the additional sum of five hundred dollars for each cask or package so altered or changed, to be recovered as provided by law; and any inspector, assistant inspector, or officer temporarily in charge of any distillery, who shall conspire with the proprietor of any distillery or with any other person or persons to defraud the United States of the revenue or tax arising from distilled spirits or any part thereof, or who shall, with intent to defraud the United States of such revenue or tax, make any false or fraudulent entry, certificate, or return, or place any false or fraudulent mark upon any cask or package, shall, on conviction thereof, pay a fine of not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars, and be imprisoned for not less than two nor more than five years; and any person who shall fraudulently use any cask or package bearing inspection marks, for the purpose of selling any other spirits than that so inspected, or for selling spirits of a quantity or quality different from that so inspected, shall be imprisoned for a term of six months or shall pay a fine of one hundred dollars for each cask or package so used, in the discretion of the court; and any person who shall knowingly purchase or sell, with inspection marks thereon, any cask or package, after the same has been used for distilled spirits, or who shall fraudulently omit to erase or obliterate the inspection marks upon any such package or cask at the time of emptying the same, shall forfeit and pay the sum of two hundred dollars for every cask so purchased or used, or on which the marks are not so obliterated. And any person who shall, with fraudulent intent, use any inspector's brands or plates upon any cask or package containing or purporting to contain distilled spirits, or who shall knowingly make or use any counterfeit or spurious brand or plate upon any cask or package of distilled spirits, as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, on conviction thereof, shall pay a fine of one thousand dollars and be imprisoned for not less than two nor more than five years, and such cask or package, with its contents, shall be forfeited to the United States. And any inspector who shall permit any person not employed by him to use any of his brands or plates, or who shall negligently or willfully leave such brands or plates where they can be used by any other person than those who may be in his employ, shall pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, in the discretion of the court. And any inspector who shall employ any owner, agent, or superintendent of any distillery or warehouse under his supervision, or who shall employ any person in the service of such owner, agent, or superintendent, to use his plates or brands, or to discharge any of the duties imposed by law upon such inspector, shall, for each offense so committed, be subject to the fine last mentioned.

SEC. 39. And be it further enacted, That any person or persons who shall add, or cause to be added, any ingredients to any spirits before the tax imposed by law shall have been paid thereon, for the purpose of creating a fictitious proof, shall, upon conviction, be subject to a fine of one thousand dollars for each cask or package so adulterated, and be imprisoned for not less than one nor more than two years, in the discretion of the court, and such cask or package, with its contents, shall be forfeited to the United States.

SEC. 40. And be it further enacted, That any distilled spirits which have been inspected, gauged, proved, and marked by the inspector, according to the provisions of law, may be removed without the payment of tax from the bonded warehouse owned by the distiller, under such rules and regulations, and upon the execution of such transportation bonds or other security, as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe, and may be transported to any general bonded warehouse used for the storage of distilled spirits, established under the internal revenue laws and regulations, after having been branded as follows: "U. S. bonded warehouse, _____ district, _____; for transportation to _____ district, _____;" (inserting in each case the number of the district and name of the State;) and immediately after the arrival of such distilled spirits at the district of the collector to which it has been transferred, it shall again be inspected and placed in a bonded warehouse; and the tax shall be paid on the difference between the number of proof gallons as stated in the bond given at the place of shipment and the number received at the warehouse, less the allowance for leakage as established by the regulations of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; and except for actual destruction by unavoidable accident, by the elements, or by the public enemy, no other allowance for loss shall be made; and any distilled spirits entered in a general bonded warehouse shall be subject to such rules and regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may prescribe, and be chargeable with the same costs and expenses, in all respects, to which imported goods deposited in public store or bonded warehouse may be subject, and shall be in charge of a store-keeper, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, who, with the owner and proprietor of the warehouse, shall have the joint custody of all the distilled spirits so stored in said warehouse, which shall be at the risk of the owner of the said spirits; and all labor on the same shall be performed by the owner or proprietor of the warehouse, under the supervision of the officer in charge of the same, and at the expense of said owner or proprietor. And the same fees shall be paid for the execution of all papers, instruments, and documents relating to the exportation of any spirits or other merchandise, as are charged to exporters for like services in the custom-house; and all expense and services required in the removal, transfer, and shipment of the same for export shall be paid by the owner thereof: Provided, That any distilled spirits may be withdrawn from a bonded warehouse, after having been inspected and gauged by the proper officer, and after the payment to the collector of internal revenue for the district

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

in which the warehouse is situated of the tax imposed by law; and when so delivered, shall be branded "U. S. bonded warehouse, tax paid;" or may be removed from said warehouse without the payment of the tax for the purpose of being exported, or for the purpose of being rectified, or redistilled, canned, or put into other packages, after the quantity and proof of the spirits to be removed have been ascertained and inspected as required by law; under such rules and regulations and the execution of such bonds or other security as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe; but such removal of bonded spirits for the purpose of being rectified, redistilled, or put into other packages, shall be allowed but once on the same spirits; and all spirits so removed for redistillation, rectification, or change of package, shall be returned to the same warehouse, and shall again be inspected; and the tax shall be paid to the said collector on any deficiency or reduction beyond three per cent. And upon spirits removed under bond for the purpose of being redistilled or rectified, or change of package as aforesaid, and upon which an allowance shall have been made, as herein provided, the duty upon such allowance shall be paid, together with the taxes imposed by law upon such spirits, in case such spirits shall be withdrawn for consumption or sale, or for transportation without being exported. And no drawback shall be allowed on any distilled spirits on which the tax has been paid; but nothing in this section shall be so construed as to prevent the manufacture in bond for exportation, without the payment of taxes, of medicines, preparations, compositions, perfumery, cosmetics, cordials, and other liquors manufactured wholly or in part of domestic spirits, as provided by law.

SEC. 41. And be it further enacted, That any spirits or other merchandise may be removed from bonded warehouse, for the purpose of being exported, upon the order of the superintendent of exports for the port whence the spirits are to be exported; and such order shall state the port to which such spirits are to be shipped, and the name of the vessel, and also the number of proof gallons, and the marks of the packages or casks; and such spirits or other merchandise shall be branded "U. S. bonded warehouse, for export," and shall be put on board of the vessel in or by which they are to be exported, by an officer under direction of the superintendent of exports, and placed under the supervision of an officer of the customs, after a bond with good and sufficient sureties shall have been given in such form and containing such conditions as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may prescribe. And such bond shall be canceled upon the presentation of the proper certificate that said spirits have been landed at the port named in said bond, or at any other port without the jurisdiction of the United States, or upon satisfactory proof that after shipment the spirits have been lost. And at any port where there shall be no superintendent of exports, all the duties and services required of superintendents of exports and drawback shall devolve upon and be performed by the collector of internal revenue designated to have charge of exportations.

SEC. 42. And be it further enacted, That any person or persons who shall execute or sign any false or fraudulent bond, permit, entry, or other document, required by law or regulations; or who shall fraudulently procure the same to be executed; or who shall connive at the execution thereof, by which the payment of any internal revenue tax shall be evaded, or attempted to be evaded, or which shall be executed, or purport to be executed, for the purpose of placing in, or withdrawing from, any bonded warehouse any spirits or other merchandise for any purpose whatever, or which shall in any way be used or attempted to be used in fraud of the internal revenue laws and regulations, in conviction thereof, shall forfeit all property in such spirits or other merchandise to which such instrument relates, or purports to relate, and shall be imprisoned for a term not less than one nor more than five years, at the discretion of the court.

SEC. 43. And be it further enacted, That any person owning any distilled spirits intended for sale, manufactured prior to the time when this act takes effect, exceeding fifty gallons altogether, shall notify in writing the collector of the district wherein such spirits may be stored, held, or owned, within sixty days thereafter, to gauge and prove the same; and upon the receipt of said notice the collector shall cause said spirits to be gauged and proved, and the casks or packages containing the same to be marked by the inspector in the following manner:

Manufactured prior to —, 186—.
—, Inspector,
— District.
Inspected —, 186—.

And no spirits so manufactured, held, or owned, shall be gauged, proved, or marked in any cistern or other stationary vessel, but shall be gauged, proved and marked only in barrels, casks, or packages in which the same shall have been placed; and the quantity held in leach-tubs shall be estimated by the inspector, and when drawn off into packages, shall be gauged and marked as herein provided. Upon the receipt of the return the collector shall immediately forward to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue a copy thereof; and any person holding or owning such spirits, and refusing or neglecting to notify the collector, as in this section provided, shall forfeit the same and pay the sum of five hundred dollars, to be collected in the manner provided by law for the collection of other penalties. No distilled spirits on which the tax has been paid shall be stored or allowed to remain on any distillery premises, under the penalty of a forfeiture of all spirits so found. And all spirits, after being removed from the original package in which they were inspected and gauged into other packages for purposes of rectification, redistillation, or change of proof, shall again be inspected and gauged and properly branded; and the absence of an inspector's brand shall be taken and held as sufficient cause or evidence upon which any spirits so found may be forfeited. And any person who shall change the character of any spirits, either by rectification, mixing, or otherwise, after they have been duly inspected and marked, as hereinbefore provided, and place the same in other packages for consumption or sale without first stamping or branding upon such package, in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may prescribe, the word "Rectified," shall forfeit such spirits, and the same may be seized by the collector or deputy collector of the district where such spirits may be found, or by such other collector or deputy collector as may be specially authorized by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for that purpose. And any person who shall so brand any package containing spirits, knowing the taxes thereon have not been paid, shall forfeit such spirits, and shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be imprisoned for not more than two years, at the discretion of the court.

SEC. 44. And be it further enacted, That all boilers, stills, or other vessels, tools, and implements, used in distilling or rectifying, and forfeited under any of the provisions of this act, and all condemned material, together with any engine or other machinery connected therewith, and all empty barrels, and all grain or other material suitable for distillation, shall, under the direction of the court in which the forfeiture is recovered, be sold at public auction, and the proceeds thereof, after deducting the expenses of sale, shall be disposed of according to law. And all spirits or spirituous liquors which may be forfeited under the provisions of this act, unless herein otherwise provided, shall be disposed of by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue as the Secretary of the Treasury may direct. And the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is hereby authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to exempt distillers of brandy from apples, peaches, or grapes exclusively, from such of the provisions of this act relating to the manufacture of spirits as in his judgment may seem expedient. And any word or words in any and all parts of this act, and of all acts to which this act is additional, indicating or referring to person or persons, shall be taken to include partnerships, firms, associations, bodies corporate or politic, or any other party whatsoever, when not otherwise designated, or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof.

SEC. 45. And be it further enacted, That any person who shall remove any distilled spirits from the place where the same are distilled, otherwise than into a bonded warehouse as provided by law, shall be liable to a fine of double the amount of the tax imposed thereon, or to imprisonment for not less than three months. All distilled spirits so removed, and all distilled spirits found elsewhere than in a bonded warehouse, not having been removed from such warehouse according to law, and the tax imposed by law on the same not having been paid, shall be forfeited to the United States, or may, immediately upon discovery, be seized, and, after assessment of the tax thereon, may be sold by the collector for the tax and expenses of seizure and sale. And proceedings upon such seizure shall be according to existing provisions of law in relation to distraint, and in conformity with any regulations which shall be made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. And the burden of proof shall be upon the claimant of such spirits to show that the requirements of law in regard to the same have been complied with. And any person who shall aid or abet in the removal of distilled spirits from any distillery otherwise than to a bonded warehouse as provided by law, or shall aid in the concealment of such spirits so removed, shall be liable, on conviction thereof, to a fine of not less than two hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or to imprisonment for not less than three nor more than twelve months. And any person who shall remove, or shall aid or abet in the removal of any distilled spirits from any bonded warehouse, other than is allowed by law, shall be liable to a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, or to imprisonment not less than three nor more than twelve months.

SEC. 46. And be it further enacted, That every brewer shall, before commencing or continuing business after this act takes effect, file with the assistant assessor of the assessment district in which he shall design to carry on his business, a notice in writing, stating therein the name of the person, company, corporation, or firm, and the names of the members of any such company or firm, together with the place or places of residence of such person or persons, and a description of the premises on which the brewery is situated, and his or their title thereto, and the name or names of the owner or owners thereof; and also the whole quantity of malt liquors annually made and sold or removed from the brewery for two years next preceding the date of filing such notice.

SEC. 47. And be it further enacted, That every brewer shall execute a bond to the United States, to be approved by the collector of the district, in a sum equal to twice the amount of tax which, in the opinion of the assessor, said brewer will be liable to pay during any one month, which

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

bond shall be renewed on the first day of May in each year, and shall be conditioned that he will pay, or cause to be paid, as herein provided, the tax required by law on all beer, lager beer, ale, porter, and other fermented liquors aforesaid made by him, or for him, before the same is sold or removed for consumption or sale, except as hereinafter provided; and that he will keep, or cause to be kept, a book in the manner and for the purposes hereinafter specified, which shall be open to inspection by the proper officers as by law required, and that he will in all respects faithfully comply, without fraud or evasion, with all requirements of law relating to the manufacture and sale of any malt liquors before mentioned: Provided, That no brewer shall be required to pay a special tax as a wholesale dealer, by reason of selling at wholesale, at a place other than his brewery, malt liquors manufactured by him.

SEC. 48. And be it further enacted, That there shall be paid on all beer, lager beer, ale, porter, and other similar fermented liquors, by whatever name such liquors may be called, a tax of one dollar for every barrel containing not more than thirty-one gallons; and at a like rate for any other quantity or for any fractional part of a barrel which shall be brewed or manufactured and sold, or removed for consumption or sale, within the United States; which tax shall be paid by the owner, agent, or superintendent of the brewery or premises in which such fermented liquors shall be made, in the manner and at the time hereinafter specified: Provided, That fractional parts of a barrel shall be halves, quarters, sixths, and eighths; and any fractional part of a barrel containing less than one eighth shall be accounted one eighth; more than one eighth and not more than one sixth, shall be accounted one sixth; more than one sixth and not more than one quarter, shall be accounted one quarter; more than one quarter and not more than one half, shall be accounted one half; more than one half and not more than one barrel, shall be accounted one barrel; and more than one barrel and not more than sixty-three gallons, shall be accounted two barrels, or a hogshead.

SEC. 49. And be it further enacted, That every person owning or occupying any brewery or premises used, or intended to be used, for the purpose of brewing or making such fermented liquors, or who shall have such premises under his control or superintendence as agent for the owner or occupant, or shall have in his possession or custody any brewing materials, utensils, or apparatus, used or intended to be used on said premises in the manufacture of beer, lager beer, ale, porter, or other similar fermented liquors, either as owner, agent, or superintendent, shall, from day to day, enter or cause to be entered, in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, the kind of such fermented liquors, the description of packages, and number of barrels and fractional parts of barrels of fermented liquors made, and also the quantity sold or removed for consumption or sale, and shall also, from day to day, enter or cause to be entered, in a separate book to be kept by him for that purpose, on [an] account of all material by him purchased for the purpose of producing such fermented liquors, including grain and malt; and shall render to said assessor or assistant assessor, on or before the tenth day of each month, a true statement in writing, taken from his books, of the whole quantity or number of barrels and fractional parts of barrels of fermented liquors brewed and sold, or removed for consumption or sale, during the preceding month; and shall verify, or cause to be verified, the said statement, and the facts therein set forth, by oath or affirmation to be taken before the assessor or assistant assessor of the district, according to the form required by law, and shall immediately forward to the collector of the district a duplicate of said statement, duly certified by the assessor or assistant assessor. And said books shall be open at all times for the inspection of any assessor or assistant assessor, collector, deputy collector, inspector, or revenue agent, who may take memorandums and transcripts therefrom.

SEC. 50. And be it further enacted, That the entries made in such books shall, on or before the tenth day of each month, be verified by the oath or affirmation of the person or persons by whom such entries shall have been made, which oath or affirmation shall be written in the book at the end of such entries, and be certified by the officer administering the same, and shall be in form as follows: "I do swear (or affirm) that the foregoing entries were made by me, and that they state truly, according to the best of my knowledge and belief, the whole quantity of fermented liquors brewed, the quantity sold, and the quantity removed from the brewery owned by — in the county of —. And further, that I have no knowledge of any matter or thing, required by law to be stated in said entries, which has been omitted therefrom." And the owner, agent, or superintendent aforesaid, shall also, in case the original entries made in his books shall not have been made by himself, subjoin thereto the following oath or affirmation, to be taken in manner as aforesaid: "I do swear (or affirm) that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, the foregoing entries fully set forth all the matters therein required by law, and that the same are just and true, and that I have taken all the means in my power to make them so."

SEC. 51. And be it further enacted, That the owner, agent, or superintendent of any brewery, vessels, or utensils used in making fermented liquors, who shall evade or attempt to evade the payment of the tax thereon, or fraudulently neglect or refuse to make true and exact entry and report of the same in the manner by law required, or to do or cause to be done any of the things by law required to be done by him as aforesaid, or who shall intentionally make false entry in said book or in said statement, or knowingly allow or procure the same to be done, shall forfeit, for every such offense, all the liquors made by him or for him, and all the vessels, utensils, and apparatus used in making the same, and be liable to a penalty of not less than five hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, to be recovered with costs of suit, and shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be imprisoned for a term not exceeding one year. And any brewer who shall neglect to keep the books, or refuse to furnish the account and duplicate thereof as provided by law, or who shall refuse to permit the proper officer to examine the books in the manner provided, shall, for every such refusal or neglect, forfeit and pay the sum of three hundred dollars.

SEC. 52. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall cause to be prepared, for the payment of the tax aforesaid, suitable stamps denoting the amount of tax required to be paid on the hogshead, barrels, and halves, quarters, sixths, and eighths of a barrel of such fermented liquors, and shall furnish the same to the collectors of internal revenue, who shall each be required to keep on hand, at all times, a supply equal in amount to two months' sales thereof, if there shall be any brewery or brewery warehouse in his district, and the same shall be sold by such collectors only to the brewers of their districts, respectively; and such collectors shall keep an account of the number and values of the stamps sold by them to each of such brewers, respectively; and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall allow upon all sales of such stamps to any brewer, and by him used in his business, a deduction [deduction] of seven and one half per centum. And the amount paid into the Treasury by any collector on account of the sale of such stamps to brewers shall be included in estimating the commissions of such collector and of the assessor of the same district.

SEC. 53. And be it further enacted, That every brewer shall obtain, from the collector of the district in which his brewery or brewery warehouse may be situated, and not otherwise, unless said collector shall fail to furnish the same upon application to him, the proper stamp or stamps, and shall affix upon the spigot-hole or tap (of which there shall be but one) of each and every hogshead, barrel, keg, or other receptacle, in which any fermented liquor shall be contained, when sold or removed from such brewery or warehouse, a stamp denoting the amount of the tax required upon such fermented liquor, in such a way that the said stamp or stamps will be destroyed upon the withdrawal of the liquor from such hogshead, barrel, keg, or other vessel, or upon the introduction of a faucet or other instrument for that purpose; and shall also, at the time of affixing such stamp or stamps as aforesaid, cancel the same by writing or imprinting thereon the name of the person, firm, or corporation by whom such liquor may have been made, or the initial letters thereof, and the date when canceled. Every brewer who shall refuse or neglect to affix and cancel the stamp or stamps required by law in the manner aforesaid, or who shall affix a false or fraudulent stamp thereto, or knowingly permit the same to be done, shall be liable to pay a penalty of one hundred dollars for each barrel or package on which such omission or fraud occurs, and shall be liable to imprisonment for not more than one year.

SEC. 54. And be it further enacted, That any brewer, carman, agent for transportation, or other person, who shall sell, remove, receive, or purchase, or in any way aid in the sale, removal, receipt, or purchase of any fermented liquor contained in any hogshead, barrel, keg, or other vessel from any brewery or brewery warehouse, upon which the stamp required by law shall not have been affixed, or on which a false or fraudulent stamp is affixed, with knowledge that it is such, or on which a stamp once canceled is used a second time; and any retail dealer or other person, who shall withdraw, or aid in the withdrawal of any fermented liquor from any hogshead, barrel, keg, or other vessel containing the same, without destroying or defacing the stamp affixed upon the same, or shall withdraw or aid in the withdrawal of any fermented liquor from any hogshead, barrel, keg, or other vessel, upon which the proper stamp shall not have been affixed, or on which a false or fraudulent stamp is affixed, shall be liable to a fine of one hundred dollars, and to imprisonment not more than one year. Every person who shall make, sell, or use any false or counterfeit stamp or die for printing or making stamps which shall be in imitation of or purport to be a lawful stamp or die of the kind before mentioned, or who shall procure the same to be done, shall be imprisoned for not less than one nor more than five years: Provided, That every brewer, who sells fermented liquor at retail at the brewery or other place where the same is made, shall affix and cancel the proper stamp or stamps upon the hogsheads, barrels, kegs, or other vessels in which the same is contained, and shall keep an account of the quantity so sold by him, and of the number and size of the hogsheads, barrels, kegs, or other vessels in which the same may have been contained, and shall make a report thereof, verified by oath, monthly to the assessor, and forward a duplicate of same to the collector of the district: And provided further, That brewers may remove malt liquors of their own manufacture from their breweries or other places of manufacture to a warehouse or other place of storage occupied by them within the same district in quantities of not less than six barrels in one vessel without affixing the proper stamp or stamps, but shall affix the same upon such liquor when sold or removed from such warehouse or other place of storage. But when the manufacturer of any ale or porter manufactures the same in one collection district, and owns, occupies, or hires a depot or warehouse for the storage and sale of such ale or porter in another collection district, he may, without affixing the stamps on the casks at the brewery, as herein provided for, remove or transport, or cause to be removed or transported, said ale or porter, in quantities not less than one hundred barrels at a time, under a permit from the collector of the district wherein said ale or porter is manufactured, to said depot or warehouse, but to no other place, under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may prescribe, and thereafter the manufacturer of the ale or porter so removed shall stamp the same when it leaves such depot or warehouse, in the same manner and under the same penalties and liabilities as when stamped at the brewery as herein provided; and the collector of the district in which such depot or warehouse is situated shall furnish the manufacturer with the stamps for stamping the same, as if the said ale or porter had been manufactured in his district: And provided further, That where fermented liquor has become sour or damaged, so as to be incapable of use as such, brewers may sell the same for manufacturing purposes, and may remove the same to places where it may be used for such purposes, in casks, or other vessels, unlike those ordinarily used for fermented liquors, containing respectively not less than one barrel each, and having the nature of their contents marked upon them, without affixing thereon the stamp or stamps required.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 55. And be it further enacted, That every brewer shall mark or cause to be marked, in such manner as shall be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, upon every hogshead, barrel, keg, or other vessel containing the fermented liquor made by him, before it is sold or removed from the brewery, or brewery warehouse, or other place of manufacture, the name of the person, firm, or corporation by whom such liquor was manufactured, and the place where the same shall have been made; and any person other than the owner thereof, or his agent, who shall intentionally remove or deface such mark therefrom, shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars for each cask from which the mark is so removed or defaced.

SEC. 56. And be it further enacted, That every person other than the purchaser or owner of any fermented liquor, or person acting on his behalf, or as his agent, who shall intentionally remove or deface the stamp affixed upon the hogshead, barrel, keg, or other vessel, in which the same may be contained, shall be liable to a fine of fifty dollars for each such vessel from which the stamp is so removed or defaced, and to render compensation to such purchaser or owner for all damages sustained by him therefrom.

SEC. 57. And be it further enacted, That the ownership or possession by any person of any fermented liquor after its sale or removal from brewery or warehouse, or other place where it was made, upon which the tax required shall not have been paid, shall render the same liable to seizure wherever found, and to forfeiture; and that the want of the proper stamp or stamps upon any hogshead, barrel, keg, or other vessel in which fermented liquor may be contained after its sale or removal from the brewery where the same was made, or warehouse as aforesaid, shall be notice to all persons that the tax has not been paid thereon, and shall be prima facie evidence of the non-payment thereof.

SEC. 58. And be it further enacted, That every person who shall withdraw any fermented liquor from any hogshead, barrel, keg, or other vessel upon which the proper stamp or stamps shall not have been affixed, for the purpose of bottling the same, or who shall carry on, or attempt to carry on, the business of bottling fermented liquor in any brewery or other place in which fermented liquor is made, or upon any premises having communication with such brewery or any warehouse, shall be liable to a fine of five hundred dollars, and the property used in such bottling or business shall be liable to forfeiture.

SEC. 59. And be it further enacted, That any inspector or revenue agent who shall hereafter become interested, directly or indirectly, in the manufacture of tobacco, snuff, or cigars, and any assessor, collector, inspector, or revenue agent, who shall hereafter become interested, directly or indirectly, in the production, by distillation, or by other process, of spirits, ale, or beer, or other fermented liquors, shall, on conviction before any court of the United States of competent jurisdiction, pay a penalty not less than five hundred dollars, nor more than five thousand dollars, in the discretion of the court. And any such officer interested as aforesaid in any such manufacture at the time this act takes effect, who shall fail to divest himself of such interest within sixty days thereafter, shall be held and declared to have become so interested after this act takes effect.

SEC. 60. And be it further enacted, That every internal revenue officer, whose payment, charges, salary, or compensation shall be composed, either wholly or in part, of fees, commissions, allowances, or rewards, from whatever source derived, shall be required to render to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, under regulations to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, a statement under oath setting forth the entire amount of such fees, commissions, emoluments or rewards of whatever nature, or from whatever source received, during the time for which said statement is rendered; and any false statement knowingly and willfully rendered under the requirements of this section, or regulations established in accordance therewith, shall be deemed willful perjury, and punished on conviction thereof, as provided in section forty-two of the act of June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to which this act is an amendment; and any neglect or omission to render such statement when required shall be punished on conviction thereof by a fine of not less than two hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 61. And be it further enacted, That so much of this act as changes the existing law relating to distilled spirits and fermented liquors shall take effect from and after the first day of September, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

SEC. 62. And be it further enacted, That if any person or persons shall, directly or indirectly, promise, offer, or give, or cause or procure to be promised, offered, or given, any money, goods, right in action, bribe, present or reward, or any promise, contract, undertaking, obligation, or security for the payment or delivery of any money, goods, right in action, bribe, present, or reward, or any other valuable thing whatever to any officer of the United States, or person holding any place of trust or profit, or discharging any official function under, or in connection with, any department of the Government of the United States, after the passage of this act, with intent to influence his decision or action on any question, matter, cause, or thing which may then be pending, or may by law be brought before him in his official capacity, or in his place of trust or profit, or with intent to influence any such officer or person to commit, or aid or abet in committing, any fraud on the revenue of the United States, or to connive at or collude in, or to allow or permit, or make opportunity for the commission of any such fraud, and shall be thereof convicted, such person or persons so offering, promising, or giving, or causing, or procuring to be promised, offered, or given any such money, goods, right in action, bribe, present, or reward, or any promise, contract, undertaking, obligation, or security for the payment or delivery of any money, goods, right in action, bribe, present, or reward, or other valuable thing whatever, and the officer or person who shall in anywise accept or receive the same, or any part respectively shall be liable to indictment in any court of the United States, having jurisdiction, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not exceeding three times the amount so offered, promised, given, accepted, or received, and imprisoned not exceeding three years; and the person convicted of so accepting or receiving the same, or any part thereof, if an officer or person holding any such place of trust or profit, shall forfeit his office or place; and any person so convicted under this section shall forever be disqualified to hold any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States.

SEC. 63. And be it further enacted, That hereafter in all cases of seizure of any goods, wares, or merchandise which shall, in the opinion of the collector or deputy collector making such seizure, be of the appraised value of three hundred dollars or less, and which shall have been so seized as being subject to forfeiture under any of the provisions of this act, or of any act to which this is an amendment, excepting in cases otherwise provided, the said collector or deputy collector shall proceed as follows, that is to say: he shall cause a list containing a particular description of the goods, wares, or merchandise seized to be prepared in duplicate, and an appraisement of the same to be made by three sworn appraisers, to be selected by him for said purpose, who shall be respectable and disinterested citizens of the United States residing within the collection district wherein the seizure was made. The aforesaid list and appraisement shall be properly attested by such collector or deputy collector and the persons making the appraisement, for which service said appraisers shall be allowed the sum of one dollar and fifty cents per day each, to be paid as other necessary charges of collectors according to law. If the said goods shall be found by such appraisers to be of the value of three hundred dollars or less, the said collector or deputy collector shall publish a notice, for the space of three weeks, in some newspaper of the district where the seizure was made, describing the articles and stating the time, place, and cause of their seizure, and requiring any person or persons claiming them to appear and make such claim within thirty days from the date of the first publication of such notice: Provided, That any person or persons claiming the goods, wares, or merchandise, so seized, within the time specified in the notice, may file with such collector or deputy collector a claim, stating his or their interest in the articles seized, and may execute a bond to the United States in the penal sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, with sureties, to be approved by said collector or deputy collector, conditioned that, in case of condemnation of the articles so seized, the obligors will pay all the costs and expenses of the proceedings, to obtain such condemnation; and upon the delivery of such bond to the collector or deputy collector, he shall transmit the same, with the duplicate list or description of the goods seized, to the United States district attorney for the district, who shall proceed thereon in the ordinary manner prescribed by law: And provided also, That if there shall be no claim interposed, and no bond given within the time above specified, the collector or deputy collector, as the case may be, shall give ten days' notice of the sale of the goods, wares, or merchandise, by publication; and at the time and place specified in said notice, shall sell the article so seized at public auction, and after deducting the expense of appraisement and sale he shall deposit the proceeds to the credit of the Secretary of the Treasury. And within one year after the sale of any goods, wares, or merchandise, as aforesaid, any person or persons claiming to be interested in the goods, wares, or merchandise so sold may apply to the Secretary of the Treasury for a remission of the forfeiture thereof, or any of them, and a restoration of the proceeds of the said sale, which may be granted by the said Secretary upon satisfactory proof, to be furnished in such manner as he shall prescribe: Provided, That it shall be satisfactorily shown that the applicant, at the time of the seizure and sale of the goods in question, and during the intervening time, was absent out of the United States, or in such circumstances as prevented him from knowing of such seizure, and that he did not know of the same; and also that the said forfeiture was incurred without willful negligence or any intention of fraud on the part of the owner or owners of such goods. If no application for such restoration be made within one year, as hereinbefore prescribed, then, at the expiration of the said time, the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause the proceeds of the sale of the said goods, wares, or merchandise to be distributed according to law, as in the case of goods, wares, or merchandise condemned and sold pursuant to the decree of a competent court.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

SEC. 64. And be it further enacted, That the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue be reorganized so as to include—

One Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with a salary of six thousand dollars; and

One deputy commissioner, with a salary of three thousand five hundred dollars;

Which offices are already created, and the duties thereof defined by law; and to authorize, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, the employment of the following additional officers and clerks, and with the salaries hereinafter specified, namely:

Two deputy commissioners, each with a salary of three thousand dollars;

One solicitor, with a salary of four thousand dollars;

Seven heads of divisions, each with a salary of two thousand five hundred dollars;

Thirty-four clerks of class four; forty-five clerks of class three; fifty clerks of class two; and thirty-seven clerks of class one;

Fifty-five female clerks; five messengers.

Three assistant messengers, and fifteen laborers; and a sum sufficient to pay the additional salaries of officers, clerks, and employes herein authorized is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; and this section shall take effect from and after the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

SEC. 65. And be it further enacted, That all official communications made by assessors to collectors, assessors to assessors, or by collectors to collectors, or by collectors to assessors, or by assessors to assistant assessors, or by assistant assessors to assessors, or by collectors to their deputies, or by deputy collectors to collectors, may be officially franked by the writers thereof, and shall, when so franked, be transmitted by mail free of postage.

SEC. 66. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to appoint an officer in his Department who shall be styled "special commissioner of the revenue," whose office shall terminate in four years from the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six. It shall be the duty of the special commissioner of the revenue to inquire into all the sources of national revenue, and the best methods of collecting the revenue; the relations of foreign trade to domestic industry; the mutual adjustment of the systems of taxation by customs and excise, with the view of insuring the requisite revenue with the least disturbance or inconvenience to the progress of industry and the development of the resources of the country; and to inquire, from time to time, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, into the manner in which officers charged with the administration and collection of the revenues perform their duties. And the said special commissioner of the revenue shall from time to time report, through the Secretary of the Treasury, to Congress, either in the form of a bill or otherwise, such modifications of the rates of taxation or of the methods of collecting the revenues, and such other facts pertaining to the trade, industry, commerce, or taxation of the country, as he may find, by actual observation of the operation of the law, to be conducive to the public interest; and, in order to enable the special commissioner of the revenue to properly conduct his investigations, he is hereby empowered to examine the books, papers, and accounts of any officer of the revenue, to administer oaths, examine and summon witnesses, and take testimony; and each and every such person falsely swearing or affirming shall be subject to the penalties and disabilities prescribed by law for the punishment of corrupt and willful perjury; and all officers of the Government are hereby required to extend to the said commissioner all reasonable facilities for the collection of information pertinent to the duties of his office. And the said special commissioner shall be paid an annual salary of four thousand dollars, and the traveling expenses necessarily incurred while in the discharge of his duty; and all letters and documents to and from the special commissioner relating to the duties and business of his office shall be transmitted by mail free of postage. And section nineteen of an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes,' approved June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 67. And be it further enacted, That in any case, civil or criminal, where suit or prosecution shall be commenced in any court of any State against any officer of the United States, appointed under or acting by authority of the act entitled "An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," passed June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, or of any act in addition thereto or in amendment thereof, or against any person acting under or by authority of any such officer on account of any act done under color of his office, or against any person holding property or estate by title derived from any such officer, concerning such property or estate, and affecting the validity of this act or acts of which it is amendatory, it shall be lawful for the defendant, in such suit or prosecution, at any time before trial, upon a petition to the circuit court of the United States in and for the district in which the defendant shall have been served with process, setting forth the nature of said suit or prosecution, and verifying the said petition by affidavit, together with a certificate, signed by an attorney or counselor at law of some court of record of the State in which such suit shall have been commenced, or of the United States, setting forth that, as counsel for the petitioner, he has examined the proceedings against him, and carefully inquired into all the matters set forth in the petition, and that he believes the same to be true; which petition, affidavit, and certificate shall be presented to the said circuit court if in session, and if not, to the clerk thereof, at his office, and shall be filed in said office, and the cause shall thereupon be entered on the docket of said court, and shall be thereafter proceeded in as a cause, originally commenced in that court; and it shall be the duty of the clerk of said court, if the suit were commenced in the court below by summons, to issue a writ of certiorari to the State court, requiring said court to send to the said circuit court the record and proceedings in said cause; or if it were commenced by capias, he shall issue a writ of habeas corpus cum causa, a duplicate of which said writ shall be delivered to the clerk of the State court, or left at his office by the marshal of the district, or his deputy, or some person duly authorized thereto; and thereupon it shall be the duty of the said State court to stay all further proceedings in such cause, and the said suit or prosecution, upon delivery of such process, or leaving the same as aforesaid, shall be deemed and taken to be moved to the said circuit court, and any further proceedings, trial, or judgment therein in the State court shall be wholly null and void. And if the defendant in any such suit be in actual custody on mesne process therein, it shall be the duty of the marshal, by virtue of the writ of habeas corpus cum causa, to take the body of the defendant into his custody, to be dealt with in the said cause according to the rules of law and the order of the circuit court, or of any judge thereof in vacation. All attachments made and all bail and other security given upon such suit or prosecution shall be and continue in like force and effect as if the same suit or prosecution had proceeded to final judgment and execution in the State court; and if, upon removal of any such suit or prosecution, it shall be made appear to the said circuit court that no copy of the record and proceedings therein in the State court can be obtained, it shall be lawful for said circuit court to allow and require the plaintiff to proceed de novo, and to file a declaration of his cause of action, and the parties may thereupon proceed as in action[s] originally brought in said circuit court; and, on failure of so proceeding, judgment of nolle prosequi may be rendered against the plaintiff, with costs for the defendant: Provided, That an act entitled "An act further to provide for the collection of duties on imports," passed March second, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, shall not be so construed as to apply to cases arising under an act entitled "An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," passed June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, or any act in addition thereto or in amendment thereof, nor to any case in which the validity or interpretation of said act or acts shall be in issue: Provided further, That if any officer appointed under and by virtue of any act to provide internal revenue, or any person acting under or by authority of any such officer, shall receive any injury to his person or property, for or on account of any act by him done, under any law of the United States, for the collection of taxes, he shall be entitled to maintain suit for damage therefor in the circuit court of the United States, in the district wherein the party doing the injury may reside or shall be found. And all property taken or detained by any officer or other person under authority of any revenue law of the United States shall be irrepleviable, and shall be deemed to be in the custody of the law, and subject only to the orders and decrees of the courts of the United States having jurisdiction thereof. And if any person shall dispossess or rescue, or attempt to dispossess or rescue, any property so taken or detained as aforesaid, or shall aid or assist therein, such person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable to such punishment as is provided by the twenty-second section of the act for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States, approved the thirtieth day of April, anno Domini one thousand seven hundred and ninety, for the willful obstruction or resistance of officers in the service of process.

SEC. 68. And be it further enacted, That the fiftieth section of an act passed June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," is hereby repealed: Provided, That any case which may have been removed from the courts of any State under said fiftieth section to the courts of the United States shall be remanded to the State court from which it was so removed, with all the records relating to such cases, unless the justice of the circuit court of the United States in which such suit or prosecution is pending shall be of opinion that said case would be removable from the court of the State to the circuit court under and by virtue of the sixty-seventh section of this act. And in all cases which may have been removed from any court of any State under and by virtue of said fiftieth section of said act of June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, all attachments made, and all bail or other security given upon such suit or prosecution, shall be and continue in full force and effect until final judgment and execution, whether such suit shall be prosecuted to final judgment in the circuit court of the United States, or remanded to the State court from which it was removed.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 69. And be it further enacted, That whenever a writ of error shall be issued for the revision of any judgment or decree in any criminal proceeding where is drawn in question the construction of any statute of the United States, in a court of any State, as is provided in the twenty-fifth section of an act entitled "An act to establish the judicial courts of the United States," passed September twenty-fourth, seventeen hundred and eighty-nine, the defendant, if charged with an offense bailable by the laws of such State, shall not be released from custody until a final judgment upon such writ, or until a bond, with sufficient sureties, in a reasonable sum, as ordered and approved by the State court, shall be given; and if the offense is not so bailable, until a final judgment upon the writ of error. Writs of error in criminal cases shall have precedence upon the docket of the Supreme Court of all cases to which the Government of the United States is not a party, excepting only such cases as the court, at their discretion, may decide to be of public importance.

SEC. 70. And be it further enacted, That this act shall take effect, where not otherwise provided, on the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and all provisions of any former act inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed: Provided, however, That all the provisions of said acts shall be in force for collecting all taxes, duties and licenses properly assessed or liable to be assessed, or accruing under the provisions of acts, the right to which has already accrued or which may hereafter accrue under said acts, and for maintaining and continuing liens, fines, penalties, and forfeitures incurred under and by virtue thereof, and for carrying out and completing all proceedings which have been already commenced, or that may be commenced, to enforce such fines, penalties, and forfeitures, or criminal proceedings under said acts, and for the punishment of crimes of which any party shall be or has been found guilty: And provided further, That whenever the duty imposed by any existing law shall cease in consequence of any limitation therein contained before the respective provisions of this act shall take effect, the same duty shall be, and is hereby, continued until such provisions of this act shall take effect; and where any act is hereby repealed, no duty imposed thereby shall be held to cease, in consequence of such repeal, until the respective corresponding provisions of this act shall take effect: And provided further, That all manufactures and productions on which a duty was imposed by either of the acts repealed by this act, which shall be in the possession of the manufacturer or producer, or of his agent or agents, on the day when this act takes effect, the duty imposed by any such former act not having been paid, shall be held and deemed to have been manufactured or produced after such date; and whenever by the terms of this act a duty is imposed upon any articles, goods, wares, or merchandise, manufactured or produced, upon which no duty was imposed by either of said former acts, it shall apply to such as were manufactured or produced, and not removed from the place of manufacture or production, on the day when this act takes effect. And the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, is authorized to make all necessary regulations and prescribe all necessary forms and proceedings for the collection of such taxes and the enforcement of such fines and penalties for the execution of the provisions of this act.

SEC. 71. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to have this act, and the acts to which it is amendatory, published in at least one German newspaper in each of the States of the Union where such paper may be published.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CC.—An Act to continue in force and to amend "An Act to establish a Bureau for the Relief of Freedmen and Refugees," and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act to establish a Bureau for the Relief of Freedmen and Refugees, approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, shall continue in force for the term of two years from and after the passage of this act.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the supervision and care of said bureau shall extend to all loyal refugees and freedmen, so far as the same shall be necessary to enable them as speedily as practicable to become self-supporting citizens of the United States, and to aid them in making the freedom conferred by proclamation of the Commander-in-Chief, by emancipation under the laws of States, and by constitutional amendment, available to them and beneficial to the Republic.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the President shall, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint two assistant commissioners, in addition to those authorized by the act to which this is an amendment, who shall give like bonds and receive the same annual salaries provided in said act, and each of the assistant commissioners of the bureau shall have charge of one district containing such refugees or freedmen, to be assigned him by the Commissioner with the approval of the President. And the Commissioner shall, under the direction of the President, and so far as the same shall be, in his judgment, necessary for the efficient and economical administration of the affairs of the bureau, appoint such agents, clerks, and assistants as may be required for the proper conduct of the bureau. Military officers or enlisted men may be detailed for service and assigned to duty under this act; and the President may, if in his judgment safe and judicious so to do, detail from the Army all the officers and agents of this bureau; but no officer so assigned shall have increase of pay or allowances. Each agent or clerk, not heretofore authorized by law, not being a military officer, shall have an annual salary of not less than five hundred dollars, nor more than twelve hundred dollars, according to the service required of him. And it shall be the duty of the Commissioner, when it can be done consistently with public interest, to appoint, as assistant commissioners, agents, and clerks, such men as have proved their loyalty by faithful service in the armies of the Union during the rebellion. And all persons appointed to service under this act and the act to which this is an amendment, shall be so far deemed in the military service of the United States as to be under the military jurisdiction, and entitled to the military protection of the Government while in discharge of the duties of their office.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That officers of the Veteran Reserve corps or of the volunteer service, now on duty in the Freedmen's Bureau as assistant commissioners, agents, medical officers, or in other capacities, whose regiments or corps have been or may hereafter be mustered out of service, may be retained upon such duty as officers of said bureau, with the same compensation as is now provided by law for their respective grades; and the Secretary of War shall have power to fill vacancies until other officers can be detailed in their places without detriment to the public service.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the second section of the act to which this is an amendment shall be deemed to authorize the Secretary of War to issue such medical stores or other supplies and transportation, and afford such medical or other aid as here may be needful for the purposes named in said section: Provided, That no person shall be deemed "destitute," "suffering," or "dependent upon the Government for support," within the meaning of this act, who is able to find employment, and could, by proper industry or exertion, avoid such destitution, suffering, or dependence.

SEC. 6. Whereas, by the provisions of an act approved February sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act for the collection of direct taxes in insurrectionary districts within the United States, and for other purposes,' approved June seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-two," certain lands in the parishes of St. Helena and Saint Luke, South Carolina, were bid in by the United States at public tax sales, and by the limitation of said act the time of redemption of said lands has expired; and whereas, in accordance with instructions issued by President Lincoln on the sixteenth day of September, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, to the United States direct tax commissioners for South Carolina, certain lands bid in by the United States in the parish of Saint Helena, in said State, were in part sold by the said tax commissioners to "heads of families of the African race," in parcels of not more than twenty acres to each purchaser; and whereas, under said instructions, the said tax commissioners did also set apart as "school farms" certain parcels of land in said parish, numbered on their plats from one to thirty-three, inclusive, making an aggregate of six thousand acres, more or less: Therefore, be it further enacted, That the sales made to "heads of families of the African race," under the instructions of President Lincoln to the United States direct tax commissioners for South Carolina, of date of September sixteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, are hereby confirmed and established; and all leases which have been made to such "heads of families," by said direct tax commissioners, shall be changed into certificates of sale in all cases wherein the lease provides for such substitution; and all the lands now remaining unsold, which come within the same designation, being eight thousand acres, more or less, shall be disposed of according to said instructions.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That all other lands bid in by the United States at tax sales, being thirty-eight thousand acres more or less, and now in the hands of the said tax commissioners as the property of the United States, in the parishes of Saint Helena and Saint Luke, excepting the "school farms," as specified in the preceding section, and so much as may be necessary for military and naval purposes at Hilton Head, Bay Point, and Land's End, and excepting also the city of Port Royal, on Saint Helena Island, and the town of Beaufort, shall be disposed of in parcels of twenty acres, at one dollar and fifty cents per acre, to such persons and to such only as have acquired and are now occupying lands under and agreeably to the provisions of General Sherman's special field order, dated at Savannah, Georgia, January sixteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five; and the remaining lands, if any, shall be disposed of in like manner to such persons as had acquired lands agreeably to the said order of General Sherman, but who have been dispossessed by the restoration of the same to former owners: Provided, That the lands sold in compliance with the provisions of this and the preceding section shall not be alienated by their purchasers within six years from and after the passage of this act.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG. ... 1ST SESS.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the "school farms" in the parish of Saint Helena, South Carolina, shall be sold, subject to any leases of the same, by the said tax commissioners, at public auction, on or before the first day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, at not less than ten dollars per acre; and the lots in the city of Port Royal, as laid down by the said tax commissioners, and the lots and houses in the town of Beaufort, which are still held in like manner, shall be sold at public auction; and the proceeds of said sales, after paying expenses of the surveys and sales, shall be invested in United States bonds, the interest of which shall be appropriated, under the direction of the Commissioner, to the support of schools, without distinction of color or race, on the islands in the parishes of Saint Helena and Saint Luke.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the assistant commissioners for South Carolina and Georgia are hereby authorized to examine all claims to lands in their respective States which are claimed under the provisions of General Sherman's special field order, and to give each person having a valid claim a warrant upon the direct tax commissioners for South Carolina for twenty acres of land; and the said direct tax commissioners shall issue to every person, or to his or her heirs, but in no case to any assigns, presenting such warrant, a lease of twenty acres of land, as provided for in section seven, for the term of six years; but at any time thereafter, upon the payment of a sum not exceeding one dollar and fifty cents per acre, the person holding such lease shall be entitled to a certificate of sale of said tract of twenty acres from the direct tax commissioner or such officer as may be authorized to issue the same; but no warrant shall be held valid longer than two years after the issue of the same.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the direct tax commissioners for South Carolina are hereby authorized and required at the earliest day practicable to survey the lands designated in section seven into lots of twenty acres each, with proper metes and bounds distinctly marked, so that the several tracts shall be convenient in form, and as near as practicable have an average of fertility and woodland; and the expense of such surveys shall be paid from the proceeds of sales of said lands, or, if sooner required, out of any moneys received for other lands on these islands, sold by the United States for taxes, and now in the hands of the direct tax commissioners.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That restoration of lands occupied by freedmen under General Sherman's field order dated at Savannah, Georgia, January sixteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, shall not be made until after the crops of the present year shall have been gathered by the occupants of said lands, nor until a fair compensation shall have been made to them by the former owners of such lands, or their legal representatives, for all improvements or betterments erected or constructed thereon, and after due notice of the same being done shall have been given by the assistant commissioner.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner shall have power to seize, hold, use, lease, or sell all buildings and tenements, and any lands appertaining to the same, or otherwise, formerly held under color of title by the late so-called confederate States, and not heretofore disposed of by the United States, and any buildings or lands held in trust for the same by any person or persons, and to use the same or appropriate the proceeds derived therefrom to the education of the freed people; and whenever the bureau shall cease to exist, such of said so-called confederate States as shall have made provision for the education of their citizens without distinction of color shall receive the sum remaining unexpended of such sales or rentals, which shall be distributed among said States for educational purposes in proportion to their population.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of this bureau shall at all times cooperate with private benevolent associations of citizens in aid of freedmen, and with agents and teachers, duly accredited and appointed by them, and shall hire or provide by lease buildings for purposes of education whenever such associations shall, without cost to the Government, provide suitable teachers and means of instruction; and he shall furnish such protection as may be required for the safe conduct of such schools.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That in every State or district where the ordinary course of judicial proceedings has been interrupted by the rebellion, and until the same shall be fully restored, and in every State or district whose constitutional relations to the Government have been practically discontinued by the rebellion, and until such State shall have been restored in such relations, and shall be duly represented in the Congress of the United States, the right to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, and give evidence, to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey real and personal property, and to have full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings concerning personal liberty, personal security, and the acquisition, enjoyment, and disposition of estate, real and personal, including the constitutional right to bear arms, shall be secured to and enjoyed by all the citizens of such State or district without respect to race or color, or previous condition of slavery. And whenever in either of said States or districts the ordinary course of judicial proceedings has been interrupted by the rebellion, and until the same shall be fully restored, and until such State shall have been restored in its constitutional relations to the Government, and shall be duly represented in the Congress of the United States, the President shall, through the Commissioner and the officers of the bureau, and under such rules and regulations as the President, through the Secretary of War, shall prescribe, extend military protection and have military jurisdiction over all cases and questions concerning the free enjoyment of such immunities and rights, and no penalty or punishment for any violation of law shall be imposed or permitted because of race or color, or previous condition of slavery, other or greater than the penalty or punishment to which white persons may be liable by law for the like offense. But the jurisdiction conferred by this section upon the officers of the bureau shall not exist in any State where the ordinary course of judicial proceedings has not been interrupted by the rebellion, and shall cease in every State when the courts of the State and the United States are not disturbed in the peaceable course of justice, and after such State shall be fully restored in its constitutional relations to the Government, and shall be duly represented in the Congress of the United States.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That all officers, agents, and employés of this bureau, before entering upon the duties of their office shall take the oath prescribed in the first section of the act to which this is an amendment; and all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

SCHUYLER COLFAX,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

LA FAYETTE S. FOSTER,

President of the Senate pro tempore.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
UNITED STATES, July 16, 1866.

The President of the United States having returned to the House of Representatives, in which it originated, the bill entitled "An act to continue in force and to amend 'An act to establish a Bureau for the Relief of Freedmen and Refugees,' and for other purposes," with his objections thereto, the House of Representatives proceeded, in pursuance of the Constitution, to reconsider the same; and

Resolved, That the said bill pass, two thirds of the House of Representatives agreeing to pass the same.

Attest: EWD. McPHERSON,
Clerk H. Reps., U. S.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 16, 1866.

The Senate having proceeded, in pursuance of the Constitution, to reconsider the bill entitled "An act to continue in force and to amend 'An act to establish a Bureau for the Relief of Freedmen and Refugees,' and for other purposes," returned to the House of Representatives by the President of the United States, with his objections, and sent by the House of Representatives to the Senate with the message of the President returning the bill;

Resolved, That the bill do pass, two thirds of the Senate agreeing to pass the same.

Attest: J. W. FORNEY,
Secretary of the Senate, U. S.

CHAP. CCI.—An Act further to prevent Smuggling and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, for the purposes of this act, the term "vessel," whenever hereinafter used, shall be held to include every description of water-craft, raft, vehicle, and contrivance used or capable of being used as a means or auxiliary of transportation on or by water; and the term "vehicle," whenever hereinafter used, shall be held to include every description of carriage, wagon, engine, car, sleigh, sled, sledge, hurdle, cart, and other artificial contrivance, used or capable of being used as a means or auxiliary of transportation on land.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for any officer of the customs, including inspectors and occasional inspectors, or of a revenue-cutter, or authorized agent of the Treasury Department, or other person specially appointed for the purpose in writing by a collector, naval officer, or surveyor of the customs, to go on board of any vessel, as well without as within his district, and to inspect, search, and examine the same, and any person, trunk, or envelope on board, and to this end, to hail and stop such vessel if under way, and to use all necessary force to compel compliance; and if it shall appear that any breach or violation of the laws of the United States has been committed, whereby or in consequence of which, such vessel, or the goods, wares, and merchandise, or any part thereof, on board of or imported by such vessel, is or are liable to forfeiture, to make seizure of the same, or either or any part thereof, and to arrest, or in case of escape, or any attempt to escape, to pursue and arrest any person engaged in such breach or violation: Provided, That the original appointment in writing of any person specially appointed as aforesaid shall be filed in the custom-house where such appointment is made.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That any of the officers or persons authorized by the second section of this act to board or search vessels may stop, search, and examine, as well without as within their respective districts, any vehicle, beast, or person on which or whom he or they shall suspect there are goods, wares, or merchandise which are subject to duty or shall have been introduced into the United States in any manner contrary to law, whether by the person in possession or charge, or by, in, or upon such vehicle or beast, or otherwise, and to search any trunk or envelope, wherever found, in which he may have a reasonable cause to suspect there are goods which were imported contrary to law; and if any such officer or other person so authorized as aforesaid shall find any goods, wares, or merchandise, on or about any such vehicle, beast, or person, or in any such trunk or envelope, which he shall have reasonable cause to believe are subject to duty, or to have been unlawfully introduced into the United States, whether by the person in possession or charge, or by, in, or upon such vehicle, beast, or otherwise, he shall seize and secure the same for trial; and every such vehicle and beast, or either, together with teams or other motive-power used in conveying, drawing, or propelling such vehicle, goods, wares, or merchandise, and all other appurtenances, including trunks, envelopes, covers, and all means of concealment, and all the equipage, trappings, and other appurtenances of such beast, team, or vehicle shall be subject to seizure and forfeiture; and if any person who may be driving or conducting, or in charge of any such carriage or vehicle or beast, or any person traveling, shall willfully refuse to stop and allow search and examination to be made as herein provided, when required so to do by any authorized person, he or she shall, on conviction, be fined in any sum, in the discretion of the court convicting him or her, not exceeding one thousand dollars, nor less than fifty dollars; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time prescribe regulations for the search of persons and baggage, and for the employment of female inspectors for the examination and search of persons of their own sex; and all persons coming into the United States from foreign countries shall be liable to detention and search by authorized officers or agents of the Government, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time prescribe: Provided, That no railway car or engine or other vehicle, or team used by any person or corporation, as common carriers in the transaction of their business as such common carriers shall be subject to forfeiture by force of the provisions of this act unless it shall appear that the owners, superintendent, or agent of the owner in charge thereof at the time of such unlawful importation or transportation thereon or thereby, was a consenting party, or privy to such illegal importation or transportation.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall fraudulently or knowingly import or bring into the United States, or assist in so doing, any goods, wares, or merchandise, contrary to law, or shall receive, conceal, buy, sell, or in any manner facilitate the transportation, concealment, or sale of such goods, wares, or merchandise, after their importation, knowing the same to have been imported contrary to law, such goods, wares, and merchandise shall be forfeited, and he or she shall, on conviction thereof before any court of competent jurisdiction, be fined in any sum not exceeding five thousand dollars nor less than fifty dollars, or be imprisoned for any time not exceeding two years, or both, at the discretion of such court; and in all cases where the possession of such goods shall be shown to be in the defendant, or where the defendant shall be shown to have had possession thereof, such possession shall be deemed evidence sufficient to authorize conviction, unless the defendant shall explain the possession to the satisfaction of the jury.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That any person authorized by this act to make searches and seizures, or any person assisting him or acting under his directions, may, if deemed necessary by him or them, enter into or upon or pass through the lands, inclosures, and buildings, other than the dwelling-house of any person whomsoever, in the night or in the daytime, in order to the more effectual discharge of his or their official duties.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall forcibly assault, resist, oppose, prevent, impede, or interfere with any officer of the customs or his deputy or deputies, or any person assisting them or either of them in the execution of their duties, or any person authorized by this act to make searches or seizures, in the execution of his duty, or shall rescue, or attempt to rescue, or cause to be rescued, any property which shall have been seized by any person authorized as aforesaid, or shall before, at, or after any such seizure, in order to prevent the seizure or securing of any goods, wares, or merchandise by any person authorized as aforesaid, stave, break, throw overboard, destroy, or remove the same, the person so offending shall, for every such offense, on conviction thereof, forfeit and pay a sum of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than two thousand dollars, or shall be imprisoned not less than one month nor more than one year, or both, at the discretion of the court convicting him or her, and shall stand committed until such fine and the costs of prosecution shall have been fully paid; and if any person shall discharge any deadly weapon at any person authorized as aforesaid to make searches or seizures, or shall use any deadly or dangerous weapon in resisting him in the execution of his duty, with intent to commit a bodily injury upon him, or to deter or prevent him from discharging his duty, every such person so offending shall, upon conviction thereof, be deemed guilty of felony, and shall be imprisoned at hard labor for a term not exceeding ten years nor less than one year.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the several collectors of customs to report within ten days to the district attorney of the district in which any fine or personal penalty may be incurred for the violation of any law of the United States relating to the revenue, in all cases in which such fine or penalty shall not be voluntarily paid, a statement of all the facts and circumstances of the case within their knowledge, together with the names of the witnesses, and which may come to their knowledge from time to time, stating the provisions of the law believed to be violated, and on which a reliance may be had for a condemnation or conviction; and such district attorney shall cause suit and prosecution to be commenced and prosecuted without delay for the fines and personal penalties by law in such case provided, unless upon inquiry and examination he shall decide that a conviction cannot probably be obtained, or that the ends of public justice do not require that a suit or prosecution should be instituted, in which case he shall report the facts to the Secretary of the Treasury for his direction; and for expenses incurred and services rendered in prosecutions for such fines and personal penalties, the district attorney shall receive such allowance as the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem just and reasonable, upon the certificate of the judge before whom such prosecution was had; and if any collector shall in any case fail to report to the proper district attorney, as prescribed in this section, such collector's share of any fine or penalty imposed or incurred in such case shall be forfeited to the United States, and the same shall be awarded to such persons as may make complaint and prosecute the same to conviction.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That in any case where a vessel or the owner, master, or manager of a vessel shall be subject to a penalty for a violation of the revenue laws of the United States, such vessel shall be holden for the payment of such penalty, and may be seized and proceeded against summarily, by libel, to recover such penalty in any district court of the United States having jurisdiction of the offense.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the act entitled "An act further to regulate the entry of merchandise imported into the United States from any adjacent territory," approved March two, eighteen hundred and twenty-one, be, and the same is hereby, so amended that wherever in said act the word "merchandise" occurs, the same shall read "goods, wares, or merchandise."

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That every officer or other person authorized to make searches and seizures by this act shall, at the time of executing any of the powers conferred upon him by this act, make known, upon being questioned, his character as an officer or agent of the customs or Government, and shall have authority to demand of any person within the distance of three miles to assist him in making any arrest, search, or seizure authorized by this act, where such assistance may be necessary; and if such person shall without reasonable excuse neglect or refuse so to assist, upon proper demand, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall forfeit a sum not exceeding two hundred dollars, nor less than five dollars.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That in all cases of seizure of property subject to forfeiture for any of the causes named in this act, or any other act relating to the customs, or the registering, enrolling, or licensing of vessels, now in force, when, in the opinion of the collector or other principal officer of the revenue making such seizure, the value of the property so seized shall not exceed five hundred dollars, he shall cause a list and particular description of the property so seized to be prepared in duplicate, and an appraisement of the same to be made by two sworn appraisers under the revenue laws, if there are such appraisers at or near the place of seizure; but if there are no such appraisers, then by two competent and disinterested citizens of the United States, to be selected by him for that purpose, residing at or near the place of seizure; which list and appraisement shall be properly attested by such collector or other officer and the persons making the appraisal; and for such services of the appraisers they shall be allowed out of the revenue one dollar and fifty cents each for every day necessarily employed in such service. If the amount of such appraisal shall not exceed the sum of five hundred dollars, said collector or other principal officer shall publish a notice once a week for three successive weeks in some newspaper of the county or place where such seizure shall have been made, if any newspaper shall be published in said county; but if no newspaper shall be published in said county then such notice shall be published in some newspaper of the county in which the principal customs office of the district shall be situated; and if no newspaper shall be published in such county, then notices shall be posted in proper public places, which notices shall describe the articles seized, and state the time, cause, and place of seizure, and shall require any person claiming such articles to appear and file with such collector or other officer his claim to such articles within twenty days from the date of the first publication of such notice.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That any person claiming the property so seized may, at any time within twenty days from the date of such publication, file with the collector or other officer a claim, stating his or her interest in the articles seized, and, upon depositing with such collector or other officer a bond to the United States in the penal sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, with two sureties, to be approved by such collector or other officer, conditioned that, in case of the condemnation of the articles so claimed, the obligors shall pay all the costs and expenses of the proceedings to obtain such condemnation. Such collector

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

or other officer shall transmit the same, with the duplicate list and description of the articles seized and claimed, to the United States district attorney for the district, who shall proceed for a condemnation of the property in the ordinary mode prescribed by law. But if no such claim shall be filed nor bond given within the twenty days above specified, such collector or other officer shall give not less than fifteen days' notice of the sale of the property so seized, by publication in the manner before mentioned, and, at the time and place specified in such notice, he shall sell at public auction the property so seized, and shall deposit the proceeds, after deducting the actual expenses of such seizure, publication, and sale, to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, as shall be directed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That the collector shall have power to adjourn such sale from time to time for a period not exceeding thirty days in all.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That any person claiming to be interested in the property sold under the provisions of the preceding [preceding] section may, within three months after such sale, apply to the Secretary of the Treasury for a remission of the forfeiture, and a restoration of the proceeds of such sale, and the same may be granted by said Secretary, upon satisfactory proof, to be furnished in such manner as he shall direct, that the applicant, at the time of the seizure and sale of the property in question, did not know of the seizure, and was in such circumstances as prevented him from knowing of the same, and that said forfeiture was incurred without willful negligence or any intention of fraud on the part of the owner of such property.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That if no application for such remission or restoration shall be made within three months after such sale, the Secretary of the Treasury shall then cause the proceeds of such sale to be distributed in the same manner as if such property had been condemned and sold in pursuance of a decree of a competent court.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That whenever seizure shall be made of any property which, in the opinion of the appraisers, shall be liable to perish or waste, or to be greatly reduced in value by keeping, or cannot be kept without great disproportionate expense, whether such seizure consist of live animals, or goods, wares, or merchandise, and when the property thus seized shall not exceed five hundred dollars in value, and when no claim shall have been interposed therefor as is hereinbefore provided, the said appraisers, if requested by the collector or principal officer making the seizure at the time when such appraisal is made, shall certify on oath in their appraisal their belief that the property seized is liable to speedy deterioration, or that the expenses of its keeping will largely reduce the net proceeds of the sale; and in case the appraisers thus certify, such collector or other officer may proceed to advertise and sell the same at auction, by giving notice for such time as he may think reasonable, but not less than one week, of such seizure and intended sale, by advertisement as is hereinbefore provided; and the proceeds of such sale shall be deposited to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, subject, nevertheless, to the payment of such claims as shall be presented within three months from the day of sale, and allowed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall have authority to ascertain the facts upon all applications for remission of fines, penalties, and forfeitures incurred or accruing under the revenue laws, where the amount in question does not exceed one thousand dollars, in such manner and under such regulations as he may deem proper; and he may thereupon remit or mitigate such fines, penalties, or forfeitures, if in his opinion the same shall have been incurred without willful negligence or any intention of fraud.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That whenever the proper officer of the customs shall be duly notified of the existence of a lien upon imported goods, wares, or merchandise in his custody, he shall, before delivering such goods, wares, or merchandise to the importer, owner, or consignee thereof, give seasonable notice to the party or parties claiming the lien; and the possession by the officers of customs shall not affect the discharge of such lien: Provided, That the rights of the Government shall not be prejudiced thereby. And the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe all needful regulations to carry this provision into effect: And provided, That neither the United States nor its officers shall be in any manner liable for losses incurred in consequence of the omission by accident and without their fault of officers of the customs to give the notice aforesaid.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall be taken to abridge or limit any forfeiture, penalty, fine, liability, or remedy provided for or existing under any law now in force, except as herein otherwise specially provided.

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That where the value of goods, wares, or merchandise imported or brought into the United States shall not exceed one hundred dollars, the collector is authorized in his discretion to admit the same to entry without the production of the triplicate invoice required by the act of March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, entitled "An act to prevent and punish frauds," and so forth, and without submitting the question to the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That the collector shall be satisfied that the neglect to produce such invoice was unintentional, and that the importation was in good faith and without any purpose of defrauding or evading the revenue laws of the United States.

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That if any goods, wares, or merchandise shall, at any port or place in the United States on the northern, northeastern, or northwestern frontiers thereof, be laden upon any vessel belonging wholly or in part to a subject or subjects of a foreign country or countries, and shall be taken thence to a foreign port or place, to be reladen and reshipped to any other port or place in the United States on said frontiers, either by the same or any other vessel, foreign or American, with intent to evade the provisions of the fourth section of "the act concerning the navigation of the United States," approved March one, eighteen hundred and seventeen, the said goods, wares, and merchandise shall, on their arrival at such last-named port or place, be seized and forfeited to the United States, and the vessel shall pay a tonnage duty of fifty cents per ton on her admeasurement.

SEC. 21. And be it further enacted, That all steam tug-boats, not of the United States, found employed in towing documented vessels of the United States plying from one port or place in the same to another, shall forfeit and pay the sum of fifty cents per ton on the admeasurement of every such vessel so towed by them respectively, as aforesaid, which sum may be recovered by way of libel or suit.

SEC. 22. And be it further enacted, That if any vessel enrolled or licensed to engage in the foreign and coasting trade on the northern, northeastern, and northwestern frontiers of the United States, shall touch at any port or place in the adjacent British Provinces, and the master or other person having charge of such vessel shall purchase any goods, wares, or merchandise, for the use of said vessel, said master or other person having charge of said vessel shall report the same, with cost and quantity thereof, to the collector or other officer of the customs at the first port in the United States at which he shall next arrive, designating them "sea stores;" and in the oath to be taken by such master or other person in charge of such vessel, on making said report, he shall declare that the articles so specified or designated "sea stores" are truly intended for the use exclusively of said vessel, and are not intended for sale, transfer, or private use, and if, upon examination and inspection by the collector or other officer of the customs such articles are not deemed excessive in quantity for the use of said vessel for the voyage on which she is engaged, such articles shall be declared free of duty; but if it shall be found that the quantity or quantities of such articles or any part thereof so reported are excessive, it shall be lawful for the collector or other officer of the customs to estimate the amount of duty on such excess, which shall be forthwith paid by said master or other person having charge of said vessel, on pain of forfeiting a sum of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than four times the value of such excess, or said master or other person, having charge of such vessel shall be liable to imprisonment for a term of not less than three months nor more than two years, at the discretion of the court. And if any other or greater quantity of dutiable articles shall be found on board such vessel than are specified in such report or entry of said articles, or any part thereof shall be landed without a permit from a collector or other officer of the customs, such articles, together with the vessel, her apparel, tackle, and furniture, shall be seized and forfeited: Provided, always, That articles purchased for the use of or for sale on board any steamboat, propeller, or other vessel, as "saloon stores or supplies," shall be deemed goods, wares, and merchandise, and shall be liable (when purchased at a foreign port) to entry and the payment of the duties found to be due thereon at the first port of arrival of such vessel in the United States, and for a failure on the part of the saloon keeper or person purchasing or owning such articles to report, make entries, and pay duties, as hereinbefore required, such articles, together with the fixtures and other goods, wares, or merchandise, found in such saloon or on or about such vessel belonging to and owned by such saloon keeper or other person interested in such saloon, shall be seized and forfeited, and such saloon keeper or other person purchasing and owning as aforesaid shall forfeit and pay the sum of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and in addition thereto shall be imprisoned for a term not less than three months nor more than two years.

SEC. 23. And be it further enacted, That the equipments, or any part thereof, (including boats,) purchased for, or the expenses of repairs made in a foreign country upon a vessel enrolled and licensed under the laws of the United States to engage in the foreign and coasting trade on the northern, northeastern, and northwestern frontiers of the United States, or a vessel intended to be employed in such trade, shall, on the first arrival of such vessel in any port of the United States, be liable to entry and the payment of an ad valorem duty of fifty per centum on the cost thereof in such foreign country; and if the owner or owners or master of such vessel shall willfully and knowingly neglect or fail to report, make entry, and pay duties as herein required, such vessel, with her tackle, apparel, and furniture, shall be seized and forfeited: Provided, That if the owner or owners or master of such vessel shall furnish good and sufficient evidence that such vessel, while in the regular course of her voyage, was compelled, by stress of weather or other casualty, to put into said foreign port and purchase such equipments, or make such repairs, to secure the safety of the vessel to enable her to reach her port of destination, then it shall be competent for the Secretary of the Treasury to remit or refund such duties, and such vessel shall not be liable to forfeiture, and no license or enrollment and license, or renewal of either, shall hereafter be issued to any such vessel until the collector to whom application is made for the same shall be satisfied, from the oath of the owner or master, that all such equipments and repairs, made within the year immediately preceding such application, have been duly accounted for under the provisions of this section, and the duties accruing thereon after the passage of this act duly paid; and if such owner or master shall refuse to take such oath, or take it falsely, the vessel shall be seized and forfeited.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 24. And be it further enacted, That if any certificate of registry, enrollment, or license, or other record or document granted in lieu thereof, to any vessel shall be knowingly and fraudulently obtained or used for any vessel not entitled to the benefit thereof, such vessel, with her tackle, apparel, and furniture, shall be liable to forfeiture.

SEC. 25. And be it further enacted, That on and after the first day of July next, the several provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the collection of duties on imports and tonnage," approved March two, seventeen hundred and ninety-nine, relating to manifests shall apply as well to vessels owned in whole or in part by foreigners as to vessels of the United States; and that the Secretary of State send copies of this section to all consular officers of the United States in foreign countries.

SEC. 26. And be it further enacted, That no goods, wares, or merchandise, taken from any port or place in the United States, on the northern, northeastern, or northwestern frontiers thereof, to a port or place in another collection district of the United States on said frontiers, in any ship or vessel, shall be unladen or delivered from such ship or vessel within the United States but in open day, that is to say, between the rising and the setting of the sun, except by special license from the collector or other principal officer of the port for the purpose, nor at any time without a permit from such collector or other principal officer for such unloading or delivery. And the owner or owners of every vessel whose master or manager shall neglect to comply with the provisions of this section, shall forfeit and pay to the United States a sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized, from time to time, to make such regulations as to him shall seem necessary and expedient for unloading at and clearance from any port or place on said frontiers of ships or vessels at night.

SEC. 27. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to make such rules and regulations, from time to time, as to him shall seem necessary, relative to the duties of inspectors authorized by law, to be placed on board of vessels destined for one or more ports in the United States.

SEC. 28. And be it further enacted, That all vessels which, under the provisions of the fifteenth section of the act entitled "An act increasing temporarily the duties on imports, and for other purposes," approved July fourteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, of the fourth section of the act entitled "An act to modify existing laws imposing duties on imports, and for other purposes," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and of the fourth section of an act entitled "An act amendatory of certain acts imposing duties upon foreign importations," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, are exempted from paying tonnage duties more than once in a year, shall hereafter pay the same either at their first clearance from or entry at, according to priority, a custom-house in the United States in each calendar year: Provided, That all licensed and enrolled and licensed vessels of the United States shall pay the said duty when taking out or renewing their respective enrollments or licenses, if the same has not previously been paid for the calendar year: And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent customs officers from collecting such tonnage duty at the entry of any vessel at their respective custom-houses during the calendar year, if the same shall not previously have been paid for such year: And provided further, That all vessels which are subject to enrollment or license shall hereafter be liable to the payment of the fees established by law for services of customs officers incident thereto.

SEC. 29. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized, whenever he shall think it advantageous to the public service of revenue, to abolish or suspend the offices of naval officer, or any other subordinate office, in any collection district of the United States, except in those enumerated in section nine of the act of May seven, eighteen hundred and twenty-two, and the amendment thereto by the act of April nine, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and the port of San Francisco, and to assign the duties of the office or any other subordinate office so abolished or suspended to a deputy collector or inspector of the customs; and so much of all fines, penalties, and forfeitures as would otherwise inure to either of such naval officers shall, after the discontinuance of their offices respectively, be paid into the Treasury of the United States, and there credited to the fund for defraying the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby further authorized, in all cases in which, in his opinion, the public interest demands it, to clothe deputy collectors, located at ports other than the principal port of entry of their respective districts, with all the powers of their principals appertaining to their official acts.

SEC. 30. And be it further enacted, That no officer or clerk whose duty it shall be to make payments on account of the salary or wages of any officer or person employed in connection with the customs or the internal revenue service shall make any payment to any officer or person so employed on account of services rendered, or of salary, unless such officer or person so to be paid shall have made and subscribed an oath that, during the period for which he or she is to receive pay for salary or services rendered, neither he nor she, nor any member of his or her family, has received, either personally or by the intervention of another party, any money or compensation of any description whatever, nor any promises for the same, either directly or indirectly, for services rendered or to be rendered, or acts performed or to be performed, in connection with the customs or internal revenue, nor purchased, for like services or acts, from any importer, (if affiant is connected with the customs, or manufacturer, if affiant is connected with the internal revenue service,) consignee, agent, or custom-house-broker, or other person whomsoever, any goods, wares, or merchandise, at less than regular retail market prices therefor. And any person who shall willfully and falsely take and subscribe said oath, and being duly convicted thereof, shall be subjected to the penalties and disabilities by law prescribed for the punishment of willful and corrupt perjury.

SEC. 31. And be it further enacted, That all goods, wares, merchandise, or property of any kind seized under the provisions of this act or any other law of the United States relating to the customs shall, unless otherwise provided for by law, be placed and remain in the custody of the collector or other principal officer of the customs of the district in which the seizure shall be made, to abide adjudication by the proper tribunal, or other disposition according to law; and the proceedings in regard to fines, penalties, and forfeitures by virtue of this act, and not herein prescribed, shall be the same as are now provided by law in like cases; and all such fines, penalties, and forfeitures shall, after deducting all proper costs and charges, be disposed of and applied as provided for in the ninety-first section of the act entitled "An act to regulate the collection of duties on imports and tonnage," approved March two, seventeen hundred and ninety-nine.

SEC. 32. And be it further enacted, That in all cases in which any collector or surveyor of customs has paid or accounted for, or is charged with duties or fees accruing under the act entitled "An act to provide increased revenue from imports to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," approved August five, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, or the act entitled "An act to increase duties on imports, and for other purposes," approved June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, or the act entitled "An act to create an additional supervising inspector of steamboats and two local inspectors of steamboats for the collection district of Memphis, Tennessee, and two local inspectors for the district of Oregon, and for other purposes," approved June eight, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, or the act entitled "An act amendatory of certain acts imposing duties on foreign importations," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and in regard to which the Secretary of the Treasury shall be satisfied that the collection of said duties or fees was omitted by such collector or surveyor, or by any steamboat inspector, for the reason that he was not informed of the existence of the said acts when the said duties or fees accrued, that the said Secretary be, and he is hereby, authorized, under such rules as he may prescribe, to remit or refund, as the case may require, such duties or fees to such collector or surveyor or steamboat inspector.

SEC. 33. And be it further enacted, That in all cases in which the fees and emoluments received by any collector or other principal officer of the customs are, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Treasury, insufficient to afford a reasonable compensation for the services of such officer, after payment out of the same of reasonable incidental expenses of the office, the said Secretary may direct that so much of the said incidental expenses as shall seem to him to be just shall be paid out of the appropriation for paying the expenses of collecting the revenue; and the said Secretary shall have the same power in regard to incidental expenses which have heretofore been incurred, and which have not been settled and paid into the Treasury; and all fees paid into the Treasury by customs officers shall be placed to the credit of the fund for defraying the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs.

SEC. 34. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the first section of the act entitled "An act relative to collectors and other officers of customs," approved February eleven, eighteen hundred and forty-six, shall, from and after the passage of this act, be applied and enforced in regard to all officers, agents, and employés of the United States whomsoever, as well those whose compensation is determined by a commission on disbursements, not to exceed an annual maximum, as those paid by salary or otherwise.

SEC. 35. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall, directly or indirectly, at any time make or offer to make to any officer of the revenue, or to any other person or persons authorized by this act to make searches or seizures, any gratuity or present of money, or other thing of value, or give or offer any bribe or reward, of whatever nature, with intent to influence or induce such officer or other person or persons to do any act in violation of his or her or their official duty, or to refrain from doing anything which, under the law, it is or shall be his or her or their duty to do, or if any such officer or person shall ask or receive in any manner any such gratuity, present, bribe, or reward, every person so offending shall be liable to indictment, as for a high crime and misdemeanor, in any court of the United States having jurisdiction for the trial of crimes and misdemeanors, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not exceeding three times the amount so offered, promised or given, asked or received, and imprisonment in a penitentiary not exceeding three years.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG... 1ST SESS.

SEC. 36. And be it further enacted, That from and after the passage of this act no suit begun thereafter shall be maintained in any court for the recovery of duties alleged to have been erroneously or illegally exacted by collectors of customs, unless the plaintiff shall, within thirty days after due notice of the appearance of the defendant, either in person or by attorney, serve on the defendant or his attorney a bill of particulars of the plaintiff's demand, giving the name of the importer or importers, the description of the merchandise and place from which imported, the name or names of the vessel or vessels, or means of importation, the date of the invoice, the date of the entry at the custom-house, the precise amount of duty claimed to have been exacted in excess, the date of payment of said duties, the day and year on which protest was filed against the exaction thereof, the date of appeal thereon to the Secretary of the Treasury, and date of decision, if any, on such appeal. And if a bill of particulars, containing all the above-mentioned items, be not served as aforesaid, a judgment of non pros. shall be rendered against the plaintiff or plaintiffs in said action.

SEC. 37. And be it further enacted, That parts of such building as shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury may be bonded for the storage of grain, under such rules, regulations, and conditions as he may prescribe for the security of the revenue, and that so much of the act entitled "An act to extend the warehousing system by establishing private bonded warehouses, and for other purposes," approved March twenty-eight, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, as conflicts with this act be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 38. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of estimating the duties on importations of grain, the number of bushels shall be ascertained by weight, instead of by measuring; and sixty pounds of wheat, fifty-six pounds of corn, fifty-six pounds of rye, forty-eight pounds of barley, thirty-two pounds of oats, sixty pounds of peas, and forty-two pounds of buckwheat, avoirdupois weight, shall respectively be estimated as a bushel.

SEC. 39. And be it further enacted, That in order to facilitate the execution of the provisions of the seventh section of the act entitled "An act to prevent and punish frauds upon the revenue, to provide for the more certain and speedy collection of claims in favor of the United States, and for other purposes," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, relative to the seizure of "invoices, books, and papers," any district judge of the United States may hereafter issue his warrant or warrants and direct the same to any collector or collectors of the customs in whose respective districts any such invoices, books, or papers may be thought to be.

SEC. 40. And be it further enacted, That if any collector of the customs, or other officer or agent, shall neglect or refuse to comply with the provisions of the first section of the act entitled "An act requiring all moneys receivable from customs and from all other sources to be paid immediately into the Treasury, without abatement or reduction, and for other purposes," approved March three, eighteen hundred and forty-nine, he shall be subject to be removed from office, and to forfeit to the United States any share or part of the moneys withheld to which he might otherwise be entitled; and all moneys received by collectors for the custody of goods, wares, and merchandise in bonded warehouses, shall be accounted for as storage under the provisions of the fifth section of the act of March third, eighteen hundred and forty-one.

SEC. 41. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the master of any foreign vessel, laden or in ballast, arriving in the waters of the United States from any foreign territory adjacent to the northern, northeastern, or northwestern frontiers of the United States, to report at the office of any collector or deputy collector of the customs, which shall be nearest to the point at which such vessel may enter said waters; and such vessel shall not proceed further inland, either to unlade or take in cargo, without a special permit from such collector or deputy collector, issued under and in accordance with such general or special regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may in his discretion, from time to time, prescribe. And for any violation of this section such vessel shall be seized and forfeited.

SEC. 42. And be it further enacted, That if any collector of the customs, supervising or local inspector of steamboats, or other officer, shall neglect or refuse to make any of the returns or reports which he is required to make at stated times by any act of Congress or regulation of the Treasury Department, other than his accounts, within the time prescribed by such act or regulation, he shall, upon conviction thereof before the district court of his district, forfeit and pay, for the use of the United States, any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars.

SEC. 43. And be it further enacted, That the act entitled "An act for the more effectual recovery of debts due from individuals to the United States," approved March three, seventeen hundred and ninety-five; and the act entitled "An act to extend for a longer period the several acts now in force for the relief of insolvent debtors of the United States," approved May twenty-seven, eighteen hundred and forty; and the last clause of the tenth section of the act entitled "An act for enrolling and licensing ships and vessels to be employed in the coasting trade and fisheries, and for regulating the same," approved February eighteen, seventeen hundred and ninety-three, being all after the words "complied with;" and the seventh section of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and forty-five, and for other purposes," approved June seventeen, eighteen hundred and forty-four; and the one hundred and third section of the act entitled "An act to regulate the collection of duties on imports and tonnage," approved March two, seventeen hundred and ninety-nine; and the tenth section of the act entitled "An act amendatory of certain acts imposing duties upon foreign importations," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-five; and all other acts and parts of acts conflicting with or supplied by this act, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

SEC. 44. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of this act shall not be deemed to affect any action or proceeding or indictment pending at the time this act shall take effect, but the same shall be tried, and disposed of, and judgment or decree executed as if this act had not been passed.

APPROVED, July 18, 1866.

CHAP. CCII.—An Act to establish certain Post Roads.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following be established as post roads:

NEW YORK.

From Tarrytown to White Plains.

MARYLAND.

From Buena Vista, via Mitchellsville, to Coopersville.

RHODE ISLAND.

From Blackstone, via Pascoag, Slatersville, Mohegan, and Mapleville, to Burrillville.

IOWA.

From Des Moines, via Indianola and Chariton, to Luncville (State line.)

From Des Moines, via McClain, Henry, Payton, Maseville, and Benson, to Grove City.

WISCONSIN.

From Arcadia, via Burnside and Hale, to Sumner.

From Dodgeville, via James's Mills, Wm. S. Bean's, and Booth Hollow, to Avoca.

From Green Bush, via Armstrong's Corners, Dundee, New Prospect, and Eble's Mills, to Barton.

From Wrightstown, via East Wrightstown, Morristown, and Maple Grove, to Pauquette.

From Spring Green, via Plain and White Mound, to Reedsburg.

MINNESOTA.

From Wilton, via Swan Lake, to Blue Earth City.

From Redwood Falls, on the Minnesota River, via Big Stone Lake, Fort Wadsworth, and Fort Berthold, to Fort Union, Montana Territory.

From De Luth to the Falls of Vermillion River.

From Little Falls, via Long Prairie, to Alexandria.

From Sauk Centre, via Westport, Lake Amelia, Reno City, Lake Tokan, Big Stone Lake, and Lake Traverse, to Fort Wadsworth, Dakota Territory.

From Saint Peter, via Lake Prairie, Kelso, and Dryden, to New Auburn.

From Shakopee, via Maple Glenn, New Dublin, New Market, and Cedar Lake, to Oral, returning thence by Helena, Lydia, and Marystown, to Shakopee.

From Winona, via Eau Claire, Chippewa, Mondovi, to Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin.

From Red Wing, via Thomas Carney's Mill, Wisconsin, to Ellsworth.

From Crow Wing, via Otter Tail City and Monta, to Fort Abercrombie, Dakota Territory.

From Elk River, via Pleasant Valley, to Spencer Brook.

From Monticello, via Buffalo, to Watertown.

From Buffalo, via Maple Lake to Fremont.

KANSAS.

From Junction City, via south side of Republican River, Quimby's, Cain's Settlement, and Elk Creek, to Washington.

From Junction City to Batchelder.

From Pleasant Hill, Missouri, via High Blue, Aubrey, Squiresville, Kansas, and Spring Hill, to Baldwin City.

From Media to Oskaloosa.

From American City, via Savannah, to Vienna.

From Ottawa, via Berea, Mount Getiad, and Oakwood, to Mound City.

MISSOURI.

From Kansas City, via Little Santa Fe, Aubrey, Kansas, Cold Water Grove, Rockville, and Trading Post, to Fort Scott.

ARKANSAS.

From Fayetteville, via Rhea's Mill, Cincinnati, and Telegraph, to Fort Gibson.

MISSISSIPPI.

From Ripley to Saulsbury, Tennessee.

ALABAMA.

From Tuscaloosa, via Foster's store, Union, and Clinton, to Gainesville.

MONTANA TERRITORY.

From Sioux City, Iowa, via the Nebraska and Yellow Stone River routes, to Walla Walla, Washington Territory.

NEVADA.

From Wellington Station, via Mammoth and Lone, to Austin.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

From Virginia City to American City.
 From Aurora, via Columbus, to Silver Peak.
 From Austin, via Kingston, Ophir Canon, and San Antonio, to Silver Peak.
 From Ione, via Ophir Canon, Boiling Springs, and San Antonio, to Crystal Springs.

OREGON.

From Oregon City, via Cutting Mill, Glad Tidings, Silvertown, Sublimity, and Scio, to Lebanon.

From Portland, via Union School House, Philip Foster's on Clackamas, and Cuttingsville, to Silvertown.

From Dallas, via Antelope Valley, Camp Watson, John Day City, Canyon City, Marysville, Union, Strawberry Valley, Camp Logan, and Willow Creek, to Boise City, Idaho Territory.

From Canyon City, via Susanville, Elk District, Trues Station, Olin Creek, Independence, and Auburn, to Baker City.

CALIFORNIA.

From Los Angeles to Havilah City, in Tulare County.

From Drytown to El Dorado.

From Quincy, via Jamison City, Eureka Mills, Seventy-Six, Red Clover Valley, Mohawk, Little Humburg, and Beckworth's, to Sierra Valley.

From Auburn, via Greenwood, to Georgetown.

From San Rafael, via Olema and Bolinas, to Petaluma.

From Woodland, via Cache Creek, to Buckeye.

WEST VIRGINIA.

From Sistersville, in Tyler County, via Twiggs, to Hebron, in Pleasants County.

From Sago, in Upshur County, to Huttonsville, in Randolph County.

ILLINOIS.

From Winchester to Manchester.

From Elkhart, in Logan County, direct to Sweet Water, in Menard County.

INDIANA.

From Nashville, in the county of Brown, to Morgantown, in the county of Morgan.

APPROVED, July 18, 1866.

CHAP. CCVIII.—An Act making Appropriations for the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Expenses of the Government for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the objects hereinafter expressed, for the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, namely:

LEGISLATIVE.

For compensation and mileage of Senators, two hundred and fifty-two thousand five hundred dollars.

For compensation of the officers, clerks, messengers, and others receiving an annual salary in the service of the Senate, viz: Secretary of the Senate, three thousand six hundred dollars; officer charged with disbursements of the Senate, four hundred and eighty dollars; chief clerk, two thousand five hundred dollars; principal clerk and principal executive clerk in the office of the Secretary of the Senate, at two thousand one hundred and sixty dollars each; eight clerks in office of the Secretary of the Senate, at one thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars each; keeper of the stationery, one thousand seven hundred and fifty-two dollars; two messengers, at one thousand and eighty dollars each; one page, at five hundred dollars; Sergeant-at-Arms and Doorkeeper, two thousand dollars; assistant doorkeeper, one thousand seven hundred dollars; Postmaster to the Senate, one thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars; assistant postmaster and mail carrier, one thousand four hundred and forty dollars; two mail boys, at one thousand dollars each; superintendent of the document-room, one thousand five hundred dollars; two assistants in document-room, at one thousand two hundred dollars each; superintendent of the folding-room, one thousand five hundred dollars; three messengers, acting as assistant doorkeepers, at one thousand five hundred dollars each; sixteen messengers, at one thousand two hundred dollars each; clerk or secretary to the President of the Senate, one thousand seven hundred and fifty-two dollars; clerk to the Committee on Finance, one thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars; clerk to the Committee on Claims, one thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars; clerk of printing records, one thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars; superintendent in charge of the furnaces, one thousand two hundred dollars; assistant in charge of furnaces, seven hundred and twenty dollars; laborer in charge of private passages, seven hundred and twenty dollars; two laborers, at seven hundred and twenty dollars each; Chaplain to the Senate, seven hundred and fifty dollars; one special policeman, seven hundred and twenty dollars; making eighty thousand nine hundred and fifty-four dollars.

For contingent expenses of the Senate, viz:

For stationery, seventeen thousand dollars.

For newspapers, five thousand dollars.

For Congressional Globe, twenty thousand dollars.

For reporting proceedings in the Daily Globe for the second session of the Thirty-Ninth Congress, twelve thousand dollars.

For the usual additional compensation to the reporters of the Senate for the Congressional Globe for reporting the proceedings of the Senate for the second regular session of the Thirty-Ninth Congress, eight hundred dollars each, four thousand dollars.

For one complete set of the Congressional Globe and Appendix for each Senator in the Thirty-Ninth Congress who has not already received them: Provided, however, That any Senator who has already, as a member of the House of Representatives, received a portion of a set of the Congressional Globe, shall only be entitled to receive as such Senator the additional volumes required to complete one full set, six thousand eight hundred dollars.

For paying the publishers of the Congressional Globe and Appendix, according to the number of copies taken, one cent for every five pages exceeding three thousand, including the indexes and laws of the United States, twelve thousand nine hundred dollars.

For clerks to committees, pages, horses, and carryalls, twenty thousand dollars.

For Capitol police, twenty-one thousand four hundred and eighty dollars: Provided, That three hundred and thirty dollars of the appropriation for the Capitol police may be used during the present fiscal year.

For expenses of heating and ventilating apparatus, twenty thousand five hundred dollars.

For miscellaneous items, thirty thousand dollars.

For compensation and mileage of Members of the House of Representatives and Delegates from Territories, one million dollars.

For compensation of the officers, clerks, messengers, and others receiving an annual salary in the service of the House of Representatives, viz: Clerk of the House of Representatives, three thousand six hundred dollars; chief clerk and one assistant clerk, at two thousand one hundred and sixty dollars each; eleven clerks, at one thousand eight hundred dollars each; principal messenger in the office, at four dollars and eighty cents per day, one thousand seven hundred and fifty-two dollars; three messengers, at one thousand two hundred dollars each; messenger to the Speaker, at four dollars and eighty cents per day, one thousand seven hundred and fifty-two dollars; clerk to the Committee of Ways and Means, two thousand one hundred and sixty dollars; clerk to the Committee on Appropriations, two thousand one hundred and sixty dollars; clerk to the Committee of Claims, one thousand eight hundred dollars; clerk to the Committee on Public Lands, one thousand eight hundred dollars; Sergeant-at-Arms, two thousand one hundred and sixty dollars; clerk to the Sergeant-at-Arms, one thousand eight hundred dollars; messenger to the Sergeant-at-Arms, one thousand, two hundred dollars; Postmaster, two thousand one hundred and sixty dollars; assistant postmaster, one thousand seven hundred and forty dollars; four messengers, at one thousand four hundred and forty dollars each; two mail boys, at nine hundred dollars each; Capitol police, twenty-one thousand four hundred and eighty dollars: Provided, That three hundred and thirty dollars of the appropriation for the Capitol police may be used during the present fiscal year; Doorkeeper, two thousand one hundred and sixty dollars; superintendent of the folding-room, one thousand eight hundred dollars; superintendent of the document-room and assistant, at one thousand seven hundred and fifty-two dollars; one messenger, at one thousand seven hundred and forty dollars; five messengers, at one thousand five hundred dollars each; six messengers, at one thousand two hundred dollars each; twelve messengers, to be employed during the session of Congress, at the rate of one thousand two hundred dollars each per annum; Chaplain to the House of Representatives, seven hundred and fifty dollars; for stenographer, thirty-six hundred and fifty dollars; making one hundred and thirteen thousand one hundred and forty dollars.

For contingent expenses of the House of Representatives, viz:

For cartage, two thousand dollars.

For clerks to committees and temporary clerks of the House of Representatives, eighteen thousand five hundred and seventy-six dollars.

For twenty-four copies of the Congressional Globe and Appendix for each Member and Delegate of the second regular session of the Thirty-Ninth Congress, and one hundred copies of the same for the House library, seventeen thousand seven hundred and ninety-six dollars.

For paying the publishers of the Congressional Globe and Appendix, according to the number of copies taken, one cent for every five pages exceeding three thousand, including the indexes and the laws of the United States, eight thousand five hundred and fifty dollars.

For folding documents, including materials, thirty thousand dollars.

For fuel and lights, pay of engineers, firemen, and laborers, repairs, and materials, fifteen thousand dollars.

For furniture, repairs, and packing-boxes for members, ten thousand dollars.

For horses, carriages, and saddle horses, nine thousand dollars.

For laborers, eight thousand four hundred dollars.

For miscellaneous items, thirty thousand dollars.

For newspapers, twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

For pages and temporary mail boys, ten thousand dollars.

For reporting and publishing proceedings in the Daily Globe, ten thousand five hundred dollars.

For stationery, eighteen thousand dollars.

For the usual additional compensation to the reporters of the House for the Congressional Globe for reporting the proceedings of the House for the second regular session of the Thirty-Ninth Congress, eight hundred dollars each, four thousand eight hundred dollars.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

PUBLIC PRINTING.

For compensation of the Superintendent of Public Printing, and the clerks and messengers in his office, eleven thousand five hundred and fourteen dollars.

For contingent expenses of his office, viz: for stationery, postage, advertising, furniture, traveling expenses, horses and wagons, and miscellaneous items, two thousand dollars.

For the public printing, three hundred and sixty-nine thousand four hundred dollars.

For paper for the public printing, four hundred and fifty-six thousand eight hundred and ninety-two dollars.

For the public binding, three hundred and fifty-two thousand two hundred and four dollars.

For mapping in cases pending in the Supreme Court of the United States, three thousand dollars.

For lithographing and engraving for the Senate and House of Representatives, seventy-five thousand dollars.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to purchase of Messrs. Little, Brown, and Company two thousand copies of the thirteenth volume of the United States Statutes-at-Large, for distribution agreeably to the acts of Congress directing the distribution of the other volumes, seven thousand dollars.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

For compensation of Librarian, five assistant librarians, messenger, and laborers, twelve thousand six hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses of said Library, two thousand dollars.

For purchase of books for said Library, eight thousand dollars.

For purchase of law books for said Library, two thousand dollars.

For Botanic Garden, grading, draining, procuring manure, tools, fuel, and repairs, and purchasing trees and shrubs, under the direction of the Library Committee of Congress, three thousand three hundred dollars.

For pay of superintendent and assistants, and assistants in Botanic Garden and green-houses, under direction of the Library Committee of Congress, six thousand one hundred and forty-five dollars and eighty cents.

For purchasing files of the leading American newspapers for said Library, one thousand five hundred dollars.

COURT OF CLAIMS.

For salaries of five judges of the Court of Claims, the solicitor, assistant solicitor, deputy solicitor, clerk and assistant clerk, and bailiff thereof, thirty-five thousand five hundred dollars.

For stationery, books, fuel, labor, and other contingent and miscellaneous expenses, three thousand dollars.

For compensation of attorneys to attend to taking testimony, witnesses, and commissioners, one thousand dollars.

For payment of judgments rendered by the court in favor of claimants, in addition to the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, five hundred thousand dollars: Provided, That judgments already rendered may be paid out of this appropriation at any time after the passage of this act.

EXECUTIVE.

For compensation of the President of the United States, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For compensation of secretary to sign patents for public lands, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For compensation to the Private Secretary, steward, and messenger of the President of the United States, four thousand six hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses of the executive office, including stationery therefor, four thousand dollars.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

For compensation of the Secretary of State and Assistant Secretary of State, chief clerk, superintendent of statistics, clerks, messenger, assistant messenger, and laborers in his office, fifty-eight thousand three hundred dollars.

For increase to one messenger, one hundred dollars.

For increase to assistant, one hundred and forty dollars.

For the Incidental and Contingent Expenses of the Department of State.

For publishing the laws in pamphlet form and in newspapers of the States and Territories, and in the city of Washington, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For publishing the laws of the Thirty-Seventh and Thirty-Eighth Congresses in two newspapers in each of the lately insurgent States, fifteen thousand dollars.

For proof-reading, and packing the laws and documents for the various legations and consulates, including boxes and transportation of the same, four thousand dollars.

For stationery, blank books, furniture, fixtures, and repairs, five thousand dollars.

For miscellaneous items, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For copper-plate printing, books, and maps, five thousand dollars.

For extra clerk hire and copying, ten thousand dollars.

For the general purposes of the Northeast Executive Building.

For compensation of four watchmen and two laborers of the Northeast Executive Building, three thousand six hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses of said building, viz: for fuel, lights, repairs, and miscellaneous expenses, five thousand five hundred dollars.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

For compensation of the Secretary of the Treasury, two Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury, chief clerk, supervising architect and assistant architect, clerks, messengers, assistant messenger, and laborers, one hundred and eighteen thousand two hundred dollars.

For compensation of the First Comptroller, chief clerk, and the clerks, messengers, and laborers in his office, forty-seven thousand nine hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the Second Comptroller, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, assistant messenger, and laborer in his office, one hundred and thirty-four thousand three hundred and eighty dollars.

For compensation of the First Auditor, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, assistant messenger, and laborer in his office, fifty-nine thousand two hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the Second Auditor, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, assistant messengers, and laborers in his office, five hundred and twenty-one thousand one hundred and sixty dollars.

For compensation of the Third Auditor, chief clerk, and the clerks, messengers, assistant messengers, and laborers in his office, three hundred and eighty-two thousand and eighty dollars.

For compensation of the Fourth Auditor, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, and assistant messenger, and laborer in his office, one hundred and ten thousand five hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the Fifth Auditor, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, and laborer in his office, forty-seven thousand eight hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the Auditor of the Treasury for the Post Office Department, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, assistant messenger, and the laborers in his office, one hundred and ninety-one thousand five hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the Treasurer of the United States, assistant treasurer, cashier, assistant cashier, chiefs of division, book-keepers, tellers, assistant tellers, chief clerk, and the clerks, messengers, assistant messengers, and laborers in his office, one hundred and sixty-nine thousand three hundred and eighty dollars.

For compensation of the Register of the Treasury, assistant register, chief clerk, and the clerks, messengers, assistant messenger, and laborers in his office, ninety thousand eight hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the Solicitor of the Treasury, chief clerk, and the clerks and messenger in his office, eighteen thousand three hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the Commissioner of Customs, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, and laborer in his office, forty thousand six hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the chief clerk, clerks, messenger, and laborer of the Light-House Board, nine thousand two hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the Comptroller of the Currency, deputy comptroller, clerks, messengers, and laborers, one hundred and twenty-thousand two hundred dollars.

For paper, special dies, and printing of circulating notes, and expenses necessarily incurred (including express charges) in procuring the same, in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For salaries of Commissioner, deputy commissioner, and clerks of Internal Revenue Office, together with rent, dies, paper, and so forth, for stamps and incidental expenses, including the cost of subscription to such number of copies of the "Internal Revenue Record and Customs Journal" as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem necessary to supply the revenue officers, one million dollars.

For office furniture, maps, labor, miscellaneous items, and other contingent expenses for the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, fifty thousand dollars.

Contingent Expenses of the Treasury Department.

In the office of the Secretary of the Treasury:

For copying, labor, binding, sealing ships' registers, translating foreign languages, advertising, and extra clerk hire for preparing and collecting information to be laid before Congress, and for miscellaneous items, fifty thousand dollars.

For compensation of temporary clerks in the Treasury Department, and for additional compensation to officers and clerks in the same Department, one hundred and sixty thousand dollars: Provided, That the temporary clerks herein provided for may be classified according to the character of their services: Provided further, That so much of the appropriation of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, granted by act approved March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for compensation of temporary clerks in the Treasury Department, and for additional compensation to clerks in the same Department, as remains unexpended shall be divided as follows, viz: one hundred dollars each shall be paid to the clerks in said Department of the first and second classes, who have not received any additional compensation out of said appropriation, and who shall have served in said capacity for one year previous to July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six. And one hundred dollars shall be paid to each person employed in said Department appointed by the Secretary, at an annual salary amounting to less than twelve hundred dollars, and who shall have served under such appointment for one year previous to July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six. And if the balance of said appropriation remaining unexpended shall be insufficient to pay said clerks and appointees, the sum of one hundred dollars each, as herein provided, the deficiency shall be supplied and paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

In the office of the First Comptroller:

For furniture, public documents, State and territorial statutes, postage, and miscellaneous items, one thousand dollars.

In the office of the Second Comptroller:

For blank books, binding, furniture, and miscellaneous items, including subscription to one city newspaper, to be bound and preserved for the use of the office, four thousand dollars.

In the office of the First Auditor:

For stationery, office furniture, and miscellaneous items, one thousand five hundred dollars.

In the office of the Second Auditor:

For office furniture and miscellaneous items, including two of the city newspapers, to be filed and preserved for the use of the office, twenty-five thousand dollars.

In the office of the Third Auditor:

For office furniture, carpeting, two newspapers, preserving files and papers, bounty-land service, and miscellaneous items, fifteen thousand dollars.

In the office of the Fourth Auditor:

For contingent expenses of the office, including two daily newspapers, three thousand dollars.

In the office of the Fifth Auditor:

For postage, furniture, and miscellaneous expenses, in which are included two daily newspapers, two thousand dollars.

In the office of the Auditor for the Post Office Department:

For contingent expenses of the office, six thousand dollars.

In the office of the Treasurer:

For contingent expenses of the office, seven thousand five hundred dollars.

In the office of the Register:

For arranging and binding canceled marine papers, and for official papers and records, and miscellaneous items, including office furniture, eight thousand dollars.

Office of the Solicitor of the Treasury:

For books, binding, stationery, labor, and miscellaneous items, and for statutes and reports, and for care of library, two thousand two hundred dollars.

Office of the Commissioner of Customs:

For stationery, miscellaneous items, and office furniture, three thousand dollars.

Light-House Board, viz:

For miscellaneous expenses and postage, six hundred dollars.

Office of the Comptroller of the Currency:

For furniture and miscellaneous items, five thousand dollars.

For stationery for the Treasury Department and its several bureaus, one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

For the general purposes of the Southeast Executive Building, including the Extension.

For compensation of twelve watchmen and eleven laborers of the Southeast Executive Building, thirteen thousand eight hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses of said building, viz: for fuel, light, labor, and miscellaneous items, seventy-five thousand dollars.

For rent of buildings for the accommodation of clerks who cannot be accommodated in the Treasury building, two thousand dollars.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

For compensation of the Secretary of the Interior, Assistant Secretary, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, assistant messengers, watchmen, and laborers in his office, forty-six thousand three hundred and eighty dollars.

For compensation of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, chief clerk, recorder, draughtsman, assistant draughtsman, clerks, messengers, assistant messengers, packers, watchmen, and laborers in his office, one hundred and seventy-five thousand four hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of additional clerks in the General Land Office, under the act of third March, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, granting bounty land, and for laborers employed therein, fifty-eight thousand six hundred and forty dollars: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior, at his discretion, shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to use any portion of said appropriation for piece-work, or by the day, week, month, or year, at such rate or rates as he may deem just and fair, not exceeding a salary of twelve hundred dollars per annum.

For compensation of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, assistant messenger, watchmen, and laborer in his office, thirty-one thousand nine hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the Commissioner of Pensions, chief clerk, and the clerks, messengers, assistant messengers, watchman, and laborers in his office, two hundred and fifteen thousand three hundred and forty dollars.

For additional clerks in the Pension Office, twenty-one thousand dollars: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior, at his discretion, shall be, and is hereby, authorized to use any portion of said appropriation for piece-work, or by the day, week, month, or year, at such rate or rates as he may deem just and fair, not exceeding a salary of twelve hundred dollars per annum.

Contingent Expenses—Department of the Interior.Office of the Secretary of the Interior:

For stationery, furniture, and other contingencies, and for books and maps for the library, seven thousand dollars.

For casual repairs of the Patent Office building, twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

For expenses of packing and distributing congressional journals and documents, in pursuance of the provisions contained in the joint resolution of Congress approved twenty-eighth January, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, and act fifth February, eighteen hundred and fifty-nine, six thousand dollars.

For fuel and lights for the Patent Office building, including the salaries of engineer and assistant engineer of the furnaces, eighteen thousand dollars.

Office of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs:

For blank books, binding, stationery, and miscellaneous items, including two of the daily city newspapers, to be filed, bound, and preserved for the use of the office, four thousand dollars.

Office of the Commissioner of Pensions:

For stationery, engraving, and retouching plates for bounty-land warrants, and binding the same, office furniture, and repairing the same, and miscellaneous items, including two city daily newspapers, to be filed, bound, and preserved for the use of the office, fifteen thousand dollars.

Office of the Commissioner of Public Buildings:

For compensation of the Commissioner of Public Buildings, and the clerk and messenger in his office, four thousand two hundred dollars.

For stationery, blank books, plans, drawings, and other contingent expenses of his office, five hundred dollars.

Surveyors General and their Clerks.

For compensation of the surveyor general of Wisconsin and Iowa, and clerks for completing and winding up the business in his office, four thousand eight hundred dollars: Provided, That when this appropriation shall have been exhausted, the said office shall be abolished.

For compensation of the surveyor general of Minnesota, and the clerks in his office, eight thousand three hundred dollars.

For compensation of the surveyor general of the Territories of Dakota and Montana, and the clerks in his office, six thousand three hundred dollars.

For compensation of the surveyor general of Kansas and Nebraska, and the clerks in his office, eight thousand three hundred dollars.

For compensation of the surveyor general of the Territories of Colorado, Utah, and Idaho, and the clerks in his office, seven thousand dollars.

For compensation of the surveyor general of New Mexico and Arizona, three thousand dollars.

For compensation of the surveyor general of California and Nevada, and the clerks in his office, fourteen thousand dollars.

For compensation of the surveyor general of Oregon, and the clerks in his office, six thousand five hundred dollars.

For compensation of the surveyor general of Washington Territory, and the clerks in his office, six thousand five hundred dollars.

For compensation of recorder of land titles in Missouri, five hundred dollars.

For rent of surveyor general's office in Oregon, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, including pay of messenger, fifteen hundred dollars.

For rent of surveyor general's office of California and Nevada, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, including pay of messenger, five thousand dollars.

For office rent for the surveyor general of Washington Territory, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, two thousand dollars.

For office rent of the surveyor general of Kansas and Nebraska, fuel, and incidental expenses, two thousand dollars.

For rent of surveyor general's office in the Territories of Dakota and Montana, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, two thousand dollars.

For rent of office for the surveyor general of Colorado, Utah, and Idaho Territories, fuel, books, stationery, and other incidental expenses, one thousand five hundred dollars.

Expenses of Courts of the United States.

For defraying the expenses of the Supreme Court and district courts of the United States, including the District of Columbia, and also for jurors and witnesses, in aid of funds arising from fines, penalties, and forfeitures, in the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and previous years, and likewise for defraying the expenses of suits in which the United States are concerned, including legal assistance to the Attorney General, and other special and extraordinary expenditures, in cases in the Supreme Court of the United States, in which the United States are concerned, and of prosecutions for offenses committed against the United States, and for the safe-keeping of prisoners, in addition to the unexpended balances of appropriations to the credit of the judiciary fund on June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, required to meet the expenses of the courts being re-established in the southern States, so much of the act of March two, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, carrying said unexpended balances of appropriations into the Treasury being, and the same is hereby, repealed, and to replace to the credit of the judiciary fund the amount of four thousand dollars, withdrawn therefrom and expended upon the custom-house at New Orleans, three hundred and four thousand dollars.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

pay the balance due for work done on, and materials furnished for, that part of the custom-house building at New Orleans, reserved for the use of the Federal courts, four thousand two hundred and sixty-eight dollars and sixty-five cents.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

For compensation of the Secretary of War, Assistant Secretaries of War, Solicitor, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, assistant messengers, and laborer in his office, sixty-three thousand eight hundred and eighty dollars.

For compensation of the clerks and messengers in the office of the Adjutant General, two hundred and twenty-three thousand nine hundred and twenty dollars.

For compensation of the clerks, messengers, assistant messengers, and laborers, in the office of the Quartermaster General, three hundred and ninety thousand one hundred and sixty dollars.

For compensation of the clerks, messengers, assistant messengers, and laborers, in the office of the Paymaster General, two hundred and eight thousand four hundred dollars: Provided, That the annual compensation of the chief clerk in the office of the Paymaster General, from the first day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, shall be two thousand dollars; and the third-class clerks in said office are hereby reduced three in number, and the fourth-class clerks are hereby increased three in number.

For compensation of the clerks, messenger, and laborers in the office of the Commissary General, eighty-five thousand six hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the clerks, messenger, and laborer in the office of the Surgeon General, forty-three thousand eight hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the clerks, messengers, and laborer in the office of the Chief Engineer, twenty-eight thousand seven hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the clerks and messenger in the office of the Colonel of Ordnance, sixty thousand and forty dollars.

For compensation of the clerks in the office of Military Justice, seven thousand two hundred dollars.

Contingent Expenses of the War Department.

Office of the Secretary of War:

For blank books, stationery, labor, books, maps, extra clerk hire, and miscellaneous items, twenty thousand dollars.

Office of the Adjutant General:

For blank books, stationery, binding, and miscellaneous items, twenty-five thousand dollars.

Office of the Quartermaster General:

For blank books, stationery, binding, and miscellaneous items, twenty thousand dollars.

Office of the Paymaster General:

For blank books, stationery, binding, and miscellaneous items, ten thousand dollars.

Office of the Commissary General:

For blank books, stationery, and binding, including rent of office and hire of watchmen, twenty thousand dollars.

Office of the Chief Engineer:

For blank books, stationery, binding, and miscellaneous items, three thousand five hundred dollars.

Office of the Surgeon General:

For blank books, stationery, binding, and miscellaneous items, including rent of office, fifteen thousand dollars.

Office of the Chief of Ordnance:

For blank books, stationery, binding, and miscellaneous items, ten thousand dollars.

Office of Military Justice:

For blank books, stationery, binding, and miscellaneous items, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For the general purposes of the Northwest Executive Building.

For compensation of superintendent, four watchmen, and two laborers of the Northwest Executive Building, three thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars.

For labor, fuel, light, and miscellaneous items, twenty thousand dollars.

For the general purposes of the Building corner of F and Seventeenth streets.

For compensation of superintendent, four watchmen, and two laborers for said building, three thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars.

For fuel, compensation of firemen, and miscellaneous items, ten thousand dollars.

For the general purposes of the Building corner of F and Fifteenth streets.

For superintendent, watchmen, rent, fuel, lights, and miscellaneous items, fifteen thousand dollars.

NAVY DEPARTMENT.

For compensation of the Secretary of the Navy, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Solicitor, and Naval Judge Advocate General, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, assistant messenger, and laborers in his office, fifty-eight thousand one hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the chief of the Bureau of Navy-Yards and Docks, and the civil engineer, chief clerk, clerks, messenger, and laborers in his office, nineteen thousand two hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the chief of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, and laborer in his office, sixteen thousand one hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the chief of the Bureau of Navigation, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, and laborer in his office, nine thousand three hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, and the assistant, chief clerk, clerks, draughtsman, messenger, and laborers in his office, eighteen thousand eight hundred and twenty dollars.

For compensation of the chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, chief clerk, and the clerks, draughtsman, messenger, and laborer in his office, sixteen thousand three hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering, chief clerk, and the clerks, draughtsman, messenger, and laborer in his office, ten thousand seven hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the chief of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, and laborer, twenty-four thousand three hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of the chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, assistant, and the clerks, messenger, and laborer in his office, ten thousand five hundred and forty dollars.

Incidental and Contingent Expenses of the Navy Department.

Office of the Secretary of the Navy:

For stationery, labor, newspapers, periodicals, and miscellaneous items, five thousand dollars.

Bureau of Yards and Docks:

For stationery, books, plans, drawings, and incidental labor, one thousand eight hundred dollars.

Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting:

For stationery, books, and miscellaneous items, five hundred dollars.

Bureau of Navigation:

For stationery, blank books, and miscellaneous items, two thousand four hundred dollars.

Bureau of Ordnance:

For stationery and miscellaneous items, one thousand three hundred dollars.

Bureau of Construction and Repair:

For stationery and miscellaneous items, one thousand dollars.

Bureau of Steam Engineering:

For stationery and miscellaneous items, two thousand five hundred dollars.

Bureau of Provisions and Clothing:

For stationery and miscellaneous items, one thousand five hundred dollars.

Bureau of Medicine and Surgery:

For blank books, stationery, and miscellaneous items, eight hundred dollars.

To defray the expense of introducing water into the Naval Academy grounds and buildings at Annapolis, Maryland, nine thousand dollars.

For the general purposes of the Southwest Executive Building.

For compensation of five watchmen and two laborers of the Southwest Executive Building, four thousand seven hundred and fifty-two dollars.

For contingent expenses of said building, viz:

For labor, fuel, lights, and miscellaneous items, seven thousand five hundred dollars.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

For compensation of the Postmaster General, three Assistant Postmasters General, chief clerk, and the clerks, messenger, assistant messengers, watchmen, and laborers of said Department, one hundred and seventy-seven thousand seven hundred and twenty dollars.

For compensation of authorized additional and for temporary clerks, thirty-seven thousand dollars.

Contingent Expenses of the Post Office Department.

For blank books, binding, and stationery, fuel for the General Post Office Building, including Auditor's office, oil, gas, and candles, printing, repair of the General Post Office Building, office furniture, glazing, painting, whitewashing, and for keeping the fire-places and furnaces in order; for engineer for steam-engine, laborers, watchmen, repairs of furniture, and for miscellaneous items, forty-five thousand dollars.

Money-Order Bureau.

For compensation of Superintendent and the clerks in his office, seven thousand five hundred dollars.

Topographer.

For preparing and publishing post-route maps of the United States, ten thousand dollars.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

For compensation of Commissioner of Agriculture, chief clerk, and the clerks and employees in this office, thirty-nine thousand six hundred dollars.

For contingencies, viz: For stationery, purchase of library, laboratory, rent, and miscellaneous items, eleven thousand five hundred dollars.

For collecting agricultural statistics, ten thousand dollars.

For purchase and distribution of new and valuable seeds, viz:

For purchase of cereal, vegetable, and flower seeds, and for labor in putting up seeds, seed-bags, and miscellaneous items, sixty thousand dollars: Provided, That the Commissioner of Agriculture shall only purchase and distribute, with the fund herein appropriated for that purpose, such seeds as are rare and uncommon to the country, or such as can be made more profitable by frequent changes from one part of our own country to another.

For employees in seed-room, five thousand two hundred dollars.

For propagation and distribution of plants, cuttings, and shrubs, fourteen thousand dollars: Provided, That the propagation of plants, cuttings, and shrubs shall be confined to such as are adapted to general cultivation and to promote the general interests of horticulture and agriculture throughout the United States.

For experimental garden in reservation number two, eight thousand eight hundred dollars.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

MINT AT PHILADELPHIA.

For salaries of the Director, treasurer, assayer, melter and refiner, chief coiner and engraver, assistant assayer, and seven clerks, thirty-five thousand five hundred dollars.

For wages of workmen and adjusters, one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

For specimens of ores and coins to be preserved in the cabinet of the Mint, six hundred dollars.

For freight on bullion and coin, five thousand dollars.

BRANCH MINT AT SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

For salaries of superintendent, treasurer, assayer, melter and refiner, coiner, and six clerks, thirty-two thousand dollars.

For wages of workmen and adjusters, two hundred thousand dollars.

For incidental and contingent expenses, repairs and wastage, one hundred thousand dollars.

ASSAY OFFICE, NEW YORK.

For salaries of superintendent, assayer, and melter, and refiner, assistant assayer, officers and clerks, twenty-five thousand seven hundred dollars.

For wages of workmen, forty thousand dollars.

For incidental and contingent expenses, thirty-five thousand dollars.

BRANCH MINT AT DENVER.

For superintendent, assayer, melter, refiner, coiner, and clerks, thirteen thousand dollars.

For wages of workmen, twenty thousand three hundred and one dollars.

For incidental and contingent expenses, twelve thousand dollars.

INDEPENDENT TREASURY.

For salaries of the Assistant Treasurers of the United States at New York, Boston, Charleston, and St. Louis, viz: for the Assistant Treasurer at New York, eight thousand dollars; those at Boston and Saint Louis, each, five thousand dollars; and the one at Charleston, two thousand five hundred—twenty thousand five hundred dollars.

For additional salary of the treasurer of the Mint at Philadelphia, one thousand dollars.

For additional salary of the treasurer of the branch mint at New Orleans, five hundred dollars.

For additional salary of the treasurer of the branch mint at Denver, five hundred dollars.

For salaries of the clerks and messengers in the office of Assistant Treasurer at Boston, twenty-five thousand two hundred dollars: Provided, That in lieu of the clerks heretofore authorized, the Assistant Treasurer of the United States at Boston is hereby authorized to appoint, with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury, one chief clerk, at a salary of three thousand dollars per annum; one clerk at a salary of twenty-five hundred dollars per annum; one clerk, at a salary of two thousand dollars per annum; two clerks, at a salary of eighteen hundred dollars per annum, each; two clerks, at a salary of fifteen hundred dollars per annum, each; six clerks, at a salary of twelve hundred dollars per annum, each; one clerk, at a salary of one thousand dollars per annum; two clerks, at a salary of eight hundred dollars per annum, each; one porter, at a salary of seven hundred dollars per annum; and one watchman, at a salary of six hundred dollars per annum.

For salaries of clerks, messengers, and watchmen, in office of the Assistant Treasurer at Philadelphia, eighteen thousand three hundred dollars.

For salary of additional clerks in the office of the Assistant Treasury at Philadelphia, six thousand five hundred and eighty-five dollars.

For salaries of clerks, messengers, and watchmen in the office of the Assistant Treasurer at

New York, one hundred and twenty thousand three hundred and twenty dollars.

For salaries of clerks, messenger, and watchmen in the office of the Assistant Treasurer at Saint Louis, nine thousand seven hundred and sixty dollars.

For additional salaries to the messenger at four hundred dollars per annum, and to four watchmen at one hundred dollars per annum each, in the office of the Assistant Treasurer at Saint Louis, eight hundred dollars.

For salaries of clerks, porter, and watchmen in the office of the Assistant Treasurer at New Orleans, nine thousand six hundred dollars.

For compensation to stamp clerk in the office of the Assistant Treasurer at San Francisco, two thousand four hundred dollars.

For compensation of the depository at Santa Fe, and the clerk, watchman, and porter in his office, four thousand eight hundred dollars.

For salary of the clerk to the acting Assistant Treasurer at Denver, one thousand eight hundred dollars.

For salaries of additional clerks, and additional compensation of officers and clerks, under act of August sixth, eighteen hundred and forty-six, for the better organization of the Treasury, at such rates as the Secretary may deem just and reasonable, sixty thousand dollars.

For compensation to designated depositaries, under fourth section of the act of August sixth, eighteen hundred and forty-six, for the collection, safe-keeping, transfer, and disbursement of the public revenue, eight thousand dollars.

For compensation to special agents, under act of the sixth of August, eighteen hundred and forty-six, eight thousand dollars.

For salaries of ten supervising and fifty-six local inspectors, appointed under act of the thirtieth August, eighteen hundred and fifty-two, for the better protection of the lives of passengers by steamboats, with traveling and other expenses incurred in carrying into effect the steamboat inspection law, including the expenses of their annual meeting, eighty-five thousand dollars.

For contingent expenses under the act of the sixth of August, eighteen hundred and forty-six, for the collection, safe-keeping, transfer, and disbursement of the public revenue, in addition to premium which may be received on transfer drafts: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended for clerical services, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For checks and certificates of deposit for office of Assistant Treasurer at New York, and other offices, eighteen thousand dollars: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized, at his discretion, to remove the whole or any portion of the machinery, apparatus, and fixtures of the branch mints of the United States at New Orleans, Charlotte, and Dahlonega, to such other branch mints as in his opinion may require the same, or at his discretion to discontinue the branch mint at New Orleans, Charlotte, and Dahlonega, and to dispose of the property belonging thereto, if he shall deem it expedient, at public auction to the highest bidder.

GOVERNMENTS IN THE TERRITORIES.

Territory of New Mexico.

For salaries of Governor, chief justice, and two associate judges, and secretary, twelve thousand dollars.

For contingent expenses of said Territory, one thousand dollars.

For interpreter and translator in the executive office, five hundred dollars.

For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, clerks, and contingent expenses of the Assembly, twenty thousand dollars.

Territory of Utah.

For salaries of Governor, chief justice, two associate judges, and secretary, twelve thousand dollars.

For contingent expenses of the Territory, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, clerks, and contingent expenses of the Assembly, eighteen thousand dollars.

Territory of Washington.

For salaries of Governor, chief justice, two associate judges, and secretary, twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses of said Territory, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, clerk, and contingent expenses of the Assembly, twenty thousand dollars.

Territory of Nebraska.

For salaries of Governor, chief justice, and two associate judges, and secretary, ten thousand five hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses of said Territory, one thousand dollars.

For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, clerks, and contingent expenses of the Assembly, fifteen thousand dollars.

Territory of Colorado.

For salaries of Governor and superintendent of Indian affairs, chief justice, and two associate judges, and secretary, nine thousand seven hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses of said Territory, one thousand dollars.

For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, clerks, and contingent expenses of the Assembly, ten thousand dollars.

Territory of Dakota.

For salaries of Governor and superintendent of Indian affairs, chief justice, and two associate judges, and secretary, nine thousand seven hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses of the Territory, one thousand dollars.

For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, clerks, and contingent expenses of the Assembly, fifteen thousand dollars.

Territory of Arizona.

For salaries of Governor, chief justice, and two associate judges, and secretary, twelve thousand dollars.

For contingent expenses of the Territory, one thousand dollars.

For interpreter and translator in the executive office, five hundred dollars.

For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, clerks, and contingent expenses of the Assembly, twenty thousand dollars.

Territory of Idaho.

For salaries of Governor and superintendent of Indian affairs, chief justice, and two associate judges, and secretary, twelve thousand dollars.

For contingent expenses of the Territory, one thousand dollars.

For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, clerks, and contingent expenses of the Assembly, twenty thousand dollars.

Territory of Montana.

For compensation of Governor and superintendent of Indian affairs, chief justice, and two associate judges, and secretary, twelve thousand dollars.

For contingent expenses of the Territory, one thousand dollars.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

For compensation and mileage of the members of the Legislative Assembly, officers, clerks, and contingent expenses, twenty thousand dollars.

JUDICIARY.

Office of the Attorney General.

For salaries of the Attorney General, Assistant Attorney General, and the clerks and messenger in his office, twenty-three thousand seven hundred dollars.

For two additional temporary clerks of class one, twenty-four hundred dollars.

Contingent expenses of the office of the Attorney General, namely:

For fuel, labor, furniture, stationery, and miscellaneous items, four thousand dollars.

For purchase of law and necessary books for the office of the Attorney General, five hundred dollars.

For legal assistance and other necessary special and extraordinary expenditures in the disposal of private land claims in California, five thousand dollars.

Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States.

For salaries of the Chief Justice and nine associate justices, sixty thousand five hundred dollars.

For traveling expenses of the judge assigned to the tenth circuit for attending session of the Supreme Court of the United States, one thousand dollars.

For salaries of the district judges of the United States, one hundred and twenty-six thousand dollars.

For salaries of the chief justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, the associate judges, and judge of the orphans' court, nineteen thousand dollars.

For salary of the reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, which is hereby fixed at that amount, two thousand five hundred dollars: Provided, That said reporter shall within the time now prescribed deliver to the Secretary of the Interior for distribution, according to existing laws, three hundred copies of such of the annual reports of that court as shall be hereafter published.

For additional compensation to three clerks in the department of the Attorney General, for extraordinary services under the amnesty proclamation of May twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to be apportioned, one thousand to the principal clerk, and five hundred each to the other two clerks, two thousand dollars.

For compensation of the district attorneys, nineteen thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

For compensation of the district marshals, twelve thousand dollars.

For necessary expenses in carrying into effect the several acts of Congress authorizing loans and the issue of Treasury notes, two million dollars.

For salaries and expenses of collectors, assessors, assistant assessors, revenue agents, inspectors, and superintendents of exports and drawback, together with the expense of carrying into effect the forty-fourth section of the internal revenue act of June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and all other expenses of carrying into effect the various provisions of the several acts providing internal revenue, except salaries of Commissioner, deputy commissioner, and clerks of Internal Revenue Office, together with rent, dies, paper, and so forth, for stamps, and incidental expenses, ten million eight hundred thousand dollars.

For compensation to the laborer in charge of the water-closets in the Capitol, five hundred and thirty-eight dollars.

For compensation for four laborers in Capitol, two thousand four hundred dollars.

For compensation to the public gardener, one thousand four hundred and forty dollars.

For compensation of a foreman and twenty-one laborers employed in the public grounds, thirteen thousand four hundred dollars.

For compensation of the keeper of the western gate, Capitol square, eight hundred and seventy-six dollars.

For compensation of two day watchmen employed in the Capitol square, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For compensation of two night watchmen at the President's House, one thousand two hundred dollars.

To enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to pay two policemen at the President's House, twenty-six hundred and forty dollars.

To enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to pay two policemen at the President's House, (one from August twenty-fourth, the other from November twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six,) two thousand and twenty-three dollars and thirty-four cents.

For compensation of the doorkeeper at the President's House, one thousand dollars.

For compensation of one night watchman at the public stables and carpenter's shops south of the Capitol, one thousand dollars.

For compensation of two watchmen in reservation number two, twelve hundred dollars.

For compensation of eight draw-keepers at the Potomac bridge, and for fuel, oil, and lamps, seven thousand five hundred and fifty-three dollars and sixty cents.

For compensation of two draw-keepers of the two bridges across the eastern branch at the Potomac, and for fuel, oil, and lamps, one thousand three hundred and ninety-six dollars.

For compensation of furnace-keeper under the old Hall of the House of Representatives, six hundred dollars.

For compensation of furnace-keeper at the President's House, six hundred dollars.

METROPOLITAN POLICE.

For salaries and other necessary expenses of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia, one hundred and twenty thousand dollars. And the compensation of said Metropolitan police force, officers, and clerks, be and the same is hereby, increased fifty per centum upon the amount hereby appropriated, commencing on the first day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, said increase to be borne by the cities of Washington and Georgetown, and the county of Washington, in the District of Columbia, in the proportion equal to the number of patrolmen allotted severally to the city of Washington, to the city of Georgetown, and the county of Washington and Georgetown, and the levy court of said county be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to levy a special tax not exceeding one quarter of one per centum for the purpose aforesaid.

For the construction of a police telegraph in the city of Washington, fifteen thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That from and after the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the annually salary of the Treasurer of the United States shall be six thousand five hundred dollars, the additional salary herein provided for, for the year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That from and after the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the salary of the Commissioner of Public Buildings shall be twenty-five hundred dollars per annum, and the increase of salary herein authorized may be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the President is hereby authorized to appoint a private secretary, at an annual salary of three thousand five hundred dollars; an assistant secretary, at an annual salary of twenty-five hundred dollars; a short-hand writer, at an annual salary of twenty-five hundred dollars; a clerk of pardons, at an annual salary of two thousand dollars; and three clerks of the fourth class; and a steward of the President's household, who shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars, and said steward shall have the custody of the plate, furniture, and other public property in the President's House, and shall give a bond to the United States in such sum as the Secretary of the Interior shall deem sufficient, and to be approved by him, for the faithful discharge of his trust; and the amount necessary to pay the salaries of the officers and clerks herein provided for, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and also such sum as may be necessary to pay the salaries of said officers and clerks from the date of their appointment to the end of the fiscal year eighteen hundred and sixty-six, are hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That from and after the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, there shall be an officer in the Treasury Department, to be known as the assistant solicitor of the Treasury, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and who shall receive an annual salary of three thousand dollars. And the Attorney General of the United States is hereby authorized to employ in his office, in addition to the present force, a clerk to be known as the law clerk, at an annual salary of twenty-five hundred dollars. And the amount required to pay the salaries of the officer and clerk herein provided for, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, is hereby appropriated.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the female clerks and counters employed in the several Departments and bureaus, whose appointments are made by the several heads of Departments under the provisions of law, and whose legal compensation has heretofore amounted to seven hundred and twenty dollars each per annum, and the female clerks employed at the Post Office Department, shall, from and after the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, receive in lieu of all other compensation an annual salary of nine hundred dollars each per annum; and the amount necessary to pay the increased salaries herein provided for, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the addition of twenty per centum to the compensation of the females not otherwise provided for, messengers, watchmen, and laborers employed in the several Departments, and under the Commissioner of Public Buildings and the Commissioner of Agriculture, and at the Capitol, by section three of "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government, for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and for other purposes," is hereby continued in force, and the amount necessary to pay the same for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, is hereby appropriated.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to appoint in the several bureaus of his Department, in addition to their chief clerks, and in lieu of the clerical force now authorized, clerks as follows, viz: in the Bureau of Yards and Docks, one clerk of class four, who shall be the draughtsman, two clerks of class three, two clerks of class two, and one clerk of class one; in the Bureau of Navigation, one clerk of class four, and one clerk of class two; in the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting, one clerk of class four, two clerks of class three, two clerks of class two, and three clerks of class one; in the Bureau of Ordnance, one clerk of class four, two clerks of class three, and two clerks of class two; in the Bureau of Constructions and Repairs, one clerk of class four, two clerks of class three, two clerks of class two, and one clerk of class one; in the Bureau of Steam Navigation, one clerk of class three; in the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, one clerk of class four, three clerks of class three, six clerks of class two, and three clerks of class one; in the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, one clerk of class four, and one clerk of class three. And the amount necessary to pay the increase of salaries herein provided for, for the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the act approved April twenty-nine, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, "increasing the compensation of inspectors of customs in certain ports," is hereby continued in force.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That in adjusting the accounts of Stewart Gwynn, under and by authority of "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending thirtieth June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six," for printing-presses, machinery, material, and labor furnished and supplied to the Treasury Department, and for expenditures under the authority of the Secretary, the proper accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby authorized to make said adjustment without deducting for expenditures made by said Department, or under authority thereof, upon said presses and machinery for the purpose of improving and repairing the same.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the sum of thirty-nine thousand two hundred and seventy-six dollars and fifty cents be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated to purchase Indian annuity goods for the Indians parties to the treaty of Fort Laramie and for the Blackfoot nation, to replace those destroyed by fire on the steamer Frank Bates, at Saint Louis, April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That in cases in which moneys accruing to the United States from "fines, penalties, and forfeitures," or other sources, have been erroneously received and covered into the Treasury before the payment of the proper informers' moiety or other charges legally and justly chargeable against the same, so much money as may be necessary to pay said claims, admitted and certified in due course of settlement, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCIX.—An Act to amend the fifth Section of an Act entitled "An Act donating Public Lands to the several States and Territories which may provide Colleges for the Benefit of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts," approved July 2, 1862, so as to extend the time within which the Provisions of said Act shall be accepted and such Colleges established.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the time in which the several States may comply with the provisions of the act of July two, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An act donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts," is hereby extended so that the acceptance of the benefits of the said act may be expressed within three years from the passage of this act, and the colleges required by the said act may be provided within five years from the date of the filing of such acceptance with the Commissioner of the General Land Office: Provided, That when any Territory shall become a State and be admitted into the Union, such new State shall be entitled to the benefits of the said act of July two, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, by expressing the acceptance therein required within three years from the date of its admission into the Union, and providing the college or colleges within five years after such acceptance, as prescribed in this act: Provided further, That any State which has heretofore expressed its acceptance of the act herein referred to shall have the period of five years within which to provide at least one college, as described in the fourth section of said act, after the time for providing said college, according to the act of July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, shall have expired.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCX.—An Act to fix the Number of Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, and to change certain Judicial Circuits.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That no vacancy in the office of associate justice of the Supreme Court shall be filled by appointment until the number of associate justices shall be reduced to six; and thereafter the said Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice of the United States and six associate justices, any four of whom shall be a quorum; and the said court shall hold one term annually at the seat of Government, and such adjourned or special terms as it may find necessary for the dispatch of business.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the first and second circuits shall remain as now constituted; that the districts of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware shall constitute the third circuit; that the districts of Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina shall constitute the fourth circuit; that the districts of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas shall constitute the fifth circuit; that the districts of Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, and Tennessee shall constitute the sixth circuit; that the districts of Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin shall constitute the seventh circuit; that the districts of Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, and Arkansas shall constitute the eighth circuit; and the districts of California, Oregon, and Nevada shall constitute the ninth circuit.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXI.—An Act to quiet the Title to certain Lands within the corporate Limits of the City of Benicia and the Town of Santa Cruz in the State of California.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all the right and title of the United States to the land situated within the corporate limits of the city of Benicia, in the county of Solano, State of California, as defined in the act incorporating said city, passed by the Legislature of the State of California, April twenty-four, eighteen hundred and fifty-one, be, and the same are hereby, relinquished and granted to the said city and its successors, upon trust, however, that so much of said lands as is in the bona fide occupancy of parties upon the passage of this act, by themselves or tenants, shall be conveyed by said city to such parties: Provided, however, That the relinquishment and grant by this act shall not extend to any lands within said corporate limits occupied as a military depot of the United States, or heretofore reserved by the United States for public purposes; nor shall they interfere with or prejudice any valid adverse right or claim, if such exist, to said land or any part thereof, or preclude a judicial examination and adjustment thereof.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all the right and title of the United States to the land within the corporate limits of the town of Santa Cruz in the State of California, as defined in the act of the Legislature of that State incorporating said town, be, and the same are hereby, relinquished and granted to the corporate authorities of said town and their successors, in trust for and with authority to convey so much of said lands as are in the bona fide occupancy of parties upon the passage of this act by themselves or tenants, to such parties: Provided, That this grant shall not extend to any reservation of the United States, nor prejudice any valid adverse right or claim, if such exist, to said land or any part thereof, nor preclude a judicial examination and adjustment thereof.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXII.—An Act for a Grant of Lands to the State of Kansas to aid in the Construction of the Northern Kansas Railroad and Telegraph.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there is hereby granted to the State of Kansas, for the use and benefit of the Saint Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company, the same being a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Kansas, to construct and operate a railroad from Elwood, in Kansas, westwardly, via Maryville, in the same State, so as to effect a junction with the Union Pacific railroad, or any branch thereof not further west than the one hundredth meridian of west longitude, every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers, for ten sections in width on each side of said road, to the point of intersection. But in case it shall appear that the United States have, when the line or route of said road is definitely fixed, sold any section or any part thereof, granted as aforesaid, or that the right of preemption or homestead settlement has attached to the same, or that the same has been reserved by the United States for any purpose whatever, then it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to cause to be selected for the purposes aforesaid, from the public lands of the United States nearest to tiers of sections above specified, so much land, in alternate sections or parts of sections designated by odd numbers, as shall be equal to such lands as the United States have sold, reserved, or otherwise appropriated, or to which the rights of preemption or homestead settlements have attached as aforesaid; which lands, thus indicated by odd numbers, and selected by direction of the Secretary of the Interior as aforesaid, shall be held by the State of Kansas for the use and purpose aforesaid: Provided, That the land to be so selected shall in no case be located further than twenty miles from the line of said road: Provided further, That the lands hereby granted for and on account of said road shall be exclusively applied in the construction of the same, and for no other purpose whatever, and shall be disposed of only as in this act hereinafter provided: Provided, also, That no part of the land granted by this act shall be applied to aid in the construction of any railroad or part thereof for the construction of which any previous grant of land or bonds has been made by Congress: And provided further, That any and all lands heretofore reserved to the United States by any act of Congress, or in any other manner by competent authority, for the purpose of aiding in any object of internal improvement, or for any other purpose whatsoever, be, and the same are hereby, reserved to the United States from the operations of this act, except so far as may be found necessary to locate the route of said road through said lands; in which case the right of way for one hundred feet on each side of said road only shall be granted, subject to the approval of the President of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the sections and parts of sections of land which by such grant shall remain to the United States, within ten miles on each side of said road, shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of the public lands when sold; nor shall any of said lands become subject to sale at private entry until the same shall have been first offered at public sale to the highest bidder, at or above the increased minimum price, as aforesaid: Provided, That actual and bona fide settlers, under the provisions of the preemption and homestead laws of the United States, may, after due proof of settlement, improvement, cultivation, and occupation, as now provided by law, purchase the same, at the increased minimum price aforesaid: And provided also, That settlers on any of said reserved sections, under the provisions of the homestead law, who improve, occupy, and cultivate the same for a period of five years, and comply with the several conditions and requirements of said act, shall be entitled to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres each, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the grant of the lands hereby made is upon condition that said company, after the construction of its road, shall keep it in repair and use, and shall at all times be in readiness to transport troops, munitions of war, supplies, and public stores upon its roads for the Government when required to do so by any Department thereof, the Government at all times having the preference in the use of the road for all the purposes aforesaid at fair and reasonable rates of compensation, not exceeding that paid by private individuals or the average paid for like services on other roads. And the lands hereby granted, held, and reserved as aforesaid shall inure to the benefit of said company, as follows: when the Governor of the State of Kansas shall certify that any section of ten consecutive miles of said road is completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner as a first-class railroad, then the said Secretary of the Interior shall issue to the said company patents for so many sections of the land hereinbefore granted as lie opposite to and contemporaneous with the said completed sections. And when certificates of the Governor, aforesaid, shall be presented to said Secretary, of the completion, as aforesaid, of each successive section of ten consecutive miles of said road, the said Secretary shall in like manner issue to said company patents for the said sections of said land as aforesaid for each of said sections of road until said road shall be completed: Provided, That if said railroad company or its assigns shall fail to complete at least one section of said road each year from the date of its acceptance of the grant provided for in this act, then its right to the lands for said section so failing of completion shall revert to the Government of the United States: Provided further, That if said road is not completed within ten years from the date of the acceptance of the grant hereinbefore made, the lands remaining unpatented shall revert to the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That as soon as the said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior maps of its lines, designating the route thereof, it shall be the duty of the said Secretary to withdraw from the market the lands granted by this act, in such manner as may be best calculated to effect the purposes of this act and subserve the public interest.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the United States mail shall be transported on said road and its extension, under the direction of the Post Office Department, at such price as Congress may by law provide: Provided, That until such price is fixed by law the Postmaster General shall have power to fix the compensation.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to said Saint Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, for the construction of a railroad as proposed; and the right is hereby given to said corporation to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road material for the construction thereof. Said way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of said road where it may pass through the public domain; also all necessary ground for station buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, side-tracks, turn-tables, and water-stations.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the acceptance of the terms, conditions, and impositions of this act by the said Saint Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company shall be signified in writing, under the corporate seal of the said company, duly executed pursuant to the direction of its board of directors first had and obtained, which acceptance shall be made within six months after the passage of this act and not afterwards, and shall be deposited with the Secretary of the Interior.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXIII.—An Act to regulate the Registering of Vessels.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act approved on the tenth day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, entitled "An act to regulate the registering of vessels," shall not be deemed or construed to affect or limit the operation of the act approved on the twenty-third day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, entitled "An act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue registers to vessels in certain cases," but the same shall be in full force and effect, anything in the act first aforesaid to the contrary notwithstanding.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXIV.—An Act to authorize the Construction of a Railroad through certain Land of the United States in Kansas.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Leavenworth City Railroad Company be, and are hereby, authorized to construct a horse railway, with one or two tracks, through the military reservation from Fort Leavenworth to the city of Leavenworth, Kansas, and take for the accommodation of the said road, or the business thereof, a strip of land over said reservation not exceeding twenty feet in width: Provided, That the location of said railroad through said reservation shall be on and along the west side of the wagon road leading from the said city to the said fort, and that the said company shall erect their own bridges and crossings, and not be permitted to use those of the wagon road: And provided also, That whenever said strip of land shall cease to be used for the purposes of said railroad company or the accommodation of the business thereof, the same shall revert to the United States; that this privilege shall be allowed as long as the Secretary of War shall, in his discretion, determine, and no longer.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXV.—An Act to amend the Acts approved August six, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, and July sixteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, establishing a Metropolitan Police in the District of Columbia, to increase the Efficiency thereof, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the chief executive officer of the police shall hereafter be styled major; the present sergeants shall be called lieutenants; the roundsmen called sergeants, and the patrolmen called privates; and that, in addition to the officers and employes the commissioners of the Metropolitan police, in the District of Columbia, are now authorized by law to appoint, the said commissioners be authorized to appoint one captain, who shall be the inspector of the force, command it in sickness or absence of the major, and perform such other duties as the said commissioners may direct; one clerk in the office of the major, who shall have charge of the records of the sanitary company, and perform such other duties as the major, by direction or with the approval of the commissioners, may prescribe; twenty sergeants, and fifty patrolmen or privates.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the sixth section of the act of July sixteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, authorizing the selection of justices of the peace by the board of police, to officiate at the respective station-houses, be construed to provide for the hearing of all cases of offense against statutory, corporation, or common law, of which the said board is charged by law with the execution; and all fines imposed by any justice within either of the jurisdictions of the Metropolitan police district shall be, by the justices imposing the same, paid into the hands of the treasurer of the board of police, on the first Thursday after the same shall have been collected, who shall duly receipt therefor, in duplicate, to the credit of the city or county within which the offense was committed; and such justice shall, in each case, return the original receipt to the treasurer of the same jurisdiction; and the treasurer of the police board shall pay over such sums monthly to the proper officers of said cities or county, upon proper receipts, except as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That from and after the expiration of licenses already granted it shall be unlawful for any person or persons keeping an ordinary, restaurant, saloon, or other place where spirituous liquors are sold within the District of Columbia, to give, sell, or dispose of any intoxicating drinks without a license approved by the board of police; and hereafter no such license shall be considered legal by any of the authorities having jurisdiction within said District, until the same shall have been approved by the board of police and so certified by the secretary thereof under the office seal.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the board of police shall provide specific rules for uniform clothing of the police force, which shall be procured by each of the members thereof respectively, strictly in conformity with such rules, at his own expense and risk, and he shall be removed from such force for not complying with such rules.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That from and after the passage of this act the property clerk of the Metropolitan police district shall be vested with all the powers now conferred by law upon notaries public in the District of Columbia. He may administer oaths and certify depositions which may be necessary to establish the ownership of any property or money lost, abandoned, or returned to him under the directions of the board of police, other than such as may be so returned as the proceeds of crime; and upon satisfactory evidence of such ownership he shall deliver the same to said owner, his heirs and legal representatives, and to him or them only, except it be proven impracticable for such owner, heirs, or representatives to appear, when the same may be delivered and receipted for upon such proof of ownership and the filing in the office of said property clerk, of a duly executed power of attorney from said owner or his heirs or legal representatives. And any property or money returned to the property clerk as the proceeds of crime, and which shall not be called for as evidence by any proceeding in the courts of the District within one year from the date of such return, may, unless specially claimed by the owner within that time, be thereafter treated as other unclaimed, abandoned, or lost property or money, as provided in the act of July sixteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That where animals or articles of property, other than money, are returned to the property clerk as the proceeds of crime, when shown by sufficient evidence to be necessary for the current use of the owners and not for sale, (except perishable property that may be delivered to the owner on ample security being taken by the committing magistrate for his appearance at the criminal court to prosecute the case,) the board of police shall have power, in its discretion, to authorize the property clerk to place the same in the custody of such owners, upon sufficient bonds being given by said owner or owners in the sum of twice the value thereof, conditioned for the production of the same at any time within one year, when required for use in court as evidence in any proceeding thereon, in accordance with the provisions required by the act of July sixteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two. And in cases of large quantities of goods held for sale by the owners, that may come into the possession of the property clerk as the proceeds of crime, the same may be delivered to the said owner, his heirs or representatives, as provided in section five of this act, upon ample security to prosecute, except those of an estimated value of fifty dollars, which shall be retained by the property clerk until the discharge or conviction of the accused, as required by said act.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That hereafter no person shall assume or practice the occupation of detective within the limits of the District of Columbia who shall not first receive a specific appointment for that purpose, unless pursuing the detection of criminals as a private business outside of such authority, and not otherwise specifically authorized by law. Any person so practicing shall enter into bonds to the board of police with surety in the sum of not less than ten thousand dollars, to be approved by the board of police, for a faithful and correct return to said board, in such manner and at such times as the board of police shall direct, of all business transacted by such private detectives; and in each and every case of a forfeiture of such bond or bonds for failure to make such returns to said board as required, or for failure of persons accused by such bonded private detectives to appear to answer charges in court, it shall be the duty of the attorney of the United States for the said District to immediately prosecute the sureties thereon to the full extent of a recovery of the forfeitures. And it shall be the duty of any person prosecuting the business of a private detective, who may arrest a person for crime, to bring the person arrested with all evidence of the alleged crime, including property or money which may become evidence, immediately to the office of the superintendent of police, or the nearest Metropolitan police station, where the case shall undergo an examination before the magistrate assigned thereto; and all laws or parts of laws that govern the Metropolitan police in the matters of persons, property, or money shall hereafter be applicable to said detectives, (or to persons practicing as detectives, whatever other name they may assume,) who shall make like returns and dispositions thereof, as required by law and the rules of the board of police governing the Metropolitan police force.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That upon the execution of a private detective's bond, it shall be the duty of such private detectives to report to the secretary of the board of police, who shall file such bond and record the name, age, description, nationality, and residence of said private detective; and it shall be unlawful for such detectives, or any member of the Metropolitan police force, or for any and all other persons, to compromise a felony or any other unlawful act, or to participate in, assent to, aid, or assist any person suspected of crime to escape a full judicial examination by failing to give known facts or reasonable causes of suspicion, or withholding any information relative to the charge or suspicion from the police magistrate or justice, or in any manner to receive any money, property, favor, or other compensation, from, or on account of, any person arrested or subject to arrest for any crime, or supposed crime, or to permit any such person to go at large without due effort to secure an investigation of such supposed crime; and for any violation of the foregoing provisions of this section, or either of them, the said police, or private detective, or other person guilty thereof, shall be deemed as having compromised a felony, and be thereafter prohibited from acting as an officer of the Metropolitan police force or as a private detective, and shall be prosecuted to the extent of the law for aiding criminals to escape the ends of justice.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXVI.—An Act to give certain Powers to the Levy Court of the County of Washington in the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in addition to the existing remedy by distress, for the recovery of taxes due to the levy court in the county of Washington, real property in said county, outside the corporate limits of Georgetown and Washington, on which one year's taxes shall be due and unpaid, or so much thereof, not less than one acre, (where the property on which the tax has accrued is not less than that quantity,) as may be necessary to pay any such taxes, with all legal costs and charges arising thereon, may be sold at public sale, to satisfy such taxes and expenses, by the collector appointed by the levy court of said county: Provided, That public notice be given of the time and place of sale by advertising once a week for eight successive weeks in some newspaper published in the city of Washington, in which advertisement shall be given a sufficient and definite description of the property selected for sale, the name of the person to whom the same is assessed, and the aggregate amount of taxes due thereon. The purchaser or purchasers of any such property shall pay, at the time of such sale, the amount of taxes due on the property so purchased by him, her, or them, respectively, with the amount of the expenses of sale, and shall pay the residue of the purchase-money within ten days after the expiration of two years from the day of sale, to the collector or other officer of the levy court authorized to receive the same, and the amount of such residue shall be placed in the treasury of said levy court, subject to the order of the original proprietor or proprietors of the property sold, his, her, or their legal representatives; and the purchaser or purchasers of said property shall receive a title thereto in fee-simple, by deed, under the hand of the president of said levy court and its seal, which shall be deemed good and valid in law and equity: Provided, nevertheless, That if within two years from the day of any such sale, or before such purchaser or purchasers shall have paid the residue, if any, of the purchase-money as aforesaid, the proprietor or proprietors of any property sold as aforesaid, his, her, or their agents, or legal representatives, shall repay to such purchaser or purchasers the money paid for taxes and expenses as aforesaid, together with ten per centum per annum as interest thereon, or make a tender thereof, or deposit the same with the treasurer of said levy court or other officer authorized to receive the same, for the use of such purchaser or purchasers, and subject to his or their order, he, she, or they shall be reinstated in his, her, or their original right and title, as if no such sale had been made; and if any purchaser shall fail to pay the residue of the purchase-money as aforesaid within the time required as aforesaid, for any property so purchased by him, he shall pay ten per centum per annum, as interest thereon, in addition to such residue, from the expiration of the two years as aforesaid, until the actual payment of such residue and the receiving of a conveyance as aforesaid, and said interest shall alike be subject to the order of the original proprietor or proprietors as the residue of the purchase-money aforesaid: Provided also, That no sale shall be made of any improved property in pursuance of this section, whereon there is personal property of sufficient value to pay said taxes, nor of such improved property whereon there is not such personal property, until the collector shall first file a sworn return with the clerk of said levy court that there is no such personal property, which return shall be prima facie proof of that fact; and that minors, mortgagees, and others having equitable liens or other interests, as creditors, in real property sold for taxes as aforesaid shall be allowed one year after such minors' coming to full age, or after such mortgagees, or others having equitable interests, obtaining possession of, or a decree for the sale of, such property to redeem the same from the purchaser or purchasers, his, her, or their heirs or assigns, on paying the amount of the purchase-money so paid therefor, with ten per centum interest thereon per annum, and the value of any improvements erected on said property by the purchaser or his assigns while in his possession.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for the collector to postpone, after such advertisement, the sale of the property advertised according to the foregoing section, to any future day, for want of bidders or other reasonable cause, giving public notice of such postponement; and the sale made at such postponed time shall be equally valid as if made on the day stated in the advertisement.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the collector of said levy court shall have authority to collect any tax lawfully imposed by said court, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the person chargeable therewith, wherever the same may be found in said county, out of the corporate limits of Washington and Georgetown; but no such sale shall be made unless ten days' previous notice thereof be given in some newspaper printed in the city of Washington.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That it shall not be necessary that the said levy court shall have actually paid the portion of the general expenses of the county of Washington, or any other expenses a portion of which either of the cities of Washington or Georgetown is liable for, to enable the said court to demand of either of said cities payment of its proportion of said expenses already incurred, or for the supreme court of the District of Columbia to act summarily in the matter and give judgment, according to the provisions of the act of July one, eighteen hundred and twelve, entitled "An act conferring certain powers on the levy court for the county of Washington, in the District of Columbia."

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXVII.—An Act relating to Public Schools in the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the eighteenth section of the act entitled "An act to provide for the public instruction of youth in the county of Washington, District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, shall be so construed as to require the cities of Washington and Georgetown to pay over to the trustees of colored schools of said cities such a proportionate part of all moneys received or expended for school or educational purposes in said cities, including the cost of sites, buildings, improvements, furniture, and books, and all other expenditures on account of schools, as the colored children between the ages of six and seventeen years, in the respective cities, bear to the whole number of children, white and colored, between the same ages. That the money shall be considered due and payable to said trustees on the first day of October of each year, and if not then paid over to them, interest at the rate of ten per centum per annum on the amount unpaid may be demanded and collected from the authorities of the delinquent city by said trustees.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG... 1ST SESS.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said trustees may maintain an action of debt in the supreme court of the District of Columbia against said cities of Washington and Georgetown for the non-payment of any sum of money arising under the aforesaid act of June twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-four.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXVIII.—An Act to incorporate the Metropolitan Mining and Manufacturing Company.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That John Ford, George D. Williams, Thomas W. Hyde, Oliver Edwards, Charles H. Herd, Samuel A. Fulton, Charles Otis, Charles A. Eleston, George W. Holmes, Joseph E. Hollis, John F. Broadhead, and Lewis P. Moody, or any five of them, be, and are hereby, authorized and empowered to receive subscriptions to the capital stock of a corporation to be denominated the Metropolitan Mining and Manufacturing Company of the District of Columbia, who shall open a book for that purpose in the city of Washington, at the time and place to be by them designated, of which they shall give five days' notice in two or more of the daily papers of said city, and shall keep the same open until twenty thousand shares of one hundred dollars a share each shall have been subscribed; and any person of lawful age, and a citizen of the United States, shall be permitted to subscribe upon paying five dollars on each share at the time of subscribing. And it shall be lawful for the said corporation to have a common seal, sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, and have and exercise all the rights, privileges, and immunities for the purpose of the corporation hereby created.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the affairs of the company shall be managed by nine directors, to be elected annually by ballot on the second Monday of July, by the stockholders or by their legally empowered agents; and each share of stock shall entitle the holder thereof to one vote; the election to be held at the office of the company at a general meeting of the stockholders convened for that purpose, by ten days' public notice in two or more of the daily papers of the city of Washington: Provided, That the first election for directors shall be held pursuant to five days' notice given in one or more of the daily papers of the city of Washington by the persons named in the first section of this act, or any five of them, who shall designate the time when and the place where said election shall be held; and the stockholders shall then and there elect nine directors to serve until the next ensuing election and until their successors shall be duly elected and qualified as provided for in this act. And at the first ensuing meeting of the directors after every election they shall appoint one of their number as president, who shall hold office until the election and qualification of his successor. And five members of said board shall compose a quorum. And in case that an election for directors should not be made when pursuant to this act it should have been made, the company for that cause shall not be dissolved; and it shall be lawful within forty days thereafter to hold and make an election for directors in such manner as the by-laws of the company may prescribe, and the president and directors for the time being shall be continued in office until such election take place. And in the event of the death, resignation, or removal of any director from office, his place for the remainder of his term may be filled by the president and directors for the time being, in such manner as the by-laws may prescribe.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the president and directors shall have power to appoint a secretary and such other officers, agents, and clerks as may to them appear proper, to fix their compensation, and pay the same.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the capital stock shall be called in and paid in such installments and proportions, and at such times and places, as the president and directors, for the time being, may require and designate. And if any stockholder, subscriber, their assignee or transferee, shall refuse or neglect to pay such proportion or installment at the time and place appointed, such stockholder, subscriber, transferee, or assignee shall, at the option of the president and directors, forfeit to the use of the company all his, her, or their right, title, and interest in and to every share on which such installments have not been duly paid; and fresh subscriptions may be opened for the said shares in such manner as the by-laws may prescribe, or the president and directors may, at their option, commence suit for any installment that may be due and unpaid, and recover against the holder of said stock for the amount of the same: Provided, That no stockholder or subscriber shall be permitted to vote at any election for directors or at any general or special meeting of the company, on whose shares any installments or arrearages may be due more than fifteen days previous thereto.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the president and directors for the time being shall have power to ordain, establish, and put in execution such rules, regulations, ordinances, and by-laws as they may deem essential for the well-governance of the institution, not contrary to the laws and Constitution of the United States or of any State, or of this act, and generally to do and perform all acts, matters, and things which a corporation may or can lawfully do.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the president and directors are hereby empowered and fully authorized, on behalf of said company, to carry on the business of mining for iron ore and other native minerals, and manufacturing and preparing the same for market; and to purchase and hold by deed for a term or in fee-simple such real estate and other property within the District of Columbia and State of Virginia as may be necessary and proper for the purposes aforesaid; and to issue bonds not exceeding one half of the capital stock, upon such terms as may be deemed for the best interests of the company: Provided, That no bond shall be issued for a less sum than one hundred dollars, or bearing interest at a rate exceeding six per centum per annum.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the president and directors are hereby empowered and fully authorized, on behalf of said company, to lease, demise, bargain, sell, and convey any lands and real estate which may be owned or held by said company, and to execute and deliver to purchasers good and sufficient deeds therefor.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the stock of said company shall be transferred on the books of the company in such manner only as the by-laws of the company shall direct.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as making it perpetual, but Congress may at any time alter, amend, or repeal the same.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXIX.—An Act to quiet Land Titles in California.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in all cases where the State of California has heretofore made selections of any portion of the public domain in part satisfaction of any grant made to said State by any act of Congress, and has disposed of the same to purchasers in good faith under her laws, the lands so selected shall be, and hereby are, confirmed to said State: Provided, That no selection made by said State contrary to existing laws shall be confirmed by this act for lands to which any adverse preemption, homestead, or other right has, at the date of the passage of this act, been acquired by any settler under the laws of the United States, or to any lands which have been reserved for naval, military, or Indian purposes by the United States, or to any mineral land, or to any land held or claimed under any valid Mexican or Spanish grant, or to any land which, at the time of the passage of this act, was included within the limits of any city, town, or village, or within the county of San Francisco: And provided further, That the State of California shall not receive under this act a greater quantity of land for school or improvement purposes than she is entitled to by law.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That where the selections named in section one of this act have been made upon land which has been surveyed by authority of the United States, it shall be the duty of the proper authorities of the State, where the same has not already been done, to notify the register of the United States land office for the district in which the land is located of such selection, which notice shall be regarded as the date of the State selection, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall, immediately after the passage of this act, instruct the several local registers to forward to the General Land Office, after investigation and decision, all such selections, which, if found to be in accordance with section one of this act, the Commissioner shall certify over to the State in the usual manner.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That where the selections named in section one of this act have been made from lands which have not been surveyed by authority of the United States, but which selections have been surveyed by authority of and under the laws of said State, and the land sold to purchasers in good faith under the laws of the State, such selections shall, from the date of the passage of this act, when marked off and designated in the field, have the same force and effect as the preemption rights of a settler upon unsurveyed public land; and if, upon survey of such lands by the United States, the lines of the two surveys shall be found not to agree, the selection shall be so changed as to include those legal subdivisions which nearest conform to the identical land included in the State survey and selection. Upon the filing with the register of the proper United States land office of the township plat in which any such selection of unsurveyed land is located, the holder of the State title shall be allowed the same time to present and prove up his purchase and claim under this act as is allowed preëmptors under existing laws; and if found in accordance with section one of this act, the land embraced therein shall be certified over to the State by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That in all cases where township surveys have been, or shall hereafter be, made under authority of the United States, and the plats thereof approved, it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to certify over to the State of California, as swamp and overflowed, all the lands represented as such, upon such approved plats, within one year from the passage of this act, or within one year from the return and approval of such township plats. The Commissioner shall direct the United States surveyor general for the State of California to examine the segregation maps and surveys of the swamp and overflowed lands made by said State; and where he shall find them to conform to the system of surveys adopted by the United States, he shall construct and approve township plats accordingly, and forward to the General Land Office for approval: Provided, That in segregating large bodies of land, notoriously and obviously swamp and overflowed, it shall not be necessary to subdivide the same, but to run the exterior lines of such body of land. In case such State surveys are found not to be in accordance with the system of United States surveys, and in such other townships as no survey has been made by the United States, the Commissioner shall direct the surveyor general to make segregation surveys, upon application to said surveyor general by the Governor of said State, within one year of such application, of all the swamp and overflowed land in such townships, and to report the same to the General Land Office, representing and describing what land was swamp and overflowed under the grant, according to the best evidence he can obtain. If the authorities of said State shall claim as swamp and overflowed any land not represented as such upon the map or in the returns of the surveyors, the character of such land at the date of the grant, September twenty-eight, eighteen hundred and fifty, and the right to the same, shall be determined by testimony, to be taken before the surveyor general, who shall decide the same, subject to the approval of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to instruct the officers of the local land offices and the surveyor general, immediately after the passage of this act, to forward lists of all selections made by the State referred to in section one of this act, and lists and maps of all swamp and overflowed lands claimed by said State, or surveyed as provided in this act, for final disposition and determination, which final disposition shall be made by the Commissioner of the General Land Office without delay.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That an act entitled "An act to provide for the survey of the public lands in California, the granting of preemption rights therein, and for other purposes," approved March third, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, shall be construed as giving the State of California the right to select for school purposes other lands in lieu of such sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections as were settled upon prior to survey, reserved for public uses, covered by grants made under Spanish or Mexican authority, or by other private claims, or where such sections would be so covered if the lines of the public surveys were extended over such lands, which shall be determined whenever township lines shall have been extended over such land, and in case of Spanish or Mexican grants, when the final survey of such grants shall have been made. The surveyor general for the State of California shall furnish the State authorities with lists of all such sections so covered, as a basis of selection, such selections to be made from surveyed lands, and within the same land district as the section for which the selection is made.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That where persons in good faith, and for a valuable consideration, have purchased lands of Mexican grantees or assigns, which grants have subsequently been rejected, or where the lands so purchased have been excluded from the final survey of any Mexican grant, and have used, improved, and continued in the actual possession of the same as according to the lines of their original purchase, and where no valid adverse right or title (except of the United States) exists, such purchasers may purchase the same, after having such lands surveyed under existing laws, at the minimum price established by law, upon first making proof of the facts as required in this section, under regulations to be provided by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, joint entries being admissible by continuous proprietors to such an extent as will enable them to adjust their respective boundaries: Provided, That the provisions of this section shall not be applicable to the city and county of San Francisco: Provided, That the right to purchase herein given shall not extend to lands containing mines of gold, silver, copper, or cinnabar: Provided, That whenever it shall be made to appear by petition from the occupants of such land that injury to permanent improvements would result from running the lines of the public surveys through such permanent improvements, the Commissioner of the General Land Office may recognize existing lines of subdivisions.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That in all cases where a claim to land by virtue of a right or title derived from the Spanish or Mexican authorities has been finally confirmed, and a survey and plat thereof shall not have been requested within ten months from the passage of this act, as provided by sections six and seven of the act of July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, "to expedite the settlement of titles to lands in the State of California," and in all cases where a like claim shall hereafter be finally confirmed, and a survey and plat thereof shall not be requested, as provided by said sections within ten months after the passage of this act, or any final confirmation hereafter made, it shall be the duty of the surveyor general of the United States for California, as soon as practicable after the expiration of ten months from the passage of this act, or such final confirmation hereafter made, to cause the lines of the public surveys to be extended over such land, and he shall set off, in full satisfaction of such grant, and according to the lines of the public surveys, the quantity of land confirmed in such final decree, and as nearly as can be done in accordance with such decree; and all the land not included in such grant as so set off shall be subject to the general land laws of the United States: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed so as in any manner to interfere with the right of bona fide preemption claimants.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That from the decrees of the district courts of the United States for the district of California, approving or correcting the surveys of private land claims under Spanish or Mexican grants, rendered after the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, an appeal shall be allowed for the period of one year after the entry of such decrees to the circuit court of the United States for California, as provided by section three of the act of July first, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four, to expedite the settlement of titles to land in the State of California, and the decision of the circuit court shall be final: Provided, however, That from decrees of the district courts, as aforesaid, made after July one, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and prior to the passage of this act, an appeal may be taken to the United States circuit court for the State of California within one year from the approval of this act.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXX.—An Act to aid in the Construction of Telegraph Lines, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That any telegraph company now organized, or which may hereafter be organized under the laws of any State in this Union, shall have the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines of telegraph through and over any portion of the public domain of the United States, over and along any of the military or post roads of the United States which have been or may hereafter be declared such by act of Congress, and over, under, or across the navigable streams or waters of the United States: Provided, That such lines of telegraph shall be so constructed and maintained as not to obstruct the navigation of such streams and waters, or interfere with the ordinary travel on such military or post roads. And any of said companies shall have the right to take and use from such public lands the necessary stone, timber, and other materials for its posts, piers, stations, and other needful uses in the construction, maintenance, and operation of said lines of telegraph, and may preempt and use such portion of the unoccupied public lands subject to preemption through which its said lines of telegraph may be located as may be necessary for its stations, not exceeding forty acres for each station; but such stations shall not be within fifteen miles of each other.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That telegraphic communications between the several departments of the Government of the United States and their officers and agents shall, in their transmission over the lines of any of said companies, have priority over all other business, and shall be sent at rates to be annually fixed by the Postmaster General.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the rights and privileges hereby granted shall not be transferred by any company acting under this act to any other corporation, association, or person: Provided, however, That the United States may at any time after the expiration of five years from the date of the passage of this act, for postal, military, or other purposes, purchase all the telegraph lines, property, and effects of any or all of said companies at an appraised value, to be ascertained by five competent, disinterested persons, two of whom shall be selected by the Postmaster General of the United States, two by the company interested, and one by the four so previously selected.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That before any telegraph company shall exercise any of the powers or privileges conferred by this act, such company shall file their written acceptance with the Postmaster General of the restrictions and obligations required by this act.

APPROVED, July 24, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXXI.—An Act to define the Number and regulate the Appointment of Officers in the Navy, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the number allowed in each grade of line officers on the active list of the Navy shall be one admiral, one vice admiral, ten rear admirals, twenty-five commodores, fifty captains, ninety commanders, one hundred and eighty lieutenant commanders, one hundred and eighty lieutenants, one hundred and sixty masters, one hundred and sixty ensigns, and in other grades the number now allowed by law: Provided, That the increase in the grades authorized by this act shall be made by selection from the grade next below of officers who have rendered the most efficient and faithful service during the recent war, and who possess the highest professional qualifications and attainments. And nothing in this act shall preclude the advancement in rank now authorized by law for distinguished conduct in battle, or for extraordinary heroism: And provided further, That nothing in this act, nor in the fourteenth section of the act approved July sixteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An act to establish and equalize the grade of the line officers of the

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG.... 1ST SESS.

Navy," shall be so construed as to prevent the Secretary of the Navy from promoting to the grade of rear admiral on the retired list those commodores who have commanded squadrons by order of the Secretary of the Navy, or who have performed other highly meritorious service.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That of the number of line officers of the Navy on the active list, five lieutenant commanders, twenty lieutenants, fifty masters, and seventy-five ensigns may be appointed from those officers who have served in the volunteer naval service for a period of not less than two years, and who are either now in that service or have been honorably discharged therefrom: Provided, That if by reason of these appointments the number of officers in any grade shall exceed the number fixed by law, no more promotions or appointments to that grade shall be made until the number is reduced below the number fixed by law for that grade: And provided further, That the authority given by this section shall be exhausted when the number of volunteer officers above named shall have been once appointed.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Navy shall appoint a board consisting of not less than three naval officers superior in rank to the officers to be thus appointed in the regular Navy from the volunteer service, which board, after examination of the claims of all candidates, shall select and report to the Secretary of the Navy the most meritorious in character, ability, professional competency, and honorable service, the number to be appointed and transferred to the several grades mentioned in the second section of this act, provided they shall find that number who are suitably qualified therefor. And any officer who has served in the volunteer naval service for the term of two years or more, shall have the right to appear before the examining board and present his claims and be examined for an appointment in the regular Navy. And any volunteer officers attached to vessels at sea or on foreign stations may be appointed to the regular Navy, subject to the conditions contained in this section, after their return to the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he hereby is, authorized to retain, or to appoint under existing laws and regulations, such volunteer officers in the Navy as the exigencies of the service may require.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That lieutenant commanders may be assigned to duty as navigation and watch officers on board of vessels-of-war as well as first lieutenants of naval stations and of ships-of-war.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the annual compensation of the Admiral of the Navy shall be ten thousand dollars a year, and he shall be entitled to the services of a secretary, who shall receive the annual sea pay of a lieutenant in the Navy.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That naval constructors and first and second assistant engineers in the Navy shall be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, and shall have naval rank and pay as officers of the Navy.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXII.—An Act to revive the Grade of General in the United States Army.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the grade of "general of the Army of the United States" be, and the same is hereby, revived; and that the President is hereby authorized, whenever he shall deem it expedient, to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a general of the Army of the United States, to be selected from among those officers in the military service of the United States most distinguished for courage, skill, and ability, who, being commissioned as general, may be authorized, under the direction and during the pleasure of the President, to command the armies of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the pay proper of the general shall be four hundred dollars per month; and his allowance for fuel and quarters, when his headquarters are in Washington, shall be at the rate of three hundred dollars per month, and his other allowances in all respects the same as are allowed to the lieutenant general by the second section of the act approved February twenty-nine, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act reviving the grade of lieutenant general in the United States Army;" and the chief of staff to the lieutenant general shall be transferred and be the chief of staff to the general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general in the Army of the United States; and the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, entitled "An act to provide for a chief of staff to the lieutenant general commanding the armies of the United States," is hereby repealed, and the said general may select from the regular Army for service upon his staff such number of aides, not exceeding six, as he may judge proper, who during the term of such staff service shall each have the rank, pay, and emoluments of a colonel of cavalry. And it is hereby provided, that in lieu of the staff now allowed by law to the lieutenant general, he shall be entitled to two aides and one military secretary, each to have the rank, pay, and emoluments of a lieutenant colonel of cavalry, during the term of such staff service.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXIII.—An Act making Appropriations for the Consular and Diplomatic Expenses of the Government for the year ending thirtieth June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the objects hereafter expressed, for the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, namely:

For salaries of envoys extraordinary, ministers, and commissioners of the United States at Great Britain, France, Russia, Prussia, Spain, Austria, Brazil, republic of Mexico, China, Italy, Chili, Peru, Switzerland, Rome, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Turkey, New Granada, Bolivia, Ecuador, Venezuela, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Sandwich Islands, Costa Rica, Honduras, Argentine Confederation, Paraguay, Japan, and Salvador, three hundred and eight thousand five hundred dollars.

For salaries of secretaries of legation, thirty thousand dollars.

For salaries of assistant secretaries of legation at London and Paris, three thousand dollars.

For salary of the interpreter to the legation to China, five thousand dollars.

For salary of the secretary of legation to Turkey, acting as interpreter, three thousand dollars.

For salary of the interpreter to the legation to Japan, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses of all the missions abroad, fifty thousand dollars.

For contingent expenses of foreign intercourse, sixty-five thousand dollars.

For expenses of intercourse with the Barbary Powers, three thousand dollars.

For expenses of the consulates in the Turkish dominions, namely: interpreters, guards, and other expenses of the consulates at Constantinople, Smyrna, Candia, Alexandria, and Beirut, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For the relief and protection of American seamen in foreign countries, two hundred thousand dollars.

For expenses which may be incurred in acknowledging the services of the masters and crews of foreign vessels in rescuing citizens of the United States from shipwreck, ten thousand dollars.

For the purchase of blank books, stationery, book-cases, arms of the United States, seals, presses, and flags, and for the payment of postages, and miscellaneous expenses of the consuls of the United States, including loss by exchange, fifty thousand dollars.

For office rent for those consuls general, consuls, and commercial agents who are not allowed to trade, including loss by exchange thereon, forty-five thousand dollars.

For salaries of consuls general, consuls, commercial agents, and thirteen consular clerks, including loss by exchange thereon, namely:

I. CONSULATES GENERAL.

Schedule B.

Alexandria, Calcutta, Constantinople, Frankfurt-on-the-Main, Havana, Montreal, Shanghai.

II. CONSULATES

Schedule B.

Acapulco, Aix-la-Chapelle, Algiers, Amoy, Amsterdam, Antwerp, Aspinwall, Bankok, Basle, Belfast, Beirut, Buenos Ayres, Bordeaux, Bremen, Brindisi, Boulogne, Barcelona, Cadiz, Callao, Candia, Canton, Chin Kiang, Clifton, Coaticook, Cork, Demarara, Dundee, Elsinore, Erie, Foo-Choo, Funchal, Geneva, Genoa, Gibraltar, Glasgow, Goderich, Guaymas, Halifax, Hamburg, Havre, Honolulu, Hong-Kong, Hankow, Jerusalem, Kanagawa, Kingston, Kingston in Canada, La Rochelle, Laguayra, Lahaina, Leeds, Leghorn, Leipsic, Lisbon, Liverpool, London, Lyons, Malaga, Malta, Manchester, Matanzas, Marseilles, Mauritius, Melbourne, Messina, Moscow, Munich, Nagasaki, Naples, Nassau, (West Indies,) Newcastle, Nice, Nantes, Odesa, Oporto, Palermo, Panama, Paris, Pernambuco, Pictou, Ponce, Port Mahon, Prescott, Prince Edward Island, Revel, Rio de Janeiro, Rotterdam, San Juan del Sur, San Juan, (Porto Rico,) Saint John, (Canada East,) Santiago de Cuba, Port Sarnia, Singapore, Smyrna, Spezzia, Southampton, Saint John, (Newfoundland,) Saint Petersburg, Saint Pierre (Martinique,) Saint Thomas, Stuttgart, Swatow, Saint Helena, Tampico, Tangier, Toronto, Trieste, Trinidad de Cuba, Tripoli, Tunis, Turk's Island, Valparaiso, Vera Cruz, Vienna, Windsor, Zurich.

III. COMMERCIAL AGENCIES.

Schedule B.

Balize, (Honduras,) Madagascar, San Juan del Norte, Saint Domingo.

IV. CONSULATES.

Schedule C.

Aux Cayes, Bahia, Batavia, Bay of Islands, Cape Haytien, Cape Town, Carthagena, Ceylon, Cobija, Cyprus, Falkland Islands, Fayal, Guayaquil, Lanthala, Maranhon, Matamoras, Mexico, Montevideo, Omoa, Payta, Para, Paso del Norte, Piraous, Rio Grande, Sabanilla, Saint Catherine, Santa Cruz, (West Indies,) Santiago, (Cape Verde,) Stettin, Tabasco, Tahiti, Talcahuano, Tumbez, Venice, Zanzibar.

V. COMMERCIAL AGENCIES.

Schedule C.

Amoor River, Apia, Gaboon, Saint Paul de Loando, [Loanda,] four hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars: Provided, That the compensation of the consuls at Malta, Saint John, (Canada East,) Nice, Lisbon, Santa

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

Cruz, Tampico, Prince Edward Island, Barcelona, Saint Catherine's, in Brazil, and Nantes, is established at fifteen hundred dollars each annually, and the compensation of the consul at Hankow is established at three thousand dollars annually; and no money shall be paid to the present minister resident at Portugal out of any funds whatever on account of further services in his office.

For interpreters to the consulates in China, and to the consular court at Bangkok, in Siam, including loss by exchange thereon, eight thousand three hundred dollars.

For expenses incurred under instructions from the Secretary of State, in bringing home from foreign countries persons charged with crime, and expenses incident thereto, twenty thousand dollars.

For salaries of the marshals for the consular courts in Japan, including that at Nagasaki, and in China, Siam, and Turkey, including loss by exchange thereon, ten thousand dollars.

For rent of prisons for American convicts in Japan, China, Siam, and Turkey, and for wages of the keepers of the same, nine thousand dollars.

For salaries of commissioners and consuls general to Hayti, Liberia, and Dominica, nineteen thousand dollars; and the title of these diplomatic representatives shall be hereafter minister resident and consul general, with no increase of salary.

For expenses under the act of Congress to carry into effect the treaty between the United States and her Britannic Majesty for the suppression of the African slave trade, seventeen thousand dollars.

For expenses under the act to encourage immigration, twenty thousand dollars.

For further compensation of the commissioner under the treaty between the United States and her Britannic Majesty for the final settlement of the claims of the Hudson's Bay and Puget Sound Agricultural Company, three thousand dollars in full for his services and personal expenses.

For expenses under the neutrality act, twenty thousand dollars.

For expenses of the commission to run and mark the boundary line between the United States and the British possessions bounding on Washington Territory, thirteen thousand one hundred and ten dollars.

For the payment of the second annual installment of the proportion contributed by the United States towards the capitalization of the Scheldt dues, to fulfill the stipulations contained in the fourth article of the convention between the United States and Belgium of the twentieth of May, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, the sum of fifty-five thousand five hundred and eighty-four dollars in coin, and such further sum as may be necessary to carry out the stipulation of the convention providing for payment of interest on the said sum and on the portion of the principal remaining unpaid.

For repairs of cemetery fences and sexton's house, belonging to the United States, in the city of Mexico, fifteen hundred dollars, to be expended under the direction of the President of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a second Assistant Secretary of State in the Department of State, and also an examiner of claims for the same Department, whose salary shall be three thousand dollars per annum; and the salary of the second Assistant Secretary of State shall be thirty-five hundred dollars per annum; and such sums are hereby appropriated.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That all fees collected by any consul or commercial agent not mentioned in schedule B or C, or by any vice consul or commercial agent appointed to perform their duties, or by any other person in their behalf, shall be accounted for to the Secretary of the Treasury in the same mode and manner as is provided for in section eighteen of the act approved August eighteen, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, entitled "An act to regulate the diplomatic and consular system of the United States." And when the fees so collected by any such consul or commercial agent amount to more than twenty-five hundred dollars in any one year, over and above the expenses of office rent and clerk hire, to be approved by the Secretary of State, of which return shall be made to the Secretary of the Treasury, the excess for that year shall be paid to the Secretary of the Treasury, in the mode provided for by said act.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the salary of any envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary hereafter appointed shall be the salary of a minister resident and nothing more, except when he is appointed to one of the countries where the United States are now represented by an envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXXIV.—An Act further to provide for the Safety of the Lives of Passengers on board of Vessels propelled in whole or in part by Steam, to regulate the Salaries of Steamboat Inspectors, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That if any engineer or pilot, licensed in pursuance of law by any inspector or board of inspectors, shall, to the hinderance of commerce, wrongfully or unreasonably refuse to serve as such on any steam vessel, as authorized by the terms of his license, or shall fail to deliver to the applicant for such services, at the time of such refusal, if the same shall be demanded, a statement in writing, signed by such engineer or pilot, of the reasons therefor, or if any pilot shall refuse to admit into the pilot-house with him any person or persons whom the captain or owners of any steamboat may desire to place there for the purpose of acquiring the knowledge of piloting, he shall forfeit and pay to the party aggrieved thereby the sum of three hundred dollars, to be recovered in an action of debt founded on this statute. And thereupon on such recovery, as well as on such refusal to give such statement in writing, or to admit such person into the pilot-house as aforesaid, his license shall be immediately revoked, upon the same proceedings as are provided by law in other cases of the revocation of such licenses.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That when boilers are so arranged on a steamer that there is employed a water connecting-pipe through which the water may pass from one boiler to another, there shall also be provided a similar steam connection, having an area of opening into each boiler of at least one square inch for every two square feet of effective heating surface contained in any one of the boilers so connected, half the flue and all other surfaces being computed as effective. And no boiler shall hereafter be allowed, under any circumstances, a greater working pressure than one hundred and fifty pounds to the square inch.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That one or more additional safety-valves, of such dimensions and arrangement as shall be prescribed by the board of supervising inspectors, shall be placed on the boilers of every steamer, and shall be loaded to a pressure not exceeding two pounds above the working steam pressure allowed, and shall be secured by the inspector against the interference of all persons engaged in the management of the vessel or her machinery. And the alloyed metals now required by law to be placed in or upon the flues of boilers shall be fusible, as now required by law, and at a temperature not exceeding four hundred and forty-five degrees of the Fahrenheit thermometer; and a good and reliable water-gauge and a full set of gauge cocks shall be provided for each boiler, whether connected or otherwise.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That no steamboat boiler hereafter built, to which the heat is applied on the outside of the shell, shall be constructed of plates of more than three tenths of an inch in thickness, the ends or heads of boilers only excepted. And every steamboat boiler hereafter built, if employed on rivers flowing into the Gulf of Mexico, or their tributaries, shall have not less than three inches of clear space for water between and around its internal flues. And steamers hereafter built, which shall employ four or more boilers set in a battery, shall have the same divided in such a manner that one half, as nearly as may be, of the number of boilers employed will act independently of the other half, so far as relates to the water connection; but the steam from all the boilers may be connected as provided by this act.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That cotton, hemp, hay, straw, or other easily ignitable commodity, shall not be carried on the decks or guards of any steamer carrying passengers, except on ferry-boats crossing rivers, and then only on the sterns of such boats, unless the same shall be protected by a complete and suitable covering of canvas or other proper material, to prevent ignition from sparks, under a penalty of one hundred dollars for each offense. Nor shall coal oil or crude petroleum be hereafter carried on such steamers, except on the decks or guards thereof, or in open holds where a free circulation of air is secured, and at such distance from the furnaces or fires as may be prescribed by any supervisors [supervising] inspector or any board of local inspectors.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That barges carrying passengers while in tow of a steamer shall be subject to the provisions of the acts for the preservation of the lives of passengers, so far as relates to fire-buckets, axes, and life-preservers. For a violation of this section the penalty shall be one hundred dollars.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That steamers used as freight boats shall be subject to the same inspection and requirements as provided for ferry, tug, and canal boats, by an act relating to steamboats, approved the eighth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and to the provisions of this act.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That if any person connected, as a member or otherwise, with any association of steamboat pilots, engineers, masters, or owners, shall accept or attempt to exercise the functions of the office of steamboat inspector, it shall be a misdemeanor, for which he shall forfeit his office, and shall be further subject to a penalty of five hundred dollars.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That all vessels navigating the bays, inlets, rivers, harbors, and other waters of the United States, except vessels subject to the jurisdiction of a foreign Power and engaged in foreign trade and not owned in whole or in part by a citizen of the United States, shall be subject to the navigation laws of the United States; and all vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, and navigating as aforesaid, shall also be subject to all rules and regulations consistent therewith, established for the government of steam vessels in passing, as provided in the twenty-ninth section of an act relating to steam vessels, approved the thirtieth day of August, eighteen hundred and fifty-two. And every sea-going steam vessel now subject or hereby made subject to the navigation laws of the United States, and to the rules and regulations aforesaid, shall, when under way, except upon the high seas, be under the control and direction of pilots licensed by the inspectors of steam vessels; vessels of other countries and public vessels of the United States only excepted.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That all sea-going vessels carrying passengers, and those navigating any of the northern and northwestern lakes, shall have the life-boats required by law, provided with suitable boat-disengaging apparatus, so arranged as to allow such boats to be safely launched with their complements of passengers while such vessels are under speed or otherwise, and so as to allow such disengaging apparatus to be operated by one person disengaging both ends of the boat simultaneously from the tackles by which it may be lowered to the water.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the provision for a foremast-head light for steamships, in an act entitled "An act fixing certain rules and regulations for preventing collisions on the water," approved the twenty-ninth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, shall not be construed to apply to other than ocean-going steamers and steamers carrying sail. River steamers navigating waters flowing into the Gulf of Mexico shall carry the following lights, viz: one red light on the outboard side of the port smoke-pipe, and one green light on the outboard side of the starboard smoke-pipe; these lights to show both forward and aft, and also abeam on their respective sides. All coasting steamers, and those navigating bays, lakes, or other inland waters, other than ferry-boats, and those above provided for, shall carry the red and green lights, as prescribed for ocean-going steamers; and, in addition thereto, a central range of two white lights; the after light being carried at an elevation of at least fifteen feet above the light at the head of the vessel; the head light to be so constructed as to show a good light through twenty points of the compass, namely, from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on either side of the vessel; and the after light to show all around the horizon.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the annual compensation paid to local inspectors of steamboats shall be hereafter as follows, to wit:

For the district of Portland, in Maine, three hundred dollars; for the district of Boston and Charlestown, in Massachusetts, one thousand dollars; for the district of New London, in Connecticut, five hundred dollars; for the district of New York, two at two thousand dollars each, two at fifteen hundred dollars each, and one additional inspector of boilers at fifteen hundred dollars; for the district of Philadelphia, in Pennsylvania, thirteen hundred dollars; for the district of Baltimore, in Maryland, twelve hundred dollars; for the district of Norfolk, in Virginia, three hundred dollars; for the district of Charleston, in South Carolina, five hundred dollars; for the district of Savannah, in Georgia, four hundred dollars; for the district of Mobile, in Alabama, one thousand dollars; for the district of New Orleans, or in which New Orleans is the port of entry, Louisiana, two thousand dollars; for the district of Galveston, in Texas, four hundred dollars; for the district of St. Louis, in Missouri, sixteen hundred dollars; for the district of Nashville, in Tennessee, four hundred dollars; for the district of Louisville, in Kentucky, twelve hundred dollars; for the district of Cincinnati, in Ohio, sixteen hundred dollars; for the district of Wheeling, West Virginia, five hundred dollars; for the district of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, sixteen hundred dollars; for the district of Chicago Illinois, eight hundred dollars; for the district of Detroit, Michigan, one thousand dollars; for the district of Cleveland, Ohio, six hundred dollars; for the district of Buffalo, New York, twelve hundred dollars; for the district of Oswego, or of which Oswego is the port of entry, New York, three hundred dollars; for the district of Vermont, of which Burlington is the port of entry, three hundred dollars; for the district of San Francisco, California, fifteen hundred dollars; for the district of Memphis, Tennessee, nine hundred dollars; for the district of Galena, Illinois, one thousand dollars; for the district of Portland, Oregon, seven hundred dollars; to the supervising inspector of the Pacific coast, two thousand five hundred dollars; to other supervising inspectors, two thousand dollars each.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, one clerk each in the local offices at New York and New Orleans, and the annual compensation allowed to these clerks shall be seven hundred and fifty dollars each.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury may procure, for the supervising and local inspectors of steamboats, such stationery, printing, instruments, and other things necessary for the use of their respective offices, as may be required therefor; and shall make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to secure the proper execution of the steamboat acts; and may from time to time cause special examinations to be made into the administration of the inspection laws.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That supervising, and local, and assistant inspectors of steamboats shall execute proper bonds, in such form and upon such conditions as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and subject to his approval, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of their respective offices, and the payment, in the manner provided by law, of all moneys that may be received by them.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXXV.—An Act increasing the Pensions of Widows and Orphans, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of the pension laws are hereby extended to and made to include provost marshals, deputy provost marshals, and enrolling officers, who have been killed or wounded in the discharge of their duties; and for the purpose of determining the amount of pension to which such persons and their dependents shall be entitled, provost marshals shall be ranked as captains, deputy provost marshals as first lieutenants, and enrolling officers as second lieutenants.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the pensions to widows of deceased soldiers and sailors, having children by such deceased soldiers or sailors, be increased at the rate of two dollars per month for each child of such soldier or sailor under the age of sixteen years. And in all cases in which there shall be more than one child of any deceased soldier or sailor leaving no widow, or where his widow has died or married again, or where she has been deprived of her pension under the provisions of section eleven of an act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts relating to pensions," approved June sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the pension granted to such children under sixteen years of age by existing laws shall be increased to the same amount per month that would be allowed under the foregoing provisions to the widow if living and entitled to a pension: Provided, That in no case shall more than one pension be allowed to the same person.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of an act entitled "An act to grant pensions," approved July fourteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and of the acts supplementary thereto and amendatory thereof, are hereby, so far as applicable, extended to the pensions under previous laws, except revolutionary pensioners.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That if any person during the pendency of his application for an invalid pension, and after the completion of the proof showing his right thereto, has died, or shall hereafter die, but not in either case by reason of a wound received, or disease contracted in the service of the United States and in the line of duty, his widow, or if he left no widow, or in the event of her death or marriage, his relatives in the same order in which th[e]y would have received a pension, if they had been thereunto entitled under existing laws on account of the services and death in the line of duty of such person, shall have the right to demand and receive the accrued pension to which he would have been entitled had the certificate issued before his death; and in all cases where such person so entitled to an invalid pension has died, or shall hereafter die, under circumstances hereinbefore mentioned, whether by reason of a wound received or disease contracted in the service of the United States, and in the line of duty or otherwise, without leaving a widow or such relatives, then such accrued pension shall be paid to the executor or administrator of such person in like manner and effect as if such pension were as much assets belonging to the estate of the deceased at the time of his death.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the repeal by the act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts relating to pensions," approved June six, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, of parts of certain acts mentioned in the first section of said act, shall not work a forfeiture of any rights accrued under or granted by such parts of such acts so repealed; but such rights shall be recognized and allowed in the same manner and to all intents and purposes as if said act had never been passed, except that the invalid pensioner shall be entitled to draw from and after the taking effect of said act the increased pension thereby granted in lieu of that granted by such parts of such acts so repealed.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That nothing in the fourth section of an act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts relating to pensions," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, or in any other supplementary or amendatory act relating to pensions, shall be so construed so as to impair the right of a widow whose claim for a pension was pending at the date of her remarriage, to the pension to which she would otherwise be entitled, had her deceased husband left no minor child or children under the age of sixteen years.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXXVI.—An Act authorizing the Construction of a Jail in and for the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to select a suitable place on some of the public grounds belonging to the Government in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, for and construct thereon, upon such plan as he may select, a jail of sufficient capacity to provide for not less than three hundred prisoners, with suitable yards, hospitals, and so forth, the entire cost of which shall not exceed the sum of two hundred thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That as soon as said site, and the plan of a jail shall be so selected and agreed upon, the said Secretary of the Interior shall employ an architect and have prepared a design for said building, and plans descriptive thereof, with complete specifications of the work required and the materials to be used, and shall publish notice of a public letting of the contract for the building of the same, at least thirty days before the letting, in the principal newspapers in New York city, Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Baltimore, and Washington, which notice shall direct a place where such specifications can be seen, and a time at which the contract is to be let; and the said Secretary shall let said contract to the lowest responsible bidder, and the contractor therefor shall enter into sufficient bond for the faithful completion of the said contract to the approval of the Secretary.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said Secretary shall pay to the contractor or contractors installments on the contract price as the work progresses, to be certified to by the architect having the direction thereof, but twenty per centum of the estimates shall be retained until the completion of the contract.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That there be, and is hereby, appointed, [appropriated,] for the purposes aforesaid, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of two hundred thousand dollars, to be drawn on the order of said Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized to sell at public sale, on proper notice thereof, the materials of the old jail, now located in Judiciary square, and the proceeds thereof to be paid into the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of reimbursing the United States for a part of the cost of said jail, it shall be the duty of the proper authorities of the city of Washington, and they are hereby required, to raise, by tax or otherwise, and pay into the Treasury of the United States, at or before the time of the completion of said jail, the sum of seventy thousand dollars. And it shall be the like duty of the proper authorities of the city of Georgetown, and they are hereby required, to raise, by tax or otherwise, and pay into the Treasury of the United States, at or before the completion of said jail, the sum of twenty thousand dollars. And it shall be the like duty of the proper authorities of the county of Washington or said District, and they are hereby required, to raise, by tax or otherwise, and pay into the Treasury of the United States at or before the period aforesaid, the sum of ten thousand dollars, which said several sums shall be deemed the fair proportion of the cost of said jail of each of said cities and said county of Washington; and the said cities and county authorities, respectively, are hereby authorized and required to assess and levy upon the taxable property of said cities and said county of Washington a tax sufficient to raise the amount so by each city and said county required to be paid as aforesaid.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That upon the default of payment of the sums aforesaid into the Treasury of the United States at the time before stated, made by either of said cities or by said county of Washington, the said Secretary of the Interior shall appoint a collector for any such delinquent city or county as shall have failed to make its payments as aforesaid, and it shall be the duty of said collector to proceed with the collection of the taxes as assessed, in such manner and form as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior; or if either of said cities or said county of Washington shall neglect, fail, or refuse to assess such tax, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered to make such levy and proceed to its collection as aforesaid.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXXVII.—An Act to annul the thirty-fourth Section of the Declaration of Rights of the State of Maryland, so far as it applies to the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the thirty-fourth section of the Declaration [of] Rights of the State of Maryland, adopted seventeen hundred and seventy-six, so far as the same has been recognized and adopted in the District of Columbia, be, and the same is hereby, repealed and annulled, and that all sales, gifts, and devises prohibited by the said section, or by any law passed in accordance therewith, shall be, when hereafter made, valid and effectual: Provided, That, in case of gifts and devises, the same shall be made at least one calendar month before the death of the donor or testator.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXXVIII.—An Act to establish in the District of Columbia a House of Correction for Boys.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall be established in the District of Columbia, on the tract of land known as the Government farm, a fit and convenient house of correction, suitably and efficiently ventilated, with convenient yards, workshops, and other suitable accommodations adjoining or appurtenant thereto, for the safe-keeping, correction, governing, and employing of offenders legally committed thereto by authority of the courts and magistrates of the District of Columbia: Provided, That the building already erected on that land for the purpose of establishing a similar institution, together with all the other property there collected for the same purpose, shall be transferred to the trustees appointed according to the provisions of this act, at a cost not exceeding one thousand five hundred dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the government of said institution shall be vested in a board of seven trustees, to be appointed and commissioned by the President of the United States, one of whom shall be nominated for appointment by the mayor of Washington, one by the mayor of Georgetown, one by the levy court of the county of Washington, and four by the Secretary of the Interior; and no trustee shall receive compensation for his services, but each trustee shall be allowed the amount of expenses necessarily incurred in the discharge of the duties of his office. The term of office of the said trustees shall be three years; but on the first appointment of the board of trustees two of the members shall be appointed for one year, two for two years, and three for three years, to be determined by the President.

SEC. [3.] And be it further enacted, That the said board of trustees shall be a corporation, by the name of the Trustees of the House of Correction for the District of Columbia, for the purpose of taking and holding, in trust, whatever property may be conveyed, devised, donated, or bequeathed for the benefit of said institution, with all the power necessary to carry this purpose into effect.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the said board of trustees to take charge of the general interests of the institution; they may appoint a superintendent, a steward, a teacher or teachers, and such other officers as may be found necessary, and may be approved by the Secretary of the Interior; they may fix the salaries of said officers, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior; they may prepare such by-laws as may be necessary to regulate and direct the management of the institution, which, however, shall not be valid until approved by the Secretary of the Interior; and to exercise a vigilant supervision over the institution, its officers, and its inmates.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That before entering upon the duties of his office the superintendent shall give a bond to the trustees, with sureties to be approved by the board of trustees and by the Secretary of the Interior, in the sum of three thousand dollars, conditioned that he shall faithfully account for all money received by him, and faithfully perform all the duties incumbent on him as superintendent of said house of correction.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That a treasurer of the institution shall be appointed by the board of trustees, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, who shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, give a bond to the trustees, with sureties to be approved by the board of trustees and by the Secretary of the Interior, in the sum of five thousand dollars, conditioned that he shall faithfully account for all the money received by him as treasurer; and it shall be his duty to keep a clear and full record of his accounts as treasurer, and report an abstract of the same to the chairman of the board of trustees once in every two months.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That, as soon after their appointment as possible, the board of trustees shall take measures to have the land and building designated suitably prepared for the use of said house of correction; and, as soon as the buildings and premises are prepared for occupancy, the trustees shall give notice to the proper authorities and courts of the cities of Washington and Georgetown, and of the county of Washington, that the house of correction is ready to receive inmates.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That when any boy under the age of fourteen years is found guilty in a court in the District of Columbia of any crime punishable by imprisonment other than imprisonment for life, he shall be committed to the said house of correction, and there held in custody of the superintendent for the term of his sentence; and when any boy over fourteen and under sixteen years of age shall be found guilty in a court of the District of Columbia of any crime punishable by imprisonment other than imprisonment for life, it shall be the duty of the court trying the case to consider carefully and decide whether he is or is not a fit subject for the house of correction, and make its sentence accord with its decision of this question.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the superintendent shall reside at the institution constantly, and that he, with such subordinate officers as may be appointed in accordance with the fourth section of this act, shall have the charge and custody of the boys; shall govern them in accordance with such rules and regulations as the board of trustees may prescribe in its by-laws; shall employ them in agricultural, mechanical, or other labor; shall give them instruction in reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, and such other studies, and in such arts and trades as the trustees may direct; and shall employ such methods of discipline as will, as far as possible, reform their characters, preserve their health, promote regular improvement in their s[t]udies, trades, and employments, and secure in them fixed habits of religion, morality, and industry.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the superintendent shall have charge of the lands, buildings, furniture, tools, implements, stock, provisions, and every other species of property pertaining to the institution, within the precincts thereof; and he shall keep, in suitable books, regular and complete accounts of all his receipts and expenditures, and of all the property intrusted to him, so as to show clearly the income and expenses of the institution; and he shall account to the treasurer, in such manner as the trustees may prescribe, for all the money received by him from the proceeds of the institution or otherwise; and he shall keep a register of the names and ages of all boys committed to the institution, with the dates of their admission and discharge, and such particulars of their history before and after leaving the institution as he can obtain. His books and all documents relating to the house of correction, shall at all times be open to the inspection of the trustees, who shall once or more in every three months carefully examine his accounts and the vouchers and documents connected therewith, and make a record of the result of such examination.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That all contracts on account of the institution shall be made by the superintendent, and, when approved by the trustees, if their by-laws shall

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

require their approval, shall be binding in law, and the superintendent, or his successor, may sue or be sued thereon to final judgment and execution; and no suit shall abate by reason of the office of superintendent becoming vacant during the pendency of such suit, but any successor in the office shall assume the prosecution or defense of any pending suit, and continue the prosecution or defense until such suit shall be concluded.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That one or more of the trustees shall visit the said house of correction, once, at least, in every two weeks, at which time the condition of the same shall be carefully examined and the register inspected; a record of the visits shall be kept in the books of the superintendent; once in every three months the institution shall be thoroughly examined in all its departments by not less than three of the trustees, and a report of such examinations shall be made to the board; and an abstract of the reports, together with full annual reports of the superintendent and the treasurer, shall be presented to the Secretary of the Interior on or before the fifteenth day of November in each year.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That when a boy shall be committed to the said house of correction, the city in which he had his residence at the time of such commitment, or, if his residence was within the county of Washington, and not within the city of Washington, or the city of Georgetown, then the county of Washington shall pay to the treasurer of the house of correction fifty cents a week while he remains therein; the payment shall be made quarterly on the first days of January, April, July, and October; and any sum so paid may be recovered by such city or county of any parent, kindred, or guardian, liable by law to maintain him.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of securing a transfer of the building and other property to the trustees, preparing the premises and building for occupancy, and for the payment of other necessary expenses, there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twelve thousand dollars, to be paid only on the order of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That six thousand dollars of said appropriation is hereby declared to be the sum that shall be assessed and paid by the cities of Washington and Georgetown, and the county of Washington; and it shall be the duty of the proper authorities of the city of Washington to raise, by tax or otherwise, and pay into the Treasury of the United States, at or before the time when the premises shall be ready for occupancy by the house of correction, the sum of four thousand five hundred dollars; and it shall be the duty of the proper authorities of the city of Georgetown to raise and pay in like manner the sum of one thousand dollars; and it shall be the duty of the proper authorities of the county of Washington to raise and pay in like manner the sum of five hundred dollars; and in case of default of such payment into the Treasury of the United States by either of said cities or by the said county of Washington, the party so making default shall be liable to summary proceedings before the supreme court of the District of Columbia, at the instance of the United States attorney for said district, to enforce the same, with interest thereon after the date of default.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That this act shall take effect from the date of its passage.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXXIX.—An Act to incorporate "The Soldiers' and Sailors' Union" of Washington, D. C.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That H. A. Hall, W. C.

Porter, Will A. Short, James Cross, J. H. Nightingale, D. S. Curtiss, L. Edwin Dudley, G. M. Van Buren, Wm. S. Morse, Lawrence Wilson, Wm. L. Bramhall, F. E. Drake, B. P. Cutler, W. H. H. Bates, H. N. Rothery, S. G. Merrill, Chas. A. Appel, O. A. Lukenbaugh, J. S. Firman, John H. Simpson, George W. De Costa, L. J. Bryant, J. H. Gray, Lyman S. Emery, and A. I. Bennett, and their successors in office, be, and they are hereby incorporated and made a body politic and corporate, by the name of the "Soldiers' and Sailors' Union of the City of Washington, D. C.," and by that name may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded in any court of law or equity, and may have and use a common seal, and exercise the powers, rights, and privileges incident to such corporations.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said corporation shall be capable of acquiring, receiving holding, and conveying real and personal estate, not exceeding two hundred thousand dollars in value; which estate shall never be divided among the members of the corporation, but shall descend to their successors for the promotion of the interests and general welfare of the soldiers and sailors of this corporation, who have served in the Union Army or Navy during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, and the relief and protection of their widows and orphans.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That this corporation shall have power to alter and amend its constitution and by-laws: Provided, That they do not conflict with the laws of the United States or the laws of the corporation of the city of Washington, D. C.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That said corporation shall not exercise banking privileges, or issue or put in circulation any bank note, paper, token, scrip, or device, to be used as currency.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That Congress reserves the right to alter or repeal this act at any time.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXL.—An Act legalizing Marriages and for other purposes in the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all colored persons in the District of Columbia, who, previous to their actual emancipation, had undertaken and agreed to occupy the relation to each other of husband and wife, and are cohabiting together as such or in any way recognizing the relation as still existing at the time of the passage of this act, whether the rites of marriage have been celebrated between them or not, shall be deemed husband and wife, and be entitled to all the rights and privileges, and subject to the duties and obligations of that relation in like manner as if they had been duly married according to law, and all their children shall be deemed legitimate, whether born before or after the passage of this act. And when the parties have ceased to cohabit before the passage of this act, in consequence of the death of the woman, or from any other cause, all the children of the woman recognized by the man to be his shall be deemed legitimate.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXLI.—An Act granting Lands to the State of Kansas to aid in the Construction of the Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad and its Extension to Red River.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That for the purpose of aiding the Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad Company, the same being a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Kansas, to construct and operate a railroad from the eastern terminus of the Union Pacific Railroad,

eastern division, at the line between Kansas and Missouri, at or near the mouth of the Kansas river, on the south side thereof, southwardly, through the eastern tier of counties in Kansas, with a view of its extension, so as to effect a junction at Red river with a railroad now being constructed from Galveston to Red river at or near Preston, in Texas, there is hereby granted to the State of Kansas, for the use and benefit of the said railroad company, every alternate section of land or parts thereof, designated by odd numbers, to the extent of ten sections per mile on each side of said road, to be selected within twenty miles of [of] the line of said road; but in case it shall appear that the United States have, when the line of said road is definitely located, sold any section, or any part thereof, granted as aforesaid, or that the right of preemption or homestead settlement has attached to the same, or that the same has been reserved by the United States for any purpose whatever, then it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to cause to be selected for the purposes aforesaid, from the public lands of the United States nearest to the sections above specified, so much land as shall be equal to the amount of such lands as the United States have sold, reserved, or otherwise appropriated, or to which the right of homestead settlement or preemption has attached as aforesaid, which lands, thus indicated by the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, shall be reserved and held for the State of Kansas for the use of said company by the said Secretary for the purpose of the construction and operation of said railroad, as provided by this act: Provided, That any and all lands heretofore reserved to the United States by any act of Congress, or in any other manner by competent authority, for the purpose of aiding in any object of internal improvement or other purpose whatever, be, and the same are hereby, reserved and excepted from the operation of this act, except so far as it may be found necessary to locate the route of said road through such reserved lands, in which case the right of way two hundred feet in width is hereby granted, subject to the approval of the President of the United States: And provided further, That none of the lands hereby granted shall be selected beyond twenty miles from the said road.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the sections and parts of sections of land which by the aforesaid grant shall remain in the United States, within ten miles on each side of said road, shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public lands when sold, nor shall any of said lands become subject to sale at private entry until the same shall have been first offered at public sale to the highest bidder, at or above the minimum price aforesaid: Provided, That actual bona fide settlers under the preemption laws of the United States may, after due proof of settlement, improvement, and occupation, as now provided by law, purchase the same at the price fixed for said lands at the date of such settlement, improvement, and occupation: And provided also, That settlers under the provisions of the homestead act, who make their settlement after the passage of this act, and comply with the terms and requirements of said act, shall be entitled, within the said limits of ten miles, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres each.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the grant of lands hereby made is upon condition that said company, after the construction of its road, shall keep it in repair and use, and that [it will] at all times be in readiness to transport troops, munitions of war, supplies, and public stores upon its road for the Government, when required to do so by any department thereof, at the cost, charge, and expense of said company. And the lands hereby granted, held, and reserved as aforesaid shall inure to the benefit of said company, as follows: when the Governor of the State of Kansas shall certify that any section of ten consecutive miles of said road is completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner as a first-class railroad, then the said Secretary of the Interior shall issue to the said company patents for so many sections of the land within the limits above named as are continuous with said completed section hereinbefore granted; and when certificates of the Governor aforesaid shall be presented to said Secretary, of the completion, as aforesaid, of each successive section of ten consecutive miles of said road, the said Secretary shall in like manner issue to said company patents for the land for each of said sections of road as in the first instance, until said road shall be completed: Provided, That if said road is not completed within ten years from the date of the acceptance of the grant hereinbefore made, the lands remaining unpatented shall revert to the United States: And provided further, That the said lands shall not, in any manner, be disposed of or incumbered by said company or its assigns, except as the same are patented under the provisions of this act.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That as soon as said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior maps of its line, designating the route thereof, it shall be the duty of the said Secretary to withdraw from the market the lands granted by this act, in such manner as may be best calculated to effect the purposes of this act and subserve the public interest.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the United States mail shall be transported on said road and its extension, under the direction of the Post Office Department, at such price as Congress may by law provide: Provided, That until such price is fixed by law the Postmaster General shall have power to fix the compensation.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to said Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, for the construction of a railroad as proposed; and the right is hereby given to said corporation to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road material for the construction thereof. Said way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of said road where it may pass through the public domain; also all necessary ground for station buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, side-tracks, turn-tables, and water-stations.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the acceptance of the terms, conditions, and impositions of this act by the said Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad Company shall be signified in writing, under the corporate seal of the said company, duly executed pursuant to the direction of its board of directors first had and obtained, which acceptance shall be made within one year after the passage of this act, and not afterwards, and shall be deposited with the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That said Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, is hereby authorized and empowered to extend and construct its railroad from the southern boundary of Kansas south, through the Indian Territory, to Red river, at or near Preston, in the State of Texas, so as to connect with the railway now being constructed from Galveston to a point at or near Preston, in said State; and the right of way through the Indian Territory, wherever such right is now reserved or may hereafter be reserved to the United States by treaty with the Indian tribes, is hereby granted to said company, to the same extent as granted by the sixth section of this act through the public lands; and in all cases where the right of way, as aforesaid, through the Indian lands, shall not be reserved to the Government, the said company shall, before constructing its road, procure the consent of the tribe or tribes interested, which consent, with all its terms and conditions, shall be previously approved and indorsed by the President and filed with the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the same grants of lands through said Indian Territory are hereby made as provided in the first section of this act, whenever the Indian title shall be extinguished by treaty or otherwise, not to exceed the ratio per mile granted in the first section of this act: Provided, That said lands become a part of the public lands of the United States.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That said Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, shall have the right to negotiate with, and acquire from any Indian nation or tribe, authorized by the United States to dispose of lands for railroad purposes, and from any other nation or tribe of Indians through whose lands said railroad may pass, subject to the approval of the President of the United States, or from any company or parties incorporated or authorized for such purposes, by such nation or tribe, or which such parties may have acquired under the laws of the United States.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That any railroad company chartered under any law of the United States, or of the State of Kansas, which may have been heretofore or shall hereafter be recognized and subsidized by any act of the Congress of the United States, may connect, unite, and consolidate with this railroad company, after the same shall be located to the valley of the Neosho river, upon just, fair, and equitable terms, to be agreed upon between the parties, and shall not be against the public interest or the interest of the United States; nor shall any road authorized to connect as aforesaid charge the road so connecting a greater tariff per mile for freight or passengers than is charged for the same per mile by its own road: And provided further, That should the Leavenworth, Lawrence, and Fort Gibson Railroad Company, or the Union Pacific Railroad Company, southern branch, construct and complete its road to that point on the southern boundary of the State of Kansas where the line of said Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad shall cross the same, before the said Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad Company shall have constructed and completed its said road to said point, then and in that event the company so first reaching in completion the said point on the southern boundary of the State of Kansas shall be authorized, upon obtaining the written approval of the President of the United States, to construct and operate its line of railroad from said point to a point at or near Preston, in the State of Texas, with grants of land according to the provisions of this act, but upon the further special condition, nevertheless, that said railroad company shall have commenced in good faith the construction thereof before the said Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad Company shall have completed its said railroad to said point: And provided further, That said other railroad company, so having commenced said work in good faith, shall continue to prosecute the same with sufficient energy to insure the completion of the same within a reasonable time, subject to the approval of the President of the United States: And provided further, That the right of way through private property when not otherwise provided for in this act, or by the law of any State through which the road may pass, shall be obtained by said Kansas and Neosho Valley Railroad Company, or either of the other companies named in this act, in accordance with the provisions of section three of an act to amend an act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri river to the Pacific ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXLII.—An Act granting Lands to aid in the Construction of a Railroad and Telegraph Line from the Central Pacific Railroad, in California, to Portland, in Oregon.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the "California and Oregon Railroad Company," organized under an act of the State of California, to protect certain parties in and to a railroad survey, "to connect Portland, in Oregon, with Marysville, in California," approved April sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and such company organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of said State shall hereafter designate, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to lay out, locate, construct, finish, and maintain a railroad and telegraph line between the city of Portland, in Oregon, and the Central Pacific railroad, in California, in the manner following, to wit: the said California and Oregon Railroad Company to construct that part of the said railroad and telegraph within the State of California, beginning at some point (to be selected by said company) on the Central Pacific railroad in the Sacramento valley, in the State of California, and running thence northerly, through the Sacramento and Shasta valleys, to the northern boundary of the State of California; and the said Oregon company to construct that part of the said railroad and telegraph line within the State of Oregon, beginning at the city of Portland, in Oregon, and running thence southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua, and Rogue River valleys to the southern boundary of Oregon, where the same shall connect with the part aforesaid to be made by the first-named company: Provided, That the company completing its respective part of the said railroad and telegraph from either of the termini herein named to the line between California and Oregon before the other company shall have likewise arrived at the same line, shall have the right, and the said company is hereby authorized, to continue in constructing the same beyond the line aforesaid, with the consent of the State in which the unfinished part may lie, upon the terms mentioned in this act, until the said parts shall meet and connect, and the whole line of said railroad and telegraph shall be completed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the said companies, their successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores over the line of said railroad, every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile (ten on each side) of said railroad line; and when any of said alternate sections or parts of sections shall be found to have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, preempted, or otherwise disposed of, other lands, designated as aforesaid, shall be selected by said companies in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections designated by odd numbers as aforesaid, nearest to and not more than ten miles beyond the limits of said first-named alternate sections; and as soon as the said companies, or either of them, shall file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior a map of the survey of said railroad, or any portion thereof, not less than sixty continuous miles from either terminus, the Secretary of the Interior shall withdraw from sale public lands herein granted on each side of said railroad, so far as located

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

and within the limits before specified. The lands herein granted shall be applied to the building of said road within the States, respectively, wherein they are situated. And the sections and parts of sections of land which shall remain in the United States within the limits of the aforesaid grant shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public lands when sold: Provided, That bona fide and actual settlers under the preemption laws of the United States may, after due proof of settlement, improvement, and occupation, as now provided by law, purchase the same at the price fixed for said lands at the date of such settlement, improvement, and occupation: And provided, also, That settlers under the provisions of the homestead act, who comply with the terms and requirements of said act, shall be entitled, within the limits of said grant, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres of the land so reserved by the United States, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to said companies for the construction of said railroad and telegraph line; and the right, power, and authority are hereby given to said companies to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, earth, stone, timber, water, and other materials for the construction thereof. Said right of way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad where it may pass over the public lands, including all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, side-tracks, turn-tables, water-stations, or any other structures required in the construction and operating of said road.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That whenever the said companies, or either of them, shall have twenty or more consecutive miles of any portion of said railroad and telegraph line ready for the service contemplated by this act, the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners, whose compensation shall be paid by said company, to examine the same, and if it shall appear that twenty consecutive miles of railroad and telegraph shall have been completed and equipped in all respects as required by this act, the said commissioners shall so report under oath to the President of the United States, and thereupon patents shall issue to said companies, or either of them, as the case may be, for the lands hereinbefore granted, to the extent of and contemporaneous with the completed section of said railroad and telegraph line as aforesaid; and from time to time, whenever twenty or more consecutive miles of the said road and telegraph shall be completed and equipped as aforesaid, patents shall in like manner issue upon the report of the said commissioners, and so on until the entire railroad and telegraph authorized by this act shall have been constructed, and the patents of the lands herein granted shall have been issued.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That the grants aforesaid are made upon the condition that the said companies shall keep said railroad and telegraph in repair and use, and shall at all times transport the mails upon said railroad, and transmit dispatches by said telegraph line for the Government of the United States, when required so to do by any department thereof, and that the Government shall at all times have the preference in the use of said railroad and telegraph therefor at fair and reasonable rates of compensation, not to exceed the rates paid by private parties for the same kind of service. And said railroad shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States, free of all toll or other charges upon the transportation of the property or troops of the United States; and the same shall be transported over said road at the cost, charge, and expense of the corporations or companies owning or operating the same, when so required by the Government of the United States.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That the said companies shall file their assent to this act in the Department of the Interior within one year after the passage hereof, and shall complete the first section of twenty miles of said railroad and telegraph within two years, and at least twenty miles in each year thereafter, and the whole on or before the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five; and the said railroad shall be of the same gauge as the "Central Pacific Railroad" of California, and be connected therewith.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That the said companies named in this act are hereby required to operate and use the portions or parts of said railroad and telegraph mentioned in section one of this act for all purposes of transportation, travel, and communication, so far as the Government and the public are concerned, as one connected and continuous line; and in such operation and use to afford and secure to each other equal advantages and facilities as to rates, time, and transportation, without any discrimination whatever, on pain of forfeiting the full amount of damage sustained on account of such discrimination, to be sued for and recovered in any court of the United States, or of any State, of competent jurisdiction.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That in case the said companies shall fail to comply with the terms and conditions required, namely, by not filing their assent thereto as provided in section six of this act, or by not completing the same as provided in said section, this act shall be null and void, and all the lands not conveyed by patent to said company or companies, as the case may be, at the date of any such failure, shall revert to the United States. And in case the said road and telegraph line shall not be kept in repair and fit for use, after the same shall have been completed, Congress may pass an act to put the same in repair and use, and may direct the income of said railroad and telegraph line to be thereafter devoted to the United States, to repay all expenditures caused by the default and neglect of said companies or either of them, as the case may be, or may fix pecuniary responsibility, not exceeding the value of the lands granted by this act.

Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That the said "California and Oregon Railroad Company" and the said "Oregon Company" shall be governed by the provisions of the general railroad and telegraph laws of their respective States, as to the construction and management of the said railroad and telegraph line hereinbefore authorized, in all matters not provided for in this act. Wherever the word "company" or "companies" is used in this act it shall be construed to embrace the words "their associates, successors, and assigns," the same as if the words had been inserted, or thereto annexed.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That all mineral lands shall be excepted from the operation of this act; but where the same shall contain timber, so much of the timber thereon as shall be required to construct said road over such mineral land is hereby granted to said companies: Provided, That the term "mineral lands" shall not include lands containing coal and iron.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That the said companies named in this act shall obtain the consent of the Legislatures of their respective States, and be governed by the statutory regulations thereof in all matters pertaining to the right of way, wherever the said road and telegraph line shall not pass over or through the public lands of the United States.

Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That Congress may at any time, having due regard for the rights of said California and Oregon railroad companies, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXLIII.—An Act to Change the Place of holding Court in the Northern District of Georgia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the district court for the northern district of Georgia shall hereafter be held at Atlanta, instead of Marietta; and the clerk of said northern district is hereby required to remove all the books, papers, and records belonging to his office from Marietta to Atlanta.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That all process made returnable to the court heretofore held at Marietta shall be taken and considered returnable to the court at Atlanta.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXLIV.—An Act granting to A. Sutro the Right of Way, and granting other Privileges to aid in the Construction of a Draining and Exploring Tunnel to the Comstock Lode, in the State of Nevada.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, for the purpose of the construction of a deep draining and exploring tunnel to and beyond the "Comstock lode," so called, in the State of Nevada, the right of way is hereby granted to A. Sutro, his heirs and assigns, to run, construct, and excavate a mining, draining, and exploring tunnel; also to sink mining, working, or air shafts along the course of said tunnel, and connecting with the same at any point which may hereafter be selected by the grantee herein, his heirs or assigns. The said tunnel shall be at least eight feet high and eight feet wide, and shall commence at some point to be selected by the grantee herein, his heirs or assigns, at the hills near Carson river, and within the boundaries of Lyon county, and extending from said initial point in a westerly direction seven miles, more or less, to and beyond said Comstock lode; and the said right of way shall extend northerly and southerly on the course of said lode, either within the same, or east or west of the same; and also on or along any other lode which may be discovered or developed by the said tunnel.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the right is hereby granted to the said A. Sutro, his heirs and assigns, to purchase, at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, a sufficient amount of public land near the mouth of said tunnel for the use of the same, not exceeding two sections, and such land shall not be mineral land or in the bona fide possession of other persons who claim under any law of Congress at the time of the passage of this act, and all minerals existing or which shall be discovered therein are excepted from this grant; that upon filing a plat of said land the Secretary of the Interior shall withdraw the same from sale, and upon payment for the same a patent shall issue. And the said A. Sutro, his heirs and assigns, are hereby granted the right to purchase, at five dollars per acre, such mineral veins and lodes within two thousand feet on each side of said tunnel as shall be cut, discovered, or developed by running and constructing the same, through its entire extent, with all the dips, spurs, and angles of such lodes, subject, however, to the provisions of this act, and to such legislation as Congress may hereafter provide: Provided, That the Comstock lode, with its dips, spurs, and angles, is excepted from this grant, and all other lodes, with their dips, spurs, and angles, located within the said two thousand feet, and which are or may be, at the passage of this act, in the actual bona fide possession of other persons, are hereby excepted from such grant. And the lodes herein excepted, other than the Comstock lode, shall be withheld from sale by the United States; and if such lodes shall be abandoned or not worked, possessed, and held in conformity to existing mining rules, or such regulations as have been or may be prescribed by the Legislature of Nevada, they shall become subject to such right of purchase by the grantee herein, his heirs or assigns.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That all persons, companies, or corporations owning claims or mines on said Comstock lode or any other lode drained, benefited, or developed by said tunnel, shall hold their claims subject to the condition, (which shall be expressed in any grant that they may hereafter obtain from the United States,) that they shall contribute and pay to the owners of said tunnel the same rate of charges for drainage or other benefits derived from said tunnel or its branches, as have been, or may hereafter be, named in agreement between such owners and the companies representing a majority of the estimated value of said Comstock lode at the time of the passage of this act.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXLV.—An Act to regulate the Times and Manner of holding Elections for Senators in Congress.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Legislature of each State which shall be chosen next preceding the expiration of the time for which any Senator was elected to represent said State in Congress, shall, on the second Tuesday after the meeting and organization thereof, proceed to elect a Senator in Congress, in the place of such Senator so going out of office, in the following manner: each House shall openly, by a viva voce of each member present, name one person for Senator in Congress from said State, and the name of the person so voted for, who shall have a majority of the whole number of votes cast in each House shall be entered on the Journal of each House by the clerk or secretary thereof; but if either House shall fail to give such majority to any person on said day, that fact shall be entered on the Journal. At twelve o'clock, meridian, of the day following that on which proceedings are required to take place, as aforesaid, the members of the two Houses shall convene in joint assembly and the Journal of each House shall then be read, and if the same person shall have received a majority of all the votes in each House, such person shall be declared duly elected Senator to represent said State in the Congress of the United States; but if the same person shall not have received a majority of the votes in each House, or if either House shall have failed to take proceedings as required by this act, the joint assembly shall then proceed to choose, by a viva voce vote of each member present a person for the purpose aforesaid, and the person having a majority of all the votes of the said joint assembly, a majority of all the members elected to both Houses being present and voting, shall be declared duly elected; and in case no person shall receive such majority on the first day, the joint assembly shall meet at twelve o'clock, meridian, of each succeeding day during the session of the Legislature, and take at least one vote until a Senator shall be elected.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That whenever, on the meeting of the Legislature of any State, a vacancy shall exist in the representation of such State in the Senate of the United States, said Legislature shall proceed, on the second Tuesday after the commencement and organization of its session, to elect a person to fill such vacancy, in the manner hereinbefore provided for the election of a Senator for a full term; and if a vacancy shall happen during the session of the Legislature, then on the second Tuesday after the Legislature shall have been organized and shall have notice of such vacancy.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Governor of the State from which any Senator shall have been chosen as aforesaid to certify his election, under the seal of the State, to the President of the Senate of the United States, which certificate shall be countersigned by the secretary of state of the State.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXLVI.—An Act to authorize the Construction of certain Bridges, and to establish them as Post Roads.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it shall be lawful for any person or persons, company or corporation, having authority from the States of Illinois and Missouri for such purpose, to build a bridge across the Mississippi river at Quincy, Illinois, and to lay on and over said bridge railway tracks, for the more perfect connection of any railroads that are or shall be constructed to the said river at or opposite said point, and that when constructed all trains of all roads terminating at said river, at or opposite said point, shall be allowed to cross said bridge for reasonable compensation, to be made to the owners of said bridge, under the limitations and conditions hereinafter provided. And in case of any litigation arising from any obstruction or alleged obstruction to the free navigation of said river, the cause may be tried before the district court of the United States of any State in which any portion of said obstruction or bridge touches.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That any bridge built under the provisions of this act may, at the option of the company building the same, be built as a drawbridge, with a pivot or other form of draw, or with unbroken or continuous spans: Provided, That if the said bridge shall be made with unbroken and continuous spans, it shall not be of less elevation in any case than fifty feet above extreme high-water mark, as understood at the point of location, to the bottom chord of the bridge, nor shall the spans of said bridge be less than two hundred and fifty feet in length, and the piers of said bridge shall be parallel with the current of the river, and the main span shall be over the main channel of the river and not less than three hundred feet in length: And provided also, That if any bridge built under this act shall be constructed as a drawbridge, the same shall be constructed as a pivot drawbridge with a draw over the main channel of the river at an accessible and navigable point, and with spans of not less than one hundred and sixty feet in length in the clear on each side of the central or pivot pier of the draw, and the next adjoining spans to the draw shall not be less than two hundred and fifty feet; and said spans shall not be less than thirty feet above low-water mark, and not less than ten above extreme high-water mark, measuring to the bottom chord of the bridge, and the piers of said bridge shall be parallel with the current of the river: And provided also, That said draw shall be opened promptly upon reasonable signal for the passage of boats, whose construction shall not be such as to admit of their passage under the permanent spans of said bridge, except when trains are passing over the same; but in no case shall unnecessary delay occur in opening the said draw during or after the passage of trains.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That any bridge constructed under this act, and according to its limitations, shall be a lawful structure, and shall be recognized and known as a post route; upon which, also, no higher charge shall be made for the transmission over the same of the mails, the troops, and the munitions of war of the United States, than the rate per mile paid for their transportation over the railroads or public highways leading to the said bridge.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy Railroad Company, a corporation whose road has been completed to the Mississippi river, and connects with a railroad on the opposite side thereof, having first obtained authority therefor from the States of Illinois and Iowa, to construct a railroad bridge across said river, upon the same terms, in the same manner, under the same restrictions, and with the same privileges, as is provided for in this act in relation to the bridge at Quincy, Illinois.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That a bridge may be constructed at the town of Hannibal, in the State of Missouri, across the Mississippi river, so as to connect the Hannibal and Saint Joseph railroad with the Pike County and Great Western railroads of Illinois, on the same terms and subject to the same restrictions as are contained in this act for the construction of the bridge at Quincy, Illinois.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That a bridge may be constructed across the Mississippi river between Prairie du Chien, in the State of Wisconsin, and North McGregor, in the State of Iowa, with the consent of the Legislatures of Wisconsin and Iowa, on the same terms and subject to the same restrictions as are contained in this act for the construction of the bridge at Quincy, Illinois.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the Keokuk and Hamilton Mississippi Bridge Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Iowa, and the Hancock County Bridge Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, be and are hereby authorized to construct and maintain a bridge over the Mississippi river between Keokuk, Iowa, and Hamilton, Illinois, of the same character, description, and construction as provided in this act for the bridges at Quincy and Burlington; and the said bridge, in its use and operation, shall be subject to the same restrictions that apply to said bridges at Quincy and Burlington by the terms of this act.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the Winona and Saint Peter Railroad Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Minnesota, is hereby authorized to construct and operate a railroad bridge across the Mississippi river between the city of Winona, in the State of Minnesota, and the opposite bank of the said river, in the State of Wisconsin, with the consent of the Legislatures of the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin; and said bridge by this section authorized is hereby declared a post route, and subject to all the terms, restrictions, and requirements contained in the foregoing sections of this act.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That a bridge may be constructed and maintained across the Mississippi river between Dunleith, in the State of Illinois, and Dubuque, in the State of Iowa, with the consent of said States previously given or hereafter acquired, with the same privileges, upon the same terms, and under the same restrictions as are contained in this act for the construction of a bridge at Quincy, Illinois.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That any company authorized by the Legislature of Missouri may construct a bridge across the Missouri river, at the city of Kansas, upon the same terms and conditions provided for in this act.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the "Saint Louis and Illinois Bridge Company," a corporation organized under an act of the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, approved February fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and an act amendatory of the same, approved February twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and also confirmed in its corporate powers under an act of the Legislature of the State of Illinois, approved eighteen hundred and sixty-four, or any other bridge company organized under the laws of Missouri and Illinois, be, and the same is hereby, empowered to erect, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi river, between the city of Saint Louis, in the State of Missouri, and the city of East Saint Louis, in the State of Illinois, subject to all the conditions contained in said act of incorporation and amendments thereto, and not inconsistent with the following terms and provisions contained in this act. And in case of any litigation arising from any obstruction or alleged obstruction to the free navigation of said waters, the cause may be tried before the district court of the United States of any State in which any portion of said obstruction or bridge touches.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG...1ST SESS.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the bridge authorized by the preceding section to be built shall not be a suspension bridge, or drawbridge, with pivot or other form of draw, but shall be constructed with continuous or unbroken spans, and subject to these conditions: First, that the lowest part of the bridge or bottom chord shall not be less than fifty feet above the city directrix at its greatest span. Second, that it shall have at least one span five hundred feet in the clear, or two spans of three hundred and fifty feet in the clear of abutments. If the two latter spans be used, the one over the main steamboat channel shall be fifty feet above the city directrix, measured to the lowest part of the bridge at the center of the span. Third, no span over the water at low water mark, shall be less than two hundred feet in the clear of abutments.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the right to alter or amend this act, so as to prevent or remove all material obstructions to the navigation of said river by the construction of bridges, is hereby expressly reserved.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXLVII.—An Act to authorize W. J. Sibley and others, Trustees, to sell and convey Lot Number Nine, in Square Number Seventy-Six, in the City of Washington.

Whereas lot number nine, in said square number seventy-six, in the said city of Washington, was conveyed by J. H. M'Blair to W. J. Sibley, Ro. Ricketts, R. W. Bates, R. L. Sanders, Benjamin M'Coy, and G. Spoarder, in trust, to erect thereon a place of worship for the use of the people of color, members of the Methodist Episcopal church in the United States; and whereas the said trustees have not had the means of erecting such church, and the purpose has been abandoned, and another church, called the Asbury chapel, has been erected in or near the neighborhood of the said lot, which the said trustees desire to sell, and apply the proceeds to the benefit of the congregation worshipping in said Asbury chapel, a purpose which the said J. H. M'Blair, as far as he had any interest therein, has approved by his subsequent deed made to the said trustees: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the said W. J. Sibley, Ro. Ricketts, R. W. Bates, R. L. Sanders, Benjamin M'Coy, and G. Spoarder, trustees of the said lot above mentioned, or the survivors of them, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to sell and convey the said lot number nine, in square number seventy-six, in the said city of Washington, for such price as they shall think proper, or to confirm and carry out any contract for sale already made by them with any person, and to convey the same accordingly, freed and discharged of the trust upon which the same was originally conveyed to them, and to apply the proceeds of sale to the benefit of the congregation worshipping in the said Asbury chapel, as the proper and legal authority thereof may deem expedient, and for no other purpose whatever.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXLVIII.—An Act providing for the Appointment of a Commission to examine and report upon certain Claims of the State of Iowa.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he hereby is, authorized and required to appoint a commissioner, whose duty it shall be to examine and report on or before the first day of December next upon the claim of the State of Iowa for forage, transportation, subsistence, and clothing furnished by said State to certain volunteers of said State, who, under the command of Colonels Morledge and Edwards, and at the request of certain officers commanding troops of the United States in the State of Missouri, marched into the State of Missouri to cooperate with the troops of the United States in that State in suppressing the rebellion. Also the claim of the State of Iowa for repayment of certain moneys paid by said State in raising, arming, equipping, paying, and subsisting certain troops of the State maintained by the State on the southern and northwestern borders thereof during the late rebellion, for the purpose of defending the State against attacks by bushwhackers and Indians. And also the claim of said State for compensation for certain forage procured and barracks built by the State on the northwestern border thereof, and turned over by the State to and used by the United States.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCXLIX.—An Act to incorporate "The National Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphan Home."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Mrs. Julia B. Grant, Mrs. Ellen E. Sherman, Mrs. H. D. Cooke, Mrs. Margaret Fahnestock, Mrs. Kathleen Carlisle, Miss Charlotte Taylor, Mrs. Jane Speed, Mrs. Mary J. Wells, Mrs. A. C. Harlan, Mrs. Jane L. Smith, Mrs. Mary K. Lewis, Mrs. Jane Farnham, Mrs. Eliza M. Morris, Mrs. Cecelia S. Sherman, Mrs. Ellen Boyer, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Howard, Mrs. Kate C. Sprague, Mrs. Elsie B. Nye, Mrs. Annie Rouse, Mrs. Kate L. Plants, Mrs. Elizabeth G. Todd, Mrs. Abby E. Hall, Mrs. J. M. Trumbull, Miss Sarah Wood, Mrs. Jane Anne Pirtle, Miss Elizabeth Howard, and their successors, are constituted a body corporate in the District of Columbia, by the name of the National Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphan Home, and by that name may sue and be sued in any court of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the persons named in the first section of this act, together with such as may be elected according to the form of the constitution under this act, shall be the first trustees of the corporation; and all vacancies caused by death, resignation, or otherwise, in the office of trustee, shall be filled by the board, by ballot, without unnecessary delay, as may be provided in the constitution and by-laws of the corporation.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That said corporation shall have power to provide a home for, and to support and educate the destitute orphans of soldiers or sailors who have died in the late war in behalf of the Union of these States, from whatever State or Territory they may have entered the national service, or their orphans may apply to enter the Home, and which is hereby declared to be the object and purpose of said corporation; and to such end, and for such use, the said corporation may take and hold property real or personal to an amount necessary for the support and maintenance of the Home and the orphans partaking of its benefits.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the affairs of this corporation shall be managed by a board of directors consisting of not less than seventeen representing the District of Columbia, and of seven each, from the respective States and Territories, to be chosen in such manner as the constitution and by-laws of said corporation shall direct, and that the said directors shall have power to make by-laws prescribing the duties of the officers of said corporation, their term of office, and to make all other rules and regulations for said corporation and the management of its affairs, subject to the provisions of this act.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That said corporation shall have power to receive under its charge for support and education any minor child of any such soldier or sailor, if so placed in its charge by its surviving parent or guardian, or, in the absence of either, by any person having the care or custody of such orphan; and while such child remains under its care, and until withdrawn as hereinafter provided, or discharged according to the regulations of said corporation, it shall be subject to the same power and control by said corporation as any father or lawful guardian has by law over or relating to such minor child.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That no such orphan child shall ever be bound out by said corporation.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the surviving parent or legal guardian of any child placed under charge of said corporation may at any time be by them withdrawn therefrom; and any minor over sixteen years of age, upon his or her own request in writing, shall be discharged therefrom.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That any minor child so withdrawn or discharged as provided in the preceding section of this act shall nevertheless continue until majority under charge of said corporation to such an extent as that the said corporation shall have the control and management of any moneys which may be due to such minor from the Government of the United States by virtue of the services of the fathers of such minor children, paying to such minor child or children only such amount thereof as in the judgment of said corporation shall be necessary and beneficial for such minor.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the property of said corporation, held or occupied by them for the uses and purposes of their incorporation, shall be exempt from all taxes to be levied under the authority of the Congress of the United States, or any municipal corporation within the District of Columbia, and no person shall lose or acquire a legal settlement by residence in the Home to be established by said corporation.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That Congress may at any time hereafter repeal, alter, or amend this act.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCL.—An Act to amend "An Act to extend the Charter of the Alexandria and Washington Railroad," passed March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Washington, Alexandria, and Georgetown Railroad Company, a corporation lawfully succeeding to the charter, rights, and privileges of the "Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company," be, and the same is hereby, authorized to extend said railroad from the track, as the same is now, or may hereafter be, laid through Maryland avenue, at its intersection with Virginia avenue, through and along said Virginia avenue, in an easterly direction, to its intersection with D street south; thence along D street, and across the Washington canal, to New Jersey avenue; thence by a curve to the left, of not less than

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

one thousand feet radius, to a point in square number seven hundred and thirty-two; thence by an underground excavation or tunnel, passing under squares number seven hundred and thirty-two, seven hundred and sixty-two, seven hundred and sixty-one, seven hundred and sixty, seven hundred and eighty-seven, seven hundred and eighty-six, eight hundred and sixteen, eight hundred and fifteen, eight hundred and thirty-nine, eight hundred and thirty-eight, eight hundred and sixty-six, eight hundred and sixty-five, eight hundred and sixty-four, and the different streets and avenues intervening, to a point in square number eight hundred and ninety-three; thence, by a curve of not less than one thousand feet radius, into Eighth street east; thence by the most direct and eligible route, to an intersection with the Washington branch of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of sections three and four of the act to which this is an amendment shall be applicable to the extension of said road or tracks as hereby authorized, and that it shall be lawful for said company to construct a draw or other bridge across the Washington canal at its intersection with D street south, of such plans and dimensions as may be approved by the corporation of Washington, and so as not to interfere with the navigation of said canal. And also to use steam power in the transportation of passengers and freight over said railroad and branches, subject, however, to such restrictions and regulations as may be imposed by the corporate authorities of the city of Washington in respect to such portions thereof as may be located in said city.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the consent of Congress be, and the same is hereby, granted for a period of eighteen months from the passage of this act, to the Alexandria, Washington, and Georgetown Railroad Company, to use steam power in drawing the cars of said company on the structure across the Potomac river erected by said company, under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to extend the charter of the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company, and for other purposes," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and along the railway now laid by said company, or which may be hereafter laid, under the provisions of the said act, along Maryland avenue and First street west, in the city of Washington, to the present depot of the Washington branch of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, subject always, and in all particulars, to such restrictions and regulations concerning the use of said steam power as the corporation of Washington may, by its ordinances, [at] any time impose upon the said railroad company: Provided, That said company shall not propel their engines at a greater rate of speed than five miles per hour within the corporate limits of Washington city.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the said railroad company shall be required to pay any and all damages that may result to private property from the extension of said road, and the tunneling under the several lots and squares of ground as heretofore provided; and that in the event the owner or owners of such property and the said company cannot agree as to the amount of such damages, or the value of any private property so appropriated for the purpose of such extension of said road, such proceedings shall thereupon be had for the appropriation and assessment of the damages thereof as are authorized and required under the laws now in force in the District of Columbia regulating appropriations and assessment of damages for opening roads, streets, and alleys in said District. That upon the payment to the owner or owners of the amount of such award of damages, or the lawful tender thereof, together with the payment of all costs of such proceedings, the said company shall acquire the right to use and occupy for the purposes of said railroad all such lands so appropriated, in such a manner as may be necessary for the proper working and running said road.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLI.—An Act to authorize the Extension, Construction, and Use by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company of a Railroad from between Knoxville and the Monocacy Junction into and within the District of Columbia.

Whereas it is represented to this present Congress that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, incorporated by the State of Maryland, are desirous of extending the road authorized to be built by them, by an act of the General Assembly of that State, entitled "An act to authorize the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to build a railroad from a point on the line of its road between Knoxville and the Monocacy Junction, through Frederick and Montgomery counties, to the boundary of the District of Columbia, so as to make a direct communication with the city of Washington," into and within the District of Columbia: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company shall be, and they are hereby, authorized to extend into and within the District of Columbia the road aforesaid, to such point or points, terminus or termini, as may be agreed upon between the said company and the corporation of Washington, in respect of a road within the limits of Washington, and between the said company and the corporation of Georgetown, as respects a road within the limits of Georgetown. An[d] the said Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company are hereby authorized to have and exercise the same powers, rights, and privileges, and shall be subject to the same restrictions, in the extension and construction of the said road, into and within the said District as they have, may exercise, or possess, or are subject to within the State of Maryland, under and by virtue of their charter or act of incorporation from the State of Maryland; and shall be entitled to the same franchises, rights, compensation, benefits, and immunities in the use of the said road as are provided in the said charter.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all the provisions of the several acts of Congress relating to the lateral road authorized to be built into and within the District of Columbia by an act passed March second, eighteen hundred and thirty-one, and entitled "An act to authorize the extension, construction, and use of a lateral branch of the Baltimore and Ohio road into and within the District of Columbia," and the supplements thereto, be, and they are hereby, declared to apply to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company so far as they are severally applicable to the location, construction, and use by the said company of the road now authorized to be constructed into and within the said District.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said railroad company shall commence the construction of said extension of said road within one year, and complete the same within three years after the passage of this act; and on failure to do so, the privileges granted by this act shall be forfeited by said company.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLII.—An Act to change the Port of Entry in Puget's Sound.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the first day of October, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the port of Port Angelos, in the district of Puget's Sound, in Washington Territory, is hereby abolished as a port of entry, and that Port Townsend be, and is hereby, established as the port of entry and delivery for the said district, from and after said date.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLIII.—An Act to grade East Capitol Street and establish Lincoln Square.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Commissioner of Public Buildings be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed, in such manner as he may deem most proper, to cause East Capitol street to be graded from Third street east to Eleventh street east, and to cause the square at the intersection of said street with Massachusetts, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Kentucky avenues, between Eleventh and Thirteenth streets east, to be inclosed with a wooden fence, and the same shall be known as Lincoln square. And the sum of fifteen thousand dollars is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to enable the said improvement to be made.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLIV.—An Act in Relation to the unlawful Tapping of Government Water Pipes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the unlawful tapping of any water pipe laid down in the District of Columbia by authority of the United States is hereby declared to be a misdemeanor and an indictable offense; and any person who may be indicted for and convicted of such offense in the criminal court of the District of Columbia shall be subject to such fine as the court may think proper to impose, not exceeding five hundred dollars, or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year. And it is hereby made the special duty of the Commissioner of Public Buildings to bring to the notice of the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia, or to the grand jury, any infraction of this law.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLV.—An Act to authorize the Entry and Clearance of Vessels at the Port of Calais, Maine.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, from and after the passage of this act, the Secretary of the Treasury may authorize, under such regulations as he shall deem necessary, the deputy collector of customs at the port of Calais, in the State of Maine, to enter and clear vessels, and to perform such other official acts as the said Secretary shall think advisable.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXII.—An Act granting the Right of Way to Ditch and Canal Owners over the Public Lands, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the mineral lands of the public domain, both surveyed and unsurveyed, are hereby declared to be free and open to exploration and occupation by all citizens of the United States, and those who have declared their intention to become citizens, subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by law, and subject also to the local customs or rules of miners in the several mining districts, so far as the same may not be in conflict with the laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That whenever any person or association of persons claim a vein or lode of quartz, or other rock in place, bearing gold, silver, cinnabar, or copper, having previously occupied and improved the same according to the local custom or rules of miners in the district where the same is situated, and having expended in actual labor and improvements thereon an amount of not less than one thousand dollars, and in regard to whose possession there is no controversy or opposing claim, it shall and may be lawful for said claimant or association of claimants to file in the local land office a diagram of the same, so extended laterally or otherwise as to conform to the local laws, customs, and rules of miners, and to enter such tract and receive a patent therefor, granting such mine, together with the right to follow such vein or lode with its dips, angles, and variations, to any depth, although it may enter the land adjoining, which land adjoining shall be sold subject to this condition.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That upon the filing of the diagram as provided in the second section of this act, and posting the same in a conspicuous place on the claim, together with a notice of intention to apply for a patent, the register of the land office shall publish a notice of the same in a newspaper published nearest to the location of said claim, and shall also post such notice in his office for the period of ninety days; and after the expiration of said period, if no adverse claim shall have been filed, it shall be the duty of the surveyor general, upon application of the party, to survey the premises and make a plat thereof, indorsed with his approval, designating the number and description of the location, the value of the labor and improvements, and the character of the vein exposed; and upon the payment to the proper officer of five dollars per acre, together with the cost of such survey, plat, and notice, and giving satisfactory evidence that said diagram and notice have been posted on the claim during said period of ninety days, the register of the land office shall transmit to the General Land Office said plat, survey, and description; and a patent shall issue for the same thereupon. But said plat, survey, or description shall in no case cover more than one vein or lode, and no patent shall issue for more than one vein or lode, which shall be expressed in the patent issued.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That when such location and entry of a mine shall be upon unsurveyed lands, it shall and may be lawful, after the extension thereto of the public surveys, to adjust the surveys to the limits of the premises according to the location and possession and plat aforesaid, and the surveyor general may, in extending the surveys, vary the same from a rectangular form to suit the circumstances of the country and the local rules, laws, and customs of miners: Provided, That no location hereafter made shall exceed two hundred feet in length along the vein for each locator, with an additional claim for discovery to the discoverer of the lode, with the right to follow such vein to any depth, with all its dips, variations, and angles, together with a reasonable quantity of surface for the convenient working of the same as fixed by local rules: And provided further, That no person may make more than one location on the same lode, and not more than three thousand feet shall be taken in any one claim by any association of persons.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That as a further condition of sale, in the absence of necessary legislation by Congress, the local Legislature of any State or Territory may provide rules for working mines involving easements, drainage, and other necessary means to their complete development; and those conditions shall be fully expressed in the patent.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That whenever any adverse claimants to any mine located and claimed as aforesaid shall appear before the approval of the survey, as provided in the third section of this act, all proceedings shall be stayed until a final settlement and adjudication in the courts of competent jurisdiction of the rights of possession to such claim, when a patent may issue as in other cases.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States be, and is hereby, authorized to establish additional land districts and to appoint the necessary officers under existing laws, wherever he may deem the same necessary for the public convenience in executing the provisions of this act.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the right of way for the construction of highways over public lands, not reserved for public uses, is hereby granted.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That whenever, by priority of possession, rights to the use of water for mining, agricultural, manufacturing, or other purposes, have vested and accrued, and the same are recognized and acknowledged by the local customs, laws, and the decisions of courts, the possessors and owners of such vested rights shall be maintained and protected in the same; and the right of way for the construction of ditches and canals for the purposes aforesaid is hereby acknowledged and confirmed: Provided, however, That whenever, after the passage of this act, any person or persons shall, in the construction of any ditch or canal, injure or damage the possession of any settler on the public domain, the party committing such injury or damage shall be liable to the party injured for such injury or damage.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That wherever, prior to the passage of this act, upon the lands heretofore designated as mineral lands, which have been excluded from survey and sale, there have been homesteads made by citizens of the United States, or persons who have declared their intention to become citizens, which homesteads have been made, improved, and used for agricultural purposes, and upon which there have been no valuable mines of gold, silver, cinnabar, or copper discovered, and which are properly agricultural lands, the said settlers or owners of such homesteads shall have a right of preemption thereto, and shall be entitled to purchase the same at the price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and in quantity not to exceed one hundred and sixty acres; or said parties may avail themselves of the provisions of the act of Congress approved May twenty, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain," and acts amendatory thereof.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That upon the survey of the lands aforesaid, the Secretary of the Interior may designate and set apart such portions of the said lands as are clearly agricultural lands, which lands shall thereafter be subject to preemption and sale as other public lands of the United States, and subject to all the laws and regulations applicable to the same.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXIII.—An Act to authorize "The Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River Tidewater Canal Company" to enter the District of Columbia, and extend their Canal to the Anacostia River at any Point above Benning's Bridge.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That "The Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River Tidewater Canal Company," incorporated by the General Assembly of the State of Maryland, at the January session thereof, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, by an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River Tidewater Canal Company," be, and the same are hereby, authorized to extend their canal from the point where it strikes the boundary line of the District of Columbia, thence in and through the said District to the Anacostia river at any point thereon above Benning's bridge.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said company are hereby authorized and empowered to take, purchase, and hold, for the purpose[s] of this act, so much real estate and other property as shall be necessarily required for the proper construction of the extension aforesaid, and for the construction of all proper and convenient basins, locks, reservoirs, docks, and wharves, to be connected with said extension. And where the said company shall not be able to procure such real estate by purchase from the owner thereof, or the owner thereof shall be a femme covert, infant, non compos mentis, imprisoned, or resident beyond the District of Columbia, then application may be made by the president of said company to the chief justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, for the appointment of three persons, who shall be freeholders in said District, as a commission of inquest of damages, and who shall go upon and inspect any property proposed to be taken by said company for the purposes contemplated by this act; and before any person so appointed as such commissioner shall proceed to act, he shall take an oath or affirmation that he will fairly and truly value the damages sustained by the owner or owners of any property by the use and occupation of any such real estate, water rights, or other property, by said company; and said commission shall reduce their inquiry or finding to writing, and sign and seal the same, and it shall then be returned to the said chief justice, who shall file the same in the office of the register of deeds of the city of Washington. But no such inquisition shall be had until after ten days' notice thereof has been served on the owner of the real estate so to be taken, when he resides in the District of Columbia, or by publication of notice in one or more of the daily newspapers published in the city of Washington, for twenty days where such owner resides beyond said District. When the owner is a femme covert, the notice shall be to her and her husband; when he is a minor, to his guardian; and when he is non compos mentis, to his committee, or the person having charge of his estate. The said report shall be confirmed by the supreme court of the District of Columbia at its next term after the return of said report, unless for cause shown to the contrary. And where good cause is thus shown the said chief justice shall set aside said inquest, and appoint another similar commission, who shall qualify in the same manner, and whose inquisition shall be taken, returned, filed, and confirmed, or set aside for good cause shown, in the same manner as the first inquisition was taken, returned, filed, and confirmed, or set aside. And such commission and inquisition shall be renewed as often as may be necessary, until the inquisition made shall be confirmed. Such inquisition shall describe the property taken by metes and bounds, and the valuation thereof shall be paid or tendered within ten days after the confirmation of such inquisition by said District court; and when such valuation or damages are so paid or tendered, said company shall have a full and perfect right to enter upon, use, occupy, and enjoy any property so valued, during its corporate existence, and all expenses incurred by such inquisition, shall be paid by said company.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for said company to levy, demand, and receive such even tolls and rents for the use of the wharves and docks of said company on said extension, or for freight transported by said company, or for the passage through said extension of boats, rafts, or any other water craft, as a majority of the directors at any regular meeting shall assess therefor: Provided, That the Congress of the United States shall at all times have power to increase or reduce such tolls or rents.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the said canal extension, when completed, shall forever thereafter be esteemed and taken to be a public highway for the transportation of all goods, commodities, or produce of every kind and description, and for all canal boats, rafts, or other water crafts of every kind whatever, upon the payment of such tolls or rents as are authorized to be imposed by this act.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the said company shall permit all public property belonging to the United States to pass through said canal extension free of all charge or toll; and the said company shall, from time to time, as may be required, lay before Congress a just and true account of their receipts and expenditures on said extension, with a statement of the clear profits thereof.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That, subject to the aforesaid provisions of this act, all and singular the provisions of the aforesaid act of the General Assembly of the State of Maryland, entitled "An act to incorporate the Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River Tidewater Canal Company," relating to the powers, liabilities, and authority of said company, in operating and using their canal, shall take effect and apply to the extension aforesaid in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That this act shall be deemed a public act, and shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage, and shall be subject to alteration or repeal by Congress.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXIV.—An Act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue Certificates of Registry, or Enrollment and License, to certain Vessels.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to issue certificates of registry, or enrollment and license, to the steamer "Diana," of Victoria, Vancouver Island; the schooners "M. C. Rowe," of Gloucester, Massachusetts; "Mary," of Dexter, New York; "Jessee Conger," of Oswego, New York; "N. C. Ford," of Buffalo, New York; "Sweet Home," of Rochester, New York; "Alma," of Sodus, New York; "Marco Polo," of Erie, Pennsylvania; brig "Three Bells," of Rochester, New York; bark "J. S. Austin," of Buffalo, New York; and the sloop "Dolphin," of Alexandria Bay, New York: Provided, That there shall be paid on each of such vessels that are foreign built a tax equal to the internal revenue tax upon the materials and construction of similar vessels of American build.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXV.—An Act to authorize the Issue of certain Bonds in Denominations greater than One Thousand Dollars.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That hereafter the bonds of the United States authorized by the act of July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, "to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri river to the Pacific ocean," and by all acts amendatory thereof, may be issued in denominations greater than one thousand dollars, at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, however, That it shall at all times be optional with any railroad company whether they will receive bonds of a larger denomination than one thousand dollars.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXVI.—An Act making Appropriations for the Current and Contingent Expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling Treaty Stipulations with various Indian Tribes for the year ending thirtieth June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and they are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of paying the current and contingent expenses of the Indian department and fulfilling treaty stipulations with the various Indian tribes—

For the current and contingent expenses of the Indian department, namely:

For the pay of superintendents of Indian affairs and of Indian agents, one hundred and ten thousand and fifty dollars.

For pay of sub-agents, six thousand dollars.

For pay of clerk to superintendent at Saint Louis, Missouri, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For pay of temporary clerks by superintendents of Indian affairs, five thousand dollars.

For pay of clerk to superintendent of Indian affairs in California, one thousand eight hundred dollars.

For pay of interpreters, twenty-eight thousand four hundred dollars.

For presents to Indians, five thousand dollars.

For provisions for Indians, eleven thousand eight hundred dollars.

For buildings at agencies and repairs thereof, ten thousand dollars.

For contingencies of the Indian department, thirty-six thousand five hundred dollars.

For fulfilling treaty stipulations with the various Indian tribes:

Chasta, Scoton, and Umpqua Indians.

For twelfth of fifteen installments of annuity, to be expended as directed by the President, per third article treaty eighteenth November, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, two thousand dollars.

For twelfth of fifteen installments for the pay of a farmer, per fifth article treaty eighteenth November, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand dollars.

For twelfth of fifteen installments for pay of physician, medicines, and expense of care of the sick, per fifth article treaty eighteenth November, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For twelfth of fifteen installments for pay of teachers and purchase of books and stationery, per fifth article treaty eighteenth November, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand two hundred dollars.

Chippewas of Lake Superior.

For two thirds of last of twenty-five installments in money, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, eight thousand three hundred and thirty-three dollars and thirty-three cents.

For two thirds of last of twenty-five installments for the pay of two carpenters, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, eight hundred dollars.

For two thirds of last of twenty-five installments in goods, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, seven thousand dollars.

For two thirds of last of twenty-five installments for the support of schools, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand three hundred and thirty-three dollars and thirty-three cents.

For two thirds of last of twenty-five installments for the pay of two farmers, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, six hundred and sixty-six dollars and sixty-seven cents.

For two thirds of last of twenty-five installments for the purchase of provisions and tobacco, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand three hundred and thirty-three dollars and thirty-three cents.

For twelfth of twenty installments in coin, per fourth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, five thousand dollars.

For twelfth of twenty installments in goods, household furniture, and cooking utensils, per fourth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, eight thousand dollars.

For twelfth of twenty installments for agricultural implements, and cattle, carpenters' and other tools, and building materials, per fourth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, three thousand dollars.

For twelfth of twenty installments for moral and educational purposes, three hundred dollars of which to be paid to the Grand Portage band yearly, to enable them to maintain a school at their village, per fourth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, three thousand dollars.

For twelfth of twenty installments for six smiths and assistants, per second and fifth articles treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, five thousand and forty dollars.

For twelfth of twenty installments for the support of six smiths' shops, per second and fifth articles treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand three hundred and twenty dollars.

For tenth of twenty installments for the seventh smith and assistant, and support of shops, per second and fifth articles treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand and sixty dollars.

For support of a smith, assistant, and shop for the Bois Forte band, during the pleasure of the President, per twelfth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand and sixty dollars.

For support of two farmers for the Bois Forte band, during the pleasure of the President, per twelfth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For gratuities for the purpose of quieting the claim of the Lac de Flambeau band of Chippewas, for an interest in the lands ceded to the United States by the Bois Forte band of Chippewa Indians, three thousand dollars.

Chippewas of the Mississippi.

For one third of last of twenty-five installments in money, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, four thousand one hundred and sixty-six dollars and sixty-seven cents.

For one third of last of twenty-five installments for the pay of two carpenters, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, four hundred dollars.

For one third of last of twenty-five installments in goods, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, three thousand five hundred dollars.

For one third of last of twenty-five installments for the support of schools, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, six hundred and sixty-six dollars and sixty-seven cents.

For one third of last of twenty-five install-

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

ments for the purchase of provisions and tobacco, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, six hundred and sixty-six dollars and sixty-seven cents.

For one third of last of twenty-five installments for the support of two smiths' shops, including the pay of two smiths and assistants, and furnishing iron and steel, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, six hundred and sixty-six dollars and sixty-seven cents.

For one third of last of twenty-five installments for pay of two farmers, per fourth article treaty fourth October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and eighth article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, three hundred and thirty-three dollars and thirty-three cents.

For twelfth of twenty installments of annuity in money, per third article treaty twenty-second February, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, twenty thousand dollars.

Chippewas, Pillager, and Lake Winnebago-shish Bands.

For twelfth of thirty installments of annuity in money, per third article treaty twenty-second February, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, ten thousand six hundred and sixty-six dollars and sixty-six cents.

For twelfth of thirty installments of annuity in goods, per third article treaty twenty-second February, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, eight thousand dollars.

For twelfth of thirty installments for purposes of utility, per third article treaty twenty-second February, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, four thousand dollars.

For twelfth of twenty installments for purposes of education, per third article treaty twenty-second February, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three thousand dollars.

For twelfth of fifteen installments for support of two smiths and smiths' shops, per third article treaty twenty-second February, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, two thousand one hundred and twenty dollars.

For pay of an engineer to grist and saw mill at Leech Lake, per third article of treaty of twenty-second February, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, six hundred dollars.

Chippewas of Saginaw, Swan Creek, and Black River.

For first of two equal installments in coin, to be distributed per capita, in the usual manner of paying annuities, per second article of the treaty of August second, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, eighteen thousand eight hundred dollars.

Chippewa, Menomones, Winnebagoes, and New York Indians.

For education during the pleasure of Congress, per fifth article treaty eleventh August, eighteen hundred and twenty-seven, one thousand five hundred dollars.

Chickasaws.

For permanent annuity in goods, per act of twenty-fifth February, seventeen hundred and ninety-nine, three thousand dollars.

Choctaws.

For permanent annuity, per second article treaty sixteenth November, eighteen hundred and five, and thirteenth article treaty twenty-second June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three thousand dollars.

For permanent annuity for support of light-horsemen, per thirteenth article treaty eighth October, eighteen hundred and twenty, and thirteenth article treaty, twenty-second June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, six hundred dollars.

For permanent provision for education, per second article treaty twentieth January, eighteen hundred and twenty-five, and thirteenth article treaty twenty-second June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, six thousand dollars.

For permanent provision for blacksmith, per sixth article treaty eighteenth October, eighteen hundred and twenty, and thirteenth article treaty twenty-second June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, six hundred dollars.

For permanent provision for iron and steel, per ninth article treaty twentieth January, eighteen hundred and twenty-five, and thirteenth article of treaty twenty-second June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three hundred and twenty dollars.

For interest on five hundred thousand dollars, at five per centum per annum, for education, support of the government, and other beneficial purposes, under the direction of the general council of the Choctaws, in conformity with the provisions contained in the tenth and thirteenth articles of the treaty of twenty-second June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, twenty-five thousand dollars.

Choctaws and Chickasaws.

For this amount, or so much thereof as may become due to the Choctaws and Chickasaws under the third and forty-sixth articles of the treaty of April twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for interest at the rate of five per centum, upon the amount paid for certain lands ceded by them to the United States, fifteen thousand dollars.

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary to enable the Secretary of the Interior to cause a census of each tribe to be taken, as per first clause, eighth article, treaty of April twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For this amount to be advanced the Choctaws for the cession of the leased district, and the admission of the Kansas Indians, as per forty-sixth article treaty of April twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For this amount to be advanced the Chickasaws for the cession of the leased district, and the admission of the Kansas Indians, as per forty-sixth article treaty of April twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, fifty thousand dollars.

For pay of commissioners to be appointed by the President, as per forty-ninth and fiftieth articles treaty of April twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and Senate amendment thereto, or so much thereof as may be necessary, four thousand three hundred and twenty dollars.

Comanches, Kiowas, and Apaches, of Arkansas River.

For the third of five installments, being the second series for the purchase of goods, provisions, and agricultural implements, per sixth article treaty twenty-seventh July, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, eighteen thousand dollars.

For expenses of transportation of the second of five installments of goods, provisions, and agricultural implements, per sixth article treaty twenty-seventh July, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, seven thousand dollars.

Creeks.

For permanent annuity in money, per fourth article treaty seventh August, seventeen hundred and ninety, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For permanent annuity in money, per second article treaty sixteenth June, eighteen hundred and two, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, three thousand dollars.

For permanent annuity in money, per fourth article treaty twenty-fourth January, eighteen hundred and twenty-six, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, twenty thousand dollars.

For permanent annuity for blacksmith and assistant, and for shop and tools, per eighth article treaty twenty-fourth January, eighteen hundred and twenty-six, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, eight hundred and forty dollars.

For permanent annuity for iron and steel for shop, per eighth article treaty twenty-fourth January, eighteen hundred and twenty-six, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, two hundred and seventy dollars.

For permanent annuity for the pay of a wheelwright, per eighth article treaty twenty-fourth January, eighteen hundred and twenty-six, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, six hundred dollars.

For blacksmith and assistant, and shop and tools, during the pleasure of the President, per fifth article treaty fourteenth February, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, eight hundred and forty dollars.

For iron and steel for shop during the pleasure of the President, per fifth article treaty fourteenth February, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, two hundred and seventy dollars.

For wagon-maker during the pleasure of the President, per fifth article treaty fourteenth February, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, six hundred dollars.

For assistance in agricultural operations during the pleasure of the President, per eighth article treaty twenty-fourth January, eighteen hundred and twenty-six, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, two thousand dollars.

For education during the pleasure of the President, per fifth article treaty fourteenth February, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, and fifth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, one thousand dollars.

For five per centum interest on two hundred thousand dollars, for purposes of education, per sixth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, ten thousand dollars.

Delawares.

For life annuity to chief, per private article to supplemental treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, to treaty of third October, eighteen hundred and eighteen, one hundred dollars.

For interest on forty-six thousand and eighty dollars, at five per centum, being the value of thirty-six sections of land set apart by treaty of eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, for education, per Senate resolution of January nineteenth, eighteen hundred and thirty-eight, and fifth article treaty May sixth, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, [four,] two thousand three hundred and four dollars.

Iowas.

For interest in lieu of investment on fifty-seven thousand five hundred dollars, balance of one hundred and fifty-seven thousand five hundred dollars, to the first of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, at five per centum per annum, for education or other beneficial purposes, under the direction of the President, per second article treaty October nineteenth, eighteen hundred and thirty-eight, and ninth article treaty May seventeenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, two thousand eight hundred and seventy-five dollars.

Kansas.

For interest in lieu of investment on two hundred thousand dollars, at five per centum per annum, per second article treaty January fourteenth, eighteen hundred and forty-six, ten thousand dollars.

Kickapoos.

For thirteenth installment of interest, at five

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

per centum, on one hundred thousand dollars, for educational and other beneficial purposes, per second article treaty May eighteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, five thousand dollars.

For thirteenth installment on two hundred thousand dollars, to be paid in eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, per second article treaty eighteenth May, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, seven thousand dollars.

Menomonees.

For eleventh of twelve installments for continuing and keeping up a blacksmith shop and providing the usual quantity of iron and steel, per fourth article treaty eighteenth October, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, and third article treaty twelfth May, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, nine hundred and sixteen dollars and sixty-six cents.

For first of fifteen installments of annuity upon two hundred and forty-six thousand six hundred and eighty-six dollars for cession of lands per third article treaty May twelfth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and Senate amendment thereto, sixteen thousand one hundred and seventy-nine dollars and six cents.

For eleventh of fifteen installments for pay of miller, per third article treaty twelfth May, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, six hundred dollars.

Miamies of Kansas.

For permanent provision for blacksmith and assistant, and iron and steel for shop, per fifth article treaty sixth October, eighteen hundred and eighteen, and fourth article treaty June fifth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, nine hundred and forty dollars.

For permanent provision for miller, in lieu of gunsmith, per fifth article treaty sixth October, eighteen hundred and eighteen, fifth article treaty twenty-third October, eighteen hundred and thirty-four, and fourth article treaty fifth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, six hundred dollars.

For interest on fifty thousand dollars, at five per centum, for educational purposes, per third article treaty fifth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments upon two hundred thousand dollars, per third article treaty fifth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, seven thousand five hundred dollars.

Miamies of Indiana.

For interest on two hundred and twenty-one thousand two hundred and fifty-seven dollars and eighty-six cents, uninvested, at five per centum, for Miami Indians of Indiana, per Senate's amendment to fourth article treaty fifth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, eleven thousand and sixty-two dollars and eighty-nine cents.

Miamies—Eel River.

For permanent annuity in goods or otherwise, per fourth article treaty third August, seventeen hundred and ninety-five, five hundred dollars.

For permanent annuity in goods or otherwise, per third article treaty twenty-first August, eighteen hundred and five, two hundred and fifty dollars.

For permanent annuity in goods or otherwise, per third and separate article to treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and nine, three hundred and fifty dollars.

Nisqually, Puyallup, and other Tribes and Bands of Indians.

For twelfth installment, in part payment for relinquishment of title lands, to be applied to beneficial objects, per fourth article treaty twenty-sixth December, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, twelve hundred dollars.

For twelfth of twenty installments for pay of instructor, smith, physician, carpenter, farmer, and assistant, if necessary, per tenth article treaty twenty-sixth December, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, six thousand seven hundred dollars.

Omahas.

For the ninth of ten installments of this amount, being second of series, in money or otherwise, per fourth article treaty sixteenth March, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, thirty thousand dollars.

Osages.

For interest on sixty-nine thousand one hundred and twenty dollars, at five per centum, being the value of fifty-four sections of land set apart second June, eighteen hundred and twenty-five, for educational purposes, per Senate resolution nineteenth January, eighteen hundred and thirty-eight, three thousand four hundred and fifty-six dollars.

For interest on three hundred thousand dollars at five per centum per annum, to be paid semi-annually in money or such articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per first article treaty of September twenty-nine, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, fifteen thousand dollars.

For transportation of goods, provisions, and so forth, purchased by the Great and Little Osage Indians, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, or so much thereof as may be necessary, three thousand five hundred dollars.

Ottos and Missourias.

For ninth of ten installments, being the second series, in money or otherwise, per fourth article treaty fifteenth March, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, thirteen thousand dollars.

Ottawas and Chippewas of Michigan.

For interest on two hundred and six thousand dollars, unpaid part of the principal sum of three hundred and six thousand dollars, for one year, at five per centum per annum, to be distributed per capita, in the usual manner of paying annuities, per second article of the treaty of thirty-first July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, ten thousand three hundred dollars.

Pawnees.

For fourth of five installments of the second series in goods and such articles as may be necessary for them, per second article treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, thirty thousand dollars.

For support of two manual-labor schools annually, during the pleasure of the President, per third article treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, ten thousand dollars.

For pay of two teachers, under the direction of the President, per third article treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For purchase of iron and steel, and other necessities for the shop, during the pleasure of the President, per fourth article treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, five hundred dollars.

For pay of two blacksmiths, one of whom to be a gunsmith and tin-smith, per fourth article treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For compensation of two strikers or apprentices in shop, per fourth article of treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, four hundred and eighty dollars.

For ninth of ten installments for farming utensils and stock, during the pleasure of the President, per fourth article treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For pay of farmer, per fourth article treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, six hundred dollars.

For eighth of ten installments for pay of miller, at the discretion of the President, per fourth article treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, six hundred dollars.

For eighth of ten installments for pay of an engineer, at the discretion of the President, per fourth article treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For compensation to apprentices, to assist in working the mill, per fourth article treaty twenty-fourth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, five hundred dollars.

For grist and saw mill, and keeping the same in repair, per fourth article treaty September twenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, three hundred dollars.

Pottawatomies of Huron.

For permanent annuity in money or otherwise, per second article treaty seventeenth November, eighteen hundred and seven, four hundred dollars.

Pottawatomies.

For permanent annuity in silver, per fourth article treaty third August, seventeen hundred and ninety-five, one thousand dollars.

For permanent annuity in silver, per third article treaty thirtieth September, eighteen hundred and nine, five hundred dollars.

For permanent annuity in silver, per third article treaty second October, eighteen hundred and eighteen, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For permanent annuity in money, per second article treaty twentieth September, eighteen hundred and twenty-eight, two thousand dollars.

For permanent annuity in specie, per second article treaty twenty-ninth July, eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, sixteen thousand dollars.

For life annuity to chief, per third article treaty twentieth October, eighteen hundred and thirty-two, two hundred dollars.

For life annuity to chiefs, per third article treaty twenty-sixth September, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, seven hundred dollars.

For education during the pleasure of Congress, per third article treaty sixteenth October, eighteen hundred and twenty-six, second article treaty twentieth September, eighteen hundred and twenty-eight, and fourth article treaty twenty-seventh October, eighteen hundred and thirty-two, five thousand dollars.

For permanent provision for the payment of money in lieu of tobacco, iron, and steel, per second article treaty twentieth September, eighteen hundred and twenty-eight, and tenth article of the treaty of the fifth and seventeenth June, eighteen hundred and forty-six, three hundred dollars.

For permanent provisions for three blacksmiths and assistants, and permanent provision for iron and steel for shops, per third article treaty sixteenth October, eighteen hundred and twenty-six, second article treaty twentieth September, eighteen hundred and twenty-eight, and second article treaty twenty-ninth July, eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, two thousand one hundred and sixty dollars.

For iron and steel, six hundred and sixty dollars.

For permanent provision for fifty barrels of salt, per second article of treaty twenty-ninth July, eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, four hundred and thirty-seven dollars and fifty cents.

For interest on six hundred and forty-three thousand dollars, at five per centum, per seventh article of the treaty of the fifth and seventeenth June, eighteen hundred and forty-six, thirty-two thousand one hundred and fifty dollars.

Quapaws.

For education during the pleasure of the President, per third article treaty thirteenth May, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, one thousand dollars.

For blacksmith and assistant, shop and tools, and iron and steel for shop, during the pleasure

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG.... 1ST SESS.

of the President, per third article treaty thirteenth May, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, one thousand and sixty dollars.

For farmer during the pleasure of the President, per third article treaty thirteenth May, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, six hundred dollars.

Rogue Rivers.

For thirteenth of sixteen installments in blankets, clothing, farming utensils, and stock, per third article treaty tenth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, two thousand five hundred dollars.

Sacs and Foxes of Mississippi.

For permanent annuity in goods or otherwise, per third article treaty third November, eighteen hundred and four, one thousand dollars.

For interest on two hundred thousand dollars, at five per centum, per second article treaty twenty-first October, eighteen hundred and thirty-seven, ten thousand dollars.

For interest on eight hundred thousand dollars, at five per centum, per second article treaty eleventh October, eighteen hundred and forty-two, forty thousand dollars.

Sacs and Foxes of Missouri.

For interest on one hundred and fifty-seven thousand four hundred dollars, at five per centum, under the direction of the President, per second article treaty twenty-first October, eighteen hundred and thirty-seven, seven thousand eight hundred and seventy dollars.

Seminoles.

For the last of ten installments for the support of schools, per eighth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, three thousand dollars.

For the last of ten installments for agricultural assistance, per eighth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, two thousand dollars.

For the last of ten installments for the support of smiths and smiths' shops, per eighth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, two thousand two hundred dollars.

For five per centum interest on two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, to be paid as annuity, per eighth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

For interest on two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, at five per centum, to be paid as annuity, they having joined their brethren West, per eighth article treaty seventh August, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

Senecas.

For permanent annuity in specie, per fourth article treaty twenty-ninth September, eighteen hundred and seventeen, five hundred dollars.

For permanent annuity in specie, per fourth article treaty seventeenth September, eighteen hundred and eighteen, five hundred dollars.

For blacksmith and assistant, shop and tools, and iron and steel, during the pleasure of the President, per fourth article treaty twenty-eighth February, eighteen hundred and thirty-one, one thousand and sixty dollars.

For miller during the pleasure of the President, per fourth article treaty twenty-eighth February, eighteen hundred and thirty-one, six hundred dollars.

Senecas of New York.

For permanent annuity, in lieu of interest on stock, per act of nineteenth February, eighteen hundred and thirty-one, six thousand dollars.

For interest, in lieu of investment, on seventy-five thousand dollars, at five per centum, per act of twenty-seventh June, eighteen hundred and forty-six, three thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars.

For interest, at five per centum, on forty-three thousand and fifty dollars, transferred from Ontario Bank to the United States Treasury, per act of twenty-seventh June, eighteen hundred and forty-six, two thousand one hundred and fifty-two dollars and fifty cents.

Senecas and Shawnees.

For permanent annuity in specie, per fourth article treaty seventeenth September, eighteen hundred and eighteen, one thousand dollars.

For blacksmith and assistant, shop and tools, and iron and steel for shop, during the pleasure of the President, per fourth article treaty twentieth July, eighteen hundred and thirty-one, one thousand and sixty dollars.

Shawnees.

For permanent annuity for educational purposes, per fourth article treaty third August, seventeen hundred and ninety-five, and third article treaty tenth May, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand dollars.

For thirteenth installment of interest, at five per centum, on forty thousand dollars for education, per third article treaty tenth May, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, two thousand dollars.

For permanent annuity for educational purposes, per fourth article treaty twenty-ninth September, eighteen hundred and seventeen, and third article treaty tenth May, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, two thousand dollars.

Six Nations of New York.

For permanent annuity in clothing and other useful articles, per sixth article treaty eleventh November, seventeen hundred and ninety-four, four thousand five hundred dollars.

Umpquas (Cow Creek Band.)

For thirteenth of twenty installments in blankets, clothing, provisions, and stock, per third article treaty nineteenth September, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, five hundred and fifty dollars.

Umpquas and Calapooias, of Umpqua Valley, Oregon.

For second of five installments, of the third series, of annuity for beneficial objects, to be expended as directed by the President, per third article treaty twenty-ninth November, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand seven hundred dollars.

For twelfth of fifteen installments for the pay of a physician and purchase of medicines, per sixth article treaty twenty-ninth November, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, two thousand dollars.

For twelfth of twenty installments for the pay of a teacher and purchase of books and stationery, per sixth article treaty twenty-ninth November, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, one thousand four hundred and fifty dollars.

Winnebagos.

For interest on one million dollars, at five per centum, per fourth article treaty first November, eighteen hundred and thirty-seven, fifty thousand dollars.

For twentieth of thirty installments of interest on eighty-five thousand dollars, at five per centum, per fourth article treaty thirteenth October, eighteen hundred and forty-six, four thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

For the erection of a saw-mill, with grist-mill attached, on their new reservation, as per third article treaty of March eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, ten thousand dollars.

For expense of breaking and fencing one hundred acres of land for each band of said Indians, as per third article treaty of March eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, nine thousand and eighty-seven dollars and sixty cents.

For expense of sowing and planting one hundred acres of land for each band of said Indians, and furnishing seed for the same, as per third article treaty of March eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, five thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars.

For the purchase of guns for said Indians, as per third article treaty of March eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, two thousand dollars.

For the purchase of four hundred horses, one hundred cows, twenty yoke of oxen, twenty wagons, and forty chains, as per third article treaty of March eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and Senate amendment thereto of February thirteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, sixty thousand three hundred dollars.

For the purchase of agricultural implements, as per third article treaty of March eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, five hundred dollars.

For the erection of an agency building, school-house, warehouse, and suitable buildings for the physician, carpenter, interpreter, miller, engineer, and blacksmith, on the new reservation of said Indians, as per fourth article treaty of March eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, twenty-one thousand dollars.

For erection of a house for each chief of the said tribes, as per fourth article treaty of March eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, twenty-two thousand five hundred dollars.

For expenses of the removal of the property of said Indians to their new homes, as per fifth article treaty of March eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, three hundred dollars.

For subsistence of the Winnebagos for one year after their arrival at their new homes, as per fifth article treaty of March eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, ninety-six thousand dollars.

Winnebago and Pottawatomie Indians of Wisconsin.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to take charge of certain stray bands of Winnebago and Pottawatomie Indians in the State of Wisconsin, five thousand dollars.

Yancton Tribe of Sioux.

For eighth of ten installments to be paid to them or expended for their benefit, commencing with the year in which they shall remove to and settle and reside upon their reservations, per fourth article treaty nineteenth April, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, sixty-five thousand dollars.

Calapooias, Molalla, and Clackamas Indians, of Willamette Valley.

For second of five installments of the second series of annuity for beneficial objects, per second article treaty twenty-second January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, six thousand five hundred dollars.

Poncas.

For the third of ten installments of the second series, to be paid to them or expended for their benefit, commencing with the year in which they shall remove to and settle upon the tract reserved for their future homes, per second article treaty twelfth March, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, ten thousand dollars.

For eighth of ten installments for the establishment and maintenance of one or more manual-labor schools, under the direction of the President, per second article treaty twelfth March, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, five thousand dollars.

For eighth of ten installments, or during the pleasure of the President, to be expended in furnishing said Indians with such aid and assistance in agricultural and mechanical pursuits, including the working of the mill provided for in the first part of this article, as the Secretary of the Interior may consider advantageous and necessary for them, per second article treaty twelfth March, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, seven thousand five hundred dollars.

D'Wamish and other allied Tribes in Washington Territory.

For seventh installment on one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, under the direction of

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

the President, per sixth article treaty twenty-second January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the establishment and support of an agricultural and industrial school, and to provide said school with a suitable instructor or instructors, per fourteenth article treaty twenty-second January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three thousand dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the establishment and support of a smith and carpenter shop, and to furnish them with the necessary tools, per fourteenth article treaty twenty-second January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the employment of a blacksmith, carpenter, farmer, and physician who shall furnish medicines for the sick, per fourteenth article treaty twenty-second January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, four thousand six hundred dollars.

Makah Tribe.

For first of four installments of thirty thousand dollars, (being the fourth series,) under the direction of the President, per fifth article treaty January thirty-first, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the support of an agricultural and industrial school, and for pay of teachers, per eleventh article treaty thirty-first January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for support of a smith and carpenter's shop, and to provide the necessary tools therefor, per eleventh article treaty thirty-first January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the employment of a blacksmith, carpenter, farmer, and physician who shall furnish medicines for the sick, per eleventh article treaty thirty-first January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, four thousand six hundred dollars.

Walla-Walla, Cayuse, and Umatilla Tribes.

For second of five installments of second series, to be expended under the direction of the President, per second article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, six thousand dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the purchase of all necessary mill fixtures and mechanical tools, medicines and hospital stores, books and stationery for schools, and furniture for the employes, per fourth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three thousand dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the pay and subsistence of one superintendent of farming operations, one farmer, two millers, one blacksmith, one wagon and plow maker, one carpenter and joiner, one physician, and two teachers, per fourth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, eleven thousand two hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the pay of each of the head chiefs of the Walla-Walla, Cayuse, and Umatilla bands, the sum of five hundred dollars per annum, per fifth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for salary for the son of Pio-pio-mox-mox, per fifth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, one hundred dollars.

Yakama Nation.

For second of five installments, of second series, for beneficial objects, at the discretion of the President, per fourth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, eight thousand dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the support of two schools, one of which is to be an agricultural and industrial school, keeping in repair school buildings, and for providing suitable furniture, books, and stationery, per fifth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the employment of one superintendent of teaching and two teachers, per fifth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three thousand two hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the employment of one superintendent of farming and two farmers, two millers, two blacksmiths, one tinner, one gunsmith, one carpenter, and one wagon and plow maker, per fifth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, nine thousand four hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair saw and flouring mills, and for furnishing the necessary tools and fixtures, per fifth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair the hospital, and providing the necessary medicines and fixtures therefor, per fifth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the pay of a physician, per fifth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, one thousand four hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair the buildings required for the various employes, and for providing the necessary furniture therefor, per fifth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the salary of such person as the said confederated tribes and band of Indians may select to be their head chief, per fifth article treaty ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

Nez Perce Indians.

For second of five installments of second series for beneficial objects, at discretion of the President, per fourth article treaty June eleventh, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, eight thousand dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the support of two schools, one of which to be an agricultural and industrial school, keeping in repair school building, and for providing suitable furniture, books, and stationery, per fifth article treaty eleventh June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the employment of one superintendent of teaching and two teachers, per fifth article treaty eleventh June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three thousand two hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair blacksmiths', tin-smiths', gunsmiths', carpenters', and wagon and plow makers' shops, and for providing necessary tools therefor, per fifth article treaty eleventh June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the employment of one superintendent of farming and two farmers, two millers, two blacksmiths, one tinner, one gunsmith, one carpenter, and one wagon and plow maker, per fifth article treaty eleventh June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, nine thousand four hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair saw and flouring mill, and for furnishing the necessary tools and fixtures therefor, per fifth article treaty eleventh June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair the hospital, and providing the necessary medicines and furniture therefor, per fifth article treaty eleventh June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for pay of a physician, per fifth article treaty eleventh June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, one thousand four hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair the buildings for the various employes, and for providing the necessary furniture therefor, per fifth article treaty eleventh June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the salary of such person as the tribe may select to be their head chief, per fifth article treaty eleventh June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For first of four installments to enable the Indians to remove and locate upon the reservation, to be expended in plowing land and fencing lots, as per first clause fourth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, seventy thousand dollars.

For the purchase of agricultural implements, including wagons and carts, harness, cattle, and sheep, or other stock, as may be deemed most beneficial, as per second clause fourth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, fifty thousand dollars.

For the erection of a saw and flouring mill, to be located at Kamia, as per third clause fourth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, ten thousand dollars.

For first of the sixteen installments for boarding and clothing the children who shall attend the schools, providing the schools and boarding-houses with necessary furniture, the purchase of necessary wagons, teams, agricultural implements, tools, and so forth, and for fencing of such lands as may be needed for gardening and farming purposes for the schools, as per fourth clause fourth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, six thousand dollars.

For building two churches, as per fifth clause fourth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For salary of two subordinate chiefs, as per fifth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand dollars.

For the erection of buildings for the subordinate chiefs, and to plow and fence the land for said chiefs, as well as to procure the necessary furniture, and to complete and furnish the house, and so forth, of the head chief, as per fifth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For the erection of two school-houses, including boarding-houses, and the necessary out-buildings, as per first clause fifth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, ten thousand dollars.

For the erection of a hospital and providing the necessary furniture, as per second clause fifth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, twelve hundred dollars.

For the erection of a blacksmith shop, to be located at Kamia, to aid in the completion of the smith's shop at the agency, and to purchase the necessary tools, iron, steel, and so forth, as per third clause fifth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, two thousand dollars.

For the erection of houses for employes, repairs of mills, shops, and so forth, and providing necessary furniture, tools, and materials, as per fourth clause fifth article treaty June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, three thousand dollars.

For salary of two matrons to take charge of the boarding schools, two assistant teachers, one farmer, one carpenter, and two millers, as per fifth article treaty of June ninth,

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, seven thousand six hundred dollars.

For the erection of a house for Indian chief Timothy, as per sixth article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, six hundred dollars.

To pay the claims of certain members of the Nez Perce tribe for services rendered and for horses furnished by them to the Oregon mounted volunteers on the sixth of March, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, at Camp Cornelius, as per seventh article treaty of June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three (to be paid in gold,) four thousand six hundred and sixty-five dollars.

Fleatheds and other Confederated Tribes.

For the third of five installments on one hundred and twenty thousand dollars, being the second series, for beneficial objects, at the discretion of the President, per fourth article treaty sixteenth July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five thousand dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the support of an agricultural and industrial school, keeping in repair the buildings, and providing suitable furniture, books, and stationery, per fifth article treaty sixteenth July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for providing suitable instructors therefor, per fifth article treaty sixteenth July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, one thousand eight hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair blacksmiths', tin and gunsmiths', carpenters', and wagon and plow makers' shops, and providing necessary tools therefor, per fifth article treaty sixteenth July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the employment of two farmers, two millers, one blacksmith, one tinner, one gunsmith, one carpenter, and one wagon and plow maker, per fifth article treaty sixteenth July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, seven thousand four hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair saw and flouring mills, and for furnishing the necessary tools and fixtures therefor, per fifth article treaty sixteenth July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair the hospital, and providing the necessary medicines and furniture therefor, per fifth article treaty sixteenth July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for pay of a physician, per fifth article treaty sixteenth July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, one thousand four hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for keeping in repair the buildings required for the various employes, and furnishing necessary furniture therefor, per fifth article treaty sixteenth July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the pay of each of the head chiefs of the Flathead, Kootenay, and Upper Pend d'Oreilles tribes, per fifth article treaty sixteenth July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, fifteen hundred dollars.

Confederated Tribes and Bands of Indians in Middle Oregon.

For second of five installments, second series, of six thousand dollars, for beneficial objects, at the discretion of the President, per second article treaty twenty-fifth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, six thousand dollars.

For seventh of fifteen installments for pay and subsistence of one farmer, one blacksmith, and one wagon and plow maker, per fourth article treaty twenty-fifth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three thousand five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for pay and subsistence of one physician, one sawyer, one miller, one superintendent of farming operations, and one school teacher, per fourth article treaty twenty-fifth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five thousand six hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for payment of salary to the head chief of said confederated bands, per fourth article treaty twenty-fifth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

Motel Indians.

For seventh of ten installments for keeping in repair saw and flouring mills, and for the pay of necessary employes, the benefits of which to be shared alike by all the confederated bands, per second article treaty twenty-first December, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For seventh of ten installments for the pay of a carpenter and joiner to aid in erecting buildings and making furniture for said Indians, and to furnish tools in said service, per second article treaty twenty-first December, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, two thousand dollars.

For pay of teachers to manual-labor school, for all necessary materials therefor, and for the subsistence of the pupils, per second article treaty twenty-first December, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three thousand dollars.

Qui-nai-elt and Qui-leh-ute Indians.

For the first of four installments on twenty-five thousand dollars (being the fourth series) for beneficial objects, under the direction of the President, per fourth article treaty first July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, one thousand dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the support of an agricultural and industrial school, and for pay of suitable instructors, per tenth article treaty first July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for support of smith and carpenter shop, and to provide the necessary tools therefor, per tenth article treaty first July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the employment of a blacksmith, carpenter, and farmer, and a physician who shall furnish medicine for the sick, per tenth article treaty first July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, four thousand six hundred dollars.

S' Klallams.

For first of four installments on sixty thousand dollars, (being the fourth series,) under the direction of the President, per fifth article treaty twenty-sixth January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three thousand dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the support of an agricultural and industrial school, and for pay for suitable teachers, per eleventh article treaty twenty-sixth January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For seventh of twenty installments for the employment of a blacksmith, carpenter, farmer, and a physician who shall furnish medicines for the sick, per eleventh article treaty twenty-sixth January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, four thousand six hundred dollars.

Ottawa Indians of Blanchard's Fork and Roche de Boeuf.

For the last of four installments, in money, per fourth article treaty twenty-fourth June, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, eight thousand five hundred dollars.

For interest on eight thousand five hundred dollars, at five per centum, being the unpaid principal of thirty-four thousand dollars, per fourth article treaty June twenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, four hundred and twenty-five dollars.

For the last of four installments of the principal sum held in stocks by the Government, to be paid as annuity in eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, per fourth article treaty June twenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, two thousand eight hundred and forty-nine dollars and eighty-seven cents.

Arapahoes and Cheyenne Indians of the Upper Arkansas River.

For sixth of fifteen installments of annuity of thirty thousand dollars, to be expended for their benefit—that is to say, fifteen thousand dollars per annum for each tribe, commencing with the year in which they shall remove to and settle upon their reservations—per fourth article treaty February eighteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, thirty thousand dollars.

For fourth of five installments to provide the said Indians with a mill suitable for sawing timber and grinding grain, one or more mechanic shops, with necessary tools for the same, and dwelling-houses for an interpreter, miller, engineer for mill, (if one be necessary,) farmers, and the mechanics that may be employed for their benefit, per fifth article treaty February eighteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, five thousand dollars.

For transportation and necessary expenses of delivery of annuities, goods, and provisions, per fifth article treaty February eighteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, five thousand dollars.

For insurance, transportation, and necessary expenses of the delivery of annuities and provisions to the Chippewas of Lake Superior, per seventh article treaty September thirtieth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, five thousand seven hundred and sixty-two dollars and sixty-three cents.

For insurance, transportation, and necessary expenses of the delivery of annuities and provisions to the Chippewas of the Mississippi, per fifth article treaty February twenty-second, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, three thousand eight hundred and eighty-six dollars and seventy-five cents.

Chippewas of Red Lake, and Pembina Tribe of Chippewas.

For annuity to be paid per capita to the Red Lake band of Chippewas, during the pleasure of the President, per third article treaty second October, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and second article supplementary to treaty twelfth April, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, ten thousand dollars.

For this amount to the Pembina band of Chippewas, during the pleasure of the President, per third article treaty October second, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and second article supplementary treaty April twelve, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, five thousand dollars.

For the third of fifteen installments to be expended annually for the purpose of supplying them with gilling twine, cotton matter, calico, linsey, blankets, sheeting, flannels, provisions, farming tools, and for such other useful articles, and for such other useful purposes as may be deemed for their best interests, per third article supplementary treaty of twelfth April, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, eight thousand dollars.

For the third of fifteen installments for same objects for the Pembina band of Chippewas, per third article supplementary treaty twelfth April, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, four thousand dollars.

For third of fifteen installments for pay of one blacksmith, one physician, who shall furnish medicine for the sick, one miller, and one farmer, per fourth article supplementary treaty April twelfth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, three thousand nine hundred dollars.

For third of fifteen installments for the pur-

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

chase of iron and steel, and other articles for blacksmithing purposes, per fourth article supplementary treaty April twelfth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For third of fifteen installments, to be expended for carpentering and other purposes, per fourth article supplementary treaty April twelfth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, one thousand dollars.

For third of fifteen installments, to defray the expenses of a board of visitors, to consist of not more than three persons, to attend upon the annuity payments of the said Chippewa Indians, whose salary shall not exceed five dollars per day, nor more than twenty days, and ten cents per mile for traveling expenses, and not to exceed three hundred miles, per sixth article treaty October second, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, three hundred and ninety dollars.

For insurance and transportation of annuity goods and provisions, and material for building mill, including machinery, iron and steel for blacksmiths, for the Chippewas of Red Lake and Pembina tribe, ten thousand dollars.

Western Bands of Shoshonees.

For third of twenty installments, to be expended under the direction of the President in the purchase of such articles as he may deem suitable to their wants, either as hunters or herdsmen, per seventh article treaty October first, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, five thousand dollars.

Eastern Bands of Shoshonees.

For third of twenty installments, to be expended under the direction of the President, in the purchase of such articles as he may deem suitable to their wants, either as hunters or herdsmen, per fifth article treaty July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, ten thousand dollars.

Northwestern Bands of Shoshonees.

For third of twenty installments, to be expended under the direction of the President, in the purchase of such articles as he may deem suitable to their wants, either as hunters or herdsmen, per third article treaty July thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, five thousand dollars.

Goship Bands of Shoshonees.

For third of twenty installments, to be expended under the direction of the President, in the purchase of such articles, including cattle for herding, or other purposes, as he shall deem suitable for their wants and condition, either as huntsmen or herdsmen, per seventh article treaty October second [twelfth,] eighteen hundred and sixty-three, one thousand dollars.

Creek Nation.

For interest on two hundred thousand dollars, at five per centum per annum, as permanent annuity to be paid them in money, or for such mechanical labor or useful articles as the Secretary of the Interior may from time to time direct, per third article treaty September third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three; as amended by Senate, ten thousand dollars.

For payment of third of five installments, to be expended for their benefit in the purchase of stock, horses, sheep, clothing, and such other articles as the Secretary of the Interior, with the council of said nation, may direct, per fourth article treaty September third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, as amended by Senate, forty thousand dollars.

Tabogauche Band of Utah Indians.

For the third of ten installments for the purchase of goods, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, per eighth article treaty of October seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and Senate amendment of March twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, ten thousand dollars.

For the third of five installments, to be applied for the purposes of agriculture, and for the purchase of farming utensils and stock animals, per tenth article treaty October second, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and Senate amendment thereto, ten thousand dollars.

For the third of ten installments for the purchase of provisions, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, per eighth article treaty October seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and Senate amendment thereto, ten thousand dollars.

For insurance, transportation, and general incidental expenses of the delivery of goods, provisions, and stock, five thousand dollars.

Chippewas of the Mississippi, Pillagers, and Lake Winnebagoish Bands of Chippewa Indians in Minnesota.

For third of ten installments to furnish said Indians with ten yoke of good work oxen, twenty log-chains, two hundred grubbing hoes, ten plows, ten grindstones, one hundred axes, handled, twenty spades, and other farming implements, per fifth article treaty May seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For the employment of two carpenters, one thousand eight hundred dollars, and two blacksmiths, one thousand eight hundred dollars; four farm laborers, two thousand four hundred dollars; one physician, one thousand two hundred dollars, and medicine for the sick, five hundred dollars, per fifth article treaty May seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, seven thousand seven hundred dollars.

For this amount to be applied towards the support of a saw-mill to be built for the common use of the Chippewas of Mississippi and the Red Lake and Pembina bands of Chippewas, so long as the President may deem it necessary, per sixth article treaty May seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand dollars.

For pay of services and traveling expenses of a board of visitors, to consist of not more than five persons, to attend the annuity payments to the Indians, and so forth, and to inspect the fields, buildings, mills, and other improvements, as stipulated in the seventh article treaty May seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, not exceeding any one year more than twenty days' service, at five dollars per day, or more than three hundred miles' travel, at ten cents per mile, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, six hundred and fifty dollars.

For the payment of female teachers employed on the reservations to instruct Indian girls in domestic economy, per thirteenth article treaty May seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, one thousand dollars.

Minneconjon Band of Dakota or Sioux.

For first of twenty installments, to be paid in such articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per fourth article of treaty of October tenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, ten thousand dollars.

Lower Brule Band of Dakota or Sioux.

For first of twenty installments, to be paid in such articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per fourth article of treaty of October fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, six thousand dollars.

Blackfeet Band of Dakota or Sioux.

For first of twenty installments, to be paid in such articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per fourth article of treaty of October nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, seven thousand dollars.

Two Kettles' Band of Dakota or Sioux.

For first of twenty installments, to be paid in such articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per fourth article of treaty of October nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, six thousand dollars.

For this sum, to be paid the widow and children of Ish-tah-chan-ne-ah, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, as per sixth article of treaty of October nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, five hundred dollars.

For this sum, being for indemnity, to be paid under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, as per sixth article of the treaty of October nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, five hundred dollars.

Onk-pah-pah Band of Dakota or Sioux.

For first of twenty installments, being thirty dollars for each lodge or family, (three hundred lodges,) to be paid in such articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per fourth article of treaty of October twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, nine thousand dollars.

Sans Arcs Band of Dakota or Sioux.

For first of twenty installments, being thirty dollars to each lodge or family, (two hundred and eighty lodges,) to be paid in such articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per fourth article of treaty of October twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, eight thousand four hundred dollars.

Yanktonai Band of Dakota or Sioux.

For first of twenty installments, being thirty dollars for each lodge of [or] family, (three hundred and fifty lodges,) to be paid in such articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per fourth article of treaty of October twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, ten thousand five hundred dollars.

Upper Yanktonais Band of Dakota or Sioux.

For first of twenty installments, to be paid in such articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per fourth article of treaty of October twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, ten thousand dollars.

O' Gallala Band of Dakota or Sioux Indians.

For first of twenty installments, to be paid in such articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per fourth article of treaty of October twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, ten thousand dollars.

Dakota or Sioux.

For expense of transporting and delivering articles furnished for Indians on the Upper Missouri river, parties to treaties made at Fort Sully in October, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, twenty thousand dollars.

Bois Fort Band of Chippewa [Indians.]

To enable the President of the United States to set apart a reservation for the Bois Fort band

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

of Chippewa Indians, as provided in article third, treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, one thousand dollars.

For the erection of one blacksmith shop, as per third article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, five hundred dollars.

For the erection of a school-house, as per third article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, five hundred dollars.

For the erection of eight houses for chiefs, as per third article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, three thousand and two hundred dollars.

For the erection of an agency building and store-house, as per third article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, two thousand dollars.

For first of twenty installments, for the support of one blacksmith and assistant, and for tools, iron, and steel, and other articles necessary for the blacksmith shop, as per third article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For first of twenty installments, for the support of one school teacher, and for necessary books and stationery, as per third article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, eight hundred dollars.

For first of twenty installments for the instruction of the Indians in farming, and purchase of seeds, tools, and so forth, as per third article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, eight hundred dollars.

For first of twenty installments of annuity in money, to be paid per capita, as per third article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, three thousand five hundred dollars.

For first of twenty installments of annuity in provisions, ammunition, and tobacco, as per third article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand dollars.

For first of twenty installments of annuity in goods and other articles, as per third article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, six thousand five hundred dollars.

To enable the chiefs, headmen, and warriors to establish their people upon the new reservation, and to purchase useful articles and presents, as per fourth article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and Senate amendment thereto, thirty thousand dollars.

To pay necessary transportation and subsistence of the delegates who visited Washington for the purpose of negotiating treaty, as per eighth article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, ten thousand dollars.

For transportation and necessary cost of delivery of annuity goods and provisions to the Bois Fort band of Chippewa Indians, as per sixth article treaty of April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand five hundred dollars.

Tabeguache Band of Utah Indians.

For building a blacksmith shop for the Tabeguache band of Utah Indians, as per tenth article treaty of October seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, five hundred dollars.

For the purchase of iron and steel and necessary tools for said shop, as per tenth article treaty of October seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, two hundred and twenty dollars.

For the purchase of iron, steel, and necessary tools for said shop, as per tenth article treaty of October seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, two hundred and twenty dollars.

For the purchase of iron, steel, and necessary tools for said shop, as per tenth article treaty of October seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, two hundred and twenty dollars.

For pay of blacksmith and assistant for the Tabeguache band of Utah Indians, as per tenth article treaty of October seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, one thousand one hundred dollars.

For pay of blacksmith and assistant for the Tabeguache band of Utah Indians, as per tenth article treaty of October seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, one thousand one hundred dollars.

For pay of blacksmith and assistant for the Tabeguache band of Utah Indians, as per tenth article treaty of October seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand one hundred dollars.

Arapaho and Cheyenne Indians of the Upper Arkansas River.

For reimbursing members of the bands of Arapaho and Cheyenne Indians who suffered at Sand Creek, November twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to be paid in United States securities, animals, goods, provisions, or such other useful articles as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, as per sixth article treaty of October fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, thirty-nine thousand and fifty dollars.

For first of forty installments, to be expended in such manner and for such purposes as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, being an amount equal to twenty dollars per capita, for two thousand eight hundred persons, the number agreed upon for the present year, as per seventh article treaty of October fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, fifty-six thousand dollars.

For transportation of goods, provisions, and so forth, purchased for the Arapaho and Cheyenne Indians of the Upper Arkansas river, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, twenty thousand dollars.

Comanches and Kioways.

For first of forty installments, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, being an amount equal to ten dollars per capita for four thousand persons, the number agreed upon for the present year, as per fifth article treaty of October eighteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, forty thousand dollars.

For transportation of goods, provisions, and so forth, purchased for the Comanche and Kioway Indians, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, or so much thereof as may be necessary, eight thousand dollars.

Apaches.

For first of forty installments, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, for the Apache Indians, being an amount equal to twenty dollars per capita for eight hundred persons, as per second article treaty of October seventeenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, sixteen thousand dollars.

For transportation of goods, provisions, and so forth, purchased for the Apache Indians for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, or so much thereof as may be necessary, three thousand five hundred dollars.

Omaha Tribe of Indians.

For this sum, to be expended by their agent, under the direction of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for goods, provisions, cattio, horses, construction of buildings, farming implements, breaking of lands, and other improvements on their reservation, as per second article of treaty of March sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, fifty thousand dollars.

For this sum to be paid as damages, in consequence of the occupancy of a portion of the Omaha reservation and use and destruction of timber by the Winnebago tribe of Indians, as per third article of treaty of March sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, seven thousand dollars.

For keeping in repair a grist and saw mill, as per eighth article of treaty of March sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and third article of treaty of March sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, three hundred dollars.

For pay of one engineer and assistant, as per eighth article of treaty of March sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and third article of treaty of March sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand eight hundred dollars.

For pay of one miller and assistant, as per eighth article of treaty of March sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and third article of treaty of March sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For pay of farmer, as per eighth article of treaty of March sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and third article of treaty of March sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, nine hundred dollars.

For pay of blacksmith and assistants, as per eighth article of treaty of March sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and third article of treaty of March sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For support of blacksmith shop and supplying tools for the same, as per eighth article of treaty of March sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and third article of treaty of March sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, three hundred dollars.

Yakama Nation.

For second installment for keeping in repair blacksmiths', tinsmiths', gunsmiths', carpenters', and wagon and plow makers' shops, and for providing necessary tools therefor, per fifth article of treaty June ninth, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For third installment for keeping in repair blacksmiths', tinsmiths', gunsmiths', carpenters', and wagon and plow makers' shops, and for providing necessary tools therefor, per fifth article treaty June ninth, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For fourth installment for keeping in repair blacksmiths', tinsmiths', gunsmiths', carpenters', and wagon and plow makers' shops, and for providing necessary tools therefor, per fifth article treaty June ninth, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For fifth installment for keeping in repair blacksmiths', tinsmiths', gunsmiths', carpenters', and wagon and plow makers' shops, and for providing necessary tools therefor, per fifth article treaty June ninth, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

39TH CONG.... 1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

For sixth installment for keeping in repair blacksmiths', tinsmiths', gunsmiths', carpenters' and wagon and plow makers' shops, and for providing necessary tools therefor, per fifth article of treaty June ninth, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

For seventh installment for keeping in repair blacksmiths', tinsmiths', gunsmiths', carpenters' and wagon and plow makers' shops, and for providing necessary tools therefor, per fifth article treaty June ninth, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, five hundred dollars.

Klamath and Modoc Indians.

For first of five annual installments, to be applied under direction of the President, as per second article treaty of October fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, eight thousand dollars.

For this amount to pay for such articles as may be advanced the Indians at the time of signing the treaty, and to subsist them during the first year after their removal to the reservation, the purchase of teams, farming implements, seeds, tools, clothing, and provisions, and salary of the necessary employes, as per third article treaty of October fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, thirty-five thousand dollars.

For the erection of one saw-mill, one flouring-mill, buildings for the blacksmith, carpenter, and wagon and plow maker, the necessary buildings for one manual-labor school, and for hospital buildings, as per fourth article treaty of October fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, eleven thousand three hundred dollars.

For the purchase of tools and material for saw and flour mills, carpenter, blacksmith, wagon and plow makers' shops, and books and stationery for the manual-labor school, as per fourth article treaty of October fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For first of fifteen installments to pay salary and subsistence of one superintendent of farming, one farmer, one blacksmith, one sawyer, one carpenter, and one wagon and plow maker, as per fifth article treaty of October fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, six thousand dollars.

For first of twenty installments to pay salary and subsistence of one physician, one miller, and two school teachers, as per fifth article treaty of October fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, three thousand six hundred dollars.

For the erection of agency buildings, four thousand dollars.

Miscellaneous.

For insurance and transportation of annuity goods and provisions to the Flathead Indians for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, per fifth article treaty July sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, eleven thousand nine hundred and twenty dollars and forty-one cents.

Indian Service in New Mexico.

For general incidental expenses of the Indian service in New Mexico, presents of goods, agricultural implements, and other useful articles, and to assist them to locate in permanent abodes, and sustain themselves by the pursuits of civilized life, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, fifty thousand dollars.

Indian Service in the District of Country leased from the Choctaws for the Indians lately residing in Texas.

For the expenses of colonizing, supporting, and furnishing agricultural implements and stock, pay of necessary employes, purchasing clothing, medicine, iron, and steel, maintenance of schools for Indians lately residing in Texas, to be expended under direction of the Secretary of the Interior, twenty-two thousand eight hundred and twenty-five dollars.

For the Wichitas and other Affiliated Bands.

For the expenses of colonizing, supporting, and furnishing said bands with agricultural implements and stock, pay of necessary employes, purchase of clothing, medicines, iron, and steel, and maintenance of schools, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, thirty-seven thousand eight hundred dollars.

Miscellaneous.

For the general incidental expenses of the Indian service in California, including traveling expenses of the superintending agents, seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For the purchase of cattle for beef and milk, together with clothing and food, teams and farming tools for Indians in California, fifty-five thousand dollars.

For insurance, transportation, and necessary expenses of the delivery of annuities and provisions to the Indian tribes in Minnesota and Michigan, twenty thousand three hundred and fifty dollars and sixty-two cents.

For insurance, transportation, and necessary expenses of the delivery of Pawnee, Ponca, and Yancton Sioux annuity goods and provisions, ten thousand dollars.

For expenses attending the vaccination of Indians, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For the general incidental expenses of the Indian service in Oregon and Washington Territory, including insurance and transportation of annuity goods and presents (where no special provision therefor is made by treaties,) and office and traveling expenses of the superintendent and sub-agents, thirty-five thousand five hundred dollars.

For defraying the expenses of the removal and subsistence of Indians in Oregon and Washington Territory, (not parties to any treaty,) and for pay of necessary employes, fifty thousand dollars.

Indian Service in Nevada.

For the general incidental expenses of the Indian service in Nevada, presents of goods, agricultural implements, and other useful articles, and to assist them to locate in permanent abodes, and sustain themselves by the pursuits of civilized life, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, twenty-five thousand dollars.

Indian Service in Utah Territory.

For the general incidental expenses of the Indian service in Utah Territory, presents of goods, agricultural implements, and other useful articles, and to assist them to locate in permanent abodes, and sustain themselves by the pursuits of civilized life, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, twenty-five thousand dollars.

Indian Service in Colorado Territory.

For the general incidental expenses of the Indian service in Colorado Territory, presents of goods, agricultural implements, and other useful articles, and to assist them to locate in permanent abodes, and sustain themselves by the pursuits of civilized life, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For payment of interest on fifteen thousand dollars, abstracted bonds, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the Cherokee school fund, nine hundred dollars.

For payment of interest on sixty-eight thousand dollars, abstracted bonds, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, of the Cherokee national fund, four thousand and eighty dollars.

Navajo Indians in New Mexico.

For subsistence for the Navajo Indians, and for the purchase of sheep and of agricultural implements, seeds, and other articles necessary for breaking the ground on the reservation upon the Pecos river, one hundred thousand dollars.

For payment of interest on one million six hundred and ninety thousand three hundred dollars, non-paying stock held by the Secretary of the Interior in trust for the various Indian tribes, up to and including the interest payable July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, one hundred thousand one hundred and fifty-three dollars.

For subsistence, clothing, and general incidental expenses of the Sisseton, Wahpaton, Medawakanton, and Wahpakoota bands of Sioux or Dakota Indians, at their new homes, one hundred thousand dollars.

Indian Service in Idaho Territory.

For the general incidental expenses of the Indian service in Idaho Territory, presents of goods, agricultural implements, and other useful articles, and to assist them to locate in permanent abodes, and to sustain themselves by the pursuits of civilized life, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, twenty thousand dollars.

Indian Service in the Territory of Arizona.

For the general incidental expenses of the Indian service in the Territory of Arizona, presents of goods, agricultural implements, and other useful articles, and to assist them to locate in permanent abodes, and sustain themselves by the pursuits of civilized life, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, twenty thousand dollars.

Indian Service in Montana Territory.

For the general incidental expenses of the Indian service in Montana Territory, presents of goods, agricultural implements, and other useful articles, and to assist them to locate in permanent abodes, and sustain themselves by the pursuits of civilized life, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, twenty thousand dollars.

California.

For pay of one physician, one blacksmith, one assistant blacksmith, one farmer, one carpenter, upon each of the four reservations in California, at the rate of fifty dollars per month, twelve thousand dollars.

Indian Service in Dakota Territory.

For the general incidental expenses of the Indian service in Dakota Territory, presents of goods, agricultural implements, and other useful articles, and to assist them to locate in permanent abodes and sustain themselves by the pursuits of civilized life, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, twenty thousand dollars.

For the transportation and necessary expenses of delivery of provisions to the Indians within the Utah superintendency, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, twenty-two thousand five hundred dollars.

For salary of a special agent to take charge of Winnebago and Pottawatomie Indians now in the State of Wisconsin, one thousand five hundred dollars.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That no funds belonging to any Indian tribe with which treaty relations exist shall be applied in any manner not authorized by such treaty, or by express provisions of law, nor shall money appropriated to execute a treaty be transferred or applied to any other purpose, unless expressly authorized by law.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That there be, and is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of five hundred thousand dollars for the payment of supplies already furnished to the destitute Indians of the southern superintendency, for removing them to their homes, and for relieving such destitute persons among said Indians as are in actual want and suffering: Provided, That no part of the money hereby appropriated shall be paid until a full examination shall be made by the Secretary of the Interior and the First Comptroller of the Treasury, and they shall ascertain that the money is justly and equitably due under contracts made and executed in entire good faith and for necessary supplies actually delivered to the Indians as aforesaid, at reasonable prices; and for this purpose the Comptroller is hereby authorized to take testimony and state the amount due said contractors upon principles of equity; and no money shall be paid or allowed on account of supplies furnished after the passage of this act.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That any loyal person, a citizen of the United States, of good moral character, shall be permitted to trade with any Indian tribe upon giving bond to the United States in the penal sum of not less than five nor more than ten thousand dollars, with at least two good securities, to be approved by the superintendent of the district within which such person proposes to trade, or by the United States district judge or district attorney for the district in which the obligor resides, renewable each year, conditioned that such person will faithfully observe all the laws and regulations made for the government of trade and intercourse with Indian tribes, and in no respect violate the same: Provided, That the laws now in force regulating trade and intercourse with Indian tribes, affecting licensed traders, and prescribing the powers and duties of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, superintendents, agents, and sub-agents in connection therewith, shall be continued in force and apply to traders under this provision, except as herein otherwise provided.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXVII.—An Act to establish certain Post Roads.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following be established as post routes:

MAINE.

From Sherman to Houlton, in Ar[oo]stook county.

From Wilton, via Bean's Corner, to North Chesterville.

From Flag-Staff to Eustis Mills.

From Hollis to Dayton.

From Brunswick to West Harpswell.

From Porter, via North Porter, Cram's Mills, and Goshen Seminary, to Conway Centre, in New Hampshire.

VERMONT.

From West Alburgh to Champlain, New York.

NEW YORK.

From Rochester to Chili Centre, Monroe county.

From Lyon's Falls to Carthage.

From Sherburne, via Columbus, New Berlin, and Oneonta, to Albany.

From Schurours, Otsego county, via Fergussonville, Davenport, and West Kortright, to Bloomville, Delaware county.

From Morris, Otsego county, via New Berlin, Chenango county, to Norwich.

From Delhi, via Elk Creek, Hartwright, and Charlotte Creeks, Meredith and Davenport, to Oneonta, Otsego county.

From Unadilla to Oxford.

From Norwich to Sidney Plains.

From Lockport, Niagara county, via Corners and Maple Street, to Wilson.

From Norwich to Morris.

From North Petersburg Station, via Petersburg, Four Corners, and Petersburg, to South Petersburg.

From Smyrna, via Sherburn, Columbus, and New Berlin, to Oneonta.

From Bainbridge, via Guilford and Oxford, to Norwich.

From Plymouth, via Beaver Meadow, to South Ostelic.

From Russell, via Monterey and Clifton Iron Works, to Harewood.

From Oxford to Unadilla.

From Crown Point Centre, via Hammond's Furnace, to Schroon Lake.

From Holland Patent to Big Brook, Oneida county, by way of Steuben.

PENNSYLVANIA.

From West Chester to Downingtown.

From Pottsville to Shenandoah.

From Lincolnville to Miller's Station.

From Oldforge to Factoryville.

From Johnstown to Shade Gap.

From Gordonsville to Intercourse.

From Westminster to Southampton.

From Mount Union, via Litz store, to Mount Tare factory.

From Quakertown, via Milford Square, Spinnerstown, and Gory's, to Pennsburg.

From Farmington to Brandonville, Virginia.

From Barry's to Weishamptown.

From Oil City, via Oleopolis, to Pithole.

From Sartwell, McKean county, to Forrest House, Potter county.

From Erie, via Wattsburg, to Union Mills.

From Tionesta, in Venango county, to Foxborough, in Forrest county.

From West Decatur, via Clearfield Bridge, to Curwensville.

From Germany to Warren.

From Stevens, via Schoen Creek, and Reinholdsville, to Cocalico, and return to Stevens, via Schoeneck.

From Leopard to Reesville.

From Downingtown, via Brooklyn, Comog, Moorestown Station, and Barnestown Station, to Waynesburg.

From New Bloomfield to Mannsville.

From Ridgway to Shawmut.

From Cove Station, Huntington county, to Martinsburg, Blair county.

From Three Springs to Mount Union, in Huntington county.

From West Chester, via McCall's Boot Road Station, to West Chester Intersection.

From Bethel, via Crosskill Mills, and Mount Aetna, in county of Berks, to Myerstown in the county of Lebanon, State of Pennsylvania.

MARYLAND.

From Dublin to Rising Sun.

From Ellicott's Mills to Brightown.

DELAWARE.

From Wyoming, via Lebanon, to Magnolia.

WEST VIRGINIA.

From Flemington, Taylor county, via Fairview, Noah Smith's, and Fairfield, to Maxwell's Mills.

From Arnoldsburg to Webb's Mills.

From Elm Grove to Dallas.

From Grafton to Belington.

From Mount Hebron to Mouth of Seneca.

From Franklin to Mount Freedom.

From Saint Mary's to Hebron.

OHIO.

From Logan to East Rush Creek.

From Sparta to Middletown.

From Mount Vernon, via Sparta, Marengo, Macon, and Bennington, to Ashley.

From Beverly, via Dunganon and Kuths, to Sharon.

From Salem to Carrollton.

From Hamden, via Eagle Furnace, Wilkersonville, Ewington, Vinton, and Pine Grove, to Gallipolis.

From Ripley to Bradysville.

From Carrollton, by way of Cabell, Augusta, Maysville, Hanoverton, to Salem.

INDIANA.

From Mechanicsburg to Middletown.

From Rockville to Covington.

From Jervis, via Hamilton, Alverdale, Metz, Fish Creek, and York Centre, to Camden, in Michigan.

From Augusta Station, via Traders' Point, to Royalton.

From Fairland, via Cyrenius Bishops, Roseburgs, Fountaintown, and Smiths, to Greenfield.

From Philadelphia to New Palestine and Sugar Creek.

From Covington to State Line, in Warren county.

From Jasper to Lynnvill.

From Milroy to Greensburg.

From Fort Wayne, via Saint Vincent, and Oil Ridge, to Auburn.

ILLINOIS.

From Princeton to Walnut.

From Antioch, via Liberty, to Salem, in Kenosha county, Wisconsin.

From Edwardsville to Troy.

From Blackberry to Hustling's Station.

From Dunleath, via Fairplay, Jamestown, Big Rutch, and Swetzer's Grove, to Platterville, in Wisconsin.

From Lancaster, via Annoton, to New California, in Grant county, Wisconsin.

From Cedar Bluff, via Mount Pleasant, to Mosco.

From Manchester, via Winchester, to Florence.

From McLeansboro, via Belle Prairie, Long Prairie, and Keeneville, to Henia.

From Chili to Bowsenburg.

From Gardner, via Mazou, Highland, Vienna, and Bruce, to Tonica.

From Bedford to Pearl.

From Virders to Taylorsville.

From Danville to Reesville.

From Pilot Grove to Denham.

From Decatur to Newburg.

From McLeansboro, via Buck, to Fairfield.

From Louisville to Henia.

From Teutopolis to Veni.

From Webb's Prairie, via Henning's Store, to Moore's Prairie.

From Florence, Illinois, by Winchester, to Manchester.

MICHIGAN.

From Pontiac to Rochester.

From Bristol, in Indiana, via Union, Osburn's Mills, and Brownsville, to Cassapolis, in Cass county, Michigan.

From Buchanan, via Wesaw and New Troy, to Laketown.

From Decatur, via Prospect Lake, to Lawrence.

From Easton Rapids, via Spicersville, Brookfield, and Walton, to Olivet.

From Niles, via Berrien Centre, Eau Claire, Pipestone, Sodus, and Benton Harbor, to Saint Joseph.

From Holly to New Hudson.

From Vermontville to Barrysville.

From Sylvania, Lucas county, Ohio, to Whitesford Centre, Michigan.

From Big Rapids, Mecosta county, via Rogers's Bridge, Satterley's Mill, and Cato, to Stanton, in Montcalm county.

From Stanton to Mill Brook.

From Ionia, via Smyrna, to Greenville.

From Newaygo to Mears.

From Holland, via Zeeland, Wiesland, and Jamestown, to Grand Rapids.

From Manistee to Stronach.

From Newaygo, via Fremont Centre, Greenwood, and Elbridge, to Pent Water.

From Croton to Traverse City.

From Newaygo, via Bridgeton, to Minke-yon.

From Pontiac, via Rochester and Mount Vernon, to Romeo.

From Paw Paw, via New State Road, to Allegan.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

From Allison to Newman.
From Coldwater, via Orangeville and Union, City, to Athens.
From Stanton to Mount Pleasant.

MISSOURI.

From Brunswick, via Brookfield, Northcut, Milan, and Unionville, to Centerville, in Iowa.
From Keytsville, via Bucklin, Strickerville, Greencastle, and Unionville, to Centerville, in Iowa.

From Jefferson to Louisiana.
From Unionville, Putnam county, via Greencastle, and Strickerville, to Pennsville, thence via New Boston, Buckland, to Hannibal and Saint Joseph Railroad.

From Patterson to Doniphan.
From Quincy to Stockton.
From Mount Vernon, via Spring River Academy, Golden Grove, Lamar, Baker's Grove, and Washington Adams, to Fort Scott, in Kansas.

From Savannah, via Maryville, Bedford, and Afton, to Winterset, in Iowa.
From Saint Joseph, via Rochester, Albany, Eagle, Leon, Osceola, Indianola, to Des Moines, in Iowa.

From Hamilton, via Gallatin, Salem, and Bethany, to Eagle.
From Chillicothe, via Trenton and Princeton, to Leon, in Iowa.

From Brunswick, via Compton's Ferry, to Chillicothe.

From Bucklin, via New Boston, Pleasantville, Birdseye Bridge, Greencastle, to Cincinnati and Centerville, Iowa.

From Trenton, via Buttsville, Modena, and Burr Oak, to Mine [Nine] Eagles.

From Pattonsburg to Albany.
From Forest City, via Rush Bottom, Lowell, Hemmes Landing, Sonora, and Linden Landing, to Sidney, in Iowa.

From Princeton, via Ravenna, Cleopatra, and Warsaw, to Corydon, in Iowa.

From Fort Scott to Neosho.

From Sedalia, via Calhoun, Clinton, Osceola, Humansville, Stockton, Greenfield, Bowers's Mills, Sarcxie, Newtonia, and Granby, to Neosho.

From Perryville to Buhle's Store.

From Bloomfield to Kennett.

From Beech to Fourmile.

From Glasgow, via Salisbury, to Callao.

From Gallatin to Leon, Iowa.

From Bethany, via Cameron, to Kansas City.

From Pleasant Hill, via Aubery, in Kansas, Paola, and Staunton, to Ottowa.

From Pleasant Hill, via Bloomington, to Mound City, Kansas.

From Harmony to Potosi.

From Terre Haute, in Missouri, via Ayersville and Warsaw, to Corydon, in Iowa.

MINNESOTA.

From Dunleath to Vermillion Lake.

From Forest City, via Kimball's Prairie and Maine Prairie, to Saint Cloud.

From Monticello, via Buffalo, Chatham, and Waverly, to Middleville.

From Monticello, via Silver Creek and Corinna, to Fair Haven.

From La Morille, via Pickwick and S. C. Dicks's, to La Crescent.

From Shakopee to Excelsior.

From Mantorville, via Vernon, Waltham, and Mower City, to Austin.

From Buffalo, by Maple Lake, to Fair Haven.

From Saint Charles to Quincy.

From La Suer to Cordova.

From Saint Peter's, Scandian Grove, and Sibley, to Henderson.

From Rushford to Preston.

From Chaska to Saint Bonifacius.

From West Albany, via Read's Ford, to Forest Mound.

From Wabasha to Forest Mound.

From Pedler's Grove to Garden City.

From Red Wing, via Mazeppa, to Rochester.

From Minneaska, via East Indian Creek and Read's Ford, to Mazeppa.

From Buffalo, via Maple Lake, to Fair Haven.

IOWA.

From Blakesburg to Moravia.

From Des Moines to New Jefferson.

From Sigourney to Askaloosa.

From Towden, via Oxford Mills and Scotch Grove, to Monticello.

From Helena R. R. Station, via Eureka and Kent's Ridge, to Brooklyn.

From Dennison to Magnolia.

From Des Moines to Saint Joseph, Missouri.

From Fort Dodge, via Dakota, Wancosta, Fern Valley, and Emmetsburg, to Estherville.

From Newbury, via Hartland and Bristol, to Northwood.

From Northwood to Mason City.

From Northwood, via Gordonville and Shellrock, to Albert Lea, in Minnesota.

From Burlington, via Toolesboro, to Port Louisa.

From Osceola, via La Salle, to Hopeville.

From Burlington, via Port Louisa and Grandview, to Ononcia.

From Vernon, via Mount Sterling and Upton, to Memphis.

From Rockford, via Rock Grove City, Nora Springs, Shell Rock Falls, and Plymouth, to Northwood.

From Boonsboro, via Dennison, Paradise, Olmstead, and Whitesboro, to Saint John.

From Guttenburg, via Elkport and Littleport, to Strawberry Point.

From Nevada, via Iowa Centre, Peoria, and Greencastle, to Colfax.

From Grundy Centre, via Parkersburg, Butler Centre, West Point, and Coldwater, to Marble Rock.

From Wheatland, via Toronto and Burgess, to Monmouth.

From Webster to Luni.

From Sigourney to Montezuma.

From Iona to New Hartford.

From Winterset to Fort Des Moines.

From Postville, via Sybrand [Lybrand] and Ludlow, to Waukon.

From West Union, via Fredericksburg, Williamstown, and Bradford, to Nashua.

From Centreville, via Cincinnati, Unionville, Pennville, Greencastle, Birdseye Ridge, Pleasantville, New Boston, Bucklin, Westville, to Keitsville.

From Onawa, to Section Eight, township eighty-five.

From Des Moines, via Hickory Grove, Palestine, Ames, Blinkson, and Saratoga, to Webster City.

From Winterset, via Afton, Bedford, and Maryville, to Savannah, in Missouri.

From Postville to Waukon.

From Panora, via Dale City, to Fontanelle.

From Des Moines, via Pilot Grove and Macksville, to Lewis.

From Algona, via Armstrong's Grove and Mud Lakes, to Estherville.

From Parkersburg to Marble Rock.

From Marion to Winthrop.

From Eldoria, via Point Pleasant, to Tipton.

From Recerville, via Wentworth, to Le Roy, in Minnesota.

From Des Moines, via Chariton, Corydon, and Linersville, to Chillicothe, in Missouri.

From Postville to Wauken.

From Lewis, via Red Oak Junction, to Sidney.

From Vernon to Memphis, Missouri.

From Germanville to Coalport.

From Grinnell to New Hartford.

From Homestead to Little City.

From Marshalltown, via Timber Creek and College Farm, to Newton.

From New Oregon to Austin, Minnesota.

From Clio to Iowa Centre.

From Pottsville to Wauken.

From New Oregon, via Vernon Springs, Line Springs, Glen Rock, and Eatonville, in Iowa, and La Roy, in Minnesota, to Austin, Minnesota.

From Brighton, via Germanville, Salina, to Glendale.

From Menomonee, via Mill Spring and Plumb city, to Maiden Rock.

From Ettrick to Mehone.

From Richland Centre, via Boaz, Bradeys, Yankeetown, Rising Sun, and Alexander's Mills, to De Sota.

From Princeton, via Germania, to Montelle.

From Pella to Shawnee.

From Woodman, via Millerville, Mount Hope, and Tafton, to Beetown.

From Port Washington to Wabacca.

From Maysville to Theresa.

From Trempealeau, via Arcadia, Burnside, and Hale, to Sumner.

From Friendship, via Arcade, to Barnum.

From Manston to Warner.

From River Falls to Brookville.

From Melrose to Sparta.

From Alma to Durana.

From White Creek, via Easton, Arcade, Woodworth, and Point Basel, to Plover.

From Denison to Ida.

WISCONSIN.

From Dunleith, Illinois, to Platteville, Wisconsin.

From Woodman, by Millville, Mount Hope, and Tayton, to Beetown.

From Richland Centre, by Boaz, Brady's Rows, Yanktown, Towerville, Rising Sun, and Alexander's Mill, to De Sota.

From Wilson's Creek, by Black Hawk, to Sauk City.

CALIFORNIA.

From San Buenaventura, via Ojai, to Camulas.

From Oisalia, via Fort Tejon, to Bakersfield.

From Red Bluff, via Nome Lackee, to Coast Range.

From Cloverdale, via Uncle Sam, Lower Lake, and Lake Port, to Upper Lake.

From Susansville to Taylorsville.

From Fort Bidwell to Susansville.

From Fort Bidwell to Pueblo.

From Taylorville to Carner Place.

From Chico to Colusa.

From Colusa, via Antelope Valley, Bear Valley, and Sulphur Springs, to Lakeport.

From Oak Creek to Independence.

From Suisun City, Solano county, via Gordon Valley, Rag Cannon, and Berryessa Valley, to Lower Lake, in Lake county.

From Smith's Ranch, via Caffey's Cave, Casper Creek Mills, Noyo Mills, Ten Mile River, Bear Harbor, Shelter Cove, and Upper Mattole, to Lower Mattole.

KENTUCKY.

From Horse Kane to Bucksville.

From Augusta, via Brookville, Powersville, Petra, Milford, to Claysville.

From Richmond to Lexington.

From Irvine to McKee.

From Cattlesburg, via Canonsburg, Botts Fork, Sulphur Spring, and Cherokee, to Blair.

From Somerset to Knorville.

From Beattysville to Thompsonville.

MONTANA TERRITORY.

From Virginia City, via Formans, Fosters, and Boreman's City, to Yellowstone City.

From Crossing of Gallatin at Foster's farm, to Gallatin City.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

From Seattle, via Tree Posts, Pass Blakeley, to Pass Orchard.

DAKOTA TERRITORY.

From Fort Randall to Fort Sully.

From Sioux Falls to Ponca.

From Fort Wadsworth to Devil's Lake.

OREGON.

From Dallas City, via Selilo, Umatilla, Wallula, to Walla-Walla.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

UTAH TERRITORY.

From Logan to Dexton.
From Huntsville to Bennington.
From Logan to Oxford.
From Nephi to Saint George, via Severe Valley and Fort Gunnison.

KANSAS.

From Paoli, via Miami, Madora, to Bloomington Grove.
From Humboldt, via Coonville, Lightning Creek Valley, Chetopah, Cabin Creek, Alburdes, to Fort Gibson.
From Ottawa to Mound City.
From Cottonwood Falls to Lincolnville.
From Wathena, via Columbus, to Iowa City Point.

NEVADA.

From West Gate to Ione.
From Austin to Unionville.
From Austin, via Pahrnagat and Callville, to Fort Mojave.

NEW JERSEY.

From Woodmansee to Mannahawkin.

NEBRASKA TERRITORY.

From Dakota City to Yanceton, in Dakota Territory.
From Plattsmouth to Columbus.
From Ponca to Fremont.
From Saint John's, Iowa, via De Soto and Fontanelle, Nebraska, to Buchanan, Nebraska.
From Brownsville to Table Rock, Nebraska.
From Brownsville to Grant, Nebraska.
From Fremont, via Jalappa, Saint Charles, Greenwood, West Point, and Rock Creek, to South Fork of Elk Horn.

IDAHO TERRITORY.

From Idaho City to Rocky Bar.
From Ruby City, via Puebla Valley, to Chico, in California.
From Ruby City to Jacksonville, in Oregon.
From Placerville, via Warren's Diggings, to Florence.
From Boise City, via Old Fort Boise, to Clanton City, in Oregon.
From Idaho City to Silver City.

MONTANA TERRITORY.

From Helena to Wallula.
From Wallula to Seattle.
From Kalmiche to Elma.
From Jefferson's Crossing, via Silver Prow City and Deer Lodge City, to Blackfoot.
From Helena to Diamond City.
From Helena, via Blackfoot, to Hell Gate.
From Virginia City, via Sterling and Garfield, to Gallatin City.
From Gallatin City to Boreman.
From Helena, via Dearborn and San River Farm, to Fort Benton.
From Diamond City to Fort Benton.
From Junction, via on Salt Lake Road, via Cut Off, to Virginia City.
From Hell Gate to Flat Head.
From Virginia City to Fort Sully, in Dakota Territory.
From Helena, via Fort Laramie and Fort Reno, to New Fort Kearney, in Nebraska Territory.
From Helena to Blackfoot City.
From Bannock City, via German Gulch, to French Gulch.
From Bannock City to Montana City, on Rattlesnake Creek.
From Virginia City, via Silver Bow, Deer Lodge City, and Hell Gate, to Fort Owens, in Bitter Root Valley.

DAKOTA TERRITORY.

From Panca Agency to Chateau.
From Fort Sully to Virginia City, in Montana Territory.

INDIAN TERRITORY.

From Fort Gibson, via Creek Agency, to Seminole Agency.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXVIII.—An Act in Relation to the Appointment of Clerks to the Courts of Washington Territory.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That each judge of the district court shall appoint a clerk for each court in his district, who shall reside and keep his office at the place of holding said court, and exercise the powers now provided by law for the clerk of the supreme court of the Territory of Washington, and be subject to all provisions of law, not inconsistent with this act, applicable to the clerk of said supreme court.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXIX.—An Act to provide for and to regulate the Weighing of Exports, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That upon all weighable articles hereafter exported, upon which a drawback or return duty is allowed, and upon all weighable goods withdrawn from bonded warehouses for export, there shall be levied and collected, by the collectors of the several ports, three cents per hundred pounds, to be determined by the returns of the weighers.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the office of measurer at the port of New York is hereby abolished, and the duties heretofore performed by them shall be performed by the weighers.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the weighers at the port of New York shall receive, from and after the passage of this act, an annual salary of twenty-five hundred dollars: Provided, That the increase of compensation, over and above the present salary of said officers, shall not exceed, in any fiscal year, the amount of fees earned by them.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXX.—An Act granting Lands to the State of Kansas to aid in the Construction of a southern Branch of the Union Pacific Railway and Telegraph, from Fort Riley, Kansas, to Fort Smith, Arkansas.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That for the purpose of aiding the Union Pacific Railroad Company, southern branch, the same being a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Kansas to construct and operate a railroad from Fort Riley, Kansas, or near said military reservation, thence down the valley of the Neosho river to the southern line of the State of Kansas, with a view to an extension of the same through a portion of the Indian Territory to Fort Smith, Arkansas, there is hereby granted to the State of Kansas, for the use and benefit of said railroad company every alternate section of land or parts thereof designated by odd numbers, to the extent of five alternate sections per mile on each side of said road and not exceeding in all ten sections per mile; but in case it shall appear that the United States have, when the line of said road is definitely located, sold any section, or any part thereof, granted as aforesaid, or that the right of pre-emption or homestead settlement has attached to the same, or that the same has been reserved by the United States for any purpose whatever, then it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to cause to be selected for the purposes aforesaid, from the public lands of the United States nearest to the sections above specified, so much land as shall be equal to the amount of such lands as the United States have sold, reserved, or otherwise appropriated, or to which the right of homestead settlement or pre-emption has attached as aforesaid, which lands, thus indicated by the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, shall be reserved and held for the State of Kansas for the use of said company by the said Secretary for the purpose of the construction and operation of said railroad, as provided by this act: Provided, That any and all lands heretofore reserved to the United States by any act of Congress, or in any other manner by competent authority, for the purpose of aiding in any object of internal improvement or other purpose whatever, be, and the same are hereby, reserved and excepted from the operation of this act, except so far as it may be found necessary to locate the route of said road through such reserved lands, in which case the right of way, two hundred feet in width, is hereby granted, subject to the approval of the President of the United States: And provided further, That said lands hereby granted shall not be selected beyond twenty miles from the line of said road.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the sections and parts of sections of land which by the aforesaid grant shall remain in the United States, within ten miles on each side of said road, shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public lands when sold: Provided, That actual bona fide settlers under the pre-emption laws of the United States may, after due proof of settlement, improvement, and occupation, as now provided by law, purchase the same at the price fixed for said lands at the date of such settlement, improvement, and occupation: Provided, also, That settlers under provisions of the homestead act, who make their settlement after the passage of this act and comply with the terms and requirements of said act, shall be entitled, within the said limits of ten miles, to patents for an amount not exceeding eighty acres each.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the grant of lands hereby made is upon condition that said company, after the construction of its road, shall keep it in repair and use, and shall at all times transport troops, munitions of war, supplies, and public stores upon its road for the Government of the United States, free from all cost or charge therefor to the Government, when required to do so by any department thereof. And the lands hereby granted shall inure to the benefit of said company, as follows: when the Governor of the State of Kansas shall certify that any section of ten consecutive miles of said road is completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner as a first-class railroad, then the said Secretary of the Interior shall issue to the said company patents for so many sections of the land herein granted within the limits above named, and coterminous with said completed section hereinbefore granted; and when certificates of the Governor aforesaid shall be presented to said Secretary of the completion, as aforesaid, of each successive section of ten consecutive miles of said road, the said Secretary shall in like manner issue to said company patents for the land for each of said sections of road as in the first instance, until said road shall be completed: Provided, That if said road is not completed within ten years from the date of the acceptance of the grant hereinbefore made, the lands remaining unpatented shall revert to the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That as soon as said company shall file with the Secretary of the Interior maps of its line, designating the route thereof, it shall be the duty of said Secretary to withdraw from the market the lands granted by this act, in such manner as may be best calculated to effect the purposes of this act and subserve the public interest.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the United States mail shall be transported on said road, and under the direction of the Post Office Department, at such price as Congress may by law provide: Provided, That until such price is fixed by law the Postmaster General shall have power to fix the compensation.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to said Pacific Railroad Company, southern branch, its successors and assigns, for the construction of a railroad as proposed: and the right is hereby given to said corporation to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road material for the construction thereof. Said way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of said road where it may pass through the public domain; also all necessary ground for station buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, sidetracks, turn-tables, and water-stations.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the acceptance of the terms, conditions, and impositions of this act by the said Pacific Railroad Company, southern branch, shall be signified in writing, under the corporate seal of the said company, duly executed pursuant to the direction of its board of directors first had and obtained, which acceptance shall be made within one year after the passage of this act, and not afterwards, and shall be deposited with the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That said Pacific Railroad Company, southern branch, its successors and assigns, is hereby authorized and empowered to extend and construct its railroad from the southern boundary of Kansas, south through the Indian Territory, with the consent of the Indians, and not otherwise, along the valley of Grand and Arkansas rivers, to Fort Smith, in the State of Arkansas; and the right of way through said Indian Territory is hereby granted to said company, its successors and assigns, to the extent of one hundred feet on each side of said road or roads, and all necessary grounds for stations, buildings, workshops, machine-shops, switches, sidetracks, turn-tables, and water-stations.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the same grant[s] of lands through said Indian Territory are hereby made as provided in the first section of this act, whenever the Indian title shall be extinguished by treaty or otherwise, not to exceed the ratio per mile granted in the first section of this act: Provided, That said lands become a part of the public lands of the United States.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That said Pacific Railroad Company, southern branch, its successors and assigns, shall have the right to negotiate with, and acquire title to land for railroad purposes from, any Indian nation or tribe authorized by the United States to dispose of lands, and from any other nation or tribe of Indians through whose lands said railroad may pass, subject to the approval of the United States, or from any company or parties incorporated or authorized for such purposes, by such nation or tribe, or which such parties may have acquired under the laws of the United States.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That any railroad company chartered under any law of the United States, or of any State which may have been heretofore or shall hereafter be organized by any act of the Congress of the United States, may connect, unite, and consolidate with this railroad company, after the same shall be located to the valley of the Neosho or Grand river, upon just, fair, and equitable terms, to be agreed upon between the parties, as shall not be against the public interest, or the interest of the United States.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXVII.—An Act to incorporate the Washington Temperance Society of the City of Washington, District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That John S. Hollingshead, William G. Flood, Christopher Cammack, senior, Asbury Lloyd, John B. Wheeler, Zach. B. Brooke, Ros. A. Fish, George W.

Mahe, Wm. P. Drew, Wm. H. Nally, Thomas B. Marche, Oscar Alexander, William Dixon, and others who now are or may hereafter become members of said society, and their successors, are hereby declared to be one community and body corporate by the name, style, and title of the Washington Temperance Society of Washington City and District of Columbia; and by that name they shall be, and are hereby, made able and capable in law to have, receive, and retain to them and their successors property real and personal, also devises and bequests of any person or persons, bodies corporate or politic, capable of making the same, and the same to dispose of or transfer at their pleasure in such manner as they may think proper: Provided always, That the said corporation shall not at any time hold or possess property, real, personal, or mixed, exceeding in value the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, other than that which may be invested in a hall to be erected for the purposes of the society.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said corporation and their successors, by the name and title aforesaid, shall be capable in law to sue and be sued, plead and beimpleaded, answer and be answered unto, defend and be defended, in all or any courts of justice, and before all and any judges, officers, or persons whatsoever, in all and singular actions, matters, or demands whatsoever.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said corporation shall have power to hold stated meetings; to establish and put into execution, alter or abolish such by-laws, rules, and regulations as to them shall seem most conducive to the interests of the society: Provided, That the same shall not be contrary to the laws of the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to authorize the said corporation to issue any note, token, device, or other evidence of debt to be used as a currency.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That this act may be altered or repealed at the pleasure of the Congress.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXVIII.—An Act granting Lands to aid in the Construction of a Railroad and Telegraph Line from the States of Missouri and Arkansas to the Pacific Coast.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That John B. Brown, Anson P. Morrill, Samuel F. Hersey, William G. Crosby, Samuel E. Spring, Samuel P. Dinsmore, of Maine; N. S. Upham, Frederick Smyth, Onslow Stearns, S. G. Griffin, William E. Chandler, of New Hampshire; T. W. Parke, H. H. Baxter, John Gregory Smith, A. P. Lyman, of Vermont; Walter S. Burges, William S. Slater, Stephen Harris, Thomas P. Shepard, of Rhode Island; William Merritt, Alexander H. Bullock, George L. Stearns, Genery Twitchell, Charles H. Warren, Chester W. Chapin, of Massachusetts; John Boyd, Robert C. Wetmore, John T. Wait, Cyrus Northrop, of Connecticut; Solon Humphreys, J. Bigler, Homer Ramsdell, Isaac H. Knox, John A. C. Gray, Daniel L. Ross, A. V. Stout, M. K. Jessup, R. E. Fenton, E. L. Fancher, J. C. Fremont, James Hoy, Jesse M. Bolles, Edward Gilbert, James P. Robinson, Oliver C. Billings, of New York; Charles Bachelor, John Edgar Thompson, Morton McMichael, T. Haskins Du Puy, Thomas A. Scott, Charles Ricketson, William Lyon, George W. Cass, Levi Parsons, of Pennsylvania; Charles Knap, J. L. N. Stratton, James B. Dayton, Robert F. Stockton, Alexander G. Cattell, A. W. Markley, of New Jersey; John W. Garrett, Charles J. M. Gwinn, Robert Fowler, Jacob Tome, Thomas M. Latham, of Maryland; Charles J. Dupont, Henry Ridgley, Andrew C. Gray, Nat. Smythers, of Delaware; Bellamy Storer, George B. Senter, William Baker, Samuel Galloway, David Tod, Charles Anderson, Bird B. Chapman, Edward Sturgis, Israel Dille, of Ohio; Edwin Peck, William D. Griswold, James P. Luse, Samuel E. Perkins, Conrad Baker, of Indiana; Richard J. Oglesby, N. B. Judd, Samuel A. Buckmaster, D. L. Phillips, L. P. Sanger, of Illinois; Eber B. Ward, Omar D. Congar, Nathaniel W. Brooks, Alexander H. Morrison, of Michigan; Z. G. Simmons, Alexander Mitchell, J. J. Williams, G. A. Thompson, J. J. R. Pease, John H. Hersey, of Wisconsin; Henry A. Smith, Sherman Finch, William Mitchell, R. F. Crowell, L. F. Hubbard, E. F. Drake, of Minnesota; Lyman Cook, Platt Smith, Jacob Butler, Henry I. Reid, Hoyt Sherman, of Iowa; William G. Brownlow, of Tennessee; Thomas C. Fletcher, B. R. Bonner, John M. Richardson, Emil Pretorius, E. W. Fox, R. J. McElheny, Charles H. Howland, Madison Miller, George W. Fishback, T. J. Hubbard, George Knapp, Charles K. Dickson, A. G. Braun, G. L. Hewitt, P. A. Thompson, James W. Thomas, Charles E. Moss, Edward Walsh, A. R. Easton, Truman J. Horner, J. B. Eads, D. R. Garrison, W. A. Kayser, George P. Robinson, of Missouri; Thomas E. Bramlette, Benjamin Gratz, C. E. Warren, Lazarus W. Powell, John Mason Brown, Joshua Speed, of Kentucky; Solon Thatcher, Jacob Stotter, William B. Edwards, James G. Blunt, Robert McBratney, of Kansas; Harrison Hagaus, James Cook, Robert Crangle, Benjamin H. Smith, of West Virginia; Lorenzo Sherwood, A. J. Hamilton, of Texas; William Gilpin, Henry C. Leach, of Colorado; Phineas Banning, Timothy G. Phelps, William B. Carr, Edward F. Beale, Fred. F. Lowe, Benj. B. Redding, B. W. Hathaway, Leonidas Haskell, Frederick Billings, of California; W. S. Ladd, J. R. Moores, Walter Monteith, John Kelly, B. F. Dowell, of Oregon; James L. Johnson, Henry Connolly, Francis Perea, of New Mexico; J. H. Mills, A. P. K. Safford, E. S. Davis, of Nevada; King S. Woolsey, William H. Hardy, Coles Bashford, of Arizona; Henry D. Cooke, of the District of Columbia; and all such other persons who shall or may be associated with them, and their successors, are hereby created and erected into a body corporate and politic, in deed and in law, by the name, style, and title of the "Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company," and by that name shall have perpetual succession, and shall be able to sue and be sued, plead and beimpleaded, defend and be defended, in all courts of law and equity within the United States, and may make and have a common seal. And said corporation is hereby authorized and empowered to lay out, locate, and construct, furnish, maintain, and enjoy, a continuous railroad and telegraph line, with the appurtenances, namely: beginning at or near the town of Springfield, in the State of Missouri, thence to the western boundary line of said State, and thence by the most eligible railroad route as shall be determined by said company to a point on the Canadian river, thence to the town of Albuquerque, on the river Del Norte, and thence, by way of the Agua Frio, or other suitable pass, to the headwaters of the Colorado Chiquito, and thence, along the thirty-fifth parallel of latitude, as near as may be found most suitable for a railway route, to the Colorado river, at such point as may be selected by said company for crossing; thence by the most practicable and eligible route to the Pacific. The said company shall have the right to construct a branch from the point at which the road strikes the Canadian river eastwardly, along the most suitable route as selected, to a point in the western boundary line of Arkansas, at or near the town of Van Buren. And the said company is hereby vested with all the powers, privileges, and immunities necessary to carry into effect the purposes of this act, as herein set forth. The capital stock of said company shall consist of one million shares of one hundred dollars each, which shall in all respects be deemed personal property, and shall be transferable in such manner as the laws of said corporation shall provide. The persons hereinbefore named are hereby appointed commissioners, and shall be called the board of commissioners of the "Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company," and fifteen shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The first meeting of said board of commissioners shall be held at the Turner Hall, in the city of Saint Louis, on the first day of October, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-six, or at such time within three months thereafter as any ten commissioners herein named from Missouri shall appoint, notice of which shall be given by them to the other commissioners by publishing said notice in at least one daily newspaper in the cities of Boston, New York, Cincinnati, Saint Louis, Memphis, and Nashville, once a week for at least four weeks previous to the day of meeting. Said board shall organize by the choice from its number of a president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer, and they shall require from said treasurer such bonds as may be deemed proper, and may from time to time increase the amount thereof, as they may deem proper. The secretary shall be sworn to the faithful performance of his duties, and such oath shall be entered upon the records of the company, signed by him, and the oath verified thereon. The president and secretary of said boards shall, in like manner, call all other meetings, naming the time and place thereof. It shall be the duty of said board of commissioners to open books, or cause books to be opened, at such times and in such principal cities or other places in the United States as they or a quorum of them shall determine, within twelve months after the passage of this act, to receive subscriptions to the capital stock of said corporation, and a cash payment of ten per centum on all subscriptions, and to receipt therefor. So soon as ten thousand shares shall in good faith be subscribed for, and ten dollars per share actually paid into the treasury of the company, the said president and secretary of said board of commissioners shall appoint a time and place for the first meeting of the subscribers to the stock of said company, and shall give notice thereof in at least one newspaper in each State in which subscription books have been opened, at least fifteen days previous to the day of meeting, and such subscribers as shall attend the meeting so called, either in person or by lawful proxy, then and there shall elect, by ballot, thirteen directors for said corporation; and in such election each share of said capital stock shall entitle the owner thereof to one vote. The president and secretary of the board of commissioners, and in case of their absence or inability any two of the officers of said board, shall act as inspectors of said election, and shall certify, under their hands, the names of the directors elected at said meeting. And the said commissioners, treasurer, and secretary shall then deliver over to said directors all the moneys, properties, subscription books, and other books in their possession, and thereupon the duties of said commissioners and the officers previously appointed by them shall cease and determine forever, and thereafter the stockholders shall constitute said body politic and corporate. Annual meetings of the stockholders of the said corporation for the choice of officers. (when they are to be chosen,) and for the transaction of business, shall be holden at such time and place and upon such notice as may be prescribed in the by-laws.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be, and the same is hereby, granted to the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, for the construction of a railroad and telegraph as proposed; and the right, power, and authority is hereby given to said corporation to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road material of earth, stone, timber, and so forth, for the construction thereof. Said way is granted to said railroad to the extent of one hundred feet in width on each side of said railroad where it may pass through the public domain, including all necessary grounds for station buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, side-tracks, turn-tables, and water-stations; and the right of way shall be exempt from taxation within the Territories of the United States. The United States shall extinguish, as rapidly as may be consistent with public policy and the welfare of the Indians, and only by their voluntary cession, the Indian title to all lands falling under the operation of this act and acquired in the donation to the road named in the act.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of said railroad and telegraph line to the Pacific coast, and to secure the safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores, over the route of said line of railway and its branches, every alternate section of public land, not mineral, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile, on each side of said railroad line, as said company may adopt, through the Territories of the United States, and ten alternate sections of land per mile on each side of said railroad whenever it passes through any State, and whenever, on the line thereof, the United States have full title, not reserved, sold, granted, or otherwise appropriated, and free from preemption or other claims or rights, at the time the line of said road is designated by a plat thereof, filed in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office; and whenever, prior to said time, any of said sections or parts of sections shall have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, or preempted, or otherwise disposed of, other lands shall be selected by said company in lieu thereof, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, in alternate sections, and designated by odd numbers, not more than ten miles beyond the limits of said alternate sections, and not including the reserved numbers: Provided, That if said route shall be found upon the line of any other railroad route, to aid in the construction of which lands have been heretofore granted by the United States, as far as the routes are upon the same general line, the amount of land heretofore granted shall be deducted from the amount granted by this act: Provided further, That the railroad company receiving the previous grant of land may assign their interest to said "Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company," or may consolidate, confederate, and associate with said company upon the terms named in the first and seventeenth sections of this act: Provided further, That all mineral lands be, and the same are hereby, excluded from the operations of this act, and in lieu thereof a like quantity of unoccupied and unappropriated agricultural lands in odd-numbered sections nearest to the line of said road, and within twenty miles thereof, may be selected as above provided: And provided further, That the word "mineral," when it occurs in this act, shall not be held to include iron or coal: And provided further, That no money shall be drawn from the Treasury of the United States to aid in the construction of the said "Atlantic and Pacific railroad."

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That whenever said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company shall have twenty-five consecutive miles of any portion of said railroad and telegraph line ready for the service contemplated, the President of the United States shall appoint three commissioners to examine the same, who shall be paid a reasonable compensation for their services by the company, to be determined by the Secretary of the Interior; and if it shall appear that twenty-five consecutive miles of said road and telegraph line have been completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner, as in all other respects required by this act, the commissioners shall so report under oath, to the President of the United States, and patents of lands, as aforesaid, shall be issued to said company, conforming to said company the right and title to said lands situate opposite to and conterminous with said completed section of said road. And from time to time, whenever twenty-five additional consecutive miles shall have been constructed, completed, and in readiness as aforesaid, and verified by said commissioners to the President of the United States, then patents shall be issued to said company conveying the additional sections of land as aforesaid, and so on as fast as every twenty-five miles of said road is completed as aforesaid.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That said Atlantic and Pacific railroad shall be constructed in a substantial and workmanlike manner, with all the necessary draws, culverts, bridges, viaducts, crossings, turn-outs, stations, and watering-places, and all other appurtenances, including furniture and rolling stock, equal in all respects to railroads of the first class when prepared for business, with rails of the best quality, manufactured from American iron. And a uniform gauge shall be established throughout the entire length of the road. And there shall be constructed a telegraph line, of the most substantial and approved description, to be operated along the entire line: Provided, That the said company shall not charge the Government higher rates than they do individuals for like transportation and telegraphic service. And it shall be the duty of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company to permit any other railroad which shall be authorized to be built by the United States, or by the Legislature of any Territory or State in which the same may be situated, to form running connections with it, on fair and equitable terms.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States shall cause the lands to be surveyed for forty miles in width on both sides of the entire line of said road after the general route shall be fixed, and as fast as may be required by the construction of said railroad; and the odd sections of land hereby granted shall not be liable to sale or entry, or preemption, before or after they are surveyed, except by said company, as provided in this act; but the provisions of the act of September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, granting preemption rights, and the acts amendatory thereof, and of the act entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain," approved May twenty, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, shall be, and the same are hereby, extended to all other lands on the line of said road when surveyed, excepting those hereby granted to said company.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to enter upon, purchase, take, and hold any lands or premises that may be necessary and proper for the construction and working of said road, not exceeding in width one hundred feet on each side of the line of its railroad, unless a greater width be required for the purpose of excavation or embankment; and also any lands or premises that may be necessary and proper for turnouts, standing places for cars, depots, station houses, or any other structures required in the construction and working of said road. And the said company shall have the right to cut and remove trees and other material that might, by falling, encumber its road-bed, though standing or being more than two hundred feet from the line of said road. And in case the owner of such lands or premises and the said company cannot agree as to the value of the premises taken, or to be taken, for the use of said road, the value thereof shall be determined by the appraisal of three disinterested commissioners, who may be appointed upon application by either party to any court of record in any of the Territories in which the lands or premises to be taken lie; and said commissioners, in their assessment of damages, shall appraise such premises at what would have been the value thereof if the road had not been built. And upon return into court of such appraisal, and upon the payment into the same of the estimated value of the premises taken for the use and benefit of the owner thereof, said premises shall be deemed to be taken by said company, which shall thereby acquire full title to the same for the purposes aforesaid. And either party feeling aggrieved at said appraisal may, within thirty days after the same has been returned into court, file an appeal therefrom, and demand a jury of twelve men to estimate the damage sustained; but such an appeal shall not interfere with the rights of said company to enter upon the premises taken, or to do any act necessary and proper in the construction of its road. And said party appealing shall give bonds, with sufficient surety or sureties, for the payment of any cost that may arise upon such appeal; and in case the party appealing does not obtain a verdict more favorable, such party shall pay the whole cost incurred by the appellee, as well as his own, and the payment into court, for the use of the owner of said premises taken, at a sum equal to that finally awarded, shall be held to vest in said company the title of said land, and the right to use and occupy the same for the construction, maintenance, and operation of said road. And in case any of the lands to be taken as aforesaid shall be held by an infant, femme covert, non compos, insane person, or persons residing without the Territory within which the lands to be taken lie, or persons subjected to any legal disability, the court may appoint a guardian, for any party under any disqualification, to appear in proper person, who shall give bonds, with sufficient surety or sureties, for the proper and faithful execution of his trust, and who may represent in court the person disqualified, as aforesaid, from appearing, when the same proceedings shall be had in reference to the appraisal of the premises to be taken for the use of said company, and with the same effect as has been already described; and the title of the company to the lands taken by virtue of this act shall not be affected or impaired by reason of any failure by any guardian to discharge faithfully his trust. And in case any party shall have a right or claim to any land for a term of years, or any interest therein, in possession, reversion, or remainder, the value of any such estate, less than a fee-simple, shall be estimated and determined in the manner hereinbefore set forth. And in case it shall be necessary for the company to enter upon any lands which are unoccupied, and of which there is no apparent owner or claimant, it may proceed to take and use the same for the purposes of said railroad, and may institute proceedings, in manner described, for the purpose of ascertaining the value of, and of acquiring a title to, the same; but the judge of the court hearing said suit shall determine the kinds of notice to be served on such owner or owners, and he may in his discretion appoint an agent or guardian to represent such owner or owners in case of his or their incapacity or non-appearance. But in case no claimant shall appear within six years from the time of the opening of said road across any land, all claims to damages against said company shall be barred.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That each and every grant, right, and privilege herein are so made and given to and accepted by said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, upon and subject to the following conditions, namely:

that the said company shall commence the work on said road within two years from the approval of this act by the President, and shall complete not less than fifty miles per year after the second year, and shall construct, equip, furnish, and complete the main line of the whole road by the fourth day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-eight.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the United States make the several conditional grants herein, and that the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company accept the same, upon the further condition that if the said company make any breach of the conditions hereof, and allow the same to continue for upwards of one year, then, in such case, at any time hereafter, the United States may do any and all acts and things which may be needful and necessary to insure a speedy completion of the said road.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That all people of the United States shall have the right to subscribe to the stock of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company until the whole capital named in this act of incorporation is taken up by complying with the terms of subscription.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That said Atlantic and Pacific railroad, or any part thereof, shall be a post route and military road, subject to the use of the United States for postal, military, naval, and all other Government service, and also subject to such regulations as Congress may impose restricting the charges for such Government transportation.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the acceptance of the terms, conditions, and impositions of this act by the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company shall be signified in writing under the corporate seal of said company, duly executed pursuant to the direction of its board of directors first had and obtained, which acceptance shall be made within two years after the passage of this act, and not afterwards, and shall be deposited in the office of the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the directors of said company shall make and publish an annual report of their proceedings and expenditures, verified by the affidavits of the president and at least six of the directors, a copy of which shall be deposited in the office of said Secretary of the Interior, and they shall, from time to time, fix, determine, and regulate the fares, tolls, and charges to be received and paid for transportation of persons and property on said road, or any part thereof.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the directors chosen in pursuance of the first section of this act shall, so soon as may be after their election, elect from their own number a president and vice president; and said board of directors shall, from time to time, and so soon as may be after their election, choose a treasurer and secretary, who shall hold their offices at the will and pleasure of the board of directors. The treasurer and secretary shall give such bonds, with such security as the said board from time to time may require. The secretary shall, before entering upon his duty, be sworn to the faithful discharge thereof, and said oath shall be made a matter of record upon the books of said corporation. No person shall be a director of said company unless he shall be a stockholder, and qualified to vote for directors at the election at which he shall be chosen.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That the president, vice president, and directors shall hold their offices for the period indicated in the by-laws of said company, not exceeding three years, respectively, and until others are chosen in their place, and qualified. In case it shall so happen that an election of directors shall not be made on any day appointed by the by-laws of said company, the corporation shall not for that excuse be deemed to be dissolved, but such election may be holden on any day which shall be appointed by the directors. The directors, of whom seven, including the president, shall be a quorum for the transaction of business, shall have full power to make and prescribe such by-laws, rules, and regulations as they shall deem needful and proper touching the disposition and management of the stock, property, estate, and effects of the company, the transfer of shares, the duties and conduct of their officers and servants touching the election and meeting of the directors, and all matters whatsoever which may appertain to the concerns of said company; and the said board of directors may have full power to fill any vacancy or vacancies that may occur from any cause, or causes from time to time in their said board. And the said board of directors shall have power to appoint such engineers, agents, and subordinates as may from time to time be necessary to carry into effect the object of the company, and to do all acts and things touching the location and construction of said road.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for the directors of said company to require payment of the sum of ten per centum cash assessment upon all subscriptions received of all subscribers, and the balance thereof at such time and in such proportions and on such conditions as they shall deem to be necessary to complete the said road and telegraph lines within the time in this act prescribed. Sixty days' previous notice shall be given of the payments required, and of the time and place of payment, by publishing a notice once a week in one daily newspaper in each of the cities of Boston, New York, Cincinnati, Saint Louis, Memphis, and Nashville, and in case any stockholder shall neglect or refuse to pay, in pursuance of such notice, the stock held by such person shall be forfeited absolutely to the use of the company, and also any payment or payments that shall have been made on account thereof, subject to the condition that the board of directors may allow the redemption on such terms as they may prescribe.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That the said company is authorized to accept to its own use any grant, donation, loan, power, franchise, aid, or assistance which may be granted to or conferred on said company by the Congress of the United States, by the Legislature of any State, or by any corporation, person, or persons, or by any Indian tribe or nation through whose reservation the road herein provided for may pass; and said corporation is authorized to hold and enjoy any such grant, donation, loan, power, franchise, aid, or assistance, to its own use, for the purpose aforesaid: Provided, That any such grant or donation, power, aid, or assistance from any Indian tribe or nation shall be subject to the approval of the President of the United States.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That the Southern Pacific Railroad, a company incorporated under the laws of the State of California, is hereby authorized to connect with the said Atlantic and Pacific railroad, formed under this act, at such point, near the boundary line of the State of California, as they shall deem most suitable for a railroad line to San Francisco, and shall have a uniform gauge and rate of freight or fare with said road; and in consideration thereof, to aid in its construction, shall have similar grants of land, subject to all the conditions and limitations herein provided, and shall be required to construct its road on the like regulations, as to time and manner, with the Atlantic and Pacific railroad herein provided for.

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That unless the said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company shall obtain bona fide subscriptions to the stock of said company to the amount of one million of dollars, with ten per centum paid, within two years after the passage of and approval of this act, it shall be null and void.

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That the

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

better to accomplish the object of this act, namely, to promote the public interest and welfare by the construction of said railroad and telegraph line, and keeping the same in working order, and to secure to the Government at all times, but particularly in time of war, the use and benefits of the same for postal, military, and other purposes, Congress may, at any time, having due regard for the rights of said Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, add to, alter, amend, or repeal this act.

SEC. 21. And be it further enacted, That whenever in any grant of land or other subsidies, made or hereafter to be made, to railroads or other corporations, the United States has reserved the right, or shall reserve it, to appoint directors, engineers, commissioners or other agents to examine said roads, or act in conjunction with other officers of said company or companies, all the costs, charges, and pay of said directors, engineers, commissioners, or agents shall be paid by the respective companies. Said directors, engineers, commissioners, or agents, shall be paid for said services the sum of ten dollars per day, for each and every day actually and necessarily employed, and ten cents per mile for each and every mile actually and necessarily traveled, in discharging the duties required of them, which per diem and mileage shall be in full compensation for said services. And in case any company shall refuse or neglect to make such payments, no more patents for lands or other subsidies shall be issued to said company until these requirements are complied with.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXIX.—An Act to incorporate the General Hospital of the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Joseph Henry, James C. Hall, Amos Kendall, Thomas Miller, Richard Wallach, George W. Riggs, Grafton Tyler, Henry D. Cooke, D. W. Middleton, Charles Knap, Benjamin B. French, James C. McGuire, Charles H. Nichols, William B. Todd, William Gunton, Edward Simms, and Thomas Young, and their successors in office, are hereby made, declared, and constituted a corporation and body-politic, in law and in fact, under the name and style of the Directors of the General Hospital of the District of Columbia, and by that name they shall be, and are hereby, made capable in law to sue and be sued, to plead and be impleaded, in any court within the county of Washington, in the District of Columbia, to have and use a common seal, and to alter and amend the same at pleasure; to have, purchase, receive, possess, and enjoy any estates in lands, tenements, annuities, goods, chattels, moneys, or effects, and to grant, demise, and dispose of the same in such manner as they may deem most for the interest of the hospital: Provided, That the annual income from the same held by such corporation shall not exceed in value the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said corporation and body-politic shall have full power to appoint from their own body a president and such other officers as they may deem necessary for the purposes of their creation; and in case of the death, resignation, or refusal to serve of any of their number, the remaining members shall elect and appoint other persons in lieu of those whose places may have been vacated; and the said corporation shall have full power and all the rights of opening and keeping a hospital in the city of Washington, for the care of such sick, wounded, and invalid persons as may place themselves under the care of said corporation, and the property held by said corporation shall be devoted exclusively to the purposes of such hospital.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said corporation shall also have and enjoy full power and authority to make such by-laws, rules, and regulations as may be necessary for the general accomplishment of the objects of such hospital: Provided, That they be not inconsistent with the laws in force in the District of Columbia: And provided further, That this act shall be liable to be amended, altered, or repealed at the pleasure of Congress.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXX.—An Act in Relation to the District Courts of the United States in the States of California and Louisiana.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the southern judicial district of the State of California and the western district of Louisiana shall be, and the same are hereby, abolished, and hereafter the said States shall respectively constitute one judicial district, and shall respectively be called the districts of California and Louisiana. The district judge, marshal, and district attorney of the United States for the northern district of California and the eastern district of Louisiana shall respectively possess and exercise the same powers and jurisdiction in said district courts of California and Louisiana as they now possess and exercise in their respective districts.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all actions, suits, and proceedings, civil or criminal, which shall have been commenced, and at the time of the passage of this act shall be pending in the southern district of California or the western district of Louisiana, and all process, orders, judgments, decrees, records, or other papers or proceedings relating thereto or filed therein, shall be transferred to the said district courts of California and Louisiana respectively, which courts shall possess and exercise over such actions, suits, and proceedings, and the process, orders, judgments, decrees, records, and other papers and proceedings so transferred, the same authority and jurisdiction as they would have had if such actions, suits, and proceedings had been commenced in said courts; and no indictment, writ, process, recognizance, or other proceeding returnable to or to be heard, tried, or considered in the said southern district of California or said western district of Louisiana shall be abated, discontinued, or rendered void by the transfer thereof as aforesaid.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the clerks of the said southern district of California and the said western district of Louisiana shall, as soon as practicable after the passage of this act, deliver to and deposit with the clerks of the said district courts of California and Louisiana, respectively, all property, books, records, documents, and papers remaining in their respective offices, and the same shall be received and kept by the said last-mentioned clerks subject to the order and direction of such courts respectively.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That executions may be issued out of the said district court of California and the said district court of Louisiana, respectively, to collect any judgment or decree rendered in the said southern district of California or said western district of Louisiana before the passage of this act with the same effect as the same might now be issued out of the court in which such judgment or decree was rendered; and all process which shall have been issued out of said district court for the southern district of California or said western district of Louisiana, and shall not have been returned before the passage of this act, shall be returned to and filed with the clerks of the district courts of California and Louisiana respectively.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the salary of the United States district judge for the district of Louisiana shall hereafter be four thousand five hundred dollars per annum.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXXI.—An Act to authorize the Use in Post Offices of Weights of the Denomination of Grams.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to furnish to the post offices exchanging mails with foreign countries, and to such other offices as he shall think expedient, postal balances denominated in grams of the metric system; and, until otherwise provided by law, one half ounce avoirdupois shall be deemed and taken for postal purposes as the equivalent of fifteen grams of the metric weights, and so adopted in progression; and the rates of postage shall be applied accordingly.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXXII.—An Act to authorize the Refunding of certain Taxes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That where the license tax imposed upon any wholesale dealer has been calculated upon the amount of such dealer's sales for the previous year, in accordance with the terms of the seventy-ninth section of an act approved June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and it shall be provided to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that the sales made under such license did not equal in amount the sales of such previous year, it shall be lawful for said Commissioner to refund to such wholesale dealer so much of the amount paid for such license as may be in excess of the proper tax chargeable upon the amount of sales actually made under such license during the year for which the same was issued.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXXIII.—An Act amendatory of Section Thirteen of an Act entitled "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act to provide Internal Revenue to support the Government, to pay Interest on the Public Debt, and for other purposes,' approved June 30, 1864," approved March 3, 1865.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the thirteenth section of an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes,' approved June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out the words "without having first obtained a license so to do," and inserting in lieu thereof the words, "without paying the special tax herefor."

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXXIV.—An Act to amend the Acts relating to Officers employed in the Examination of imported Merchandise in the District of New York, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in lieu of the appraisers now authorized by law for the appraisal of goods, wares, and merchandise at the port of New York, the President of the United States shall, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint for said port one appraiser, who has had experience as an appraiser, or who shall be practically acquainted with the quality and value of some one or more of the chief articles of importation subject to appraisal, and who, before he enters upon the duties of his office, shall take and subscribe an oath faithfully to direct and supervise the examination, inspection, and appraisement according to law, of such goods, wares, and merchandise

39TH CONG. ... 1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

as the collector may direct, and as is herein after provided for, and to cause to be duly reported to the collector the true value thereof, as required by law: Provided, That the collector shall not, under any circumstances, direct to be sent for examination and appraisement less than one package of every invoice, and one package at least out of every ten packages of goods, wares, and merchandise, and a greater number should he, or the appraiser, or any assistant appraiser, deem it necessary: Provided, nevertheless, that when from the character and description of the goods, wares, and merchandise the Secretary of the Treasury may be of the opinion that the examination of a less proportion of packages will amply protect the revenue, he may, by special regulation, direct a less number of packages to be examined. And the appraiser, created by this act, in cases of his necessary and occasional absence, may perform his functions, ad interim, by deputy, designated by him in writing, from the assistant appraisers to be appointed under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That in lieu of the assistant appraisers now authorized by law for the port of New York, the Secretary of the Treasury may appoint not exceeding ten assistant appraisers for said port, who have had experience as appraisers, or who shall be practically acquainted with the quality and value of some one or more of the chief articles of importation subject to appraisement, and included among the goods, wares, or merchandise, to the examination and appraisement of which they are respectively to be assigned, and who shall be employed in appraising goods, according to law, under the direction and supervision of the appraiser; and each of whom shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, take and subscribe an oath diligently and faithfully to examine and inspect such goods, wares, and merchandise as the appraiser may direct, and truly to report to him the true value thereof, according to law; such report to be subject to revision and correction by the appraiser, and when approved by him to be transmitted to the collector, and to be deemed and taken to be the appraisement by the United States local appraiser of the district of such goods, wares, or merchandise required by law.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That one of the assistant appraisers to be appointed by virtue of this act, with special reference to his qualifications for the duties in this section set forth, shall, in addition to the duties that may be required of him by the appraiser, perform the duties and act in the place and stead of the special examiner of drugs, medicines, chemicals, and so forth, at the port of New York, as provided by the act of June twenty-six, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, chapter seventy, and one of the assistant appraisers to be appointed by virtue of this act shall be detailed by the appraiser for the supervision of the department for the examination of merchandise damaged on the voyage of importation, and as far as practicable to make examinations and appraisals of such or any other merchandise as the appraiser may direct, and in all cases truly to report to him the extent of such damage, or the true value of the merchandise appraised, as the case may be, according to law, such report to be subject to the same revision, correction, and approval by the appraiser, as prescribed by the second section of this act, and to be in like manner, and for the same purpose, transmitted to the collector.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That in lieu of the clerks now employed in the examination, inspection, and appraisement of goods, wares, and merchandise at the port of New York, the Secretary of the Treasury may, on the nomination of the appraiser, appoint such number of examiners as said Secretary may in writing determine to be necessary, their compensation to be limited and fixed by him, but not to exceed the rates of twenty-five hundred dollars per year, to aid each of said assistant appraisers in the examination, inspection, and appraisement of goods, wares, and merchandise, according to law; and no person shall be appointed such examiner who is not, at the time of his appointment, practically and thoroughly acquainted with the character, quality, and value of the article or articles in the examination and appraisement of which he is to be employed; nor shall any such examiner enter upon the discharge of his duties, as such, until he shall have taken and subscribed an oath faithfully and diligently to discharge such duties according to law; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall also appoint, on the nomination of the appraiser, the clerks, verifiers, samplers, openers, packers, and messengers employed in the appraiser's office, or in any of the departments thereof, and shall limit and fix their number and compensation; but their compensation shall not exceed the rates of compensation usually paid for similar service.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That it shall not be lawful for the appraiser, the assistant appraisers, examiners, clerks, verifiers, samplers, messengers, or other persons employed in the departments of appraisal, or any of them, to engage or be employed in any commercial or mercantile business, or act as agent for any person engaged in such business, during the term of their appointment.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the appraiser who may be appointed under the provisions of this act shall receive a compensation of four thousand dollars per annum, and the assistant appraisers shall each receive a compensation of three thousand dollars per annum, to be paid out of the appropriations for defraying the expenses of collecting the revenue.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the compensation allowed, respectively, to the appraiser and the assistant appraisers, under the provision of this act, shall be paid to them in monthly payments, and in due proportion for any period less than one month for the time they may actually serve.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be, and the same are hereby, repealed; and all provisions of existing acts relating to the duties of the appraisers now provided for by law, or to any proceedings consequent or dependent upon the action of such appraisers and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, shall be construed to apply to the appraiser and assistant appraisers provided for by this act, and shall be continued in full force, and that this act shall take effect on and after the first day of September, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That if at any time, from an increase of importation, or from any other cause, there shall be found upon the floors of the public stores in the city of New York an accumulation of merchandise awaiting appraisement, it shall be the duty of the appraiser, under regulations established by the Secretary of the Treasury, to direct the assistant appraisers, and others associated with them in this branch of the public business, to devote time beyond the usual business hours, in each day, during daylight, to their respective duties, to the end that the business of appraisement may be faithfully and more promptly dispatched.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That all aids to the revenue or others performing the duties of inspectors of customs in any collection district, shall be paid the same per diem compensation as inspectors of customs.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXXV.—An Act for the Relief of Sufferers by Fire at Portland.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That on all goods, wares, and merchandise which may be sent from places

without the limits of the United States, as gratuitous contributions to the relief of sufferers by the fire which occurred at Portland, Maine, July fourth and fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, shall, when imported at the port of Portland and consigned to the proper authority for distribution, be admitted free of duty.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there shall be allowed and paid, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, on all materials actually used in buildings erected on the ground burned over by said fire, a drawback of the import duties paid on the same: Provided, That said materials shall have been imported at the port of Portland during the term of one year from and after said fifth day of July, 1866.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXXVI.—An Act to prevent the Wearing of Sheath Knives by American Seamen.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the existing regulations for the government of the Navy of the United States, prohibiting the wearing of sheath knives on shipboard is hereby extended and made applicable to all seamen in the merchant service.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the master or other officer in command of any ship or vessel registered, enrolled, or licensed under the laws of the United States, and of the owner or other person entering into contract for the employment of a seaman or other subordinate upon any such ship or vessel, to inform every person offering to ship himself of the provisions of this law, and to require his compliance therewith, under a penalty of fifty dollars for each omission, to be sued for and recovered in the name of the United States of America, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, one half for the benefit of the informer and the other half for the benefit of the fund for the relief of sick and disabled seamen.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXXVII.—An Act to further regulate the Printing of Public Documents, and the Purchase of Paper for the Public Printing.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That hereafter it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of Public Printing, in place of the reports of the Executive Departments ordered by the act of June twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to cause to be printed and bound twenty-five hundred copies of the annual reports of the Executive Departments, with such accompanying documents as the heads of those Departments may respectively select, but not to exceed three hundred pages for the use of said Departments, respectively.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That whenever papers relating to foreign affairs shall be communicated to Congress, accompanying the annual message of the President, it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of Public Printing to cause to be printed and bound, in addition to the usual number, two thousand copies for the use of the members of the Senate, four thousand copies for the use of the House, and two thousand five hundred copies for the use of the State Department, in place of the numbers ordered by the act of June twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-four.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That in the publication of the report of the Secretary of the Navy the detailed statement of offers for supplies and of articles embraced in each class under contract be omitted, and in lieu thereof the Secretary of the Navy shall prepare and submit with his report a schedule embracing the offers by classes, indicating such as have been accepted.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of Public Printing, at the commencement of each session of Congress, to submit to the Joint Committee on Printing estimates of the quantity of paper of all descriptions which will, in his opinion, be required for the execution of the public printing during the coming year. The Joint Committee on Printing shall then fix upon a standard of paper for the different descriptions of congressional and executive printing, and it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of Public Printing, under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing, to advertise in only two newspapers published in each of the cities of New York, Cincinnati, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, for sealed proposals to furnish the Government of the United States with paper, of the quality and in the quantity specified in the advertisements, and it shall be the duty of the Superintendent to furnish samples of the standard papers adopted by the committee to applicants therefor; the said sealed proposals to be opened before and the award of contracts to be made by the Joint Committee on Printing to the lowest and best bidder for the interest of the Government: Provided, That the advertisement for sealed proposals for furnishing paper shall designate the minimum portion of each particular quality of paper required for either three months, six months, or one year, as the Joint Committee on Printing may determine; but when the minimum portion so specified shall exceed in any case one thousand reams, the advertisement shall state that proposals will be received for one thousand reams or more: And provided further, That no proposals shall be considered by the Joint Committee on Printing, unless accompanied by satisfactory evidence that the person or persons making said proposals are manufacturers of or dealers in the description of paper which they propose to furnish: And provided further, That, in awarding contracts, an equitable period of time for filling the same shall be designated and allowed by the Joint Committee on Printing, without whose approval no contract shall be valid: And provided further, That it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of Public Printing to include in his annual report to Congress a detailed statement of all proposals made and contracts entered into for the purchase of paper.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of Public Printing to compare every lot of paper delivered by any contractor with the standard of quality, and also to see that it is of the weight contracted for, and to refuse to accept any paper from any contractor which does not conform to the standard of quality and is not of the stipulated weight. And in case of difference of opinion between the Superintendent of Public Printing and any contractor for paper with respect to its quality, the matter of difference shall be determined by the Joint Committee on Printing: Provided, That in default of any contractor to comply with his contract in furnishing the paper contracted for, in the proper time, and of proper quality and weight, it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of Public Printing to report the same to the Joint Committee on Printing if Congress is in session, or to the Secretary of the Interior if during a recess of Congress, and he shall, under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing or of the Secretary of the Interior, as the case may be, enter into a new contract with the lowest and best bidder for the interest of the Government, amongst those whose proposals were rejected at the last opening of bids, or advertise for new proposals, under the regulations before established; and during the interval which may thus be created, he shall, under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing or of the Secretary of the Interior, as above provided, purchase in open market, at the lowest market price, all such paper necessary for the public service. For any increase of cost to the Government in procuring a supply of paper for the use of the Government, the contractor or contractors in default and his or their securities shall be charged with and held responsible for the same, and shall be prosecuted upon their bond by the Solicitor of the Treasury, in the name of the United States, in the circuit court of the United States in the district in which the defaulting contractor resides; and to enable the Solicitor to do so, it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of Public Printing to report to him the default on its happening, with a full statement of all the facts in the case: And provided further, That the Joint Committee on Public Printing, or, during the recess of Congress, the Secretary of the Interior, be authorized to empower the Superintendent of Public Printing to make purchases of paper, in open market, at the lowest market price, whenever in their opinion the quantity required is so small, or the want is so immediate, as not to justify advertisement for and award of contract therefor.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That all laws and parts of laws, joint resolutions, or parts of resolutions, conflicting with the above provisions, be and they are hereby repealed; nor shall the Superintendent of Public Printing print any greater number of the reports herein named, unless otherwise directed by either House of Congress.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXXVIII.—An Act for the Removal of Causes in certain Cases from State Courts.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That if in any suit already commenced, or that may hereafter be commenced, in any State court against an alien, or by a citizen of the State in which the suit is brought against a citizen of another State, and the matter in dispute exceeds the sum of five hundred dollars, exclusive of costs, to be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court, a citizen of the State in which the suit is brought is or shall be a defendant, and if the suit so far as relates to the alien defendant or to the defendant who is the citizen of a State other than that in which the suit is brought, is or has been instituted or prosecuted for the purpose of restraining or enjoining him, or if the suit is one in which there can be a final determination of the controversy, so far as it concerns him, without the presence of the other defendants as parties in the cause, then and in every such case the alien defendant, or the defendant who is a citizen of a State other than that in which the suit is brought, may, at any time before the trial or final hearing of the cause, file a petition for the removal of the cause as against him into the next circuit court of the United States to be held in the district where the suit is pending, and offer good and sufficient surety for his entering in such court, on the first day of its session, copies of said process against him, and of all pleadings, depositions, testimony, and other proceedings in said cause affecting or concerning him, and also for his there appearing and entering special bail in the cause, if special bail was originally requisite therein; and it shall be thereupon the duty of the State court to accept the surety and proceed no further in the cause as against the defendant so applying for its removal; and any bail that may have been originally taken shall be discharged, and the said copies being entered as aforesaid in such court of the United States, the cause shall there proceed in the same manner as if it had been brought there by original process against the defendant who shall have so filed a petition for its removal as above provided. And any attachment of the goods or estate of the defendant by the original process shall hold the goods or estate so attached to answer the final judgment, in the same manner as by the laws of such State they would have been holden to answer final judgment had it been rendered by the court in which the suit commenced; and any injunction granted before the removal of the cause against the defendant applying for its removal shall continue in force until modified or dissolved by the United States court into which the cause shall be removed; and any bond of indemnity or other obligation given by the plaintiff upon the issuing or granting of any attachment, writ of injunction, or other restraining process against the defendant petitioning for the removal of the cause, shall also continue in full force and may be prosecuted by the defendant and made available for his indemnity in case the attachment, injunction, or other restraining process be set aside or dissolved, or judgment be rendered in his favor, in the same manner and with the same force and effect as if such injunction, attachment, or restraining process had been granted, and such bond had been originally filed or given in the court to which the cause is removed. And such removal of the cause, as against the defendant petitioning therefor, into the United States court, shall not be deemed to prejudice or take away the right of the plaintiff to proceed at the same time with the suit in the State court as against the other defendants, if he shall desire to do so. And the copies of all pleadings filed or entered as aforesaid in the United States court by the defendant applying for the removal of the cause, shall have the same force and effect in every respect and for every purpose as the original pleadings would have had by the laws and practice of the courts of such State if the cause had remained in the State court.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXXIX.—An Act authorizing the Reimbursement to the Territory of Nebraska of certain Expenses incurred in repelling Indian Hostilities.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, instructed to examine, adjust, and allow the expenditures and liabilities of the Territory of Nebraska, made and incurred in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-four, for the pay, equipment, and maintenance of territorial troops in the suppression of Indian hostilities and protection of the lives and property of citizens of the United States exposed to the attacks of the confederated tribes; and the amount so allowed, when approved by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury, shall be paid into the territorial treasury by a warrant payable to the order of the Governor of that Territory, and shall be in full for all claims in the premises on the part of said Territory or the troops thereof: Provided, That no allowance shall be made for troops beyond the companies called out by the Governor of said Territory in that year, and placed under the command of the general commanding the troops of the United States in that Territory; nor shall any rate of pay or expenses of any kind be allowed higher or greater than those allowed by law to like troops regularly enlisted in the service of the United States; and the sum of forty-five thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated therefor out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCXIII.—An Act to fix the Compensation of certain Collectors of Customs, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the collectors of cus-

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

toms hereinafter named shall, from and after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, in lieu of the salaries to which they are now by law respectively entitled, receive the salaries following, to wit: the collectors of the districts of Texas, at Galveston, Saluria, Corpus Christi, and Brazos de Santiago, Texas, each at the rate of one thousand five hundred dollars a year in addition to the fees of office: Provided, That such compensation shall in no case exceed the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars per annum in the aggregate; the collectors of the districts of Beaufort, South Carolina, and Pensacola, Florida, each at the rate of one thousand dollars a year; the collectors of the district of Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, and of the districts of Cherrystone, Virginia; Brunswick, Georgia; [Saint] Augustine, Saint Mark's, and Apalachicola, Florida, and Teché, Louisiana, five hundred dollars a year each.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all that part of the State of Texas and the waters thereof included within the counties of Nueces, Starr, Zapata, Duval, Encinac, Webb, La Salle, McMullen, Live Oak, Bee, Refugio, and San Patricio, shall be a distinct collection district, to be called the district of Corpus Christi, and the town of Corpus Christi shall be its only port of entry; and a collector shall be appointed to reside at said port. And Aransas shall be a port of delivery in said district.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the town of Indianola shall hereafter be the port of entry for the district of Saluria, in said State, instead of La Salle. And all acts and parts of acts conflicting with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed; and this act shall take effect on and after the first day of August next.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That in lieu of the compensation now allowed by law there shall hereafter be paid to each of the deputy collectors at the ports of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, Portland, and San Francisco, and to each of the general appraisers and local appraisers at Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, Portland, and San Francisco, three thousand dollars per annum; to each of the deputy naval officers and the deputy surveyors at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, Portland, and San Francisco, two thousand five hundred dollars per annum; and to each of the custom-house weighers at the ports of Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, Portland, and San Francisco, two thousand dollars per annum, out of the appropriation for expenses of collecting the revenue from customs: Provided, That the additional compensation of twenty-five per centum, as now provided by law, shall be continued to officers as aforesaid at the port of San Francisco.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That all blank books, blanks, and stationary of every kind required by collectors and other officers of the customs, shall, so soon as they can be prepared for delivery, by or under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, be furnished to them for the use of their respective offices, upon requisition made by them, and the expense of such books, blanks, and stationary shall be paid out of the appropriation for defraying the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the fourth section of the act of February twenty-eight, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, entitled "An act to revive certain provisions of the act entitled 'An act further to provide for the collection of duties on imports and tonnage,' approved March three, eighteen hundred and fifteen, and for other purposes," shall not be construed to increase the per diem allowed to appraisers by the first section of the act of April two, eighteen hundred and forty-four, which it amends.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCXCIV.—An Act to prescribe the Mode of settling the Accounts of the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the clerk of the supreme court of the District of Columbia shall pay into the Treasury of the United States all the earnings of his office, over and above the necessary expenses of the same and his own compensation.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That his accounts of said earnings and expenses shall be adjusted by the regular auditor of the court, or by a special auditor to be appointed by the court for the purpose, within thirty days after the first day of January and July, every year; and the auditor shall immediately report his adjustment to the court, with such exceptions thereto as the clerk shall, within four days after the adjustment reported, take and file with the auditor.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the court shall pronounce such decree upon said report and exceptions as may seem to it equitable and just; and said decree shall be final, and be binding upon the United States and the clerk. If, upon such account, a balance be found due from the clerk to the United States, the court shall order payment by the clerk into the Treasury, and enforce its order by execution, process of contempt, or otherwise; and, if the clerk refuse to pay the money, shall remove him from office. If a balance be found due from the United States to the clerk, the same shall be paid upon presenting to the Treasurer a copy of the decree, duly certified.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the clerk shall, as in other cases of judgments to which the United States is a party, furnish the Solicitor of the Treasury a copy of the decree immediately after it is pronounced.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That all other modes of accounting for the earnings of said office are hereby repealed.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCXCV.—An Act for the Relief of the Trustees and Stewards of the Mission Church of the Wyandotte Indians.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That for refunding to Jacob White-Crow, John Sawahass, and others, trustees and stewards of the Wyandotte and Quindaro mission of the Kansas Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, for the destruction of their church buildings and library, four thousand six hundred and eighty dollars, to be applied in rebuilding said buildings and inclosing the graveyards of the Wyandotte Indians in the State of Kansas, and that the sum hereby appropriated be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCXCVI.—An Act making Appropriations for sundry Civil Expenses of the Government for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, for the objects hereafter expressed, for the fiscal year ending the thirtieth June, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, viz:

MISCELLANEOUS.

For discharge of such miscellaneous claims not otherwise provided for as shall be admitted in due course of settlement at the Treasury, two thousand dollars.

For expenses in detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons engaged in counterfeiting Treasury notes, bonds, and other securities of the United States, as well as the coins of the United States, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

For supplying deficiency in the fund for the relief of sick and disabled seamen, two hundred thousand dollars.

For repairs and preservation of public buildings, fifty thousand dollars.

For furniture, repairs of furniture, carpets, and miscellaneous items for the same, twenty thousand dollars.

For the completion of north wing of Treasury extension, and grading and fencing grounds, three hundred thousand dollars.

For replacing with slate or copper defective galvanized iron roofs, thirty thousand dollars.

For reconstruction of heating apparatus, thirty thousand dollars.

For burglar-proof safes and vaults, thirty thousand dollars.

For office furniture, and repairs of furniture, and miscellaneous expenses of the Treasury bureaus, sixteen thousand dollars.

For expenses of detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons engaged in perpetrating frauds upon the United States, to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, ten thousand dollars.

For the completion of the custom-house building at Toledo, Ohio, its addition, and the approaches thereto, ten thousand dollars.

For the purpose of preserving from further dilapidation the new custom-house building in Charleston, South Carolina, ten thousand dollars.

For repairs of the United States arsenal at Hudson City, New Jersey, two thousand dollars.

For additional appropriation to complete the new court-house and post office at Springfield, Illinois, fifty thousand dollars.

For repairs of Chelsea marine hospital, Chelsea, Massachusetts, forty thousand dollars.

To establish national cemeteries, and to purchase sites for the same, at such points as the President of the United States may deem proper, and for the care of the same, fifty thousand dollars.

For the purpose of preparing for publication under the direction of the Secretary of War, and of printing at the Government Printing Office five thousand copies of the first volume of the Medical and Surgical History of the Rebellion, compiled by the Surgeon General; and for the purpose of preparing for publication under the direction of the Secretary of War, and of printing at the Government Printing Office five thousand copies of the Medical Statistics of the Provost Marshal General's Bureau, compiled and to be completed by Surgeon J. H. Baxter, sixty thousand dollars: Provided, That the editions of both publications thus ordered shall be disposed of as Congress may hereafter direct: And provided further, That the necessary engraving and lithographing for these publications may be executed under the direction of the Secretary of War, without advertisement.

For transportation of officers of the Marine corps, their servants, troops, and expenses of recruiting, fifteen thousand dollars.

For the enlargement and repairs of the custom-house and post office buildings at Bangor, Maine, thirty-five thousand dollars.

For the repairs of the custom-house and post office and the walks and fences adjoining the same, at Middletown, Connecticut, five thousand dollars, the same to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

For the erection of a chapel on the Naval Academy grounds at Annapolis, Maryland, twenty-five thousand dollars, and the existing appropriation for the enlargement of the chapel is hereby repealed.

SURVEY OF THE COAST.

For the survey of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts of the United States, including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, and excluding pay and emoluments of officers of the Army and Navy, and petty officers and men of the Navy employed in the work, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

For continuing the survey of the western coast of the United States, including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, one hundred and thirty thousand dollars.

For continuing the survey of the South Florida reefs, shoals, keys, and coast, including compensation of civilians engaged in the work, and excluding pay and emoluments of officers of the Army and Navy, and petty officers and men of the Navy employed in the work, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For publishing the observations made in the progress of the survey of the coast of the United States, including compensation of civilians employed in the work, five thousand dollars.

For repairs of steamers and sailing schooners used in the coast survey, twenty thousand dollars.

For pay and rations of engineers for four steamers used in the hydrography of the coast survey, no longer supplied by the Navy Department, ten thousand dollars.

To provide for a survey of the Isthmus of Darien, under the direction of the War Department, with the view to the construction of a ship-canal in accordance with the report of the Superintendent of the Naval Observatory to the Navy Department, forty thousand dollars.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to collect reliable statistical information concerning the gold and silver mines of the western States and Territories, which shall include the labor and capital employed, the product and the modes of working the same, and which information shall be reported to Congress, ten thousand dollars.

LIGHT-HOUSE ESTABLISHMENT.

For the Atlantic, Gulf, and Lake coasts, viz :

For supplying the light-houses and beacon-lights with oil, wicks, glass chimneys, and other necessary expenses of the same, and repairing and keeping in repair the lighting apparatus, two hundred thousand two hundred and eighty-seven dollars.

For repairs and incidental expenses of improving and refitting the same, one hundred and eighty thousand dollars.

For salaries of five hundred and eighty-nine keepers of light-houses and lighted beacons, and their assistants, two hundred and thirteen thousand one hundred and ninety-three dollars and thirty-three cents.

For salaries of forty-three keepers of light-vessels, twenty-three thousand nine hundred dollars.

For seamen's wages, repairs, supplies, and incidental expenses of forty-three light-vessels, two hundred and forty-two thousand two hundred and thirty-nine dollars and fifty cents.

For expenses of raising, cleaning, painting, repairing, remooing, and supplying losses of beacons and buoys, and for chains and sinkers for the same, one hundred and sixty-two thousand three hundred and fifty dollars.

For compensation to the consul at Quebec, in Canada, fifteen hundred dollars.

For the Coasts of California, Oregon, and Washington.

For supplying twenty light-houses and beacon-lights with oil, glass chimneys, chamois skins, polishing powder, and other cleaning materials, transportation, expenses of keeping lamps and machinery in repair, and publishing notices to mariners of changes of aids to navigation, thirty-three thousand and thirty dollars.

For repairs and incidental expenses of twenty light-houses and buildings connected therewith, fifteen thousand dollars.

For salaries of forty-one keepers and assistant keepers of light-houses at an average not exceeding eight hundred dollars per annum, thirty-two thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

For expenses of raising, cleaning, painting, repairing, remooing, and supplying losses of floating buoys and beacons, and for chains and sinkers for the same, and for coloring and numbering all the buoys, ten thousand dollars.

For fuel and quarters of officers of the Army serving on light-house duty, the same not being provided for by the quartermaster's department, five thousand dollars.

For rebuilding Block Island light-house, near Rhode Island, upon a more eligible site, fifteen thousand dollars.

For a new light-house on Race Rock, or on the southwest end of Fisher's Island, entrance to Long Island Sound, as may be approved by the Light-House Board, ninety thousand dollars.

For rebuilding the following beacons, which have been destroyed, viz: Norwalk beacon, Southport beacon, and Elbow beacon, twenty-four thousand dollars.

For rebuilding beacon-lights on the Breakwater at Plattsburg, New York, three thousand dollars.

For a new light-house with suitable piers for protection at Rondout, New York, twenty-two thousand dollars.

For a new light-house with suitable piers of protection at Cossackie, New York, twenty-two thousand dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Sandy Hook light-station, New York, seven thousand one hundred dollars.

To provide additional station-houses, life-boats, and other appliances for the better preservation of life and property from shipwreck along the coast of New Jersey, between Sandy Hook and Little Egg Harbor, ten thousand dollars.

For repairing and relighting the light-house on Tucker's Beach, on the coast of New Jersey, five thousand dollars.

For repairs and renovations at Esopus, Four-mile Point, Beaver-tail, Passaic, Black Rock, and Great West Bay light-stations, five thousand one hundred dollars.

For additional appropriations for building a new first-class light at Assateague, Virginia, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For a new light-house at Bay Point, Port Royal entrance, South Carolina, fifty thousand dollars.

For building range-lights at St. Clair Flats, Lake St. Clair, sixty thousand dollars.

For the erection of a light-house at Beaver Bay on Lake Superior, fifteen thousand dollars: Provided, That the Light-House Board of the Treasury Department, after due examination, shall deem that a light-house at that point is necessary.

For building a new light-house at McGulpin's Point, near old Fort Mackinac, twenty thousand dollars.

For a beacon-light on the end of the pier at Chicago, three thousand dollars.

For a new light-house at Eagle Bluff, Wisconsin, twelve thousand dollars.

For repairs at Grand Island light-house, Lake Superior, seventeen thousand dollars.

For beacon-light at the entrance to Grand Island harbor, Lake Superior, ten thousand dollars.

For additional aids to navigation in Green bay, Wisconsin, including a third-class light-house on Mah-no-mah or Chambers' Island, and beacon on Peshtego shoal, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For repairs to light-house at Huron Island, Lake Superior, seventeen thousand dollars.

For light-house and pierlight at South Haven, in the State of Michigan, six thousand dollars.

For range-lights at Portage entry, Lake Superior, six thousand dollars.

For a light-house to mark the channel between Keewenaw Point and Manitou Island, Lake Superior, fifteen thousand dollars.

For new and efficient fog-signals at Mount Desert Island, Mantinicus, Seguin, Mankiegin, Moose Peak, Cape Elizabeth, Point Judith, Cooper Harbor, Detour, Fort Gratiot, Huron Island, Manitou, McGulpin's Point, Pottawatomie, Sand Point, Waugoshance, White Fish Point, and other light-stations, fifty-nine thousand five hundred dollars.

For compensation of two superintendents for the life-saving stations on the coasts of Long Island and New Jersey, three thousand dollars.

For compensation of fifty-four keepers of stations at two hundred dollars each, ten thousand eight hundred dollars.

For a new light-house at Grand Point, Aux Sables, Lake Michigan, thirty-five thousand dollars.

For a new light-house at the harbor of White River, Muskegon county, Michigan, ten thousand dollars.

For a new light-house at the harbor of Manistee, Manistee county, Michigan, ten thousand dollars: Provided, That no expenditure shall be made upon the aforesaid works at White River and Manistee, until a careful survey shall have been made and the character of the structure required shall have been thus determined, for which purpose the sum of one thousand dollars is hereby appropriated.

For completion of pier of protection and repairing Waugoshance light-house at Straits of Mackinac, ninety thousand dollars.

For the establishment of beacon-lights to mark Brewerton channel, Patapsco river, Maryland, thirty thousand dollars.

To enable the Light-House Board to reestablish lights and other aid to navigation on the southern coast, two hundred thousand dollars.

To reimburse the appropriation for furnishing the President's House, the sum transferred from it by the accounting officers of the Treasury, to settle another account of the Commissioner of Public Buildings for annual repairs, four thousand dollars; and the avails of old furniture which may be sold shall be applied to the purchase of new furniture.

To enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to put in thorough repair the bridge across the Potomac at Little Falls, in accordance with the estimate of the engineer, two thousand four hundred and ten dollars.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay the interest on sundry sums loaned for Government purposes by the First National Bank at Washington, District of Columbia, the sum of five thousand six hundred and seventy dollars and twelve cents.

For compensation to the Commissioner and chief clerk of the General Land Office (to be apportioned by the Secretary of the Interior) in consideration of the increased duties devolving on them from June seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to December thirty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, in connection with the census of eighteen hundred and sixty, seventeen hundred and fifty dollars.

For painting iron fences, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For repairing gates to the iron fence inclosing La Fayette square, five hundred dollars.

To repair and whitewash the wooden fences around the several reservations, one thousand dollars.

For repairing the arch on New Jersey avenue below the Coast Survey building, one thousand dollars.

To repair or replace the water-pipes which convey the water from the spring in Franklin square to the President's House, and to the Treasury, War, and Navy Departments, six thousand dollars.

For making the road from the President's stable to the house, fifteen hundred dollars.

For four new pave-washers on Pennsylvania avenue, one thousand dollars.

To pay for drainage by pipes of the waste

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

water from the President's House, the cow-stable, cow-yard, and small greenhouse, one thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

For an iron fence around the Botanic Garden, fifteen thousand dollars.

To cause to be painted in the square panels of glass, in the ceiling of the House of Representatives, the esutcheons of the States of West Virginia and Nevada, the sum of one hundred and thirty dollars.

For compensation of one additional laborer hereby authorized to be appointed in the Library of Congress, commencing July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, seven hundred and twenty dollars.

For purchase of coal and pay of firemen to warm the Library of Congress, two thousand two hundred and eighty dollars.

For care, support, and medical treatment of sixty transient paupers, medical and surgical patients, in some proper medical institution in the city of Washington, under a contract to be formed with such institution by the Commissioner of Public Buildings, twelve thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

For hire of carts on the public grounds, two thousand dollars.

For purchase and repair of tools used in the public grounds, four hundred dollars.

For purchase of trees and tree-boxes, to replace, when necessary, such as have been planted by the United States, to whitewash tree-boxes and fences, and to repair pavements in front of the public grounds, three thousand dollars.

For annual repairs of the Capitol water-closets, and to put the proper number of water-closets in the upper stories, public stables, water-pipes, pavements, and other walks within the Capitol square, broken glass, and locks, and for the protection of the building, and keeping the main approaches to it unencumbered, in addition to the sale of old material, twelve thousand dollars.

For grading and repairing Virginia avenue, ten thousand dollars.

For keeping the spring and water pipes which supply all the drinking water to the Capitol in repair, and erecting a substantial wooden fence around the ground on which the spring at Smith's farm is, one thousand dollars.

For the Capitol extension, two hundred thousand dollars.

For fuel, in part, for the President's House, five thousand dollars.

For lighting the Capitol and President's House and public grounds around them, around the executive offices, and Pennsylvania avenue, sixty thousand dollars.

For lighting Four-and-a-half street across the Mall, and Maryland avenue west, and Sixth street south, fifteen thousand dollars: Provided, That the corporation of Washington city shall light their street lamps with seven-foot burners, twenty-one nights in each month, from dark until daylight, and that no part of this appropriation shall be disbursed until it is proved to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Public Buildings that said corporation have so lighted their street lamps.

For pay of lamp-lighters, gas-fitting, plumbing, lamp-posts, lanterns, glass, paints, matches, materials and repairs of all sorts, twenty thousand dollars.

For casual repairs of the Potomac, navy-yard, and upper bridges, six thousand dollars.

For repairs of Pennsylvania avenue, five thousand dollars.

For public reservation number two and La Fayette square, in addition to the sale of hay which may be raised on the former, three thousand dollars.

For purchase of fuel for the center building of the Capitol, fifteen hundred dollars.

For erecting a new draw in the navy-yard bridge, five thousand dollars.

For taking care of the grounds south of the President's House, continuing the improvement of the same, and repairing fences, three thousand dollars.

For repairs of water-pipes, five hundred dollars.

For cleaning and repairing sewer traps on Pennsylvania avenue, three hundred dollars.

For casual repairs of all the furnaces under the Capitol, five hundred dollars.

For under-draining the President's garden and Capitol grounds, one thousand dollars.

To enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to so grade a portion of North Capitol street as to relay the water-pipes leading from the Government spring to the Capitol, sufficiently below the grade as to secure from frost, and to relay said pipes, eight thousand one hundred and forty dollars.

For hauling manure for top-dressing the public grounds, five hundred dollars.

For the protection and improvement of Franklin square, fifteen hundred dollars.

For watchman for Franklin square, six hundred dollars.

For the compensation of eight extra clerks in the office of Indian Affairs, under the acts of August fifth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, and March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, eleven thousand two hundred dollars.

For the continuation of the work upon the north portico of the Patent Office building, of fifty thousand dollars.

For additional contingent expenses of the Northeast Executive Building, or the building occupied by the Secretary of State, including extra watchmen and laborers, six thousand dollars.

For salaries of commissioners under "An act to provide for the revision and consolidation of the statute laws of the United States," approved June twenty-seven, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and for clerical services, and other incidental expenses, the printing to be done by the Government Printing Office, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For the payment of temporary clerks of the first class in the office of the Commissioner of Pensions, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, twenty-five thousand dollars.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior, at his discretion, to rent such rooms in the vicinity of the Department for the use of the Pension Office as may be deemed necessary for the transaction of the business of that office, three thousand dollars.

For the purchase of a site and the erection of a building at Saint Paul, Minnesota, for a custom-house, post office, the accommodation of the Federal courts, and other necessary Government purposes, the same to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, fifty thousand dollars.

JAIL IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

For the support and maintenance of the convicts transferred from the District of Columbia at such place or places as may be selected by the Secretary of the Interior, fifty thousand dollars.

For salary of warden of the jail in the District of Columbia, two thousand dollars for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and the same is hereby authorized.

For the payment in part for the purchase of sites and the erection of school-houses in the county of Washington, in the District of Columbia, payable to the board of commissioners of primary schools of said county, the sum of ten thousand dollars.

For support of the Columbia hospital for women and lying-in association, ten thousand dollars.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the persons employed by the Committees on the District of Columbia of the two Houses of Congress, under the provisions of the joint resolution approved June eighteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "A resolution to provide for the revision of the laws of the District of Columbia," the compensation provided in said resolution, two thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary for that purpose.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION.

For the preservation of the collections of the exploring and surveying expeditions of the Government, four thousand dollars.

WASHINGTON AQUEDUCT.

To complete the dam in the Potomac river at the head of the aqueduct, from the shore to Conn's Island, with cut stone, fifty-one thousand six hundred and eighty-seven dollars.

To complete the connecting conduit around and outside the receiving reservoir, seventy thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven dollars.

To finish gate-house at Great Falls, four thousand dollars.

For temporary dam at Conn's Island, one thousand dollars.

For management, miscellaneous, and contingents, fifteen thousand dollars.

GOVERNMENT HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE.

For the support, clothing, and medical treatment of the insane of the Army and Navy, and the revenue-cutter service, and of the indigent insane of the District of Columbia, at the Government hospital for the insane in said District, including five hundred dollars for books, stationery, and incidental expenses, ninety thousand five hundred dollars.

For finishing, furnishing, and lighting additional accommodations in the east wing, in part unfinished, five thousand dollars.

For continuation of the wall inclosing the grounds, ten thousand dollars.

For the purchase and fencing fifty-six and one half acres of meadow land, lying near the hospital, provided the Secretary of the Interior shall approve of the purchase in view of the price and quality of the land, and the necessity of adding it to the hospital farm, six thousand dollars.

PATENT OFFICE.

For expenses of receiving, arranging, and taking care of copyright books, charts, and other copyright matter, one thousand eight hundred dollars.

For preparing illustrations and descriptions for the report of the Commissioner of Patents, six thousand dollars.

COLUMBIAN INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.

For the support of the institution, including five hundred dollars for books and illustrative apparatus, twenty thousand seven hundred dollars.

For the erection, furnishing, and fitting up of two extensions to the buildings, to provide enlarged accommodations for the male and female pupils and the resident officers of the institution, thirty-two thousand two hundred and forty dollars.

For the erection of a brick barn, carriage-house, cow-house, shop, gas-house, and ice-house, fourteen thousand five hundred dollars.

For the improvement and inclosure of the grounds of the institution, including under-drainage and sewerage, four thousand five hundred dollars.

PROVIDENCE HOSPITAL, D. C.

For the purpose of aiding in the erection of an additional building to the Providence Hospital, in the city of Washington, thirty thousand dollars: Provided, That if the said property should ever be sold or diverted from the

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

uses expressed in the act of Congress entitled "An act to incorporate Providence Hospital, of the city of Washington, District of Columbia," approved April eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, then the sum of thirty thousand dollars shall be first paid out of the proceeds thereof into the United States Treasury to reimburse the sum hereby appropriated.

For the "National Association for the relief of destitute colored women and children," incorporated under an act of Congress approved February fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, five thousand dollars, to be expended under the direction of the officers of the association.

To enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to reimburse the corporation of Washington for expenses incurred in improving streets and avenues passing through and by property of the General Government, under the third section of the act approved May fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act to incorporate the inhabitants of the city of Washington," passed May fifteenth, eighteen hundred and twenty, forty-seven thousand two hundred and fifty-five dollars and eighty-one cents.

CONGRESSIONAL LIBRARY.

To complete the extension of the Library of Congress, twenty-two thousand dollars.

For furniture for the two wings of the extension of the Congressional Library, and for sliding cases for illustrated books, ten thousand dollars.

For an additional appropriation, to be expended under the direction of the Joint Committee on the Library, to decorate the Capitol with such works of art as may be ordered and approved by said committee, as provided by act approved August eighteen, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, five thousand dollars.

For additional compensation of three laborers employed in the Congressional Library, commencing January one, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, five hundred and forty dollars; and the compensation of said laborers is hereby fixed at seven hundred and twenty dollars per annum.

For the purpose of erecting on the public land adjacent to the Treasury Department, a fire-proof brick building to afford additional room for the Treasury Department, two hundred thousand dollars: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized to remove and sell at auction or otherwise, any portion of the presses, machinery, and apparatus employed in the Treasury buildings, which from the diminution of the volume of business or otherwise he may from time to time find to be no longer required. And the legal representatives of the corporation of Washington and Georgetown, and the portion of the county of Washington in the District of Columbia, not included in said corporations, be, and they are hereby, directed to provide and suitably furnish, without delay, a suitable room for the use of the orphan's court, and two contiguous rooms and a fire-proof vault for the use of the register of wills in and for said county; and for the repayment of the expense to be incurred in executing this order, the said corporations of Washington and Georgetown, and the levy court of the county of Washington, in the District of Columbia, are hereby authorized and directed to levy and collect a suitable tax upon the property embraced within their respective jurisdictions.

GENERAL POST OFFICE BUILDING.

For completing the extension of the General Post Office building, forty thousand dollars.

SURVEYING THE PUBLIC LANDS.

For surveying the public lands in Minnesota, at rates not exceeding ten dollars per lineal mile for standard lines, seven dollars for township, and six dollars for section lines, twenty thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Dakota Territory, at rates not exceeding ten dollars per lineal mile for standard lines, seven dollars for township, and six dollars for section lines, fifteen thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Nebraska Territory, at rates not exceeding ten dollars per lineal mile for standard lines, six dollars for township, and five dollars for section lines, fifteen thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Kansas, at rates not exceeding ten dollars per lineal mile for standard lines, six dollars for township, and five dollars for section lines, fifteen thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Colorado Territory, at rates not exceeding ten dollars per lineal mile for standard lines, eight dollars for township, and seven dollars for section lines, fifteen thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Nevada, at rates not exceeding fifteen dollars per lineal mile for standard lines, twelve dollars for township, and ten dollars for section lines, fifteen thousand dollars.

For compensation of the surveyor general of Nevada, three thousand dollars.

For compensation of the clerks in his office, five thousand dollars.

For office rent, messenger, furniture, books, fuel, stationery, and incidental expenses of office, three thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in New Mexico, at rates not exceeding fifteen dollars per lineal mile for standard lines, twelve dollars for township, and ten dollars for section lines, five thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in California, at rates not exceeding fifteen [dollars] per lineal mile for standard lines, twelve dollars for township, and ten dollars for section lines, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Oregon, at rates not exceeding fifteen dollars per lineal [mile] for standard lines, twelve dollars for township, and ten dollars for section lines, fifteen thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Washington Territory, at rates not exceeding fifteen dollars per lineal mile for standard lines, twelve dollars for township, and ten dollars for section lines, ten thousand dollars.

For surveying the public lands in Montana Territory, at rates not exceeding fifteen dollars per lineal mile for standard lines, ten dollars for township, and eight dollars for section lines, fifteen thousand dollars.

For compensation of the surveyor general of Montana, three thousand dollars.

For compensation of clerks in his office, five thousand dollars.

For office rent, messengers, furniture, books, fuel, stationery, and incidental expenses of office, three thousand dollars.

For surveying Indian and other reservations, under treaty stipulations, at not exceeding fifteen dollars per mile, front boundaries, at ten dollars for township, and eight dollars per mile for section lines, fifty thousand dollars.

EXPENSES OF COLLECTION OF REVENUE FROM SALES OF PUBLIC LANDS.

For salaries and commissions of registers of land offices and receivers of public money, two hundred and six thousand one hundred dollars.

For incidental expenses of the several land offices, nineteen thousand four hundred dollars.

For necessary expenses incident to providing accommodations for internal revenue officers in existing United States fire-proof buildings, wherever possible, fifteen thousand dollars.

For the purchase, inclosure, and preservation of a parcel of ground at Des Moines, the capital of Iowa, as a site for the erection of a building for the use of the Federal courts and for other Federal offices, fifteen thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior.

For the Government building at Portland, Maine, used as post office, custom-house, and for the United States courts, lately destroyed or rendered almost worthless by fire, to repair or rebuild the same as may prove most advisable, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

For this amount to be paid under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to enable the Seminoles to occupy, restore, and improve their farms, as per third article treaty of March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, thirty thousand dollars.

For the purchase of agricultural implements, seeds, corn, and other stock, as per third article treaty of March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, twenty thousand dollars.

For the erection of a mill, as per third article treaty of March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, fifteen thousand dollars.

For interest on fifty thousand dollars from the date of the ratification of the treaty, at the rate of five per cent per annum, to be paid annually for the support of schools, as per third article treaty of March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

For interest on twenty thousand dollars from the date of the ratification of the treaty, at the rate of five per centum per annum, to be paid annually for the support of the Seminole government, as per third article treaty of March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

For this amount, to be expended for subsisting the Seminole Indians, as per third article treaty of March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, forty thousand three hundred and sixty-two dollars.

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to pay the losses that may be awarded under the provisions of article fourth of treaty March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, as per third article of said treaty, fifty thousand dollars.

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to pay the expenses of a board of commissioners, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, to investigate the losses of the loyal Seminole Indians, as per fourth article treaty of March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, seven hundred and twenty dollars.

For the erection of agency buildings, as per sixth article of treaty of March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, ten thousand dollars.

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to enable the Secretary of the Interior to cause a census of each tribe to be taken, as per first clause seventh article treaty of March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For transportation of such articles as may be purchased under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, for the Seminole Indians, under treaty of March twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, or so much thereof as may be necessary, twelve thousand dollars.

For this amount to be paid per capita in money, unless otherwise directed by the President, upon the ratification of the treaty, to enable the Indians to occupy, restore, and improve their farms; to pay the damages sustained by the mission schools; and to pay the delegates of the council as per third article treaty of June fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, two hundred thousand dollars.

For interest on seven hundred and seventy-five thousand one hundred and sixty-eight dollars from the date of the ratification of the treaty at the rate of five per cent per annum to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, as per third article treaty of June fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to enable the Secretary of the Interior to cause the line dividing the Creek country as provided for by the terms of the sale of the Creek land to the United States in article third, as per eighth article treaty of June fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, four thousand dollars.

For the erection of agency buildings, as per ninth article treaty of June fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, ten thousand dollars.

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to enable the Secretary of the Interior to cause a census of the Creeks to be taken, as per first clause, tenth article treaty of June fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For this amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to pay the expenses incurred in negotiating treaty of June fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, as per fourteenth article of said treaty, ten thousand dollars.

For transportation of such articles as may be purchased for the Creek nation of Indians under treaty of June fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, or so much thereof as may be necessary, seven thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the objects hereinafter expressed, viz:

Office of the United States depository, Louisville:

For salary of cashier, one thousand eight hundred dollars.

For salary of book-keeper, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For salary of assistant cashier, one thousand three hundred and twenty dollars.

For salary of clerk, one thousand three hundred and twenty dollars.

For contingent expenses, six hundred and twenty-five dollars.

Office United States depository, Chicago:

For salary of cashier, one thousand six hundred dollars.

For salary of clerk, one thousand dollars.

For contingent expenses, four hundred dollars.

Office United States depository, Pittsburg:

For salary of cashier, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For salary of assistant cashier, one thousand dollars.

For salary of watchman, nine hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses, two hundred dollars.

Office United States depository, Baltimore:

For salary of cashier, one thousand eight hundred dollars.

For salary of clerk, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For salary of clerk, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For salary of clerk, one thousand dollars.

For salary of clerk, twelve hundred dollars.

For salary of messenger, nine hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses, three hundred and thirty dollars.

Office United States Assistant Treasurer, San Francisco:

For salary of cashier, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For salary of book-keeper, two thousand dollars.

Office United States depository, Cincinnati:

For salary of assistant cashier, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For salary of assistant cashier, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For salary of assistant cashier, one thousand dollars.

For salary of teller, one thousand three hundred dollars.

For salary of book-keeper, one thousand five hundred dollars.

For salary of two clerks, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For salary of clerk, one thousand two hundred dollars.

For contingent expenses, two thousand dollars.

That so much of any money in the Treasury known as the "commutation fund" as may be necessary be, and the same is hereby, appropriated for the payment to loyal persons claiming service or labor from colored volunteers or drafted men, the amounts heretofore, or hereafter to be awarded them under the provisions of section twenty-fourth of the act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled an act for enrolling and calling out the national forces and for other purposes approved February twenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four," for each person so claimed to be held to service or labor who has enlisted or been drafted into the military service of the United States; but such payment shall in no case be made to any person except upon satisfactory proof that the claimant has firmly and faithfully maintained his or her adherence and allegiance to the Government of the United States, by defending its cause against the government and forces of the so-called confederate States of America, in all suitable and practicable ways, and according to his or her ability and opportunity: Provided, That no money shall be paid under the foregoing provision until the final report of the commissioners under the act aforesaid shall have been made on all the claims embraced in the twenty-fourth section of said act.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That so much of "An act making additional appropriations, and to supply deficiencies in the appropriations, for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and for other purposes," approved April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, as provides "for compensation of the revenue agent stationed at New York, in addition to the sum authorized by act of June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, including one thousand dollars for the current fiscal year, two thousand dollars," be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That nine hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of the revenues of the Post Office Department, to supply the deficiency for the mail service for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That each watchman in the public buildings and grounds under the Commissioner of Public Buildings, whose pay is less than one thousand dollars a year, shall, from the first day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, receive a compensation of nine hundred dollars per annum.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That from and after the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the compensation of the Metropolitan police force of the District of Columbia be, and the same is hereby, increased as follows, viz: twenty dollars per month, and the necessary sum required is hereby appropriated; also, an additional increase of ten dollars a month, said additional increase to be borne by the cities of Washington and Georgetown, and the county of Washington, in the District of Columbia, in the proportion equal to the number of patrolmen allotted severally to the city of Washington, to the city of Georgetown, and county of Washington outside of the corporate limits; and the cities of Washington and Georgetown, and the levy court of said county, be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered to levy a special tax not exceeding one quarter of one per centum for the purpose aforesaid, and for no other purpose whatsoever.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized to dispose of the property saved from the rebel steamer Florida, and distribute the proceeds thereof as other prize money is required by law to be distributed.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That midshipmen and acting midshipmen in the Navy of the United States shall be entitled to one ration, or commutation therefor.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That so much of the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and for other purposes," as appropriates three thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars for a minister resident in Greece, be and the same is hereby repealed.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That there is hereby appropriated for the payment of traveling expenses of the members of the first regiment of Michigan cavalry from the place, in Utah Territory, where they were mustered out of service, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-six, to the place of their enrollment, a sum sufficient to allow each member three hundred and twenty-five dollars, deducting therefrom the amount paid to each for commutation of travel, pay, and subsistence by the Government, when thus mustered out, and that the accounts be settled and paid under the direction of the Secretary of War.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the act to carry into effect the treaties between the United States and China, Japan, Siam, Persia, and other countries, giving certain judicial powers to ministers and consuls, or other functionaries of the United States, in those countries, and for other purposes, approved, June twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty, shall extend to Egypt; and the consul general at Alexandria shall have the power provided by section twenty-two of such act for the consul general or consul residing at the capital of a country where there is no minister.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That each and every soldier who enlisted into the Army of the United States, after the nineteenth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, for a period of not less than three years, and having served the time of his enlistment has been honorably discharged, and who has received or who is entitled to receive from the United States under existing laws, a bounty of one hundred dollars and no more, and any such soldier enlisted for not less than three years, who has been honorably discharged on account of wounds received in the line of duty, and the widow, minor children or parents in the order named, of any such soldier who died in the service of the United States or of disease or wounds contracted while in the service, and in the line of duty, shall be paid the additional bounty of one hundred dollars hereby authorized.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That to each and every soldier who enlisted into the Army of the United States, after the fourteenth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, for a period of not less than two years and who is not included in the foregoing section, and has been honorably discharged after serving two years, and who has received or is entitled to receive from the United States, under existing laws, a bounty of one hundred dollars and no more, shall be paid an additional bounty of fifty dollars, and any such soldier enlisted for not less than two years who has been honorably discharged on account of wounds received in the line of duty, and the widow, minor children, or parents, in the order named, of any such soldier who died in the service of the United States, or of disease, or wounds contracted while in the service, and in the line of duty, shall be paid the additional bounty of fifty dollars hereby authorized.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That any soldier who shall have bartered, sold, assigned, transferred, loaned, exchanged, or given away his final discharge papers, or any interest in the bounty provided by this or any other act of Congress, shall not be entitled to receive any additional bounty whatever; and when application is made by any soldier for said bounty, he shall be required, under the pains and penalties of perjury, to make oath or affirmation of his identity, and that he has not so bartered, sold, assigned, transferred, exchanged, loaned, or given away either his discharge papers, or any interest in any bounty as aforesaid. And no claim for such bounty shall be entertained by the Paymaster General, or other accounting or disbursing officer except upon receipt of the claimant's discharge papers, accompanied by the statement under oath, as by this section provided.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That in the payment of the additional bounty herein provided for, it shall be the duty of the Paymaster General, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War, to cause to be examined the accounts of each and every soldier who makes application therefor, and if found entitled thereto shall pay said bounties.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That in the reception, examination, settlement, and payment of claims for said additional bounty due the widows or heirs of deceased soldiers, the accounting officers of the Treasury shall be governed by the restrictions prescribed for the Paymaster General by the Secretary of War, and the payment shall be made in like manner under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That the compensation of each Senator, Representative, and Delegate in Congress shall be five thousand dollars per annum, to be computed from the first day of the present Congress, and in addition thereto mileage at the rate of twenty cents per mile, to be estimated by the nearest route usually traveled in going to and returning from each regular session; but nothing herein contained shall affect mileage accounts already accrued under existing laws: Provided, That hereafter mileage accounts of Senators shall be certified by the President of the Senate, and those of Representatives and Delegates by the Speaker of the House of Representatives: And provided further, That the pay of the Speaker shall be eight thousand dollars per annum.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That there be allowed and paid to the officers, clerks, committee clerks, messengers, and all other employés of the Senate and House of Representatives, and to the Globe and official reporters of each House, and the stenographer of the House, and to the Capitol police, and the three Superintendents of the Public Gardens, their clerks and assistants, and to the Librarian, assistant librarians, messengers, and other employés of the Congressional Library, an addition of twenty per cent on their present pay, to commence with the present Congress; and the amount necessary to pay this allowance is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That the sum of eight thousand dollars is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated for the preservation of the harbor of Provincetown, Massachusetts, the same to be expended under the supervision of a commission or board of officers to be appointed by the Secretary of War.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCXCVII.—An Act to supply deficiencies in the Appropriations for the Service of the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

EXECUTIVE.

For contingent expenses of the executive office, including stationery thereof, four thousand dollars.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Office of the First Comptroller:
For the employment of temporary clerks in said office, two thousand five hundred dollars.

Office of Comptroller of the Currency:
For compensation of the Comptroller, deputy comptroller, clerks, messengers, and laborers, thirty thousand dollars.

LIGHT-HOUSE BOARD.

For contingent expenses, viz: for stationery, miscellaneous expenses, and postage, and renewing furniture and cases in the office, one thousand dollars.

For stationery for the Treasury Department and its various bureaus, twenty thousand dollars.

For Southeast Executive Building, including the extension, viz:

For contingent expenses, viz: for fuel, labor, light, and miscellaneous items, twenty thousand dollars.

For rent of buildings for the accommodation of clerks who cannot be accommodated in the Treasury building, five thousand dollars.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

For additional compensation for the Assistant Secretary, five hundred dollars.

For compiling and supervising the Biennial Register, five hundred dollars.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

For additional compensation to three Assistant Postmasters General, at five hundred dollars each, fifteen hundred dollars.

For compensation of the additional clerks in the Post Office Department, authorized to be appointed by act of Congress approved February sixteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, forty-four thousand two hundred dollars, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

For contingent expenses, five thousand dollars.

For twenty per centum additional to the salaries of female clerks employed in the Post Office Department, as per act of June twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, four thousand dollars: Provided, That from and after June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the regular compensation of the female folders in the dead-letter office shall be at the rate of fifty dollars per month.

For twenty per centum additional to the salaries of the laborers employed in the Post Office Department, and paid from the contingent fund, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, two thousand and forty dollars.

DISTRICT ATTORNEYS.

For compensation of attorney for the eastern district of New York, from March twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, two hundred and fifty-five dollars and fifty-five cents.

For mail steamship service between the United States and Brazil, from November first, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, one hundred thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be due.

For compensation of three watchmen for the dome of the Capitol, at seven hundred and twenty dollars each, for the fiscal year ending June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, twenty-one hundred and sixty dollars.

For navy hospital at Washington, District of Columbia, thirty thousand dollars.

The compensation of the deputy solicitor of the Court of Claims shall be, from and after June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, three thousand and five hundred dollars, payable quarterly out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

GENERAL LAND OFFICE.

To supply the deficiency for salaries and commissions of registers and receivers of the district land offices for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, forty thousand dollars.

For salary of marshal of the eastern district of New York from March twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, two hundred and fifty-five dollars and fifty-five cents.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS.

To complete the sewer through the Botanic Garden, fifteen thousand dollars: Provided, That the Commissioner of Public Buildings shall advertise for two weeks for sealed proposals for the performance of such work and the furnishing of materials therefor in the two newspapers in the city of Washington authorized to publish the official advertisements, and at the expiration of such time, on a day to be specified in such advertisement, the proposals shall be opened by the Commissioner of Public Buildings in the presence of the Secretary of the Interior, and the work shall be then let to the person who shall have offered the same and furnish the materials at the lowest rates and aggregate, and who shall give proper security for the performance of his contract; and the Commissioner of Public Buildings is hereby required to report to Congress at the commencement of the next session a full statement of the expenditure of the present and past appropriations for this work, with the rates that have been paid for work and materials under each appropriation.

To enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to reconstruct the lower water-closets of the Supreme Court room, to place marble around the furnace register, by way of protection, and to make such other improvements as the Chief Justice of the court may desire, one thousand five hundred dollars.

To repair the planking and for other repairs to Long Bridge, over the Potomac, three thousand dollars.

For iron seats for the public grounds, one thousand dollars.

To enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to make such alterations in the arrangement of the business offices in the President's House as the President may desire, two thousand dollars.

For repair of one of the greenhouses at the President's, five hundred dollars.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

For annual repairs of the President's House, six thousand dollars, for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

To complete the repairing and furnishing of the President's House, twenty thousand dollars.

To meet a deficiency in lighting Bridge and High streets, Georgetown, for the three months of the last fiscal year, eleven hundred dollars.

To soalter the roof gutters at the President's House as to prevent injury by overflow of water, three thousand dollars.

For the additional twenty per centum compensation to the messenger of the Court of Claims from January twenty-ninth to June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, sixty-seven dollars and twenty cents.

To ventilate the bath-room of the House of Representatives, two hundred dollars.

To alter and repair the building in the city of Philadelphia belonging to the United States, known as the Pennsylvania Bank building, so as to render it suitable for the occupancy of the appraisers connected with the customs at Philadelphia, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, twenty thousand dollars.

INDIAN DEPARTMENT.—MISCELLANEOUS.

For the general incidental expenses of Indian service in Nevada, presents of goods, agricultural implements, and other useful articles, and to assist them to locate in permanent abodes and sustain themselves by the pursuits of civilized life, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, twenty-five thousand dollars; of which amount the sum of nine thousand seven hundred and twenty-three dollars shall be paid to James W. Nye, late Governor and superintendent of Indian affairs for Nevada, for balance found due him.

For additional compensation to the publishers of the Statutes-at-Large, twenty-four hundred and fifty-seven dollars and twenty-one cents.

To pay the salary of Edward Jarvis, from January first, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to May thirty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, for digesting the facts as to mortality and diseases, collected by the census marshals in eighteen hundred and sixty, seven hundred and fifty dollars.

To enable the Secretary of State to remove his office and contents, twenty-five thousand dollars, in addition to the sum heretofore appropriated.

To enable the Secretary of War to make the pay of the persons employed at any time during the last fiscal year as temporary clerks in the office of the Quartermaster General, or any division thereof, equal to the pay of first-class clerks, which is hereby directed, such sum as may be necessary for this purpose.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay the reasonable costs and expenses actually paid or incurred by the delegates of the southern Cherokees in coming to and going from Washington, and during their stay in and about the negotiation upon the formation of treaties of peace and amity with the Indian tribes, a sum not exceeding ten thousand dollars: Provided, That said sum shall be refunded to the Treasury from the proceeds of the sales of the Cherokee neutral lands in Kansas.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That for increased compensation of the chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, authorized by the second section of the act of June first, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, from the first day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, to the thirtieth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the sum of three hundred and seventy-four dollars and sixty-five cents is hereby appropriated.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the sum of thirty-two thousand dollars be, and is hereby, appropriated to enable the Secretary of the Interior to quiet the title of the occupants of the following lands, conveyed by the United States to Joseph Richardville, senior, and Joseph Richardville, junior, by treaty at Saint Mary's, October sixth, eighteen hundred and eighteen, to wit: the west half of section number twenty-six (26,) the east half of section number twenty-eight (28,) and section number twenty-seven (27,) of township five south, range four east, lying in the county of Auglaize and State of Ohio.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That whereas doubts have arisen whether the fourth section of the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, entitled "An act to amend an act to provide internal revenue to support the Government, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," approved June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, authorized disbursing agents to disburse other moneys than those appropriated in the said fourth section: therefore, for the purpose of removing such doubts and declaring the true intent and meaning of said fourth [section,] the said fourth section shall be deemed, held, and construed as being and remaining in full force and effect from and after the third day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, until the same shall have been modified or repealed, and as authorizing the disbursement through such agents of moneys heretofore appropriated, and that may hereafter be appropriated, for the payment of the lawful expenses incident to carrying into effect the various acts relative to the assessment and collection of the internal revenues; and all bonds and obligations heretofore entered into by collectors of internal revenue as disbursing agents shall be binding and obligatory upon such collectors and their sureties, as well in respect to moneys which have been or may hereafter be received by said collectors as such disbursing agents as to moneys appropriated in the said fourth section.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the Capitol police and two policemen at the Executive Mansion shall be entitled to the increased compensation allowed by law to officers, clerks, messengers, and others in the employ of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the following sums be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, viz:

For compensation of the depositary at Santa Fe, New Mexico, per act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, one thousand dollars.

For salaries of additional clerks and additional compensation of officers and clerks, under act of August sixth, eighteen hundred and forty-six, at such rates as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem just and reasonable, ten thousand dollars.

For compensation of two superintendents for the life-saving stations on the coasts of Long Island and New Jersey, per acts December fourteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and August eighteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, two thousand five hundred dollars.

For compensation of fifty-four keepers of stations, per same acts, six thousand dollars.

For salary of the superintendent of the building occupied by the Quartermaster General's office, two hundred dollars for the current fiscal year.

For contingent expenses of the Senate, viz: For the Senate folding-room, six thousand dollars.

For additional messengers during the session, five thousand dollars.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of War be directed to cause estimates to be made for the erection of suitable fire-proof buildings for the War Department in Washington, stating the location and price of the land, and plans and cost of necessary buildings, to be reported at the next session of Congress.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That section four of the act entitled "An act to provide for the payment of horses and other property lost or destroyed in the service of the United States," approved March three, eighteen hundred and forty-nine, be amended by striking out all after the enacting clause, and in lieu thereof inserting the words: "That the said Auditor shall, in all cases, transmit his adjustment, with all the papers relating thereto, to the Second Comptroller, for his revision and decision thereon, the same in all respects as is provided in the act of the second of September, eighteen [seventeen] hundred and eighty-nine."

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the sum of five thousand dollars be and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to defray the expense of continuing the index to Senate list of private claims down to the present Congress, in pursuance of the order of the Senate, dated March sixteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCXCVIII.—An Act to protect the Revenue, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the tenth day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, in lieu of the duties now imposed by law on the articles mentioned and embraced in this section, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, on all goods, wares, and merchandise imported from foreign countries, the duties heretofore [hereinafter] provided, viz:

On cigars, cigarettes, and cheroots of all kinds, three dollars per pound, and, in addition thereto, fifty per centum ad valorem: Provided, That paper cigars and cigarettes, including wrappers, shall be subject to the same duties as are herein imposed upon cigars: And provided further, That on and after the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, no cigars shall be imported unless the same are packed in boxes of not more than five hundred cigars in each box; and no entry of any imported cigars shall be allowed of less quantity than three thousand in a single package; and all cigars on importation shall be placed in public store or bonded warehouse, and shall not be removed therefrom until the same shall have been inspected and a stamp affixed to each box indicating such inspection, with the date thereof. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to provide the requisite stamps, and to make all necessary regulations for carrying the above provisions of law into effect;

On cotton, three cents per pound;

On all compounds or preparations of which distilled spirits is a component part of chief value, there shall be levied a duty not less than that imposed upon distilled spirits: Provided, That brandy and other spirituous liquors may be imported in casks or other packages of any capacity not less than thirty gallons; and that wine in bottles may be imported in boxes containing not less than one dozen bottles of not more than one quart each; and wine, brandy, or other spirituous liquor imported into the United States, and shipped after the first day of October, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, in any less quantity than herein provided for, shall be forfeited to the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the second proviso in section four of an act entitled "An act amendatory of certain acts imposing duties upon foreign importations," approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, shall be construed to include any ship, vessel, or steamer to or from any port in the Sandwich Islands or Society Islands.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG...1ST SESS.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That so much of an act entitled "An act to authorize protection to be given to citizens of the United States who may discover deposits of guano," approved August eighteen, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, as prohibits the export thereof, is hereby suspended in relation to all persons who have complied with the provisions of section second of said act, for five years from and after the fourteenth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That all laws and parts of laws allowing fishing bounties to vessels hereafter licensed to engage in the fisheries be, and the same are hereby, repealed: Provided, That, from and after the date of the passage of [t]his act, vessels licensed to engage in the fisheries may take on board imported salt in bond to be used in curing fish, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, and upon proof that said salt has been used in curing fish, the duties on the same shall be remitted.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That, from and after the passage of this act, all goods, wares, or merchandise arriving at the ports of New York, Boston, and Portland, or any other port of the United States which may be specially designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, and destined for places in the adjacent British Provinces, or arriving at the port of Point Isabel, Texas, or any other port of the United States which may be specially designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, and destined for places in the republic of Mexico, may be entered at the custom-house, and conveyed, in transit, through the territory of the United States, without the payment of duties, under such rules, regulations, and conditions, for the protection of the revenue as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That imported goods, wares, or merchandise in bond, or duty paid, and products or manufactures of the United States, may, with the consent of the proper authorities of the provinces or republic aforesaid, be transported from one port or place in the United States to another port or place therein, over the territory of said provinces or republic, by such routes, and under such rules, regulations and conditions as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and the goods, wares, and merchandise, so transported, shall, upon arrival in the United States from the provinces or republic aforesaid, be treated in regard to the liability to or exemption from duty, or tax, as if the transportation had taken place entirely within the limits of the United States.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That whenever it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury that more moneys have been paid to the collector of customs, or others acting as such, than the law requires, and the parties have failed to comply with the requirements of the fourteenth and fifteenth sections of the act entitled "An act to increase the duties on imports, and for other purposes," approved June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall be satisfied that said non-compliance with the requirements as above stated was owing to circumstances beyond the control of the importer, consignee, or agent making such payments, he may draw his warrant upon the Treasurer in favor of the person or persons entitled to the overpayment, directing the said Treasurer to refund the same out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the second, third, and fourth sections of the act approved March second, eighteen hundred and thirty-three, entitled "An act further to provide for the collection of duties on imports," and of the twelfth section of the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, entitled "An act to prevent and punish frauds upon the revenue, to provide for the more certain and speedy collection of claims in favor of the United States, and for other purposes," shall be taken and deemed as extending to and embracing all cases arising or which may have heretofore arisen, and all suits and prosecutions heretofore brought and now pending, or which may hereafter be brought against any officer of the United States or other person by reason of any acts done or proceedings had by such officer or other person, under authority or color of the act approved March twelve, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, entitled "An act to provide for the collection of abandoned property, and for the prevention of frauds in insurrectionary districts within the United States," or the act approved July two, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act in addition to the several acts concerning commercial intercourse between loyal and insurrectionary States, and to provide for the collection of captured and abandoned property, and the prevention of frauds in States declared in insurrection:" Provided, That such acts done or proceedings had under the two acts last aforesaid, or under color thereof, shall have been done and had under the authority or by the direction of the executive government of the United States: And provided further, That when a recovery shall have been, or shall hereafter be, had in any such suit or prosecution brought, or which may hereafter be brought, as aforesaid, the payment of the amount recovered, as provided for in the said twelfth section of the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, aforesaid, shall be made out of the moneys arising and obtained from the proceeds of sales and leases and fees collected and paid over to the Government under the two acts approved March twelve, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, aforesaid, in relation to captured and abandoned property.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That in determining the dutiable value of merchandise hereafter imported, there shall be added to the cost, or to the actual wholesale price or general market value at the time of exportation in the principal markets of the country from whence the same shall have been imported into the United States, the cost of transportation, shipment, and transshipment, with all the expenses included from the place of growth, production, or manufacture, whether by land or water, to the vessel in which shipment is made to the United States; the value of the sack, box, or covering of any kind in which such goods are contained; commission at the usual rates, but in no case less than two and a half per centum; brokerage, export duty, and all other actual or usual charges for putting up, preparing, and packing for transportation or shipment. And all charges of a general character incurred in the purchase of a general invoice shall be distributed pro rata among all parts of such invoice; and every part thereof charged with duties based on value shall be advanced according to its proportion, and all wines or other articles paying specific duty by grades shall be graded and pay duty according to the actual value so determined: Provided, That all additions made to the entered value of merchandise for charges shall be regarded as part of the actual value of such merchandise, and if such addition shall exceed by ten per centum the value so declared in the entry, in addition to the duties imposed by law, there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty of twenty per centum on such value: Provided, That the duty shall in no case be assessed upon an amount less than the invoice or entered value: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall apply to long-combing or carpet wools costing twelve cents or less per pound, unless the charges so added shall carry the cost above twelve cents per pound, in which case, one cent per pound duty shall be added.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the second proviso in section twenty-one of an act entitled "An act increasing temporarily the duties on imports, and for other purposes," approved July fourteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, which provides that any goods remaining in public store or bonded warehouse beyond three years shall be regarded as abandoned to the Government, and sold under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and the proceeds paid into the Treasury, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury, in case of any sale under the said provision, to pay to the owner, consignee, or agent of such goods, the proceeds thereof, after deducting duties, charges, and expenses, in conformity with the provision of the first section of the warehouse act of August six, eighteen hundred and forty-six.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That during [the] period of one year from the passage of this act, there may be imported into the United States, free of duty, any machinery designed solely for and adapted to the manufacture of sugar from beets, including all the preliminary processes requisite therefor, but not including any machinery which may be used for any other manufactures.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That upon the reimportation of articles once exported of the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no internal tax has been assessed or paid, or upon which such tax has been paid and refunded by allowance or drawback, there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty equal to the tax imposed by the internal revenue laws upon such articles.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That there shall be established in and attached to the Department of the Treasury a bureau to be styled "the Bureau of Statistics," and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to appoint a Director to superintend and control the business of said bureau, who shall be paid an annual salary of thirty-five hundred dollars. And it shall be the duty of the Director of the Bureau of Statistics to prepare the report on the statistics of commerce and navigation, exports and imports, now required by law to be submitted annually to Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury; and said report, embracing the returns of the commerce and navigation, the exports and imports of the United States to the close of the fiscal year, shall be submitted to Congress in a printed form on or before the first day of December next succeeding; and the said Director, as soon as practicable after the organization of this office shall, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, prepare and publish monthly reports of the exports and imports of the United States, including the quantities and values of goods warehoused or withdrawn from warehouse, and such other statistics relative to the trade and industry of the country as the Secretary of the Treasury may consider expedient. And the Director of the Bureau of Statistics shall also prepare an annual statement of vessels registered, enrolled, and licensed under the laws of the United States, together with the class, name, tonnage, and place of registry of each vessel, and such other information as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem proper to embody therein; and to enable the said Director to furnish the information required, the Secretary of the Treasury shall have power, under such regulations as he shall prescribe, to establish and provide a system of numbering vessels so registered, enrolled, and licensed; and each vessel so numbered shall have her number deeply carved or otherwise permanently marked on her main beam; and if at any time she shall cease to be so marked, such vessel shall be no longer recognized as a vessel of the United States. The said Director shall also prepare an annual statement of all merchandise passing in transit through the United States to foreign countries, each description of merchandise, so far as practicable, warehoused, withdrawn from warehouse for consumption, for exportation, for transportation to other districts, and remaining in the warehouse at the end of each fiscal year. It shall be the further duty of said Director to collect, digest, and arrange, for the use of Congress, the statistics of the manufactures of the United States, their localities, sources of raw material, markets, exchanges with the producing regions of the country, transportation of products, wages, and such other conditions as are found to affect their prosperity; and to aid him in the discharge of these duties, the several clerks now employed in the preparation of statistics in the Treasury Department, or any bureau thereof, may be placed under his supervision and direction; and, in addition, the Secretary of the Treasury shall detail such other clerks as may be necessary to fully carry out the provisions of this act. And the expenses of the Bureau of Statistics for clerical service, publication of reports, stationery, books, and statistical periodicals and papers required by the bureau, shall be defrayed on the order and approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. And all letters and documents to and from the Director of the Bureau of Statistics, relating to the duties and business of his office, shall be transmitted by mail free of postage.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to suspend the collection, in any of the States heretofore declared in insurrection, of the direct tax imposed by an act of Congress passed August fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, entitled "An act to provide increased revenue from imports, to pay interest on the public debt, and for other purposes," until January first, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCXCIX.—An Act to increase and fix the Military Peace Establishment of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the military peace establishment of the United States shall hereafter consist of five regiments of artillery, ten regiments of cavalry, forty-five regiments of infantry, the professors and corps of cadets of the United States Military Academy, and such other forces as shall be provided for by this act, to be known as the Army of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the five regiments of artillery provided for by this act shall consist of the five regiments now organized; and the first, second, third, and fourth regiments of artillery shall have the same organization as is now prescribed by law for the fifth regiment of artillery; but the regimental adjutants, quartermasters, and commissaries shall hereafter be extra lieutenants selected from the first or second lieutenants of the regiment.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That to the six regiments of cavalry now in service there shall be added four regiments, two of which shall be composed of colored men, having the same organization as is now provided by law for cavalry regiments, with the addition of one veterinary surgeon to each regiment, whose compensation shall be one hundred dollars per month; but the grade of company commissary sergeant of cavalry is hereby abolished.

The original vacancies in the grade of first and second lieutenant shall be filled by selection from among the officers and soldiers of volunteer cavalry, and two thirds of the original vacancies in each of the grades above that of first lieutenant shall be filled by selections from among the officers of volunteer cavalry, and one third from officers of the regular Army, all of whom shall have served two years in the field during the war, and have been distinguished for capacity and good conduct; any portion of the cavalry force may be armed and drilled as infantry or dismounted cavalry at the discretion of the President, and each cavalry regiment shall hereafter have but one hospital steward, and the regimental adjutants, quartermasters, and commissaries shall hereafter be extra lieutenants selected from the first or second lieutenants of the regiment.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the forty-five regiments of infantry provided for by this act shall consist of the first ten regiments, of ten companies each, now in service; of twenty-seven regiments, of ten companies each, to be formed by adding two companies to each battalion of the remaining nine regiments; and of eight new regiments, of ten companies each, four regiments of which shall be composed of colored men and four regiments of ten companies each to be raised and officered as hereinafter provided for, to be called the Veteran Reserve corps; and all the original vacancies in the grades of first and second lieutenant shall be filled by selection from among the officers and soldiers of volunteers, and one half the original vacancies in each of the grades above that of first lieutenant, shall be filled by selection from among the officers of volunteers, and the remainder from officers of the regular Army, all of whom shall have served two years during the war, and have been distinguished for capacity and good conduct in the field. The Veteran Reserve corps shall be officered by appointments from any officers and soldiers of volunteers or of the regular Army who have been wounded in the line of their duty while serving in the Army of the United States in the late war, and who may yet be competent for garrison or other duty, to which that corps has heretofore been assigned.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the appointments to be made from among volunteer officers and soldiers under the provisions of this act shall be distributed among the States, Territories, and District of Columbia, in proportion to the number of troops furnished by them respectively to the service of the United States during the late war, reduced to an average of three years' term of service: Provided, That the regulation provided in this section governing the proportion of officers to be selected from each State, shall not be applied to the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That each regiment of infantry provided for by this act shall have one colonel, one lieutenant colonel, one major, one adjutant, one regimental quartermaster, one sergeant major, one quartermaster sergeant, one commissary sergeant, one hospital steward, two principal musicians, and ten companies; and the adjutant and quartermaster shall hereafter be extra lieutenants selected from the first or second lieutenants of the regiment. Each company shall have one captain, one first lieutenant and one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, one quartermaster sergeant, four sergeants, eight corporals, two artificers, two musicians, one wagoner, and fifty privates, and the number of privates may be increased at the discretion of the President, not to exceed one hundred, whenever the exigencies of the service require such increase; and the President is hereby authorized to enlist and employ in the Territories and Indian country a force of Indians, not to exceed one thousand, to act as scouts, who shall receive the pay and allowances of cavalry soldiers, and be discharged whenever the necessity for their further employment is abated, or at the discretion of the department commander.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That fifteen bands, including the band at the Military Academy, may be retained or enlisted in the Army, with such organization as is now provided by law, to be assigned to brigades in time of war, and in time of peace to assembled brigades, or to forts or posts at which the largest number of troops shall be ordinarily stationed, and the band at the Military Academy shall be placed on the same footing as other bands, one ordnance sergeant and one hospital steward for each military post, and the same number of post chaplains as at present authorized, who shall be appointed as now provided by law; and the President of the United States is hereby authorized to appoint for each national cemetery now established, or that may be established, a superintendent, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of an ordnance sergeant, to be selected from among the non-commissioned officers of the regular Army and volunteer forces who have received certificates of merit for services during the war.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That all enlistments into the Army shall hereafter be for the term of five years for cavalry, and three years for artillery and infantry, and recruits may at all times be collected at the general rendezvous in addition to the number required to fill to the minimum all the regiments of the Army, provided that such recruits shall not exceed in the aggregate three thousand men. It shall be competent to enlist men for the service who have been wounded in the line of their duty while serving in the Army of the United States, provided it shall be found, on medical inspection, that by such wounds they are not unfitted for efficiency in garrison or other light duty; and such men, when enlisted, shall be assigned to service exclusively in the regiments of the Veteran Reserve corps.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That there shall be one general, one lieutenant general, five major generals, and ten brigadier generals, who shall have the same pay and emoluments, and be entitled to the same staff officers in number and grade as now provided by law.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the Adjutant General's department of the Army shall hereafter consist of the officers now authorized by law, viz: one adjutant general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general; two assistant adjutants general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of colonels of cavalry; four assistant adjutants general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant colonels of cavalry; and thirteen assistant adjutants general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of majors of cavalry.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That there shall be four inspectors general of the Army, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of colonels of cavalry; three assistant inspectors general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant colonels of cavalry; and two assistant inspectors general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of majors of cavalry.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the Bureau of Military Justice shall hereafter consist of one judge advocate general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general, and one assistant judge advocate general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a colonel of cavalry; and the said Judge Advocate General shall receive, revise, and have recorded, the proceedings of all courts-martial, courts of inquiry, and military commissions, and shall perform such other duties as have been heretofore performed by the Judge Advocate General of the Army. And of the judge advocates now in office there may be retained a number not exceeding ten, to be selected by the Secretary of the War, who shall perform their duties under the direction of the Judge Advocate General, until otherwise provided by law, or until the Secretary of War shall decide that their services can be dispensed with.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the quartermaster's department of the Army shall hereafter consist of one quartermaster general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general; six assistant quartermasters general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of colonels of cavalry; ten deputy quartermasters general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant colonels of cavalry; fifteen quartermasters, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of majors of cavalry; and forty-four assistant quartermasters, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of captains of cavalry; and the vacancies hereby created in the grade of assistant quartermaster shall be filled by selection from among the persons who have rendered meritorious services as assistant quartermasters of volunteers during two years of the war; but after the first appointments made under the provisions of this section, as vacancies may occur in the grades of major and captain in this department, no appointments to fill the same shall be made until the number of majors shall be reduced to twelve, and the number of captains to thirty, and thereafter the number of officers in each of said grades shall continue to conform to said reduced numbers.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That the number of military storekeepers in the quartermaster's department shall hereafter be as many as shall be required, not exceeding sixteen, who shall have the rank, pay, and emoluments of captains of infantry.

SEC. 15. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the act for the better organization of the quartermaster's department, approved July fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, shall continue in force until the first day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and no longer.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That the subsistence department of the Army shall hereafter consist of the number of officers now authorized by law, viz: one commissary general of subsistence, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general; two assistant commissaries general of subsistence, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of colonels of cavalry; two assistant commissaries general of subsistence, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant colonels of cavalry; eight commissaries of subsistence, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of majors of cavalry; and sixteen commissaries of subsistence, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of captains of cavalry.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That the medical department of the Army shall hereafter consist of one surgeon general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general; one assistant surgeon general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a colonel of cavalry; one chief medical purveyor and four assistant medical purveyors, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant colonels of cavalry, who shall give the same bonds which are or may be required of assistant paymaster generals of like grade, and shall, when not acting as purveyors, be assignable to duty as surgeons by the President; sixty surgeons, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of majors of cavalry; one hundred and fifty assistant surgeons, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenants of cavalry for the first three years' service, and with the rank, pay, and emoluments of captains of cavalry after three years' service; and five medical storekeepers, with the same compensation as is now provided by law; and all the original vacancies in the grade of assistant surgeon shall be filled by selection by examination from among the persons who have served as staff or regimental surgeons, or assistant surgeons of volunteers in the Army of the United States two years during the late war; and persons who have served as assistant surgeons three years in the volunteer service shall be eligible for promotion to the grade of captain; and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to appoint from the enlisted men of the Army, or cause to be enlisted, as many hospital stewards as the service may require, to be permanently attached to the medical department, under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That the pay department of the Army shall hereafter consist of one paymaster general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general; two assistant paymasters general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of colonels of cavalry; two deputy paymasters general, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant colonels of cavalry; and sixty paymasters, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of majors of cavalry, to be selected from persons who have served as additional paymasters.

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That the corps of engineers shall consist of one chief of engineers, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general; six colonels, twelve lieutenant colonels, twenty-four majors, thirty captains, and twenty-six first and ten second lieutenants, who shall have the pay and emoluments now provided by law for officers of the engineer corps.

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That the five companies of engineer soldiers, and the sergeant major and quartermaster sergeant heretofore prescribed by law shall constitute a battalion of engineers, to be officered by officers of suitable rank detailed from the corps of engineers; and the officers of engineers, acting respectively as adjutant and quartermaster of this battalion, shall be entitled to the pay and emoluments of adjutants and quartermasters of cavalry.

SEC. 21. And be it further enacted, That the ordnance department of the Army shall consist of the same number of officers and enlisted men as now authorized by law, and the officers shall be of the following grades, viz: one brigadier general, three colonels, four lieutenant colonels, ten majors, twenty captains, sixteen first lieutenants, and ten second lieutenants, with the same pay and emoluments as now provided by law; and thirteen ordnance storekeepers, of whom a number not exceeding six may be appointed and authorized to act as paymasters at armories and arsenals. The ordnance storekeeper and paymaster at the national armory at Springfield shall have the rank, pay, and emoluments of a major of cavalry, and all other ordnance storekeepers shall have the rank, pay, and emoluments of captains of cavalry, and two thirds of the military storekeepers and ordnance storekeepers to be appointed under this and the fourteenth section of this act, shall be selected from volunteer officers or soldiers who have performed meritorious service in the Army of the United States during the late rebellion.

SEC. 22. And be it further enacted, That there shall be one chief signal officer of the Army, who shall have the rank, pay, and emoluments of a colonel of cavalry; and the Secretary of War shall have power to detail six officers, and not to exceed one hundred non-commissioned officers and privates, from the battalion of engineers, for the performance of signal duty; but no officer or enlisted man shall be so detailed until he shall have been examined and approved by a military board, to be convened by the Secretary of War for that purpose; and enlisted men, while so detailed, shall, when deemed necessary, be mounted upon horses provided by the Government.

SEC. 23. And be it further enacted, That the Adjutant General, Quartermaster General, Commissary General of Subsistence, Surgeon General, Paymaster General, Chief of Engineers, and Chief of Ordnance, shall hereafter be appointed by selection from the corps to which they belong, and no person shall be appointed to any vacancy created by this act in the pay, medical, or quartermaster's departments, until he shall have passed the examination now required by law.

SEC. 24. And be it further enacted, That no person[s] shall be commissioned in any of the regiments authorized by this act until they shall have passed a satisfactory examination before a board, to be composed of officers of that arm of the service in which the applicant is to serve, to be convened under the direction of the Secretary of War, which shall inquire into the services rendered during the war, capacity and qualifications of the applicants; and such appointments, when made, shall be without regard to previous rank, but with sole regard to qualifications and meritorious services; and persons applying for commissions in any of the regiments authorized by this act shall be entitled in case of passing the examination, and being appointed or commissioned, to receive mileage from the place of his residence to the place of examination, or such portion of that distance as he may actually travel, the same as is paid to officers traveling under orders, but there shall be paid no other compensation.

SEC. 25. And be it further enacted, That the office of sutler in the Army and at military posts is hereby abolished, and the subsistence department is hereby authorized and required to furnish such articles as may from time to time be designated by the inspectors general of the Army, the same to be sold to officers and enlisted men at cost prices, and if not paid for when purchased, a true account thereof shall be kept, and the amount due the Government shall be deducted by the paymaster at the payment next following such purchase: Provided, That this section shall not go into effect until the first day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

SEC. 26. And be it further enacted, That for the purpose of promoting knowledge of military science among the young men of the United States, the President may, upon the application of an established college or university within the United States, with sufficient capacity to educate at one time not less than one hundred and fifty male students, detail an officer of the Army to act as president, superintendent, or professor of such college or university; that the number of officers so detailed shall not exceed twenty at any time, and shall be apportioned through the United States as nearly as practicable according to population, and shall be governed by general rules, to be prescribed from time to time by the President.

SEC. 27. And be it further enacted, That whenever troops are serving at any post, garrison, or permanent camp, there shall be established a school where all enlisted men may be provided with instruction in the common English branches of education, and especially in the history of the United States, and the Secretary of War is authorized to detail such commissioned officers and enlisted men as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section; and it shall be the duty of the post or garrison commander to cause to be set apart a suitable room or building for school and religious purposes.

SEC. 28. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall be construed to authorize or permit the appointment to any position or office in the Army of the United States of any person who has served in any capacity in the military, naval, or civil service of the so-called confederate States or of either of the States in insurrection during the late rebellion; but any such appointment shall be illegal and void.

SEC. 29. And be it further enacted, That, in construing this act, officers who have heretofore been appointed or commissioned to serve with United States colored troops shall be deemed

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

and held to be officers of volunteers, and officers of the regular Army who have also held commissions as officers of volunteers or have commanded volunteers shall not on that account be held to be volunteers under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 30. And be it further enacted, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as affecting existing laws respecting the rank, pay, and allowances of chaplains of the Army, but the same shall remain as now established by the act entitled "An act to amend section nine of the act approved July seventeen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled 'An act to define the pay and emoluments of certain officers of the Army, and for other purposes,'" approved April nine, eighteen hundred and sixty-four; one chaplain may be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, for each regiment of colored troops, whose duty shall include the instruction of the enlisted men in the common English branches of education; and chaplains, when ordered from one field of duty to another, shall be entitled to transportation at the same rate as other officers.

Sec. 31. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to vacate the commission of any officer now properly in service, or whose name may be borne on the Army Register as partially retired, according to law.

Sec. 32. And be it further enacted, That officers of the regular Army, entitled to be retired on account of disability occasioned by wounds received in battle, may be retired upon the full rank of the command held by them, whether in the regular or volunteer service at the time such wounds were received.

Sec. 33. And be it further enacted, That the Provost Marshal General's Office and Bureau shall be continued only so long as the Secretary of War shall deem necessary, not exceeding thirty days after the passage of this act.

Sec. 34. And be it further enacted, That all officers who have served during the rebellion as volunteers in the armies of the United States, and who have been or may hereafter be honorably mustered out of the volunteer service, shall be entitled to bear the official title, and upon occasions of ceremony to wear the uniform of the highest grade they have held by brevet or other commissions in the volunteer service. In case of officers of the regular Army, the volunteer rank shall be entered upon the official Army Register: Provided, That these privileges shall not entitle any officer to command, pay, or emoluments.

Sec. 35. And be it further enacted, That the third section of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-six," shall continue in force for one year from the passage of this act: Provided, That no officer who is furnished with quarters in kind shall be entitled to receive the increased commutation of rations hereby authorized.

Sec. 36. And be it further enacted, That section three of the act approved February twenty, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, authorizing the appointment of a Solicitor of the War Department, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

Sec. 37. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to have prepared, and to report to Congress, at its next session, a code of regulations for the government of the Army, and of the militia in actual service, which shall embrace all necessary orders and forms of a general character for the performance of all duties incumbent on officers and men in the military service, including rules for the government of courts-martial. The existing regulations to remain in force until Congress shall have acted on said report.

Sec. 38. And be it further enacted, That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCC.—An Act to revive and extend the Provisions of "An Act granting the Right of Way and making a Grant of Land to the States of Arkansas and Missouri, to aid in the Construction of a Railroad from a Point upon the Mississippi opposite the Mouth of the Ohio River, via Little Rock, to the Texas Boundary, near Fulton, in Arkansas, with Branches to Fort Smith and the Mississippi River," approved February 9, 1853, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the "Act granting the right of way and making a grant of land to the States of Arkansas and Missouri to aid in the construction of a railroad from a point upon the Mississippi opposite the mouth of the Ohio river, via Little Rock, to the Texas boundary, near Fulton, in Arkansas, with branches to Fort Smith and the Mississippi river," approved February nine, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, with all the provisions therein made, be, and the same is hereby, revived and extended for the term of ten years from the passage of this act; and all the lands therein granted, which reverted to the United States under the provisions of said act, be, and the same are hereby, restored to the same custody, control, and condition, and made subject to the uses and trusts in all respects as they were before and at the time such reversion took effect: Provided, That all mineral lands within the limits of this grant and the grant made in section two of this act are hereby reserved to the United States: And provided further, That all property and troops of the United States shall at all times be transported over said railroad and branches at the cost, charge, and expense of the company or corporation owning or operating said road and branches respectively, when so required by the Government of the United States.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That there is hereby granted, added to, and made part of the donation of lands hereby renewed and made, subject to the same uses and trusts, and under the same custody, control, and conditions, and to be held and disposed of in the same manner as if included in the original grant, all the alternate sections and parts of sections, designated by odd numbers, lying along the outer line of lands heretofore granted, and within five miles on each side thereof, excepting lands reserved or otherwise appropriated by law, or to which the right of preemption or homestead settlement has attached: Provided, That the additional quantity of lands hereby granted, when added to the lands specified in section one hereof, shall not exceed, in the aggregate quantity of lands by this act granted, sufficient to amount to ten sections for each mile of railroad: And provided further, That the lands embraced in this grant and the grant revived by section one of this act shall be disposed of only as follows: whenever proof shall be furnished, satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior, that any section of ten consecutive miles of said road and branches is completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner as a first-class railroad, the said Secretary of the Interior shall issue patents for all the lands granted as aforesaid, not exceeding ten sections per mile situate opposite to and within the limits of twenty miles of the section of said road and branches thus completed, and when like proof shall be furnished that another section of ten miles of said road in said States or on the said branches respectively connecting with the preceding section is completed as aforesaid, the Secretary of the Interior shall issue patents in like manner as in case of the first completed sections, and so on from time to time until the whole is completed as herein provided, when the Secretary of the Interior shall issue patents for all the remaining lands herein granted, not exceeding the aggregate amount provided for and located as required by sections one and two of this act: And provided further, That if one section of twenty miles of each of said railroads and branches shall not be fully constructed and completed as a first-class railroad within three years from the time this act becomes a law, and at least one section of twenty miles on each of said roads and branches in each year thereafter, and the whole of said roads and branches within ten years from the time this act shall take effect, then and in either of said cases all the lands granted or the grant of which is revived or extended by this act, and which at the time shall be unpatented to or for the benefit of the road or company making or suffering such failure, shall revert to the United States.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That all the lands mentioned in this act, and hereby granted, are hereby reserved from entry, preemption, or appropriation to any other purpose than herein contemplated, for the said term of ten years from the passage of this act: Provided, That all lands heretofore given to the State of Missouri for the construction of the Cairo and Fulton railroad, or for the use of said road lying in the State of Missouri, and all lands proposed to be granted by this act for the use or in aid of the road herein named, and lying in said State of Missouri, shall be granted and patented to the said State whenever the road shall be completed through said State, which lands may be held by said State and used toward paying the State the amount of bonds heretofore issued by it to aid said company, and all interest accrued or to accrue thereon: Provided further, That the provisions of this act, so far as the same relate to the Memphis and Little Rock and the Little Rock and Fort Smith branches of said road, shall not take effect until the Secretary of the Interior shall make and file a certificate in his office and the office of the secretary of state of Arkansas, stating that the companies or corporations claiming the benefit of this act in behalf of said branches have reorganized their boards of directors in a lawful manner, and, after such reorganization, that they have respectively rescinded all acts, resolutions, or other proceedings, transferring the lands, rights, or privileges of such corporations or companies to any convention, State, or authority recognizing or acting in concert with, or under the authority of the late so-called confederate States of America.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCL.—An Act to authorize the Use of the Metric System of Weights and Measures.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the passage of this act it shall be lawful throughout the United States of America to employ the weights and measures of the metric system; and no contract or dealing, or pleading in any court, shall be deemed invalid or liable to objection because the weights or measures expressed or referred to therein are weights or measures of the metric system.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the tables in the schedule hereto annexed shall be recognized in the construction of contracts, and in all legal proceedings, as establishing, in terms of the weights and measures now in use in the United States, the equivalents of the weights and measures expressed therein in terms of the metric system; and said tables may be lawfully used for computing, determining, and expressing in customary weights and measures the weights and measures of the metric system.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

MEASURES OF LENGTH.

METRIC DENOMINATIONS AND VALUES.		EQUIVALENTS IN DENOMINATIONS IN USE.
Myriameter .....	10,000 meters.	6.2137 miles.
Kilometer .....	1,000 meters.	0.62137 miles, or 3280 feet and ten inches.
Hectometer .....	100 meters.	328 feet and 1 inch.
Dekameter .....	10 meters.	393.7 inches.
Meter .....	1 meter.	39.37 inches.
Decimeter .....	$\frac{1}{10}$ of a meter.	3.937 inches.
Centimeter .....	$\frac{1}{100}$ of a meter.	0.3937 inches.
Millimeter .....	$\frac{1}{1000}$ of a meter.	0.0394 inches.

MEASURES OF SURFACE.

METRIC DENOMINATIONS AND VALUES.		EQUIVALENTS IN DENOMINATIONS IN USE.
Hectare .....	10,000 square meters	2.471 acres.
Are .....	100 square meters	119.6 square yards.
Centare .....	1 square meter	1550 square inches.

MEASURES OF CAPACITY.

METRIC DENOMINATIONS AND VALUES.			EQUIVALENTS IN DENOMINATIONS IN USE.
Names.	Number of liters.	Cubic measure.	Dry measure.	Liquid or wine measure.
Kiloliter, or stere	1,000	1 cubic meter .....	1.308 cubic yards .....	264.17 gallons.
Hectoliter .....	100	$\frac{1}{10}$ of a cube meter ...	2 bushels and 8.35 pecks	26.417 gallons.
Dekaliter .....	10	10 cubic decimeters ...	9.08 quarts .....	2.6417 gallons.
Liter .....	1	1 cubic decimeter .....	0.908 quarts .....	1.0567 quarts.
Deciliter .....	$\frac{1}{10}$	$\frac{1}{10}$ of a cubic decimeter	6.1022 cubic inches .....	0.845 gills.
Centiliter .....	$\frac{1}{100}$	10 cubic centimeters ...	0.6102 cubic inches .....	0.338 fluid ounces.
Milliliter .....	$\frac{1}{1000}$	1 cubic centimeter ...	0.061 cubic inches .....	0.27 fluid drams.

WEIGHTS.

METRIC DENOMINATIONS AND VALUES.			EQUIVALENTS IN DENOMINATIONS IN USE.
Names.	Number of grams.	Weight of what quantity of water at maximum density.	Avoirdupois weight.
Millier or Tonneau .....	1,000,000	1 cubic meter .....	2204.6 pounds.
Quintal .....	100,000	1 hectoliter .....	220.46 pounds.
Myriagram .....	10,000	10 liters .....	22.046 pounds.
Kilogram or kilo .....	1,000	1 liter .....	2.2046 pounds.
Hectogram .....	100	1 deciliter .....	8.5274 ounces.
Dekagram .....	10	10 cubic centimeters .....	0.3527 ounces.
Gram .....	1	1 cubic centimeter .....	15.432 grains.
Decigram .....	$\frac{1}{10}$	$\frac{1}{10}$ of a cubic centimeter ...	1.5432 grains.
Centigram .....	$\frac{1}{100}$	10 cubic millimeters .....	0.1543 grains.
Milligram .....	$\frac{1}{1000}$	1 cubic millimeters .....	0.0154 grains.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCII.—An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act making Appropriations for sundry Civil Expenses of the Government for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-nine."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proviso to the seventeenth section of the act to which this act is an amendment be altered so as to read as follows: And provided further, That where there is no collector at the place of location of any public work herein specified, the Secretary of the Treasury shall have power to appoint a disbursing agent for the payment of all moneys that are, or may be hereafter, appropriated for the construction of any such public work, with such compensation as he may deem equitable and just, and all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this section be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCIII.—An Act authorizing the Payment of the Rewards offered by the President of the United States and the Officers of the War Department, in April and May, 1865, for the Capture of the Assassins of the late President, Abraham Lincoln, and the Secretary of State, Hon. William H. Seward.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be paid, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, in satisfaction of all claims for the rewards offered by the President of the United States or by authority of the War Department for the capture of the assassins of the late President, Abraham Lincoln, and the Secretary of State, William H. Seward, the following sums to the following-named persons, viz:

For the capture of Payne:
To Major H. W. Smith, who had charge of and commanded the force, the sum of. $1,000
Richard C. Morgan, detective..... 500

Eli Devore, detective..... $500
Charles H. Rosch, detective..... 500
Thomas Sampson, detective..... 500
William M. Wermerskirch, detective..... 500
John H. Kimball, citizen..... 500
P. M. Clark, citizen..... 500
Susan Jackson, colored..... 250
Mary Ann Griffin..... 250

$5,000

For the capture of Atzerott:

To Major E. R. Artman, 213th Pennsylvania volunteers..... $1,250 00
Sergeant Zachariah W. Gemmill, 1st Delaware cavalry..... 3,598 54
Private Christopher Ross, 1st Delaware cavalry..... 2,878 54
Private David H. Barker, 1st Delaware cavalry..... 2,878 78
Private Albert Bender, 1st Delaware cavalry..... 2,878 78
Private Samuel J. Williams, 1st Delaware cavalry..... 2,878 78
Private George W. Young, 1st Delaware cavalry..... 2,878 78
Private James Longacre, 1st Delaware cavalry..... 2,878 78
James W. Purdum, citizen..... 2,878 78

$25,000 00

For the capture of Booth and Herold:

To E. J. Conger..... $15,000
" Lafayette C. Baker..... 3,750
" Luther B. Barker..... 3,000
" Lieutenant E. P. Doherty..... 5,250
" James R. O'Bierne..... 2,000
" H. H. Wells..... 1,000
" George Cottingham..... 1,000
" Alexander Lovett..... 1,000

$32,000

Sergeant Boston Corbett, 16th New York cavalry; Sergeant Andrew Wendell, 16th New York cavalry; Corporal Charles Zimmer, 16th New York cavalry; Corporal Michael Uniacke, 16th New York cavalry; Corporal John Winter, 16th New York cavalry; Corporal Herman Newgarten, 16th New York cavalry; Corporal John Walz, 16th New York cavalry; Corporal Oliver Lonpay, 16th New York cavalry; Corporal Michael Hornsley, 16th New York cavalry; Private John Myers, 16th New York cavalry; Private John Ryan, 16th New York cavalry; Private William Byrne, 16th New York cavalry; Private Philip Hoyt, 16th New York cavalry; Private Martin Kelley, 16th New York cavalry; Private Henry Putnam, 16th New York cavalry; Private Frank McDaniel, 16th New York cavalry; Private Lewis Savage, 16th New York cavalry; Private Abraham Genay, 16th New York cavalry; Private Emery Parady, 16th New York cavalry; Private David Barker, 16th New York cavalry; Private William McQuade, 16th New York cavalry; Private John Millington, 16th New York cavalry; Private Frederick Deitz, 16th New York cavalry; Private John H. Singer, 16th New York cavalry; Private Carl Steinbrugge, 16th New York cavalry; Private Joseph Zisgen, 16th New York cavalry, one thousand six hundred and fifty-three dollars eighty-four, eight tenth cents each..... 43,000

$75,000 00

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said several sums shall be paid to the several persons above named, respectively, personally, or in case of their decease, to the persons who would be entitled to the same under the bounty laws of the United States in case of a deceased soldier.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCIV.—An Act directing a District Court to be held at the City of Erie, in the State of Pennsylvania.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, besides the terms of the district court of the United States, directed by law to be held at Pittsburg, in the county of Alleghany, and at Williamsport, in the county of Lycoming, for the western district of the State of Pennsylvania, the judge of said western district shall hold two terms in every year, at the city of Erie, in the county of Erie, which shall commence the first Monday of July and January in each and every year, beginning in the July or January which shall first immediately follow the passage of this act, and be continued and adjourned from time to time, as the court may deem expedient, for the dispatch of the business thereof.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCV.—An Act to authorize the Secretary of War to furnish Transportation to Discharged Soldiers to whom Artificial Limbs are furnished by the Government.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to furnish to discharged soldiers of the United States, who have been disabled in the service, as well as to those not yet discharged, transportation to and from their homes and the place where they may be required to go to obtain artificial limbs provided for them under authority of law.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCVI.—An Act supplemental to the Act to appropriate Money for the Postal Services.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and hereby is, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for carrying the mail upon the post roads established by acts of Congress passed during the first session of the Thirty-Ninth Congress, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, the sum of four hundred and eighty-six thousand five hundred and twenty-five dollars.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCVII.—An Act to protect the Manufacturers of Mineral Waters in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all manufacturers and vendors of mineral waters and other beverages by law allowed to be sold in bottles, upon which their names or their mark or marks shall be respectively impressed, may file with the clerk of the supreme court of the District of Columbia a description of such bottles and of the name or marks thereon, and shall cause the same to be published for not less than two weeks, successively, in a daily or weekly newspaper, published in said District of Columbia.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That it is hereby declared to be unlawful for any person or persons hereafter, without the permission of the owner or owners thereof, to fill with mineral waters or other beverages any such bottles so marked, for sale, or to traffic in any such bottles so marked, and not bought by him or her of such owner or owners thereof; and every person so offending shall be liable to a penalty of fifty cents for every bottle so filled, or sold, or used, or disposed of, or bought, or trafficked in, for the first offense; and of five dollars for every subsequent offense, to be recovered as other fines in said District of Columbia.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCVIII.—An Act donating certain Lots in the City of Washington for Schools for Colored Children in the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Commissioner of Public Buildings be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to grant and convey to the trustees of colored schools for the cities of Washington and Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, for the sole use of schools for colored children in said District of Columbia, all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to lots numbered one, two, and eighteen in square nine hundred and eighty-five, in the said city of Washington, said lots having been designated and set apart by the Secretary of the Interior to be used for colored schools. And whenever the same shall be converted to other uses, they shall revert to the United States.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCIX.—An Act to extend the Jurisdiction of Commissioners of the Circuit Courts of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the commissioners who now are, or hereafter may be, appointed by the circuit courts of the United States to take acknowledgments of bail and affidavits, and also to take depositions in civil causes, shall and may exercise all the powers that any justice of the peace may exercise under and in virtue of the seventh section of the act passed the twentieth of July, anno Domini seventeen hundred and ninety, entitled "An act for the government and regulation of seamen in the merchant service."

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCX.—An Act to provide for the Suits, Judgments, and Business of the United States Provisional Court for the State of Louisiana.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all suits, causes, prosecutions, and proceedings in the United States provisional court for the State of Louisiana, with the records thereof, be, and the same are hereby, transferred to the United States district court for the eastern district of Louisiana; and all suits, causes, prosecutions, and proceedings so transferred shall be proceeded with in said court and tried and determined, and process and judgment issued and executed therein and by said court in the same manner and with like effect as if the same had been commenced originally in said district court: Provided, however, That any suit or proceeding so transferred, of which the circuit court could take jurisdiction under the laws of the United States, shall in like manner be heard and determined in the circuit court held in said district.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That in case suits or proceedings are pending in said provisional court which could not have been instituted in said circuit or district court, the record shall remain in said district court without further action therein.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That all judgments, orders, decrees, and decisions of the United States provisional court for the State of Louisiana, relating to the causes hereby transferred to the district court of the eastern district of Louisiana, or to the circuit court held in said district, shall at once become the judgments, orders, decrees, and decisions of said district court, or said circuit court, unless the same are inconsistent with the rules and proceedings thereof; and may be enforced, pleaded, and proved, as the judgments, orders, decrees, or decisions of said district court, or said circuit court.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCXI.—An Act to remove the Office of Surveyor General of the States of Iowa and Wisconsin to Plattsmouth, Nebraska.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior, as soon after the passage of this act as may be, to cause the office of surveyor general of Iowa and Wisconsin to be removed to Plattsmouth in the Territory of Nebraska, and to make the necessary provisions for immediate and effective operations; and when so removed the duties and jurisdiction of said surveyor general shall be coextensive with the limits of the Territory of Nebraska, and include the State of Iowa, and the same shall constitute a surveying district.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCXII.—An Act to prevent Officers of the Navy from being deprived of their regular Promotion on Account of Wounds received in Battle, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provision of section four of the "Act to amend an act entitled an act to establish and equalize the grade of line officers of the United States Navy," approved July sixteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, requiring that no officer in the naval service shall be promoted to a higher grade upon the active list until he has been examined by a board of naval surgeons and pronounced physically qualified to perform all his duties at sea, shall not be construed to apply to and exclude from the promotion to which he would otherwise be regularly entitled any officer in whose case such medical board shall report that his physical disqualification was occasioned by wounds received in the line of his duty, and that such wounds do not incapacitate him for other duties in the grade to which he shall be promoted.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the rate of pay of officers of the Navy on the retired list and not on duty, nor retired on furlough pay, in cases where such rate of pay has not heretofore been fixed by law, shall be one half of the pay to which such officers would be entitled if on duty at sea. And the pay of clerks of navy-yards, of clerks to commandants of navy-yards, and of clerks to naval storekeepers, is hereby increased twenty-five per cent upon their present salaries, from the commencement of the present fiscal year.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby authorized in the settlement of the accounts of the disbursing officers of the Navy and Marine corps to allow, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Navy, such credits for losses of property and funds as have occurred during the late rebellion and as shall occur hereafter, and which shall appear to them by such vouchers and testimony as they shall require to have been occasioned by accidental circumstances, or a condition of things over which such officers had no control and for which they are not justly responsible.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

PUBLIC RESOLUTIONS.

No. 1.—A Resolution authorizing the President to divert certain Funds heretofore appropriated, and cause the same to be used for immediate Subsistence and Clothing, &c., for destitute Indians and Indian Tribes.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be and he hereby is authorized to cause to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, for the immediate subsistence and clothing of destitute Indians and Indian tribes within the southern superintendency, and for agricultural implements and seeds for the same, a sum not exceeding five hundred thousand dollars of the unexpended balance in the Treasury of appropriations heretofore made "to enable the President of the United States to carry into effect the act of third of March, eighteen hundred and nineteen, and any other acts now in force for the suppression of the slave trade:" Provided, That the accounts of such expenditure shall be laid before Congress during its present session: And provided also, That all articles to be furnished to said destitute Indians and Indian tribes shall be delivered to them on or before the first day of July next.

APPROVED, December 21, 1865.

No. 2.—A Resolution for increasing the Bond of the Superintendent of Public Printing.

Whereas the amount of money which can be advanced to the Superintendent of Public Printing under existing law is not sufficient to enable him to meet the current expenditures of his office: Therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the said Superintendent be requested to furnish a new bond, in the penal sum of eighty thousand dollars.

APPROVED, January 12, 1866.

No. 3.—Joint Resolution in Relation to the Industrial Exposition at Paris, France.

Whereas the United States have been invited by the Government of France to take part in a universal exposition of the productions of agriculture, manufactures, and the fine arts, to be held in Paris, France, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-seven:

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That said invitation is accepted.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That the proceedings heretofore adopted by the Secretary of State in relation to the said exposition, as set forth in his report and accompanying documents concerning that subject, transmitted to both Houses of Congress with the President's message of the eleventh instant, are approved.

SEC. 3. And be it further resolved, That the general agent for the said exposition at New York be authorized to employ such clerks as may be necessary to enable him to fulfill the requirements of the regulations of the imperial commission, not to exceed four in number, one of whom shall receive compensation at the rate of eighteen hundred dollars per annum, one at sixteen hundred dollars, and two at fourteen hundred dollars.

SEC. 4. And be it further resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and is hereby, authorized and requested to prescribe such general regulations concerning the conduct of the business relating to the part to be taken by the United States in the exposition as may be proper.

APPROVED, January 15, 1866.

No. 4.—Joint Resolution granting certain public Property to the Soldiers' Orphans' Home of Iowa.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the buildings, sheds, furniture, and other property, now at camp Kinsman, near Davenport, Scott county, Iowa, be, and the same are hereby, donated to the Soldiers' Orphans' Home of Iowa.

APPROVED, January 22, 1866.

No. 5.—Joint Resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to grant the Use of a Portion of Military Reserve on St. Clair River, in the State of Michigan, for Railroad Purposes.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to grant to Guerdon O. Williams, of the city of Detroit, in the State of Michigan, and his associates, the use of so much of the military reserve on the St. Clair river, in the State of Michigan, known as the site of Fort Gratiot, as is necessary for extending a horse railroad from Port Huron city to the depot of the Port Huron and Detroit railroad, at such rental and upon such terms and conditions as to him may seem proper, reserving to the United States, however, the right of removing the rails, ties, and other parts of said road whenever the Secretary of War shall direct, without any claim or right for damages on the part of the said Williams and associates, or their legal representatives.

APPROVED, January 31, 1866.

No. 6.—A Resolution directing the Distribution of the Writings of James Madison.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Joint Committee on the Library be, and they are hereby, directed to distribute, by mail or otherwise, the five hundred copies of the Writings of James Madison, published by authority of Congress under direction of said committee, in the manner following, to wit: to the President of the United States, one copy; to the libraries of the different Departments, of the Postmaster General and Attorney General, one copy each; to each member of the present Senate and House of Representatives, one copy; to the Library of Congress, ten copies; to the libraries of the several States and Territories of the Union, one copy each; to such public and college libraries as may be designated by the present Joint Committee on the Library, one hundred copies; the residue to be retained in the Department of the Interior for future distribution.

APPROVED, February 7, 1866.

No. 7.—A Resolution extending the Time for the Completion of the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in case the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company shall complete the section of twenty miles from the present terminus of its road by the first day of December, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and the certificate of the Governor shall be filed with the Secretary of the Interior, of such completion, then the said company shall be entitled to its lands, due by reason of the completion of said section of twenty miles, as provided in section eight of the act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act making a grant of land to the State of Iowa, in alternate sections, to aid in the construction of certain railroads in said State,'" and its rights shall be in all respects the same as if the same section should have been completed on the first day of July next.

APPROVED, February 10, 1866.

No. 8.—A Resolution tendering the Thanks of Congress to Vice Admiral David G. Farragut, and to the Officers, petty Officers, Seamen, and Marines under his Command, for their Gallantry and good Conduct in the Action in Mobile Bay, on the 5th August, 1864.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the thanks of Congress are eminently due and are hereby tendered to Vice Admiral David G. Farragut, of the United States Navy, and to the officers, petty officers, seamen, and marines under his command, for the unsurpassed gallantry and skill exhibited by them in the engagement in Mobile bay, on the fifth day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and for their long and faithful services and unwavering devotion to the cause of the country in the midst of the greatest difficulties and dangers.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to communicate this resolution to Vice Admiral Farragut, and that the Secretary of the Navy be requested to communicate the same to the officers, seamen, and marines of the Navy by general order of his Department.

APPROVED, February 10, 1866.

No. 9.—A Resolution for the Payment of Expenses incurred by the Joint Committee to inquire into the Condition of the States which formed the so-called Confederate States of America.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of ten thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated to pay the expenses of the joint committee of Congress appointed to inquire into the condition of the States which formed the so-called confederate States of America; and that the said sum shall be drawn from the Treasury upon the order of the Secretary of the Senate, as the same shall be required from time to time by the committee having such investigation in charge; and any portion of the sum hereby appropriated that shall be allowed by the said joint committee to witnesses attending before it, or to persons employed in its service, for per diem, traveling, or other necessary expenses, and paid by the Secretary of the Senate in pursuance of the order of the said joint committee, shall be accordingly credited and allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department.

APPROVED, February 10, 1866.

No. 10.—Joint Resolution to encourage and facilitate Telegraphic Communication between the Western and Eastern Continents.

Whereas by an act entitled "An act to encourage and facilitate telegraphic communication between the eastern and western continents" approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, it was provided, among other things, that the Secretary of the Navy be authorized to detail a vessel to assist in surveys and soundings, laying down submarine cable, transporting materials connected therewith, and generally afford such assistance as might be deemed best calculated to secure a successful promotion of the enterprise; and whereas the Emperor of Russia, for the purpose of co-operating with the Government of the United States, under the act aforesaid, has ordered a steam corvette, the "Viarig," of two thousand one hundred and fifty-six tons burthen, seventeen guns, three hundred and six men, to assist in the achievement of said telegraph, and

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

has placed the said steamer subject to the orders of said telegraph company; and whereas said telegraph company intend, the ensuing summer, to lay the submarine cable required at Behring's strait, said cable and the material for the entire line being now in transit, and the vessels of the company, seven in number, being ready at San Francisco and Vancouver for the expedition, and require immediate coöperation on the part of the United States, in conformity with said act: Therefore,

Be it resolved in the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and is hereby, authorized and required to detail one steam vessel from the squadron of the Pacific station, or elsewhere, to assist in making surveys and soundings in that part of the Pacific coast, both of America and Asia, where it is proposed to establish said telegraph, in laying the submerged cable, and generally to afford such assistance as may be best calculated to secure the success of the enterprise and to carry out the purposes of the act approved July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act to encourage and facilitate telegraphic communication between the eastern and western continents," so far as the same can be afforded without dismantling her, or destroying or impairing her efficiency as a vessel of war.

APPROVED, February 26, 1866.

No. 11.—A Resolution providing for Expenses incurred in searching for missing Soldiers of the Army of the United States, and for the further Prosecution of the same.

Whereas Miss Clara Barton has, during the late war of the rebellion, expended from her own resources large sums of money in endeavoring to discover missing soldiers of the armies of the United States, and in communicating intelligence to their relatives: Therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of fifteen thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to reimburse Miss Clara Barton for the amount so expended by her, and to aid in the further prosecution of the search for missing soldiers; and the printing necessary in the furtherance of the said object shall hereafter be done by the Public Printer.

APPROVED, March 10, 1866.

No. 12.—Joint Resolution giving the Consent of Congress to the Transfer of the Counties of Berkeley and Jefferson to the State of West Virginia.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Congress hereby recognizes the transfer of the counties of Berkeley and Jefferson from the State of Virginia to West Virginia; and consents thereto.

APPROVED, March 10, 1866.

No. 13.—Joint Resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to transfer to the National Home for Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans, of Washington City, certain Stores not needed for the Use of the Government.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to deliver to the lady directors of the National Home for Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans, of Washington city, for the use and aid of that society in its benevolent objects, such blankets, bedding, and other furniture and articles as may be proper for their purposes, and as are now on hand in the stores of the Surgeon General's department, and no longer needed for Government account; the Secretary to determine, at his discretion, the specific amount and character of stores thus to be appropriated, and of which due account shall be taken.

APPROVED, March 10, 1866.

No. 14.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of the Sufferers by the late Explosion at the United States Arsenal, in the District of Columbia.

Whereas by the late explosion at the United States arsenal, in the District of Columbia, ten persons were killed, who were not enlisted men, but were employés of the Government in said arsenal; and whereas those who were so killed left wives and children dependent upon them for support, most of whom are now in a destitute condition: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and placed by the Secretary of the Treasury in the hands of Col. Benton, commandant of said arsenal, to be distributed by him among the sufferers by the said explosion, according to the equity and necessities of their several cases; and that the said commandant report the details of said distribution to Congress, with the vouchers therefor.

APPROVED, March 17, 1866.

No. 15.—Joint Resolution to change the Name of the Ship "Art Union" to the Name "George M. Barnard."

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and hereby is, authorized to change the name of the ship "Art Union," owned by the State of Massachusetts, and used as quarters for the nautical branch of the Reform School of said State, to the name "George M. Barnard," and to grant said ship a register in the latter name.

APPROVED, March 22, 1866.

No. 16.—Joint Resolution authorizing the Secretaries of War and Navy to place Hulks and Vessels at the Disposal of Commissioners of Quarantine, or other proper Authorities, at Ports of the United States, for one year.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy be, and they are hereby, respectively authorized, in their discretion, to place gratuitously at the disposal of the commissioners of quarantine, or the proper authorities of any of the ports of the United States, to be used by them temporarily for quarantine purposes, such vessels or hulks belonging to the United States as are not required for other uses of the national Government, subject to such restrictions and regulations as the said Secretaries may respectively deem necessary to impose for the preservation thereof: Provided, That this resolution shall continue in force one year from its passage.

APPROVED, March 24, 1866.

No. 17.—A Resolution in Relation to the Publication of the Laws of the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to renew the contract of October thirty-first, eighteen hundred and fifty, between the Department of State, and Little, Brown, and Company, of Boston, Massachusetts, for the annual publication of the Statutes-at-Large of the United States, until otherwise ordered by Congress, in conformity with the joint resolutions approved respectively March third, eighteen hundred and forty-five, and September thirtieth [twenty-sixth,] eighteen hundred and fifty: Provided, That the time within which the annual edition of the Laws is to be delivered at the Department of State be extended to seventy days after the adjournment of each session of Congress: And provided further, That the price shall not exceed the actual expenditures by Little, Brown, and Company, for composition, press-work, paper, binding, editing, and transportation, all of which shall be done at the lowest market prices, the paper to be furnished at as low a price as is paid by the Government for paper of the same quality, and five per cent commission thereon.

APPROVED, March 31, 1866.

No. 18.—Joint Resolution in Relation to the Public Lands appertaining to the Armory at Springfield.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the first section of a joint resolution approved June seventeenth, eighteen hundred and forty-four, entitled "A resolution relating to the public lands appertaining to the armories at Springfield and Harper's Ferry," is hereby revived, reenacted, and continued in force.

APPROVED, April 4, 1866.

No. 19.—A Resolution for the Restoration of Commanders William Reynolds and Melancton B. Woolsey, United States Navy, to the Active List from the Reserved List.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States of America be authorized to nominate and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint Commanders William Reynolds and Melancton B. Woolsey to the active list of the Navy.

APPROVED, April 5, 1866.

No. 20.—Joint Resolution giving Construction to the Law in relation to Bounties payable to Soldiers discharged for Wounds.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the true intent and meaning of the words "or in the line of duty," used in the fourth section of the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, entitled "An act to amend the several acts heretofore passed to provide for the enrolling and calling out the national forces, and for other purposes," requires that the benefit of the provision of said section shall be extended to any enlisted man or other person entitled by law to bounty who has been or may be discharged by reason of a wound received while actually in service under military orders, not at the time on furlough or leave of absence, nor engaged in any unlawful or unauthorized act or pursuit.

APPROVED, April 12, 1866.

No. 21.—A Resolution respecting the Burial of Soldiers who died in the military Service of the United States during the Rebellion.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to take immediate measures to preserve from desecration the graves of the soldiers of the United States who fell in battle or died of disease in the field and in hospital during the war of the rebellion; to secure suitable burial-places in which they may be properly interred; and to have the grounds inclosed, so that the resting-places of the honored dead may be kept sacred forever.

APPROVED, April 13, 1866.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

No. 24.—A Resolution protesting against Pardons by Foreign Governments of Persons convicted of infamous Offenses, on Condition of Emigration to the United States.

Whereas it appears from official correspondence that the authorities of Basleland, a canton in Switzerland, have recently undertaken to pardon a person convicted of murder on the condition that he would emigrate to America, meaning thereby the United States; and there is reason to believe that similar pardons of persons convicted of infamous offenses have been granted in other countries: Now, therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Congress of the United States protest against such acts as unfriendly and inconsistent with the comity of nations, and hereby requests the President of the United States to cause a copy of this protest to be communicated to the representatives of the United States in foreign countries, with instructions to present it to the Governments where they are accredited respectively, and to insist that no such acts shall, under any circumstances, be repeated.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

No. 25.—A Resolution for the temporary Relief of destitute People in the District of Columbia.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the temporary relief of the destitute population in the District of Columbia, to be expended under the direction of the Commissioner of Freedmen's Bureau.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

No. 26.—Joint Resolution appointing Managers for the National Asylum for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following persons be, and they are hereby, appointed managers of the National Asylum for disabled volunteer soldiers, under the provisions and conditions of the third section of the act approved March twenty-three, [one] eighteen hundred and sixty-six: Richard J. Oglesby, of Illinois, Benjamin F. Butler, of Massachusetts, and Frederick Smyth, of New Hampshire, of the first class, to serve six years; Lewis B. Gunkel, of Ohio, Jay Cook, of Pennsylvania, and P. Joseph Osterhaus, of Missouri, of the second class, to serve four years; John H. Martindale, of New York, Horatio G. Stebbins, of California, and George H. Walker, of Wisconsin, of the third class, to serve two years.

APPROVED, April 21, 1866.

No. 27.—Joint Resolution expressive of the Thanks of Congress to Major General Winfield S. Hancock.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, in addition to the thanks heretofore voted by joint resolution, approved January twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to Major General George G. Meade, Major General Oliver O. Howard, and to the officers and soldiers of the army of the Potomac, for the skill and heroic valor which at Gettysburg repulsed, defeated, and drove back broken and dispirited the veteran army of the rebellion, the gratitude of the American people and the thanks of their representatives in Congress are likewise due, and are hereby tendered, to Major General Winfield S. Hancock, for his gallant, meritorious, and conspicuous share in that great and decisive victory.

APPROVED, April 21, 1866.

No. 29.—A Resolution for the Transfer of Funds appropriated for the Payment of Salaries in the Post Office Department to the General Salary Account of that Department.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the unexpended balance on the books of the Treasury Department, from the respective sums of money appropriated by different acts of Congress, for the salaries of Postmaster General, Assistant Postmaster General, clerks, temporary clerks, additional clerks, messengers, watchmen, laborers, and superintendent and clerks of the money-order system, including the amounts appropriated for the payment of twenty per centum increase of certain salaries, (all of the same being appropriations made by Congress for the Post Office Department,) may be transferred on the books of the Treasury Department, from the respective headings under which they are now placed, to the credit of the Post Office Department, to the general salary account of funds placed to the credit of the Post Office Department: Provided, That this joint resolution shall not be construed to increase the appropriations already made for the service of the Post Office Department.

APPROVED, April 25, 1866.

No. 31.—A Resolution making Appropriations for the Expenses of collecting the Revenue from Customs.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and hereby is, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of two millions one hundred thousand dollars for the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs for each half year from and after the last day of December, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and in addition thereto such sums as may be received during said half year from fines, penalties, and forfeitures connected with the customs, and from storage, cartage, drayage, and labor; and the first section of an "Act making appropriations for the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs," approved June fourteen, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, be, and the same is, hereby repealed.

APPROVED, May 3, 1866.

No. 32.—A Resolution expressive of the Gratitude of the Nation to the Officers, Soldiers, and Seamen of the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it is the duty and the privilege of Congress to express the gratitude of the nation to the officers, soldiers, and seamen of the United States, by whose valor and endurance, on the land and on the sea, the rebellion has been crushed and its pride and its power have been humbled, by whose fidelity to the cause of freedom the Government of the people has been preserved and maintained, and by whose orderly return from the fire and blood of civil war to the peaceful pursuits of private life the exalting and ennobling influence of free institutions upon a nation has been so signally manifested to the world.

APPROVED, May 3, 1866.

No. 34.—A Resolution extending the Time for the Completion of the Union Pacific Railway. Eastern Division.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the time for the completion of the first one hundred miles of railroad and telegraph line by the Leavenworth, Pawnee, and Western Railroad Company, (since called the "Union Pacific Railway Company, eastern division,") mentioned in the tenth section of the charter of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, of July first, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two, and in the fifth section of the amendment thereof, of July second, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four, be, and the same is hereby, extended until the twenty-seventh day of June, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six; and that the time for completing each succeeding section of one hundred miles shall be reckoned from the said twenty-seventh day of June in said year.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That the time for commencing and completing the Northern Pacific railroad, and all its several sections, is extended for the term of two years.

APPROVED, May 7, 1866.

No. 35.—Joint Resolution to provide for the Exemption of crude Petroleum from Internal Tax or Duty, and for other purposes.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That paraffine oil, not exceeding in specific gravity thirty-six degrees Baumé's hydrometer, the product of a residuum of distillation; crude petroleum; and crude oil, the product of the first and single distillation of coal, shale, asphaltum, peat, or other bituminous substances, shall, from and after the passage of this joint resolution, be exempt from internal tax or duty.

APPROVED, May 9, 1866.

No. 37.—Joint Resolution relative to the attempted Assassination of the Emperor of Russia.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Congress of the United States of America has learned with deep regret of the attempt made upon the life of the Emperor of Russia, by an enemy of emancipation. The Congress sends greeting to his Imperial Majesty, and to the Russian nation, and congratulates the twenty millions of serfs upon the providential escape from danger of the sovereign, to whose head and heart they owe the blessings of their freedom.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to forward a copy of this resolution to the Emperor of Russia.

APPROVED, May 16, 1866.

No. 38.—Joint Resolution relative to the Courts and Post Office of New York City.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the mayor and postmaster of the city of New York, the district attorney for the United States at New York city, the president of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, and Jackson S. Shultz, Charles H. Russell, and Moses Taylor, of New York city, be appointed a commission to select a proper site for a building for a post office and for the accommodation of the United States courts in the city of New York; and that they report to the Postmaster General and the Secretary of the Interior, at their earliest convenience, the selection upon which they, or a majority of them, may agree, and the price at which such site can be purchased by the Government for the purposes contemplated in this resolution, if a new site should be selected; and that if said report shall meet the approbation of the Postmaster General and the Secretary of the Interior, they shall communicate the same, with such additional suggestions as they may think proper, to Congress.

APPROVED, May 16, 1866.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

No. 39.—A Resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to grant the Use of certain Lumber for the Fair for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphan Home.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to grant the use of lumber not demanded by the Department for immediate use, for the erection of temporary buildings in the city of Washington for the National Fair for the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphan Home.

APPROVED, May 16, 1866.

No. 40.—A Resolution to extend the Time for the Construction of the first Section of the Western Pacific Railroad.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the time for the construction of the first twenty miles of the "Western Pacific railroad" be extended to the first day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven; but this extension is upon the condition to be accepted by said company, and notice of such acceptance to be given by them to the Secretary of the Interior, that the lands known as the lands of the ex-mission of San Jose as included in the map and survey thereof made October, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, by E. H. Dyer, deputy United States surveyor, shall not be included in the grant heretofore made to the said Western Pacific Railroad Company.

APPROVED, May 21, 1866.

No. 41.—A Resolution to authorize certain Medals to be distributed to Veteran Soldiers free of Postage.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the adjutant general of the State of Ohio is hereby authorized to distribute through the mails free of postage, to veteran soldiers reenlisted in Ohio, certain medals furnished by the General Assembly of that State, and in such case the envelope inclosing the same shall be franked by such adjutant general in the mode prescribed by the Postmaster General.

APPROVED, May 26, 1866.

No. 42.—Joint Resolution respecting Quarantine and Health Laws.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized to make and carry into effect such orders and regulations of quarantine, as, in his opinion, may be deemed necessary and proper, in aid of State or municipal authorities, to guard against the introduction of the cholera into the ports of the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is further authorized to direct the revenue officers and the officers commanding revenue-cutters to aid in the execution of such quarantine, and also in the execution of the health laws of the States respectively in such manner as may to him seem necessary. And such an amount of money as may be necessary to carry into effect this joint resolution is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; provided the authority hereby granted shall expire on the first Monday in January, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

APPROVED, May 26, 1866.

No. 43.—A Resolution providing for the Acceptance of a Collection of Plants tendered to the United States by Frederick Pech.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the United States accept the collection of plants tendered by Frederick Pech by his memorial of March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and that the same be deposited in the Department of Agriculture; and the sum of three hundred dollars is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to enable the Commissioner of Agriculture to procure suitable cases for the protection of such plants.

APPROVED, May 26, 1866.

No. 44.—A Resolution authorizing the Appointment of Examiners to examine a Site for a Fresh-Water Basin for Iron-Clad Vessels of the United States Navy.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Navy be authorized and directed to appoint a board of examiners to examine a site at or near Portland, Maine, for a fresh-water basin for iron-clad vessels of the United States Navy, and to ascertain the advantages and cost of said site, and report to this Congress during the present session.

APPROVED, June 1, 1866.

No. 45.—Joint Resolution authorizing [the] Postmaster General to pay additional Salary to Letter-Carriers in San Francisco.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Postmaster General be authorized to pay such additional salary to letter-carriers in San Francisco, above that provided by law, as may be necessary to secure competent persons for such service.

APPROVED, June 6, 1866.

No. 46.—A Resolution respecting Bounties to Colored Soldiers, and the Pensions, Bounties, and Allowances to their Heirs.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the omission in the muster-rolls of the words "free on or before April nineteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-one," shall not deprive any colored soldier of the bounty to which he is entitled, and which is now or may hereafter be withheld by reason of such omission, but where nothing appears on the muster-roll or of record to show that a colored soldier was not a freeman at the date aforesaid, under the provision of the fourth section of the "Act making appropriations for the support of the Army, for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-five," the presumption shall be that the person was free at the time of his enlistment.

Sec. 2. And be it further resolved, That in determining who is or was the wife, widow, or heirs of any colored soldier, evidence that he and the woman claimed to be his wife or widow were joined in marriage by some ceremony deemed by them obligatory, followed by their living together as husband and wife up to the time of enlistment, shall be deemed sufficient proof of such marriage for the purpose of securing any arrears of pay, pension or other allowances due any colored soldier at the time of his death; and the children born of any such marriage shall be held and taken to be the lawful children and heirs of such soldiers.

APPROVED, June 15, 1866.

No. 47.—A Resolution making an Appropriation to enable the President to negotiate Treaties with certain Indian Tribes.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That one hundred and twenty-one thousand seven hundred and eighty-five dollars and seventy-seven cents, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to enable the President to negotiate treaties with the Indian tribes of the Upper Missouri, and the Upper Platte rivers; said sum to be expended by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior.

APPROVED, June 15, 1866.

No. 48.—Joint Resolution proposing an Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, (two thirds of both Houses concurring,) That the following article be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by three fourths of said Legislatures, shall be valid as part of the Constitution; namely:

ARTICLE XIV.

SEC. 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

SEC. 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

SEC. 3. No person shall be a Senator, or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by a vote of two thirds of each House, remove such disability.

SEC. 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations, and claims, shall be held illegal and void.

SEC. 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

SCHUYLER COLFAX,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

LA FAYETTE S. FOSTER,

President of the Senate pro tempore.

Attest:

EDW. MCPHERSON,

Clerk of the House of Representatives.

J. W. FORNEY,

Secretary of the Senate.

Received at Department of State June 16, 1866.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

No. 49.—Joint Resolution relative to Appointments to the Military Academy of the United States.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the age for the admission of cadets to the United States Military Academy shall hereafter be between seventeen and twenty-two years; but any person who has served honorably and faithfully not less than one year as an officer or enlisted man in the Army of the United States, either as a volunteer or in the regular service, in the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, and who possesses the other qualifications prescribed by law, shall be eligible to appointment up to the age of twenty-four years.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That cadets at the Military Academy shall hereafter be appointed one year in advance of the time of their admission, except in cases where, by reason of death or other cause, a vacancy occurs which cannot be thus provided for by such appointment in advance; but no pay or allowance shall be made to any such appointee until he shall be regularly admitted on examination as now provided by law; nor shall this provision apply to appointments to be made in the present year. And in addition to the requirements necessary for admission as provided by the third section of the "Act making further provisions for the corps of engineers," approved April twenty-nine, eighteen hundred and twelve, candidates shall be required to have a knowledge of the elements of English grammar, of descriptive geography, particularly of our own country, and of the history of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further resolved, That, in all appointments of cadets to the Military Academy after those who enter the present year, the person authorized to nominate shall nominate not less than five candidates for each vacancy, all of whom shall be actual residents of the congressional district, Territory, or District of Columbia, entitled to the appointment: and the selection of one shall be made from the candidates according to their respective merits and qualifications, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of War shall from time to time prescribe. And in like manner the President of the United States shall be authorized hereafter to nominate fifty at large each year, instead of ten as now provided by law, who shall be examined under like regulations, and of whom the ten who may be reported as most meritorious and best qualified shall be appointed: Provided, however, That not more than two of these shall be appointed in any year from one State.

APPROVED, June 16, 1866.

No. 50.—Joint Resolution to extend to the Counties of Berkeley and Jefferson, of West Virginia, the Provisions of the Act approved July fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An Act to restrict the Jurisdiction of the Court of Claims, and to provide for the Payment of certain Demands for Quartermasters' Stores and Subsistence Supplies furnished to the Army of the United States."

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of the act of Congress of July fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act to restrict the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims, and for other purposes," be and the same are hereby construed to extend to the counties of Berkeley and Jefferson, of the State of West Virginia.

APPROVED, June 18, 1866.

No. 51.—Joint Resolution making an Appropriation for the Repair of the Potomac Bridge.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of ten thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to enable the Commissioner of Public Buildings to place the Potomac bridge in such repair as to render it permanently passable, the work to be done immediately after the approval of this joint resolution.

APPROVED, June 18, 1866.

No. 52.—A Resolution to provide for the Payment of Bounty to certain Indian Regiments.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to cause to be paid to the enlisted men of the first, second, and third Indian regiments the bounty of one hundred dollars, under the same regulations and restrictions as now determine the payment of bounty to other volunteers in the service of the United States.

APPROVED, June 18, 1866.

No. 53.—A Resolution explanatory of, and in addition to, the Act of May fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An Act granting Lands to aid in the Construction of certain Railroads in Wisconsin."

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the words "in a northwestern direction," in the third section of the act entitled "An act granting lands to aid in the construction of certain railroads in the State of Wisconsin," approved May fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, shall, without forfeiture to said State, or its assigns, of any rights or benefits under said act, or exemption from any of the conditions or obligations imposed thereby, be construed to authorize the location of the line of said road, in said third section provided for, along and upon the following route, that is to say: from the city of Portage, by the way of the city of Ripon, in the county of Fond du Lac, and the city of Berlin, in the county of Green Lake, to Steven's Point, and thence to Bayfield, and thence to Superior, on Lake Superior. And the Legislature of the said State of Wisconsin, having, in and by an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Portage and Superior Railroad Company, and to execute the trust created by section three of the act of Congress entitled 'An [act] granting lands to aid in the construction of certain railroads in the State of Wisconsin,' approved May fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four," approved April —, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, authorized and required the said Portage and Superior Railroad Company to construct the line of road in the said third section of the said act of Congress provided for, upon and along the route hereinbefore set forth and described, the Congress of the United States hereby gives its assent to the route of the said railroad, as the same is hereinbefore described and set forth, and consents to the selection and application of the lands granted to the State of Wisconsin by the third section of the said act of Congress hereinbefore mentioned, for and to the line of the said railroad, as the same is hereinbefore defined and described, in the same manner and with the same effect as if the said railroad was located and constructed in strict conformity with and upon the route prescribed in the said third section of the said act of Congress. It being the intention of this resolution to give the assent of the United States to the disposition made by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin of the land grant herein referred to, and the change of route for the railroad in aid of which the same is granted, and not to make any other disposition, change, or alteration of the grant aforesaid.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

No. 55.—A Resolution for the Restoration of Lieutenant Commander Richard L. Law, United States Navy, to the Active List from the Reserved List.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be authorized to nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint, Lieutenant Commander Richard L. Law to the active list of the Navy, and restore him to his original rank in the grade of lieutenant commander.

APPROVED, June 22, 1866.

No. 57.—Joint Resolution to authorize the Distribution of surplus Copies of the American State Papers in the Custody of the Secretary of the Interior.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to distribute by mail or otherwise four hundred copies of the American State Papers, second series, in seventeen volumes, in the manner following, to wit:

To each member of the Senate and House of Representatives of the present Congress, one copy of each of said seventeen volumes; and to such public and college libraries as may be designated by the Joint Committee on the Library, one copy each.

APPROVED, June 23, 1866.

No. 58.—Joint Resolution to pay the State of Vermont the Sum expended for the Protection of the Frontier against the Invasion from Canada, in eighteen hundred and sixty-four.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and hereby is, authorized to pay the State of Vermont any sum that may be found due, after the same shall have been audited by the proper officers of the Treasury Department, expended by the State of Vermont for the defense and protection of the frontier from invasion from Canada, in eighteen hundred and sixty-four: Provided, That the amount to be audited and paid shall not exceed the sum of sixteen thousand four hundred and sixty-three dollars and eighty-one cents.

APPROVED, June 23, 1866.

No. 62.—A Resolution for the Construction of a Railroad Bridge across the Cuyahoga River, over and upon the Government Piers at Cleveland, Ohio.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to permit the Cleveland and Toledo Railroad Company and the Cleveland and Pittsburgh Railroad Company jointly, or either of said companies for their joint use or separate use, to erect a swing bridge over and upon the Government piers, for the passage of cars across the Cuyahoga river, at the city of Cleveland, in the State of Ohio, upon such plan as shall hereafter be approved by the City Council of said city of Cleveland and by the Board of Trade of the same city, subject, however, to such conditions, restrictions, and limitations as said Secretary of War may see fit to impose at any period of time, whether prior or subsequent to the erection of said bridge: Provided, [That] this resolution and all acts done under it shall be subject to the future action of Congress.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

No. 63.—A Resolution to authorize the Hiring of a Building or Buildings for the Temporary Accommodation of the Department of State.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of State

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

be authorized to hire a suitable building or buildings for the temporary accommodation of the Department of State, and that such sum of money, not exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars, as may be necessary towards defraying the expense of such hiring, the transfer of the public archives, and the fitting up of the building or buildings, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

No. 66.—Joint Resolution to enable the People of the United States to participate in the Advantages of the Universal Exhibition at Paris, in eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, in order to enable the people of the United States to participate in the advantages of the universal exhibition of the productions of agriculture, manufactures, and the fine arts, to be held at Paris, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, the following sums, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purposes severally specified, are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated:

First. To provide necessary furniture and fixtures for the proper exhibition of the productions of the United States, according to the plan of the Imperial Commissioners, in that part of the building exclusively assigned to the use of the United States, forty-eight thousand dollars.

Secondly. To provide additional accommodations in the park, twenty-five thousand dollars.

Thirdly. For the compensation of the principal agent of the Exhibition in the United States, at the rate of two thousand dollars a year: Provided, That the period of such service shall not extend beyond sixty days after the close of the Exhibition, four thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be found necessary.

Fourthly. For office rent at New York, for fixtures, stationery, and advertising; for rent of store-house for reception of articles and products; for expenses of shipping, including cartages, &c.; for freights on the articles to be exhibited from New York to France, and for compensation of four clerks, in conformity with the joint resolution approved on the fifteenth of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and for contingent expenses, the sum of thirty-three thousand seven hundred dollars, or so much thereof as may be found necessary.

Fifthly. For expenses in receiving, bonding, storage, cartage, labor, and so forth, at Havre; for railway transportation from Havre to Paris; for labor in the palace; for sweeping and sprinkling compartments for seven months; for guards, and keepers for seven months; for linguists (eight men) for seven months; for storing, packing-boxes, carting, and for material for packing; for clerk hire, stationery, rent, and contingent expenses, the sum of thirty-five thousand seven hundred and three dollars, or so much thereof as may be found necessary.

Sixthly. For the traveling expenses of ten professional and scientific commissioners, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, at the rate of one thousand dollars each, ten thousand dollars, it being understood that the President may appoint additional commissioners, not exceeding twenty in number, whose expenses shall not be paid; but no person interested, directly or indirectly, in any article exhibited shall be a commissioner; nor shall any member of Congress, or any person holding an appointment or office of honor or trust under the United States be appointed a commissioner, agent, or officer under this resolution.

Sec. 2. And be it further resolved, That the Governors of the several States be, and they are hereby, requested to invite the patriotic people of their respective States to assist in the proper representation of the handiwork of our artisans, and the prolific sources of material wealth with which our land is blessed, and to take such further measures as may be necessary to diffuse a knowledge of the proposed exhibition, and to secure to their respective States the advantages which it promises.

SEC. 3. And be it further resolved, That it shall be the duty of the said general agent at New York, and the said commissioner general at Paris, to transmit to Congress, through the Department of State, a detailed statement of the manner in which such expenditures as are hereinbefore provide[d] for are made by them respectively.

APPROVED, July 5, 1866.

No. 67.—Joint Resolution declaratory of the Law of Bounty.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That where any enlisted man has been or may be detailed for duty as a clerk or for any other duty in any executive bureau, at headquarters or elsewhere, he shall not by such detail be deprived of any rights to bounties now due or hereafter to become due, but shall be as fully entitled thereto as though no such detail had been made.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

No. 69.—A Resolution to authorize the President to place at the Disposal of the Authorities of Portland, Maine, Tents, Camp, and Hospital Furniture and Clothing, for the Use of Families rendered houseless by the late Fire.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States is hereby authorized to place at the disposal, without charge, of the city authorities of Portland, Maine, such clothing, condemned or ordered sold, and such surplus camp and garrison equipage, bedding, and hospital furniture, on hand, as can be spared by the Army, for the use of families rendered houseless and destitute by the recent conflagration; and that it shall be the duty of the quartermaster's department to deliver these articles at Portland, and to take a receipt for the same of the mayor of the said city, and to receive and properly dispose of the same when no longer needed.

APPROVED, July 14, 1866.

No. 73.—Joint Resolution restoring Tennessee to her Relations to the Union.

Whereas, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-one, the government of the State of Tennessee was seized upon and taken possession of by persons in hostility to the United States, and the inhabitants of said State in pursuance of an act of Congress were declared to be in a state of insurrection against the United States; and whereas said State government can only be restored to its former political relations in the Union by the consent of the law-making power of the United States; and whereas the people of said State did, on the twenty-second day of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, by a large popular vote, adopt and ratify a constitution of government whereby slavery was abolished, and all ordinances and laws of secession and debts contracted under the same were declared void; and whereas a State government has been organized under said constitution which has ratified the amendment to the Constitution of the United States abolishing slavery, also the amendment proposed by the Thirty-Ninth Congress, and has done other acts proclaiming and denoting loyalty: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the State of Tennessee is hereby restored to her former proper, practical relations to the Union, and is again entitled to be represented by Senators and Representatives in Congress.

APPROVED, July 24, 1866.

No. 74.—Joint Resolution in regard to Rations of Union Soldiers held as Prisoners of War.

Whereas, by general order of the War Department of February fourteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, rations to Union soldiers held as prisoners of war in the rebel States, were commuted at a cost price during the period of their imprisonment; and whereas a large number of the said prisoners have been paid under said order, but many equally worthy with them and who have suffered in rebel prisons, have not been so paid: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all United States soldiers, sailors, and marines who were held as prisoners of war in the rebel States, shall be paid commutation of rations at cost prices during the period of their imprisonment: Provided, That no person who has sold or transferred any interest in the claim for said commutation, nor any purchaser or assignee of such claim or interest, shall be benefited by this resolution; and the amount of such commutation shall be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

No. 75.—Joint Resolution in reference to the Dismal Swamp Canal Company.

Whereas the United States are interested in the Dismal Swamp canal, connecting the inland waters of the Chesapeake with the sounds of North Carolina, by holding eight hundred shares of the stock of the Dismal Swamp Canal Company; and whereas the canal should be kept open as a navigable highway without further outlay on the part of the United States: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and hereby is, authorized to sell said stock at auction, or otherwise, in such manner as will best protect the interest of the United States in said canal, and will insure that the same will be kept open as such navigable highway, without further expense to the Government: Provided, That the instruments and papers effecting such sale, in the manner aforesaid, shall be approved by the Attorney General before the delivery thereof.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

No. 76.—Joint Resolution authorizing the Commissioner of Public Buildings to employ three additional Watchmen in the Smithsonian Grounds.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Commissioner of Public Buildings and Grounds be, and the same is hereby, authorized to employ three additional watchmen for the Smithsonian grounds.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

No. 77.—A Resolution to authorize the Purchase for the Library of Congress of the Law Library of James L. Petigru, of South Carolina.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Joint Committee on the Library be, and they are hereby, authorized to purchase the law library belonging to the estate of the late James Louis Petigru, for the use of the Library of Congress; and the sum of five thousand dollars is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to carry into effect the purpose of this resolution, to be paid only to the use of the widow of the said Petigru.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG...1ST SESS.

APPROVED July 25, 1866.

No. 79.—A Resolution manifesting the Sense of Congress towards the Officers and Seamen of the Vessels, and others, engaged in the Rescue of the Officers and Soldiers of the Army, the Passengers, and the Officers and Crew of the Steamship San Francisco, from perishing with the Wreck of that Vessel.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be requested to procure three valuable gold medals, with suitable devices, one to be presented to Captain Creighton, of the ship Three Bells, of Glasgow; one to Captain Low, of the bark Kilby, of Boston; and one to Captain Stouffer, of the ship Antarc[c]tic, as testimonials of national gratitude for their gallant conduct in rescuing about five hundred Americans from the wreck of the steamship San Francisco; and that the cost of the same be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That the sum of seven thousand five hundred dollars each is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the above-named captains respectively, as a reward of their humanity and heroism in the rescue of the survivors of said wreck, and in case either of the said captains may have died, then the amount hereby appropriated shall be paid to the widow of said deceased captain respectively; if no widow surviving then to the respective child or children of such deceased captain; and in the event of their being no child or children of such deceased captain surviving, then the amount hereby appropriated shall be paid first to the father, or, if the father be not living, then to the mother of such deceased captain respectively.

SEC. 3. And be it further resolved, That there shall be paid to each mate of the three above-named vessels the sum of five hundred dollars, and to each man and boy the sum of one hundred dollars, and in case of the death of the respective mate or mates, or men and boys, that the said respective sums shall be paid in the same way and under the same conditions as the payment is to be made in case of the death of the respective captains.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

No. 80.—A Resolution to authorize the Use of certain Plates of the United States Exploring Expedition by the Navy Department.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Joint Committee on the Library be authorized and instructed to grant to the Navy Department the use of such of the engraved plates of the United States exploring expedition under Captain Wilkes, now in charge of said committee, as may be desired for the purpose of printing a supply of charts for the use of said Department.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

No. 81.—A Resolution for the Benefit of the Illinois Soldiers' College and Military Academy.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be authorized to transfer to the Illinois Soldiers' College and Military Academy, from the surplus on hand and not needed for the public service, coats and bedding necessary to accommodate five hundred persons for the use of free students in said institution disabled by the war.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

No. 82.—A Resolution authorizing the Payment of certain Claims against the late Territory of Nevada.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to settle and pay outstanding claims duly examined and allowed, and properly chargeable to the contingent expenses of the executive department of the Territory of Nevada, so much of the unexpended balance of the appropriation for "compensation and mileage of members of the Legislative Assembly, &c., of the Territory of Nevada," as may be found necessary for that purpose, be, and the same is hereby, transferred to the credit of the fund for paying the contingent expenses of the executive department of that Territory, and that the proper accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby authorized and directed, out of the said balance, hereby directed to be transferred, to pay the claims so adjusted and allowed.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

No. 83.—A Resolution to provide for codifying the Laws relating to the Customs.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be prepared and submitted to Congress at its next session, under the direction of one member of the Senate and one member of the House of Representatives, each to be appointed by the Presiding Officer of the body to which he belongs, a general customs revenue law, designed to supersede all other laws on that subject, and embracing all necessary provisions for regulating the foreign and coasting trades, the assessment and collection of duties on goods, wares, and merchandise imported from foreign countries, and other subject-matters immediately pertaining thereto; the expenses necessarily incurred in the preparation thereof to be paid from the appropriation for the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs: Provided, That the said expenses shall not exceed ten thousand dollars.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

No. 84.—A Resolution providing for the Examination of the Accounts of the State of Massachusetts for Moneys expended during the War for Coast Defense.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and requested to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, two commissioners who shall examine into the claim of the State of Massachusetts for moneys expended for coast defense during the war, and shall make a full and complete report thereon to Congress at its next session.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

No. 85.—A Resolution granting the Right of Way through Military Reserves to the Union Pacific Railroad Company and its Branches.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, subject to approval by the President, the right of way, one hundred feet in width, is hereby granted to the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the companies constructing the branch roads connecting therewith, for the construction and operation of their roads over and upon all military reserves through which the same may pass; and the President is hereby authorized to set apart to the Union Pacific Railway Company, eastern division, twenty acres of the Fort Riley military reservation, for depot and other purposes, in the bottom opposite "Riley City;" also fractional section "one" on the west side of said reservation, near Junction City, for the same purposes; and also to restore, from time to time, to the public domain, any portion of said military reserve over which the Union Pacific railroad, or any of its branches, may pass, and which shall not be required for military purposes: Provided, That the President shall not permit the location of any such railroad or the diminution of any such reserve in any manner so as to impair its usefulness for military purposes, so long as it shall be required therefor.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

No. 86.—Joint Resolution amendatory of a Joint Resolution entitled "A Resolution respecting Bounties to Colored Soldiers, and the Pensions, Bounties, and Allowances to their Heirs," approved June 15, 1866.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the words "at the time of his enlistment," at the end of section one of the "resolution respecting bounties to colored soldiers; and the pensions, bounties, and allowances to their heirs," approved June fifteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, be, and the same are hereby, stricken out.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That whenever application shall be made by any claimant for bounty under the provisions of the joint resolution aforesaid, by or through any agent or attorney, such agent or attorney shall hereafter be required to file with each claim his oath or affirmation that he has no interest whatever in said bounty beyond the fees for collection of the same, which are hereby fixed and established as follows, viz: for the preparation and prosecution of claims for, and the collection and remittance of, all sums not exceeding fifty dollars, the sum of five dollars; for all sums exceeding fifty and less than one hundred dollars, the sum of seven dollars and fifty cents; and for all sums exceeding one hundred dollars, the sum of ten dollars; and said fees shall include all expenses incident to the collection of said claims, except the expense of the necessary affidavits and notarial or other acknowledgments, which shall be defrayed by the claimant; and any agent or attorney who shall charge, directly or indirectly, in any case, a greater sum for his services in preparing and prosecuting said claims and collecting and remitting the amount due, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, be punished by fine not exceeding three thousand nor less than one thousand dollars, and shall be forever excluded from prosecuting military or naval claims against the Government.

SEC. 3. And be it further resolved, That in case the payments shall be made in the form of a check, order, or draft upon any paymaster, national bank, or Government depository, it shall be necessary for the claimant to establish, by the affidavits of two credible witnesses, that he is the identical person named therein; but in no case shall such checks, orders, or drafts be made negotiable until after such identification.

SEC. 4. And be it further resolved, That it shall not be lawful for any soldier to transfer, assign, barter, or sell his discharge, for the purpose of transferring, assigning, bartering, or selling any interest in any bounty under the provisions of said resolution; and all such transfers, assignments, barters, or sales heretofore made are hereby declared null and void as to any rights intended so to be conveyed by any such soldier.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

No. 87.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of certain Officers of the Army.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in every case in which a commissioned officer actually entered on duty

39TH CONG... 1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

as such commissioned officer, but by reason of being killed in battle, captured by the enemy, or other cause beyond his control, and without fault or neglect of his own, was not mustered within a period of not less than thirty days, the pay department shall allow to such officer full pay and emoluments of his rank from the date on which such officer actually entered on such duty as aforesaid, deducting from the amount paid in accordance with this resolution all pay actually received by such officer for such period.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That the heirs or legal representatives of any officer whose muster into service has been or shall be amended hereby, shall be entitled to receive the arrears of pay due such officer or the pension provided by law for the grade into which such officer is mustered under the provisions of the first section of this resolution.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

No. 90.—A Resolution to change the Place of holding the Terms of the Circuit Court for the District of West Virginia.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the terms of the circuit court for the district of West Virginia, heretofore held at Lewisburg, in the county of Greenbrier, shall be hereafter held at the city of Parkersburg, at the time now fixed by law.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

No. 91.—A Resolution to provide for the Publication of the Official History of the Rebellion.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the joint resolution entitled "A resolution to provide for the printing of official reports of the armies of the United States," approved May nineteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to appoint a competent person to arrange and prepare for publication the official documents relating to the rebellion and the operations of the Army of the United States, who shall prepare a plan for said publication and estimates of the cost thereof, to be submitted to Congress at its next session.

SEC. 3. And be it further resolved, That the person whose appointment is hereby authorized shall receive a compensation for his services not to exceed two thousand five hundred dollars per annum, to be paid monthly by the Secretary by [of] the Treasury, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That said compensation shall not be paid for a longer period than two years from and after the passage of this resolution.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

No. 92.—A Resolution for the temporary Relief of the Sufferers by the late Fire in Portland, in the State of Maine.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is hereby authorized to suspend the collection of such taxes as may have been assessed, or as may have accrued prior to the fifth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, in the first collection district of the State of Maine, against any person residing or doing business and owning property in that portion of the city of Portland recently destroyed by fire, and who, in the opinion of said Commissioner, has suffered material loss by such fire: Provided, That such suspension shall not be continued after the close of the next session of Congress.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

No. 93.—Joint Resolution to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to furnish to each State one Set of the Standard Weights and Measures of the Metric System.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to furnish to each State, to be delivered to the Governor thereof, one set of the standard weights and measures of the metric system for the use of the States respectively.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

No. 96.—Joint Resolution in relation to the Use of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphan Fair Building, in Washington.

Whereas the House has been informed that certain peaceable and law-abiding citizens, while assembled at and within the building recently erected in this city for the benefit of orphans of deceased soldiers and sailors of the United States, situate on the corner of Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue, have been illegally and improperly dispersed by the mayor of this city, for the alleged reason that they belonged to a Fenian organization, and thus prevented from exercising their rights and privileges as citizens of the United States: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That said citizens are hereby authorized, whenever permitted so to do by the Speaker of this House, or the President of the Senate, to use and to occupy said building for the purpose of holding meetings for any proper and lawful purpose, and particularly in reference to the liberation of Ireland.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 97.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of certain Chippewa, Ottawa, and Pottawatomie Indians.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the Chippewa, Ottawa, and Pottawatomie Indians of Michigan, in pursuance of an agreement and compromise made with the Pottawatomie nation of Indians so named and designated by the treaty of eighteen hundred and forty-six, with the United States, the sum of thirty-nine thousand dollars, in full of all claims in favor of said Michigan Indians either against the United States or said nation of Indians, past, present, or future, arising out of any treaty made with them or any band or confederation thereof, and the annuity now paid to them is to be restored, and paid to said nation for the future. Said sum of thirty-nine thousand dollars is to be paid out of funds of said Indians, by the United States now held in trust for said nation, drawing interest at the rate of five per cent, which amount is hereby appropriated, said payment to be made per capita direct to heads of families, adults, and guardians of minors, as is now required by law in reference to annuities, by the proper agent of the Government.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 98.—Joint Resolution authorizing a Contract with Vinnie Ream for a Statue of Abraham Lincoln.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to contract with Miss Vinnie Ream for a life-size model and a statue of the late President Abraham Lincoln, to be executed by her at a price not exceeding ten thousand dollars; one half payable on completion of the model in plaster, and the remaining half on completion of the statue in marble to his acceptance.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 99.—Joint Resolution to extend the Provisions of the Act of July fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, limiting the Jurisdiction of the Court of Claims to the loyal Citizens of Tennessee.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of the act of the fourth of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act to limit the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims," is hereby extended to the loyal citizens of the State of Tennessee.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 100.—Joint Resolution authorizing the Transmission through the Mails, free of Postage, of certain Certificates, by the Adjutant General of New Jersey.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the adjutant general of New Jersey be authorized to transmit through the mails, free of postage, certain certificates of thanks awarded by the Legislature to the soldiers of that State, under such regulations as the Postmaster General may direct.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 101.—Joint Resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to settle with the Territory of Colorado for the Militia of said Territory employed in the Service of the United States in the years eighteen hundred and sixty-four and eighteen hundred and sixty-five.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be authorized to settle with the proper authorities of the Territory of Colorado, for the services of the first regiment of Colorado mounted militia, called into the service of the United States on the requisition of Colonel Thomas Moonlight, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and for the services of any other militia forces of the said Territory which were employed in the service of the United States on the call of the Governor of the Territory in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-four, allowing in such settlement all amounts paid by the Territory to the said troops for pay, use of horses, clothing and other proper allowances during the time when they were so actually in service, and that he report the amount found to be justly due to said Territory on such account to Congress in December next.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 102.—Joint Resolution to prevent the further Enforcement of the Joint Resolution, (No. 77,) approved July 4, 1864, against Officers and Soldiers of the United States, who have been honorably discharged, so as to relieve them from the further Payment of the special five per cent Income Tax imposed thereby.

Whereas by the joint resolution (No. 77) of Congress, approved July fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, a special income tax of five per cent on all incomes exceeding six hundred dollars was directed to be assessed and collected and was enforced generally upon all citizens accessible to the revenue officers, but was not enforced against all our soldiers then in the field in the active service of the country; and whereas since the surrender of the insurrectionary armies, and the disbanding and return of the Federal soldiers to their homes, said tax is being with manifest hardship assessed and collected of them in many parts of the country: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That said special tax, so imposed, shall not be further enforced against officers or soldiers lately in the service of the

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG... 1ST SESS.

United States, and who have been honorably discharged therefrom, and that the Secretary of the Treasury direct the proper observance of this resolution by all revenue officers.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

PRIVATE ACTS.

CHAP. IV.—An Act for the Relief of Mrs. Mary Lincoln, Widow of the late President of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Mrs. Mary Lincoln, widow of Abraham Lincoln, late President of the United States, or, in the event of her death before payment, then to the legal representatives of the said Abraham Lincoln, the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars: Provided always, That any sum of money which shall have been paid to the personal representatives of the said Abraham Lincoln since his death, on account of his salary as President of the United States for the current year, shall be deducted from the said sum of twenty-five thousand dollars.

APPROVED, December 21, 1865.

CHAP. VII.—An Act for the Relief of Charles F. Anderson.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to Charles F. Anderson, architect, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of seven thousand five hundred dollars, in full, for time, labor, and expense in preparing plans and drawings for the Capitol extension.

APPROVED, February 7, 1866.

CHAP. XI.—An Act for the Relief of Charlotte Bence, Widow of Philip H. Bence, late Captain of Company F, Thirtieth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Charlotte Bence, of Bloomfield, Davis county, Iowa, widow of Captain Philip H. Bence, of company F, thirtieth regiment of Iowa volunteers, on the pension-roll, at the rate of twenty dollars per month, from and after the passage of this act, for and during her widowhood.

APPROVED, February 17, 1866.

CHAP. XIV.—An Act for the Relief of the Heirs of James Bawdin.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That on payment to the United States of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre therefor, the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall cause a patent to be issued to the heirs of James Bawdin for that tract of land lying and being at Eagle Harbor, on Lake Superior, situate upon the north part of section number six, in township number fifty-eight north, of range number thirty west, in the Sault Ste. Marie land district, State of Michigan, containing about six and fifty-four hundredths acres of land, and being all that part of the lands known as the light-house reservation at Eagle Harbor, which lies east of the dotted line marked "S. 86° 45' E. 12. 76 chains," as shown on the plat of "Bawd[in]'s Survey" of said reservation in the office of said Commissioner of the General Land Office, except so much of said lands as may be required for the use of a road four rods wide, from the light-house across said six and fifty-four hundredths acres to the waters of said harbor, as the same is now laid out and used for that purpose: Provided, That this act shall only be construed to be a relinquishment of the title of the United States, and shall not interfere with the rights of third persons.

APPROVED, March 8, 1866.

CHAP. XXIII.—An Act for the Relief of Robert Henne.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to increase the pension of Robert Henne, late of company I, twelfth Missouri infantry, from seventeen dollars per month to twenty-five dollars per month, and to pay him such increased pension from the passage of this act.

APPROVED, March 22, 1866.

CHAP. XXX.—An Act for the Benefit of John W. Campbell.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and they are hereby, authorized and required to allow John W. Campbell, late quartermaster seventh Kentucky cavalry, on settlement of his accounts, a credit of four thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars, money expended by him for the use of the said regiment, the vouchers and accounts for which were destroyed and lost by falling into the hands of the enemy at Cynthiana, July seventeenth; Big Hill, August twenty-third; and Richmond, Kentucky, August thirtieth day, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, respectively, if on examining the evidence by the Quartermaster General the said Quartermaster General shall deem him justly entitled to said credit; but said credit shall not be allowed without the said Quartermaster General shall certify his approval thereof.

APPROVED, April 7, 1866.

CHAP. XXXIV.—An Act for the Relief of J. B. Rittenhouse, Fleet Paymaster of the Pacific Squadron.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed, in the settlement of the accounts of J. B. Rittenhouse, fleet paymaster of the Pacific squadron, to release him from all accountability for the amount of thirteen thousand five hundred and nine dollars, public money, stolen from him on the evening of October thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, while on duty at Panama, or such portion thereof as he may or shall fail to recover: Provided, That no part of said money shall be allowed said Rittenhouse until the proper accounting officers of the Government are satisfied upon full and complete evidence of the larceny of the money alleged to have been stolen.

APPROVED, April 10, 1866.

CHAP. XXXV.—An Act granting a Pension to Sarah Fitzgibbon.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to place the name of Sarah Fitzgibbon, widow of Thomas C. Fitzgibbon, late major of the fourteenth Michigan volunteer infantry, upon the pension-rolls, at twenty-five dollars per month from the first day of May, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five: Provided, That in the event of the marriage or death of said Sarah Fitzgibbon, that the pension allowed by this act shall be continued to the children of the late Major Thomas C. Fitzgibbon, subject to the limitation and restrictions now imposed by existing pension laws.

APPROVED, April 10, 1866.

CHAP. XXXVI.—An Act for the Relief of F. A. Patterson, late Captain of the Third Virginia Cavalry.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay Captain F. A. Patterson full amount of pay and emoluments as a captain of the third Virginia cavalry from the twenty-fifth day of November, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, the date of his commission by the Governor of Virginia, to the date of muster out of his regiment.

APPROVED, April 10, 1866.

CHAP. XXXVII.—An Act for the Relief of Jane W. Nethaway.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place upon the pension-rolls the name of Jane W. Nethaway, of the town of Ohio, county of Herkimer, and State of New York, widow of David Nethaway, late of the eighty-first regiment New York volunteers; the said pension to begin on the twenty-ninth day of September, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and to continue during her widowhood, at the rate allowed by law to the widow of a first lieutenant.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to settle and adjust the accounts of the said David Nethaway, late of the eighty-first regiment New York volunteers, as a second lieutenant from June third, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to August eleventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, inclusive, and as a first lieutenant from August twelfth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to September twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, inclusive.

APPROVED, April 10, 1866.

CHAP. XXXVIII.—An Act for the Relief of Emma J. Hall.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to place the name of Emma Jane Hall, widow of Perry Hall, deceased, late a chaplain in the seventy-ninth regiment Indiana volunteers, upon the pension-rolls, at the rate now prescribed by law for officers of his rank, and to be continued during her widowhood.

APPROVED, April 10, 1866.

CHAP. XLII.—An Act to confirm unto Augustin Amiot, his legal Assigns and Representatives, a certain Lot of Ground in the City of Saint Louis, in the State of Missouri.

Whereas, under the act of Congress approved June twenty-second, eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled "An act for the final adjustment of private land claims in the States of Florida, Louisiana, and Missouri, and for other purposes," the recorder of land titles for the city of Saint Louis, for the State of Missouri, has reported to the Commissioner of the General Land Office that there ought to be confirmed to Augustin Amiot, or to his legal representatives, under class one, under the third section of the act aforesaid, the lot of ground in the town of Saint Louis, Missouri, described as follows: commencing at the northwest corner of the lot in block number forty-six, being the northwest corner of the block at the intersection of Sycamore and Second streets; thence south fifty-eight degrees forty-one minutes east, along the south edge of Sycamore street to the northern boundary of the lot one hundred and sixty feet five inches, the northeast corner of the lot at the south edge of Sycamore street; thence south thirty degrees thirty minutes west, along the eastern boundary of the lot, one hundred and twenty-eight feet four inches, the southeast corner of the lot; thence north fifty-eight degrees forty-one minutes west, along the southern boundary of the lot, one hundred and sixty feet five inches, the southwest corner of the lot at the east edge of Second street; thence north thirty degrees thirty minutes east, along the east edge of Second street to the western boundary of the lot, one hundred and twenty-eight feet four inches, the beginning northwest corner of the lot, the said lot of ground being one hundred and twenty by one hundred and fifty French feet; and whereas the Commissioner of the General Land Office has approved the report of the said recorder of land titles and has reported the same to Congress for its action: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the said lot of ground in the city of Saint Louis, Missouri, be, and the same is hereby, confirmed unto the said Augustin Amiot, his legal assigns and representatives, and that all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the same be, and the same is hereby, granted and confirmed unto the said Augustin Amiot, his legal assigns and representatives.

APPROVED, April 12, 1866.

CHAP. XLIII.—An Act for the Relief of the Estate of E. W. Eddy.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and required to allow to the estate of E. W. Eddy, late paymaster in the U. S. Army, a credit of two hundred thousand dollars, the amount of public funds in his hands as paymaster on board the steamer "Brother Jonathan," lost by the wreck of said steamer, on the thirtieth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, off the coast of California: Provided, That the final order for the allowance of the said credit shall not be made until the whole subject connected with the said alleged loss shall be fully investigated by the Paymaster General, and he shall certify to the proper Department of the Government that the loss of the vessel has been fully proved.

APPROVED, April 12, 1866.

CHAP. XLIX.—An Act for the Relief of the Administrators and Securities of Almon W. Babbitt, late Secretary of Utah.

Whereas Almon W. Babbitt, as secretary of the Territory of Utah, in the summer of eighteen hundred and fifty-six, had advanced to him by the Treasury Department, at the city of Washington, twenty-six thousand and five hundred dollars; that a portion of this sum was properly expended by him in the purchase of stationery, carpeting, and other property for the offices of the Territory, and in the purchase of oxen and wagons to transport the said property, together with a quantity of books, belonging to the Territory, from Council Bluffs to Salt Lake City; and while upon the route, not far from Fort Kearney, the said Babbitt and most of the men with him were murdered, the teams taken, and property destroyed by Indians; and whereas there is now standing against said Babbitt upon the books of the Treasury Department a balance of twelve thousand and nine hundred and seventy-two dollars; and it is satisfactorily proven that the property destroyed by said Indians amounted in value to a sum larger than said balance: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the administrators, heirs, and securities of said Babbitt be, and they are hereby, released and discharged from the payment of said balance, and from all liability on account of the same and of said moneys received from the Treasury Department, as aforesaid.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. L.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Altazera L. Willcox, of Chenango County, in the State of New York.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place the name of Altazera L. Willcox, of Chenango county, in the State of New York, widow of William Willcox, late a private in company "B," in the one hundred and fourteenth regiment, New York volunteers, on the pension-roll, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence from and after the passage of this act, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. LI.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Isabella Fogg, of the State of Maine.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Mrs. Isabella Fogg, of the State of Maine, on the pension-roll, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence from and after the passage of this act, and to continue during her natural life; she, the said Isabella Fogg, having been totally disabled while acting as nurse on board the United States hospital boat near Louisville, in the State of Kentucky.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. LII.—An Act granting Pension to Virginia K. V. Moore.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Virginia K. V. Moore, daughter of Richard D. Moore, deceased, late of company "K," seventy-second regiment Illinois volunteers, on the list of invalid pensioners, and pay to her, or her legally appointed guardian, the sum of eight dollars per month, from December third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, the date of the death of Richard D. Moore, until she shall have attained the age of sixteen years.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. LIII.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Elizabeth York, Widow of Shubal York, late a Surgeon in the Fifty-Fourth Regiment Illinois Infantry, Volunteers.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Elizabeth York, widow of Shubal York, late a surgeon in the fifty-fourth regiment Illinois volunteer infantry, on the pension rolls, at the rate of twenty-five dollars per month, to commence from and after the passage of this act, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. LIV.—An Act for the Relief of Charles Youly.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, directed to pay, out of any funds which may have been appropriated for the payment of pensions, to Charles Youly, of Dunkirk, Cha[u]tauqua county, New York, late a private of company "D," seventy-second regiment, New York volunteers, the sum of one hundred and thirty-five dollars and thirty-three and one third cents, it being at the rate of five dollars per month, from the twenty-fifth day of November, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, to the twenty-seventh day of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-five.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. LV.—An Act for the Relief of Nicholas Hibner, late a Private in the Sixth Regiment Missouri State Militia.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Nicholas Hibner, of Caldwell county, Missouri, and late a private in the sixth regiment (cavalry) Missouri State militia, commanded by Colonel Catherwood, upon the list of pensioners, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence on the passage of this act, and to continue during his natural life.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. LVI.—An Act for the Relief of Albert Nevins.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Albert Nevins, late a private in company "K," ninety-second regiment New York State volunteers, upon the list of pensioners at the rate of twenty-five dollars per month, in lieu of the eight dollars per month heretofore allowed him; to commence on the passage of this act, and to continue during his natural life.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. LVII.—An Act granting Pension to Lewis W. Dietrich.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Lewis W. Dietrich, late a second lieutenant of company "E," thirtieth regiment U. S. colored troops, on the pension-list, and to pay him a pension at the rate of fifteen dollars per month; this act to take effect from and after its passage.

APPROVED, April 17, 1866.

CHAP. LVIII.—An Act for the Relief of James G. Clarke.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to James G. Clarke the sum of six thousand four hundred and eighty-three dollars and ninety-six cents ($6,483 96), in full for services as acting chargé d'affaires of the United States at Brussels from June eleventh, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, to September twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight.

APPROVED, April 18, 1866.

CHAP. LIX.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Sarah E. Wilson.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Mrs. Sarah E.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Wilson, widow of William H. Wilson, late acting surgeon United States volunteers, on the pension-roll, at the rate of seventeen dollars per month, to commence from the passage of this act, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, April 18, 1866.

CHAP. LX.—An Act directing the Enrollment of Agnes W. Laughlin, the Widow of a deceased Soldier, as a Pensioner.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to enroll Agnes W. Laughlin, widow of William Laughlin, deceased, late a private in company "C" third Indiana cavalry, as entitled to a pension from first of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, April 18, 1866.

CHAP. LXI.—An Act for the Relief of Ann Heth, Widow of William Heth, of Harrison County, Indiana.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place the name of Ann Heth, widow of William Heth, of Harrison county, in the State of Indiana, who was killed by the rebel Morgan's men, while resisting their advance upon Corydon, Indiana, upon the pension-roll, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence on the ninth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, April 18, 1866.

CHAP. LXII.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Emerance Gouler.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Mrs. Emerance Gouler, widow of Charles Gouler, late a private in company "F," ninth New Hampshire volunteers, on the pension-roll, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence from the passage of this bill, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, April 18, 1866.

CHAP. LXIV.—An Act for the Relief of Thomas Hurly.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place the name of Thomas Hurly, late a private of company "K," eighth Tennessee cavalry upon the pension-rolls, at the rate of twenty dollars per month, from and after the passage of this act, and to continue during his natural life.

APPROVED, April 20, 1866.

CHAP. LXVI.—An Act for the Relief [of] Thomas F. Wilson, late United States Consul at Bahia, Brazil.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to Thomas F. Wilson, late United States consul at Bahia fifteen hundred dollars, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, in full compensation for extra services and for all other claims he may have against the Government, while in the service of the United States as consul.

APPROVED, April 25, 1866.

CHAP. LXVII.—An Act for the Relief of Theodor G. Eiswald.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to issue and pay to Theodor G. Eiswald, of Providence, in the State of Rhode Island, two United States coupon bonds, known as the denomination of seven-thirty bonds, of one thousand dollars each, with coupons attached, in lieu of two seven-thirty bonds of the United States, issued under an act of Congress, partially destroyed by fire, the charred remnants thereof being now deposited in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury, and numbered respectively one hundred and four thousand one hundred and fifty-two, and one hundred and four thousand one hundred and fifty-three, dated June fifteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and issued under the act of March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five: Provided, That the said Theodor G. Eiswald shall execute a bond in the penal sum of five thousand dollars, to be approved by the Solicitor of the Treasury, indemnifying the United States against any loss, cost, or damage on account of the issuing of said bills.

APPROVED, April 25, 1866.

CHAP. LXIX.—An Act for the Relief of George R. Frank, late Captain Thirty-Third Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Paymaster General of the United States Army be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to settle and pay out of any money appropriated, or hereafter to be appropriated, for the payment of the Army, the account of George R. Frank, late a captain in the thirty-third regiment of Wisconsin volunteer infantry, for his services, and all allowances as captain in said regiment, in the service of the United States, from the date of his last payment to the time of the final muster out and payment of said regiment, the same as though the said George R. Frank had not been mustered out as captain for the purpose of being mustered in as major or otherwise.

APPROVED, April 26, 1866.

CHAP. LXXVII.—An Act for the Benefit of Col. R. E. Bryant.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and they are hereby, authorized and required to allow to R. E. Bryant, late commissary of subsistence, on settlement of his account, a credit of fourteen hundred and eighty-four dollars and thirteen cents, the vouchers and accounts for which were lost and destroyed, falling into the hands of the enemy at Holly Springs, Mississippi, on the twentieth day of September, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, if on examining the evidence by the Commissary General the said Commissary General shall deem him justly entitled to said credit; but said credit shall not be allowed without the said Commissary General shall certify approval thereof.

APPROVED, May 9, 1866.

CHAP. LXXVIII.—An Act for the Relief of R. L. B. Clarke.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Treasurer of the United States be, and he is hereby, directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars to R. L. B. Clarke, in full for the time and expense incurred by him in contesting the seat of Augustus Hall, from the first district of Iowa, in the Thirty-Fourth Congress.

APPROVED, May 9, 1866.

CHAP. XC.—An Act [for] the Relief of Francis A. Gibbons.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise expended, the sum of five hundred and sixty-three dollars and nineteen cents to Francis A. Gibbons, the same being money paid by him for property purchased at a quartermaster's sale in the city of Baltimore, Maryland, on the fifteenth day of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, under the direction of Colonel Belger, assistant quartermaster, which was not delivered to the purchaser.

APPROVED, May 22, 1866.

CHAP. XCI.—An Act granting [a] Pension to Spencer Kellogg.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Spencer Kellogg, of Oswego county, State of New York, on the roll of invalid pensions, and pay or cause to be paid to his legally appointed guardian the sum of twenty dollars per month, until he, the said Spencer Kellogg, shall have attained the age of sixteen years; this act to take effect from the sixth day of September, eighteen hundred and sixty-five.

APPROVED, May 22, 1866.

CHAP. XCII.—An Act granting a Pension to John Hoffman, of Madison County, in the State of New York.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, directed to place the name of John Hoffman, of Madison county, in the State of New York, on the pension-roll, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence from and after the passage of this act, and to continue during his natural life.

APPROVED, May 22, 1866.

CHAP. XCIII.—An Act for the Relief of the legal Representatives of Betsey Nash.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of the act of Congress approved March three, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, for the relief of Betsey Nash, are hereby extended to her legal representatives, and the amount appropriated by said act is hereby directed to be paid to them: Provided, That the sum paid by virtue of this act shall not exceed the amount due said Betsey Nash at the time of her death.

APPROVED, May 22, 1866.

CHAP. XCIV.—An Act for the Relief of Martha J. Willey.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Martha J. Willey, widow of George W. Willey, late a corporal in company F, seventh regiment New Hampshire volunteers, on the pension-rolls, at the rate of eight dollars per month, said pension to commence on the eighteenth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and to continue during her widowhood; and in the event of the marriage or death of said Martha J. Willey, then to the minor children of George W. Willey, subject to the limitations and restrictions of the pension laws.

APPROVED, May 22, 1866.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

CHAP. XCV.—An Act for the Relief of Isabella Strubing.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Isabella Strubing, widow of private Damon Strubing, deceased, late of company E, forty-sixth regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, on the pension-roll, and pay or cause to be paid to her the sum of eight dollars per month from the thirtieth day of May, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and to continue during her widowhood, and in the event of the death or marriage of said Isabella Strubing, to the minor children of Damon Strubing until they shall have attained the age of sixteen years.

APPROVED, May 22, 1866.

CHAP. XCVIII.—An Act to grant a Pension to Leonard St. Clair.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to place the name of Leonard St. Clair on the pension-rolls of the United States as a pensioner, at the rate of eight dollars per month.

APPROVED, May 24, 1866.

CHAP. XCIX.—An Act for the Relief of Mrs. William L. Herndon.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, required to cause a copyright to issue securing to Mrs. William L. Herndon, to her heirs, assigns, and legal representatives, the exclusive right to republish the book entitled "Exploration of the Valley of the Amazon," heretofore published under order of Congress, and to publish the same for the term of fourteen years from the passage of this act.

APPROVED, May 24, 1866.

CHAP. CI.—An Act for the Relief of Cornelius B. Gold, late Acting Assistant Paymaster United States Navy.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Government be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed, in the settlement of the accounts of Cornelius B. Gold, late acting assistant paymaster U. S. Navy, to allow a credit of five hundred and ten dollars and nine cents for clothing abstracted from a store-room in charge of said Gold while on duty in Mobile bay in the spring or summer of eighteen hundred and sixty-five: Provided, That no credit shall be allowed until the proper officers of the Government shall be satisfied by full and complete proof of the loss of the clothing herein referred to.

APPROVED, May 26, 1866.

CHAP. CVI.—An Act granting [a] Pension to Mrs. Sally Andrews.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Sally Andrews, of Buxton, York county, Maine, widow of the late Elisha Andrews, quarter gunner on board the "Levetta Adams," on the pension-list of invalid pensioners, and pay or cause to be paid to her the sum of eight dollars per month during her widowhood, the pension to commence from and after the passage of this act.

APPROVED, June 6, 1866.

CHAP. CVII.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Joanna Winans.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to place the name of Mrs. Joanna Winans, mother of George W. Winans, late an acting assistant paymaster in the United States Navy, on the roll of naval pensioners, at the rate of twenty dollars per month, to continue during her widowhood, the said pension to be paid out of the naval pension fund.

APPROVED, June 6, 1866.

CHAP. CVIII.—An Act for the Relief of Christina Elder.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to pay to Christina Elder, of the city of New York, the arrears of pension to which Jessie Elder, mother of the said Christina Elder and of Alexander B. Elder, late lieutenant colonel of the tenth regiment of New York volunteers, would have been entitled, had the certificate of W. T. Otto, acting Secretary of the Interior, countersigned by Joseph H. Barrett, Commissioner of Pensions, and bearing date on the twenty-fifth day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, in favor of the said Jessie Elder, been granted in his lifetime.

APPROVED, June 6, 1866.

CHAP. CIX.—An Act for the Relief of Cordelia Murray.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to Cordelia Murray, widow of George W. Murray, a pension equal in amount to the pension granted to the said George W. Murray, by an act of Congress approved December twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty four, entitled "An act for the relief of George W. Murray."

APPROVED, June 6, 1866.

CHAP. CXII.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Martha Stevens.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place the name of Mrs. Martha Stevens, widow of John F. Stevens, late deputy provost marshal of the fourth congressional district of the State of Indiana, on the pension-roll, at the rate of seventeen dollars per month, to commence from the tenth day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, June 8, 1866.

CHAP. CXIII.—An Act granting a Pension to Anna E. Ward.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Anna E. Ward, of the city of Washington, D. C., widow of the late Joseph D. Ward, second Kentucky volunteers, on the list of pensioners, and pay or cause to be paid to her the sum of eight dollars per month during her widowhood; and in the event of the marriage or death of said Anna E. Ward, then to the minor children of Joseph D. Ward, subject to the limitations and restrictions of the pension laws; this act to take effect from and after its passage.

APPROVED, June 8, 1866.

CHAP. CXVIII.—An Act to confirm the Title of José Serafin Ramirez to certain Lands in New Mexico.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the grant to José Serafin Ramirez of the Cañon del Agua, as approved by the surveyor general of New Mexico January twenty, eighteen hundred and sixty, and designated as number seventy in the transcript of private land claims in New Mexico, transmitted to Congress by the Secretary of the Interior January eleven, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, is hereby confirmed: Provided, however, That this confirmation shall only be construed as a relinquishment on the part of the United States, and shall not affect the adverse rights of any persons whomsoever.

APPROVED, June 12, 1866.

CHAP. CXIX.—An Act to confirm the Grant of certain Lands to José Domingues, in California.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the grant to José Domingues of the land known as Los Prietos y Najalayeagua, in the county of Santa Barbara, granted to him at Los Angeles, September twenty-four, eighteen hundred and forty-five, by Governor Pio Pico, and approved by the departmental assembly of Alta California, June third, eighteen hundred and forty-six, is hereby confirmed. And the surveyor general of California is hereby directed to proceed and survey said lands in accordance with the original title papers on file in his office, and when said survey shall have been approved by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, a patent shall be issued for said lands to said Domingues, or parties holding under him by inheritance or otherwise. This confirmation shall only be construed as a relinquishment on the part of the United States, and shall not affect the adverse right of any person whomsoever.

APPROVED, June 12, 1866.

CHAP. CXX.—An Act for the Relief of Mrs. Anna G. Gaston.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to place upon the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Anna G. Gaston, of the city of Washington, widow of Albert G. Gaston, deceased, late a lieutenant in the sixteenth regiment of Virginia volunteers, from the date of the discharge of her said husband from the military service of the United States, on account of disability arising from disease contracted in the said service, until the date of his death, namely, from the fifth day of May, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-three, to the seventh day of February, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and to cause to be paid to the said Mrs. Anna G. Gaston, a pension at the rate of seventeen dollars per month for the said term, without prejudice to the pension heretofore allowed her by the Commissioner of Pensions.

APPROVED, June 12, 1866.

CHAP. CXXI.—An Act for the Relief of Maria Syphax.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the title to a piece of land, being part of the Arlington estate, in the county of Alexandria, in the State of Virginia, upon which Maria Syphax has resided since about the year eighteen hundred and twenty-six, bounded and described as follows, to wit: beginning at the intersection of the south line of said Arlington estate with the center line of a small run, said point of intersection being about one fourth of a mile from the south-

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG. ... 1ST SESS.

west corner of said Arlington estate, running thence westerly along said south line seven chains and forty links; thence in a northeasterly direction, on a line making an angle of thirty-five degrees with the said south line, twenty-two chains and thirty-eight links; thence at right angles, in a southeasterly direction, fifteen chains and sixty-seven links, to the said south line of the Arlington estate; thence westerly along the said south line of the said Arlington estate nineteen chains and ninety-two links, to the place of beginning, containing seventeen acres and fifty-three one hundredths of an acre of land, be the same more or less, be, and the same is hereby, released and confirmed unto the said Maria Syphax, her heirs and assigns.

APPROVED, June 12, 1866.

CHAP. CXXV.—An Act for the Relief of Mrs. Abigail Ryan.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Mrs. Abigail Ryan, widow of Thomas A. Ryan, late a sergeant in company E, seventeenth regiment West Virginia infantry volunteers, on the pension-roll, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence from the twenty-seventh day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, June 15, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXIII.—An Act for the Relief of Captain John H. Crowell, Assistant Quartermaster in the United States Army.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and they are hereby, authorized to allow Captain John H. Crowell, on a settlement of his accounts, a credit of two hundred and twenty-five dollars, for so much money disbursed by him to persons in the service of the United States, in payment for such services, the vouchers for which payment were captured by the rebels and destroyed in an attack upon the camp at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, where said John H. Crowell was stationed, on the fifth day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, if, on examining the accounts of said Crowell, the Quartermaster General shall deem said Crowell justly entitled to said credit, and shall certify his approval thereof to said accounting officers.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXIV.—An Act for the Relief of the Heirs of Lieutenant Joshua D. Todd, late of the United States Navy, deceased.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, directed to pay to James Todd, administrator of Joshua D. Todd, late of the United States Navy, deceased, the pay of a master in the Navy of the United States, from the seventeenth day of June, eighteen hundred and forty-four, to the tenth day of August, eighteen hundred and forty-six, after deducting therefrom the amount already received by said Joshua D. Todd, deceased, as passed midshipman, during said period, and the said sum shall be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXV.—An Act for the Relief of Jonathan W. Gordon, late Major in the Eleventh Regiment of Infantry.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, in settling the accounts of J. W. Gordon, late major in the eleventh regiment of infantry, to allow him a credit of six hundred dollars on account of bounties paid enlisted men in accordance with the provisions of the act of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, but before that act went into effect.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXVI.—An Act for the Relief of Elisha W. Dunn, a Paymaster in the United States Navy.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the United States Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed, in the settlement of the accounts of Elisha W. Dunn, a paymaster in the United States Navy, to receive and allow, where the proper vouchers cannot be obtained, statements verified by his oath, or such other satisfactory evidence as he may present, of all expenditures made by him for the Government, or losses sustained by him in consequence of the destruction by fire of the money, papers, and property of the United States in charge of the said Elisha W. Dunn, on board of the United States naval wharfbat at Mound City, Illinois, at the burning of that vessel on the first of June, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXVII.—An Act for the Relief of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to pay to the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of sixteen hundred and fifty dollars, in full for three regimental cook-wagons furnished the Government in eighteen hundred and sixty-one.

APPROVED, June 22, 1866.

CHAP. CXXXIX.—An Act changing the Name of Emil Cohen.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Emil Cohen, of the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, be, and he is hereby, authorized, from and after the passage of this act, to take and use the surname of Cornely, and that his name hereafter be Emil Cornely; and all acts done and entered into by that name shall have the same effect and operation in law as if his name had originally been Emil Cornely, of Washington, in the District of Columbia.

APPROVED, June 23, 1866.

CHAP. CXLV.—An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act granting a Pension to the Widow of the late Major General Hiram G. Berry."

Whereas in the act granting a pension to the widow of the late Major General Hiram G. Berry, approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, said widow is erroneously called Eliza Berry: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be authorized and directed to place the name of Almira M. Berry, widow of Major General Hiram G. Berry, on the pension-rolls instead of Eliza Berry, as provided for by the act aforesaid.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CXLVI.—An Act for the Relief of Mrs. Jerusha Witter.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Mrs. Jerusha Witter, widow of Doctor Amos Witter, late surgeon of the seventh regiment Iowa infantry volunteers, on the pension-roll, at the rate of twenty-five dollars per month, to commence from the date of her application for a pension, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CXLVII.—An Act for the Benefit of Ira B. Curtis.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, directed to place Ira B. Curtis on the pension-rolls as assistant surgeon wholly disabled in the service, at the rate of seventeen dollars per month, commencing the twenty-eighth of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CXLVIII.—An Act for the Relief of Jane Harris.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to place the name of Jane Harris, widow of George H. Harris, late a private in company I, sixth Iowa cavalry, now deceased, on the pension-rolls as entitled to a pension at the rate of eight dollars per month during her widowhood, payment to commence from October twenty-third, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, the date of the death of said George H. Harris.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CXLIX.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Amarilla Cook.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place the name of Mrs. Amarilla Cook, widow of John B. Cook, late deputy provost marshal of the sixteenth congressional district of the State of Ohio, on the pension-roll, at the rate of seventeen dollars per month, to commence from the fifth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CL.—An Act granting a Pension to Benjamin Franklin.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Benjamin Franklin, a private in company H, second regiment Minnesota cavalry volunteers, on the pension-roll, at the rate of twenty-five dollars per month, to commence from the fifteenth day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and to continue during his natural life.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CLI.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Harriet B. Crocker.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Mrs. Harriet B. Crocker, mother of Henry B. Crocker, late a private in company G, one hundred and fifteenth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, on the pension-roll, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence from the fourth day of October, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

CHAP. CLII.—An Act granting a Pension to Jane D. Brent.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to place the name of Jane D. Brent, of Detroit, Michigan, widow of Thomas Lee Brent, late a captain in the Army of the United States, on the pension-roll, and to allow and pay to her a pension at the rate of twenty dollars per month, from and after the passage of this act, until her marriage or death, and after either event to continue the said pension to Mary Brent, daughter of the said Thomas Lee Brent, if then under the age of sixteen years, until she attains that age.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CLIII.—An Act for the Relief of Cornelius Crowley.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Cornelius Crowley, late a private in company F, third regiment United States infantry, on the pension-roll, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence from and after the passage of this act, and pay him at that rate in lieu of any other pension to which he may have been entitled.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CLIV.—An Act for the Relief of A. J. Gray.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Commissioner of Pensions be, and he hereby is, required to place the name of Andrew J. Gray, late a pilot on board the United States gunboat Judge Torrence, upon the list of invalid pensioners, at the rate prescribed for officers of his rank by act of Congress approved July fourteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, to be paid out of the naval fund.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

CHAP. CLVII.—An Act granting Land to A. M. Jess, of Josephine County, Oregon.

Whereas the land claimed and settled upon by A. M. Jess, on Applegate river, in Josephine county, State of Oregon, under the provisions of the homestead law of May twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, has since, without his fault, become of no value to him, and been, in great part, destroyed by a change in the channel of said river; and whereas his title to said land is still inchoate, and justice requires that he should be permitted to locate and settle upon an equal quantity of other public land in lieu thereof: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the said A. M. Jess be, and he is hereby, authorized to locate and settle upon one hundred and sixty acres of the public lands of the United States, in accordance with the provisions and requirements of the homestead law aforesaid, and, at the expiration of the period therein prescribed, to receive a patent therefor on the terms and conditions therein prescribed: Provided, That the title so acquired by him to the land heretofore located and settled upon by him as aforesaid shall revert to the United States: And provided further, That said new location and settlement shall not be made upon mineral lands of the United States.

APPROVED, June 29, 1866.

CHAP. CLXX.—An Act granting a Pension to Jane E. Miles.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to place upon the pension-roll the name of Jane E. Miles, of Somersworth, New Hampshire, widow of William D. Miles, late a landsman in the naval service of the United States, and to allow and pay her a pension, at the rate of eight dollars per month, from the twenty-second day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, to continue during her widowhood; the said pension to be paid out of the naval pension fund.

APPROVED, July 4, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXI.—An Act for the Relief of Sarah J. Purcell.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place the name of Sarah J. Purcell, widow of Charles W. Purcell, acting captain of artillery, on the pension-roll, at the rate of twenty dollars a month, from the twenty-seventh day of September, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, July 4, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXII.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Margaret A. Farran.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Mrs. Margaret A. Farran, widow of Abraham Farran, late a private in the twenty-fourth battery Indiana light artillery, on the pension-roll, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence from the sixteenth day of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, July 4, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXIII.—An Act granting a Pension to Mary C. Hamilton.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place the name of Mrs. Mary C. Hamilton on the pension-rolls, at the same rate of pension allowed her under the act passed for her benefit, and approved June third, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, payment to commence from and after the expiration of the term created by the said act of June third, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, and to continue for and during the term of her natural life.

APPROVED, July 4, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXXV.—An Act amendatory of an Act entitled "An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Emerance Gouler."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That an act approved April eighteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, granting a pension to Mrs. Emerance Gouler, be so amended as to continue the pension granted to Mrs. Gouler, in the event of her death or remarriage, to her minor children under the age of sixteen years, had by her late husband, Charles Gouler, a private in company F, ninth New Hampshire volunteers.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXXVI.—An Act for the Relief of Mary A. Patrick.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Mary A. Patrick, widow of Matthew A. Patrick, who was a captain first artillery United States Army, on the pension-rolls, at the rate of twenty dollars per month, said pension to commence from and after the passage of this act.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXXVII.—An Act for the Relief of Joel Farley.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Joel Farley, late a private in company F, eleventh Iowa volunteer infantry, on the pension-rolls, at the rate of fifteen dollars per month.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXXVIII.—An Act for the Relief of James L. Perham.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to James L. Perham, late of company "G," tenth regiment Maine volunteers, a pension at the rate of eight dollars per month, from February fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, to November seventeenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, amounting to one hundred and seventy-one dollars and thirty-six cents.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CLXXXIX.—An Act for the Benefit of John W. Jones.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, required to place the name of John W. Jones, late a private in company K seventeenth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, on the pension-roll, and that he be paid a pension from the passage of this act, at the rate now allowed by law to pensioners who have suffered the loss of the right arm; and if the pension allowed to that class of pensioners should hereafter be changed by law, that said Jones shall thereafter be paid a pension according to such change.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CXC.—An Act granting a Pension to Ann Sheehy.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Ann Sheehy, of Boston, Massachusetts, on the roll of invalid pensions, and pay or cause to be paid to her the sum of eight dollars per month during her widowhood; and that the proper accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to settle and adjust the accounts of John Sheehy, late a private in company D, twenty-eighth Massachusetts volunteers, and to pay the said Ann Sheehy, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the amount that may be found to have been due said John Sheehy on the third day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, the date of his death.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CXCI.—An Act for the Relief of Charles M. Stout, late a Second Lieutenant in Company E, Seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Reserve Corps.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the War Department are hereby authorized and directed to cause to be stated the account of Charles M. Stout, late a second lieutenant of company E, seventh regiment Pennsylvania Reserve corps of volunteers, and allow him pay and allowances as such officer

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

from the date of his appointment by general orders of Gen. McClellan, at Harrison's Landing, in Virginia, during the time he served as such officer, from August first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, to January thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, inclusive, the time he returned again to the ranks as private soldier, and that the amount thereof be paid to the said Charles M. Stout or his legal representatives.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CXCI.—An Act for the Relief of Lieutenant Colonel Frank Lynch.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Frank Lynch, late of the twenty-seventh regiment of Ohio volunteer infantry, on the pension-rolls, at the rate of pension allowed to a lieutenant colonel, to which rank he was commissioned, and pay him at that rate in lieu of any other pension to which he may have been entitled.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CXCIH.—An Act for the Relief of John Gordon.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of John Gordon, late of company "G," ninth United States infantry, upon the pension-rolls at the rate of eight dollars per month, and pay him the same from and after the passage of this act, and to continue during his natural life.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CXCIIV.—An Act for the Relief of J. Judson Barclay.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause to be paid to J. Judson Barclay, consul at Cyprus, the sum of three thousand dollars, being the amount paid by him for the expenses of his consulate, and that the same be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CXCV.—An Act for the Relief of Matilda I. Monroe.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Matilda I. Monroe, widow of David B. Monroe, late a sergeant in company A, sixty-second Ohio volunteers, on the pension-rolls at the rate of eight dollars per month, and continue during her widowhood, commencing on the sixteenth of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and in event of the death or remarriage of said Matilda I. Monroe, then to the minor children of David B. Monroe, subject to the limitations and restrictions of the pension laws.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CXCVI.—An Act for the Relief of Lucinda Gates.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Lucinda Gates, widow of the late Horace Gates, of Franklin, Vermont, on the roll of invalid pensions, and pay to her the same pension during her widowhood, from the death of her husband, as was allowed him per special act approved July four, eighteen hundred and sixty-four.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CXCVII.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Mary A. McManus, Widow of Captain Andrew McManus, late of the Sixty-Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to cause the name of Mrs. Mary A. McManus, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and widow of Andrew McManus, late a captain of the sixty-ninth regiment of Pennsylvania infantry volunteers, to be placed on the pension-rolls, at the rate of twenty dollars per month, to continue during her widowhood, and to continue the said pension to the child or children of the said Andrew McManus until they arrive at the age of sixteen years, in the event of the death or marriage of the said Mary A. McManus.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CXCVIII.—An Act granting an Increase of Pension to Mrs. Mercie E. Scattergood.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the name of Mrs. Mercie E. Scattergood, widow of Edward Scattergood, to be placed on the roll of naval pensioners, at the rate of fifteen dollars per month, to continue during her widowhood, and to be continued to the children of said Edward Scattergood, who are under sixteen years of age, in the event of the death or marriage of the said Mercie E. Scattergood; the pension herein granted to be in lieu of that now received by her.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CXCIIX.—An Act for the Relief of George W. Bush.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to George W. Bush, of the city and county of New York, late a sergeant in company G, ninetieth regiment New York volunteers, a pension of eight dollars per month from August twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, to March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CCIII.—An Act for the Relief of A. T. Spencer and Gurdon S. Hubbard.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized and instructed to audit and adjust the account of A. T. Spencer and Gurdon S. Hubbard, for carrying the United States mail from Chicago, Illinois, to Mackinac, Sault Ste. Marie, Marquette, Copper Harbor, Eagle Harbor, Eagle River, and Ontonagon, Michigan; La Pointe and Superior, Wisconsin, during the years from eighteen hundred and fifty-four to eighteen hundred and fifty-nine, inclusive, and allow therefor such amount as to him shall appear just and equitable, not exceeding the amount allowed for the same service to the party who afterward performed the same under contract; and the sum by him so found due shall be paid out of the Treasury of the United States out of any of the money therein not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CCIV.—An Act for the Relief of Samantha Rader.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Samantha Rader, widow of John Rader, late a private in company K, seventeenth regiment Ohio infantry, on the list of pensioners, and pay or cause to be paid to her the sum of eight dollars per month during her widowhood; and in the event of the marriage or death of the said Samantha Rader, then to the minor child or children of John Rader, subject to the limitations and restrictions of the pension laws.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CCV.—An Act granting [a] Pension to Jonathan W. Beach.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place or have placed upon the pension-rolls the name of Jonathan W. Beach, and pay to him the sum of twenty-five dollars per month during his blindness. This act to take effect from and after its passage.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CCVI.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Charlotte E. Reed.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to issue to Mrs. Charlotte E. Reed, widow of John D. Reed, late of Falls Church, Fairfax county, Virginia, a pension certificate, and place her name on the roll of pensioners, with the pay and under the conditions and limitations of a widow of a private of infantry.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CCVII.—An Act for the Relief of the minor Children of Salvador Accadi, deceased.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the names of Adrian J. P. Accadi and Lavinia M. E. Accadi, minor children of the late Salvador Accadi, a musician in the United States Navy, on the pension-rolls, and pay, out of the naval pension fund, a pension of eight dollars per month to their legally appointed guardian, until the youngest of said children shall attain the age of sixteen years. This act to take effect from the first day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-four.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

CHAP. CCXX.—An Act for the Benefit of William G. Lee.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay William G. Lee, or his legal representatives, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-eight thousand four hundred and twenty-eight dollars and fifty cents, which said sum shall be in full payment of his claim against the United States, on account of corn purchased by him in the department of Kentucky, as the agent of the quartermaster's department, under the agreement made by him with Captain John A. Morris, in eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and which corn spoiled on his hands by reason of the Government failing to furnish transportation for the same.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXI.—An Act for the Relief of William H. Wheeler, of Bangor, Maine.

Whereas William H. Wheeler, of Bangor, Maine, in the month of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, lost a United States bond of the denomination of five hundred dollars, issued under the act of twenty-fifth February, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, number eighteen thousand three hundred and seventy-four, with all the unpaid coupons attached, which bond has since been found mutilated and partially destroyed; and whereas thirteen of the coupons of said bond have been reclaimed in such condition as to be paid at maturity; and whereas it is uncertain whether the remaining coupons are not still in existence: Therefore,

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to issue and deliver to said William H. Wheeler a duplicate of said bond, number eighteen thousand three hundred and seventy-four, without coupons attached: Provided, That, before issuing the same, said Wheeler shall deliver to the Secretary of the Treasury all the remaining fragments and parts of said bond, excepting the thirteen coupons which have been reclaimed as aforesaid, with a good and sufficient bond, with security to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, to indemnify the United States against all loss, cost, or damages incurred by reason of the issuing of said duplicate bond.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXII.—An Act for the Relief of the Owners of the Hawaiian Bark "Kamahamaha V."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be paid to Charles Brewer and Company, of Boston, agents for the owners of the Hawaiian bark "Kamahamaha V.," in coin, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of thirty-five hundred and thirty dollars, in full for the passage, on the Hawaiian bark "Kamahamaha V.," of sixty-eight destitute American seamen belonging to American vessels which were burned by the Anglo-confederate pirate "Shenandoah," from the island of Ascension to Honolulu.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXIII.—An Act for the Relief of the Owners of the Bark Maria Henry.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twelve thousand dollars to George Hearn, agent and part owner of the bark Maria Henry, of Portland, Maine, in full compensation for the use and detention of said vessel, by the military authorities of the United States, from the twenty-sixth day of February to the twenty-sixth day of May, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, inclusive, and for any and all damage for the omission of said Government to load said vessel with coal for New Orleans or Port Royal.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXIV.—An Act for the Relief of Edward P. McKinney, of Binghamton, New York, late Captain and Assistant Commissary of Subsistence.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the War and Treasury Departments be, and they are hereby, authorized to allow to Edward P. McKinney, of Binghamton, New York, late captain and assistant commissary of subsistence, upon the settlement of his accounts, the sum of four hundred and seventy-five dollars, or so much thereof as the proof shall establish, upon his proving satisfactorily to such officers that such sum was properly paid by him prior to the thirteenth day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, to men of the first Rhode Island cavalry, and the first, second, and fifth United States cavalry regiments, and that his vouchers therefor were forcibly taken from him and destroyed by the enemy on the thirteenth day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, between Harper's Ferry and Winchester, Virginia, without the fault of the said Edward P. McKinney.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXV.—An Act for the Benefit of Henry Horne.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be paid to Henry Horne, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of four hundred dollars in gold, or its equivalent in United States currency, being the amount advanced by him for the use of Federal prisoners at Andersonville, and used for their benefit while prisoners of war at that place during the years eighteen hundred and sixty-four and eighteen hundred and sixty-five, the payment of the said sum to act as a full release of the note given to said Henry Horne by Father Wheeler, under whose supervision the said sum of money was expended.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXVI.—An Act for the Relief of William Cook.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to pay to William Cook, of Washington, District of Columbia, the sum of two hundred dollars, in full for the use and occupation of his land by the order of the War Department.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXVII.—An Act for the Relief of the Heirs of Horace I. Hodges.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in the settlement of the accounts with the Treasury of Horace I. Hodges, deceased, late captain and assistant quartermaster United States volunteers, there shall be allowed in his favor the sum of one thousand two hundred and fifty-six dollars and forty cents on account of the loss of that amount of public funds in his hands by the capture of Plymouth, North Carolina, by the rebels, on the twentieth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four, the loss being without neglect or fault on the part of said Hodges, and he having lost his life at that time in attempting to carry orders from the commanding officer at Plymouth to the United States gunboats.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXVIII.—An Act for the Relief of Liston H. Pearce.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to the Rev. Liston H. Pearce the sum of five hundred and forty dollars, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, in full for his services as chaplain of the one hundred and thirty-second regiment of Illinois volunteers during the recent rebellion.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCXXIX.—An Act for the Relief of James G. Holland, late Acting Assistant Paymaster United States Navy.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to credit James G. Holland, late acting assistant paymaster of the Navy of the United States, with the sum of five hundred dollars, in the settlement of the accounts of said Holland with the Fourth Auditor of the Treasury; such credit to be given to said Holland for the sum of five hundred dollars in Treasury notes of the United States lost and destroyed without any fault or neglect on the part of said Holland: Provided, That the final order for the allowance of the said credit shall not be made until the whole subject connected with the said alleged loss shall be fully investigated by the Fourth Auditor, and he shall certify thereto.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

CHAP. CCLVI.—An Act for the Relief of the Owners of the British Vessel Magicienne.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be paid, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the order of the proper functionary of the Government of her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, the sum of eight thousand six hundred and forty-five dollars, as full compensation to the owners of the British vessel Magicienne, or their legal representatives, for damages occasioned by reason of the wrongful seizure and detention of this vessel by the United States ship Onward, in the month of January, eighteen hundred sixty-three, and also as full compensation to the owners and shippers of the cargo of the Magicienne; such sum to be distributed agreeably to the award of William M. Evarts and Edward M. Archibald, Esquires, to whom the claim was referred for adjustment, by an agreement bearing date in November, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, between the Secretary of State on the part of the United States, and the British minister at Washington on the part of Great Britain.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLVII.—An Act for the Relief of Thomas W. Stevens.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall be paid to Thomas W. Stevens, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of one thousand and twenty-five dollars and fifty cents on account of services as inspector of customs at the port of Albany, from the first day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, to the first day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-three.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLVIII.—An Act for the Relief of Alois Klaus.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Alois Klaus the sum of thirty-two dollars and ninety cents, in full payment for moneys paid by him for transportation, and due to him for rations, while in the military service of the United States.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLIX.—An Act for the Relief of James P. Johnson.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to pay James P. Johnson, of Iowa, the sum of two hundred and two dollars and fifty cents, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, in full payment for his services as veterinary surgeon in the fourth Iowa cavalry.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLX.—An Act for the Relief of Daniel Winslow.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Daniel Winslow and his legal representatives be, and they hereby are, released and relieved from all judgments, and from all liens and incumbrances of said judgments in favor of the United States, heretofore obtained against said Winslow, in any district court of the United States, upon a contract entered into by said Winslow with the chief of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, to deliver at the navy-yard in Charlestown, Massachusetts, eighteen hundred barrels of Navy beef, which contract was dated September twenty-nine, eighteen hundred and forty-six; meaning hereby to release the said Winslow from all liability arising out of said contract, or any bond given to secure the performance thereof, and from all judgments founded on the same, whether against himself alone, or himself and his sureties, but not to relieve him of any levies heretofore made, or sums paid on said judgments.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXI.—An Act for the Relief of Mrs. Eleanor C. Ransom.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to pay Mrs. Eleanor C. Ransom, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of four hundred dollars, to compensate her for services performed by her in taking care of sick and wounded soldiers of the United States on the steamship North America, on her voyage from New Orleans to New York, in December, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-four.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXI.—An Act for the Relief of W. B. Kelley.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to W. B. Kelley, late a second lieutenant in company F, first regiment Kentucky cavalry volunteers, a pension, at the rate of fifteen dollars per month, from the thirty-first day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, to March thirteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, amounting to two hundred and ninety-one dollars and fifty cents.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXII.—An Act granting a Pension to Mrs. Nancy A. Stocks.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Mrs. Nancy A. Stocks, widow of Reuben Stocks, late a private in company K, eighteenth regiment Illinois infantry volunteers, on the pension-roll, at the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence from the eleventh day of June, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, and to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXIII.—An Act granting a Pension to Drusey A. Layman.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to place upon the pension-roll the name of Drusey A. Layman, of Palatine, Marion county, West Virginia, widow of Eugenius E. Layman, deceased, late a private in company C, of the seventeenth regiment of West Virginia volunteers, and allow and pay to her a pension of eight dollars per month from the death of her husband, on the thirteenth day of January, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to continue during her widowhood.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXIV.—An Act granting a Pension to John Pyle.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of John Pyle, late a sergeant in company B, one hundred and fifth regiment Indiana militia volunteers, on the pension-roll, at the rate of fifteen dollars per month, to commence from and after the passage of this act, and to continue during his natural life.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXV.—An Act granting a Pension to Abraham Lansing.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Abraham Lansing, late a master's mate in the United States Navy, on the pension-roll, at the rate of ten dollars per month, to commence from and after the passage of this act, and to continue during his natural life; said pension to be paid out of the naval pension fund.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCLXXVI.—An Act to extend the Time of Letters-Patent issued to Thaddeus Hyatt.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the letters-patent granted to Thaddeus Hyatt on the twelfth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and forty-five, for improvements in vault covers, and which was reissued on the third day of April, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, and subsequently extended by the Commissioner of Patents to the twelfth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, be, and the same is hereby, extended for the term of seven years, commencing on the twelfth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, and ending on the twelfth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, for the benefit of the said Thaddeus Hyatt, his heirs and legal representatives, upon the condition hereinafter set forth. And the Commissioner of Patents is hereby directed, upon the presentation of said patent, and the payment of the fees and charges provided by law, to extend said patent by making a certificate thereon, upon a certified copy thereof, of such extension in the name of the said Thaddeus Hyatt, if in his judgment upon full hearing, that the same should be granted. And the said Commissioner is hereby further directed to cause said extension, if perfected, to be entered on the record of the Patent Office. And the said patent so extended shall have the same effect as if originally granted for the term extending to the end of the term to which it is extended by this act: Provided, however, That said extended patent shall be open to legal inquiry and decision in the same manner as if issued under the general law relating to patents: And provided further, That all persons enjoying the lawful use of the improvement secured by said patent, and the purchaser of any machine so in use may continue to use the same as if this act had not passed.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

CHAP. CCXC.—An Act for the Relief of John Hastings, late Surveyor and Depository of public Moneys at Pittsburgh.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act entitled "An act for the relief of John Hastings, collector of the port of Pittsburgh," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows: that the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, in adjusting the accounts of John Hastings as depository of public monies at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, to give him credit for the sum of nine thousand nine hundred and fifty-six dollars and sixty-two cents, the amount of public money of which he was robbed on the tenth day of March, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, while acting in the aforesaid capacity.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCXCI.—An Act to authorize Samuel Stevens, a Stockbridge Indian, to enter and purchase a certain Tract of Land in the Stockbridge Reservation, Wisconsin.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Samuel Stevens, a Stockbridge Indian, be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter and purchase the tract of land known as lot number one hundred and twenty-six, in the Stockbridge reservation, in the county of Calumet and State of Wisconsin, under the "act to authorize the issuing of patents for certain lands in the town of Stockbridge, Wisconsin, and for other purposes," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of the General Land Office be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, upon the entry and payment therefor, to cause a patent, in due form of law, to be issued to the said Samuel Stevens, in conformity with the act above mentioned.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCXCII.—An Act for the Relief of Mrs. Ann E. Smoot, Widow of Captain Joseph Smoot.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the benefit of the sixth section of "An act to amend 'An act to promote the efficiency of the Navy,'" approved January sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-nine, [seven] be, and the same is hereby, extended to Mrs. Ann E. Smoot, widow of the late Captain John Smoot, of the United States Navy, and that the proper accounting officers of the Treasury be authorized and directed to pay her the waiting orders pay of his rank which her said husband would be entitled to receive at the time he was placed on the reserved list on furlough pay, to the date of his death, deducting therefrom whatever amount he may have received in the mean time on account of pay.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

CHAP. CCCXIII.—An Act for the Relief of Francis Colgen.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to place the name of Francis Colgen, late a private in company B, twelfth regiment Wisconsin volunteers, upon the pension-rolls of the United States, at the same rate that is allowed to soldiers or seamen who have lost the sight of both eyes in the military or naval service of the United States, subject to the biennial examination prescribed in the general pension laws;

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

to commence on the fifteenth day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, the date of his discharge from the service.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCXIV.—An Act for the Relief of William Crosswell.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of William Crosswell, of Boston, in the State of Massachusetts, on the roll of invalid pensioners, at the rate of eight dollars per month, said pension to commence on the first day of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-five; to be paid out of the naval pension fund.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCXV.—An Act for the Relief of Marion M. Buxton.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Marion M. Buxton, widow of James H. Buxton, late an ensign in the United States Navy, on the pension-rolls, at the rate prescribed by law for officers of his rank; said pension to be paid out of the "naval pension fund." And in case of the death or remarriage of the said Marion M. Buxton, then to the minor child or children of the said James H. Buxton, subject to the limitations and restrictions of the pension laws.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCXVI.—An Act for the Relief of Quincy A. May.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Quincy A. May, of company H, eighty-third regiment of Illinois volunteers, on the list of pensioners, and pay or cause to be paid to him the sum of eight dollars per month from the passage of this act.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCXVII.—An Act granting a Pension to Daniel Lucas.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place the name of Daniel Lucas, of Plymouth, Massachusetts, formerly a private of company E, third U. S. infantry, on the roll of invalid pensions, and pay to him monthly such a sum as he may be entitled [to] under the limitations and restrictions regulating the payment of pensions.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

CHAP. CCCXVIII.—An Act for the Relief of Robert Baldwin.

Whereas, on the fifth day of December, eighteen hundred and forty-nine, Robert Baldwin located at the land office at Milan, in the State of Missouri, three military bounty land-warrants issued under the act of eighteen hundred and forty-seven, each for one hundred and sixty acres and numbered seven thousand eight hundred and forty-seven, twenty-six thousand eight hundred and one, and fifty thousand two hundred and sixty-three, upon the following-described public lands, to wit: the west half lot number one northwest quarter section five: the east half lots number one and two northeast quarter section six in town fifty-seven range sixteen: the southeast quarter southeast quarter, the west half northeast quarter, the east half northwest quarter, the west half southeast quarter, the northeast quarter southeast quarter, and the northeast quarter southwest quarter of section thirty-one town fifty-eight range sixteen, receiving from the register of said land office at Milan, duplicate certificates of location; and whereas the said military bounty land-warrants were lost from the mail in their transmission from said land office to Washington, and have not since been heard from: Therefore,

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause patents for said lands to be issued to said Robert Baldwin, upon his surrendering to the Commissioner of the General Land Office the said duplicate certificates of location.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

PRIVATE RESOLUTIONS.

No. 22.—A Resolution authorizing Commodore William Radford to accept a Decoration from the King of Italy.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the assent of Congress be, and the same is hereby, given to Commodore William Radford, of the Navy of the United States, to accept the decoration of the Equestrian Order of Saint Maurice, bestowed upon him by the King of Italy, as a reward for the assistance rendered by him to the Italian frigate Re d'Italia, when she got ashore near Long Branch.

APPROVED, April 13, 1866.

No. 23.—A Resolution authorizing Rear Admiral H. Paulding to accept a Decoration from the King of Italy.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Rear Admiral H. Paulding, of the Navy of the United States, may accept a decoration of the Equestrian Order of St. Maurice, which has been tendered to him by the King of Italy as a reward for assistance rendered to the Italian frigate Re d'Italia when she got ashore near Long Branch.

APPROVED, April 13, 1866.

No. 28.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of Alexander Thompson, late United States Consul at Maranham.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and they are hereby, authorized and required to adjust and pay all proper accounts and claims of Alexander Thompson for salary and services as consul at Maranham, in Brazil, in as full and ample a manner as if he had been a citizen of the United States while discharging the duties of said office.

APPROVED, April 21, 1866.

No. 30.—A Resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to adjust the Claim of Beals and Dixon against the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to cause the accounts of Beals and Dixon, for deliveries of material after May one, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, under their contracts with the United States, to be adjusted and paid; allowing to said Beals and Dixon such additional prices for material delivered after May one, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, as, in his opinion, they may be justly entitled to under the provisions of their supplementary contract, dated January one, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven: Provided, That, in the opinion of the Attorney General, said Beals and Dixon have a legal claim upon the United States for an increase of prices under said contract.

APPROVED, May 2, 1866.

No. 33.—Joint Resolution providing for the Reappraisal of the Lands described in an Act for the Relief of William Sawyer and others of Ohio.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a commissioner to reappraise the lands described in the act entitled "An act for the relief of William Sawyer and others of Ohio," approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four: Provided, however, that the occupants of said lands shall pay all the expenses of the reappraisalment.

APPROVED, May 5, 1866.

No. 36.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of Rev. Harrison Heermance, late Chaplain of [the] One Hundred and Twenty-Eighth Regiment New York Volunteers.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Paymaster General of the Army be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to adjust and pay, out of any money appropriated or hereafter to be appropriated for the payment of the Army, the account of Rev. Harrison Heermance, late chaplain of the one hundred and twenty-eighth regiment of New York volunteers, for such period as it shall appear that he actually rendered service as chaplain of said regiment, and for which he received no pay by reason of defective muster, or otherwise, though no fault of his own.

APPROVED, May 9, 1866.

No. 54.—A Resolution referring the Petition and Papers in the Case of Joseph Nock to the Court of Claims.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the claim of Joseph Nock for damages occasioned by the annulment of his contract for furnishing locks and keys for the use of the United States mail, and also for the use of said Nock's patent in the manufacture of mail locks subsequent to such annulment, be, and it is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims for its decision, in accordance with the principles of equity and justice: Provided, That said court do not render judgment for a greater sum than is contained in the report of Solicitor Comstock to the Senate, dated December twenty-two, anno Domini eighteen hundred and fifty-two.

APPROVED, June 21, 1866.

No. 56.—A Resolution for the Relief of Samuel Norris.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the claim of Samuel Norris of California, for supplies furnished the Indians of that State, under contracts made with certain commissioners, or either of them, authorized to negotiate treaties with said Indians, and all papers relating thereto, be referred back to the Court of Claims for examination and allowance; and that in fixing the amount to be paid the claimant the rule shall be the actual value of the supplies furnished at the times and places of delivery, of which due proof shall be made by the claimant.

APPROVED, June 22, 1866.

Laws of the United States.

39TH CONG... 1ST SESS.

No. 59.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of Charles M. Blake.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be paid to Charles M. Blake six months' salary as chaplain in the Army in full for the pay of which he was deprived while waiting investigation into the charges preferred against him, at the close of which investigation he was restored to his position by the Secretary of War.

APPROVED, June 27, 1866.

No. 60.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of Elizabeth Woodward and George Chorpennning, of Pennsylvania.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of twenty-eight thousand one hundred and seventy-five dollars shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury, out of any money not otherwise appropriated, in equal moieties to Elizabeth Woodward, widow of Absalom Woodward, and George Chorpennning, for destruction of property by Indians between Salt Lake and California prior to the first of July, eighteen hundred and fifty-two; the moiety paid to the said Elizabeth Woodward to be for the use of herself and her four children.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That the further sum of twenty-six thousand three hundred and seventy dollars shall be paid in the same manner to George Chorpennning for property destroyed by Indians between Salt Lake and California prior to the first of April, eighteen hundred and fifty-six; and the amount thus paid shall be deducted from any annuities now due or that may hereafter become due to the Indians inhabiting the said territory.

APPROVED, June 29, 1866.

No. 61.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of Ambrose L. Goodrich and Nathan Cornish, for carrying the United States Mail from Boise City to Idaho City, in the Territory of Idaho, and of Daniel Wellington and J. C. Dorsey, for extra Services in carrying the Mails.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Postmaster General be, and is hereby, authorized to audit and settle, as to him may appear just and equitable, the demand of Ambrose L. Goodrich and Nathan Cornish for carrying the United States mail on route sixteen thousand and one, from Boise City to Idaho City, in the Territory of Idaho, from the fifth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, until the first day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-five: Provided, That the amount to be allowed shall not exceed eight thousand dollars; and also to audit and settle in like manner the demand of Daniel Wellington and J. C. Dorsey, for extra services in carrying the United States mails on route number fourteen thousand six hundred and two, between the towns of Carson City and Aurora, in the State of Nevada, from July first, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, to June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-five: Provided, That the amount to be allowed shall not exceed ten thousand dollars.

APPROVED, June 29, 1866.

No. 64.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of Joseph Parkins.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officer of the War Department be, and he is hereby, authorized and instructed to pay to Joseph Parkins, who has been and now is delivering the stone for the construction of the arsenal at Rock Island, in the State of Illinois, in lieu of the contract price, the sum of thirteen dollars and fifty cents per perch for all stone delivered and to be delivered for the construction of said arsenal, and that said Parkins shall receive and accept said sum as full satisfaction of all claims under said contract, and shall never make any further claim for any services rendered by him thereunder.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

No. 65.—Joint Resolution providing for the Settlement of Accounts of W. H. Hamrick.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be directed to settle the accounts of the late Wyatt H. Hamrick, lieutenant and quartermaster of the thirty-ninth Ohio volunteers, upon equitable terms, and upon the best evidence available.

APPROVED, July 3, 1866.

No. 68.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of Edgar T. Harris.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the name of Edgar T. Harris, late of the first West Virginia infantry, be placed on the list of pensioners and be entitled to such pension as is now or may hereafter be allowed by law to pensioners having total and permanent disability.

APPROVED, July 13, 1866.

No. 70.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of John Wells and Sons, of Baltimore.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Quartermaster General, with the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department, is hereby authorized to remit to John Wells and Sons, of Baltimore, Maryland, so much of the penalty incurred by them by reason of their failure to comply with their contract entered into on the fourth day of October, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, with Captain S. H. Dunan, A. Q. M., under the direction of the Quartermaster General, for repairing the steamer "City of Albany" as may not be covered by the actual loss of the Government, by reason of the delay in completing said steamer in accordance with the strict terms of the contract.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

No. 71.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of Caroline A. Randall, Administratrix and Widow of Charles B. Randall, deceased.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the legal representatives of Charles B. Randall, deceased, late lieutenant colonel of the 149th regiment New York volunteer infantry, who was killed in action, on the twentieth July, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, at the battle of Beech Tree Creek, Georgia, the sum of one hundred and seventy-five dollars, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, as payment for one private horse used by said Randall in the military service, which horse was lost by starvation five days after the death of said Randall.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

No. 72.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of Isaac Ranney, Internal Revenue Collector for the Eighth District, Ohio.

Whereas, on the night of the twenty-fifth day of June, A. D. eighteen hundred and sixty-five, the office of Thomas J. Robinson, deputy collector of Isaac Ranney, internal revenue collector for the eighth district, Ohio, located at Mansfield in said State, was burglariously entered by persons whose names are unknown; and whereas said burglars did, on the night aforesaid, at the office aforesaid, by means of drills and gunpowder, break into and enter the iron safe of said deputy collector, and feloniously steal and carry away revenue stamps therefrom belonging to the Government of the United States to the amount of six hundred and thirty-two dollars and twenty-three cents; and whereas, further, said burglarious entry and larceny was not attributable to any neglect of duty on the part of said Thomas J. Robinson, as such deputy collector, and that said office and safe were in all respects such as were required by the law and the regulations of the Treasury Department: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, directed and required in the settlement of the accounts of said Isaac Ranney, as such internal revenue collector, with the Government of the United States, to allow and give credit to the said Ranney for the amount of said stamps stolen as aforesaid.

APPROVED, July 23, 1866.

No. 78.—A Resolution to refer the Claim of the Administrator of Richard W. Meade, deceased, to the Court of Claims.

Whereas doubts are entertained whether the claim of the estate of Richard W. Meade, deceased, upon the Government of the United States is covered and embraced by the ninth section of the act of third March, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, entitled "An act to amend an act to establish a court for the investigation of claims against the United States," approved February twenty-four, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, which case was referred to the said court by resolution of the Senate, passed twenty-seventh February, eighteen hundred and sixty-one. Now, in order to remove all doubts on that subject,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the said claim of Richard W. Meade, administrator of Richard W. Meade, deceased, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims for adjudication thereof, pursuant to authority conferred upon said court by any existing law to examine and decide claims against the United States, referred to it by Congress.

APPROVED, July 25, 1866.

No. 88.—A Resolution for the Relief of Sergeant Milton McKinnon.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Sergeant Milton McKinnon the sum of fifty-eight dollars and forty-five cents, being the amount of a draft drawn in his favor by Major M. L. Martin, late paymaster in the United States Army, on the Assistant Treasurer of the United States in New York, dated March twenty-four, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and which was lost in its transmission to New York: Provided, That said Milton McKinnon file a duplicate of said draft, duly authenticated, with said Secretary of the Treasury; also, that the payment herein authorized shall not be made until the said McKinnon shall execute to the United States a bond, with security, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, conditioned to indemnify the United States against all loss, cost, or damage incurred by reason of the payment hereby authorized.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

39TH CONG....1ST SESS.

Laws of the United States.

No. 89.—A Resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to audit and settle the Accounts of Caleb T. Fay and William Y. Patch, late Assessor and Collector of Internal Revenue at San Francisco.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to audit and settle the accounts of Caleb T. Fay, and William Y. Patch, late assessor and collector of internal revenue at San Francisco, as to him may appear just and equitable.

APPROVED, July 26, 1866.

No. 94.—A Resolution for the Relief of Charles M. Blake.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be paid, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Charles M. Blake, the full pay and allowances of a chaplain in the Army for one year from the eighteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and sixty-five to the seventeenth day of May, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the same being the sum of fifteen hundred and sixty dollars ($1560) less the amount which may have been paid him by the effect of joint resolution for his relief, approved June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

No. 95.—Joint Resolution for the Relief of Fontaine T. Fox, jr.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the Government be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Fontaine T. Fox, jr., late aide-de-camp to Brigadier General W. T. Ward, a sum equal to the pay and allowances of a first lieutenant and aide-de-camp, from the eighth day of October, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, to the third day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

APPROVED, July 27, 1866.

No. 103.—Joint Resolution to reimburse Mrs. Mary Phelps, of Missouri.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be paid to Mrs. Mary Phelps, of Missouri, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty thousand dollars to reimburse her for expenditures made by her in raising and equipping troops for the United States in the late rebellion, and also for her expenditures made in behalf of the soldiers of the Union wounded in battle, and of the orphan children of soldiers of the Union.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 104.—Joint Resolution to provide for Payment of the Claim of Colonel H. C. De Ahna for military Services.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper disbursing and accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Henry Charles De Ahna a sum equal to the pay, allowances, and emoluments of a colonel of infantry in active service, for one year from the thirty-first day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and that such amount so allowed as aforesaid be paid to him out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. And he shall be considered honorably mustered out of the military service.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 105.—Joint Resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to contract with Dr. Alexander Dunbar.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be authorized and directed to contract on such terms as, in his discretion he may think fair and reasonable, with Dr. Alexander Dunbar, for the use by the Government of the alleged discovery of the said Dunbar of a mode of treatment of the diseases of the horse's foot, and for his services for one year in instructing the farriers of the Army in such treatment; the amount agreed upon to be paid out of the fund already appropriated for the purchase of horses or general support of the Army.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 106.—Joint Resolution to pay Colonel Lewis F. Fix.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper accounting officers of the United States are hereby directed to pay to Lewis Ferdinand Fix of Ohio, the pay and emoluments of a lieutenant colonel of infantry, for the time from the first day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, to the twenty-ninth of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-five.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 107.—Joint Resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to pay Charles M. Pott a Pension of fifteen Dollars per Month.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay or cause to be paid to Charles M. Pott, late of company K, one hundred and seventy-ninth Pennsylvania militia, now on the pension-roll, the same pension provided for, for persons having lost one hand in the military service of the United States, as provided in section one of an act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts relating to pensions," approved June sixth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

No. 108.—Joint Resolution to authorize the Payment of Rev. C. B. Boynton, as Chaplain of the House of Representatives of the Thirty-Ninth Congress.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Rev. Charles B. Boynton is authorized to draw the amount appropriated to the payment of the Chaplain of the House for the Thirty-Ninth Congress.

APPROVED, July 28, 1866.

THE CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE AND APPENDIX will be furnished subscribers at the next regular session, which will be a short one, at $5 for one copy during the session.

Subscribers for this session who have not received, or who have lost, any numbers, either of THE CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE or THE APPENDIX, can get them by inclosing to us five cents for each missing number.